

This is the last picture taken of Shady Grove School, which was located near the community of Hog Eye (Hogeye). Directly south of this school was a school for black children, which was unusual because there were very few blacks in Washington County outside Fayetteville. A teacher at Shady Grove during the early 1900s rode a mule to class every day from her home at Dripping Springs.