Ora V. Couch

I am the second daughter of Miles C. and Martha E. Whitmire. I was borned in state of North Carolina and was moved from there to the state of Arkansas at the age of six months was moved on a farm my father homesteaded in Madison County, Arkansas. No emprovements there. They had to build, clear and fence and emprove it themselves. The farm was about five miles from Red Star and about one mile below the Rocky Grove Church where I went to church and Sunday school as I grew up and also lived about 1 mile from the school house on the Penctenture Mountain where I went to school until I was fourteen years of age.

The year that I was fifteen years old I went to school in the old Rocky Grove Church house as water was scarce on the mountain that year. We only got three months of school each year and school most usualy begain in the month of July each year and end in September or October sometime. One year we went to school late fall and early winter and being on a farm there was crops to take care of as we children became big enough to help with bean picking peas to pick potatoes to dig and pick up them we would have to stop out of school every year to help and we would pull the blade fodder for our father while him and mother cut the tops from the corn and as we would have to take out of school for all this work then we would loose around half of the school each year as there was only a three month school each year so we never got much education. But we enjoyed life on the farm and helping our parents make a living.

The fall I was fifteen years of age my father sold out and went back to North Carolina and spent the winter there in the following spring in the month of March he came back to Arkansas and bought a farm near Lollars Creek down on the creek below the Pinnacle school house where we later went to school and the Mt. Grove Church was up there too where we went to church. We were about five or six miles from Asher Post Office and about five more from Thompson, Arkansas the nearest railroad station at that time.

I was married to Bordie Couch on April the 9th, 1911. Well he told me that I couldn't work outside any after we were married he said I might work in the garden or drop corn if he needed me and that would be all. Well as time went by and our family grew larger he to soon seen that he needed help on the farm and the timber work so I decided to supply that extry help for him by helping him. I could plow around every time he plowed one. I could saw as much wood are timber as he could. I would load the hay on the wagon as he pitched it on, then we would ride the hay wagon together to the barn.

As he pitched the hay into the barn I would pull it back into the back of the barn as he pitched it in. I would take our children with us to work until the oldest girl was old enough to leave with the others after she was to where I could trust her. I raised a family of eight children four boys and four girls. Our oldest girl she passed away in the year of '36 and my husband passed away May the 29, 1950. All our children were married except one boy he wasn't quiet eighteen when my husband died.

Well I had to put a mortgage on everything we had for buriel expences and I had notes and doctor bills grocery bills and medicine bills until I didn't know which way to turn so I decided just to lock up my doors and get a job of work. So I sold my hogs, cow, chickens and went to work for labor. I worked at one place for two years and five weeks and since that time I have worked here and there for people. I kept children in two homes and I have taking care of elderly ladies and sick women. I moved from Madison County in May 1956 to Springdale, Arkansas. I moved from Springdale, Arkansas to Lincoln, Arkansas in March 1957.

Mabel, b. 1912, Ewell, b. September 1915, Reba, b. 1919, Lela, b. October 1920, Afton, b. May 1923, Miles, b. April 1925, Leah, b. 1930 and Noah, b. 1932 were our children.

I've took care of 51 children besides my 8 children and 25 old are sick people, lived in trailer at Lincoln until February of '74 and moved out to Farmington, Arkansas where I now live. Yes, after I counted up the old and sick people then I have taken care of a total of 33 old and sick people together and baby set with 59 counting my 8 I raised. Written by Ora V. Couch.

Note: The family of Ora V. Couch wishes to submit this family history as written by Mrs. Couch in her own words. Ora died March 14, 1981, and is buried in the Pinnacle Cemetery in Madison County, Arkansas. The following list is of her immediate descendants.

James Coulter

James Coulter, Jr. was the son of James Coulter, Sr. who arrived in Washington County, Arkansas from east Tennessee in 1830. James, Jr. married Mary W. Moore, daughter of John D. Moore and Amy Patrick. They had two children: John A., born about 1833, and Elizabeth Ann, also called Amy, born September 6, 1834.

The Coulters were members of the Cane Hill congregation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Though James, Jr. had been cited by the church for drunkenness and confessed his "immoral conduct" to his father and brother-in-law James Bryant Russell, he was suspended from church privileges until he showed proper penitence.

James, Jr. had been involved in a dispute with William Butler over a horse Butler claimed as his own. On October 2, 1834, James and his brother Alexander were driving horses south when they came upon William Butler and his brothers Benjamin and Reese in Crawford County. William demanded the return of the horse in question. During the ensuing argument, Benjamin Butler, intending to shoot James, instead hit Alexander, who died several hours later. Also in the company of the Coulter brothers were Thomas H. Coulter, their cousin, and Benjamin Staunton. The Butlers were eventually tried and acquitted.

The following summer, James, Jr. was again driving horses south. While traveling on the steamboat Neosho down the Arkansas River in Pulaski County, he became ill and died. He was buried in Pulaski County. The date of his death, July 13, 1835, was recorded by the Cane Hill Church. His widow married John Tate Reagan on June 16, 1849 in Washington County, and they moved one and one-half miles east of Farmington. Mary died July 20 one year in the early 1870s and was buried in the Cane Hill Cemetery near her second husband.

James and Mary's son John died at age 24 in Washington County and also buried in Cane Hill. Elizabeth married Robert Lafayette Cox in this county in 1858 and moved to Bell County, Texas.

They were the parents of seven children: Peyton (b_____d_____), George W. (b 7 June 1859 d 11 September 1938), Martha Hurtt (b 15 August 1860 d 28 January 1940), Margaret (b 7 July 1864 d 5 June 1916), Ira (b 6

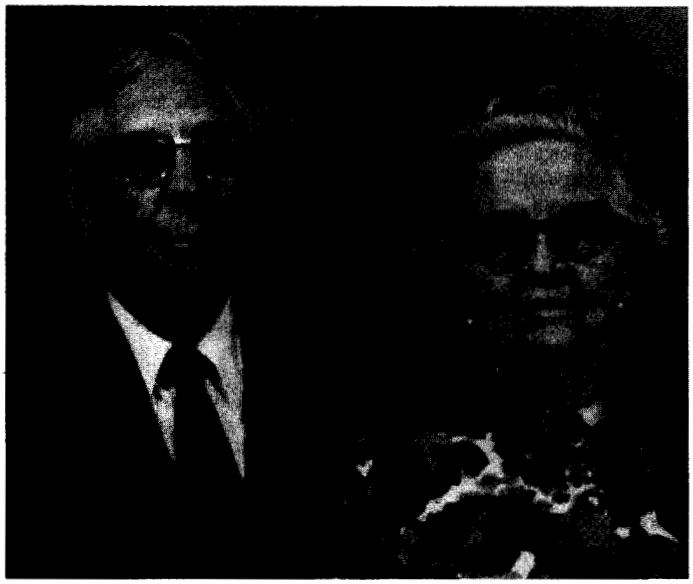
Anthony Hogan Cowen and Georgianna Hurtt Cowen, parents of George W. Cowen. First generation of Cowens in Washington County.

David and Susan Willcox, parents of Laura Willcox Cowen. First generation in Washington County.

George W. and Laura Willcox Cowen. Second generation in Washington County.



Ester Anthony and Mamie Tyson Cowan. Third generation of Cowan (spelling of name changed) family in Washington County.

Anthony H. Cowen served in the Fourth Tennessee Mounted Infantry during the entire Civil War. Afterwards the family moved from Tennessee to southern Missouri, then to Fulton County, Arkansas before settling in Washington County (west of Staunton later renamed Greenland) around 1878. They remained in the area permanently. His obituary stated he was, "one of Washington County's old settlers and highly respected citizens . . .known as "Uncle Tone" and admired by all who knew him, because of his splendid traits of character".

Flat Rock School #14 in the county was established in 1884 at the foot of White Oak Mountain, east of Greenland, where many of the Cowen children, grandchildren and great grandchildren received their first "schooling". Church services were held in the school house on Sundays when ministers, representing various denominations, came to preach. The school closed 44 years later, in 1928, with a cash balance of $31.04 going to the Greenland School District.

Peyton Cowen moved to Spokane, Washington and is buried there; however, additional data are unavailable. Martha Hurtt married Isaac G. (Ike) Combs (b 3 June 1856 d 27 March 1925), president of Arkansas National Bank of Fayetteville, and they lived at 313 Mountain Street. They had no children. Margaret married C. Ed Wilson (b 1861 d 26 October 1925), Greenland postmaster, and their children were: John, Rollo, Frank, Otto, Gertie, and Thelma. Margaret was killed when a cyclone leveled the two-story family home on White Oak Mountain. Ten Arkansas counties were struck by the storm, with 80 persons reported killed; however, Margaret was the only fatality in Washington County. Ira married 26 July 1897 Ella Mae Gollaher (b 25 September 1879 d 15 May 1966). They built a home on a 60 acre farm one mile east of Greenland that is still standing. Their family of four children were: Bessie Cowen Burnett (who, with her husband, continued to live on the farm until recent years when, after being widowed, she entered City Hospital Geriatrics Center in Fayetteville), Ruth, Lorena, and Troy. After retiring from a career in the army, Hubert Burnett (son of Bessie and grandson of Ira) and his wife Rilla Elliott Burnett are the third generation to live on the farm. Andrew J. married Nora Cate (b 1876 d 16 September 1949) and they made their home in Laura died at the age of four and is buried in Baptist Ford Cemetery, as are her parents, Ira, Margaret, and George. Martha is buried in Combs Cemetery, by her husband, and Andrew J. and his wife are buried in Evergreen Cemetery.

George W. Cowen married 9 September 1890 Laura Willcox (b 13 April 1868 d 17 July 1931), daughter of David (b 1 June 1840 d 8 February 1909) and Susan Willcox (b 8 March 1848 d 6 September 1908). Laura came from Missouri to Washington County with her family. Both families lived on White Oak Mountain the remainder of their lives. George and Laura's five children were: Ester Anthony (b 12 October 1892), Luster David (b 19 January 1895 d 7 February 1979), Carrie (b 16 December 1896 d 27 November 1945), Essie (b 5 December 1900), and Oscar P. (b 5 October 1910 d 8 September 1912). George and Laura lived in a log cabin "down by the spring" while they built their home on top of the mountain. Here they reared their children and farmed the land. After their deaths, the house was dismantled and moved to Fayetteville and the farm was no more.

Ester Anthony Cowan (note change in spelling), son of George W., married 23 December 1914 Mamie Ross Tyson (b 19 December 1896) of Pilot Point, Texas. Her parents, Lemuel Cyles Tyson (b 23 February 1858 d 27 February 1915) and Elizabeth Sullivan Hammons (b 10 June 1855 d 24 September 1914), came to Washington County and lived on top of White Oak Mountain, above the George W. Cowens, for approximately three years. The Tysons were both descendants of the first settlers of Texas. The Tyson Cemetery, near Pilot Point, Texas, on May 29, 1977 was officially designated a historic landmark in Texas. Buried here are parents of the Hammons and Tysons, as well as many other family members. (Ike) Combs, and continued with the First National Bank when the two banks merged around 1926.

Luster David Cowan, son of George W., married 29 November 1922 Nina Lee Harris (b 12 September 1906 d 13 August 1975) and they resided on a farm east of Greenland, near the Ira Cowen farm. Burwell Cox, the brother of Coleman Cox, was born about 1795/96 in Warren County, Kentucky, the 10th child of John Cox, a Patriot of the Revolutionary War (b. 1/4/1758, Halifax County, Virginia, d. 6/17/1832, Warren County, Kentucky) and Sarah Nunnelly (b. ca. 1759, Virginia, d. 6/1846, Warren County, Kentucky). In his early days, John Cox knew a man named Burwell Jackson, who had acquired a lot of land in Kentucky and was a well-respected person. It was after this man that John Cox named his son, Burwell. Burwell Cox married Rebecca Mobley (b. 1802, d. 1876, buried in Boise, Idaho) on 3/4/1820 in Bowling Green, Kentucky. She was the daughter of Isiah Mobley, a Revolutionary War soldier, and his wife, Frances Coleman. The Burwell Cox family came with the Mobleys to Arkansas in February 1830. Rebecca's parents stopped on Lee's Creek, Crawford County, while Burwell went on to Cane Hill, where his brother, Coleman, lived. The Coxes were members of the Cane Hill congregation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and later the Salem congregation in Boonsboro, Arkansas, 1865-1905.

Burwell and Rebecca had the following children: Jane (b. 1821, Warren County, Kentucky); Sarah Frances Coleman (named in part after both of her grandmothers) (b. 1823, Warren County, Kentucky) married John Burt Cook 1842; Sarah N. Burwell Cox died in 1874 and is probably buried in Washington County. Rebecca Mobley Cox died in Boise, Idaho.

He was the son of John Cox, a Revolutionary War Patriot (b. 1/4/1758, Halifax County, Virginia, d. 6/1832, Warren County, Kentucky) and Sarah Nunnelly (b. 1759, Virginia, d. 6/1846, Warren County, Kentucky). The first of 12 children, Coleman moved with his parents to Warren County, Kentucky, while young. They located to the Gasper River area in the early 1790s. In 1821, Coleman came from Warren County, Kentucky, and lived in Sebastian County, Arkansas, until 1828. He located on the head of Barren Fork, four miles south of Boonsboro, Arkansas.

Coleman was married May 10, 1808, in Logan County, Kentucky, to Martha Buchanan (b. 12/18/1793, d. 1824, Crawford County, Arkansas), the daughter of John Buchanan. Coleman married second to Mary Ellen Bird (or Youngbird or Youngblood), nicknamed "Polly". Coleman and Polly were listed as charter members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in 1828. It was recorded in family records that "Coleman always read the Bible and had prayer each day; he was a very devout Christian. Four of his sons were ministers". It is probable that Coleman converted during the great revival of 1800 which started at the old Gasper River Church in Logan County, Kentucky, in May 1797. Coleman married third to a Miss Coulter in 1835 at the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Cane Hill.

Coleman had the following children with Martha Buchanan: Edmiston (b. 5/3/1809, Warren County, Kentucky, d. 7/21/1861) married Dorcas Anderson Brown 7/21/1830; Lavinia (b. 12/15/1810, Warren County, Kentucky, d. 2/2/1859) married Peter Paulus Pyeatt 1/15/1827; Samuel (b. 3/28/1812, Warren County, Kentucky, d. 7/16/1899, Washington County, Arkansas) married 1st Mary Sexton 1834, 2nd Martha Crozier Carmack 1856, 3rd Martha Sims; Mariah (b. 8/15/1815, Warren County, Kentucky, d. 8/21/1900, Washington County, Arkansas) married 1st Dr. Condit 1831, 2nd John Morrow 1834; Burwell (b. 9/18/1819, Warren County, Kentucky, d. 4/9/1898, Fannin County, Texas) married 1st Elizabeth Lindsey 1844, 2nd Mrs. Sarah Hannah Buchanan Grey; Anderson (b. 10/24/1821, Crawford County, Arkansas, d. 6/4/1892) married Eliza Jane May 1847; John (b. 1/22/1824, Crawford County, Arkansas, d. 1893) married Margaret (or Martha) Jane Witherspoon 1848.

Children of Coleman and his second wife, Mary Ellen, were: Andrew Young (b. 1/13/1829, Cane Hill, d. 8/14/1905) married 1st Margaret Fanny Williamson 1853, 2nd Sarah J. Hughey 1866; Sarah Nunnelly (b. 11/19/1830, Cane Hill, d. 7/2/1857) married George Mitchell 1848.

Some of Coleman's children moved to Texas before the Civil War. Coleman died around 1852-54, Cane Hill, Washington County, Arkansas, and is buried in the Cox Cemetery.

Some interesting facts about Coleman Cox include; He was listed as a chain carrier in July 16, 1799, in "Survey Book A, page 192, Bowling Green, Kentucky", which was surveyed for John Cox. Coleman's brother, Jackson Cox, went to Arkansas to be with his brother for a while, but did not stay long and returned to Warren County, Kentucky, where family lines still run deep. The sale of Coleman's land in Warren County is recorded in Book I, page 248, dated February 1820, which consisted of 27 acres sold for $750 to William B. Adams. Coleman Cox and his brother, Jackson Cox, were witnesses to John Buchanan's will, this being the first will recorded in Pulaski County, Arkansas. (John Buchanan was Coleman's father-in-law.) Coleman is found in the 1810 Warren County, Kentucky Census, 1821 Crawford County, Arkansas Tax List, 1829 Washington County Sheriff's Census, 1830 and 1850 Washington County, Arkansas Census reports. The last entries for Coleman Cox were found in 1851-1852, which is in the Tax Assessment Books in the History Commission in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Edward Harley Cox

On 21 September 1899, my grandparents, Edward Harley Cox and Minnie Epperly, were married at Farmington, Arkansas, by Rev. Y. A. Gilmore.

Grandpa Cox was born 1 April 1873, in Franklin County, Illinois, to Warren Kalvert and Pearcie Louisa Ann Osteen Cox, both of whom were born in Illinois. Their other children were: Mary, William, Leona, Frank, James, Fred, Myrtle, Ransom, Lawrence and Anna.

Grandma Cox, was 17 February 1876 at Kirksville, Missouri, was the third child of Joseph Nathan and Frances Louisa Epperly, first cousins, and natives of Randolph County, Missouri. Their other children included: Rhoda, Fannie, Maggie, William, Emmett, Lota and Johnny.

The exact time the Cox and Epperly families arrived in Washington County is not known. Grandpa and Grandma's marriage certificate (earliest official record so far located) states that both were residents of Rhea at the time of their marriage.

Another document dated 17 June 1900, certifies that Frank Cox, 21, (Grandpa's brother) and Miss Mary Price, 18, (both residents of Rhea) were married by Peace Justice Robert Diment.

On 11 July 1900, William Cox, 24 (another of Grandpa's brothers) was wed to Miss Addie Dees, 19, of the Weddington Community. Hiram T. Henderson performed the ceremony.

A record dated 8 August 1900, indicates that Warren and Louisa Cox purchased 60 acres from Mr. C. T. Clayton, in section 28, Township 16, Range 31, located just southwest of Farmington.

On 23 May 1901, Gabriel W. Cox, 81 (a widower and father of Warren Kalvert) and Mrs. Mary Jane Howell, 74, both of Farmington, were married by Rev. H. B. Borders.

Information gleaned from various census records indicates Gabriel W. Cox was born in Tennessee, ca 1821. His first wife (mother of Warren Kalvert) Mary Arnold was born ca 1822, in Illinois. Other known children of Gabriel and Mary Arnold Cox were: Lewis, Joseph, G. W., and James.

On 1 June 1901, Joseph and Frances Epperly purchased 1-1/2 acres from S. E. Dunnaway and R. E. Woodruff for $60.00. legal description of the property placed it in Section 5, Township 15, Range 32. An interesting note-boundaries of the land were marked by large sandstone. As nearly as can be determined, the property was across the road from the historic old Rhea mansion at Rhea (then known as Rhea's Mill).

Just short of three months later (on 31 August) Joseph and Frances Epperly sold the property to DeKalb Holt of Rhea, for the sum of $165.00. (It was of special interest to note that Frances, my great grandmother, could not write, for she made "her mark" on the document.)

At this period in time, the Epperly family moved to Oklahoma Territory, homesteading in southwest Canadian County.

On 12 October 1901, Gabriel and M. J. Cox paid E. W. and N. E. McKee $300.00 for 64 acres located in Section 32, Township 16, and Section 5, Township 15, Range 31, approximately 1-1/2 miles southwest of Farmington.

On 23 January 1901, Mary Cox, 25, Grandpa's sister, married Eli S. Clouse, 35, (a widower with 2 children, Nannie and Carl). Both were residents of Rhea. Rev. John T. Hinds officiated.

The following November 2, the Clouse's borrowed $300.00 (at 10% interest) from E. R. Barnes on a 40 acre tract of land located in Section 6, Township 15, Range 32, southwest of Rhea. The mortgage was paid in full on 21 October 1908.

On 17 November 1904, Warren and Louisa Cox mortgaged their property for $850.00, with Mr. Clarence Poulson holding the mortgage. The debt was satisfied on 28 May 1906, and it was sometime after this date that the Coxes also moved to Oklahoma Territory.

After Grandpa and Grandma Cox were married, they moved to Seneca, Missouri, where Grandpa worked for the Frisco Railroad. They bought a small house (which is still standing) where, on 6 June 1901, my mother, Gertrude Frances was born.

In December 1902, Grandpa and Grandma sold their place in Seneca, and with 18 month old Gertrude, made the trip by rail to Oklahoma Territory, where they joined her parents in southwest Canadian County.

Grandpa and Grandma Cox's five other children were born in Oklahoma are: Opal, Odell, Ivan, Harley and Harvey.

Ultimately all of Grandpa's and most of Grandma's brothers and sisters moved to Oklahoma.

Ira Walter Cox

On May 24, 1914 Ira Walter Cox and Nellie Lavanche Holland were united in marriage by Rev. Rolanderson Brown at Harmon. Witnesses of their wedding were Lou Etta (Nellie's young sister) and Adolph Foy.

The first time Walter went to see Nellie she thought he was there to see her father. Some of their friends while dating were Johnnie Thomas, Elva Hulsa, Victor Lynch and Bill Chapman.

After Walter and Nellie married they moved in with his parents. His mother was an invalid at this time. His parents lived on the Hamstring Road about 7-1/2 miles northwest of Fayetteville Square in the White Rock District. They lived here until the death of his parents in September 1915. After his parents death they bought a place 1/2 mile west, and here they lived the rest of their lives.

Walter was the son of Robert Stanley and Eady Janett Sellers. He was born February 17, 1883 in his parents 3-room house. He died Friday November 24, 1967 (the day after Thanksgiving) in his home just 1/2 mile from where he was born.

Nellie, the daughter of Luther Bascome and Mary Francis Norris Holland was born at Cardins Bottom near Dardanelle, Arkansas on March 11, 1893.

When Nellie was about a year old she and an older brother Hugh and their parents moved to Red Starr Bluff near Hoyt, Oklahoma Indian Territory. Several of the Holland and Norris families moved there at that time and were the first settlers. It was around the Enterprize area that the rest of Nellie's brothers and sister were born. It was here her baby brother died being a month old. Five months later, her mother died. Nellie was twelve and took on much of the responsibility of raising her brothers and sister, cooking and housework.

Most of the time when they went any place they walked. To keep their shoes looking nice they would walk barefoot until they almost got to where they were going and then put on their shoes.

Uncle Tommie said Mom (Nellie) wore several pairs of stockings to keep her legs from looking so skinny.

Around 1912 Nellie's father and brothers moved to Washington County Arkansas south of Wheeler. Nellie stayed at Enterprize with uncles and aunts. In 1913 Nellie came to Fayetteville, rode the mailhack out to Litteral (Wheeler now), walked across the hills to her fathers', stopping by J. P. Newport's to inquire the way.

Nellie died early Monday morning September 29, 1980 at the age of 87. Walter and Nellie are buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery by his parents and brother.

Walter and Nellie's children are Mary Eda born April 2, 1915; Walter March 8, 1917; Robert Alton November 14, 1921; Nellie Erma Lee October 27, 1924; and Bonnie Lorraine Elizabeth born August 19, 1928. Mary was born in the same house as her father. The nicknames Walter gave his children were Mary-Buck, Leroy-Bill, Robert-Jack, Erma Lee-Bumble Bee, Bonnie-Tom Thumb.

Walter was a farmer. He raised strawberries and tomatoes. He cleared land to put out strawberries. He cultivated his crops with horses. He milked cows and sold cream. Part of the time he had registered Jerseys. In the summer when the weather was too hot to keep the cream from getting sour, Nellie would hitch up Durvy to the buggy and take the cream to town. This was when Mary and Leroy were small. Sometimes Nellie would walk and take eggs to Wheeler and sell. Wheeler at that time was at White Oak. She said Robert didn't get as tired if he had a stick horse to ride. Mary learned to milk on Fancy. Later in the years, Pet Milk Company had a milk route by the place so Walter sold milk. At this time he didn't have registered cattle. He also raised a few beans to sell in the 1940s. He raised his hay and corn. The best corn was shelled and took to the mill to grind into meal. When the weather turned cold, it was time to butcher hogs for the winters meat. They would cure out the hams, shoulders and bacon in the smokehouse. Scrap lean pieces would be ground into sausage and canned in jars. The fat rendered into lard.

Mary married Vester Ledbetter October 28, 1933. Their children are Darrell, Richard, Jane Robert, Elaine, Judith, and Debra. They have sixteen grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Leroy married Van Barnwell December 2, 1936. They have two sons, David and Paul. They have four granchildren.

Robert married Zelma Beeks and she died. He then married Fay Ward and they have a son Ronald.

Erma Lee married Hubert, divorced, married Dot Tipton, divorced, married Orville Beeks. Her children are Eugene, Nancy, Jimmy, Frank, Nellie, Walter, and Connie. She has thirteen grandchildren.

Bonnie married Marvin Beeks August 26, 1946. Their children are Duane, Preston, Dorthy, and Emma. They have ten grandchildren.

Jacob Cox

My great grandfather, Jacob Cox, born October 10, 1793, came to Washington County in 1840 from Tennessee (Sullivan County). He settled two miles west of Greenland, Arkansas, and built his home from the timber on this land. His wife was Elizabeth Harr, and they reared ten children. One son Elbert Cox stayed in Tennessee (he was my grandfather) and later married Jane Webb. He and Jane came to Arkansas in 1859 when my father Jacob Nathaniel (Jake) was one year old. He had built a flat boat in Tennessee and floated down the Ohio river to the Mississippi and the mouth of the Arkansas river. He came up the Arkansas river to Van Buren, Arkansas, where he traded his boat for a yoke of oxen and came to Greenland.

Jake Cox also had two sons who fought at the Prairie Grove Civil War battle in 1862. One was on the Union side and the other was on the Confederate side. Jake Cox died February 14, 1870 and is buried at the Rieff's Chapel Cemetery. (Jane's burial place unknown.)

Jake's brother, Abraham Cox came to Washington County in 1831. He settled at Cato Springs, two miles north of where Jake had settled. He married Elizabeth Kelly in 1834. Elizabeth's father, J. J. Kelly organized a company of Washington County men to fight in the Civil War in 1861.

Elbert Cox (Square L) and Jane Webb reared three children besides my father, Jake. Their names were Ben, Alley and Louise. Times were tough during the Civil War. Elbert managed a grist mill to have meal for his children. He was also a carpenter and built several houses in the Greenland area. I have heard my father Jake tell about how he and his brother would catch snow birds to roast for food for the family.

Jake Cox (Elbert's son) was born in 1858, in Tennessee. He married Alice Smith in 1880 and they lived approximately two miles west of Greenland. They reared eight children - Lena, Elbert, Jess, Hugh, Joe, Robert, Floyd and Isa. All the children married except Elbert and Jess. They remained in their home until Jess's death and Elbert lived a short time in an apartment in the Mountain Inn Hotel in Fayetteville, until his death. Robert and Floyd both were rural school teachers. Their record of teaching is recorded in The History of Education in Washington County (1830-1950). Floyd was a rural school teacher for 36 years. Robert taught prior and after his service in the first World War, 1917. Robert (known as "Bob") resigned his teaching position at the Prairie Grove School to accept his appointment as the Prairie Grove Postmaster, where he served from September 22, 1922 until July, 1935.

Jake and Alice Cox's children's marriages: Lena married Chester Millsap, Hugh married Bessie Hobbs, Joe married Alma Miller, Isa married Euell Sharp, Floyd married Eva Day and Robert married Myrtle Belle Van Winkle from Nebraska.

Isa and Euell Sharp had one child, Louise. They lived in Santa Ana, California. All are deceased.

Hugh Cox married and reared his family in Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

Chester and Lena Millsap reared eight children in Washington County - Lois, Clem, Harold, Daisy, Gene, Mildred, Wayne and Alice Jane.

Floyd and Eva Cox reared three children in Washington County - Floyd, Jr., J. C., and John.

Robert (Bob) Cox reared children in Washington County - George J. Cox, Rita Belle (Rita Brewer Glover), Van Robert (Jack) and Troy Wayne.

Floyd is the only one of the Jake Cox family still living (age 88).

Descendants now living in Washington County, Arkansas.

John William Cox

In the cold early months of 1867 a group of covered wagons left Sedalia, Missouri. Sometime later that year they arrived in Washington County, Arkansas. In one of the wagons was John William Cox, his wife Nancy and two of his children Charles and Rhodia and possibly other children.

In the wagon train was an older son, Robert with his wife Eady and their baby, Nancy Matilda. On March 11th Matilda died, being exactly four months old. She is buried somewhere between Sedalia, Missouri and Fayetteville, Arkansas.

John Cox's daughter Catherine and her husband William Scott and five children were in the group. There were also other Scott families.

John William Cox was born in Kentucky in 1814. His parents were also born in Kentucky. His wife Nancy Jane Stanley was born in Tennessee, September 17, 1817. Her mother was born in Tennessee but her father was born in Virginia.

John had a farm at or near the Fayetteville Lake. In May 1882, sulphate of zinc ore was found on the place of Squire John Cox. John was a farmer, a justice of the peace, and a shoe cobbler. He tanned his own leather for shoes. My brothers, sisters, and I have heard Dr. E. F. Ellis tell us many times: "Your great-grandfather made me my first pair of boots."

In John's later years, he went to Texas to visit a son. While he was there he died and was buried.

Sometime prior to her death, Nancy lived with her son Robert. Nancy died November 22, 1886 near Fayetteville and was buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery by the side of a granddaughter Lourener Bell.

Delilah Catherine Cox was born November 19, 1838 in Illinois. Her husband William Pleasant Scott was born August 25, 1834 in Illinois. On July 12, 1855, in Jasper County, Missouri they were married. Their children are John P., born 1856 in Missouri; Isaac Newton born 1860 in Missouri; J. M. born 1862 in Missouri; W. S. born 1863 in Missouri; Rhodia F. born 1865 in Texas; Charles born 1868 in Arkansas; Nancy A. born 1871 in Arkansas; Margaret born 1873 in Arkansas; Suzan born 1875 in Arkansas; and Daniel L. born 1878 in Arkansas.

The last home place for William and Catherine Scott was about 7 miles west of Fayetteville in the White Rock School District. He was a farmer and was unable to read or write. William died May 8, 1914 and Catherine died August 3, 1926. They are buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery near the old front entrance. He has several family members buried nearby.

Robert Stanley Cox was born April 16, 1845 in Missouri. Eady Janett Sellers was born March 21, 1844 in Missouri. Robert and Eady were married December 21, 1865. Eady's parents were born in Tennessee.

Robert and Eady's children were: Nancy Matilda born November 11, 1866; Mary Docia born December 28, 1867; Lourener Bell born November 19, 1870; Harper Stanley born October 22, 1873; Edward Sentenial born December 25, 1876; Robert Martin born December 15, 1879; Ira Walter born February 17, 1883; and John William born June 2, 1886. Nancy Matilda was born in Sedalia, Missouri, and the other children were born near Fayetteville. The schools they attended were Mt. Comfort School and White Rock School.

Robert and Eady's last home was about 7-1/2 miles northwest of Fayetteville on Hamstring Road. Robert was a farmer, a mason, and he belonged to the Camelite Church. Roberts's sons helped him get dressed to go to a Mason Convention with stiff collar and tie. While at the convention, he slept in it because he didn't know how to get it back on.

Mary Cox Ledbetter as a baby use to pull her grandfather's (Robert) chin whiskers.

Eady and daughter Docia were charter members of Providence Baptist Church. Later in Eady's life she fell and was unable to walk alone again. She was able to use crutches and had a chair with rollers on it. Later she was bedfast. In the summer, they put her on a bed on the front porch of their three room house, so it would be cooler for her.

Robert died September 1, 1916 and nine days later on September 10, so did Eady. Funeral services were held in their home for each before their burial at Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

Charles F. Cox born 1850 in Missouri and Z. P. Shannon born 1850 were married in Washington County, Arkansas July 25, 1874. They had a son Frank C. born 1876 in Arkansas.

Rhodia F. Cox born 1857 in Missouri and Martin A. McCurdy born 1856 were married November 1, 1877 in Washington County, Arkansas.

Lilbern Franklin Cox

Our lineage of Cox families migrated in the 1700s from Ireland and settled in Maryland. Jacob B. Cox was born October 10, 1793 in Sullivan County, Tennessee. Son of Edward Cox (1758-?) and Sallie Meredith (17?? -?) of Maryland and appears as family #321 in East Tennessee 1830 census.

Jacob married Elizabeth Webb in Tennessee. Their children were: Abraham, Harriett, Gale, Elbert, Louisa, George Buchanan, Mary Elizabeth, John W., Lilbern Franklin, Eldanan M., Edward T. and William E. The family came by steamboat to Washington County, Arkansas by the route of the Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas rivers in the 1840's. They homesteaded on a farm at Rieff's Chapel, five miles southwest of Fayetteville.

This brief genealogy will pursue the lineage of Lilbern Franklin Cox (9th child) of Jacob and Elizabeth Cox. Franklin Cox (1841-1922) served on the Union side during the Civil War. His military records are as follows: "Franklin Cox, age 21, 5' 7" tall, fair complexion, blue eyes, light hair, enlisted as a private in Battery 1, Arkansas Light Artillery, February 23, 1863 for a term of three years." He operated a cannon drawn by a team of horses in the Battle of Prairie Grove, December 7, 1862 under Union General Herron.

After the war, he met Penelope Elizabeth Marrs (1853-1944), a 14-year-old orphan of Andrew Buchanan Marrs (1831-1865) and Winney Carter-Marrs (1827-1867) of Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Elizabeth's parents died shortly after the Civil War and the seven children of Andrew and Winney were adopted and cared for by the maternal grandparents, Isaac Marrs)((1779-18?) and Catherine Marrs (1783-18?).

Elizabeth Marrs and Franklin Cox married on December 22, 1867 and lived with Franklin's parents on Old Wire Road, Route 2, Rieff's Chapel community where their nine children were born and reared. They are Thomas, Gillam, Charles Edward, Winnie Effie, Annie, George Buchanan, Fred, Frank, Malcolm and Alvis Earl.

Three generations of Cox's lived in the massive two-story, two-fireplace, log farmhouse. The house having stood for more than 120 years, was demolished in 1970.

Franklin was a member of the Masonic Lodge and a faithful member of the First Presbyterian church for forty years. He was a hardworking and honest gentleman.

After World War I, Franklin's children had married and left home except, Alvis Earl, the youngest. On March 14, 1917, Earl married Mary May Harvel of Fayetteville.

(The Harvel family history also appears in this book.)

In 1920, Franklin and Elizabeth decided to leave the homestead and moved to Gravette, Arkansas. Franklin deceased in September 1922 and Elizabeth, age 92, deceased in June 1944. They lie side-by-side beneath a tall, white-granite stone on which the inscription reads: "There are no Partings in Heaven". It is in the Gravette, Arkansas cemetery.

Also in 1920, Earl (1894-1956) and May Harvel Cox (1890-1953) moved to a farm near Tahlequah, Oklahoma where they lived the rest of their lives. They are buried in the Tahlequah Cemetery.

Mamie Elizabeth Cox-Parker (March 1924), is the only surviving child of Earl and May Cox. Mamie was named for her grandmother, Mamie May Kane-Harvel and Elizabeth Marrs-Cox.

James Phillip Parker (1955), son of Mamie Cox-Parker, has two daughters, Megan Elise (July 25, 1983) and Kathleen Ann (January 16, 1986).

Great grandparents of Mamie Cox (1793-1870) are buried at Rieff's Chapel Cemetery. His wife, Elizabeth (Webb-Cox) is believed to be buried beside him.

Great, great grandparents of Mamie are: Edward Cox (1758-?) and Sallie Meredith (17??-?). They probably never came to Arkansas and are buried in Sullivan County, Tennessee.

This brief history scans seven generations of Coxes who migrated west from Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Also, it scans seven generation of Marrs descendents from Virginia to Tennessee to Prairie Grove, Arkansas to Oklahoma.

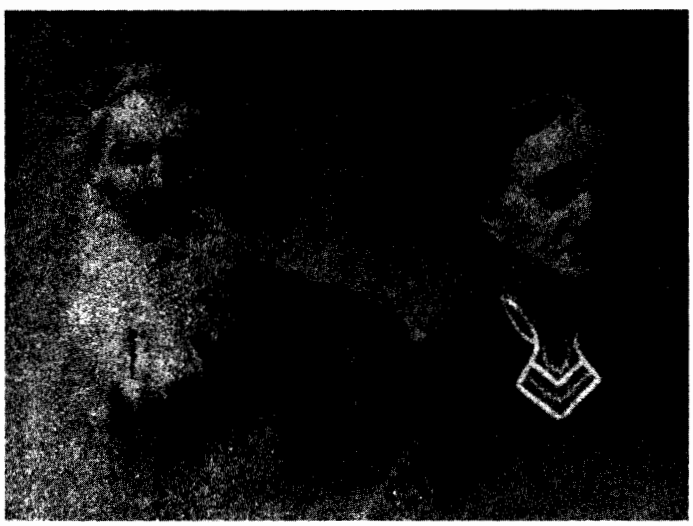
Robert Lafayette Cox

Robert Lafayette Cox was born July 10, 1828 in Warren County, Kentucky, the son of Burwell Cox and Rebecca Mobley. About 1829, the family moved to Washington County, Arkansas and settled in Cane Hill. Robert became a member of the Cane Hill congregation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church on December 22, 1839.



Robert Lafayette and Elizabeth Ann (Coulter) Cox

About 1857, Robert went to Bell County, Texas, where he built a house on Elm Creek, near Troy. He returned to Cane Hill and married Elizabeth Ann Coulter, daughter of James Coulter, Jr. and Mary W. Moore, on January 5, 1858. The newlyweds then moved to their new home on Elm Creek, where all of their ten children were born.

The Cox children were Sallie Belle, born April 5, 1859; Robert Victor, born October 4, 1860; Stonewall J., born September 20, 1862; John C., born February 21, 1865; Mary Thomas, born August 23, 1867; Alvia, born January 10, 1869; Nancy Jo, born November 23, 1871; Lenora Pauline, born October 24, 1872; Annie R., born March 21, 1874; and Eugene C., born December 20, 1876. Sallie married William Tabor and died in 1902. John married Rena Lewallen. Mary married William Andrew Crawford on February 18, 1885 and died June 27, 1938. Alvia married Charles Thompson. Nancy married John Jones.

Pauline married James Sharp and died in July 1950. Eugene died December 27, 1947.

During the Civil War, Robert Cox enlisted in Company I, 17th Regiment, Texas Infantry on April 11, 1862 at Belton, Bell County. After the war, he affiliated with Leon Masonic Lodge #193 on February 3, 1866 in Pendleton. He demitted in 1873 and affiliated with Oenaville Lodge #363, then with Troy Lodge #640. He was a member of Troy Lodge until his death on February 23, 1911, in Troy. He was given a Masonic funeral as well as a church funeral, and was buried in the Lewallen Cemetery four miles east of Troy. As a Masonic widow, Elizabeth was given a Widow's Certificate by Troy Lodge.

Elizabeth Ann Cox was buried next to her husband at her death in 1918. She was also called Amy, probably because her maternal grandmother was Amy Patrick. Elizabeth was ten months old when her father, James Coulter Jr. died. On July 14, 1842, Elizabeth's mother, Mary Moore Coulter petitioned the court in Washington County, Arkansas to appoint a guardian for Elizabeth and her brother John. The court announced that James Moore, Mary's brother, would assume guardianship of the two children. When she turned 16, Elizabeth went out on her own in Washington County until her marriage to Robert Cox in 1858.

They had seven children; Edmiston, Lavina, Samuel, Mariah, Burrell, Anderson, and John. Martha died in 1824 in Crawford County. Coleman then married Mary Ellen (Bird) Youngbird in 1827 and moved to Washington County in 1828. They settled on Fly Creek, which is south of Cane Hill, where he owned most of the land from above the Fly Creek School to Clyde. He and Ellen had two children; Andrew Youngblood and Sarah. Coleman built a log cabin on the hill adjacent to the land that he donated for the Cox Cemetery. Ellen died in 1830. Coleman married —Coulter in 1836. No record of children has been located.

Samuel, third child of Coleman, was born 3-28-1812 near Bowling Green, Kentucky. His first wife, Mary Sexton, was born about 1812. They were married in 1834. Mary was the daughter of Jacob Sexton, a Methodist preacher. The Sextons were a prominent family in the Cane Hill area. Mary and Samuel had six children; Milton Henry, Martha Ann, Robert Jackson, Miriah Elizabeth, Eliza Jane, and Mary Frances. After Mary's death, Samuel married Martha Crozier Carmack (a widow with two sons) on 9-18-1856. They had two children; Samuel Anderson and Hester C. Cox (Aunt Hess). Prior to being ordained as a Presbyterian minister in 1868, Samuel was a Methodist preacher for 24 years. After Martha's death, Samuel married Margaret Simms. Samuel died 7-16-1899 and was buried in the Cox Cemetery next to his first wife.

Milton Henry, first son of Samuel, was born 1-24-1836 on Fly Creek. He married Sara Joan Stout 1-19-1859. The marriage was performed by his grandfather, Rev. Jacob Sexton. Milton and Sara had seven children; Wm. Sam Bill, Robert Cole, George Henry, Alvin F., Charles A., John Burrell, and Tom. Milton was best known by his nickname, Paddy. He was a prosperous farmer and owned a lot of land in the Fly Creek area. He wrote the original deed for the land owned by A. E. and Bertha Mae Cox Green up until their deaths. Milton died in 1896 and Sara died 8-6-1902. Both are buried in the Cox Cemetery.

George Henry, third son of Milton, was born 12-11-1868 near Cane Hill. Frances Lucille Pennell, born 4-17-1870, married George Henry Cox 1-31-1892. They had four children; Bertha Mae, Raymond Henry, Nathan Anderson, and William Herman. Frances died 10-5-1904 and was buried in the Cox Cemetery. Her infant son, Willliam Herman, died 11-1904. Bertha Mae, the oldest child, helped her father raise her two younger brothers. George Henry had a peach orchard and an apple drier which supported his young children after their mother's death. George never remarried. He died 6-14-1948 and was buried next to his wife, Fannie. George and his father, Milton, built the original two rooms of the house where George's children were born and raised. The doors were hand hewn from logs cut from the farm. To this date, the inside doors and latches are part of the house that stands on the property sold by the A. E. Green family.

Bertha Mae was born 1-10-1894 on Fly Creek. She married Algie Elgin Green, from the Blackburn Community, 1-3-1920. The ceremony was performed by Wm. Erskin Cox. A. E. Green had one child, Zelma Lillian, by his first wife, Sally Jane Latta. Bertha and A. E. had six children; Cyrus Harding, Mary Frances (Brock), Willard Henry, Wilma Agnes (Myers), Myrtle Louise (Ray), and Zelta Mae (Harrison). A. E. and Bertha were farmers. As the children were growing up, they tell of one year that they had a bumper cotton crop and were able to buy a Model T and enjoyed the best Christmas ever. A. E. went to wheat harvest in Kansas every year to help support the family. In the fall, they peddled apples and vegetables. The commerce area at that time was Van Buren, which was two day's journey from Fly Creek.

As we grandchildren visited the farm, some of our favorite memories were searching for arrowheads on the hills. The Indians left behind many artifacts including stones for grinding their corn and carved steps winding up the hillsides. A. E. Green died 5-27-1981. Bertha died 9-27-1983 and was buried next to him in the Cox Cemetery.

Many descendants still reside in the Washington County area and a complete genealogy is available. This history was compiled by Sheron (Brock) Carter, a granddaughter of A. E. and Bertha Mae (Cox) Green, going back to the sixth grandparents. The above can not begin to summarize all of the told hardships and good times of the years past. The Cox-Green story is too lengthy to go into great detail, as there are too many Cox-Green relatives and too many stories.

I, Robert Leonard Ray, a son-in-law of A. E. and Bertha provided most of the information for preparation of the Cox-Green story. My grandmother, Sarah, (Sally) was the daughter of Andrew Youngblood Cox. She told many stories of the hardships of the Civil War. My grandmother was born 3-20-1858, near Evansville, The Lord's Vineyard. In 1875, she married Thomas J. Dunagan and they lived their entire lives on a farm adjacent to the A. Y. Cox original homestead located between Evansville and Cane Hill.

Elza Monroe "Monty" Cralley

Monty Cralley was born in Carmi, Illinois on November 20, 1905 to John W. Cralley and Martha Jones Cralley. He grew up in Illinois and attended McKendree College at Lebanon, Illinois where he met Cleda Ann (called Ann) Renner, only child of John J. and Bertha Elleen Kauffman Renner. Monty and Ann were married in Carlyle, Illinois on February 5, 1930.

After receiving his B. S. degree from McKendree College, Monty went on to the University of Wisconsin where he received his Ph. D. Monty also taught botany (as an assistant professor) before joining the faculty at the University of Arkansas.

Cralley's work in plant pathology at the University of Arkansas kept him busy in and out of the state and special assignments took him as far away as Cuba, Korea and even to India. His work continued with the University of Arkansas for forty years until he retired, professor emeritus, in 1973.

During those years that his career with the University of Arkansas took him from professor to agricultural administrator, Ann was busy completing her studies. She received both her

B. S. and her M. S. from the University of Arkansas. Employed by the state of Arkansas for 26 years, she was a caseworker and casework supervisor for the Arkansas State Department of Welfare.

Ann's interests were not limited to her job. Since she had taught art in the public schools of Illinois, she continued working at her art while visiting many galleries here and abroad. Her paintings have been exhibited in many local and regional shows. Her art talent is not limited to one media. She works in oils, pastels, acrylics and mixed media. Her portfolio contains collages, landscapes and old structures.

Two daughters were born to Monty and Ann. The first, Barbara Ann Cralley, was born January 31, 1934 in Fayetteville. The second, Patricia Sue Cralley, was born on September 2, 1940.

Barbara Ann married Roy Shaw on July 17, 1959. They are parents to one son and two daughters, Sandra Ann, John Cralley and Norma Jean.

Patricia Sue married Phillip E. Duncan, June 16, 1967. They have one son, Mark Middleton Duncan.

Monty and Ann are living contented lives filled with gardening, writing and painting. Upon retirement, Monty developed an interest in art and has joined Ann in many exhibits of their works.

His writing is now of an inspirational rather than a technical nature. He has time for poetry and philosophy, and he and Ann share many of their talents in a mutual effort as they did to create the book, Distant Horizons. Monty wrote it, Ann illustrated it.

Ann and Monty were featured in the book A Fine Age—Creativity as a Key to Successful Aging. The beautifully illustrated book, shows both Ann and Monty confirming the book's title.

Anna Marie Rice Crate

Anna Marie Rice Crate was born 10 April 1865 in Buffalo, New York, daughter of John George Rice and Catherine Christine Schmidt, one of three girls and four boys born of this marriage. The family had moved during the years to Cranberry, Venango County, Pennsylvania.

Augustine Henry Crate, son of James Aaron Crate and Susan Weaver, was one of two boys and four girls born of that marriage. The Crate and Weaver family had been native to Clarion County for several generations. Clarion County was near Venago County, then the center of the oil business. "Gus" as he was called, was born 16 October 1868.

Through Schmidt relatives, Anna Rice met Gus Crate and they were married 10 October 1893 in Titusville, Pennsylvania. Their first daughter, Irene Marie was born 16 July 1894 in Titusville. Following the oil business, their second daughter, Rosemary Genevieve, was born 21 February 1896 outside of Muncie, Indiana. The family moved into Muncie where the girls attended St. Lawrence School. As a young girl, Rosemary probably had rheumatic fever. The doctor wisely advised bed rest for a long period and this put her behind in school.

In 1912, the family moved to Tulsa, Oklahoma, living at 1402 South Denver. In the fall of 1913, Rosemary went back to Terre Haute, Indiana, to St. Mary of the Woods. She was quite musical, and took voice and violin lessons. The remaining high school years were spent at old, old Tulsa Central High School with Rosemary graduating mid-year in 1916 and going to the University of Arkansas.

On 29 April 1913, Dr. T. M. Fletcher and his wife Helen G. borrowed from H. K. Wade, trustee for the McIlroy Bank, $1000 at 10% interest. On 27 August 1914, Anna N. Crate paid their note to McIlroy Bank, much to Jim McIlroy's displeasure, but Anna produced a letter from Gus saying the money was her share of her father's estate and she was free to spend it as she saw fit. She paid Dr. and Mrs. Fletcher a total of $1,500 for the 40 acres of land and house one mile west of Tontitown, Arkansas on Highway 68. Bishop Albert Lewis Fletcher of Arkansas grew up on this place. Most of the time Anna did not live on the property as the house and land were rented. Anna must have quit claim deeded it to her daughter, Irene, as Irene sold it to Rinaldo Morsani on 6 June 1950 and it had been known by his name since then.

T. C. Carlson came into Rosemary's life when she entered the University of Arkansas. They were married in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma on 2 July 1917. We will take up this story under T. C. Carlson. Their first child and son was born at 223 East Lafayette, Fayetteville, Arkansas. This house is still occupied in 1987.

All this time Gus had been an independent drilling contractor. By 1920 Anna, Irene and Gus had bought a home at 1320 Jennings, Bartlesville, Oklahoma. Gus was then drilling west of Bartlesville and in March 1920, T. C. joined his father-in-law in his drilling business. T. C. soon found out that he wasn't cut out to be an oil man. Gus died unexpectedly 3 August 1920 and having just drilled three "dry holes" we know that he didn't die rich.

Irene took a secretarial course in Bartlesville and went to work for Phillips Petroleum Company as one of their employees. She remained with them until her death 8 March 1952. Anna followed her 11 May 1952. The house had long before been turned into two apartments with a garage apartment. The property sold quickly and cheaply in 1952.

Augustine, Anna and Irene are all buried at White Rose Cemetery in Bartlesville, Washington County, Oklahoma. They are in block 6, lot 18, spaces 1, 2 & 3. I hope that someone will continue decorating their graves for Memorial Day as my mother expected of me.

Andrew Alexander Crawford

Andrew Alexander Crawford was born November 11, 1812 in Lincoln County, Tennessee. He was the son of John Crawford and first wife, Margaret Buchanan. See descendants of Alexander and Mary McPheeters Crawford by Forbes and Sammis and Descendants of the Buchanan Families of Washington County, Arkansas by Allan S. Humphries. Both his grandfathers were Revolutionary patriots. His paternal grandfather, William Crawford served as Private and patriot manufacturing and supplying arms to the Continental Army, Augusta County, Virginia. His maternal grandfather, Andrew Buchanan, also from Augusta County, Virginia served in the Continental Army and attained the rank of Captain.

Andrew first married Minerva Buchanan. It's thought she was the daughter of Moses Buchanan. They had one child, Robert who later became a lawyer in Spearfish, South Dakota. Minerva was murdered by a negro slave named Caroline. Robert was just a small child. See an account of this murder and trial written by Mrs. Maurice Cruse in Flashback, Vol VII, # 4 July 1957. Andrew then married Rachel Tinnin, the daughter of Hugh and Betsy (Rutherford) Tinnin.

In April of 1849, Andrew, in the company of 85 men from Washington and surrounding counties left for the gold fields of California. Lewis Evans was captain of this group of "Forty-Niners". Andrew suffered from scurvy on the trip. Some men were never heard from, but Andrew made the trip home safely. He managed to bring each child a gold nugget. In the year of 1859, he was serving as Justice of the Peace in Washington County, performing marriages and etc. Then in the first part of the Civil War, he was serving as County Judge. He then enlisted in the Confederate Army and fought in the Battle of Pea Ridge and other western battles. He died at Rienzi, near Corinth, Mississippi from heat exposure during the Battle of Shiloh, May 23, 1862.

In the Memoirs of Col. J. P. Neal, who was married to Lucy Tinnin, Rachel's sister, Col. Neal mentions a house raising in the Prairie Grove Valley in 1839. The house was on the east side of Cane Hill and belonged to Andy Crawford. He also mentions that the morning after the battle of Prairie Grove he was climbing a hill and met 200 Federal prisoners under guard on Andy Crawford's farm. It was later the Mike Nail place.

We don't know how Rachel managed after the war, but she had lost her husband and oldest son, Hugh when it was over. She may have been homeless after its destruction. It was with the aid of the Catholic Sisters that she was given a milk cow to help provide for her children. Later in the 1870 Federal Census, she was living with her children in the home of William D. Crawford, Andrew's brother and his family.

John Smith told his children that the first time he ever saw Martha or Mattie, as he called her was when he went to the Widow Crawford's back door to inquire about sharecropping on her land. They fell in love but Mattie's family didn't approve of him. He had become an orphan during the War. His mother had died from measles and his father at the hands of bushwhackers. His brothers had taken the Northern cause during the war. He was poor, uneducated and unchurched, but young love had its way and they eloped, both at the age of 22.

The only child of Andrew and Minerva was Robert, born about 1838.

Rachel Tinnin was born in Mississippi January 15, 1826 and died 1903 or 1904 according to her widow's pension records.

The children of Andrew and Rachel were: Hugh, born about 1845 and died unmarried in the Civil War. Margaret, born about 1847 and married John "Lum" Henson. Susan "Sug" born about 1853 and married first: Isham House and second: H. Covey. Martha Halbert (Mattie) Crawford, born February 11, 1854 - died January 16, 1899 in Floyd County, Texas, married John Washington Smith November 11, 1877 in Washington County, Arkansas, (see J. W. Smith family). Andrew Neal Crawford, born March 13, 1856 - died in Florida, married Laura Baird, children: Mrs. C. M. Garrett, Mrs. P. W. Weybrecht, Mrs. S. K. Booth and Alvin A. Crawford from his obituary. Lucy Crawford, born August 30, 1856 - died December 10, 1938, married Alexander Cruse, January 13, 1878 see To Kimberly, with Love by Lillian Cruse Woods and Buell Beverly Woods. Emily (Emma) Crawford, married first: George McKinzie on September 9, 1880, second: Huff, this family moved to Belton, in Bell County, Texas. Alice Crawford married Frank Parkhurst on January 25, 1880, she died leaving at least one daughter.

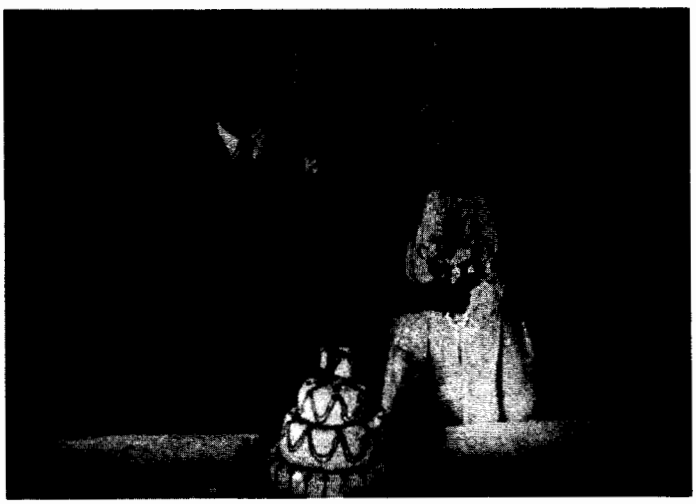
Andrew B. Crawford

Andrew Buchanan Crawford, eldest child of James and LaVicy (Buchanan) Crawford, came to Washington County, Arkansas with his parents about 1827. He was born in Lincoln County, Tennessee on October 12, 1823. LaVicy Buchanan was born December 10, 1801 in Lincoln County, Tennessee, the daughter of Andrew and Jane Buchanan.



William Andrew and Mary Thomas (Cox) Crawford

In 1849, Andrew left Washington County with a contingent of fortune seekers for the newly-announced gold discoveries in California. During the trip westward, his horse was stolen, perhaps by Cherokee Indians, and an effort was made to retrieve it by asking Chief John Ross to locate her so Andrew's father could get her back. Much sickness prevailed on the journey to and from California; Andrew seemed to have caught several illnesses but recovered from all of them.

On May 15, 1851, Andrew married Martha Pyeatt, daughter of Peter Paulus and LaVina (Cox) Pyeatt, in Washington County. They had at least three children, all sons: James Thomas, born about 1857, John P., born about 1859, and William Andrew, born March 18, 1863.

At the outbreak of the civil War, the Confederate government wanted Andrew to keep his blacksmith shop open so he could fix wagons and similar war material. On October 10, 1864, he was killed in his shop by either Confederate or Union soldiers. The family's food supply ran very low. One day, soldiers came to the Crawford house looking for food. Martha had hidden some parched corn in her loft. One of the soldiers got up on a chair to check the loft, and she knocked the chair out from under him. Not finding anything, they wanted, the soldiers looked around her house and left the family alone.

On April 16, 1987, Martha Crawford married Philip Gregory, also of Washington County. She had two more children, Mary C. and Martha M., and moved to Bell County, Texas about 1876 with her second husband, their two daughters, and her three sons by Andrew.

William Stephen Crawley

James Y. Crawley was born in 1798 in Maryland. Anania Crawley was born in 1801 in North Carolina, and to them was born William Stephen Crawley July 1, 1827 in Tennessee. He was married to Ibba Burgess b. September 21, 1825. To this union were born Stephen H., November 16, 1853, Martha Rebeka, born July 21, 1855. The Civil War was in progress at the time so William moved his family deep into the wooded area toward Cane Hill. They constructed a cabin, cleared land for a garden and to grow corn. Their mother had already died so the minor children were in the woods alone. They moved household furnishings, food, a team of oxen, and the other necessities to the cabin. He did this for the safety of his children. Martha told the incident when her father returned from the War and was ill, he told her he had been followed and if anyone came to the cabin she was to detain the person at the door of the cabin, which she did. This enabled William to climb out of a window, or opening, in the back of the cabin and go around the house and shoot the man who was being detained at the front door. They returned to their home after the War and found that it had been used as a hospital. Soldiers had been buried in the meadow in front of the house. They were later removed. Mary Elizabeth Crisp

The central persons of this sketch are Mansil Monroe Crisp and Mary Elizabeth Pursell. They were born and died in northwest Arkansas and had ancestors and descendants in Washington County as well as other counties in this area. They were ordinary people by economic, social, or political standards. But they lived their lives as they believed their religion taught them and were daily, living examples of God's love. They were married over sixty-seven years, had four children, were in harmony with friends, family and nature, and possessed and gave more love than anyone, the author, a grandson, has ever known. Their legacy of love, combined with the love of many others, is the intangible that makes Washington County a great place to live.

Adult male seated, Mansil Monroe Crisp; adult female, Mary Elizabeth Pursell Crisp, children in laps, to the right a male child in a dress, Robert Monroe Crisp. To the left a male child in boys clothing, William Mansil Crisp. Circa 1917.

Mary Elizabeth Purcell was born in Lincoln, Washington County, Arkansas, December 5, 1895. She was the daughter of William M. "Billy" Pursell and Emma "Mama" Nickens Pursell. The Pursell roots can be traced to a Benjamin Pursell of Kentucky and born about 1750. Pursell is an English and Irish name, and literally means keeper of the pigs or "Pork Seller", a name with special significance in Razorback country.

Benjamin Pursell (ca. 1750, Virginia) was one of about three Benjamins who appeared in the same area at the same time. At this writing, he has not been sorted out from the others and his origin is not established. Benjamin had a son, Thomas Pursley (1776, Kentucky) (the most common spelling of the name is Purcell, but other variants include Pursley, Pursell, and Purselley) who was born in Kentucky in 1776.

Thomas Pursell (1776, Kentucky) married a Susannah Bennett (??) and they had a son William (1815, Kentucky) who married Ann Haynes (1812, Kentucky). William and Ann Purcell had four children, the last being William Pursell born 1848 in Kentucky. The infant William's father died the same year, 1848, he was born.

Ann Haynes Pursell married shortly afterwards to Doctor George Washington Boone (1806, Kentucky). There had been a family story about a Daniel Boone connection which was never very clear. Mrs. Thelma Jean Carroll Reynolds of Santa Ana, California, is a descendant of Doctor George Boone and wife Ann and provided the material on Boone and Haynes. Doctor George W. Boone was a descendant of the very large Boone family in the U. S. (which includes the famous Daniel Boone) going back through George Boone (1767, North Carolina), Edward Boone (1740, Pennsylvania), Squire Boone (1696, England), George Boone III.

Doctor George Boone and Ann Haynes Pursell Boone had two daughters: Persis and Mary Ann. Mrs. Reynolds descends from Mary Ann Boone. Persis Boone married 1) Mr. Johnson and 2) Solomon Wood and is buried in Fayetteville. Doctor Boone and wife, Ann, moved from Kentucky to Franklin County, Arkansas by 1854. Doctor Boone died in 1855, leaving his widow Ann with son William Pursell and daughters Persis and Mary Ann Boone. (An interesting and unusual item today is Persis Boone is named for Doctor Boone's first wife: Persis Karn, died 1849). In 1857, Ann Haynes Pursell Boone married John Bevins of Madison County, Arkansas and moved to the Saint Paul area.

Ann Haynes Pursell Boone Bevins (1812, Kentucky) was the daughter of William Haynes (1788, Virginia) and Jane McGuire (1794, Kentucky). William Haynes (1788, Virginia) was the son of Charles Ellis Haynes (1765, Virginia) and Nancy Goodridge (or Goodrich) (1766, Kentucky). Charles Ellis Haynes (1765, Virginia) was the son of William Haynes (1740, Virginia) and Hannah Ellis (1741, Virginia). William Haynes (1740, Virginia was the son of a William Haynes (??) and Elizabeth _____. Hannah Ellis (1741, Virginia) was the daughter of Charles Ellis and Susannah Harding. Susannah Harding was the daughter of Thomas Harding and Mary Giles.

William Pursell (1848, Kentucky) grew up in Madison County, Arkansas and is listed in the 1870 Madison County census records with his step-father John Bevins and mother Ann. About five houses away in the census is P. W. Nickens with wife Rebecca and family.

Emma "Mama" Nickens, mother of Mary Elizabeth Crisp, was born in 1875 to P. W. Nickens (ca 1843, Kentucky) and Rebecca Loveless (ca. 1844, Kentucky). The Loveless name is handed down in the family and is not documented by other sources. In the 1870 census they are shown with a son Thomas, age 1, born in Kentucky, and, apparently, had just moved to Arkansas. The 1880 census shows the Nickens family with son Thomas, age 11, son John, age 6, daughter, Emma age 5, son Gentry age 3, daughter Elizabeth age 2 and infant son Joseph. The ancestry of Nickens and Loveless has not been established.

William M. Pursell was first married to a Nancy _____, probably about 1872, and had six children by this first marriage: Laura, Anna, Mittie, Bonnie, Cass, and Bruce. The author has little information about this first marriage.

William M. "Billy" Pursell and Emma "Mama" Nickens, parents of Mary E. Pursell Crisp, were married about 1894, probably in Madison County. Ten children were born to this marriage: Mary Elizabeth (5 December 1895, Arkansas) married Mansil Monroe Crisp, John (3 August 1897, Arkansas) married Ferba Thomas, Oma (24 September 1899) married William Norvell, Essie (9 December 1901) married 1) Clem Townley and 2) Issac Weldon, Zora (9 April 1904) married Delmar Coffman, Charles (18 September 1906, Arkansas) married Tosie Lane, James (3 June 1909, Arkansas) married Mildred Coble, Bessie (1 July 1911, Arkansas) married Russell H. Cole, and twins Lorine (12 August 1914, Arkansas) married Haskell Smith and Florine (12 August 1914, Arkansas) married Henry (Ted) Armstrong.

Billy and Mama Pursell lived in various parts of northwest Arkansas as he worked as a Methodist Minister and she raised children. A July 6, 1930, Van Buren, Arkansas newspaper provides an interesting account of Reverend Pursell's career where he describes himself at the age of 82, father of sixteen children, and fifty-four years as a Minister as the "boy preacher who walks". The interview includes some information about his years as a circuit rider Minister in the Madison-Washington-Crawford Company areas and one wonders how much he exaggerated when he said he "once preached a sermon with the snow coming through the roof of the little church in such flurries he had to keep on his hat". Reverence William Pursell died about a year after the interview in 193?. His wife, Emma "Mama" Pursell continued in Crawford County, with her family and died in 1975, just short of her 100th birthday. The 100 year span includes depressions, wars, travel by foot or horse, airplanes, and men on the moon. Her dedication to family and fundamental principles are remembered well by the author, her great-grandson, and the many others she touched.

Our central figures, Mary E. Pursell and Mansil M. "Dugie" Crisp were married May 20, 1913, in Fort Smith. As the story goes, Mary had gone to Fort Smith to visit her sister and there met "Dugie" Crisp. Mansil Monroe Crisp (1893, Arkansas) had the lifetime nickname of Dugie and many people did not know his real name as he used initials M. M. on documents.

Dugie Crisp has roots going back to colonial North Carolina to a William Crisp (ca. 1710,?). He may have had the middle name Mansell as supported by some deeds. The name Mansel (with several variation of spelling) is handed down through many generations. William Crisp (ca. 1710,?) had eighteen children by two wives and many Crisp in the U. S. trace back to this ancestor. William Crisp (ca. 1710,?) simply appears in North Carolina and his roots have never been established. Some indications point to Massachusetts and a Benjamin and Deliverance Crisp, but Virginia and the West Indies, particulary Barbadoes, are possibilities. The name Crisp is English and derives from the word meaning curly-headed. William Crisp lived and died about 1783 in North Carolina and names his children and second wife Frances in his will. A son by the first wife was also named William Crisp (ca. 1740, North Carolina).

The second William (Mansell?) Crisp (ca. 1740, North Carolina) may have (but not established) married an Elizabeth Ramsey. They moved to the Laurens County area of South Carolina and had at least six children. One daughter, Penina (ca. 1764, South Carolina) married Joseph Cromwell Matthews and are ancestors of the Hale family in Lee and Phillip counties of Arkansas. Another son is Mansel Crisp (1764, South Carolina) and is the second great-grandfather of our central figure Dugie Crisp. Mansel Crisp (1764, South Carolina) married Margaret Rodgers of South Carolina.

Mansil and Margaret Crisp moved from South Carolina to Tennessee and had at least eight children. One child was a William Mansil Crisp (1788, South Carolina) married Hannah Wilson and migrated to Texas and finally to Oregon. Many Texas Crisp are descendants of William and Hannah. Mansil had a close association with and, according to one historical account, "partly reared" David Crockett. Other records indicate "David Crockett gave a power of attorney to Mansel Crisp" and the marriage of a daughter, Sallie Rodgers Crisp (1792, South Carolina), to Samuel Augustus Erwin (1785, Virginia) was "performed by Davy Crockett". Another son of Mansil, Tillman A. Crisp (ca. 1792, South Carolina), is the great-grandfather of Dugie Crisp.

Tillman A. Crisp (ca. 1792, South Carolina) had three wives and lived in the Hardeman County area of Tennessee. The second wife can only be identified by 1830 and 1840 census records indicating a female in right age category with Tillman and a Bible record of his son Mansil showing birth date as 1834. Several census records show Tillman A. Crisp with son Mansil M. Crisp (1834, Tennessee). This Mansil is Dugie Crisp's grandfather who he never knew.

Mansil M. Crisp, born 4 July 1834 and died 25 August 1882, lived in the Hardeman and McNairy County areas of Tennessee. He was married to a Mary _____, born 25 August 1842 and died 6 March 1900, born in Tennessee or Mississippi. This Mansil and Mary had children: James Henry Crisp (1867, Tennessee, Dugie's father), Emma L. (ca. 1869, Tennessee), Mary and Martha (twins, ca. 1871, Tennessee), Phillip Monroe (ca. 1873, Tennessee), Manda (ca 1876, Tennessee), and Elmira (ca. 1879, Tennessee). A cousin recalls that a son named Mansil M. was also born but died young.

Dugie's father, James Henry Crisp (1867, Tennessee) moved to the Mansfield area of Sebastian County in the 1880s where he taught public schools and was called Squire Crisp. James Henry met and married Rosa May Collier (1872, Arkansas).

Rosa Mae Collier (1872, Arkansas) was a daughter of Henry Clay Collier (1844, Arkansas) and Dorothula Hayes (1874, Arkansas) of Johnson County, Arkansas. Henry Clay Collier had at least sixteen children by four wives which he lists in a claim for a Civil War injury. In this claim, he says he was "ruptured in the right groin. . .at De valls Bluff, Arkansas. . .by my horse jumping a stream of water while charging the enemy". Henry Clay Collier (1844, Arkansas) was the son of William Collier (ca. 1809, North Carolina) and Celina E. _____ (ca. 1823, Tennessee).

James Henry Crisp (1867, Tennessee) and Rosa Mae Collier (1872, Arkansas) were married about 1888 and lived in Mansfield, Arkansas. They had children: Maud M. (1889, Arkansas), Mansel M. "Dugie" (1892, Arkansas), Amos Clay (1893, Arkansas), Otis L. (1895, Arkansas), Grace B. (1897, Arkansas), Raymond D., (1898, Arkansas), Claude (1900, Arkansas) and Horace (1902, Arkansas). James Henry and Rosa May are both buried in Sebastian County, Arkansas. Raymond died young and Amos Clay died in World War I.

Mansil M. "Dugie" Crisp and Mary Pursell were married on May 20, 1913. As the story goes, Mary had gone to Fort Smith to visit her half-sister Bonnie. While there, she met Dugie and it was "love at first sight". Dugie and Mary had four children: William Mansil Crisp (1914, Arkansas), Robert Monroe Crisp (1916, Arkansas), Emma Rosemary Crisp (1925, Arkansas) and Amos Clay Crisp (1931, Arkansas). Dugie worked for the railroad for many years and operated a neighborhood grocery store. They were married for sixty-seven years until Dugie's death in 1980. Mary died in 1985 and they are buried in Fort Smith.

Robert Monroe Crisp (1916, Arkansas) married Geraldine O. Lau (1920, Arkansas) and had two children: Robert Monroe Crisp, Jr. (1940, Arkansas) author of this section and Nancy Jean Crisp (1947, Arkansas). The senior Robert Monroe Crisp was a pilot in World War II where he served as a flight instructor and flew the "hump". After the war, he was manager of the Fort Smith Airport and Little Rock Adams Field.

Robert Monroe Crisp, Jr. (1940, Arkansas) has lived in Washington County since coming to the University in 1958 with the exception of one year with IBM and two years at the University of Texas. He married Mary Kathryn "Ginger" Rawlins Parker in 1983. They have five daughters by previous marriages: Catherine Lau Crisp (1965, Alabama), Kathryn Lynn Parker (1966, Virginia), Robyn Maria Crisp (1967, Arkansas) Ann Elizabeth Parker (1968, Virginia) and Rachel Monroe Crisp (1970, Arkansas). Both Ginger and Bob are employed by the University of Arkansas: Ginger as Associate General Counsel and Bob as Professor of Computer Science Engineering.

Records of Washington County show previous Crisp records dating to the 1820s. A first cousin, six generations removed, to the author, was Reden Greenville Crisp (ca. 1800, North Carolina) was recorded on the Sheriff Census 1829 and served jury duty. Reden G. Crisp is believed to be the son of John Crisp, a son of William Crisp (ca. 1710, North Carolina?). Reden was apparently a pioneer land speculator who came to Washington County from Missouri, stayed for a few years, and moved on to Texas. He has a John Crisp with him, probably a son.

A John Burch Crisp (ca 1814, North Carolina) settled in Washington County in the 1850s. He came, with wife Annie and children Sarah, Eli, Jack, Margaret, George and John, from Tennessee by way of Missouri and lived in the Prairie Grove area. Attempts to connect John and Annie to North Carolina have not been successful: there are at least five Crisp-Burch marriages. John and Annie disappear after the 1860 census and attempts to find Civil War records on John have not been successful to date. Some of his children appear in 1870 census and later.

Although born and raised in Fort Smith, the author, having lived in Fayetteville since 1958, is proud to call Washington County, Arkansas his home. Finding the background on my ancestors has been a work of love. The opportunity to recognize my grandparents, Mary and Dugie Crisp, for the caring and loving persons they were is deeply appreciated.

Andrea Thompson Cromwell

Andrea Jean Thompson was born on November 13, 1946, the first child of Lyell and Marcella Thompson of Stillwater, Oklahoma. She was the first grandchild on both sides of the family. The paternal grandparents were Kenneth and Gladys Thompson; the maternal ones were Andrew and Amelia Horn. Both families farmed near Perry, Oklahoma.

Andrea's early life was full of nurturing by aunts, uncles and grandparents and learning to enjoy her new siblings. Andrew Mark was born February 9, 1948; Susan Amy was born April 19, 1950; Lyell Kent was born December 9, 1953 and Kevin Craig was born September 24, 1955. The family lived in Oklahoma and Ohio while Dad completed his university studies and began his professional career. Andrea's early childhood was spent playing in the woods and fields, making believe. She went to school at a consolidated country school in Dickson, Oklahoma and participated in 4-H activities, learning to raise pigs, sew aprons and make speeches. Once, the whole family rose at dawn to listen to her speech on Civil Defense on the radio.

In 1958, she came to Fayetteville. Suddenly the farm girl was in the city. The summer months were lonely but when she entered seventh grade at Hillcrest Jr. High she began making friends. She entered eighth grade at the new Woodland Jr. High School and learned she loved to sing after joining the Girls Ensemble. In high school, she continued to sing with the Choralettes and also entered contests as a solo performer. She won a vocal scholarship to the University of Arkansas in 1964.

Andrea married James David Rand of Rogers, Arkansas, in 1965 and their daughter, Susan Elisabeth Rand, was born on September 17, 1968. The family was separated when David fought in Vietnam and the marriage ended in divorce in 1971. Andrea returned to the University of Arkansas to prepare for a career in Social Work, completed her Bachelor's Degree in 1973 and her Master's Degree in Social Work in 1974. She had married Paul Dwain Cromwell from Fort Smith, Arkansas in 1972.

Her first professional job was as Director of Services to Military Families for the American Red Cross in Little Rock. In 1975, the family returned to Fayetteville when she was hired as Outpatient Therapist with Ozark Guidance Center in Springdale. Andrea worked as therapist for families, individuals and groups.

She and Dwain bought the " Old Canard House" at 417 E. Lafayette when they returned to Fayetteville and when they divorced in 1979 Andrea and daughter "Lissa" remained there. In that year Andrea took a position as Residential Social Worker with Youth Bridge, Inc. in Fayetteville where she supervised a group home program for troubled adolescent girls. In 1981 she was promoted to Program Director and began supervision and management of staff and programs for that agency. From 1981, she taught several classes in the Social Work program at the University of Arkansas while she continued her work at Youth Bridge.

Andrea's interests throughout these years were her daughter, her family, her work, and her friends. She volunteered for the Rape Crisis Center and served on the Boards of the Project for Victims of Domestic Violence and the American Red Cross. She helped establish a Professional Women's Group that met for years to provide emotional support and friendship to members. She sang with a community choir, taught professional workshops throughout the state, attended the Unitarian Fellowship and enjoyed the University's lectures and concerts. Her closest friends were Barbara Taylor, Catherine Totten, Cheri Carden, her parents, her daughter and especially, Kurt Bevernitz. As she grew older she looked forward to continuing her development of interest in social work research, gardening, singing, reading contemporary literature and, especially grandparenting.

Courtney Crouch

The Crouch family history in Washington County has to start with Courtney Chet Crouch. Courtney Chet Crouch was born in Collins, Missouri on June 23, 1912. He was the son of William Edward and Lura Virginia Heare Crouch. Actually, his first appellation was "Chet Courtney"; however, as he grew older he did not think that quite fit him, and he decided to change it around to Courtney Chet. The name Courtney has no particular family history of significance. As it turns out, it was the name of a beau of one of Courtney's aunts.

His early years were spent in the small southeastern Missouri town of Collins. He had a sister named Cora Helen Crouch, now Nanney. His father was primarily a banker, but he also had an interest in an abstract company and farming interests. He also must have dabbled in law, although it is doubtful that he had a license to practice law, if one was even needed in those days. At any rate, his interest in law had a profound influence on young Crouch as he virtually promised his father, before his father died that he would become a lawyer. His father died when he was nine years old and his mother had the task of raising him and his sister during a period of time when it was not too easy for a woman to raise two children by herself. Courtney used to say that his mother was convinced that they were going to starve to death. The frugal nature of this mother apparently manifested itself mostly in the way they ate, as when Crouch was an adult his most frequent complaint about his childhood was perhaps not so much his mother's cooking, but the food that she selected. Perhaps this influenced him later in life as well, as he fancied himself as an amateur gourmet cook. His mother moved the family to Springfield, Missouri where he and his sister attended grade school. She then moved the family to Arkansas where they lived for brief periods of time in Bentonville, Siloam Springs and Springdale. Crouch worked to support his mother and sister during that period of time with jobs such as a newspaper carrier and as a soda jerk in a drug store in Siloam Springs.

Crouch was true to the promise he made to this father as a child. He moved to Kansas City to attend what is now the University of Missouri at Kansas City. In those days you did not have to have a degree to go into law school. Thus, he attended only two years of undergraduate school and then attended two years of law school. He graduated with a law degree from the University of Missouri at Kansas City in 1933. He actually passed the Arkansas Bar examination before he had graduated. He then returned to Springdale to wait until he was 21 years old to begin the practice of law.

Either the law practice was not too good or it was so good that he wanted to move onto bigger and better things as at the ripe old age of 23 he ran for and was elected to the only political office he ever sought, that of mayor of Springdale, Arkansas. He served from 1936 to 1939. He certainly was one of the youngest mayors in the nation at that time and was the youngest that Springdale has ever had. A review of some of the City Ordinances during his term as Mayor indicate that while the laws do not seem terribly significant, they were at least interesting. Ordinance #213 dealt with the owning, operating and regulation of slot machines, gum and cigarette machines and assessed a privilege tax on such machines. Ordinance #217 made it unlawful to sell alcohol to any person convicted in mayor's court of the offense of drunkenness three times in one year. The maximum speed limit was set at 25 m. p. h. on December 1, 1936 by Ordinance #218. That ordinance also, among other things, established 45 degree angle parking on Emma Avenue with the front wheels to be not more than 6 inches from the curb and made it illegal to hitch rides on other vehicles while riding a bike or while roller skating. The City Attorney's compensation was set a whopping $8.00 per month by Ordinance #225 passed March 8, 1938.

Prior to becoming Mayor, Courtney had courted University of Arkansas student, Marie Loftis of Pocahontas, Arkansas. She was the daughter of John Riley Loftis and Sarah Louella Jones Loftis. Ms. Loftis was teaching school in Maynard, Arkansas, when Crouch asked for her hand in marriage. They were married in 1936. While he was practicing law and continuing as the Mayor of Springdale, she helped keep the books for the Springdale Water and Sewer Commission.

While Courtney's first love was the practice of law, he was generous in his time to many civic affairs. He served as the Chamber of Commerce secretary from 1934 to 1936.

By 1938 Courtney Crouch had found that the practice of law in the small town of Springdale was going to be difficult. He was offered a job with the management consultant firm of Braun and Company of Los Angeles, California. While working for this company he lived in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Boise, Idaho; Palo Alto, California and Kansas City, Missouri. During this time the United States became embroiled in World War II, and Crouch tried to join the service several times; he was rejected for health reasons. He used to say that it was because he had flat feet. At any rate, he served his country in a civilian capacity while working for Braun and Company, which did consulting work for the United States during the war.

By 1947 the Crouches were tired of moving around and decided that it was time to try and return to Springdale, Arkansas. They returned in 1947 where Crouch set up a solo law practice. At the time of his death, he was a senior partner in the firm of Crouch, Blair, Cypert and Waters, which became one of the leading law firms in northwest Arkansas. Courtney Crouch also distinguished himself in service to his profession. He served as the Washington County Bar Association President, a member of the Executive Committee of the Arkansas Bar Association, President of the Arkansas Bar Association in 1965 - 1966, as Trustee of the Arkansas Law School Foundation, as a member of the Executive Committee and Trustee of the Southwestern Legal Foundation of Dallas. He was a fellow of the American Bar Foundation, and was elected as a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, a distinction held by only a handful of lawyers in Arkansas at the time. He was listed in Who's Who in Arkansas in 1968.

As a lawyer, he was well respected and liked by his peers in the legal profession. He had quite a sense of humor and was known to have quite a wit. There are numerous humorous incidents involving Courtney Crouch, both as a lawyer and otherwise. One such incident occurred while Crouch was defending a man accused of a crime, which was an unusual occurrance for Crouch as his practice was primarily limited to civil matters. On this particular occasion, though, he was trying this case against an aggressive and successful prosecutor named Ted Coxsey. In closing argument, apparently not having much else to defend his client on, Crouch castigated the prosecutor for having prosecuted this defendent, calling the prosecutor nothing but a political animal, and haranguing on and on about how Coxsey was only prosecuting this case to get re-elected. Upon rising to give his final closing argument, Coxsey addressed the jury by saying "Now, Courtney Crouch has gotten up here and told you all these bad things about me, but I know he does not believe them or he would not have taken me to lunch today."

As a citizen, Courtney Crouch served his community well. He was a member of the Board of Directors of Springdale Memorial Hospital, and served in many areas as a member of the Chamber of Commerce, as past President of the Springdale Rotary Club, as a Board Member and Trustee of the First Methodist Church, as a Board Member of the Northwest Arkansas Regional Airport Committee, as Chairman of the Washington County Democratic Central Committee and as Director of the First National Bank. He was also instrumental in serving on committees which sought and accomplished the acquiring of a dam on the White River, now known as Beaver Dam.

About town, he was known for his starched white shirts with detachable cardboard collars, which were surely prevalent back in the '20s, but which were virtually unheard of in the '50s and '60s. Until the invention of the "clip on tie" he adorned his cardboard collars with bow ties. It was rare that a local event could change this manner of dress. It was customary back in the early days of the Rodeo of the Ozarks, as it is now, for the downtown businessmen to wear western wear to work during the time of the rodeo, but not so for Crouch. The penalty in those days for wearing "civilian clothes" was to be locked up in a chain link cage, the only way out of which was to swim through a tub of water. While Crouch tried to stay low during most days of this annual event, there was one such day and he was not so lucky and he was jailed in this manner. One of his friends went to his home to get his wife, Marie to "bail" him out. She was given a huge skeleton key to unlock the "jail". Much to her and his surprise, however, the key was about five times too large to unlock the small padlock on the cage. Not being one inclined to swim his way out, he finally paid his way out of "jail". This punishment apparently had no lasting rehabilitative effect. He was never known to have adorned a pair of cowboy boots and blue jeans to avoid being a "habitual offender".

Crouch had three sons, Courtney C. Crouch, Jr. born on August 24, 1941, Michael E. Crouch born April 11, 1946 and James E. Crouch born October 21, 1952. Courtney C. Crouch, Jr. married Brenda Heck of Fayetteville, Arkansas, and to that marriage was born a daughter, Danna Suzanne and a son, Courtney Chet Crouch III. Courtney C. Crouch, Jr. attended the University of Arkansas where he graduated in 1962 with a BA in business administration. Since that time he has been involved in the insurance business, and now serves as President of Selected Funeral and Life Insurance Company in Hot Springs, Arkansas. Michael E. Crouch attended Hendrix College in Conway and later the University of Arkansas Medical Center in Little Rock where he earned his degree as a medical doctor. He currently practices internal medicine and rheumatology in Salsbury, Maryland where he lives with his wife Mary Kay Waters Crouch, formerly of Little Rock, Arkansas. They have two children, a daughter Jennifer and a son Patrick. Courtney Crouch's youngest son, James E. Crouch married Catherine J. Monroe, who was raised in Whittier, California, and lived in Conway, Arkansas at the time of their marriage. To that marriage was born four children, Matthew J., Elizabeth C., John Courtney and Mary Catherine. James E. Crouch has carried on his father's profession, having attended Hendrix College and graduating with a BA in business and economics, and obtaining the degree Juris Doctor from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville. He now practices with his father's original firm which is now Cypert, Crouch, Clark & Harwell. Courtney C. Crouch, Sr. died May 7, 1975 and is fondly remembered by his friends as a true gentleman and citizen and by his colleagues in the legal professional as a "lawyer's lawyer".

Lottie Lee Moore Crouch

Lottie Lee (Moore) Crouch lives on the same farm, in the Meadow Valley Community, that has been in her family for 150 years. The Moore/Crouch land has lately been cut up by the new Highway 112/71 by-pass intersection. The first Moore to migrate to Washington County was Samuel Moore, born 5 July 1783 at Martinsburg, West Virginia. In March 1805 at Gallatin, Sumner County, Tennessee, he married Elizabeth "Betsy" Pierce. They had one son, Joseph Pierce Moore, born 13 April 1806, and the young mother died 27 December 1807. On 27 December 1808 Samuel Moore second married Jane Dickson and they had eight children in Tennessee: Elizabeth, John Pavett, Nancy Isabella, Margaret Dickson, Martha Jane, Allen Mathis, Francis Marion and Mary Eliza. Samuel Moore was a lieutenant in the War of 1812, and a warm personal friend of General Andrew Jackson. Around 1836 the Moores moved to Washington County, Arkansas, where Samuel farmed, although he had earned his living in Tennessee making spinning machines. By 1846 he moved to Rusk, Cherokee County, Texas, where he died 8 March 1872.

Samuel's oldest son Joseph P. Moore, on 18 October 1832, married Matilda Cummings Abbott at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, where she was born 8 December 1813. In August 1837 they purchased the Moore/Crouch farm in Washington County, Arkansas. In the 1840s Joseph had a racehorse track, where the present highways intersect. Joseph and Matilda Moore had seven sons, who were raised on the homestead farm: Thomas Jefferson, Stephen, David, George Pierce, Joseph Pierce Jr. "Bud", Samuel and John. Their father died 27 November 1850 and was buried in a small family cemetery just north of the present barn, which contains eight family graves. David died in 1851, and in 1860 Steve, Sam, and Tom's young wife all died of typhoid and were buried there.

Tom, George and Bud served in the Civil War. Tom took a slave with him when he went to war. In 1861, Bud dreamed Tom had died. A few days later, the slave returned home with Tom's horse, from Dardanelle, Arkansas, where he had dled of typhold. Tom's widowed mother Matilda raised his one year old daughter, and endured the hardships of the war, on this family farm. Their meat had to be hidden in nearby woods, from raiding armies and bushwhackers. Tom's hidden violin was discovered and stolen. But part of the pioneer family survived the war.

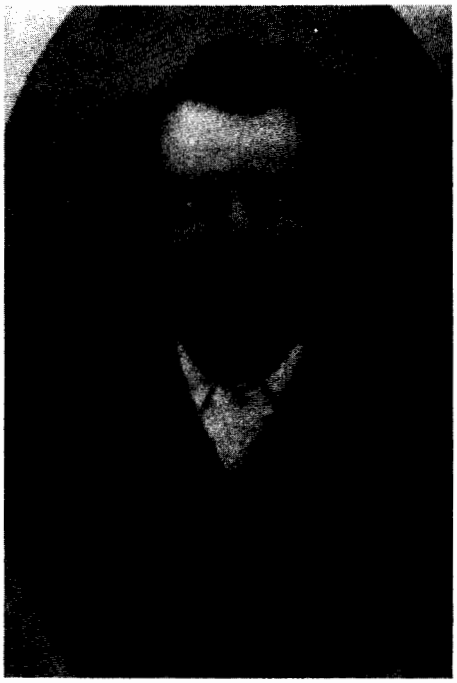
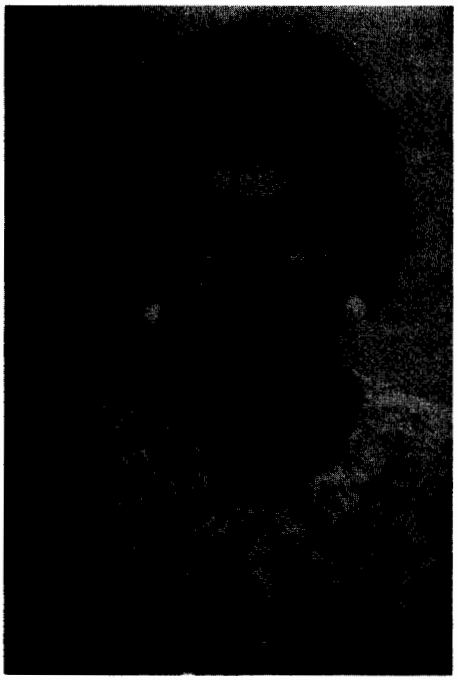
Home place built in 1910, built by Joseph Pierce "Bud" Moore (Lottie's father).

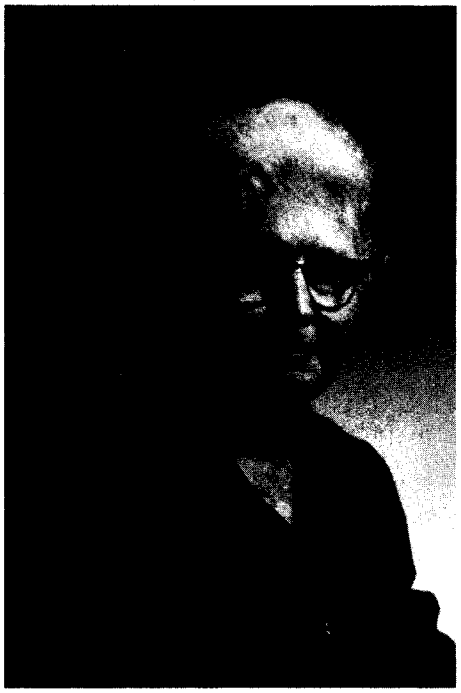


Joseph Pierce, Jr. "Bud" Moore, father of Lottie Moore Crouch.



Nan Moore (sister of Lottie Crouch).

Joseph Pierce "Bud" Moore was born 16 September 1845 near Paris, Arkansas, during a brief move south. After serving in the Civil War, he prospected for gold in Yellowstone, Wyoming, and Montana, between 1865-1870. Then in the 1870s he was one of the first traveling representatives for the Singer Sewing Machine Company. He also farmed, and hauled White River rock from a quarry, to be used in the construction of Old Main, on the new University of Arkansas campus. At Mt. Comfort on 3 July 1892, Bud Moore married Nancy Ellen Lamons. She was born 12 May 1873 at Greenville, Tennessee, as were her parents, Isaac Newton and Clara Ellen (Wright) Lamons. (The parents moved to Arkansas in 1877, and both were buried at Westville, Oklahoma.) Bud and Nancy Ellen Moore had two girls, Lottie



Lottie Moore Crouch

Lee born 15 July 1893, and Nan born 3 August 1895, on the Moore family farm. Later that same year, the mother Nancy died. Once more, the pioneer grandmother Matilda took on the job of raising small girls, although she was 82 and nearly blind. The girls attended the Deane School and later the Meadow Valley School, which stood where the U. A. Agri Park is now. In 3 November 1906, Matilda went to a well deserved rest, and hers was the last burial in the small cemetery on the farm. Then 13 year old Lottie and 11 year old Nan took over the job of running the home for their father. Their log home burned in 1910, and was replaced by the two story frame home which now stands, surrounded by tall trees. Their father never remarried, and died 25 March 1919. Nan Moore began teaching in 1914, but earned her degree from the University of Arkansas in 1947. Nan was a school teacher for 46 years, including 34 years at Tuscon, Arizona. She retired in 1961 and lived on the home place with her sister until she died 24 January 1987.

Robert Bennett Crouch was born 3 December 1892 at Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, and died 15 April 1969. His father, Isaac Breckenridge Crouch, from Bourbon County, Kentucky, brought the first registered saddle horses to Oklahoma in 1896. In 1913, Bennett Crouch of Vinita, Oklahoma, moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas, to train and show horses for Edward Orn (on the present Paul Martin farm). Bennett was a farmer and stockman, and one of the organizers of The Farm Bureau, where he was on the board of directors. He also served as a director of the Meadow Valley School. Obviously, the 8 December 1915 marriage of Bennett Crouch and Lottie Lee Moore was a good union, and their family helped them celebrate their Golden Anniversary in 1965. They spent all their married lives on the same farm, where their seven Crouch children were born: Mildred Lee born 28 July 1917 and died 26 February 1937; Joe Bennett born 30 May 1921, married Christine Allen and had Joe Bennett and Allen Oliver; Mary Carolyn born 12 November 1923, married Zara Lee Thomas and had Carolyn Lee, Michael, Joe, and Gerald Dale; Robert Henry born 31 December 1925, married Virginia Smith and had Robert W. and Marilyn Kay; Patricia Lucille born 29 May 1929, married H. Dean Browner and had Donna Jean, Nancy Ellen, and Janet Kay; Kathryn Nan born 12 August 1933 and died 30 October 1933; and Charlotte Sue born 20 March 1935 and died 28 October 1935. The three oldest surviving Crouch children still live here, their grandchildren comprising the seventh generation of the Moore family to live in Washington County.

James Crow

James Crow was born about 1750, probably before his father Walter Crow migrated to Virginia from Maryland by way of Delaware. We found James in Virginia records at the time he moved to Washington County, Virginia about 1778. He married Jane (maiden name not known) about 1776. They took up land in the area where Col. Wm. Campbell lived. It was Col. Campbell who recruited his regiment of Washington County, Virginia men to join forces in the Battle of King's Mountain, 1780 in the Revolutionary War. James was one of those men recruited to serve in Captain J. Dysart's company. James was interviewed regarding the Battle of King's Mountain by historian Lyman Draper in 1813. Reference is made of the interview in the book King's Mountain and Its Heroes - History of the Battle of King's Mountain by Draper, first published in 1881. James and Jane Crow had seven daughters and three sons. It appears that only one son was surviving at the time of Jane's death in 1826. She stated in her will that, "I leave all my land to my son Lewis". Children named in James' will recorded in 1819 in Washington County, Virginia were: (One son unnamed believed to have died before his father died). Margaret Dichardt; George -who is believed to have died before his father's death in 1819 - (grandson James was named in will); Rachel Williams; Ann McKinney; Lewis (my great-great-great grandfather); Elizabeth Kennedy; Pheoba White; Jane Long; and Hannah Galliher. No records of descendants, other than from Lewis, have ever been found. Great-great-great grandfather Lewis Crow married Elizabeth Scott in Washington County, Virginia in 1807. They lived in Washington County, Virginia until Lewis was discharged from service in the War of 1812. About 1815 the family moved to Washington County, Indiana where they remained until about 1845. By 1850 they were in Warren County, Illinois. Both Lewis and Elizabeth Crow died there in 1863. Most of the children had married before 1850 in Indiana.

Lewis' son John H. Crow (my great-great grandfather) married Cynthia Ellen Harbison 1838 in Indiana. Five children were born to this union. Emma married Owen Ambrose Hart; Louisa married John Hart; George married Nancy Howard; Levi died young and John Harvey (no record). Great-great grandmother Cynthia Ellen Crow died in Henderson County, Illinois in 1853. She is buried in the Kemp cemetery there beside her mother Ann (Glazebrook) Harbison. Cynthia's father was James Harbison who died in 1825 in Indiana.

John H. Crow came to Doniphan County, Kansas before 1865. He was enumerated in the Kansas State Census of 1865 with his children. By 1870 he had married Susan Elliott and was living in Madison County, Arkansas. John and Susan had several children. They made their home in Madison County until their deaths - John in 1908 and Susan in 1922. They are buried in the Old Campground cemetery.

Great grandparents George W. and Nancy (Howard) Crow, with their seven children, arrived in Washington County, Arkansas early in 1881 to make their home. George W. was a blacksmith and had worked in this trade in Kansas before coming to Washington County. Two years after arriving he developed pneumonia. His obituary in the Washington County Arkansas newspaper states that he died of typhoid fever July 1, 1883. Nancy was faced with the care and support of their children. With the older children to help she managed. By 1885 William, Abigail Ellen and Mary Elizabeth were married, all in Maguiretown not far from where they lived. John W. was the next one to marry in 1894. William W. married Sarah Bledsoe; Abigail Ellen m. William Magulre; Mary Elizabeth m. Albert Chidester (my grandparents); John W. married Mattie Bledsoe; George H. (no record); Charles Harvey married Della Sheppard; and David Andrew Francis married Esther Patterson. Abigail Ellen Maguire died in 1889 leaving a daughter.

Grandmother Nancy (Howard) Crow did not live to enjoy her many grandchildren. In 1902 she became ill while living near her Howard family in Enid, Oklahoma Territory, and on April 16, 1903 she passed away and is buried in Rogers County, Oklahoma. Her oldest living grandson, William Rolla Chidester will be 102 years old in October 1987. There are several grandchildren and many great grandchildren living in states from east to west throughout the United States. Much could be added to our Crow family history if all could be located and brought together for a reunion.

William Thomas Cumbey

These are some things I can remember my father telling me about the family. I wish now, I had paid more attention and asked more questions.

Bill and Mary Henson Cumbey

His ancestors came from Ireland. My father, William Thomas Cumbey (Will) was born in Virginia, Chatham County, in May, 1875, the oldest of several children. His father, Thomas Edward, was a tobacco farmer. His mother was Frances Matilda Motley.

The family moved to Arkansas around 1885 to the Judsonia, Searcy and Bald Knob areas, then later moved to Missouri, near Bowling Green. My grandpa worked on a farm owned by relatives that came west earlier in the century. Times were rough so my dad and his brother left home and went to Minnesota to work in the log woods in order to send a little help back home. While they were away, my grandmother died and is buried in a little country churchyard cemetery called Indian Creek Baptist Church.

Around 1904, Grandpa and the rest of the family moved to Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, to a community called Duck Creek, a few miles south of Tulsa. They found jobs working on farms. The oldest girl, Mattie, took care of the family. Then, around 1907, oil was struck at Keifer and Glenpool, which became boom towns overnight.

My dad came back to the oil fields, met my mother, Mary Jane Henson, and they were married at Mounds, Oklahoma. They lived in Keifer in a tent because there were no houses to be had. Keifer was known as Tent City. Mother said that Dad fixed up their tent real compfy with pine flooring, siding up about three foot high all around. In summer, they rolled up the tent flaps (screen all around), very pleasant in summer and snug in the winter.

I was born there and about a year later, Dad had a job on an oil lease, taking care of several wells and houses were furnished. He worked there for several years.

Later, he farmed for several years in Oklahoma but wanted to come back to Arkansas. He sold out and he and Chester, the oldest son, loaded up the old wagon with winter meat, canned goods and some furniture and headed for Arkansas. It took them two weeks to drive through. My mother, me and my brothers, Jim and Bill, came on later.

We lived on a farm that my grandfather had bought from Tom Smith. Dad later bought it from Grandpa. The place was known as the Old Brick House, west of Durham. I think Ben Johnson built it before the Civil War. Another child was born to our family, here in Arkansas. Arlene Myrl Cumbey is known as Peggy by most everyone. She is now married to Ottis Wallace and lives in Oklahoma.

I don't know how Grandpa became acquainted with Mr. Tom Smith, but later, he became my father-in-law and also my brother, Chester's. I married Floyd E. Smith and Chester married Mary Smith.

Mama was sorry that churches and schools were so far away but soon got to know the people and things got better. Young ones went to school at Durham. I am not sure if there was a Baptist church at Sulphur City or if it was organized later. I do know that church and Sunday school was held in the old school house and it was there that a minister from Oklahoma, Brother Waymyer, held a revival and many were led to the Lord through his service and baptized in Middle Fork in November. Church was held for a while in the old E. W. Price store building. Finally, a new Baptist church was built on a corner piece of land donated by a member, Dick Head. The people did the labor and the ladies helped by getting donations.

Mama was happy now, but along came the war and both my younger brothers had to go, Bill to Germany and Jim to Alaska. They returned safely, though, and Bill married Myrtle Hutton from the Sulphur City area and Jim married Marilla Waller from the Lincoln area and moved to Oklahoma.

Dad and Mama, getting old and in too bad health to take care of the farm, sold out and bought a home in Mounds, Oklahoma about three blocks from where they were married. Now, they are laid to rest about a mile from their last home.

They made many friends those years they lived in Arkansas (about twenty five years) and makes me feel good and proud when people that knew them tell me how much they thought of them. They were God-fearing poeple and tried to live right and bring up their family the same. I know we will see them again some day.

William Cummins

William Cummins was born December 9, 1814 in England, on the Isle of Wight. The date he arrived in this country and his port of entry has not been discovered. On June 24, 1855, he was married to Mrs. Elizabeth P. Sharp by James A. Slover in Washington County. They settled in the town of Morrow.

Elizabeth Pembrook Cummins was born September 9, 1817, the daughter of Lewis C. and Nancy (Kerby) Anthony of Boone County, Missouri. She was one of twelve children. She first married Abraham Smith of Boone County, Missouri, May 9, 1837; second, Francis Sharp of Cole County, Missouri, May 18, 1841.

On August 20, 1856, Elizabeth gave birth to a son, William Anthony Cummins. A short time later, she died of complications. When the boy was almost four years of age, his father remarried. Frances Langford became his wife on July 18, 1859. She was probably a widow, as she brought seven children into the household with her: Martha, John, Parlee, Frances, Matilda, James and Louisa. According to the 1860 census, William and his new family resided in the Vineyard township. He was a hor-

The young William remained with his stepmother until he was eleven years old. He was then taken to Versailles, Missouri to be reared by his uncle and aunt, Anderson W. and Susan (Robinson) Anthony. William left Missouri at the age of nineteen and returned to Arkansas for a brief time before moving to Muskogee, Indian Territory. The first fall and winter after his arrival, he worked for Major John A. Foreman, ginning and baling cotton. He helped bale the first cotton ginned in the Indian Territory after the Civil War. On March 1, 1880, he went to work for the MKT Railroad at Muskogee as a station baggageman under Foster White, an old schoolmate. He held this position until March 1, 1888.

On August 31, 1881, he married Ora Elizabeth McDaniel, born April 8, 1867, in Palo Pinto, Texas, daughter of David B. and Emma (McCall) McDaniel. Ora is a second cousin of Oklahoma's most famous son, Will Rogers; her paternal grandmother, Catherine (Rogers) McDaniel, being the sister of Will's paternal grandfather, Robert Rogers. In November of 1889, William moved from Muskogee to Catoosa, Indian Territory and improved a farm on which he lived for forty-five years. Besides raising crops, he was a beekeeper. William and Ora Elizabeth were blessed with seven children: (1) Annie Pembrook, b. September 12, 1882 - d. March 11, 1961, married Henry H. Malone, 1900. William married Mrs. Jeanette Bales (nee Reynolds), a widow with two sons, August 2, 1896. To this union were born five children: (1) Susan, b. July 5, 1897 - d. July 6, 1897. (2) Anderson, (3) Ralph (4) Rosa Geneva and (5) Haskell.

William was one of Oklahoma's early Deputy Marshals, serving the court of Judge Isaac C. Parker at Ft. Smith, Arkansas. He knew the badmen of the frontier days and told many stories of his experiences with them.

William Anthony Cummins passed away December 9, 1937, in Tulsa, Oklahoma at the age of 81. A few months before his death, he wrote his own obituary and a letter to the undertaker, outlining plans for his burial. He requested that the minister place a bouquet of blood red roses on his breast at the funeral and that there be no committal services read. He included a list of hymns he wished to be sung at the services and ended with a request that there be no flowers. He is buried at Dick Duck Cemetery in Catoosa, Rogers County, Oklahoma.

Conard Cunningham

My father, Conard Cunningham (born December 12, 1866 at Cairo, Illinois; died April 9, 1923 at Fayetteville) came to northwest Arkansas as a young man because, he said, it "had the best location in the U. S.—the climate was good and it was good farming land—besides being a safe distance from the ocean ". He worked for a good many years as a sawyer for Phipps Lumber Company, located on what is now Highway 62 West.

My mother, Mary Elizabeth (Mollie) Burrows Cunningham was born in Sherman, Texas, November 21, 1876 and died August 8, 1964, at Fayetteville. She lived in Springdale, but moved to Fayetteville after she married. She and Conard raised five children, whose biographies follow:

1. Lee Edward Cunningham (born November 27, 1898; died March 21, 1971) worked as a young man at a local grocery and meat market called Winchester's located on Dickson Street at West. Later he became a roofer and worked a lot for the Polks, who had the furniture store on Dickson Street.

2. Gene Cunningham lived in Fayetteville and attended Fayetteville Business College (owned and operated by H. O. Davis). She was employed as "office girl" by Dr. E. F. Ellis for about ten years. Her hours were from 7:30 a. m. to 6:00 p. m. Part of her job was to build a fire in the fireplace every morning and keep it going all day. Dr. Ellis was very kind to her and to all the family.

3. Harvey Cunningham (born November 3, 1908; now living in Midland, Texas) was named for "Coin Harvey" of Monte Ne fame. He worked as a very young boy for A. L. Trent (for whom Trenton Street was named). Mr. Trent and Harvey planted the beautiful maple trees on Park Street. Mr. Trent also owned and operated a swimming pool just a few yards north of the present swimming pool at Wilson Park. It was a round, natural, pool with a couple of bathhouses and a wooden sidewalk on the north side. There was a nice bandstand and occasionally music there. Harvey worked for many years for Shell Oil Company, and lived briefly in New York before settling in Midland.

4. Wood Cunningham (born February 5, 1911; died June 3, 1976) had a successful roofing business located on Frisco Street. Wood was named for a Dr. Wood who delivered him.

5. I was born September 21, 1913 and reside in Fayetteville. I was named for Joe Bell, one of the founders of Campbell-Bell Dry Goods Store. For the past thirty years, I have worked in the nursery at Central United Methodist Church.

I was married to Jack Scott Poynor (born September 30, 1905, in Marble, Arkansas; died December 28, 1975 at Fayetteville) on December 22, 1934 in Fayetteville, by the Rev. O. L. Lierly. Jack was employed as chief orderly at the Veteran's Hospital, which had just been built and opened for business. At the time, he was very lucky to have the job, as unemployment was high. Jack and I have four children:

The oldest, Mary Gene Poynor Hansell (born January 27, 1941) resides in Fayetteville and is presently an R. N. at Washington Regional Medical Center. She is the mother of two: Anna Rebecca Hansell and Lillian Madelon Hansell Crainshaw. Ruth Ann Poynor Payne was born September 8, 1942 at Fayetteville, and now resides in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where she is a computer programmer. Her daughter, Lisa Renee Payne, attends the University of Arkansas.

Jack Scott Poynor, Jr. (born April 30, 1953) resides in Fayetteville. He is the owner of Industrial Roofing Company in Springdale, and his children are Karyn Elizabeth Poynor and Jack Scott Poynor, III. Sara Pauline Poynor Banks (born July 8, 1954) is also a resident of Fayetteville, and has three children: Lucas Scott Banks, Jessica Lee Banks, and Joseph Tyler Banks.

Things I remember about Fayetteville: I was born in 1913 at our home on Lafayette Street at the corner of West Street. What is now Magnolia Company Beauty Shop was my dad's garden. My mom always had a row of sweet peas on the front side facing Lafayette Street. The Marinoni family would sometimes stop by for a bouquet (Rosa Marinoni later gained fame as a poet). Our neighbor Mrs. I. H. Stinson was the town seamstress. She hemmed all my Birdseye diapers when I was born. She sewed for all the wealthy people in town and made all kinds of lovely clothes for me as I grew up and even after I was married.

Other neighbors were the Charles Teagues, the Seamsters (who had a bakery on Dickson Street), the Jim Ladds, the H. J. Deavers (who had a grocery store on Dickson Street), the Sandfords, and Hugh Wilson, who had a beautiful big house where the Pi Phi house now stands on Maple Street.

The Cunningham kids attended North School, which is now Washington Elementary. Tom Bates was principal. My first grade teacher was a Miss Anna King, and my fourth grade teacher was Miss Lulu Morrow sister of Dr. Fred Morrow of Fayetteville.

Dovie Ellen Cunningham

John Columbus Melton Jay Van Cunningham, b. May 23, 1877, d. April 10, 1959, was the husband of Mary Elvadia Rogers, b. April 14, 1884 in Madison County, Arkansas; d. April 1962.

Jay's parents were Calvin and Teresa Cunningham. However, he was orphaned early in life and grew up in the home of his brother, Ervin Cunningham, until he was old enough to fend for himself.

Vadia's parents were Commodore D. Rogers, b. March, 1852, and Sarah M. Dennis Rogers, b. December 13, 1857. Mary Elvadia "Vadia" was one of twelve children. (A book on this family, Rogers and Cunningham is being planned for publication in 1989 by the family.)

Jay and Vadia were the parents of Thersa Melvania, b. 8/23/1903, d. 9/14/04; Lemuel Price, b. 1/5/05, d. 1/14/06; Dovie Ellen, b. 12/28/06; Milton Commodore, b. 2/6/08; Cecil Jay Van, b. 6/27/10, d. 8/1/12; Ollie Edith, b. 4/22/17; Vera Emmaline, b. 7/3/19, Ella Lenora, b. 6/7/21; Lois Maud, b. 9/30/23; and Robert Cranston, b. 9/9/25.

Here in 1988, the surviving children of Jay and Vadia Cunningham are Edith Sullins wife of Paul Sullins; Vera McChristian wife of Calvin McChristian; Lenora Harriman wife of Wayne Harriman; and Lois Eubanks widow of Otis Eubanks.

Dovie, being the first child to survive to adulthood, took on a great deal of responsibility for her brothers and sisters.

During her early early years, Dovie was a sickly child suffering from terrible diseases that she was fortunate to survive.

Jay sought to feed his growing family by many different trades. Many times the family banded together, harvesting crops, farming for others or "sharecropping" and sewing handiwork to sell or trade. Jay would peddle items he could barter for. Dovie was always a part of the income producing family members as she was a hard worker and shared her earnings with the family.

When the last child of Jay and Vadia was born, Dovie was 19 years old and had been caring for sick folks, housekeeping and other menial tasks to help support the family.

As soon as she could find work in Fayetteville, Dovie went to "town" to work. She would take her earnings and buy remnants from the Campbell-Bell Dept. store's bargain basement and sew clothing for her brothers and sisters at home.

When the Ely and Walker Shirt Factory (later Oberman's and even later, Levi-Strauss) opened in Fayetteville, Dovie got a job as a seamstress. She spent 28 year of her life in the garment factory.

When Jay and Vadia needed to be cared for, they moved into Dovie's home and lived with her until they passed away. The family gave her emotional and physical support during this time enabling her to continue her work outside her home.

In 1969, Dovie suffered a heart attack and went to live with her sister, Lois Eubanks, whose son, Larry Dale had been sent to Viet Nam with the U. S. Army. Dovie sold her house and the two sisters, 18 years apart in age, lived together for the next 16 years in Lois' home.

Dovie's health gradually improved and when Lois suddenly lost her eyesight in late 1969, Dovie began assuming more and more of the household duties.

Dovie and Lois moved from South West Street, in Fayetteville to a modest brick home in Springdale when Lois took a job as a vending facility operator at the Northwest Vo-Tech School in Springdale. Here Dovie drove Lois to and from work every day, tended the clothing room at the Robinson Avenue Church of Christ, and continued to sew for friends and relatives.

Dovie Ellen never married, though she was wooed by various suitors. She chose to remain single and was like a second grandmother to all her nieces and nephews. She enjoyed the many great nieces and nephews and could call them all by name giving birthdates to several. When the family wanted to know anything, they just asked "Aunt Dovie".

Dovie passed away December 23, 1985, and this story is a tribute to a wonderful, caring lady that knew little girls needed lace and ribbons to make them pretty. Dovie gave me my very first book, Little Women by Louisa May Alcott and I will always be grateful to her for loving me.

Dovie could take a scrap and turn it into a garment so lovely and fit so good that the owner would wear it for many years with pride.

Dovie's cooking was enjoyed at pot-luck dinners and family affairs by everyone. Special recipes of hers are enjoyed by the family still.

A story she once told me, I will tell now in her own words. "One time I caught the mail car from Fayetteville to Combs. I was carrying a bag of material scraps to make some clothes for my sisters. I had to walk from Combs across the mountain to Ball Creek and it was nearly dark when we got to Combs. As I walked, a storm came up and it began to rain. The thunder was so loud and the lightning was striking so close by, I felt I would be killed any minute. The rain chilled me to the bone but I kept running and walking carrying my bundle of material. Finally I saw the coal oil lamps shining through the windows of Mom and Dad's. Home was just a short distance away. I cried as I ran up the hill and onto the porch. I was cold, soaking wet but safe and I had made it home."

How hard life was for Dovie. She could tell about her life without complaining. It was just the way it was. We often smiled at her keeping bags and simple things most folks throw away. More than once I heard her say, "If we'd had paper sacks when I was a child we could have written our lessons on them." Dovie used everything and invented new uses for containers. The years of "doing without" made her a thrifty lady.

This Cunningham family is a large family that rarely offers a negative opinion, pure Christian love. Get-togethers with this family are blessings and enjoyed by all.

Dovie's legacy of caring continues on through generations of descendants because she showed us the path to follow. I'm proud that Aunt Dovie was my aunt.

James Ellis Curry

James Ellis Curry came to Washington County, Arkansas about 1870. He was discharged from the Civil War 28 June 1865 after serving three years. He was wounded in a battle at Perryville, Kentucky and received his discharge at Nashville, Tennessee. He went back home to Paradise, Coles County, Illinois to his wife, Sarah Pryor, who he had married on 16 February 1862 just six months before his enlistment into the 123rd Regiment, Company D, Illinois Infantry. Their first child, Martha Elizabeth was born while he was away to War and their 2nd child John Thomas was born 25 June 1866 about a year after his return home. In the next two years his wife and daughter died, leaving him an infant son. On 19 March 1869 he married Louisa Richardson. Together with her parents, William and Jane Massey Richardson, and her brothers and sisters, they started down to Arkansas in covered wagons with just the bare essentials. A lamp table brought on their wagons is still cherished by a great grandson. They settled along Wild Cat Creek about 2 miles west of the community of Harmon. Life was hard those first years. They cleared the land, built their homes, and worked the rocky soil to fulfill their dreams and make a living for their families. The women helped by knitting sox all year and saving their butter in the cold water of the spring house. These were hauled by wagon together with the crops to sell at Springfield, Missouri and buy supplies that would last until the next trip. Even though there was cold clear running water in Wild Cat Creek, the land was so rocky that they decided to move up to Wheeler where the soil was deep and fertile and there they lived out their years.

James Ellis's son by his first wife lived in Arkansas until he was grown and then returned to the land of his birth, Coles County, Illinois where he married, raised a family, and died at the age of 77 years. James and Louisa had four children together, three sons and one daughter. Their names were Samuel Wesley (Sammy), Lawson Guthery, Mary Jane, and Edward Griggs (Eddie). All of them were born in Washington County and stayed, married, and raised their families here, while caring for their parents. They were kind gentle folks and even though James Ellis and Louisa spent their last years in wheel chairs, they remained gracious and loving to their children and grandchildren. Mary Jane had no husband, so she stayed at home to care for her parents. Their sons made sure their parents never lacked for anything even through James Ellis received a Civil War Pension for the injuries he suffered.

Their lives were built around the Baptist Church, their neighbors, and White Oak School. Wheeler at that time was located on County Road 845 close to what is now the University of Arkansas Experimental Beef Farm. The church and school were located on County Road 874 just north of the Beef Farm. The school is gone but the church and cemetery are still there at the corner of 875 and 874 County Roads. White Oak Cemetery is still the gathering place for descendants on Memorial Day with singing and dinner on the grounds.

When we the grandchildren met to try to remember things our parents and grandparents had told us about those early days, we were amazed at some of the actions and beliefs we had taken for granted as our own. Such as "always drop the bucket on the north side of the well because there you will find the coldest water" and many of the descendants twisted their hair with their left hand. Many remembered stories of the Sunday dinners at James Ellis and Louisa's home after church. Mary Jane would bake all day Saturday to get ready. They played croquet in the large front yard and had ice cream socials when it took all day to go into Fayetteville in the wagon to get ice. James' and Louisa's house and yard was the gathering place for the whole community with as many as one hundred coming at one time for a birthday party. They remembered hearing how scared they were of storms and how they would head for cellar at the first warning. Mary Jane could get them in on the ramp the boys built, but them Sammy who lived across the road would have to come pull them back.

James Ellis Curry died on Christmas Day 1924 where he gathered his children and grandchildren to his bedside to reassure them that his dying was alright and he was ready to meet his Savior in Heaven. We still have the Tribute to him written by one of his children and also one written for Lousia to comfort her in her grief and loneliness. She died 1 April 1930 six years later.

Several of their descendants still live in Washington County. They hosted their Curry Cousins from Missouri and Illinois as they came to share their memories. What a wonderful time we had remembering as each one shared their information with each other. We found a beautiful heritage and we are so privileged to follow in their footsteps.

Those Curry Cousins who came or sent material from which this account was written are: of John Thomas Curry: Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Curry, 720 Kirk Drive, Mt. Zion, Illinois; Marsha Burgener, R. R., Box 18, Hammond, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. Loran (Loretta) Vaughan, 510 Cherry Street, Tuscola, Illinois.

Descendants of Lawson Curry: Mr. and Mrs. Charlie (Vandalia) Morlan, 713 Hinshaw, Springdale.

Sarah Ferguson Curry

The third child of Westwood and Sarah Ann Baker Ferguson was Sarah Elizabeth. She acquired the nickname of "Lady" somewhere along the way. She was born in Shelby County, Illinois, November 10, 1846, she died May 27, 1905. Buried in Hollis, Oklahoma. She had a son, Robert Francis, born June 11, 1862, Peoria, Illinois. She married February 6, 1868, probably in Illinois, John James Curry, born January 23, 1846; Shelby County, Illinois, died January 23, 1925. Buried in Hollis, Oklahoma. They moved to Washington County, Arkansas about 1869, then to Newton County, Missouri around 1876. They moved to Arkansas again about 1881. In the 1900 Census they were in Greer County, Oklahoma, Francis Township. They later moved to Hollis, Oklahoma, Harmon County where they lived at the time of Lady's death May 27, 1905. Benjamin Browning Curtis Benjamin Browning Curtis was born March 15, 1801. The 1850 Washington County Census, Mountain township indicates he was born in Georgia, but his daughter, Martha, said her mother told he was born in Alabama. They came to Washington County, Arkansas about 1832. He married Elizabeth Short, daughter of Joel F. and Nancy Short, in Jackson County, Tennessee January 14, 1829. He had a son, John by a former marriage who later went to Texas and California and sent back money to pay taxes on his father's home. He was reported to have children around Weatherford, Texas. One was named Carl and another was crippled by lightening.

After their marriage, they moved to Illinois where James Washington was born November 17, 1829. He married Martha Jane Moore March 4, 1852 in Washington County, Arkansas.

During the Civil War, there were some who chose not to join either Army, but chose to ride over the country in mobs, robbing, stealing and killing. Such a mob rode up to his gate the night of August 18, 1864 and called to him as he sat cleaning his gun inside, his home west of West Fork, on the Devil's Den Road. When he answered the door, he was greeted by gunshots and fell back as the horseman rode away. Mary Jane, in bed with an infant son, dragged his body into the room. She gathered her young children together and went to a neighbor for help.

William Jackson, the third child, was born October 20, 1831 in Illinois and died October 25, 1851. He never married. He and his girlfriend attended a party one night where a fight broke out. Willie threw a rock at a man who was coming at him with a knife. It had been rumored the man was out to "get" Willie. The rock bounded off his head. The man fell, then got up, and the party continued. He died later that night. The attending physician and others at the party testified before a Justice of the Peace, and Willie was not held for Grand Jury Action which was then required before a trial.

Earl Browning Curtis

Generations dating from 1780 to 1987. Eight generations of the Curtis family.

Benjamin Curtis Born: 11/20/1780, died: Williamson County, Tennessee, 1828. In 1861 the new country of America had to take time out for a war. It was called the Civil War but there was nothing about it that was civil. A father rode north to join the Federal forces and his sons joined the Confederate Army. They hoped they would never meet in battle. Sometimes, as at Prairie Grove and Pea Rige, and at Fayetteville, the battle ground was on their own property. There were those who chose not to fight, but to rob and steal from the old folks at home, plundering their cattle, hogs, food and gardens, killing when challenged. They were known as night riders and renegades.

James Washington Curtis sat at home with his wife and four small children on an August night. A group of horsemen stopped at the front gate and hollered "Hallo" the usual greeting in the hill country of Arkansas. James stepped to the door to see what was wanted and a volley of shots ran out. His wife dragged him back into the house and gathered her brood together to go to a neighbors home for help. For her the War had come and gone.

Benjamin Browning Curtis was born in Alabama, although the 1850 Census says Georgia. He was the son of another Benjamin Curtis who is reported to have sold or loaned ships to the government for use in the War of 1812, and that he was never paid for them.

James Washington Curtis was a son of Benjamin Browning and Elizabeth Short Curtis. He was a cabinet maker. During the Civil War a band horsemen called at his cabin one night and killed him when he opened the door. Mary Jane was later known as Aunt Becky.

George Andrew Curtis was a son of Franklin F. and Narcissa Jane Karnes Curtis. He was a banker in West Fork until the banks closed during the depression, then moved to Fort Smith where he was employed in factories. Killed in a car accident at a crossing, he threw his small grandson aside and saved his life.

Willie Jackson Curtis (son of Benjamin Browning and Elizabeth Short Curtis) born 10/20/1832 in Illinois, died 10/29/1851, stayed single all his life. He cared for his blind mother. One night at a school party, his life was threatened with a knife when a fight broke out. Willie threw a rock, striking his opponent on the head. Later that night, the injured man died. The local doctor and constable testified at the inquest and no charges were filed.

Nelson David Curtis

The first child of Jack and Lydia Ferguson Johnson, was Thelma Jean born June 25, 1931 on a farm between Baldwin and Harris, Arkansas in Washington County. She was destined to be their only child for sixteen years. While living in Cincinnati, Arkansas, she married December 10, 1949 (at the Church of Christ in Siloam Springs, Arkansas, Benton County) to Nelson David Curtis born January 13, 1927 at Prairie Grove, Arkansas, son of Robert Miles and Estella Irene Lewis Curtis. They lived in Siloam Springs about three months, where Thelma worked at a garment factory and Dave at McNair Plumbing. They decided to move to Antioch, California where the wages were better. They bought their first home a few days after arriving in Antioch, before they even had a job and with no down payment. Jobs were plentiful at that time, so there was no worry about getting one. Dave went to work for U. S. Steel Corporation, where he soon became a crane operator. He remained on that job until he became a foreman after a few years.

Their first child, David Roger was born April 25, 1951 at Pittsburg, California. The following year, Roger had a little sister, Carla Gayle, born August 28, 1952 in Pittsburg, California.

Dave bought and sold houses which he built or remodeled in his spare time. In time, they acquired several houses and some apartments which they rented out.

Thelma and Dave were overjoyed at the birth of their third child. Kevin Neal was born November 23, 1960 in Pittsburg, California. All three children graduated from high school in Antioch.

After Dave retired from U. S. Steel, they decided to move back to Arkansas. Therefore, they sold their rentals and home and bought a farm in the Robinson Community of Washington County. Thelma's parents decided to move back also, so they sold their home and bought one east of Fayetteville. Roger and Carla had both married, and sold their homes and moved here too, joining the parents on the farm. They first tried raising beef cattle, but could find no profit there, so built three poultry houses and a dairy barn and went into the poultry-dairy business.

Kevin finished his education at the U of A in Fayetteville, receiving his degree in Industrial Engineering in 1983. He married August 13, 1983 in Fayetteville, Jean Marie Harvey, daughter of James And Shirley Harvey. He had met Jean at the University. She also graduated in 1983, receiving her degree in Fashion Merchandising. Kevin decided to work on the farm for a while, but soon decided to make good use of his education. They moved to Arlington, Texas in May of 1984, where he is an engineer for General Dynamics. Jean is also employed in her chosen field of textiles.

Roger is presently divorced and living in California, but may return to Arkansas. He has two children: Nikki Rose born September 8, 1972 in Antioch, California and David Roger, Jr. born May 28, 1977 in Walnut Creek, California.

Carla and her husband, John Warren are now living in Fayetteville. He has gone back to school to get his Civil Engineering degree. They will probably move to Anchorage, Alaska, his home town, in a year or so. Carla has three children: Shannon Rochelle Reed born March 4, 1970 in Antioch, California, Allen Ray Reed, born April 26, 1977 in Antioch, California and John Curtis Warren, born December 23, 1984 in Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

While Jack and Lydia were living on their farm in Cincinnati, Arkansas, the whole family was elated when they learned there was to be an addition to the family. Thelma finally got a sister, Sharon June born June 14, 1947 at Elizabeth Hospital in Prairie Grove, Arkansas. When it was time for Sharon June's birth, the whole family (aunts, uncles, grandpa and grandma, Thelma and her then boyfriend David Curtis) was so excited they all went to the hospital to await her arrival. The waiting room was full of relatives. It had been almost sixteen years since Jack and Lydia's first child, so it was a good reason for the excitement. Sharon became a beautician in Antioch, California before her marriage July 4, 1970 to David Lee Williams, II. Their son, David Lee Williams, III, was born September 5, 1971 in Redding, California. June Hanson and David divorced in 1976. She then married on December 17, 1977 Russ Hanson born March 7, 1950. They have a beautiful little girl, Lisa Michele born December 21, 1978 at Walnut Creek, California. June is a homemaker and Russ is employed at Dow Chemical Company. Lisa and David Lee, III are both in school. David is also in the Naval Sea Cadets, which he likes very much and thinks he might make the Navy his career. Their home is in Antioch, California (Contra Costa County).

Eda Franklin "Frank" Cuzick

Great-great-great Grandfather James Water Cuzick, born 1799 in Kentucky, a Campbellite Minister married Sarah (Tiffany), August 9, 1822 in Williamson County, Tennessee. He moved to Missouri and died in Missouri or Arkansas. They were the parents of great-great grandfather Thomas Clay Cuzick, a veteran of the Mexican War. He was born in Kentucky and came to Arkansas about 1873, from Missouri. He and his wife, Sarah "Sallie" (Dobbs) were married in Dade County, Missouri, October 18, 1849. They settled around the community known by all the old settlers as Odell. It is actually made up of an area extending from the old Dobbs Cemetery, on the north, to the Liberty Hill Cemetery on the south. Located in the remote hill country about 12 miles south of Morrow, Arkansas, and about 6-1/2 miles east of Evansville. Many of the old roads are still outlined by the rock fences built by pioneers who came into the area about 1866 or earlier. The main part of the little village of old Odell was almost on the Crawford-Washington County line.

Frank and Minnie Cuzick parents of Martha Loftin, last homesite on Odell Mt.

Thomas Clay Cuzick and his son Williams Rufus moved into the Odell area when it was called Stop in about the 1800s and purchased one of the general stores. They became postmasters for a number of years. Thomas Clay Cuzick and his son William Rufus were thought to have had the largest general store this side of Van Buren for many years. While William Rufus was postmaster at Stop, he did not like the name, so later when the Post Office was moved across the line into Washington County, it was named Odell.

William Rufus and his wife Emma Tyler (Self) were the parents of my grandfather Eda Franklin "Frank" Cuzick, who took over from his father, as store owner and Postmaster. Both father and son pulled teeth for those in need.

Frank was the oldest of seven children: Thomas Oscar, Rufus Walter, Martha Myrtle, Eugene Clay, Anna Maude and William E.

Frank Cuzick served as Justice of Peace for several years. He performed marriages from 1918 to 1924 in Crawford County Marriage Book "K". He was known as E. F. Cuzick, also.

He was president of the Liberty Hill School Board, School District No. 76 (I have copies of two teacher's contract for the years of 1934-1935, where he had signed them). He and his wife Minnie Elizabeth (Jones) roomed and boarded teachers in their home.

Minnie E. (Jones) was the daughter of Thomas and Miriam (Reed) Jones, who also, was another early store owner and carried the mail from Evansville to Stop, then on to Rosedale. During this time there were no mailboxes, but mail was carried in oilcloth pouches and hung on a gate post or a tree in a designated place near the home of each patron.

Frank and Minnie farmed a large farm near Odell. A few remains remind one of the last old homesite. The U. S. Government bought their farm and the other farmers as well in that area, to make it into a National Forest in the 1930s.

Frank and Minnie raised eight children out of eleven. My mother, Martha Maude (Cuzick) Loftin being one of them.

I can remember spending Christmas at my grandparents' home there on Odell Mountain as we called it. Also, the pie suppers at the little church and the family dances in my grandparents' home, where we children slept on pallets, while our parents danced.

Frank and Minnie moved to Stilwell, Oklahoma, from Odell in 1937. They lived there a while, then moved near Morrow, Arkansas. In January of 1939, they moved to Washington State, where they remained until their deaths. Five of their married children moved to Washington with them, two later on. My mother, Maude, lived her entire life in Washington County, Arkansas.

The eight children were: Emma (Cuzick) Davidson, Rosie (Cuzick) Tibbits, Bill, Maude (Cuzick) Loftin, Dan Rufus "Rube", Tom and Hazel (Cuzick) Young.

The sons all worked in the timber as loggers, also, the son-in-laws, after settling in Shelton, Washington. Three children are alive at this writing; Dan, Rube, and Hazel, and they live in and near Shelton, Washington.

William Dame

The earliest record our family has of our Dame ancestors is George, b: 1752, d: 16 October 1805 in Virginia and his wife, Margaret Mary Green, also, born in Virginia.

Floyd, Mamie, Maud, Florence, Andrew J. and Charlotte (Arnold) Dame ca 1920's

Their son, William, b: 1793 in Virginia and married Mary Enyart, b: 1798. Mary died in Washington County, Arkansas September 1882.

The births of their children show the family traveled to Tennessee and Illinois to reach Washington County, Arkansas. George Daniel was born 25 December 1818 Tennessee. He married Laura Catherine Wadkins 6 January 1842. A daughter, Elizabeth was born 1819 in Tennessee. She married William Casner in 1851. John was, also, born in Tennessee. His wife was Clarinda Boyet.

Margaret b: 1821 in Illinois, as was Mary b: 1827 and Perfina was born 1832. She married James Mhoon 18 February 1851. Lurean (Lorana) was born 1833, William A. was born 1835. He married Mary E. Vaughen 24 May 1863 in Greenwood County, Kansas. Our records indicate that her first marriage was to a Mr. Casner.

Mahala married Alford Lewis 11 January 1846, Washington County, Arkansas.

My direct line is George Daniel and Laura Catherine Wadkins Dame. They were married 6 January 1842, Jefferson County, Illinois. George Daniel died 12 August 1903, Greenwood County, Kansas. Laura Catherine died 24 May 1872. Both are buried in Virgil, Greenwood County, Kansas Cemetery.

One of their sons, James Marion, was born 17 June 1844, Jefferson County, Illinois. Their other 9 children were: Andrew Jackson, who was my grandfather, William Patrick, John Umphrey, Mary Jane, Margaret Elizabeth, Margaret Ellen, Angelia, David and John Frank.

The earliest date that I have of the family in Arkansas shows Mary Jane born 2 August 1850 in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

It was told at the 1986 Dame reunion that the families left Arkansas with the sounds of the Civil War in the ears. The family probably left before 1864, as, William A. and Mary Vaughn Dame's son, John Franklin was born 8 May 1864, Greenwood County, Kansas.

Andrew Jackson Dame, my grandfather, was born 15 May 1860 at Fayetteville, Arkansas. He married Elsie Charlotte Arnold of Coffey County, Kansas. Their children were - Mamie, Maud, Floyd and Florence, my mother. Andrew Jackson passed away 5 August 1925 with Elsie Charlotte passing away 20 years and 5 minutes after his death. Her death date is 5 August 1945.

Florence married William Ercle Dye and they had 2 children, Betty Jean and Raymond Ercle. Their later years were spent in Wichita, Sedgewick County, Kansas.

Over the years, as our families did less and less farming, we've all drifted apart. With our work in Genealogy Research and the family reunions we are able to renew our family ties.

F. Wade Daniels

According to the Federal Census and Civil War records, this subject was born in Illinois in about 1838. It is thought that his father was Elijah Daniels or Isaac Daniels. His brother, James Anderson Daniels, lived in neighboring Benton County and was born in Tennessee in 1835.

Little is known of this family; Wade Daniels married, about 1860, Nancy Daniels, who was living in Washington County in the "Crawford area" with her children in 1880. She was listed as a widow, but it is known that Wade Daniels lived in Joplin many years later when his son Willie "pensioned" him. It would appear that he and his wife were separated.

Children of Wade and Nancy Daniels were: Johnathan Daniels, born about 1860, Illinois, Green Daniels, born about 1864, Illinois, William E. Daniels "Willie", born about 1865, Illinois, probably died in Kansas, Arletta E. Daniels, born about 1870, Illinois, Charley S. Daniels, born about 1872, Illinois, Bell M. J. Daniels, born about 1875, Arkansas, Thomas L. Daniels, born about 1877, Arkansas, died at Joplin, Missouri.

F. Wade Daniels enlisted in the Confederate forces at Scott County, Missouri. He served in Company H, Jeffers' Regiment, Missouri Calvary. His enlistment was dated November, 1862 and on July, 1863, he was listed as a deserter. He became a Union sympathizer and it is believed that he, as well as his brother, James Anderson, were alienated from the family because of their Union leanings. James was a Lieutenant, Company B, 50th Infantry, Union Army. It is believed that these men were related to the Jack Daniels' Distillery family of Tennessee, however, that has not been proven. Willie, Charley and Thomas spent many of their teenage years in the home of their uncle and aunt, James A. and Ellen Elmore Daniels, in Sulphur Springs.

This writer is a great, great niece of Wade Daniels. It is unfortunate that no contact has been made with any member of this family for many years. We do not know where any of their descendants are at this time.

Samuel Wilson Davies

My great-grandfather, Samuel Wilson Davies was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville from 1875 until his demise of January 4, 1916. His life's story is best told in these selections from his autobiography:

"I was born in Chester District, South Carolina on July 30, 1834. I come of Godly ancestors. My father was the Reverend John Leroy Davies, whose ministry of over 30 years was spent in South and North Carolina. My grandfather was Reverend John B. Davies, pastor of Fishing Creek Congregation for more than 40 years and was one of the pioneers of Presbyterianism in upper South Carolina. My mother, Elizabeth, was the youngest daughter of Samuel B. Wilson D. D., the founder and pastor more than 30 years of the Presbyterian Church in Fredericksburg, Virginia. I was dedicated to God in baptism by my parents, and carefully trained in the knowledge and fear of the God of my fathers. My education was begun by my mother, continued in the schools kept up and supported by the congregation to which my father ministered. In the fall of 1850 when I was 16, I left my father's house which was then in Iredell County, North Carolina to enter Hampden-Sidney College, Prince Edward County, Virginia. The journey which was over 200 miles was taken in my father's private carriage and occupied nearly a week. I graduated in 1854. While I was in college my home was in the family of my grandfather, Dr. Wilson. Here I enjoyed the wholesome restraints and the holy influence of a cultured, refined and Godly home. I was led to a public profession of religion my senior year of college. In the fall of 1854 I began my seminary work at the Columbia Theological Seminary followed by two years in Danville, Kentucky. In the summer of 1857 I was examined and licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Bethel".

My great-grandfather was called to preach in Louisiana for two years. He then went to Cotton Plant, Arkansas to be with his mother and sisters and practiced there until 1875 when he was called to Fayetteville, Arkansas. His father died in 1860. On April 2, 1872 he married Sallie Green, the daughter of the Reverend Joshua Fry Green and Harriet Booker. Reverend Green was pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Little Rock, Arkansas. Six children were born to this marriage: Harriet Booker "Hadgie" who married Louis R. Ash; Lila Chunn who married Claude Head; Lucille who died at 18 months; Edith who married James P. Brower; Mary Lou, unmarried; and Samuel Green who married Stella Ladd of Kansas City, Missouri.

Haywood Davis

Haywood Riley and Susan Carter Davis came to Arkansas from Texas. They had gone to Texas from Illinois in 1881 or 1882 and at this time were on their way back to Illinois. They were traveling in a covered wagon and had gotten as far as the Prairie View Community when they stopped along the Illinois River to rest a few days; let Susan do the laundry and Haywood work to help finances.

At night the team was "staked out" to graze without the possibility of their straying away. One night, somehow, one of the horses got wound up in the rope and broke its neck. Since there was no money to buy a replacement, the family moved into a house in the Viney Grove Community where Oliver Riley was added to Winfield Scott, born in Illinois and Sterling Price born in Texas.

Sometime before 1889 the family moved into the Highland Community and lived "up the hollow" from Elk Horn Springs

John Clinton Davis, Sterling Price Davis, Oliver Riley Davis, Winfield Scott Davis, Jennie Belle Davis Green, Stella Maye Davis Ezell. Taken in 1944 at Scott's home.

In 1894 the family moved back to Highland where Haywood traded a colt to William Haddock for 80 acres of land where the family made a permanent home. Haywood and the older boys built a two room, with a "loft", log house. While the Davises lived there their houses burned twice; each time rebuilt on the original foundation.

Haywood farmed his land; also did farm work for others. Not much money was exchanged. People "traded" work. Susan and the girls canned and dried foods for winter needs.

Haywood died in 1921. Susan lived on the home place with Clint and Ollie. Susan died at Price's in 1930; both she and Haywood are buried in Highland Cemetery.

Price, a farm laborer, married Mrs. Ada Asher Lines, had one daughter, Irene, who still lives in Prairie Grove. Price and Ada lived all their married lives in Farmington and Prairie Grove. Ada died in 1960 and Price in 1972.

Oliver (Ollie) a musician and carpenter married Ethel Guisinger, had two children, Donald and Oma. Ethel died in 1917. Grandmother Susan and the aunts cared for Donald and Oma until Ollie married Bertha Shipley Marshall, who died. Married Mae Dudley Justus, who had two children, Hubert and Opal. Ollie taught singing school in many communities. Died in 1954 and Mae in 1967; both are in Durham Cemetery.

Donald served in the Navy during World War II. A musician, taught music and was church organist. Married Mildred Britton, had three children: Oliver works for telephone company in Texas - married Dianne Brisco, had two children, Susan and Craig.

Donald, Jr., a postal employee in Iowa, married Jackie Clagg, had two children, Michael and Jennifer.

Keith, employed by Bell Telephone, married Linda James, a former Washington County Dairy Princess, now lives in Hot Springs. Has five children, Tracy and Mikala, college students: Kirsten, Melssia and Vickie.

Cheryl, kindergarten teacher, married Dr. Gareth Eck, associate of Miller, Murray and Wood. Has two children, Tara and Ryan.

John Davis

There are many Davis families in Washington County but not all of them are related. This one needs to be singled out so the ones who come down this line will recognize it as their line. They can pick out familiar names and know it is their history.

John Davis brought his family to Washington County, Arkansas in the 1840s. John was born March 19, 1790 in Virginia and moved to Kentucky while young. He enlisted in the War of 1812 at Crab Orchard, Kentucky and served in the Battle of New Orleans under Andrew Jackson. After the war was over, he went to Indiana and married Catherine Elkins on October 26, 1826 in Johnson County. Catherine was born May 1, 1801 in Kentucky. The records of their family come from the Bible records and War of 1812 pension records. John died March 22, 1860 and Catherine had the family to raise so she applied for a widow's pension.

1. Robert F. Davis was born August 28, 1828 in Indiana. He was a blacksmith in West Fork before the Civil War and was married to Marinda Jane Sharp. They had two children Mary and John. Robert F. died in the Civil War on August 10, 1863 in military service.

2. Elizabeth Ann Davis was born January 3, 1831 in Indiana. She married Christian Censibaugh February 20, 1862 and they raised a large family. Christian was also in the Civil War and has a marker in the Blackburn Cemetery. Their first son, Andrew David Censibaugh was married in Washington County November 7, 1886 to Rhoda E. Hawkins. Elizabeth died October 25, 1886 at Winslow.

3. Andrew Jackson Davis was born August 28, 1828 in Illinois and died September 12, 1864. He married Elizabeth Haverson March 20, 1859. They lived with Catherine and did the farming for her after his father's death.

4. Sarah J. Davis was born August 9, 1937 and died May 8, 1866, unmarried.

5. John M. V. Davis was born March 15, 1839 and died October 22, 1866 also in the Civil War. He was married to Elizabeth Arminda Winn and they lived in West Fork with son Samuel before the Civil War.

6. Martha E. Davis was born March 3, 1843 and was the first child of the family to be born in Washington County, Arkansas. She never married.

7. Thomas Jefferson Davis was born March 12, 1845 in Washington County, Arkansas and served in the Civil War. After the war, he married Nancy Ann Caughman on February 13, 1868 and they raised their large family in Washington County which I will list after finishing John Davis children.

8. Nathaniel E. Davis was born June 10, 1849. He married Alice C. Hardin on July 16, 1870 in Washington County and on 1880 census, his mother, Catherine and sister, Martha were living with them. He had a family but I do not know their names.

9. George Washington Davis was born November 25, 1851 and is youngest and last child of John and Catherine Davis. He first married Sarah Hutchinson on September 13, 1874 and they had at least three children by first marriage. On 1910 census, he was living in Blackburn area and was married to Lily Cora Potter.

The family of Thomas Jefferson Davis and Nancy Ann Caughman was raised in Blackburn in Lees Creek Township. They had sixteen children and raised thirteen to be grown. All were born in Washington County and their youngest daughter Lucy wrote a family history once that told all the pioneer ways they grew up in which is very interesting as the family was very self-sufficient.

A. Paulina Catherine was born November 8, 1868 and married Jesse Rickman. They raised a family in Blackburn area and are buried in Blackburn Cemetery.

B. John Nathan Davis was born April 26, 1870 and had the misfortune to lose an arm while a child in an accident. He became a court reporter for Judge Isaac Parker at Ft. Smith and was a school teacher at Fayetteville before he married Viola Southern on February 17, 1895. They settled on a farm in Blackburn community and had two daughters Sylvia May who married John Byrum and Beulah Pearl who married Clifton Mannon. Viola died January 29, 1930 and is buried at Oak Grove Cemetery next to her parents, brothers and sisters. John lived until July, 1954 and tried fruit farming at Neosho, Missouri before he retired and lived at Pawhuska, Oklahoma and is buried by his daughter, Pearl there. John and Viola had the following grandchildren: Edward, Dorothy and Charles Byrum by their daughter, Sylvia. Pearl had Mabel, Grace, Lucille, Clifton and Marion Mannon all who have grown up and had their own families.

Benjamin Cornelius was born November 19, 1878 and died January 20, 1970. He married Esma and raised a family at North Platte, Nebraska.

H. James Harvey Davis was born November 6, 1880 and died

January 25, 1977. His wife's name was Emma and they had four children but all died young at various ages.

I. Mary Elizabeth Davis was born February 9, 1883 and died on May 7, 1959. She married James Parrish on January 6, 1904 and they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary together and had eleven children which grew up in Washington County. Most still live here, but I hope they will be having a Parrish history.

J. George Nelson Davis was born January 19, 1887.

K. Edward N. Davis was born May 23, 1889.

L. Earnest Davis was born March 24, 1891 and died January 25, 1977. He married Mary Purser and they had seven children: Howard, Benjamin Leroy, James Leonard, Agnes Jewell, Earl Levy, Luella Nancy and Alvin Richard. Benjamin Jackson Deaver

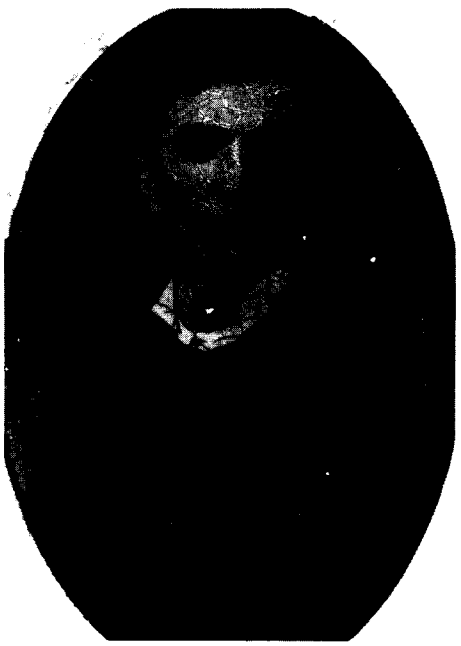
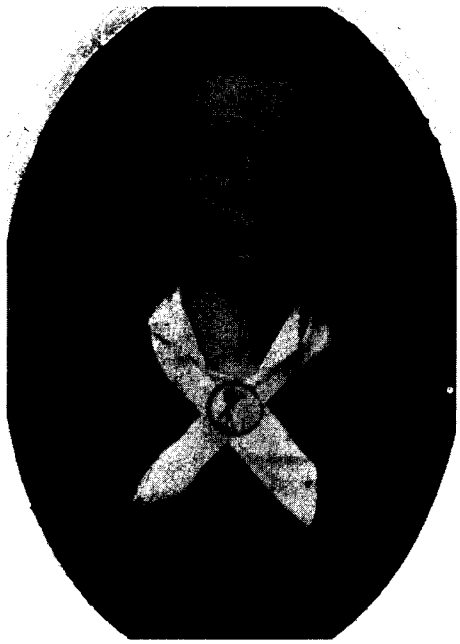
Two brothers, descendants of the earliest colonists, came from the vicinity of Shepherdstown, West Virginia, on the Potomac River to be two of the earliest settlers of the Elm Springs community. Both were millers by trade. The second son of Richard Deaver and Margaret Wilt Deaver, Benjamin Jackson Deaver, born February 23, 1815, was unmarried when he traveled via the Ohio, Mississippi, and Arkansas rivers to Fort Smith in 1840. He first took a "berth" for one year as a miller at Elk Mills, Missouri, near the present site of Neosho. A recommendation of his skills as a miller written by his employer States: "The soldiers on this frontier say they have never had better bread than that made from the flour ground by Ben Deaver."



Benjamin Johnson Deaver

About 1841, Benjamin Jackson Deaver became a partner with William Barrington in a mill at Elm Springs. At one time, he owned 800 acres of land and is believed to be the donor of the acreage for the Elm Springs Cemetery. The Deavers, Steeles, and Barrington are buried in this oldest part of that cemetery. A great granddaughter of this B. J. Deaver, JoAnne Rife, has a series of letters written between 1840 and 1849 from the first-born son,



Nancy Ellen Akin Deaver

William Shipley Deaver. He was back in Shepherdstown with his family and his mother, working as a miller and wanting to come "West." In 1849, with financial assistance from Ben, they did come, likely by stage through St. Louis, and brought Margaret with them. She is buried at Elm Springs, as are her two pioneering sons, William Shipley was named for his grandmother, Rebecca Shipley, who married Misael Deaver in St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, Maryland, on November 9, 1790. Misael was a Revolutionary War soldier, enlisting in January 1776, serving three years in the 1st Maryland line from Frederickstown, Maryland. He served three years, lost an eye in service, and was discharged at Annapolis. His group fought the rear guard action in General Washington's retreat from Long Island to Harlem in which they suffered 80% casualties. Misael Deaver was a blacksmith by trade. His son Richard was apprenticed to a relative, Abraham Griffith, to learn tanning and curing business.

These Deavers were descendants of Norman French DeVeres. Aubrey DeVere was Earl of Oxford and lived at Hedingham Castle in England. They were also descendants of John Chew who came to Jamestown in the ship "Charitie" in 1622, of Henry Pierpoint who came to southern Virginia in the ship "Plaine Joan" in 1635, and of Dr. Thomas Wynne, ship's surgeon to William Penn on the Good Ship "Welcome" to Pennsylvania in 1683. (See Hedman's The Pierpoint-Pierpont Family, Holcombe's Miseal Deaver and his Descendants, and many other sources in colonial history.)

The two brothers, Ben and William Shipley, dug during one winter the half-mile long mill race at Elm Springs. William Shipley was an early postmaster there.

Ben Deaver did not marry until 1859. His wife, Mary Elizabeth Johnson from Tennessee, gave birth to their only child, a son, less than two months after the death of her husband in December of the same year. Benjamin Johnson Deaver, the second B. J. Deaver, was often asked during his entire life to blow in the mouths of babies affected by the mouth disease, thrush or thrash, because anyone who had not seen their own father was believed to have curative powers. Because he was a very intelligent man, but tactful, he always rolled a pinch of powdered boric acid in a paper through which he blew.

This knowledge of the true nature of curing was probably due to the fact he was reared in the home of Dr. M. D. Steele. Dr. Steele, a widower with children, married the widow Deaver and she was the mother of his second family of eight children. Grandma Steele and her daughters traveled each year to Texas by train to visit relatives. For the trip, they wore under their shirts long pantaloons made of heavy drill with buttoned cuffs at the ankles. This precaution was taken to protect their modesty in case of a train wreck.

At the age of seventeen, the Deaver half-brother eloped via stagecoach with Nancy Ellen Akin, age sixteen. They rode the stage to Houston's stage stand at Washburn, Missouri, got off, were married, got back on and returned to Elm Springs. Sadly, the son born to them the next January was stillborn. However, in the next twenty-five years, they became the parents of eight girls and three boys. All lived to be mature adults (producing nineteen grandchildren for Ben and Nancy) except the last child Ruth. She died of "membraneous croup", diptheria, at the age of two despite valiant efforts to save her.

The ten children who grew up on a farm just east of Elm where the spring rises (the house still stands in 1987) played along the creek during a happy childhood. Ben was described by an acquaintance as "one of the smartest men I ever knew." He was a Justice of the Peace; perhaps this is why he was called Squire Deaver. Nancy managed the farm and the children, raising several of the grandchildren, also. Ben died in 1927 at Fayetteville in the Piedmont Hotel across from the courthouse while he was auditing the county books. Nancy died in 1933 at Springdale.

The names of their ten children are (in order of birth): Minnie Deaver Webster, Maud Elizabeth Deaver Sherman Clough Murrray Barrack, Mamie E. (Mae) Deaver Young, Sally Frances Deaver Baker, Lillian Irene Deaver Sears, Hunter Deaver Frank Akin Deaver William Elmer Deaver, Golden Deaver Brown, Ethel Clotfelter Meyers, who is still alive and living in Visalia, California in 1987. She is 87 years old.

Other surnames associated with this family are: Butler, Evans, and Agnew in Georgia; Aaron, Berry, and Stout in Arkansas.

Greenberry Jefferson Denton

An early settler in the Vineyard community of Washington County, Arkansas was Greenberry Jefferson Denton, together with his family. They had come from Bradley County, Tennessee. Greenberry was born in Jefferson County, Tennessee on December 15, 1816, to Josiah and Catherine Seahorn Denton. He married Charlotte McCarty in Bradley County about 1837 where they farmed until the move was made to Arkansas in about 1856. Charlotte was born on October 7, 1821 to Benjamin Vanpelt and Sally George McCarty of Bradley County. In moving westward, they were accompanied by Charlotte's brother Timothy McCarty and his wife, Sarah Kimbrough McCarty, early settlers of Dutch Mills, Arkansas. It is told that upon first arriving in Washington County, they spent a short time at Old Salem visiting former Tennessee friends, namely the McClatcheys' families.

At a very young age, Greenberry took leave of his Jefferson County home and went to Morgan County, Alabama where soon he volunteered for the Creek Indian Florida War of 1836. Serving a very short time in this skirmish made him eligible for bounty land which he took in Bradley County. Records reveal that in 1872, he again filed for bounty land, alleging that he had only received 80 acres and was still due 80 more acres. Nothing further is known of this matter. It is probable that his land at Vineyard was purchased from John Latta or his heirs. It is said that Greenberry gave acreage for the Vineyard Cemetery and the Vineyard School.

There were nine children born to the union of G. J. and Charlotte Denton. The first six children were born in Tennessee. A younger child, Timothy, only lived to the age of eighteen months and was one of the first graves in the Vineyard Cemetery. Eight children who lived until adulthood, all having children of their own are listed; including who each married:

1. George Oliver Denton born November 17, 1838; died May 4, 1910. Married Medora Eliza Denton on March 5, 1863. She was the daughter of William Walker and Eliza Johnson Denton of Lawrence County, Alabama. Medora was born on June 30, 1844 and died on September 13, 1925. George O. served in the Confederate Army during the Civil War.

2. Mahala Elizabeth Denton born January 1, 1841 and died August 30, 1907. She married Thomas Brown Greer in 1859. He was born December 4, 1839, the son of James Wright and Michael Brown Greer. T. B. Greer passed away on May 23, 1909. The Greer family founded the town of Greersbourgh of which the post office was known as Tolu, Arkansas. T. B. served several years in the Arkansas State Legislature, was a merchant, a member of the Masonic Lodge, and a soldier in the Civil War (Confederate).

3. Benjamin F. Denton born April 27, 1843 and died on February 18, 1892. He married Matilda McKnight born October 10, 1841 in Missouri. She died on March 9, 1931. Both are buried in the Vineyard Cemetery.

4. Cynthia Denton born February 3, 1845 and died on November 16, 1887. Married April 3, 1867 to Thomas Shannon who was born in 1842 to Alexander and Pernarza Shannon, early settlers of the Vineyard community. Thomas Jefferson Shannon served in the Civil War as a Confederate soldier. He died on November 31, 1930.

5. Josiah M. Denton born November 11, 1849. He married Mary Belle Lewis on January 8, 1882. She was a daughter of Gatz Lewis of Evansville, Arkansas. She was born on December 5, 1857 and died June 17, 1937. Josiah died on November 27, 1917. The family lived near Cashion, Oklahoma.

6. Nancy Denton, born in 1853 married Richard J. Wilson of Charleston, Tennessee. He was born June 26, 1841 and died on March 16, 1924, she having died on April 22, 1900. The famiy lived near Charleston, Tennessee.

7. Martha Michael Denton born in 1859 in Washington County, Arkansas. She married James Finis Miller (1854-1934) who was the son of Alexander Sloan and Adeline Agnew Miller, early settlers of Washington County, Arkansas. Finis and Martha Miller moved to Pryor, Oklahoma where she died on February 23, 1899. (their daughter, Iva Miller married Jim Thorpe, All-American Athlete).

8. Sarah Olive Denton, the youngest child, was born on February 22, 1862 in the Vineyard community, married Richard Anderson McBrien on September 4, 1879 in Bradley County, Tennessee. Richard A. was born April 8, 1849, the son of John and Margaret Barnes McBrien of McMinn County, Tennessee. R. A. McBrien had married Rose Moore previously and she had passed away prior to his second marriage. R. A. passed away on July 15, 1933 and Sarah passed away on March 1, 1925. Both are buried in the Vineyard Cemetery.

While in Tennessee and after moving to Washington County, Arkansas, there was a young girl who lived in the home of G. B. and Charlotte Denton. Her name was Margart Eslinger born about 1834, and her relationship to this family is not known. Margaret married Martin Goddard on April 30, 1858.

Charlotte Denton died on March 12, 1872. Greenberry married a second time to Martha Bates on April 12, 1873 in Bradley County, Tennessee. No children were born of this union. Greenberry Denton died on November 9, 1890 and both he and Charlotte are buried in the Vineyard Cemetery.

David Divelbiss

David Divelbiss, a prominent citizen of Washington County, Arkansas, was born in Morrow County, Ohio, on October 25, 1834. He was the son of Fredrick and Elizabeth (Henline) Divelbiss, whose ancestors were of Dutch German descent. They came from the Netherlands to the United States prior to the Revolutionary War. David was the third of nine children. When David was about 15 years old, the family settled near Markle, Indiana.

On the south side of the Wabash River, lived a man named Albert Draper. He was the first white settler in the area, having arrived in the early 1830s. He built and operated a mill for the United States' Government to grind grain for the Indians. Albert had several children, among them a daughter named Mary.

David Divelbiss and Mary Draper were married June 5, 1859. Their oldest daughter, Rachel, was born March 20, 1860. Rachel was a little over two years old and Mary was expecting their second child, when in October, 1862, David joined the Union Army and was off to take part in the Civil War. he and three brothers served in the same outfit, Company C, 34th Regiment, Indian Volunteers.

David's travels during the Civil War were to affect the lives of his family and of his descendants. As he was traveling through Washington County, Arkansas, he fell in love with the country. He returned to Indiana and remained there ten or twelve years more. Some of David's and Mary's grandchildren, who remembered their grandmother in her later years, say that Mary told them of having "Arkansas for breakfast, dinner and supper" during this time. After the birth of their oldest son, Fredrick William (February, 1876), Mary consented and they moved to Arkansas.

In the spring of 1876, David came to Washington County, Arkansas, and bought a farm of 320 acres. Later this farm was the home of the Roe Stokenbury family. He engaged in stock and dairy business. In 1887 he sold $700 worth of butter. His cattle were all full-blooded Jersey.

David was a staunch Republican and was a member of the G. A. R. and of I. O. O. F. He and Mary were worthy members of the Missionary Baptist Church and were well known and respected in the community.

Their children were: Rachel Elizabeth (1860-1938) married Benjamin Franklin Johnson (1852-1932), they had six children; Nora Adelia (1863-1863); Mary Catherine (Kate) (1866-1921), married R. D. Stokenbury (1858-1920), they had three children; Frances Ella (1868-1925) married Albert W. Sinclair; Anna M. (1872-1874); Sarah L. (1874-1947) married Harry R. Bonnell, three children; Frederick William (1876-1892); Albert Draper (1878-1892); Soloman David (1881-1964) married Mary Delano (Della) Burchett (1882-1964), they had three children; Samuel Cornelious (1883-1957) married Hilah May Horner (1888-1973), they had three children.

Relatives say that sometime near the turn of the century, David was going to Fayetteville in a wagon. The team of horses bolted and he was thrown to the ground. He was badly injured and never completely recovered. He was in his seventieth year when he passed away March 31, 1904.

David and Mary are buried in the Stokenbury Cemetery, Elkins, Arkansas. Many of their descendants still live in the Elkins and Fayetteville area. Others with David's sense of adventure have sought their fortunes in many places, but all share his love of Arkansas.

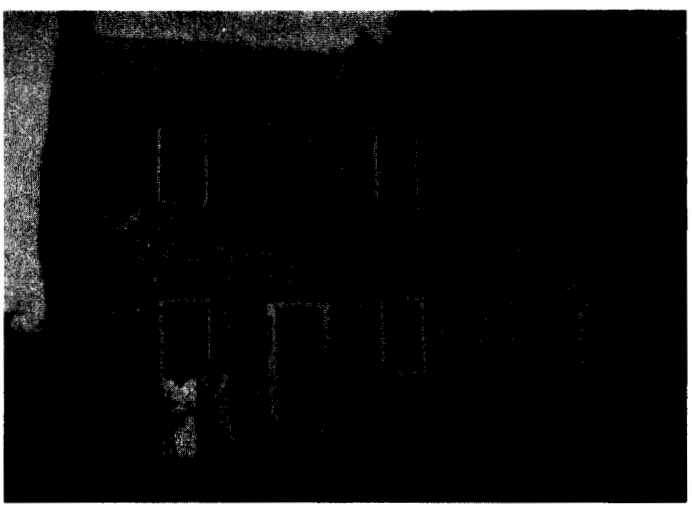
Samuel Cornelius Divelbiss

Samuel Cornelius Divelbiss (1883-1957) and Hilah May Horner (1888-1973) were married October 27, 1907 at Elkins, Arkansas. They lived on adjoining farms with "the branch" forming the boundary line. To this union were born Lucille Era (1900-1960) who married George Calhoun (one son); Ernest Edward (1911-1985) who married Aloha Chasteen (four children) and Maude Moselle (1913) who married Blanchard Reel (two children).



Sam & Hilah Divelbiss in front of "The Old Brick House".

Sam and Hilah's first home was the "little house on the branch" which is still very livable. Later Sam helped build the "little brown house," which is the present site of Charles and Mary Stokenbury's home.

They left the farm to move to Okmulgee, Oklahoma, an oil boom town at the time (1920s). Sam first worked at the Southwestern Sheet Glass Co. It was one of the few, if not only, glass companies that incorporated wire mesh in the sheet glass, making it more durable and very much in demand. Later he worked for Phillip's Petroleum Refinery (Okmulgee, Oklahoma). Sam was a valued employee to both companies. He did well, whatever his job, but his heart was always in farming. They bought a farm in Checotah, Oklahoma, and Hilah and the children often lived there while Sam worked in Okmulgee for the needed cash.

In their retirement years, they lived in the "Old Brick House," Elkins, Arkansas, inherited from Hilah's father, Rodman E. Horner, whom they cared for in his last years.

Though never wealthy in worldly goods, they were rich in good standing with relatives and friends and were affectionately known as "Uncle Sam and Aunt Hilah." Sam was an excellent farmer, growing corn taller than he could reach. His rows were straight in every direction, including diagonally.

Hilah was a very outgoing person. She loved being with people and going to church. She taught the Young People's Sunday School Class at the Elkins Community Church for a number of years. They enjoyed the monthly dinners at the church where Hilah's chicken and homemade noodles were much in demand.

Sam and Hilah are buried at the Mt. Salem Cemetery, Sulfur City, Arkansas. Hilah's grandfather gave this land for the cemetery to the community many years ago. They rest with many loved ones.

James Jefferson Dockery (1821-1909) and his wife Rebecca M. Hedgecock Dockery (1828-1912) about 1895 Black Oak near Sunset, Arkansas.

joined Colonel John Bryants' Volunteers to gather Cherokee Indians and move them to Indian Territory (Oklahoma). Military documents described James as: "seventeen years of age, five feet nine inches in height, blue eyes, black hair, fair complexion". For three months service, James received $25.63.

James married Rebecca Hedgecock at Forsythe, North Carolina in 1844. Rebecca was born 14 January 1828, in Stokes County, North Carolina.

About 1849, James moved his family to Blairsville, Georgia, where he managed the slaves on a plantation for an annual salary of $300.00. In 1853, Rebecca became very ill and was unable to nurse her baby, Sarah. A slave woman saved Sarah's life by nursing Sarah, along with her own baby.

James came to abhor the system of slavery; so in 1855, he moved his family to Maries County, Missouri, and a few years later to West Plaines, where he farmed and taught singing in schools.

James was conscripted into the Confederate Army, 4th Regiment, Missouri Cavalry, but after 36 days, he deserted 1 March 1862. Late in 1863, he enrolled in the 63rd Missouri Militia as a Corporal, serving as a cook.

Rebecca's farm was constantly raided by Confederate and Union Forage-masters, and bushwhackers, who took food and farm supplies. In 1863, West Plains was deserted and burned. Rebecca was terrified and moved her 10 children northward, even though several had measles. Some men took her horses and wagon, forcing sick children to walk in cold, damp weather. Three children died. In those days, doctors believed water should be withheld from measles patients. Many years later when medical methods changed, Rebecca often cried, remembering how her children had begged for water. She wondered if they died needlessly.

In 1889, the Dockerys and Dozier Parker family moved to Washington County, Arkansas, settling in the Black Oak Community, eight miles east of Winslow. James farmed and taught singing in schools. He donated land for the Black Oak Cemetery, Black Oak School and Black Oak Church of Christ. He was a Deacon of the White House Church of Christ, and later an Elder of the Black Oak congregation. James died in 1909. Rebecca died in 1912.

James Lawson Dockery was born in Howell County, Missouri, 1 March 1861, married Mary Elizabeth Skelton in 1881. Mary, born in 1862, was the daughter of James Robert and Julia Ann Winkle Skelton. James and Mary settled in the Sunset Community. They had a small country store on their farm, which housed the Sunset Post Office, of which James was Postmaster for many years. He was a farmer and an excellent blacksmith. After retirement, James loved to play croquet with his grandchildren and tell them family legends. James was an elder of the Black Oak Church of Christ. Mary Elizabeth died in 1933, and James died in 1947. At least 10 ministers and many public school teachers are descendants of this couple.

Their children: John Elijah, William Henry, Easter, Mida, Cora, James Robert, Virgie, and Essie.

John Elijah Dockery, born 27 May 1882, married Millie Jane House 24 February 1904. Millie, the daughter of Thomas and Emma Glore House, was born 16 May 1887. John farmed in the Sunset Community, worked in timber (often hewing 20 railroad ties per day). He was an elder of the Black Oak Church of Christ. Millie died in 1949. In 1951, John married Mrs. Chloe Galyean Eisenhower. Cloe died in 1975. John died in 1977.

John and Millie's children: Raymond, Opal, Loyd, Ralph, Ethel, Clarence Emma, and John R.

John Robert Dockery, born at Sunset, 13 November 1925, married Frances Lee Drain 20 November 1948. Frances, born 16 November 1929 is the daughter of Cloe and Jewell Jordan Drain. John served his country in World War II, 83rd Infantry Division. He was awarded the Combat Infantrymans Badge and Purple Heart for service in the "Battle of the Bulge." John is retired from the Veterans Administration Hospital (Engineering Division) as Maintenance Supervisor. John is also a minister, having served three Churches of Christ for a total of 21 years.

Children of John and Frances are: Robert Wayne, Janice Lee, David Eugene. Wayne is a Minister and married to Roberta Berkey. One child, David Wayne. Janice is a teacher and married to Steven Glover. David is an Electrical Engineer and married to Nena Carver. Two children, Angela Celeste, and Michael David.

John Dodson

The John and Selina Dodson family came to Arkansas from Viola, Tennessee, traveling overland in wagons pulled by oxen. They crossed the Mississippi River at Saint Louis, and arrived in Benton County, Arkansas October 9, 1869. They settled there for a short time before moving to Cincinnati in Washington County, around 1870. It is said that they were part of a migrating family that left Tennessee to get away from the carpetbaggers that inundated that area after the Civil War.

Selina's parents, J. B. and Nancy Stroud McAfee came to the Cincinnati area about the same time. Mr. McAfee was a wheelwright and a wagonmaker by trade. Tombstones in Cincinnati Union Cemetery read: J. B. McAfee, born April 1, 1815, died June 22, 1888; Nancy S. McAfee born February 13, 1824, died October 3, 1896.

John's parents, Nimrod Homer, Jr. and Martha Finger Dodson, remained in Benton County, along with his brothers and sisters. Nimrod and Martha are buried in unmarked graves in Webb Cemetery west of Pea Ridge. Nimrod's brother, Sampson, eventually settled in Springdale and is the progenitor of many of the Springdale Dodson's.

John and Selina settled on a small acreage across from Old Union Cemetery in Cincinnati. Dodson Spring is a historic landmark where they settled. The spring has never been known to go dry. It was at the crossroad of the north/south road from Fort Smith to Joplin, Missouri, and an east/west road from Tahlequah, Indian Territory, and Moores Mill on Cincinnati Creek and Rhea's Mill. Indians and many families of gypsies camped along the crossroads and got water from this spring.

According to the 1890 tax records, John and Selina owned five horses, four cows, six hogs, one wagon and 40 acres of land. They had eight children: James Alton, Nancy Cleo, Joseph Nimrod, Otis Lee, William Homer, Frank Dewitt, Mary Frances and Fred.

John was a farmer and part time carpenter. While helping to roof a house, he sustained an accident, cutting his knee with a hatchet. This resulted in gangrene and his death on January 22, 1892. This left Selina with responsibility of raising the children, four of which were under the age of fifteen.

Times were hard, but Selina managed to keep the family together with the help of the eldest children and her sister, Sallie McAfee. In 1894, her oldest daughter died. In 1899, her children divided an inheritance from their grandfather Dodson. . .all of $31.25. Selina was granted a Confederate widow's pension in 1918, which helped sustain her. (John served in the Confederate Army as a private in Company H, llth Tennessee Cavalry.) Selina died on October 17, 1938, and is buried beside her husband in Old Union Cemetery.

Mary Frances said, "We always had cows, hogs, and chickens, a garden and always plenty to eat, raised sugar cane to make molasses. We had no cellar to keep vegetables through the winter, so this is the way they were kept; a hole was dug in the garden putting straw in the bottom, putting planks all around, pyramid style, covered with dirt, leaving an opening on the south to go into."

The Dodson people were all mild mannered, soft spoken, with good will to all men. The poet, Homer, must have had people like them in mind when he wrote "He was a friend to man and lived in a house by the side of the road".

In the early 1900s, the Dodson Brothers Store on the main street of Cincinnati was owned and operated by James and Joe. Homer was a clerk in the store. They marketed dry goods, groceries, clothing, shoes, hardware and general merchandise. Many Indians came there to trade. Joe was a notary public and the postmaster for Cincinnati in 1905. He once brought the Indian outlaw Zeke Proctor home for lunch. Zeke showed great respect to the family and caused no trouble.

Otis went to California. He never married, and neither did his brother, Frank, who stayed in Cincinnati. Fred went to Oregon. He married twice, but never had children.

Mary Frances "Fannie" Dodson became a teacher after attending school at the College of the Ozarks. She taught at Cincinnati, Colony and New Home Schools. In 1935, she married Reverend H. K. Steward, a Methodist minister who served Lincoln, Rhea's Mill, Walnut Grove, Morrow, and Winslow. They had no children.

James married Sallie Barnes in 1897. Their children were Grace, Berline, Everett and Cleo.

They lived in Cincinnati for several years, and then moved to Bowie, Texas around 1922, trying to find a more favorable climate for Lillie and William who had asthma. After three years, they returned to Cincinnati to live on the Bond farm.

Education was of great importance to the family. Lillie lived first in Lincoln, then in Siloam Springs during the school year so William could attend high school.

Homer was an elder in the Presbyterian Church. He served many years as a lecturer for the Cincinnati Masonic Lodge where he held the office of Master Mason several times, and was, at one time, District Deputy Grand Master. He and Lillie were charter members of the Cincinnati Eastern Star.

After graduating with a degree in agriculture from the University of Arkansas in 1937, William chose the profession of Agricultural Extension Agent. He worked in the counties of Clark, Ouachita, Columbia, Johnson and Drew in Arkansas. In 1953, he was honored with the Distinguished Service Award for outstanding work in co-operative extension. Later, he was an Area Resource Development Agent for Southeast Arkansas. He is a 50 year plus member of the Cincinnati Masonic Lodge. He has served as a deacon and an elder in the Presbyterian Church. William is best described as a very honest, hard-working person with a strong belief in God, his fellow man and his family. His strongest quality being his determination to do good and to get along with everyone. He always looks for the good in people and always finds it.

Reverend Thomas Dodson

The Reverend Thomas Dodson was a Primitive Baptist Preacher ordained in the Center Primitive Baptist Church near Beaverdam in Hickman County, Tennessee in 1840. He was born November 10, 1805 in Tennessee and married Nancy Sharp August 30, 1826 in Maury County, Tennessee. She was born April 10, 1808 and died August 11, 1859 in Wesley, Arkansas. Her father was Nehemiah Sharp, born 1784 in Pennsylvania, and her mother was Millie Clayton, born 1787 in Virginia. Nehemiah's father was John Sharp who came to Tennessee from Pennsylvania and then from Kentucky. He settled in Big Swan in 1806-1810.

The parents of Reverend Thomas Dodson are not known. It is believed that his father was Willis Goodwin Dodson after who Reverend Thomas Dodson named his first son. The similiarity of the names he gave his children indicate that he was related to Charles Dodson 1650-1715 who lived in Rappahannock, Virginia.

According to one source, the Primitive Baptist Denomination originated in 1835, when the Chemung Association straddling the border of New York and Pennsylvania demanded a separation from all associations that participated in missionary activity. The concept of mission appeared to be contrary to the tenet of rigid Calvinism, namely that God elected his own people in Christ before the world was formed. Mission activity, then is useless at best and could be viewed as contrary to the will of God. Evangelistic preaching is supported as a means of edifying the elect.

Support for Bible societies, church schools, state convention, colleges and theological seminaries is totally withheld. Most of the clergy have little or no formal training, the call being all important. In the South, large numbers of Scotch-Irish immigrants who brought a Calvinistic theological inheritance with them became Primitive Baptists. The 1844 membership was 121,000 in 3,000 churches.

Thomas and Nancy Dodson moved to Arkansas in 1850. There he formed three churches: the Richland Church, the Drakes Creek Church in 1874 - 1875 and the Mt. Pleasant Church in 1878. He was a preacher in the area for 35-40 years.

Old deeds indicate that Nehemiah Sharp deeded Negro children to his children in 1856 as follows: To Nancy, a negro girl named Lucinda, age 5; to Mary (Vinson), a girl named Charlott, age 10; To Elizabeth (Vinson) a girl named Lurena, age 8; to John, a boy named Jerry, age 8; to Levi, a boy named Milton, age 11; to William, a boy named Joseph, age 12 and to James, a boy named Felix, age 10.

The children of Reverend Thomas and Nancy Sharp Dodson were: (1) Willis Goodwin Dodson, born December 19, 1827 in Tennessee - died February 25, 1857. Buried at Wesley Cemetery beside his parents. Tombstone is marked "Willis Dodson" married Martha Jane Sharp, August 27, 1846. She was the daughter of William and Elinor Mayfield Clark of Lewis County, Tennessee. When he died, she married Thomas Wagnon. They lived in Arkansas. (2) Nehemiah (Myer or Miah) Dodson, born circa 1830 in Tennessee. Died April 11, 1911 in Norman, Oklahoma. Married Mary Ann Elizabeth (Isabel) Sims in 1849 in Warren County, Tennessee. She was born May 1836 in Tennessee and died April 1896. They then moved to Arkansas and then to Texas in 1858 - 1859. He was in the Civil War. First settled in Leon, Texas then near Weatherford, Parker County, Texas then to Charlie, Clay County, Texas. Both are buried at Charlie. (3) Amos Caldwell Dodson, born January 1833, was a dwarf caused by being hit by a pair of scissors as a child. Did not marry. Lived with John Cooper and Nancy Garrett and went west with them in 1879 to California. In 1882, moved to Riley, Oregon. (4) William (Bill) Raelford Dodson, born 1834 - 1835 in Tennessee. Died November 29, 1909 at Selma, California. Married Emeline Hash January 14, 1855. She was born December 20, 1834 at Sagamon, Illinois. Died July 5, 1924 at Selma. Her parents were Alvin and Hester Drake Hash. Her grandparents were Drake and Esther Nolan on the maternal side and Alvin Hash and Dosha Sterges on the paternal side. (5) John Ledbetter Dodson, born circa 1837, married Susan Hash. (6) Tom Hightower Dodson, (Twin to Elisha) born 1839. Did not marry. (7) Elisha Greenham Dodson, (Twin) married (1) Druscilla Gipson/Gibson, name changed by members of the family. Married (2) Mary Paralee Davis (Mary Davis "Mollie" Williams). She had a son by her first marriage to Frederick Williams who was the Judge Robart Jackson Williams, the husband of Emma Etta Garrett, daughter of John Cooper and Nancy Garrett. (8) Nancy Elvira Dodson born November 28, 1841 in Tennessee. Died February 23, 1923 at Lyle, Washington. Married John Cooper Garrett August 1858. Both are buried at Chelan, Washington. His parents were James Bromfield Garrett and Charity "Polly" Kimmins. They went west by immigrant train in 1879 to Cedarville, California. Then to Lakeview, Oregon and in 1882 to Riley, Oregon. The final move was to Winthrop, Washington in 1900. (9) James Calvin Dodson born circa 1844. Died at Ft. Hudson during the Civil War. (10) Francis Marion Dodson, born circa 1846. Died young. (11) Mildred Jane (Millie) Dodson born circa 1848. Married Lt. Col. (CSA) Daniel Boone. Moved to Modesto, California.

After Nancy Dodson's death in 1859, Reverend Thomas Dodson married Mrs. Betty Shannon who was Adeline Garrett 's mother-in-law. Adeline Garrett was the daughter of James B. and Charity Kimmins Garrett.

Mark Warren Dorman

The family of Mark Warren Dorman were early settlers in Washington County, arriving here in 1867 or 1868. Mr. Dorman and his wife, Matilda Pogson Dorman, emigrated to the U. S. in 1867 from Manton, Rutlandshire, England, with their six sons, Fred A., Ernest Henry, Herbert Warren, Cuthbert E., Christopher and Ronald.

1 Mark Warren Dorman 2 Matilda Pogson Dorman 3 Fred A. Dorman 4 Ernest Henry Dorman 5 Herbert Warren Dorman 6 Cuthbert Dorman 7 Christopher Dorman about 1868.

They arrived in New York and then traveled by wagon train to Arkansas. It was a very hard trip, with food becoming scarce during the last days on the ship. Probably as a result of these hardships, Ronald, who was the baby, died on the trip to Arkansas and was buried in Rolla, Missouri.

After they arrived in Arkansas, the Dorman family located near White River, southeast of Fayetteville. For a short time they ran a bakery shop in Fayetteville. One Hundred Years of Fayetteville listed the Dorman bakery as one of the earliest in Fayetteville (p. 41).

Later the family moved to a homestead on the Old Wire Road east of Prairie Grove and raised cattle. Three more children were born in Arkansas: John (1875), Amy Grace (1876), and Victoria Gertrude (1879). The two girls died within a few months of each other in 1880 and were buried on the homestead, which was customary for small children in those early days.

Matilda died in 1883 and Mark Warren then married Cynthia L. Babb (a widow) in 1888 but they had no more children. Mark Warren died in 1908.

Of the remaining six sons, Cuthbert and John homesteaded in Kansas and Oklahoma, and Christopher died in early adulthood of tuberculosis.

However, the other three sons continued to live in or near Prairie Grove and contributed in the development of the community. Fred, the oldest son, was an engineer with a flour mill in Prairie Grove until his death in 1929.

Ernest owned and operated Dorman's Monument Works for 52 years, which was noted as the oldest business in Prairie Grove at the time of his death in 1938. Many of the tombstones in and around Prairie Grove are from his shop.

Wedding picture of Ella A. Cohea and Herbert W. Dorman.

Herbert owned a farm near Farmington and had a large apple orchard for many years. For several years, he produced apple vinegar from his orchard for sale. He died in 1908 (of tuberculosis, also).

These three brothers, Fred, Ernest, and Herbert married three sisters, Sara Alice Cohea, Dora Antonio Cohea, and Ella Arkansas Cohea, and reared twelve children who were double cousins. These sisters were three of the sixteen children of Amos and Mary Wilson Cohea, who were also early pioneers in the area.

Wedding picture of Dora A. Cohea and Ernest H. Dorman 1884.

Wedding picture of S. Alice Cohea and Fred A. Dorman, 1880.

Fred and Alice were married in 1880 and reared four children (two others died in infancy). The four living children, Bert V., Claud H., Roxie and Vivian, all moved from the area, however, when they were grown and married.

Ernest and Dora were married in 1884 and reared five children: Maynard A. (1887-1974), Ruby V. (1890-1970), Mettie Jewel (1892-), Opal D. (1896-1968), and Beryl H. (1907-1977) (one other died in infancy, Mary Pearl). All of these descendants remained in the area except Beryl (known as George), who moved to Buffalo, New York, after graduating from U. of

A. College of Engineering (the first member of the family to obtain a college degree).

Maynard owned a farm in the Prairie Grove/Farmington area, but spent most of his career as Secretary/Manager of Washington County Farmers Mutual Fire and Northwest Arkansas Farmers Mutual Tornado Insurance Companies in Fayetteville. He married Rosalie Euge in 1910 and reared three daughters, all of whom live in Northwest Arkansas. Eugenia Davidson is living in Prairie Grove after the death of her husband, Dr. Emmett Davidson. Myrtilla (Mrs. Elbert Cunningham) has worked for Farmers and Merchants Bank in Rogers for 30 years and is now Administrative Consultant and Assistant Secretary. Joyce (Mrs. R. E. Cunningham) lives on the family farm and succeeded her father as Secretary/Manager of the insurance companies.

Ruby taught school for a while and then married Evans R. Hudson and lived in Fayetteville. She is remembered for her many years of devoted service to the Central Methodist Church in Fayetteville.

Mettie also taught school for a while and then married Ira Cook in 1918 and lived in Fayetteville. They reared two daughters: Bonnie Belle Grosscup who has returned to Fayetteville to live after the death of her husband, and Dr. Doris M. Cook, who has been a Professor of Accounting at the University of Arkansas for forty years. Mettie is still healthy at age 95, the last of the double cousins.

Opal married J. Bert Morton and lived on a farm at Hogeye, southeast of Prairie Grove, until they retired and returned to Prairie Grove. Opal was greatly loved in both Hogeye and Prairie Grove for her many community and church activities.

Herbert (the third son of the original family) and Ella were married in 1889 and reared three children: Herbert Eugene, Eunice, and Mattie. The two girls moved from Arkansas when they married, but the son, Gene (1890-1967) remained here and was a stockman and fruit grower in the Farmington area. Gene's first wife, Myrtle Broyles, died in 1932 and he then married Sarah Naomi Castile Smith in 1933.

This Dorman family reared three children, all of whom remained in Northwest Arkansas. (One other, David, died at age 2.) Darlene (Mrs. R. C. Buddy Elkins) lives in Farmington, and has worked as a Data Review Technician for the Social Security office in Fayetteville for twenty-two years. Herbert E. raised cattle and chickens near Farmington until his death in 1985. Martha (Mrs. Jim DeVault) graduated from the University and teaches third grade in Prairie Grove, but lives on the family farm near Farmington.

Thus four generations of Dormans have contributed to the development of Northwest Arkansas. There are also several children of the fifth generation living in the area to continue the traditions.

Thomas Douthit

Thomas Douthit was born October 12, 1819 at Hope, North Carolina near Winston-Salem, where his father Abraham Douthit, Jr. was born on April 17, 1797. His mother, Valinda Jarvis was born in the year 1799.

After the birth of their eighth and last child, Zaddock who was born in November 1831, Abraham and Valinda moved to Indiana. It was during the years they were in Indiana that their oldest child, Nancy, met and married Henry Alburty in 1835. Abraham's second child Thomas and his third child Susan also married children of Frederick Alburty. Susan married John and Thomas married Sarah in 1842.

Valinda died in 1839 and was buried in Indiana. Abraham and children moved to Ritchey, Newton County, Missouri. Abraham died February 1863 and was buried in the Van Buren Cemetery near Ritchey.

Thomas and Sarah (Alburty), after marriage, settled on a homestead southeast of the spring, from which Salem Springs in Washington County, Arkansas derived its name. Salem Springs sits between two hills forming a small valley from which a grove of oak and elm grow. From the east hillside sprouts a clear spring. This spring has been believed to contain health restoring properties.

As a little girl, during the 1950s, the author fondly remembers the family gathering among the beautiful grove of trees beside the spring. Upon arrival the first thing everyone would do is head for the spring for a succulent drink of sparkling clear water. Not because of its reported beneficial minerals but because of its cool wonderful, clean freash taste.

Thomas owned the first store in the late 1840s. He and Sarah had all eight children in Salem Springs and raised them there. One of their sons, William became the second postmaster in 1889. William N. Goddard became the first postmaster in 1882.

Another son, George Nathanial, married Mary Elizabeth Fields in 1876. She was the daughter of Benjamin and Nancy. Benjamin owned the only hotel in Salem Springs. It was a large two story building built by Russell Bates in the late 1840s to accommodate those coming for health benefits provided by the nearby springs.

After marrying, George and Mary moved almost yearly, as their thirteen children were all born in a different place of the northwest Arkansas and northeast Oklahoma areas. In their later year they did return close to home as they are both buried at White Rock, Washington County, Arkansas.

Most of their children raised their families in the surrounding areas of northwest Arkansas, most of them moving to Siloam Springs.

George Oscar, the fifth of their thirteen children, married Otha Ruth Allen July 8, 1908 at Westville, Oklahoma. George followed in his father's footsteps and he too moved about a lot.

As were many of the Douthits, George was talented in many ways. He was a preacher, a singing teacher and a part time barber. Later he became a sign and house painter. Even in his late seventies, though, his hands were trembly, he could still paint a sign when the opportunity arose.

Throughout his moves, George would return to Salem Springs many times. His final move was made in 1929 to Gallihar Holler, seven miles east of Siloam Springs. He built his house among the ferns and wildflowers beside the clear spring fed creek that flowed through his ninety acres. George died in 1975.

As mentioned earlier, the Douthits were all talented. They had beautiful singing voices and could play many of the stringed instruments, such as the violin, the guitar and the dulcimer. Their family gatherings in Salem Springs always ended in a medley of sing alongs. A daughter of George and Ruth's, Irene Williams, can recall how "the music could set your toes to tapping or your eyes to crying, it was that beautiful."

One of George's younger sons, James Isom, also a house painter, after spending many years in Oklahoma and California moved back to Arkansas in 1964 with his wife, Helen and three daughters, Beverly, Diane, and Janette. They settled in Prairie Grove. Now married, with children of their own, the girls live in and around Prairie Grove.

John Drain

John Drain was born about 1823, in Marion County, Tennessee, the son of James and Ruanna Sherrell Drain. Ruanna was born in North Carolina about 1781.

John married Susan B. Carr in Dekalb County, Alabama, in 1839. Susan was born 28 February 1818 in Tennessee.

About 1842, the Drains, including two brothers, Wesley Newton Drain and George Washington Drain, journeyed with Benjamin and Mary Drain Hood to Dade County, Missouri. All moved to Washington County, Arkansas, in 1844. The Hoods established the town of "Hood" (now Elkins). The Drains lived near the Madison County line, using Wesley, Arkansas, as their address. Wesley married Martha Dunnaway. Wesley died in 1856; the Dunnaways helped rear their four children. George married Elizabeth Robbins and had 12 children. Ruanna traveled to Arkansas, after she was 80 years old, and was living with George's family in 1880. Later George moved into Franklin County.

24 May 1847, John enlisted as a private in Wood's Company "C", 12th Infantry, under Colonel M. T. Bonham to fight in Mexico. Physical description was: black hair, grey eyes, red complexion, 5 feet 11 inches in height. John died 9 November 1847 at Mexico City.

George W. Drain was appointed guardian of John's four children (Benjamin Hood, Bondsman). In 1850, Susan was granted John's estate, consisting of one cow and a calf, $21.00 service pay, and land warrant valued at $100.00, and regained guardianship of her children. Many land transactions registered in Madison County indicate Susan was a successful businesswoman.

John and Susan's children were: Sarah Emmaline, James E., William Bertis, and John Wesley. Susan listed as her sons on census records, Thomas Woodrow Drain, born 1858, and George Drain, born 1861. Possibly they were sons of her daughter, Sarah.

Susan died 2 October 1915 at the home of Thomas Drain (postmaster at Huntsville). Newspaper obituary reported, "All Huntsville stores closed for "Aunt Susan's" funeral" and "no man could speak ill of her."

William Bertis Drain was born 12 May 1843, in Dade County, Missouri. "Bill" and his two brothers were accustomed to hard work, farming for their mother. "Bill" was a private in Company "C", Shaver's 27th Regiment, Confederate Arkansas Infantry (1862-1865). Grandchildren were often shown his bullet-riddled hat and a bad scar above one ear, mementos of war service. "Bill" was taken prisoner at New Orleans and paroled at Shreveport 18 June 1865. He walked to Arkansas. His childhood sweetheart, Susan B. Dodd, and he married 13 May 1866. Susan, born near Athens, Tennessee, 22 October 1844, was the daughter of Asberry and Sarah Rutherford Dodd.

William, a farmer and "orchardist" also operated country stores at Cincinnati, Elm Springs and Maquiretown.

Susan died 17 March 1925. William married Mrs. Mary Young Samuels in October 1928. William died 6 March 1931.

William and Susan had nine children: George, age 9, died of rattlesnake bite; Mary Elizabeth died at age 12; John, aged 29, was killed by a train in 1908; Robert, married Minnie Rowe, Sarah Louise, wed Thomas Hudson; William Andrew, married Naurma Bookout; Emma, wed Lamuel Johnson; Laura, married Claud Wilson; and Roy, wed Grace Hembree.

William Andrew Drain, born 8 March 1875, near Combs, married Naurma Bookout 28 December 1901. Naurma, born 10 July 1883, was the daughter of John and Amanda Francisco Gear Bookout. "Will" was a "cooper," a farmer, and laborer at veneer mills in Fayetteville. Naurma, first a homemaker, later worked at the "garment factory." Her hobbies included embroidery, crochet, quilting and tatting. Naurma died 4 January 1930. "Will" died 26 August 1950. They reared one son, Cloe Eugene "Tobe" Drain.

Cloe Eugene Drain, born at Fayetteville, 17 December 1907, married Jewell Maybelle Jordan 14 July 1930. Jewell, born 7 January 1910, was the daughter of Jesse Taylor and Anna May Shearer Jordan.

"Tobe" was a carpenter for Frisco Railroad Bridge Maintenance. Now retired, he makes "wooden works" clocks from antique plans and collects and repairs antique clocks. Jewell was employed at Jerpes' Poultry Processing Plant and Vickers' Laundry. Now retired, she is a homemaker; her hobby in quiltmaking.

Cloe and Jewell's one daughter is Frances Lee Drain (Mrs. John R. Dockery).

Benjamin A. Drake

B. A. (Al) Drake brought his family from Madison County to Washington County about 1909. They rented a farm and moved into a pre-civil war log house in the Buckner Community, two miles east of Fayetteville. He was born December 22, 1871 at Drake's Creek in Madison County. His father was Wilson E. Drake, a Primitive Baptist Preacher. Al's grandfather, Jacob Drake, came from Warren County, Tennessee about 1830 and settled in Madison County. He bought land there and established the town of Drake's Creek. He gave land to the Baptist Church and the cemetery.

1940 B. A. (Al) Drake family reunion.

Al's wife was Margaret Francis (Counts) and his four sons were Dillard Wilson, Ballard Bethel, Otto Vernon, and Bryon(Bon). The youngest child was Ella. The children went to school at Buckner, a one-room school house where the school term was only five or six months a year.

The Drake family farmed the land with usual crops of corn and grain. They bred and raised mules which were much in demand locally and to ship to other states. Al and two older boys would "break" the mules for working, then they would take them to Fayetteville to sell. There was a sale barn one block east of the square where the Federal building now stands. The buyer shipped the largest mules to Kansas to be used to plow corn and wheat fields where the soil was deep. The smaller mules were sold to the southern part of Arkansas to plow the more shallow fields of cotton.

Mules are well known for being stubborn, so the men who train them have to be just as stubborn. Once when the oldest son, Dillard, was working with one of them, the mule kicked him in the side of the head and caved in his skull. Dillard was unconscious in the hospital for several days. Finally the doctor drilled a hole in his head to relieve the pressure, and he recovered. Dillard always said he got well to prove he could be as stubborn as that mule.

The Drake family prospered as a result of their hard work and determination and saved $1,000 to buy a farm of their own nearby. Soon the boys were grown and found brides and established homes of their own. Dillard married Ada Laura Davidson who had come to Arkansas with her family in a covered wagon from Indian Territory in Oklahoma. Ballard married his cousin Eva Counts. Otto took a school teacher, Flossie Walker, for his wife and Bon married Gladys Logue. Ella was the youngest and later married Kenneth Caudle. In the early 1920s some of the Drakes went west to "seek their fortune". The others soon followed, going by train. The bad droughts at that time forced many farmers to look for other sources for their livelihood. They did find work on orange ranches and fruit packing houses and in the oil fields. In a few years the hills of the Ozarks beckoned them to return. Each family had saved enough money to buy a new car and build a small home. They packed their clothes and few belongings and secured them on luggage carriers on the tops and running boards of their new cars and started the long trip home to Arkansas. Roads were narrow and steep, and they spent about three weeks on the journey, camping by the side of the road at night.

Al gave two acres of land to each of his children and they built modest, but comfortable homes. Al went back to farming and the sons found other jobs. Ella and the daughters-in-law worked in a garment factory in town. Otto owned a grocery store. He and Ballard operated a Huskster truck and delivered groceries and feed to families in the surrounding mountains. When the depression of the 30s hit, many people lost their homes and everything they owned, but the Drake families managed to hang on.

There was no church in the Buckner community so Al and his family helped establish the Primitive Baptist church there in the late 1920s. The Drakes were a musical family and had good singing voices. Mother Fannie and Ella played the pump organ and Dillard played the fiddle. Bon played the harmonica and jews harp. Ballard was the song leader in the church. They had many happy times together and loved to sing the old gospel songs. Al and Fannie celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a party that included the whole community.

When Al died in 1943 he was buried at Drake's Creek. Soon his family decided the community needed a cemetery. They bought an acre of land near the home place and re-interred their father there. Ballard and Eva's second son, Carl, died when he was twenty-two and was buried in the Hester Cemetery in the Baldwin Community. His body was also moved to the new Buckner Cemetery. Al and Fannie had six grandchildren, including two who died as infants. Dillard's and Ada's children were Raymond and Kathleen. Raymond married Georgia Brown of Wynne, Arkansas. Their children are Raye Jean and Janet Leigh. Raye Jean married Thomas Sine and their children are Stacia and Nicholas. Janet married Ken Johnson and they have a girl, Randena. They all live in California. Kathleen married William A. Earls. Their children are Linda Ann and Kathy Marie. Linda Ann married J. William Lohmar of Moberly, Missouri. Their children are Hans and Eric. They live in Alexandria, Virginia Kathy married Lenwyn Edens. Their children are Brook and Andrea. They live in Fayetteville. William Earls died in 1961 and Kathleen later married Lee Roy Ballard. She has two step-sons John and Steve. Roy and Kathleen live in Fayetteville.

Forrest Drake, son of Ballard and Eva married Geneva Luther and they had a daughter, Beverly. His second wife was Delores and they had a daughter, Deborah. Forrest is married to Sharon and they live on Wyman Road near the home place. The great-grandchildren of Al Drake were all girls, thus this branch of the Drake family has ceased.

Jacob Drake

Benjamin Drake was born in the Jersey Islands. He emigrated to Pennsylvania and settled on the Juniata River. His sons were Rhe, Isaac, Elijah and Jacob.

Jacob married Mary Nolen. Their children were Esther Elizabeth Drake and Benjamin Drake. Alvin Hash married Esther Elizabeth and lived in Washington County. They were married in Warren County, Tennessee, circa 1821.

Jacob's first wife died, and he married his second wife who became the mother of his other nine children.

One account (Goodspeed p. 421, History of Madison County) Isaac and Jacob Drake arrived in 1830 from Tennessee; the former located at Sander's Mill (Washington County) the latter at the mouth of the Drake Creek that bears his name. The 1850 census give Jacob's birthplace as Pennsylvania. His nickname was "Juniata Jake".

The place where Alvin settled is not many miles from Sander's Mill and Drake's Creek, evidently he knew where he was going.

Can you imagine the wonder these early settlers felt at the things they found in virgin forests and streams of Arkansas? Sander's Mill is at the big spring that comes from a small cave with a force that makes the earth tremble. I don't know who built the first mill at this place, perhaps it was not Isaac Drake. I can remember the mill and the dam. The mill has since burned and there is no sign that it was once there.

Francis Dunn

Sometime in the 1780s Thomas Dunn, father of Francis Dunn, came through the Cumberland Gap from Virginia. This account of the movement of Thomas is according to the legend passed down over more than two hundred years in the Dunns who still live in the area of Tennessee where Thomas settled. We can't be sure of the exact location where he first settled, but know he was living with a family named Beeler. John Beeler, head of the household where Thomas was living, received a land grant from North Carolina in 1783. This land was located on Beaver Creek in what is now Union County, Tennessee. This area became the State of Franklin in 1784 until 1788, and had its governor John Sevier who was also the first governor of the State of Tennessee. There was confusion within this area as to legality of the deeds, which they received from North Carolina. The United States Government didn't recognize the State of Franklin, or the deeds which the people received as being legal. It was long, and very argumentative, fought battle between the people of this area and the general government, and wasn't settled until 1798 when the government held a treaty with the Cherokee Indians, who still held claim to this land, at the Tellico Blockhouse. All this took place two years after Tennessee had become a state.

It is only a guess, but all these political dealings may have sparked the deep interest in politics which Francis Dunn possessed. Francis was born somewhere in the Powell River Valley in 1795. One of six children known born to Thomas and Margaret (Beeler) Smith Dunn. The Thomas Dunn family moved to Claiborne County, Tennessee sometime between 1805-1812. They lived in the Speedwell, Tennessee area. Thomas bought 30 acres of land with his brother-in-law, Peter Beeler, February 13, 1812 from Abraham Hunter. Some of the Thomas Dunn descendants still own part of this land.

Francis Dunn fought in the War of 1812. Shortly after his return from the war, he married Polly Lynch. Their first child, Anna, was born December 1, 1816. We would assume Polly died sometime before 1822, and that shortly after her death, Francis Dunn married his second wife, Elizabeth Bolinger. The Bolingers were residents of the Speedwell area. They moved to Illinois around 1822, so we are only guessing that Francis married Elizabeth before the Bolinger family moved.

Just when Francis Dunn first arrived in northwest Arkansas is unknown. He moved his family to Washington County, Arkansas Territory in 1832. They located on War Eagle Creek about one and a half miles north of the present day Witter Post Office. Why did they locate in this area? It was very much like the Speedwell, Tennessee area in its geological make up. Many mountains and small valleys. Also there was a mass migration of people from Tennessee to this area. The legend passed down in the Francis Dunn family over the many years states that Francis was on a wagon train, and that his wagon was pulled by oxen. This is only speculation, but we think Francis might have come to this area of Arkansas before he moved his family to this still wild part of the wilderness. He could have staked his claim, then gone back to Tennessee and moved his family of eight children, and his wife Elizabeth, to their frontier home. The reason we think Francis may have been in Washington County before he moved his family, is because in the book, Territorial Papers of the United States Volume XIX, Francis Dunn was listed as a magistrate for Washington County, Arkansas Territory for the years 1832-33. It just doesn't seem logical he would have been elected the same year he arrived.

In the books, Annals of Arkansas and Centennial History of Arkansas, they show Francis Dunn as one of five members from Washington County to the House of Representatives in 1835. This was a one year term, because Arkansas became a state the following year. Francis served two more terms in the House of Representatives for Franklin County, Arkansas, 1846-48.

When Madison County was created in 1836, the area Francis was living in was annexed from Washington County to Madison County. So this meant Francis changed counties without moving. Approximately the west half of Madison County had been part of Washington County before it was annexed. Francis Dunn lived in Section 24, Township 15 North, Range 26 West at that time.

In 1844, the Francis Dunn Family, including all his married children, moved to Franklin County, Arkansas. The M. P. Poole was living in Franklin County at that time, and one of Francis Dunn's daughter, Elizabeth, married Augustin Clayton Poole, son of M. P. and Lucinda (Gailey) Poole, in 1849. The Pooles, including Augustin and Elizabeth, moved to Washington County in the 1850s. To the marriage of Augustin and Elizabeth were born the following children. Issue: Mary, Lucinda, George Washington, Elizabeth and Jane. Augustin was in the Union Army during the Civil War. He was in Company I, 1st Regiment Arkansas Infantry. He enlisted February 25, 1863, and was on active duty until the end of the war. Elizabeth (Dunn) Poole died in 1865, we think before Augustin returned home. Augustin married two more times. Second wife; Elizabeth Lewis. Third wife; Clarissa Lyons. Augustin C. Poole died August 30, 1905, and was buried in the National Cemetery at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

In 1851 Francis Dunn moved to Sebastian County, Arkansas where he lived out the rest of his life. He died in 1879 three miles east of Greenwood, Arkansas. Francis remained active in politics until he was over seventy years old.

By three marriages Francis Dunn had 14 children. Two more of these children returned to the mountains of northwest Arkansas. Anna Dunn, Francis' first born, married Francis, "Frank", Ogden, who was a Baptist Preacher, and sometime after the Civil War they moved to Carroll County, Arkansas. Margaret Dunn, Francis' sixth child, married S. Marshall, and they moved to Newton County, Arkansas. Where the Marshalls lived in Newton County, is now in National Forest. People living in that local say the Marshalls moved into Washington County when the National Forest took their land. A Mr. Martin stated he thought some of the Marshalls were now living near Springdale, Arkansas.

William Dyer

William Dyer was born 11 June 1768, probably Maryland or Virginia. He was in Pittsylvania County, Virginia before 1795. He married there 11 October 1796, Nancy Ward. About the year 1800 the young couple moved to Grainger County, Tennessee. Both lived and died there in old age. William in 1838 and Nancy in 1855.

Three of their children, my great grandfather Jackson and family, his sister Mahala (Mrs. Moses Brock) and family and their brother Callaway Dyer and family left Grainger County, Tennessee in 1850 and arrived in Pike County, Arkansas in December of that year. The Brocks remained in Pike County where they died in old age. Jackson and family came to Washington County, Arkansas in 1851. Both Jack and wife Agie were among the first members of Valley Grove Baptist Church in Washington County in 1855.

In 1861 when the need arose for young men to join the Confederacy, Jack's eldest son William (Van) Dyer was ready. He served in Company K Arkansas Cavalry in officer Brooks regiment. Before the Civil War was over an urgent call went out for men up to the age of 50 years. Jackson Dyer answered the call. He was nearly 50 years old at the time and not many that age were willing to serve. He was referred to as "Uncle Jackson" by the younger soldiers.

It is not known how the two Dyers, living on adjoining farms in the 1870 Washington County census, were related. It is said that Jackson and Joel Dyer were cousins but I lack proof for that. Living in Joel's household was his elderly father Elisha Dyer. Not much else is known about Jackson Dyer in Washington County. He died there April 3, 1875. Son William (Van) was the executor of his will. I have not found record of my great grandmother Agie Dyer's death date but I do know they are both buried in the Smith-Bishop Cemetery not far from the old home place on the beautiful mountain east of Fayetteville. The cemetery is still well cared for.

William (Van) Dyer married Amanda Jane Baird 25 January 1869. Amanda's maiden name appears as Bard and Baird in various records. I have tried to learn the correct spelling but the source has not been found. Her parents were James and Rachel (Bard?). James may have lost his life during the Civil War. Rachel with three children Margaret, Rebecca and George were in the 1870 census, Washington County. I have not found an earlier record. Amanda was born in Missouri so the family may have come to Washington County from there following the Civil War.

William (Van) and Amanda Dyer had four children. Will, married Mary Clark; Lizabeth, married Stephen A. (Doug) Sexson; James, married Mattie Blackburn; and Maggie, married George Ralston. Around 1900 William (Van) suffered great hardship that only the strongest Christian could endure and survive. He built a new home for his family and just before they moved in, the home was burned to the ground. William was a man of great determination and courage, so he rebuilt the home. Again just before moving in, the new home was burned to the ground. He was injured and came close to losing his life while trying to save some family possessions. Not a man for giving up, he built the house a third time after he had recovered from his burns. Apparently the arsonist decided that he couldn't win against this Christian man and did not attempt the destruction of the third structure. Good friends and neighbors believed they knew who had done the terrible act but all attempts to prove their beliefs failed. When one of the residents moved away quietly, all the neighbors felt a deep sense of relief. Grandfather Dyer's burns were believed to have been the cause, or at least a contributing cause, for his general poor health for the last few years of his life. On 30 January 1911 he died of kidney failure. Amanda died 16 February 1916 at the home east of Fayetteville. They are both buried in the Smith-Bishop Cemetery.

My mother, Lema Dyer, married Hosea Chidester 15 September 1923 in Fayetteville. I was born 16 July 1924 in the same house that grandfather Dyer had struggled so hard to complete. I enjoyed a happy childhood there. When the family decided to move to Pryor, Oklahoma in 1929, it was with the promise that we would make many trips back for visits. This wasn't always done during those first few years when our country was suffering a terrible depression in the economy but there have been some delightful trips back. My mother died February 25, 1987 and returning without her in the future will not be as rewarding. It was a special joy for her to return to the area where she had gone to school, even though it was often difficult to locate original sites where a school or other landmarks remembered once stood. The old building at Maguiretown, probably the trading post, is now reduced to a brick wall left standing after a storm destroyed most of it several years ago.

Arthur Dyes

Arthur Dyes was born on 16 October 1869 in Pope County, Arkansas. His parents were Nathaniel Green Dyes, born 18 December 1813 in Norfolk County, Virginia, and Thursey Easterly, born 8 September 1826 in Marion County, Tennessee. At the time of their marriage in Pope County, 16 August 1868, Thursey was the widow of James Standifer Bennett, with three surviving male children living at home, and Nathaniel Green was a divorced Confederate soldier. Both parents are buried in Ellsworth Cemetery near Subiaco in Logan County: Nathaniel Green in 1873, and Thursey in 1900.

The DYES surname can be found in America as early as 1597; but the progenitor of Arthur's line, Peter Dyes (born circa 1722), came to Virginia in 1740. Peter Dyes settled on a 160 acre farm on the south fork of the Elizabeth River near Portsmouth in then Norfolk County, Virginia. At least four generations of Dyes were born on the property as it stayed in the family until the middle 1920s.

Nathaniel Green Dyes was an adventurer. He had ridden horseback to Illinois and back to Virginia by 1835. Then he enlisted in the Virginia Volunteers and fought in the Mexican War. Upon his return to Virginia, he married Miss Margaret B. Hubbard and after the birth of his daughter in 1853, he moved the family to Spring Hill, Livingston County, Missouri. When the Civil War began, he organized an Infantry Company and was elected its captain. They joined General Sterling Price's Confederate Army and fought with him from Lexington, Missouri, to Van Buren, Arkansas. Captain Dyes spent the rest of the war fighting in southern Missouri and northern Arkansas.

Arthur Dyes was educated at the Ellsworth Academy and up through the 1930s he attended their annual reunions. His first job after graduation was teaching school in Jefferson County. After that he went to work for the Ike Pahotshe General Store in Paris, Arkansas. While he was working there, he met and married Miss Frances Mary Balkman. She had been born on 9 January 1871 on a wagon train somewhere in Mississippi when her parents were moving from Georgia to Arkansas.

In 1897, Arthur and his half brother, Dr. Burrell Bennett,, opened a combination drug store and doctor's office in Roseville in Logan County, Arkansas. Roseville at that time was a thriving town on the Arkansas River and had been in the running for State Capitol. Arthur had the distinction of living in two towns that can no longer be found on road maps and are difficult to locate on the ground.

The family moved to Springdale around 1904 when Arthur became a partner in the Bennett-Dyes Grocery Store. In 1909 Arthur Dyes was elected City Clerk for the first time and he served for four years. Then in 1928 he began twenty consecutive years as a City Clerk a record for holding an elected office in Springdale.

The grocery store was sold in 1911 and Arthur went to work for the First National Bank as an assistant cashier. At about the same time he moved the family to 803 West Emma Avenue, an address which he maintained until 1959. This property was the fourth house east of Highway 71 and at that time was large enough to support a milk cow, a flock of chickens and a large garden plot. This house was later torn down to be replaced by business buildings. Arthur left the bank around 1914 and began a series of jobs that included: owning and operating the Springdale Cash Dry Goods Company, owning the Fred Haxton Drug Store which later J. R. Joyce Drugs, three years with the Arkansas Internal Revenue Office, after which he purchased the Citizens News Stand in 1929. He operated the News Stand until the 1940s when he retired from work. Arthur died April 23, 1959 and Frances Mary died March 25, 1961. Both are buried in Bluff Cemetery. The Dyes had three children: Dola D. Dyes, who married Harold E. Smitherman: Bonnie D. Dyes, who married J. Floyd Woolverton; and Fay C. Dyes, who married Karolina Lidell, and they had two children: John C. and Lynn S. Dyes.

J. D. Eagle

J. D. (John "Dock") Eagle came to Fayetteville from his home in Harrision, Arkansas, in 1926. He was born April 5, 1885, in Bellefonte, Arkansas (Boone County), had graduated from Bellefonte Academy (then said to be the #2 high school in the state), and attended the University of Arkansas. He came to Fayetteville primarily because his sister, Mrs. John E. Casey, had moved to Fayetteville in 1924. He was a Fayetteville realtor for many years, and was prominent in civic affairs. He was a long time member of the Fayetteville Rotary Club. He and Mrs. Eagle were members of First Baptist Church of Fayetteville.

At one time, he was named in the Fayetteville newspaper, along with Lonnie Hall and Roy Wood, as "one of the three best dressed men in Fayetteville."

He and his wife, the former Mildred Ruth Myers, of Merced, California, were parents of a son, John Phillip Eagle, who now lives with his family in Redondo Beach, California. Phil's wife is the former Alice Philpott of Fort Smith. Phil is associated with Howard Hughes Industries in California. Ruth Eagle was particularly active in musical circles. She was a pianist, and played both violin and viola in the University-Fayetteville Symphony Orchestra. She was a member of Sigma Alpha Iota, national musical fraternity.

J. D. Eagle's father, the late J. B. Eagle of Harrison (a native of Lonoke, Arkansas), was a first cousin to two governors of Arkansas—James P. Eagle, on his father's side—and Joe T. Robinson, on his mother's side. (Robinson served only a few weeks as governor, however. On the death of Arkansas's Senator Jeff Davis in January, 1913, Robinson was elected by the state legislature to succeed Davis in the United State Senate. In the Senate, he was elected senate majority leader, and became the spokesman for Franklin Roosevelt and his New Deal administration. Herbert Hoover won that election).

J. D. Eagle's mother, Mattie Walters Eagle, the daughter of J. H. and Martha Dodson Walters, was born in Coffeeville, Mississippi (Yalobusha County), and remembered the burning of Grenada, Mississippi, during the Civil War, having been born July 5, 1857. (J. B. Eagle was born August 25, 1853, in Lonoke, Arkansas, of a pioneer Arkansas family, next to the oldest of 12 children). Mattie Walters Eagle's father, J. H. Walters, was a major in the southern army during the Civil War. His wife died approximately 1873. The Walters family came to Arkansas from Mississippi in approximately 1869, and J. H. Walters and his older son, Alex, founded Walters Dry Goods Company with a $10,000 stock of goods, a department store which continues in operation today on the Harrison Square. The store was sold out of the Walters family, however, in 1913, to one of J. H. Walters' drummers, C. M. "Mortimer" Lawson, or "Mr. Charlie" Lawson. (The C. M. Lawson family is an old Washington County family who owned and operated Campbell & Bell department store in Fayetteville for many years. J. B. Eagle had at one time sold Charles Mortimer Lawson a fine sorrel saddle horse named Dillard). The late Hugh Lawson and the late Mrs. Roy Wood were the children of the C. M. Lawsons.

The J. B. "Bug" Eagle family moved from Bellefonte, Arkansas, to Harrison (four miles away) in 1913. In Harrison, J. B. Eagle bought a house on Chestnut Street, and platted 63 acres of the town which is known today as Eagle Heights. He gave lots for a church and school which bear his name. J. B. and Mattie Walters Eagle both died in 1932, and were buried in Harrison.

J. D. and Ruth Eagle died in July and August, 1975, respectively. They were buried in Rose Hill Cemetery, Harrison, Arkansas.

John Thomas Eason

John Thomas Eason, born January 12, 1843 in Wall Hill, De Sota County, Mississippi, son of William Thomas and Lucy Ann Harris Eason, the third of four children. He grew to young manhood on his father's plantation, attended school in Florence, Alabama. His education was cut short by the Civil War. He served in the 17th Regiment of the Mississippi Volunteers, Company "1", Barksdales Brigade from May 1861 to March 1865. Being a firm believer in state rights, he felt he owed his allegiance first to his native state of Mississippi and immediately upon her seccession from the Union he joined the Southern Confederacy. Entering as a private, promoted to sargeant in April 1862 and up the ranks to Captain, fought in many major battles to Appomatox. During his four years in Lee's Army, he often saw the great military genius and had great respect for the silvery haired, broad shouldered, handsome General. In the battles of Manasses and Gettysburg, he particularly distinguished himself for gallantry. At the close of the war, Captain Eason, a mere boy of 22 years of age, set about to restore the family fortune and reclaim the ruined home.

August 31, 1871 he married Elizabeth Bourdon Howze. They were the parents of eight children, Adrain Bourdon (Mrs. John F. Gilliland of Coldwater, Mississippi), William Thomas, who died in infancy, Lucy Evelyn (Mrs. U. L. Smelser of Fayetteville), Martha Elizabeth (Mrs. W. P. Veazey of Coldwater, Mississippi), Alcuin Pitt, John Thomas, Herman Edward and Arthur Atkins all of Fayetteville.

Captain Eason was a planter and merchant in Coldwater, Tate County, Mississippi. In 1888 he was elected to the Mississippi legislature. In 1894 he moved his family to Fayetteville, Arkansas for health reasons and to educate his children. In 1898 he opened an Insurance Agency and organized the Pat Cleburn Camp #216 and served as the first Commander. He never sought political favor but because of his great public interest and activity, he was elected Mayor of Fayetteville from 1901 to 1908.

Two sons, Tom and Herman joined U. L. Smelser in the feed milling business located in the old warehouse of the Byrnes Lumber Co., on the northwest corner of what is now Campbell-Bell parking lot. Near the Frisco spur tracks on West Street, they built a large warehouse to handle traincar lots of feed and flour. They operated a very successful business for many years.

Alcuin joined his father in the Insurance Agency and later Arthur joined the Agency. Grandson A. P. Eason, Jr., still owns the Agency. Arthur left the Insurance Agency and joined U. L. Smelser in operating a hardware store selling John Deere Farm Equipment, located on the northwest corner of the square in the building recently occupied by the First National Bank. On April 19, 1912, Arthur married Vida Edith Phipps. They had three children, Margaret Elizabeth, Arthur Atkins, Jr. and Jim Tom. Vida passed away January 3, 1920 and the children were reared by grandparents and Mr. and Mrs. U. L. Smelser. Arthur soon left the hardware business and moved to El Dorado, Arkansas to the booming oil fields. Several years later he returned to Fayetteville and married Enid Frost Clark. Captain Eason, an unconstituted fire brand rebel, not long before his death met another veteran in the train station. Upon learning he fought for the north from Missouri (a traitor of the worst kind) preceded to whip the man on the spot.

The family home was a large frame house on South Gregg Street. At one time a tannery for tanning leather was located on the spring on the Eason property. Captain Eason passed away on May 20, 1918. His wife passed away August 4, 1927. Both are buried in Evergreen Cemetery.

A. A. Eason, Jr.

The family of Arthur A. Eason, Jr. settled in this country in pre-Revolutionary times so when you try to include different branches of his family, the family tree becomes long and involved. For this reason, we declined to include a family tree, but instead will give a sketchy list. Isaac Eason was born in North Carolina in 1731. His son, Stephen, born 1758\9 married Rebecca Dupree. Rebecca's great-grandfather came to America in the late 1600s from France. The succeeding generations moved to Alabama and then later to Mississippi. Arthur's great-grandfather married Lucy Ann Harris. Her grandfather, Ensign Francis Epps Harris served in the Revolutionary War and, at one time, was Secretary to Thomas Jefferson. His maternal relatives, the Epps, trace their ancestors to Kent County, England in 1550. Arthur's grandfather, John Thomas Eason married Elizabeth Bourdon Howze. Her maternal grandfather, Doctor Micholas J. Bourdon was born in France in 1750. It is with John Thomas Eason and his wife, Elizabeth, that the ties with Washington County, Arkansas began. They moved to Fayetteville with their large family in 1894. Their youngest son, Arthur A. Easton, was the father of Arthur A. Eason, Jr. (The stories of John Thomas Eason and Arthur A. Eason are told elsewhere in this book.)

Arthur A. Eason was born in Fayetteville in 1917 and lived there until he was 23 years old. He has one sister, Margaret Liles and one brother, Jim Tom Eason. His mother, Vida Phipps Eason, died when he was two years old so his father's sister, Evelyn Eason Smelser and her husband, U. L. Smelser reared him. (Their story is also told in this book under their names.) No real parents could have supplied a more secure and caring home. Arthur very much enjoyed his childhood and has many fond memories of Fayetteville. He remembers all the hunting and fishing spots around Fayetteville. He remembers quite well the time he was walking to the "swimming hole" on White River and a bull chased him. He found it was quite easy to clear a fence in one jump. Now, he admits he was the one who put the big nails on the railroad tracks so he could have flat nails and could also hear the clackety-clack sound as the train went over them. He had a pet goat that he had trained to pull him all over town in his wagon. One day, his sister was bending over and he told the goat to butt her and it did, knocking her head over heels. It's a good bet she didn't think it was funny.

He was quite an enterprising young boy - he had a "pop" stand at his Uncle's Mill and he trapped minnows during the winter and sold them to fishermen during the summmer. His grandchildren still play with the wooden wagon he bought with the money. When he was a little older, he worked at the Smelser and Eason Mill, developing his muscles in the process. Many people will remember him as Junior, June or "Bugs". After graduating from Fayetteville High School, he took every course Fayetteville Business College had to offer and later graduated from LaSalle Extension University in Accounting. Soon after they both graduated from Business College, he married Virginia Rich who had spent part of her childhood in Cincinnati, Washington County, Arkansas. His first job after Business College was at Arkansas Ice and Storage Company. After Arthur and Virginia moved to Saint Louis in 1941, he worked for several years for Ernst and Ernst. Following that, he joined Lammert Furniture Company as Controller. At the time of his retirement in 1982, he was Vice President - Treasurer. They have three sons.

Scott is manager of construction Engineering at Anheuser Busch, Incorporated. He and his wife, Barbara, have two sons, Scott and Ryan and Barbara's sons Tom and Tim. Steve is manager of Product Engineering at Webber, Incorporated, Sanford, North Carolina. He and his wife, Janet have one son, Marc and two daughters, Stephanie and Jenna. Alan owns Atlas Waterproofing Company in Kansas City, Missouri. He and his wife, Joan are raising her daughter, Amy and son, Jared. Arthur's hobbies include traveling, photography, water sports and "grandkids".

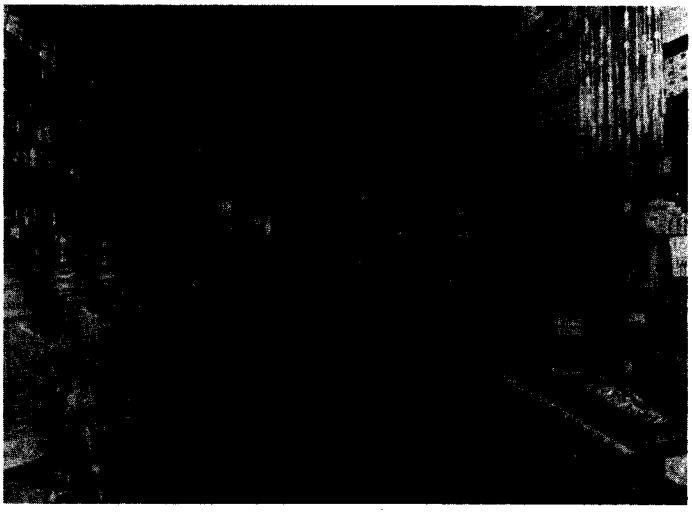
Arthur Atkins Eason, Sr.

Arthur Atkins Eason, Sr. born in Coldwater, Mississippi, April 19, 1892, son of John Thomas Eason and Elizabeth Bourdon Howze Eason. He was the youngest of eight children. His father was a Captain in Lee's army during the Civil War. After the war, Captain Eason returned to Coldwater to his plantation and his store. The family moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas by train in early 1894. Arthur was educated in Fayetteville Schools and attended the University of Arkansas.



This picture made in the Hardware Store operated by Arthur Eason (foreground) and U. L. Smelser (rear). The picture was made prior to 1920.

On April 19, 1912, he married Vida Edith Phipps. They had three children, Margaret Elizabeth, Arthur Atkins, Jr. and James Thomas. Arthur was associated with his father in the Insurance business and also with his brother-in-law, U. L. Smelser in the John Deere Hardware business. On January 3, 1920, Vida passed away after a long illness. Arthur soon sold his business interests and went to El Dorado, Arkansas during the oil boom. He spent several years in the oil fields in El Dorado and Smackover, Arkansas. Upon returning to Fayetteville, he operated a bakery for his brothers, Tom and Herman Eason.

In 1935 Arthur moved to Centralia, Illinois to again try his luck in the oil fields. In 1936 he married Enid Frost Clark and they lived in Illinois for awhile. Upon returning to Fayetteville, they bought a farm on Highway 94 just off Highway 16 east. Here he tried his luck raising chickens. In late 1948 they moved to Lindsay, California and opened a furniture store. Later returning to Fayetteville, they decided to make their home in Springdale, Arkansas. They opened Eason Insurance Agency. upon retiring they moved to a small farm in Elkins, Arkansas. Arthur was a member of the First Methodist Church, Washington Lodge # 1, and 32nd Degree Mason.

The history of Arthur's family appears elsewhere in this History Book.

George Secretas Easterly

George S. Easterly, born April 26, 1853 in Salem, Cocke County, Tennessee. He married Martha Jane Spencer, born October 6, 1859 in Greenville, Tennessee. They moved to Springdale, Arkansas before 1877, coming to Alma by train and on to Springdale by Butterfield Stagecoach, the only means of transportation at that time. They settled on a farm owned by the Powell family until purchasing a farm of about eighty acres where a house and barn were built and a well dug. The location of the house is now the corner of Backus and Overo Circle Drives. Their nearest neighbor lived on what is now West End Street. All the surrounding land had to be cleared for farming. George was a successful farmer raising food, cattle and hogs to provide the family with food. He was a carpenter and worked for Van Winkle Saw Mill which furnished lumber for Old Main at the University of Arkansas. He also helped cut ties for the Frisco Railroad. He spoke fluent German and was able to help newcomers to communicate and transact business.

George and Martha were charter members of the Lutheran Church of Springdale. He helped to construct the original church building on Highway 71. They were the parents of eleven children, all born in Springdale except a daughter, Florence Bell, who passed away before they left Tennessee. Sarah Elizabeth married H. D. Brown. William married Dora Stith. Charles married Velma Rice. Lucy Neoma married Lee Graham. Emma married J. D. (Jack) Trimble. Walter died as an infant. Ola Mae married Thomas Macklin Liles. John married Eula Lee Jones. Another infant died at birth. Richard married Vena Bradley.

An interesting story is told about George. One year he had saved enough money for his taxes and round trip train fare to Fayetteville. When he arrived at the Washington County Courthouse, he found he was short two cents. The clerk told him to forget the two cents. Sometime later not having enough money for round trip train fare he walked to Fayetteville to pay the two cents. He was planning to walk back to Springdale, but met a friend who gave him a ride in his buggy. The only surviving member of the family is Ola Mae.

Thomas Macklin Liles and Ola Mae Easterly were married May 17, 1910. They have two children, George Henry and Martha Maxine. George married Margaret Elizabeth Eason. They have two children, Vida Mae and Thomas Arthur (Tommy). Vida Mae married James C. Atherton, Jr. They have three sons, James C. Atherton, III, an oilfield worker in Texas, George Robert (Bobby), an air conditioning firm employee in Corpus Christi and David Allen, an employee of a subsidiary of Sears in Hondo, Texas. Vida is employed with G. M. A. C. in Corpus Christi. Tommy has two children, George Lamar, of Rogers, an employee of Wal-Mart and Mary Margaret of Harrison, an employee of Levi-Strauss and attends college. Tommy is an employee of Southwestern Electric Power Company in Rogers. Tommy's wife, Lalah has two sons, Steven Dwayne O'Neal of Elm Springs, an employee of Tyson's and Gary Lee O'Neal of Fayetteville, a student at the University of Arkansas and a Commissioned Officer of the Arkansas National Guard. Lalah is employed with Master Supply, Incorporated of Springdale.

Maxine married James Herbert Hatfield. They have two children, Martha Sue and James Thomas (Jim). Sue married Tom Carter. They have two children, Matt and Terri, all of Dallas, Texas. Jim married Marty Smith. They have two children, Kelly and Sonja, all of Fayetteville. There are two other grandchildren, Helen Owens of Rogers, and Frances Storms of La Pine, Oregon. Helen has two sons, George Daugherty of Rogers, and Larry Owens of Oklahoma. There are several great-grandchildren, several great-great-grandchildren and several great-great-great-grandchildren.

Ola Mae, at age 94, is the only surviving member of the family. She is a resident of Fayetteville City Hospital Geriatric Center.

George L. Easterly passed away October 31, 1912. Martha Jane passed away April 7, 1948. Both are buried in Bluff Cemetery in Springdale, Arkansas.

Eugene Henry Eddy, Jr.

Eugene Eddy and Shirley Penn grew in Chicago, Illinois, graduating from high school. Eugene then attended the University of Nebraska and Shirley attended Wright Junior College and Moser Business College in Chicago. Eugene and Shirley were married during World War II in Houston, Texas. Their first daughter, Diana Lee was born in Enid, Oklahoma, 1945. Eugene was honorably discharged in April, 1946 - his rank being Captain in the U. S. Army Air Force. He piloted all twin engine planes for 5 years.

The family moved to west Chicago, Illinois near the Eddy, Sr. family. Eugene worked on elevator maintenance at Marshall Field Company in downtown Chicago. March 1947 their second daughter, Susan was born in Geneva, Illinois.

When the G. I. Bill was introduced and ex-servicemen could attend a farm school and be paid $90.00 for 4 years, Eugene decided to try his hand at farming. The family moved to Frederick, Oklahoma, January, 1950 to tenant farm for a year. In March, 1951, they moved to Springdale, Arkansas, population 5,000. They purchased a 160 acre farm southeast of town in the Zion community. Purchase price of this land was $5,000.00. Eight milk cows and a Sears pasturizer started their farming operation. Diana and Susan learned quickly to milk with their daddy. A truck came every morning to pick up the 10 gallon milk cans of fresh milk and took them to Bentonville, Arkansas to a Kraft Cheese Plant. On a very hot day in summer sometimes the milk would sour before reaching its destination. Then that can would be returned the next morning. This forced the family to buy a pig so it could drink the sour milk. The piglet was purchased in Elm Springs and carried home in the trunk of their car.

Next they tried their hand at vegetable farming - an acre of tomatoes, set out by hand, which resulted in soaking feet at night and a back massage. Green beans on two acres and potatoes in front yard on 1/2 acre. All was new work for these city folks. They picked the tomatoes and sold them to grocery stores and cafes, such as Layman's and Penrod's. The beans were picked by neighbors for 2 cents a pound and were sold by the truck load for 3 cents a pound. They decided there was no profit in that so turned the cows in the field. Their neighbor, Guy Terry, came over to help work the potatoes with his horse and plow.

By this time it appeared another way ought to be decided on to make a living in Arkansas. Eugene obtained a loan from First State Bank and built a chicken house using lumber off the farm, cutting trees and taking them to a saw mill. Eventually, another larger chicken house was built. After raising broilers for some years the houses were converted into hen houses. Collecting eggs became a way of life. Another project was taken on by Eugene. Hogs - 1000 of them, Jack Lloyd of Lloyd Chicken Processing Plant backed him. Together they would go over to Kingston to buy wild razor back hogs, fatten them and sell them at market for a profit. These were fed and cooked offal (chicken innards) from the chicken plant. A jeep and an iron closed trailer was used to haul the hot offal to the farm each morning. Cold water was added before it was dumped out on concrete slabs for the hogs.

Then it was time for Eugene and Shirley to find jobs away from the farm. Eugene worked maintenance at Campbell Soup Company in Fayetteville. He retired after 22 years, April 1981.

The girls were growing, attending school at Zion rural school, then when schools in Arkansas consolidated they attended Springdale schools and graduated.

Shirley worked for 20 years at various secretarial jobs, having hired a neighbor, Clarence Porter, to watch over chickens. He moved his small trailer home on the farm and was a faithful helper for years. Diana went to Airline School in Kansas City, Missouri, but after graduation returned to Springdale and married David A. Morse. Susan attended Ouachita Baptist College a year on a scholarship from Jones Truck Line. Then attended and graduated from LPN school in Fayetteville. She married Billy Lee Jones after his return from Vietnam. David Morse served his term in the U. S. Navy.

Diana worked at Bear Brand Hosiery for 17 years while Susan worked as pediatric nurse for 16 years. Both girls have homes on the original 160 acre farm.

The Eugene Eddy family have loved their farm and have only their Lord to thank for all His goodness to them. A farm house with no running water was quite a change for these city folks. Their Lord kept them healthy and happy and led them to the Bible missionary teachers, Miss Carol McCormick and Miss Jewel Horton, who in turn led them to Jesus. It has been wonderful being a Christian in Springdale. This may not have occurred in the worldly life they had in Chicago, Illinois. They now have a two-story brick home on the spot where the old farm house stood and a Lincoln Towncar in the driveway and registered black angus cattle in their pastures. But most importantly, 2 beautiful grandchildren born in Washington County who attended Lincoln Christian School, 1st Baptist Church, Springdale. Mitchell Wayne Jones, born December 5, 1972 and Misty Kaye Jones, born June 17, 1974.

Thomas J. Edmondson

Our great grandfather, Thomas Jefferson Edmondson, was one of ten children born to Samuel and Elizabeth Johnson Edmondson, in the year 1805 in east Tennessee. He married Mary "Polly" Sams September 16, 1826, in Rhea County, Tennessee. Their "bondsman" was John Edmondson, probably his oldest brother.

Thomas and Mary had nine children: John, Benjamin, Elizabeth Jane, Braxton Clark, Newton, Martha, Rebecca and Albert Jackson.

Thomas and his family migrated to Arkansas from Tennessee with the Cherokee Indians to help them get settled in their new home. His first stop was in Johnson County on Mulberry Creek. They moved next to Washington County on a farm on the White River in a community called Oxford Bend, where Thomas and Mary spent most of their life.

Thomas was a minister of the gospel, school teacher, and bear hunter. (Legend has it that he was as much interested in bear hunting as he was in helping the Cherokees) He died about 1855-1860.

At his death, Thomas owned a section or two of land near Grandview, Arkansas, where he was buried in the community cemetery, on the land he owned.

Thomas' oldest son, John, was killed as a young man, after being mustered out of the U. S. Army after the Mexican War. He was participating in a filibustering expedition sent out from the United States by a mining company to take possesion of a mine in Baja, California which was being held by the Mexican Government (just why we don't know).

Benjamin, the next oldest boy, also went overland to California in the middle 1800s. He moved to southern Oregon and reared his family there.

Elizabeth Ann, the oldest girl, married James Warren and lived in the White Elm community near Grandview, Arkansas.

Jane was next. She married Riley Baker and they spent most of their lives in Indian Territory (now Oklahoma).

Braxton Clark, our grandfather, was next in line. He was born August 10, 1840, and died October 8, 1924, and was buried in the Grandview, Arkansas, cemetery, near his father Thomas Jefferson. He spent most of his life in and around Grandview, except for one term as sheriff of Carroll County, when the family lived in Berryville, Arkansas. He and his family were members of the Grandview Baptist Church. During the Civil War, Braxton first served with the Army of General Sterling Price. He spent his 21st birthday on the battlefield at Wilson Creek, Missouri. During the latter part of the war, he served with General Joe Shelby in the area around Luka and Corinth, Mississippi, where he contracted a terrible case of malaria and spent his last few dollars buying a horse (or a mule, we aren't sure which) to ride home when the war ended.

Braxton married Susan Ferguson in 1859 and we can remember grandma telling us about hiding in an old Indian cave while grandpa was away at the war whenever the "bushwhackers" were about, which seems to have been much of the time.

Braxton and Susan were the parents of eleven children. Their oldest, a girl named Mary, died the year she was born.

Thomas' next child was Newton. He was barely old enough to get accepted by the Confederate Army and died in 1863. His bullet riddled body buried next to his father in the family cemetery.

Martha was the next of his girls, she married Alva Ferguson and they spent most of their lives in Oklahoma.

Rebecca was the youngest girl. She married Mal Denny.

The youngest of Thomas' and Mary's children was Albert Jackson. He married Jane Scroggins and they spent their entire married lives on a farm in Grandview, Arkansas. They reared a boy, Charley and a girl, Dora.

We have been able to trace Thomas Jefferson Edmondson's lineage back to John Edmondson, 1640-1699. John was a prosperous merchant in Talbot County, Maryland. He and his family were Quakers.

Sarah Jane Edwards

Henry Calvin and Mary Dyche Stanberry came from Rockcastle, Kentucky to Red Star, Madison County, Arkansas in 1881. He was a Baptist preacher and she was the daughter of a well educated, prosperous leader in Kentucky's fight for statehood and colleges. They had six children and four more would be born in Arkansas.

Sarah Jane, their oldest child, married William Edwards, a more recent arrival from Kentucky in 1885. He was eleven years older and a roamer at heart, which caused Sarah to accuse him of never having planted and harvested a crop in their entire marriage.

The four years following their marriage, they lived in various places in Texas and Oklahoma. Sarah became so homesick that instead of making the run for Oklahoma land, they ran for the Ozarks.

In Fayetteville William heard of a man named Holland about six miles east, who had found coal while digging a water well. Since William was an ex-Kentucky coal miner, he went to the mountain and made a deal with Mr. Holland. He tunnelled back into the mountain with six mines and at one time had six men working for him.

Two of his employees were his wife's brothers. They welcomed the idea of leaving their fundamentalist home. Soon after, William got "itchy" feet and sold the business to the two brothers, Jim and Bob Stanberry.

When he returned from Kentucky, he had great news. They could get rich right there on Bare Mountain with the ginseng seeds within four to six years, if they would follow his instructions. They had to build a shaded area producing 2/3 shade and 1/3 sun, and bring up top soil and rotten leaves to the garden. Although he did produce the first coal mines and ginseng patch, probably William's greatest success was his descendants:

Mary Belle Wages was a teacher and a son Ivan was a fireman at Fayetteville and left no descendants.

Sid, a life long farmer, near the mines, reared five children. Ethel was published as being the youngest to graduate from the University of Arkansas at 17, in 1933, but after putting herself through by working at Jerpe's picking chickens for 1 1/2 cents a chicken decided not to pick 100 more chickens to pay the graduation fee. She is a writer and has published several books.

Harold, is a retired teacher in California.

Bill, the most successful financially is a plumber contractor, and owner of the 40 acres on which the ginseng patch was planted.

Elizabeth, a telephone operator and the most successful domestic engineer of the family.

Louise Smith, a teacher/counselor and a 1987's Who's Who of American Women.

From Sid's five children he has 12 grandchildren which include doctors, nurses, engineers, teachers and preachers, but they lack the experiences of the Ozark mountain.

Cameron was a very successful heavy equipment salesman and president of the East Tulsa Chamber of Commerce. He had three girls. Colleen, a singer-performer and a lawyer's wife. Marilyn, a psychologist and a lawyer's wife. Ann, a psychologist with her doctorate and minister's wife.

Cam's family still own the forty acres under which the mines run.

Ed, the youngest, never married and spent his entire life on the mountain owning 120 acres, including the mines, at his death in 1957. He spent most of his time and money working to get a good road and mail route across the mountain joining the Black Oak Road to Highway 16 near Baldwin. This was no small job talking the land owners into donating the land for the road, but was accomplished around 1950, and rightfully named " Ed Edwards Road".

David E. Eicher

David E. and Millie Haight Eicher came to Springdale from Iowa in the early 1900s and settled on a 100 acre farm southwest of town on what is now Peaceful Valley Road (South 40th Street). Their two children - Rachel Eicher Riggs and Herbert H. "Bill" Eicher were born there. They had apple and peach orchards.

Mr. Eicher was horticulture agent for the Frisco Railroad here and was instrumental in getting the Welch Grape Juice Company of Westfield, New York to locate their processing plant here.

His work required the family to move to Springfield, Missouri in 1919. In the fall of 1925, they returned to Springdale and purchased 20 acres - bordered on the south by Highway 68, on the west by what is now South Pleasant Street, on the north by Highland Avenue and on the east by Highway 471. They built a brick home on the southeast corner of the land (corner of 471 and 68) and developed a grape vineyard on the land.

Dave Eicher served in the State Legislature during the 1930s.

During the depression years, in order to help the family meet financial responsibilities, Millie Eicher opened the "Edgemere Tea Room" in her home and served dinners and banquets by reservation. The whole family pitched in to help serve these meals. Mrs. Eicher was a founding member of the Springdale Business and Professional Women's Club.

Mr. Eicher died in 1943, Mrs. Eicher in 1965.

Rachel Eicher married Glenn M. Riggs, a local funeral director, who worked for the Callison-Nix establishment. They had a paint and wallpaper business on Emma Avenue where Shiloh Square now stands, and conducted the funeral business upstairs in that building. About 1927, the business became Callison-Riggs. About 1935, the paint and wallpaper store was closed and the funeral home moved into the old Dr. Martin house on Emma Avenue. (where Anne-Lynne's dress shop is now). The family (Mr. and Mrs. Riggs and daughter Millie Lou) lived in an upstairs apartment there.

Glenn M. Riggs served as Washington County coroner from 1927 until his death in 1941 at age 36. He was the first chairman of the Northwest Arkansas Apple Blossom Pilgrimage. He was president of the Rotary Club 1931-32, and also served at one time as president of the Springdale Chamber of Commerce. In 1937, he was voted "Springdale's Leading Citizen" and presented a plaque by actor Bob Burns in connection with promotion on a motion picture called "Our Leading Citizen".

The family moved to Moore's Funeral Home in Fayetteville in 1940. Mr. Riggs died in 1941 and Mrs. Riggs and daughter returned to Springdale. Mrs. Riggs owned a cleaning shop for a time, then became payroll clerk for Welch's Grape Juice Company. She was active in Business and Professional Women's Club, and held local, district and state offices. She died in 1965.

Millie Lou Riggs married Marion E. Brown in 1949. They had three children - Michael, Glenn and Lorna. Marion worked for Camp's Clothing Store before going to Korea. After his return, he worked for Famous Hardware and then went to the U. S. Post Office. He was appointed postmaster 1971 and served until his retirement in 1982.

Millie Lou worked in the laboratory of Welch Grape Juice Company, then taught second grade at Jones Elementary School for twenty-one years before her retirement in 1987.

Marion E. Brown was the only member of his family who did not have the letter "e" added to his last name. When he was born (1924 in Nevada, Missouri), the doctor who made out the birth certificate omitted this letter from the name. This was not noticed until Marion enlisted in the Naval Air Force during World War II. Since the "e" was not on his birth certificate, authorities would not allow him to use it in his name.

Marion served with the Navy in World War II and with a field artillery battalion in Korea during that conflict.

E. Leslie Browne taught school in the Nevada, Missouri area before taking a position as city mail carrier in Nevada, Missouri. In 1926, he and his wife, Lena Street Browne, transferred with their four children - Clinton, Virginia, Marjorie, Marion E. - to Clayton, New Mexico, where Mr. Browne was a mail carrier until 1930, when the family relocated to Springdale, Arkansas. Mr. Browne was a rural mail carrier here until his retirement in 1940. Mr. Browne died in 1955, Mrs. Browne in 1984.

Alma Hope Elledge

My parents - Albert Hope of West Fork, and Ethel Babb of Prairie Grove - new Sulpher Community, did meet at the Old Soldiers reunion 1912. By the time they were married, August 29, 1913, Daddy was "the telephone man" at Prairie Grove. They lived in 2 rooms over the bank. One room was the telephone office and the other their living quarters. It was here in Prairie Grove that I was born May 29, 1914.

Before I was walking he transferred to Elkins. Again the telephone office was our front room. Since mother served as the operator, most of my time was spent in the "office". I often sat in mother's lap as she worked. This way I learned where she put the plug when people rang the switchboard. Often instead of giving a number they would say, "Ring me Grandma Reed" or "Aunt Sally" - so it was how I learned to operate the board by names rather than numbers. Of course one of my parents was always standing by to see that their call was completed correctly.

About a month before my fourth birthday (1918) Daddy left working for independent telephone companies and began his career with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in Fayetteville.

One of the other men who worked for the telephone company was Mack Liles. He and his wife Mae and my parents became life long friends. Their work was not their only thing in common, but they were members of the First Baptist Church, Masonic and Eastern Star lodges. I well remember how often in the summertime on Friday afternoons both families packed their Model T's and off we went to one of the near by rivers for swimming and a picnic supper. Sometimes we would spend the night, Maxine and I would sleep in one car and her brother George in the other car. The adults would sleep on the ground.

I was fortunate to live near my grandparents and loved to visit them. When I went to Prairie Grove to visit Grandma Babb, there were 5 girl cousins about the same age. Especially during the old soldiers reunion we all wanted to sleep together on a pallet. There were so many of us that we had our meals in the yard. The "Reunion" was the time for family gatherings.

As for going to Grandma Hope's, I was the only grandchild for 7 years and enjoyed the spoiling that I received. I would sit and listen to my grandmother tell about how a great, great grandfather of hers came to where the city of Fayetteville now is. He cleared land where the square now is, built a house and later a store. She would show me and even let me touch, very gently, the key to this store. Also the bullet molds, candle molds, a rolling pin and a child's rocker that was brought by wagon when they came to this virgin land. When Grandmother (Mary Reed Hope) died in the spring of 1933, Grandpa (Hugh Robert Hope) took these articles and gave them to the University of Arkansas to be placed in their museum.

My great Grandmother Betty (Elizabeth) McGarrah grew up on "East Mountain" and attended the "Women's Female College" which I have been told was Arkansas' first college. I have a water color called "Moss Rose" and signed by Betty McGarrah, which money could not buy.

Preston Ellington

The Ellingtons of Arkansas have had a significant influence upon the state's history, and a number of their direct descendants live in Washington County. Many of their family have attended the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. Amos F. Adams, who at 94 years of age lives on Crossover Road in the city, is the grandson of Lewis Preston Ellington and the son of Amanda Sonora (Ellington) Adams. Although Logan County was where the family established the Ellington Cemeteries, and many of the offspring live in that area, this account is about how the Ellingtons relate to the Adamses of Washington County.

The Ellingtons in Arkansas have traced their ancestry from Whitehall or Whitehurst, a suburb of London, England, in the early 1600s and late 1500s. The first Ellingtons to migrate to America, it is reported, settled in the Dutch colony of New Netherlands, in what is now known as New York State, in 1626-28. New Amsterdam is the name of the city built by the Dutch on Manhattan Island which is now New York City. John Ellington of the New York area was married to Ann Allison. It is not established the link between the Ellingtons of New Netherlands (New York) and the Commonwealth of Virginia, but it was recorded in 1732 that David Ellington had migrated to Prince George County, Virginia, and then on to Amelia County, Virginia, where they gave birth to David Ellington, Jr., in 1741. David Ellington, Sr., later was a resident of Amelia County, Nattoway Parish, where his "will," dated 1773, is on record. David Ellington, Jr., born September 7, 1741, was married to Jerusha Fowlkes, and settled in Prince Edward County, Virginia, before the Revolutionary War.

David Ellington, Jr., spent an interesting life as a Baptist minister in the Royal Colony of Virginia, a supplier to the First Continental Army of the American Revolution, and as a successful planter. It was in 1778, that a David M. Ellington enlisted with the 4th Regiment under Captain Paine, marched to Pennsylvania, later marched back to South Carolina to the Cowpens, fought in a severe but victorious battle against the British, and then marched to Guilford Court House in North Carolina for another battle before their retreat to Richmond and Yorktown. He then joined the main Continental Army under General George Washington where he remained until discharged after the surrender of the British. It is believed that David M. Ellington, who fought in the Revolution, was a cousin to David Ellington, the plantation owner. After the war, David, the planter and Baptist pastor, continued his ministry in Amelia and Lunenburg Counties, Virginia, until 1794. From Virginia, David Ellington later migrated to Speedwell, Tennessee, where his death occurred in 1821.

The marriage of David and Jerusha Fowlkes Ellington produced nine children of which John B. Ellington was the firstborn (February 26, 1766). Like his father, John served in the Revolutionary War and fought in the Battle of King's Mountain on the North and South Carolina line (October 7, 1780). He was only 14 at the time. It was at the Battle of King's Mountain that the patriot riflemen killed or captured an entire force of 1100 New York and South Carolina Tories (British Loyalists) sent to battle by the British Commander, General Cornwallis. Marrying Martha Lamarr of North Carolina later in the 18th century, they settled in Virginia to raise their family. Later in life John B. Ellington migrated to Arkansas via Tennessee and Missouri, and passed away near Magazine in 1848. A veteran of the American Revolution, John B. Ellington was buried in the Ellington Cemetery in Arkansas.

Thomas Ellington

To John B. and Martha Ellington of Virginia was born Nathan Ellington in 1808. Nathan became the first Judge of Logan County, Arkansas. His descendants have written that he was an "extraordinary man and a pioneer." In 1827 he married Mary Moore, also of Virginia. Nathan and Mary migrated to Tennessee, and 7 of their 9 children were born there. Shortly after 1840 the family migrated to Missouri, and 1846 they settled near Magazine, Arkansas. Legend says that Ellingtons had chosen the region around Magazine because of the terrain's similarity to Virginia's where generations had lived for 100 years. Nathan become a prosperous farmer and was well respected in the region.

When the Civil War broke out, the family became divided in loyalties to the Union and Confederacy. Two of Nathan's sons joined the Union; two joined the "Booneville Rifles," a local unit sympathetic to the Confederacy and later inducted into the C. S. A. Army. Judge Nathan Ellington chose to remain loyal to the Union, as did many of people in that region.

After the war, Nathan was selected as Scott County Judge, where he served from 1865 to 1871. In 1871 a new county, taken from Franklin, Scott, Johnson and Yell Counties, was formed called "Sarber County." Judge Ellington was appointed its first judge from 1871-1874. Sarber County's name was changed to Logan County in 1875. After his service as Judge, Nathan returned to his farm. He lived an interesting life, studied astronomy, and gave meticulous attention to every detail of his personal affairs as well as to the welfare of the community. He passed away in 1890, and was buried on his land he set aside as a family graveyard.

Of the 9 children born to Nathan and Mary, Lewis Preston was born in 1831 in Tennessee. After Lewis and his family were living in Missouri a number of years, he became a cattle drover, and in 1849 went on a cattle drive to California. In Utah they encountered some horse thieves, but managed to reclaim their animals in a blind canyon where a corral had been built by the rustlers. After selling their cattle in California, Lewis prospected during the Gold Rush. He reportedly made a strike and chartered passage on a ship from San Francisco to New Orleans via the tip of South America, Tierra del Fuego. From New Orleans he walked to Magazine carrying his pack. In 1858 Lewis married Sidney Hooper of Illinois and purchased 160 acres 4 miles east of Magazine. When the Civil War broke out, Lewis joined the Union forces and fought in 1863 under General Grant. The war brought many hardships upon the family, the homeplace was raided by the Confederates periodically, and Sidney Ellington was under pressure to supply with food and other goods. Despite the danger of being caught, Lewis secretly infiltrated southern forces to visit his family in Magazine.

Amanda Sonora Ellington was the seventh child born to Lewis and Sidney (1871). From Lewis Ellington's fond memories of Sonora, California, he married "Sonora," who was later nicknamed "Nora." She married Jason A. Adams of Kentucky in 1888, and gave birth to Amos Adams in 1894, and to Myrtle (Adams) Hasty in 1896. After moving with her husband to the Indian Territory near McCurtain, Oklahoma, on the Brazil River, she contracted malaria and died in 1898. Her children chose to live with their grandparents in Arkansas, Lewis and Sidney Ellington; and so, Jason A. Adams, alone, returned to the Indian Territory.

More has been written about the Ellingtons for the Logan County Historical Society by Merle (Ellington) Jones of Magazine and Madelon Raymond of Pullman, Washington. Of notable mention relating to Washington County History is Thomas E. ("Elzie") Ellington who served on the University of Arkansas football team from 1907-1909. The 1909 team was undefeated, and later coached the first football team in Booneville. The Ellingtons are prominent in the life of Amos Adams of Fayetteville.

Old Engels Home - June 1858 Farmington, Arkansas - 1951

William H. Engels

The history of the Engels' family in Washington County begins in 1839 or 40 with the arrival, from Batesville, of the oldest child of Henry Auter Engels, William Henry, in the area of present-day Farmington. He and his brother, Abraham Allen and sister, Sarah Jane came, evidently at different times, to the home of their maternal uncles, William and Abraham Allen, in the Farmington Valley after living with their Allen grandparents following the death of their mother, Eliza (Allen) Engels, in 1835. William Henry, who was born on August 27, 1830 made the trip seated on the back of a horse with his uncle Abraham at the age of nine. The Allen brothers had been among the first settlers in the valley, arriving about 1828. William Henry later returned to Batesville to live with his father until the latter's death in 1843. Henry Auter, whose home, "Engelside", was one of the finest in Independence County, died without leaving a will and the children received almost nothing of their father's property.

While living with his uncles, William Henry attended the Ebenezer Methodist Church and school, which was founded in 1833 and was one of the first Methodist Episcopal churches in northwest Arkansas. The one-room log building was located about two miles northwest of the present site of Farmington on land homesteaded by William Woodruff. William Henry continued attending the church and school after it was moved to a similar building on land owned by James Kinibrugh in 1848 and became known as "Hawthorne".

In 1851, Sarah Jane married Wyatt F. Woodruff, who had been in the company of about ninety men traveling from Washington County to California in the '49 gold rush. Sometime after 1870, she and her husband and five children moved to Oregon and eventually settled in Spokane, Washington.

In 1852, William Henry went to Fort Smith, where he was employed by Sutton, Griffith and Company, wholesale merchants. Two years later, he took part in a seven-month, twenty-day cattle drive from Fort Smith to Stockton, California. His clothes and other personal belongings were packed in a 1' x 2' x 10" pine box with a decorative strip of buffalo hide on the face of the lid. During the drive, he kept a diary in a small, leather-bound notebook, recording the date and mileage covered in each entry with information on availability of wood, grass, and water, distinctive natural features along the route, and unusual occurrances. One of the most extraordinary events of the trip was the discovery of his brother's name, "A. Engels", carved on a tree at a camp in the Rocky Mountains. Abraham Allen had also left the Farmington Valley in 1852 and had traveled by oxen-drawn wagon to Oregon, where he settled in the Umpqua Valley.

William H. Engels and Isabella Kinnibrugh

William Henry returned to Fort Smith the following year and in 1856, came back to the valley to stay. In December of 1856, he married Isabella Clark Kinnibrugh, the daughter of James and Jane (Moore) Kinnibrugh. The Kinnibrughs had come from Virginia by way of Alabama about 1830, purchased 600 acres in the valley, and built a two-story log house near a perennial spring. They were the chief landowners in the area when Mr. Kinnibrugh died in 1842. In 1857, William Henry began constructing a house on the hill on the opposite side of the spring. He went deep into the forests on the Kinnibrugh land and, with a broad axe, felled large oak trees, which he used to make braces and underpinnings. These were fastened with wooden pins, which he and his uncle Abraham made. The sawed lumber was brought in oxen-drawn wagons from the Van Winkle Mills at War Eagle. William Henry and the men assisting him had to take "grub boxes" and camping gear along in order to make the sixty-mile journey over rugged trails. The house was a two-story, eight-room colonial-style structure with a brick chimney and two fireplaces at either end. The chimney bricks were handmade and baked in a nearby kiln. Interior paneling was put up with wooden pegs and the walls were covered with beige plaster made from lime, sand and horsehair.

William Henry and Isabella and their infant son, James Henry, moved into their new home on June 1, 1858. That same year, William Henry traveled 350 miles to St. Louis in a two-horse wagon for a reaper. The first reaper had been brought to Washington County only a year before. William Henry was progressive in the use of farming and other types of machinery. He was also the first in the community to have such "modern" devices as kerosene lamps, cookstoves and window screens in his home.

During the war, many people in the area went south before the advancing Federal Army. William Henry and Isabella started to leave once in a buggy with their two small children, but after camping one night, decided to return. William Henry operated the Allen Gristmills, which was owned by his Uncle Abraham and was located about one-half mile southwest of the present site of Farmington. As a miller, he was exempt from military service, and he ground grain for both Federal and Confederate troops. At this time, the community in the area was known as " Engels' Mill". The mill was normally powered by mules on a tread belt, but since these animals were difficult to keep during the war, William Henry used oxen.

Foraging bands of Federal troops stationed in Fayetteville pulled down William Henry's barn, graneries, and rail fences for barracks and firewood and took his horses and other livestock. Bushwhackers posed a constant threat to life and property. Food had to be cooked before daylight and hidden in the wooden platform beneath the stove. Family members took turns watching for bushwhackers while the others ate. Once, they entered the house while jars of milk were cooling in the breezeway, and after drinking their fill, poured the rest on the floor. They ripped up feather beds and quilts and drove off the livestock. They had killed several men in the area when they came to the house one night while the Engels were gathered in the family room and asked for William Henry. Isabella, on her way to the front door, knocked down some logs stacked by the fireplace as William Henry opened another door and escaped, going up the stairs and holding his boots by the straps with his teeth, scaling the wall into the attic, where he was not found.

After the war, William Henry moved the mill to the spring below his home and converted its power to steam. He also began operating a sawmill in the community. About 1868, he had the land on which the town of Farmington stands surveyed and divided into 50' by 150' lots by Henry Ross, an early surveyor of Washington County. His ambition was to establish a town and the individual lots were priced at twenty-five dollars. He named the town Farmington, since farming and rich farm land were characteristic of the area. The new town acquired a blacksmith shop, a wagon factory, a general and drug store, and a doctor. In June of 1868, William Henry established a post office, which was situated in the grist mill. In October, he became the second postmaster of Farmington at an annual salary of one dollar, and the office was moved to his home. The mail was brought to the house in saddlebags on horseback and messages were sent by word of mouth to those having mail. Patrons entered the breezeway and received their mail through an opening that had been made in one of the rooms. Stamps were canceled with an inked thumbprint.

William Henry served as postmaster for thirteen years, retiring in 1881. In 1876, he retired from milling, selling the Farmington Gristmills to his cousin Abe Allen. A short time later, Allen sold all or part of the mill to John Cato and a whiskey distillery was built next to it. William Henry, an arch enemy of strong drink, was up in arms. He began a campaign against the "demon rum" and it was eventually outlawed in the area. In addition to farming, he operated a steam thresher in the community for ten years after selling the mill.

For some time after the town had been established, he dreamed of building a new Methodist Church in Farmington. Finally, in 1891, after securing the necessary support for the project, William Henry and Isabella signed a deed donating town lots three and four for the site, and the Farmington United Methodist Church was built. Another major development was the arrival, in 1901, of Ozark and Cherokee Central Railroad, which carried passengers and freight between Fayetteville and Muskogee. William Henry donated land for the Farmington station and the right-of-way through a forty acre field.

One of William Henry's chief interests in his later years was inventing. In 1889, while maintaining a farm of 140 acres, he received Patent No. 408, 225, from the U. S. Patent Office for a railroad handcar. Much of his spare time was spent collaborating with a Mr. Kinney, who supposedly invented the Yale lock, in an attempt to invent "perpetual motion".

He died at the age of eighty-six on March 20, 1917. Isabella died on February 25, 1925 at ninety.

William Henry and Isabella had seven children, one of whom died at birth. The two eldest, James Henry, born in 1857 and Jane Eliza, 1860 died ten days apart in May of 1880 of an undiagnosed ailment, probably appendicitis. William Henry was returning from a trip to St. Louis at the time of his son's death. While in camp at Shiloh (Springdale) he was met by a man who told him, "Your boy has died. Since he had two sons, he asked him which one he meant, but the man could tell him nothing more. William Henry immediately made preparations for departure, and then completed his homeward journey, wondering which son he had lost.

The third child, Mary Belle was born on June 19, 1862. In 1888, she married John Preston Smith, who lived about a mile south of Farmington and whose step-father was Abe Allen. His father, William Clairborne Smith, had also been a miller during the war and was murdered one evening while returning home from the mill. John Preston was a retail merchant, and at different times, owned the general store built by his older brother Elbert "Eb" in Farmington and a men's and women's clothing store, "The Leader" and "The New Model", on the town square in Fayetteville. The Smiths had six children, one of whom died in infancy. The eldest, Gladys married Peter Newport Bragg, who was a descendant of the Civil War, General Braxton Bragg and taught mathematics at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. The Braggs had three children, Peter Newport, Jr., who was killed in World War II, John Smith and Braxton Victor. The Smith's second and fourth children, Beulah Jane and Isabella Kinnibrugh, were unmarried and both resided in Ft. Smith. Catherine Mary and John Preston, Jr., the two youngest, made their homes in Conway, Arkansas and in New Jersey.

Following the death of their third child, Hester at birth in 1864, William Henry and Isabella had another daughter, Alice McClung, on August 28, 1866. She married James Franklin Broyles, a farmer whose family had come to the area from Tennessee by wagon train, in 1897. They had four children, Henry Engels, James Hunter, John Kinnibrugh and Russel Roger. Of these, James Hunter and Russel Roger made their permanent homes in Farmington. James Hunter married Bonnie Gore in 1926 and they had four children, Alice Murline, James Hunter, Jr., John Henry and Russel Kinnibrugh. Russel Roger married Clara Montgomery in 1933. He served as postmaster of Farmington from 1966 to 1971 and his wife Clara held the position for twenty-five years before him. He also owned a grocery store in Farmington for several years in the 1930s and 40s.

The son William Henry found still living when he reached home after receiving the stranger's tragic message in Shiloh was William Allen, then ten years old. William Allen was born on October 9, 1869. After his brother's death, he was befriended by a man named Isaac Cook, who lived with the Engels family for several years. In 1891, he married Ola Mullins, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Cox) Mullins, who lived in the Cato Springs community to the east. After living in the family home about a year and, then in a small wood-frame house on a corner of the front yard, William Allen and his wife moved to a sixty-acre farm about a mile southeast of town. Their house was a modest log and wood-frame structure. The house and farm were purchased from Lem Allen, who was probably a descendant of William and Abraham Allen. The original 18' x 20' log building may have very well have been the home of the Allen brothers. In September of 1892, their first child, Garland Kinnibrugh, was born. A daughter, Irene was born in June of 1896. Soon, both children were attending the Cemetery Hill School in the neighborhood and assisting with the numerous chores on the farm. William Allen enjoyed farming and most of the crops known to the area were raised on his farm. Wheat was the cash crop. At harvest time, the wheat was cut and bound into sheaves with a binder drawn by horses. One man drove the horse, while two followed, setting up the bound sheaves to dry in shocks. Later, the dry sheaves were brought in from the fields by wagon to a steam-powered thresher, which had been rented from a neighbor and set up on the farm. Part of the grain was taken directly to the mill in Farmington and sold. The rest was stored in two granaries in the barn. Among other crops raised on the farm were corn, oats, barley, Irish and sweet potatoes, strawberries and apples. Hogs, chickens and a small quantity of beef and dairy products were raised for market and home use, and the farm maintained from two to four horses of good quality. William Allen's horses took several premiums in competition at the Washington County Fair over the years. During the summer, he operated a hay baler powered by horses on the farm. It is said he received $1.25 per ton for baling.

In August of 1905, another child, William Hugh was born. Shortly afterward, William Allen bought and took over the management of the Smith General Store, which was situated on the spring below the Engel's home in Farmington. For the next four years, William Allen managed the store while Garland maintained the family farm. At that time, the family lived in a large, yellow frame house on the main street in town. When William Allen sold the store in about 1910, he returned to his farm and built a two-story, seven-room frame house on the site of the original structure, hauling the construction lumber in horse-drawn wagons from Fayetteville.

In 1914, tragedy struck the household when typhoid fever, which had broken out in the area, was contacted by the family. At the same time, every member of the family except Garland was bedridden with the disease, and on December 1 of that year, William Allen died. He was forty-five.

The family's circumstances continued to change as Garland married soon afterward and moved to Texas, where he and his father-in-law, Nin White, leased a wheat farm of 160 acres. Irene married in 1917 and she and her husband, Arthur Stearns, lived on the farm until Ola remarried in 1921 and moved to Elm Springs. In the meantime, William Hugh graduated from the Farmington grade school and moved to Siloam Springs to attend high school at John Brown College. The house and farm were sold when Irene and her husband moved away permanently in 1927.

Garland returned from Texas after four years and started a dairy on sixty-seven acres purchased earlier by William Allen. He began by supplying the Fayetteville Ice Plant with the milk to make its ice cream. Later, the milk was delivered in bottles to homes and grocery stores throughout Fayetteville. The dairy had from forty to fifty cows and two silos for storing the silage made from chopped green corn plants. Garland operated "Engles' Dairy" for fourteen years.

Of the three children of William Allen and Ola, only Garland made his permanent home in Farmington. He and his wife, Artie Nell had one child, Irene Mildred.

Irene and Arthur Stearns had two children, William Arthur who was killed on a bomber mission in the Pacific in World War II, and Ola Adell. After living in Fayetteville for several years, the family settled in Oklahoma. Irene returned to Fayetteville when her husband died in 1950.

After graduating from John Brown College in 1923, William Hugh attended Hendrix College in Conway one or two terms, then transferred to the College of the Ozarks in Clarksville. There he met Robbie Bean, a native of Clarksville, whom he married in 1926. They made their home in Fayetteville for several years following the birth of their son, William Hugh, Jr., in 1929.

The youngest child of William Henry and Isabella was Bertha Kinnibrugh, who was born on October 4, 1872. She died on October 10, 1973 at the age of 101, and resided in her father's house throughout her life. She and her husband, William Albert Gaskill, a local carpenter, made their home there, remodeling the dining room and kitchen area, following their marriage in 1904. After the death of her husband in 1945, she lived alone in the house until her nieces, Beulah and Isabella Smith, came to live with her following their retirement in 1955. She remained mentally alert to the end of her life and would often share her recollections from childhood of the family home and neighborhood with her nieces and nephews.

Bertha Gaskill's long life and residence at the Engel's home probably account for the remarkable preservation of much of the 19th century decor of the house until the death of Beulah Smith - by then, its sole occupant - in 1984. Up to that time, the interior furnishings largely consisted of family treasures from the last century, such as the four-poster bed made by a cabinet-maker in Fayetteville as a wedding present from William Henry to Isabella, a table believed to have belonged to James and Jane Kinnibrugh before they left Virginia, a hand-woven basket given to the Kinnibrughs by a few late-comers on the Trail of Tears in return for food and shelter, an Eli Terry clock with wooden works - the only item of his father's property William Henry managed to bring back in his wagon on a return trip to Batesville forty years after coming to Washington County. The ancestral home itself, however, is still in the possession of the Engles family.

Joseph England was born June 15, 1791 in the state of Virginia to John England and Zipporah Choate. Joseph was mustered into service at Douglas Oliver's in Anderson County, Tennessee 1813 and was discharged there in 1814. March 1817, he married Malinda Lankford in Morgan County, Tennesse. They had ten children, Edward, born May 3, 1818; Rachel, born November 29, 1820; Ambers D., born June 28, 1821; Robert S., born June 23, 1823; Emley, born April 28, 1824, died September 1824; John William, born October 2, 1825; a son, born between 1825 and 1828, was not living in 1850; Sarah, born September 25, 1828; Horace H., born August 28, 1831; and Francis M., born June 13, 1835. 1830 found the family in Mercer County, Tennessee, and 1840 they had moved to McMinn County. In 1850 they were in Bradley County, where Joseph died in December 1858 or January 1859.

Edward, the eldest son, married a widow, Elizabeth Adeline Rutherford Owens on September 1, 1851. She was the daughter of John M. Rutherford and Elise Young, born March 26, 1814, in Tennessee. On June 15, 1852, Elizabeth gave birth to a daughter, Sarah Melvina and Matilda Mae was born November 8, 1856. Edward brought his wife and two small children to Arkansas and settled in northwest Arkansas near the Benton-Washington County line. On March 9, 1858, a son, Greenberry was born. When Greenberry was ten years old, his mother died and was buried at what is now called the Alton Cantrell Farm. Edward took another wife on February 9, 1873, Mary Randolph Benson, daughter of John Franklin and Pernetta Randolph, born 1844 in Tennessee. She brought with her a daughter, Mary Benson, by a previous marriage. They had three children, Mary Elizabeth "Lizzie", Millie and on May 17, 1879, William Edward was born. By this time Edward was 60 years old and he died in September 1891. He is buried in the Norwood Cemetery, Washington County, Arkansas.

Sarah Melvina married James H. Wingfield on February 10, 1869. They moved to Arizona and several of their descendants now populate that state. Matilda Mae attended the University of Arkansas and taught school in Washington County. She married John Franklin Randolph, a brother to her step-mother. They provided this County with most of the Randolph line here today.

Minnie E. "Carrigan" Estep

Philemon M., "The Elder" Carrigan and his wife, Elizabeth came from Ireland. Finally located for a while in Blount County, Tennessee, where James C. was born, January 10, 1831. In the 1850s, they came to Washington County, Arkansas.

James Henry (Jim) Estep and Minnie Emaline (Carrigan) Estep

"The Elder", was shot and killed, April, 1863, and is buried at White House Cemetery. Elizabeth died March 22, 1873, and is resting at Mount Salem Cemetery, near Durham, Arkansas.

James C. met Minerva Jane Hanna, and they were married on August 4, 1854, in Washington County. They had two sons, Samuel Philemon, born in 1855, and John William "Bill", born September 16, 1864. When "Bill" was five months old, his father was killed by bushwhackers, on February 19, 1865, during the Civil War, and was buried beside his father at White House Cemetery.

Minerva Jane married Daniel Ritter, November 3, 1867 and had six children by him. She hired a beautiful young lady to help with the chores and children. Her name was Susan Serina Frost. John William fell in love with young Susan when he was 18 years old. They were married January 11, 1881, in Washington County.

In the next seventeen years they were to have ten children. Their first child was Mary Adeline, born March 29, 1884. The second child, my grandmother, Minnie Emeline, born October 3, 1885, near Sulphur City, Arkansas. Next came Johnny M., born April 7, 1887, and he lived a short fifteen months. Nora Ellen was their fourth, born on December 3, 1888. James Henry came in the fifth slot on April 23, 1891. William Carles was sixth on January 20, 1893. Followed by Minerva Evaline, February 14, 1895, Lillie Beatrice, January 29, 1893, Silas Andrew, December 11, 1898 and Bessie Ann, November 4, 1901. All were born in Arkansas, except James Henry and Silas Andrew.

Granny Em, Minnie Emeline, married James Henry "Jim" Estep, July 2, 1906, at Fayetteville, Arkansas. Their first child, Johnie William, my father was born May 9, 1907. They came to the Little, Oklahoma area where their next child, James Lewis Carles Charlie, nicknamed "Ace", was born on April 21, 1909. Ace was named for four of his uncles, two of Em's brothers and both of Jim's. May 8, 1911, found them back in Arkansas, for their next child, Joseph Richard Andrew, nicknamed "Coot". They returned once more to Oklahoma, and had eight more children, while living on various share-cropping farms. Mandy Lee, May 6, 1913, Goldie Irene, September 27, 1915, Joel, born September 22, 1918. Buffalo Bill, September 14, 1920, Augusta, January 6, 1923, Ruby, February 22, 1925, Velma and Thelma, twins, July 4, 1928. Of the eleven children God gave them, they raised eight to be grown. They lost Joel at birth, Augusta lived forty-ones days and Ruby, with diptheria, at eight years of age. They are all buried at Little Cemetery, located 8 miles north of Seminole.

Jim and Em worked hard all their lives. Their love of our Lord, and faithful prayers helped them through many hardships and heartaches that came their way. They were good, honest, God fearing people, who raised one son, "Coot", to be a Penecostal Holiness Preacher, and "Ace" and Buffalo served in the Army during World War II.

Jim passed from this life, November 16, 1953, at Seminole, Oklahoma, at age 67 years. Em broke her hip, was in shock, not knowing anyone, which made it necessary for her to live in a nursing home in Seminole, where she passed away, March 22, 1975, at the age of 89 years.

Johnie Williams met Izetta Caldonia Butler, at a rodeo held at the farm of Thomas S. Lee, who was Izetta's grandfather.

They courted about six months, traveling by foot, on horseback and sometimes in Grandpa Jim's Model "A" Ford. They were married August 4, 1926, at the Wewoka County Court House, in Wewoka, Oklahoma. There were six children born of this union. Jimmie Elaine, born August 31, 1927, Betty Aliene, May 10, 1929, Leta June, December 29, 1934, Billy Rex, February 10, 1937, Lela Evelyn, November 20, 1938, and Janice Karen September 26, 1945.

Dad left this life, June 8, 1963, at the age 56 years and is at rest in Little Cemetery. He lived long enough to nickname seventeen, of his twenty-three grandchildren, and since his death, there has been twenty-eight great-grandchildren and one great-great-granddaughter added to the family, at the time of this writing.

Dad was a small man in body size but will always be a "giant" of a man to all of us left behind.

Dad, Grandpa and Granny will always live on in our hearts and in all the loving memories.

A "Carrigan" family history book is now being compiled, and we invite any family member interested in having one to get in touch with me.

Carl Ezell

This is the Ezells' story as far as I know it.

Carl and Veneda Ezell about 1937.

My husband's grandparents came to Washington County from Franklin, Tennessee, in the late 1880s. There were six children in their family. They were farmers, as were most people living there. The grandmother's family came also when the Ezells did, traveling by covered wagon. Their name was Cowan-most are now deceased. At one time one of the Cowans had a grist mill on a river at a place called Savoy. There was also a water wheel there. Over the years contact has been lost with the younger generation since none live in this area.

My name is Veneda Ezell. My family moved from Nashville, Arkansas to Fayetteville in November of 1929, to be near my father's sister. The trip took three days traveling in a Model T Ford truck with my two brothers and four sisters. Highway 71 from Fort Smith to Fayetteville was unpaved. The only paved roads in the area were in Fayetteville itself.

We had no idea where we could find work. Gas was being installed for the first time in Fayetteville, and my father and one brother got jobs helping lay the gas lines. One sister and myself obtained jobs in Ely Walker's garment factory. The winter turned out to be the coldest one on record with daytime temperature only a few degrees above zero and the nights 10 to 15 degrees below zero. Coal was our only heat source. From December through February the ground was not free of snow. On one of the coldest nights the temperature dropped to 30 degrees below zero and my dad remarked that he believed we had moved to the north pole.

We lived in Fayetteville for two years, then moved about 20 miles west of town near Prairie Grove. We lived in that part of Washington County for four years until I married in 1934.

The family scattered-one sister in Los Angeles, California; one sister in Louisiana; one in Rogers, Arkansas; one sister and two brothers in Oklahoma (the brothers operated a dairy farm). Only three of us married. After I married, my husband and I, in partnership with his father, bought and operated a fruit farm north of Lincoln, Arkansas. Wood was the only fuel supply until 1938 when electricity came to our part of the county. We were one of the four families that would take the electricity as others thought it was too expensive, but it wasn't long until others followed.

My husband died in 1978. I still live on the same farm which is operated as a dairy farm by my son. I have a daughter living in Missouri.

Rayford Faires

The Faires family first moved to Washington County in December, 1971. Rayford P. Faires, a native Arkansan, had always told his family that when he retired from the United States Air Force they would settle in Fayetteville.

A 1969 Dodge van would carry him and his wife, Myrna Beth, and their six children: Timothy, Richard, Paula, Brenda, Douglas and Rebecca, from Rantoul, Illinois to live with Mrs. Odessa Faye Seals. Mrs. Seals was Beth's mother and had settled herself in the Ozarks just a few years previous, in a three bedroom bungalow on Kelly Street.

Shortly after moving they rented a house on California Blvd., directly across from the Fayetteville Youth Center. Ray enrolled in the University of Arkansas to major in education, and maintained his profession as a Church of Christ minister. Beth began building clientele to reward her talent as a seamstress and the children became involved in Bates Elementary School, Ramey Jr. High and Fayetteville High School activities. The roots began to sink when they purchased a home on Winwood Drive, which they still own.

Once the Faires family settled in, very few of them left the area. Ray teaches social studies at Elkins High School. Beth operates a day care center in home and is known to many children young and old as "Grandma Beth". Tim bravely fought cancer for six years before his death in 1973, Rick graduated from the University of Arkansas with a degree in Real Estate and married a local sweetheart, Jean Ann Killian. They moved north to Springdale, where he is a real estate appraiser, and settled on Peaceful Valley Street to raise their three sons, Timothy, Daniel and Benjamin. Paula married a local boy named Roger O'Mara.

They had one son, Christopher. She has since moved to Vermont. Brenda has a son named Derek and works for Tyson Foods. Doug graduated from the University of Arkansas with a degree in Agriculture and teaches VoAg in Decatur, Arkansas. Becky has two children, Candice and Ryan and is married to Don Glover. They lived on Mineral Springs Road out of West Fork. Becky also works for Tyson Foods.

In the Ozarks, you're still considered a foreigner until you've lived here at least 50 years, but this Faires Family definitely calls Washington County—HOME!!

Joseph Holmes Fallin

Legend has it that the Fallins came from County Roscommon, Ireland in the mid 1600s to Virginia finally settling in what became Halifax County. Joseph Holmes Fallin (1790-1863) married Martha (Mills) Ham (1793-1863) in 1825 and their son Robert Redmond was born there. Other children were Emily, James, Joseph Holmes Jr., Thomas and Albert.

My dad: Robert E. Fallin, age 21 (1903).

In the mid 1830s the family moved west to Maury County, Tennessee (Natchez Trace country). It was here that Robert married Nancy Delitha Cole (1826-1906) in 1849. They came to Arkansas by boat going up the Arkansas River to Van Buren, walked across the mountains to Cane Hill in the beautiful Ozarks. Their first child Mary Emily (1850-1926) was born soon after. Five more children followed: Holmes Lafayette (1852-1928), Theodocia Virginia (1853-1941), Joseph Anthony (1855-1938) - my grandfather from whom I am named, Elizabeth).

Grandfather Joseph Anthony Fallin married Sephronia Combs (1854-1924) 11 November 1880 and they had six children my father being the oldest: Robert Eber Fallin (1882-1955), Wilburn Claude (1883-1954), Charles Albert (1886-1934), Emma Caldonia (1890-1911), Gertrude Audrey (1893-1974) and Joel Holmes (1896-1971). My very dear Aunt Gertrude was the last to pass on (Tulsa, Oklahoma).

Marriages: Robert married Alma Simpson (1885-1966) in 1906, Wilburn married Bethel Leona Phelan (1887-1963) in 1903, Charlie married Anettie Martin (1889-1931) in 1907, Gertrude married Stuart Monroe Cook (1886-1968) in 1915 (I remember it clearly), and Joel married Lola O. Phillips ( ) in 1922.

Joseph Anthony Fallin, II and wife, Jean (Netherlin) Fallin.

On porch: Great Grandmother Pernetty (Bloyed) Combs, Robert Eber Fallin (my dad), Alma (Simpson) Fallin (my mother), Gertrude (Audrey) Fallin later Mrs. S. M. Cook, Wilburn Claude Fallin, Leona Bethel (Phelan) Fallin. Seated on porch: Joel Holmes Fallin later the husband of Lola O. Phillips, Emma Caldonia (Fallin) Algire with daughter Mary Sephronia (later Mrs. Wm. L. Ground level: Joseph Anthony Fallin II, Grandmother Sephronia (Combs) Fallin, Harold Albert Fallin, Grandfather Joseph Anthony Fallin and Raymond Harry Fallin. 10 December 1986. Two still living Louise Sephronia and Joseph Anothony Fallin, II.

Alma (Simpson) Fallin - Joseph Anthony Fallin II - Robert Eber Fallin. San Francisco, California about December 1907.

My mother and dad moved to San Francisco in 1907, a year after the BIG earthquake, and I was born there June 30th an only child of my parents. I was premature and all three of us had smallpox. I have been extremely fortunate - having spent no time in a hospital as a patient. I am very thankful, having reached the age of 39 for the 41st time (79).

We moved back to Fayetteville in 1910 - Halley's Comet was in the sky and Mark Twain passed away that year. Dad and Uncle Charlie owned the Cardinal Confectionery second store east of the Frisco station for a few years. Uncle Wilburn farmed. Grandad Joe was in real estate for many years and a short street, on Mt. Sequoia, is named for him. Close by was the Big Spring park where many family picnics were enjoyed. In 1910 Grandad bought the "big house" on east Mountain south across from the Confederate Cemetery. Mother, Dad and I moved there from another address on Rock Street near the Town Square and then on to Spring Street a few blocks west of the Big Spring. In 1913 Great Aunt Docia Blackmer enrolled my cousin Virginia Murtha and myself in Mrs. Anna (Putman) King's first grade class. I learned many years later that Mrs. King had been the first women to graduate from the University of Arkansas. Second grade was taught by Miss Jackson and third by Mrs. Morrow.

Spring of 1916 we sold our house, auctioned off our belongings at northwest corner of the square, sold old Jersey and caught a train for Petrolia, Texas where Dad had traded for two store buildings. He refurbished one of them installing a cafe and candy kitchen. Petrolia was the site for Texas' first gas well (1907). Pancho Villa was running rampant along the border at this time.

In 1917, as we were getting into World War 1, we moved to nearby Wichita Falls and the name Petrolia became prophetic for Dad and I would spend most of our working days in the "oil patch". He "witched" for oil and gas with an instrument of his own invention and I would work as a field hand, geologist and geophysicist (doodle-bugger).

We made trips back to Fayetteville at Christmastime and during summer vacations, always enjoyable.

Through the years I have made over 100 moves working in Texas, Florida, Louisiana, New Mexico where I met my wife (1934) - we are now on our second fifty, Mississippi, Alabama, Oklahoma and Kansas.

We have two married daughters with children and grandchildren and one son (a geologist) who is not married. Most of the past forty years have been spent in McAllen, Texas on the Mexican border - truly the Magic Valley.

On the last visit to Fayetteville (1974) I got in a very nice visit with my cousin Bernice Karnes, and with my cousin George Bond's widow Mary Bond. Bless their memories. I will always think of Washington County as a beautiful land with beautiful people. Most of my dear ones are buried there. My beloved mother and her twin, dear Aunt Amy Kelly are buried here.

Dad's racehorse coming in last at the fair, Dr. Ellis's daughters, Hadden Humphries, the Johnson sisters and the Harbinson twins living across the street from our house, Easter egg hunts at "Uncle Ben" Davidson's place, beautiful Irene Gollihar, being late for school with tears in my eyes and being consoled by dear Uncle Dick Blackmer, the Jarman family, Barr's open air theater, selling Curtis publications and hearing Captain Von Berg blow taps on his bugle each night at nine o'clock.

James Edward Farish

James Edward Farish was born March 29, 1864 in Noxapater, Mississippi, to Robert Albert and Eliza Edwards Farish. When he was six years old, he and his family including brother, Eugene, William and Robert and sisters, Ida and Lela, left Mississippi. They crossed the Mississippi River at Fryer's Point and came overland by wagon and horses to Washington County where they first settled a few miles east of Fayetteville on Highway 16. In 1889, the family bought the Pearson farm in the Stony Point Community, southwest of Springdale.

On June 5, 1893 Ed married Emma Dean Mount, daughter of John Isham and Catherine Elizabeth Barnett Mount. They moved to a small house on the southwest part of the acreage near the big spring, from which Wildcat Creek heads. It was here that their five children, Ada, Carrie, Tom, Jewell and Hunter were born. By 1905, a new home up on top of the hill, overlooking the spring had been completed and the family moved to it, where they lived until 1926.

Ada, the oldest daughter, born October 24, 1893, was married to Roy H. Craig, November 1918 at Springdale. They had three children, Edward Lee, born July 13, 1919; Robert, born August 11, 1921 and Ida Lane, born November 30, 1927.

Carrie, who was born March 22, 1895, married Glenn M. Sutton November 22, 1919 at Springdale. They had four children: Glenadene, born February 19, 1923; Leland Leroy, born November 3, 1927; Wilma Sue, born January 21, 1933 and Carol Jewell, born Janaury 16, 1939.

Thomas William, the oldest son, was born July 3, 1897. He was married to Elizabeth M. Hanks of Johnson, July 3, 1921 at Springdale. Their children included Maudine, born April 4, 1923 and Thomas Marion, born February 26, 1927.

Ida Jewell, who was born February 4, 1899, was married to Charles Lee Diven, December 24, 1919 at Springdale. They had three sons, Farish Lee, born October 11, 1920; Thomas Hill, born April 13, 1922 and Charles Hunter, born February 4, 1929.

Edward Hunter, the baby of the family, was born October 26, 1903. On December 11, 1926, he married Ila M. Sims. Their only child, Mary Lou was born September 18, 1927.

Emma Dean died in February 1924 and Ed and his brother, William, who had remained a bachelor and had lived with Ed and Emma, continued to engage in raising stock, including horses, donkeys and cattle until William's death in January 1934. After his family was gone from the home, he spent his last years, visiting his children in northwest Arkansas, and traveling with his friend, Louie Pierce, to California where he visited a daughter, Ada (Mrs. Roy) Craig and family in Ontario. He died November 8, 1949 in Ontario, where he had been for about a year.

Maudine Farish

Thomas William Farish

Thomas William Farish, was born July 3, 1897 southwest of Springdale, the son of James Edward and Emma Dean Mount Farish. He attended Stony Point and Steele schools when he was a youngster and served in the U. S. Army during World War I, and farmed on his father's large farm during his young adult years.

On July 3, 1921, he married a young school teacher, Elizabeth M. Hanks, the daughter of Nathan Virgil and Maud Mason Hanks of Johnson. They were married by Reverend E. W. Faulkner in the parsonage of the First Methodist Church in Springdale.

They built a new home on a forty acre tract, south of his home place, on the road from Stony Point to Steele, and moved into it November 5, 1921. Here they had an apple orchard, concord grape vineyard, cherry orchard, strawberry patch and raised crops of vegetables, such as beans, corn and tomatoes.

Their children included a daughter, Maudine Elizabeth, born April 4, 1923 and a son, Thomas Marion, born February 26, 1927.

In 1930 Tom built a small canning factory and canned tomatoes for two years, after which, he and his lifelong friend, Joe M. Steele bought a small factory at Spring Creek, which he operated in 1933 and 1934. In 1935 they were able to buy the lot in Lowell where another factory had burned down two years before, and they built the Lowell Canning Factory. Due to the terribly cold winter in 1935, cement had to be torn out numbers of times and replaced, making construction very slow. However, in the fall of 1936 the first runs were made. In addition to this plant, they acquired and managed plants at Rogers, Stilwell, Oklahoma, and Rusk, Texas.

The family moved to Lowell in November 1935. In 1937 Tom was elected Mayor of Lowell, a title he held until his unexpected death from a heart attack, August 12, 1946.

Marion Farish

Thomas William Farish

Marion married Elaine Downum, a daughter of Ned and Rose Loyd Downum, June 5, 1948 at Lowell. Joseph Lawrence Ferguson

The second child of Robert Francis and Mary Frances Bledsoe Ferguson was Joseph Lawrence, born March 11, 1886 Washington County, Arkansas, died March 8, 1958 at Fayetteville, Arkansas. Buried Round Mountain Cemetery about 8 miles east of Fayetteville. He left home at Round Mountain Community about 1906 to go to Chouteau, Oklahoma, which was not a state at that time. It was still called Indian Territory. He had some aunts and uncles that lived there, so went to work for them on their farms. He helped in the corn, and cut and baled hay, then hauled it in to shelter. He met Carrie Mae King while there. She was the daughter of Jesse and Jennie McDaniel King, born May 26, 1887 at Chouteau, Oklahoma, died February 17, 1961 at Fayetteville. Buried Round Mountain Cemetery. At first Jess King didn't think much of Lawrence, but soon came to like him. On one occasion when Lawrence went to see Carrie, a blizzard came up and Mr. King went out and turned Lawrence's horse loose. He had quite a time finding his horse and getting back home, but it didn't deter him from courting Carrie. They were eventually married October 13, 1908 at Claremore, Oklahoma with Jess King's blessings.

Lawrence and Carrie Ferguson. Taken February 7, 1958.

They had to live with relatives for awhile but had their own place close to Inola, Oklahoma by January 1, 1909. They farmed for awhile and had a cow for their milk and butter. They raised some hogs and told about cooking corn for them. They had twin daughters who were stillborn December 9, 1909, and Carrie almost died. They are buried at Chouteau, Oklahoma.

Later they moved back to Round Mountain where their next child, Lydia Evelyn, was born June 27, 1912. They were glad to be near Lawrence's mother, Molly, in case of complications again. Molly was a mid-wife and quite a good doctor. Their next daughter, Lavenia Lois, was born in Inola, Oklahoma, September 3, 1914.

Late in the year of 1915, his brother and wife, Cicero and Pearl, his uncle and aunt, Will and Emaline Howard, and Lawrence and Carrie decided to sell out and all go to Montana and homestead some land. They called Emaline "Aunt Sis". They had an auction sale January 4, 1916, and left shortly after that. They went by train to Glasgow, Montana, then by sled to their destination. They had an experienced driver but somehow turned over in a big snowbank. Lydia, who was only 4-1/2 years old, landed on the bottom of her father on top of her, and others on top of him. Somehow he held himself up so she didn't get smashed, but they were all about frozen. Uncle Will and Aunt Sis and some of their children, who were grown, did stay and homesteaded land, but the rest decided it was just too cold up there, so went back to Oklahoma. Lawrence and Cicero were both doing more carpenter work than farming by this time. While they were in Montana, Vinnie got Diptheria and they had to take her by sled to town to the doctor. Lawrence's cousin, George and Cora Williams, lost a child to Diptheria the same time, luckily Vinnie got over it. George was the son of Aunt Sis by her first marriage. He and Cora had already homesteaded land in Montana when the rest went up there.

Their next daughter, Linnie Jennie Frances, was born May 23, 1917. Linnie became ill and the doctor treated her for something other than measles, which is what she had. Her grandmother, Molly, advised them she had measles and the doctor's treatment went against the disease. She died June 18, 1918 and is buried at Inola, Oklahoma. When she died, the measles popped out and are evident in a picture taken of her. She was a blonde haired, blue eyed, and fair complexioned little girl, taking after her Grandpa King's side of the family. The rest of the children are brown eyed, dark haired, and with darker complexion, showing the Indian blood which is on both sides of Lawrence's parents and on Carrie's mother's side. Carrie's grandfather, James McDaniel, was a Captain in The Indian Brigade during the Civil War, and her grandmother, Abagail McDaniel, was full blood Cherokee.

In 1918, Lawrence's parents decided to build a new house so they moved back to Round Mountain as Lawrence had become an excellent carpenter and was to build the new home. Before the house was finished, the flu epidemic of 1918 broke out. All in the family were sick at the same time. No one was able to care for anyone else. Robert, Molly and Lydia had light cases, but the rest were pretty sick. Luckily, none of them died, as dozens in the area did.

They were back in Oilton, Oklahoma by the time the next daughter was born. Oleeta Lavere was born November 15, 1919. The family traveled around a lot, going where there was carpenter work to be done. They were back at Round Mountain before Wilma Alberta was born, May 17, 1922. With the older girls in school, they settled at Round Mountain, renting the old Toliver place. Lydia and Vinnie started school the same year. There were still work trips out of state, but most of the rest of their lives Lawrence and Carrie lived in the Fayetteville area. They finally got their son, Robert Jesse, born August 22, 1922. He was named after both grandfathers, and called R. J.

There are a lot of houses in and around Fayetteville built by Lawrence and Cicero and their sons. Cicero had five sons, and some of them are excellent carpenters. Two of them, Preston and Francis Paul, are still in the business. Also R. J. and one of his sons, Randy.

When World War II broke out, R. J. was drafted into the service and served in Italy and other places. Wilma was in Fullerton, California living with Lydia and Jack Johnson.

In 1942, Lawrence and Carrie's home at Round Mountain burned, devouring almost all their possessions. When the war broke out, Lydia and Jack went back to Arkansas and hadn't gotten a place yet, so all they owned was also in the house. After that, Lydia and Jack went back to California which is when Jack went to work for Douglas Aircraft. Wilma went out there a short time later and also went to work at Douglas Aircraft. So many were quitting their jobs and moving east, the government "froze" everyone to their jobs in defense work, making it unlawful to quit until after the war. Lawrence and Carrie also went to California when Wilma did, but didn't stay long. They went back to Round Mountain and bought a place. After the war, when R. J. came home, he and Lawrence built a new house. A few years later they sold that place and bought another west of Fayetteville near Farmington. On February 12, 1958 that house burned. Lawrence was caught inside, but finally dived out a window, cutting himself severely. He died as a result of the terrible burns he received March 8, 1958, just three days before his 72nd birthday. They would have been married 50 years October 13, 1958. Children and families:

Joseph W. Ferguson

Born - Shelby County, Illinois. October 25, 1849, died Goshen, Arkansas, August 22, 1922. Dorcas Isabella Hammersly, born Shelby County, Illinois, December 9, 1846. Died Goshen, Arkansas, December 7, 1930.

Joseph (Jody) Ferguson came to Washington County Arkansas with Dorcas, his wife and their children, Westwood and James, in the spring of 1871. They traveled in a covered wagon in the company of Jody's father and mother, Westwood and Sarah Baker Ferguson and Jody's brothers and sisters. Also was Isaac Baker, Sarah Ann's brother and his family. They came looking for cheap land to improve and sell at a profit.

After a few years the Bakers and some of Westwood's children returned to Illinois. Others married in Arkansas and moved to Oklahoma and Texas. Westwood went to Missouri. Two of his children married and reared their families near Joplin, Missouri. Jody intended to return to Illinois but when the others went he did not have enough money to make the trip. He worked as a hired hand and lived on rented farms. When Lilly was a walking baby they went south to pick cotton. In 1883 he bought the farm north of Sander's Mill in Richland Creek, from Uncle Billy Hughes for $1500, every cent on credit. He paid for it in five years.

They planted a big vegetable garden. The girls had a flower garden. Grandmother Dorcas was a flower lover who carefully tended her potted plants through the cold months. Jody planted apples and built an apple dryer. He sold fresh apples too, hauling them by wagon and team nearly twenty miles to Fayetteville. He had plenty of family help to do this.

In the fields they grew hay and grain for the live stock and sorghum cane for molasses. Their flour and meal was ground at Sander's Mill. Hogs were butchered and the meat cured. Eggs, butter and milk came from the barnyard animals. They spun wool and cotton for clothes. Geese were plucked for feather beds. The woods were full of squirrels and wild turkeys. They wasted nothing, even turkey wings made wonderful fans.

After the hard years of getting a start, they had enough and some to spare. Folks say Jody was generous to those in need. About 1903 they built a two story weather board house with upper and lower porches across the front. What a relief after living in a two room log cabin.

Jody and Dorcas became the parents of eleven children. Son James, 13 years, was the first to die from measles in 1883. Westwood, their first born, in 1885, died from an injury suffered while chasing hogs, at 17 years. They lost a three year old child, Joe, in 1893. Twenty five year old Lilly died from Typhoid in 1900. Lucy died from tuberculosis in 1917. Of the remaining children only four reared families, Josephine did not marry and Isaac had no children. "Talk about the good old days".

Walter married Cora Lawson. Their children Nola, Lucy, Mae, James, Luthur, Joe, Mary, Paul, Avis and Isaac.

Rachel married Samuel Buchanan. Their children are, Homer, Irene, Ernest, Augustus (Gus), Lawton, Fulton, Clemma and Marie.

David William married Isabella Buchanan. Their children Edna and Hazel.

Harve Lee married Lula Pearl Trammel, the daughter of Edward Clint and Viola Clark Trammel. She is descended from Alvin Hash, Garrard Trammel, and Solomon Tuttle, all settlers in Washington County before 1836. Their children, Nina, did not marry and Joseph Clint, born January 28, 1916.

Joseph Clint Ferguson married Mayme Mayes. Their children are Janis, who married Buddy Johnson and they one girl, Lorna May.

Lee Hulen married Anna Pray (adopted) had one boy, Daniel Jason Ferguson. Second marriage to Bonnie Carter. Adopted her son Glenn Upshaw.

This family had fine singing voices. They had wonderful times on Sunday afternoons when the neighbors gathered with them around the old pump organ. My father was full of rhymes and parts of songs he remembered. He was also full of superstitions. They brought their superstitions with them from Illinois in 1871. My mother's family came to Arkansas much earlier, they had very few.

Robert Ferguson

Robert Francis Ferguson was born 11 June 1862 in Peoria, Illinois. His mother was Sarah Elizabeth Ferguson, daughter of Westwood and Sarah Ann "Sally" Baker Ferguson.

The Ferguson family came to Washington County, Arkansas, in the spring of 1871 in covered wagons along with some of the Baker families. They stayed about six years, then most of the family went back to Illinois. Westwood's family went to Joplin, Missouri. They were living at Grangeville, Newton County, Missouri near Joplin, when Robert came back to Arkansas to marry Mary Frances "Molly" Bledsoe, daughter of James and Sarah Elizabeth Mhoon Bledsoe. It is not certain when they met. They were married 7 February 1884 in Washington County, Arkansas by Marshal M. Ennis. Molly was born 3 January 1864, in Washington County, Arkansas. They moved in with Molly's mother after the drowning of her father, to help run the farm. The farm produced corn, oats, and wheat. They raised hogs for meat as well as to sell, ducks and geese, using the feathers for beds and pillows. There were cows for milk and butter, chickens for eggs and eating. They had various fruit trees, blackberries and dewberries.

Robert was a serious minded person with extremely high standards both morally and spiritually, being a devout Christian. They and the children attended church almost every Sunday at Baldwin Church of Christ, riding the four miles or so in a wagon. They lived on the farm till 1895, when they went to Texas near Sherman by wagon. The trip took about 2 weeks. Finding they couldn't make a better living in Texas, they returned to the farm at Round Mountain east of Fayetteville, Arkansas, in the spring of 1899. Shortly afterward, they purchased the Round Mountain store with five acres. Needing more space they built a new store and living quarters. A post office, called Sydenhem, was established and kept by them in the store for a few years, then it moved. They purchased another store located at Meguire Town. Their son, Lawrence, and wife Carrie, operated this store but it soon proved unprofitable because of other stores nearby, so they closed it. They kept the other store until late 1914, when they sold it to daughter Mattie and husband Denver Hale. They had bought the Bledsoe farm about 1908, so moved back to it after they sold the store. They agreed to pay Mrs. Bledsoe a certain percent of all income from the farm as long as she lived, as part payment for the place.

Molly was a very industrious person with a lot of natural abilities. She could do about anything she set her mind to. She had decided to become a nurse by working with doctors. She became very good at it, and was soon being called on often to attend the sick or deliver a baby. She always went, day or night, often having to stay a couple of days. Of course her only mode of travel was horseback or buggy. A lot of babies were delivered by her.

Robert and Molly built a new house in 1918. Their oldest son, Lawrence, being a carpenter, brought his family from Inola, Oklahoma, and he built it.

Molly had lost one eye when she was 11 years old and eventually she got a cataract on her good eye. It was several years before it was ready for surgery. She was almost totally blind most of the time. When she finally had the surgery, it was a complete success. They were overjoyed.

Robert died 20 July 1927 from Bright's disease. Molly stayed on at the home place, often having a grandchild live with her and go to school. Molly died 7 July 1942 at the home of her son, Westwood.

Children of Robert and Molly are:

Westwood Ferguson

The name Ferguson, probably had its origin in England and was called Fergus. When the family moved to Scotland, the name was changed to O'Fergus. As they migrated to Ireland the name was changed to Fergusson or Ferguson, meaning the sons of Fergus. Ireland Census 1659, Selgoe County, Town of Cloughfin, John Ferguson, 8 in family.

From the Ohio records, History of the Blackburn family. Anthony Blackburn was born in Ireland, 1730 and died 1802. His wife's name was Deborah. Their children were: William, Eleanor, John, Joseph, Leonard and Margaret.

John Ferguson married Deborah Blackburn in 1788. He died in 1794. They had two children, John and Jehu. John married a half-cherokee woman, Elizabeth Dillon, Madison County, Kentucky, May 1811. To them were born Westwood, May 30, 1823. John Dodson (Dobson?) maybe others. They were living in North Carolina at this time. Westwood left home when he was twelve years old and never lived with his parents again. 1859 census, Shelby County, Illinois. Westwood Ferguson, age 26, born North Carolina. Their children John age 7, William (probably David or Thomas with William as part of his name), Sarah 3, and Joseph age 1.

John Ashley Baker had two brothers, Jessie and Isaac. They were the sons of Joseph Baker born 1782 and died February 23, 1865. Joseph Baker, John Ashley and his wife are buried in the Coon Cemetery, Shelby County, Big Springs Township, Illinois.

Westwood owned land in Illinois but decided to sell it go west and buy more of the cheaper land, improve it, sell it and get rich. He came to Washington County, Arkansas later moved to near Joplin, Missouri. He failed to get rich either place.

Westwood and Sarah Ann undoubtly had all of their children before leaving Illinois. A nine year old son, John, died in Illinois. The children who came were Sarah (Lady), Joseph (Jody), Arminda, Lucinda, Patience, Thomas, David, Mary Jane, Albert. Joseph had married Dorcas Hammersley. They had two children when they came to Arkansas. Lady also had a child, Robert Ferguson.

It is uncertain how many years they lived in Arkansas at this time. Isaac Baker, Sarah Ann's brother and his family came with them. They and Lucinda, who married Robert Abercrombie and Mary Jane, who married Hi Storm stayed about five years and returned to Sullivan, Illinois where they reared their families. Descendants still live there.

Patience married Stephen Enyart and Sarah (Lady) married John Curry. They lived near Richland View, Arkansas, Washington County. Later they went to Oklahoma, the Curry's to Hollis and the Enyarts to Sayre. Thomas reared his family in Victoria, Texas and David went to west Texas. Jody and Dorcas remained at Richland View, and died at Goshen a few miles away.

It is unknown when Westwood went to Joplin, Missouri. He lived in the vicinity a long time. His daughter Arminda married Robert Corby and lived near Neosho, Missouri. Albert also reared his family in Missouri. Sarah Ann died in Missouri ca. 1891. Westwood married again, a woman named Martha. After she died, when he was old, he came to live with his son Jody.

One of his great granddaughters, Lucy Ferguson tells about him talking incessantly about Martha. He said, "The doctor killed Martha, he gave her some little pink pills and they were strychnine." He died October 12, 1912 at 89 years of age.

Arthur Fields

James Arthur Fields and Sarah Kathern Allred were married on March 7, 1909 at Leeann, Missouri. They had eight children. I was the second oldest.

My dad was a part-time miner, a part-time preacher and a part-time farmer. The first few years of his adult life, he worked in the mines at Joplin, Missouri and Pitcher, Oklahoma. In November of 1918, he and Mom decided to move to Arkansas. We traveled in a covered wagon pulled by a team of mules. We were five days traveling the sixty five miles from McDowell, Missouri to Wheeler, Arkansas. We had a coop of chickens tied to the back of the wagon. My pet pig was in the coop with the chickens which drew a lot of laughs and comments in every town through which we passed. We stopped and spent some time at the Elkhorn Tavern which was quite a treat. As we passed a farm house, a lady ran out screaming. Dad thought something was wrong and stopped. She said the war was over and her husband was coming home.

We settled one and one half miles from Wheeler on forty acres of flint rocks which were covered with trees, hazelnut bushes and copperhead snakes. There were four children in the family when we left Missouri. Four more were born in Arkansas. The four older kids went to school at Sycamore School which was near Wheeler. My teachers were Abby Dalton, Noah Lowe, Lee Hughes, P. C. Morgan and Harvey Johnson.

We always grew most of our food. There were lots of apples grown in the area. Mom canned our fruits and vegetables. Dad farmed in the summer and fired an apple dryer for Bill McCamey, at Harmon community, in the fall. Mom worked at the canning factory in Wheeler which was owned by B. A. Rudolph. They canned beans and tomatoes every year. We farmed the flint rocks for eight years then moved to Viney Grove which is three miles north of Prairie Grove.

We seemed to have the wanderlust because four years later, we moved to Greenland. We lived in that area until 1939 when Dad, Mom and the five kids which were yet at home moved to Springdale. Dad worked in orchards and vineyards until his retirement about 1950. When World War II came along, one son went into the Army and one went into the Navy. Dad tried to enlist, but he was too old. Dad continued preaching as long as he was active. When he could preach no longer, he stood at the door of his church each Sunday morning and greeted everyone as they arrived.

Dad and Mom continued to grow their garden and Mom continued to can her fruits and vegetables as long as she was active. In 1947, they built a little house at 504 Mountain View Street in Springdale. Mom spent her last years visiting her neighbors and rocking to and fro in her old rocking chair. Dad spent most of his last years downtown visiting with friends and entertaining the kids. He played Santa Claus several years. All the kids loved him. The last few years of their lives, Mom and Dad were known as Mom and Pop Fields. On October 14, 1960 Pop passed away. Mom continued living in the house on Mountain View until April 2, 1972. On a bright Easter morning, she rejoined Pop. They are buried in Bluff Cemetery in Springdale.

The children of Arthur and Katy Fields are: Irene Russell - Sumner, Washington - deceased, Willis Fields - 822 Garland Avenue, Fayetteville, Arkansas 72701, Sylvia Neu - Route 4, Box 225, Fayetteville, Arkansas 72701, Efton Fields - 303 South Western Avenue, Wenatchee, Washington 98801, Eugene Fields - 208 West Edson Avenue, Sunnyside, Washington 98944, Wayne Fields - 606 Velma Street, Grandview, Washington 98930, Dale Fields - Sand Point, Idaho - deceased and Lawanda Fulfer - Route 1, Box 111, Springdale, Arkansas 72764.

On August 27, 1933, Ira Willis Fields and Bernice Mae Woods were married at Fayetteville. At the time, I was working at Cooks Apple Orchard at Cato Springs, which is five miles southwest of Fayetteville. I was working ten hours per day for seventy-five cents. I later worked for Dr. G. W. Wilson at Greenland for one dollar per day.

In April 1941, I went to work at the University of Arkansas. In September, 1942, we went to Tacoma, Washington and spent the war years working in the shipyards. In 1945, we came back to Fayetteville and I went back to my old job at the University of Arkansas. I worked there until my retirement, June 30, 1983. I worked as a carpenter and locksmith at the University of Arkansas.

Through the depression years of the thirties, we raised a garden every year and kept a milk cow. At times, our meager income wasn't enough to sustain us, but Bernice and I worked together and kept our faith in God.

We gave our children what education we could. Lela Mae is a computer programmer, Learthur is an electrical contractor, and Mildred Elaine is a PBX operator.

Willis Fields died July 30, 1987 before publication of this book.

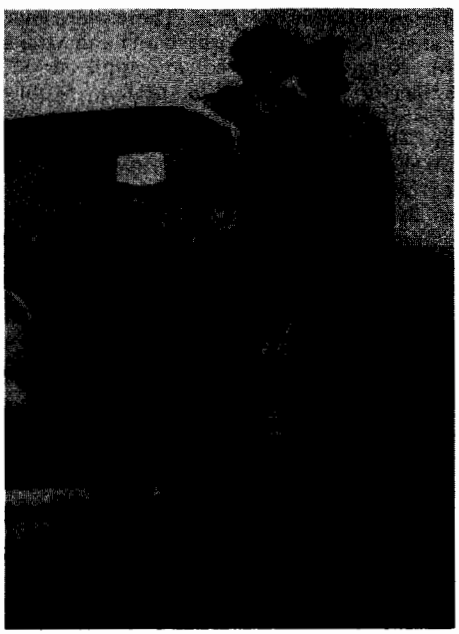
William J. Fields

Virginia Louise Elliott born to Leslie Garnet Elliott and Roberta Cecily (Wilson) January 24, 1928 in Whittier, California. We moved back to Baldwin, Arkansas in the year 1930. We lived on Bear Mountain until I was married. Our family made a brief trip back to California to Long Beach in 1936 after six months we came back to Bear Mountain at Baldwin.



Virginia and Bill Fields, 1946

I went to Baldwin at the two room school for eight years. Walking to and from school each day. Then entered University High School at Fayetteville in 1943. We rode in a home made school bus we had to walk a mile and a half to catch our school bus ride.

In 1944 World War II was raging and we had army maneuvers driving through our part of the county often. All or most of the young men were already away in the service in our community. We had about eight to ten girls that were friends in our area.

My best friend Rosie (Rogers) Pascal lived on the main highway sixteen east where these army maneuvers were passing by. One Saturday evening Rosie and Aunt Ida Roberts were sitting on the front porch and here come a big line of Army trucks, Jeeps and so forth. These soldiers started yelling, "Hi Mom, Hi Sis," and began to throw out little pieces of paper to them. After the maneuvers moved on Aunt Ida and Rosie went out and picked up all the pieces of papers. The papers had names and addresses on them. Rosie took all these addresses and put them in her purse. Meanwhile, I was on my way to Rosie's to spend the night. I had seen these soldiers at the end of the road at the Baldwin Store. So I slowed down and waited until they moved on before going on down to Rosie's. I spent the night with Rosie and she never did say a word about the addresses to me on Saturday night. The next day at church across the street, all of the community girls gathered as usual. Rosie informed us she had something in her purse for each of us but we couldn't have it until after church. Since I was her best friend, I asked if I could have mine now? She said no, I was to wait just like all the rest. After church Rosie told us eight to ten girls to line up. I was first 'cause I was her best friend. I reached in the purse and got this slip of paper and it read Robert B. Findley. There was a slip of paper for each of the girls to write. This was in the middle of 1944. I waited a couple of weeks to write. I told Rosie this guy was probably married and had a family. I really didn't know what to write. She gave me a tablet and pen and said to write what she told me to. Then she would mail the letter. I wrote and told how old I was, in high school and other activities.

Two weeks later, here came the letter from William J. Fields. As I thought Robert Findley was married. Bill's Company had bet each other ten dollars to see who could get the most letters, when they arrived back at Camp Robinson, at Little Rock, Arkansas. When these soldiers arrived back at camp after maneuvers there were three mailbags of letters. The guy that handed out the mail said, "I will dump these bags and you all sort your own mail." At several places they stopped during maneuvers they had thrown out their addresses.

William J. (Bill) Findley was his army buddy and my letter was on the top of Findley's pile of letters and it came sliding over towards Bill's pile of letters, so he picked it up to hand it back to Findley and noticed the name Elliott. He asked Robert if he was planning to write any of these girls? Rob answered that no he was married with two children and he was just trying to win the ten dollar bet. Bill asked him if he could have the letter because his mailman in Waynesburg, Kentucky's name was Elliott. He wondered if somehow the Elliott families might be related.

August 7, 1944 I got my first letter he had volunteered for the Army six weeks earlier. When they got back to camp in Little Rock they were shipped out to Camp Pickett, Virginia. He got a delay in route to visit his parents in Kentucky. He thought he might get a furlough, some did but his was cancelled. So they were headed for overseas (Europe). If he had gotten leave his plans were to come to Arkansas. He was shipped to England and then was in the army until March 28, 1946. He was wounded severely at the Battle of the Bulge. He was in the hospital in Paris, France. I kept writing to him, but no letters came. A friend of mine that was also writing one Bill's friend letters, started coming back stamped deceased. At this point I didn't know what had happened to my letters. But they didn't come back so I waited for an answer. Finally a letter came from Bill's mother explaining that he had been hurt and to keep writing that he had the nurse write his folks, but didn't want her writing his love letters. Bill's mother informed me of his progress while in the hospital and I continued to write him.

The first of January he was told he was to be shipped home on high points. So he started writing then and telling me to listen for the John Erickson arriving at the Port in New York. Every evening I would hurry home from school to hear the news to see if his ship had landed. March 28, 1946 it arrived, he was discharged from the Army.

Bill, stopped by his folks in Kentucky as he walked into the yard a honey bee stung him between the eyes. Both eyes swelled shut so he couldn't see much less write. He asked his mom to write and tell me as soon as he could he would be on his way to Arkansas. After visiting three days with his folks he bought a bus ticket for Arkansas. Bill's mom and dad took him to catch the bus at the corner. When Bill was on the bus his mom said to his dad, "He's going bring back a cook." His dad said, "Don't say that, he doesn't even know the girl."

Bill arrived in Arkansas, the bus broke down on Mt. Gayler and a man from Missouri stopped and asked Bill and another soldier from Combs, Arkansas if they needed a ride to Fayetteville? When they arrived at the bus station they waited for their luggage to arrive from the bus. Bill had a gift for me in his suitcase. Three of my friends were waiting to take the bus to Baldwin. Betty (Beavers), Marie (Fletcher), and Mary (Moore). Betty recognized Bill from a picture I had. She asked him if he was Bill Fields? He was and she said if his luggage came in time they could show him where I lived. But the bus to Baldwin left before the luggage got there. So he didn't take the bus with my friends to Baldwin. Meanwhile I took our old car down the mountain to my grandparents Mr. and Mrs. David L. Wilson's. We sat on the front porch to watch for the bus. When the bus came in view we noticed the closer to the Baldwin stop it got the faster it went. We realized he wasn't on the bus. Grandma Wilson (Janie) had a phone, so I thought Bill would call when he got to the bus station. He didn't call so I went back home. About thirty minutes passed and Grandpa Wilson came by and said that the boy had called and asked if we could come and pick him up. At that time my dad was raising thousands of chickens. He was in the process of hand watering and feeding them. I asked him if we could go to pick up Bill. Grandpa, my dad (Pop), and I all climbed into the old car and headed for town. We dropped off Grandpa on the way down the mountain at home. We promised that we would stop back by on the way back. Pop and I picked Bill up at the bus depot he shook hands with Pop and me too. We got back to Bear Mountain and stopped at Grandpa and Grandma Wilson's.

My mother and baby sister Carol were there to greet Bill. Grandma and Grandpa shook hands with Bill. My mother hugged his neck and kissed him. He was liked by all my folks. We went back home and I showed him his room and where to put things. He had a gift for me, a watch. We dated for eleven days finally Bill about ran out of money. We had been talking and writing for years. We talked about what we wanted to do and decided to get married. Pop and Bill went to Fayetteville to get the marriage license and Roy Scott the clerk asked how old Bill was. Twenty was the answer and he was eight months too young to get married in Arkansas, he had to have his parents permission. So we decided since I was eighteen we would go to Kentucky to get married. We left for Kentucky on the bus, passing many soldiers trying to get home. We would ride a bus awhile, run into a strike, and have to change over to the train. We continued like this for three days and two nights. We made the trip from Fayetteville, Arkansas to Waynesburg, Kentucky.

The first night on the trip we stayed in the bus depot at Memphis, Tennessee. Bill told me to sleep if I could; he would keep watch then he would sleep. While we were at the bus depot at Louisville, Kentucky, we ran into the last group of soldiers that Bill was stationed with in Germany in the Motor pool. They asked Bill if he was married. He told them yes (but we weren't married yet). He introduced me to several of the men then we had to catch a cab across town to another bus station. We arrived in Kentucky two thirty a. m. that April morning.

Bill walked over across the road to a neighbors and woke him up to drive us out to his folks home. It was a couple of miles out to their farm. When we arrived at the house Bill woke up his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Fields. Bill introduced me to his folks and they asked if I wanted to meet all the children. I said yes. They took me around to all the bedrooms and told me what the children's names were. Bill was the oldest male in a family of twelve. It seemed as if children were coming out of the woodwork. We were tired, so Mom Fields (Cisiah) told me I could sleep with Bill's sister Alice.

The next morning we started off to Lexington, Kentucky to get our blood test. We went to the hospital room and one of the interns started to take Bill's blood, the next thing I knew I was headed for the floor. I fainted dead away, one of the two interns got me up and took me out for some fresh air. Teasing me all the way for being an Arkansawyer. Finally I composed myself and got my blood test. Then we had to wait three days before we could get our marriage license. When the three days were up we went to Stanford, Kentucky for our test results everything was fine so we headed for the court house to get the license, Bill's folks went with us. The clerk started to fill out the form for us and had asked several questions. Finally he asked me how old I was. I told him eighteen. He said, "I'm sorry, but you're too young in Kentucky. We will need your parents consent. You need to be twenty-one years old in Kentucky". I later thought I had a letter in my purse from my mother asking if we had got married? I hadn't thought to show it to the clerk. We started back to the Field's home. On the way home, Bill's dad suggested that he could be a thousand dollar bond. We could write a letter and I could sign it. He would tell me what to write for my parents. Then I would put the letter in the envelope from my mom in Arkansas I had received earlier. It would then have taken a week and a half to hear from my folks back home. We went back to the county clerk with the completed letter. He asked if we wanted to get married there, we said no. We had a place in mind we wanted to be married. We took the license, started out the court house door down a long flight of steps. I turned to Mom Fields and said what if we get to the old preacher and something else has happened that he can't marry us? She said, "Don't say that", and we both laughed. It was about twenty five miles to Preacher Caudill's home, we got there about four p. m. and Dad Fields said "You all stay in the truck, I'll go see if Brother Caudill can marry you". Well, Mom Fields, Bill and I sat in the truck and kept watching the front door for Dad to come right back it was getting late. They had a herd of milk cows to be milked before dark. We sat there wondering what was happening. Thirty minutes passed and Dad Fields appeared in the front with sister Caudill. Dad came to the truck with a big grin on his face and got in. He laughed and said, "You won't believe this". I said, "Yes I would". "What is it"? Brother Caudill had been real sick and doesn't have a marriage bond since January. He couldn't marry anyone now even if he wanted to. We started toward Waynesburg, he asked me if I would be against a Justice of the Peace marrying us. He knew one at the grocery store there. I said I wouldn't care if he's a stump preacher, as long as we get our vows said. We went into this grocery store, Mr. Fields asked Mr. Horton if he could marry his son? Yes, however, the man got so nervous he started knocking down can food displays and shelves. He finally asked us if we would like to go next door to his living room or the small office there in the store. I said the office is fine. We had Bill's parents as our witnesses. He read some scripture and we repeated a few words and I do's and we were married

The shortest marriage I'd ever seen. We were the first couple Mr. Horton had married and he was so upset he had to get his business partner to fill out the license.

We were married April 18, 1946, seven minutes after five. We moved back to Washington County, back to Bear Mountain, four months later and have lived here most of the following years since. Bill went back to school and became a Plumbing Contractor, owning his own business.

We have three wonderful daughters Cheri Lynne Dockery, Linda Jean Oxford and Brenda Louise Rains.

We have eight grandchildren, Gregory, Dena and Jason Dockery. Sarah, Laura and Kyle Oxford. Russell and Leslie Marie Rains.

We have shared forty one happy years together to this date. Washington County, Arkansas has been good to us.

William Fine

Vinett Fine is our oldest known ancestor in the United States. Before the Revolutionary War, several Fine families were living in Shenandoah County, Virginia having moved there from Long Island, New York.

William Fine, (first to move to Washington County), the fifth child of Vinett, was born in Virginia in 1781. He married Catherine Sivley in 1807 in Jefferson County, Tennessee. They later moved to Huntsville, Alabama.

William B. Fine, sixth child of William and Catherine was born May 9, 1816 in Madison County, Alabama. He later moved with his parents, brothers Spencer and Jonathan and sister, Charlotte to Washington County, Arkansas, in 1828. They settled at Carter, Arkansas on the Middle Fork of White River. He had ten brothers and sisters. He married Millie Mankins, daughter of Peter and Rachel Mankins, Sr. He was a farmer all his life and he and Millie raised ten children to adulthood. Two baby sons are buried in a little plot on their old homeplace. About 1870, they sold that farm and moved to another farm near Brentwood.

Lewis William Fine, born October 28, 1849, the eighth child of this large family of William B., was born at Carter, Arkansas. He married Sarah Elizabeth Parker of Washington County, date unknown. They had four children: William Thomas, Mollie, Lucinda and Cornelius (Nealie). After the death of Sarah, he married Phoebe Hoyle. Their children were: Henry, Lewis, Sarah Mae, Alvin and Finis. Lewis William Fine was known as a man of many talents. He even made his own fiddle out of hard maple wood and he could play it quite well. I remember him playing a tune he called "The Eighth of January" when I was a child. He lived with us for a year or two and cleared a seventeen-acre field on our farm just to have something to do. Many of the trees were large, which he chopped down with a chopping axe when he was a little past 80-years-old. He was also good at budding and grafting fruit trees. He could find "bee" trees with lots of honey in them. One produced very close to 100 pounds of honey in the comb. He and his brother, Zack Fine, who was only two years older, would imitate the call of wild turkeys and owls and call them up to shoot them. They hunted lots of wild game, built log houses and barns, split rails for fences, made clap-board shingles, etc. His famous by-word was "I-Jiminy."

William Thomas Fine, born May 19, 1871, the first child of William Lewis and Sarah, grew up on a farm just about two miles northeast of Brentwood, Arkansas. He married Minnie Scudder on February 21, 1892 when she was at age sweet-sixteen and he was nearly 21. Their children were: William Roy, Albert Cornelius (Nealie), Charles Oliver, Earl Ernest, Mabel Edith, Ethel May and Ruby Ellen. All were born near Brentwood, Arkansas and all grew to adulthood there. William Thomas was known as "Billie" to all his friends and they were many. He and his second son, Nealie farmed 120 acres together for many years. They cut and hewed railroad ties in the winter months to supplement the family income. They butchered three to five hogs in November or December each year and cured the meat in a smokehouse. They grew all kinds of vegetables and fruits and canned wild blackberries and huckleberries and jelly, too. They grew sorghum cane and made molasses for themselves and several neighbors who hauled their cane to them. They milked several cows and sold the separated cream, shipping it by Frisco Railroad to Joplin and Carthage, Missouri. They never had to go on WPA during the depression.

William Thomas served on the school board at Fairview, District #89 several years. It was known as Low Gap School. Nealie Fine also served many years on the same board. Entertainment for our community was pie suppers, a literary society, Christmas tree and program, spelling bees, play parties (like square-dancing), singing schools and softball games.

The family traveled mainly by horse-drawn wagon or horseback until 1944, when we got our first car (a 1936 model). William Thomas (Billie) could play the harmonica and was a good story teller. He died at age 89, August 6, 1960. Grandma Minnie died February 1, 1958. Both are buried at Brentwood, Arkansas. Nealie married Hazel Talley November 30, 1919. Their children are: William Delford, Elizabeth Earlene and Regena. They lived in the Low Gap Community until late 1944. Delford enlisted in the Army air Corps in November 1942, served in the States and in the 14th Air Force in Kunming, China. The family home burned in 1944, and they moved to Greenland, Arkansas for a brief time then settled in West Fork, Arkansas. They were very active in the Baptist church there. Nealie and Hazel both worked in Fayetteville for many years. He at the University and the National Cemetery and she at the University of Arkansas Student Union and a cafe as a pastry cook. William Delford married Dorothy Steele on September 1, 1945. They still live in Fayetteville. They had a son, Philip Alan, who was killed in an accident in Tulsa while in his sophomore year at Oral Roberts University. This was on January 30, 1971. Delford retired February 1985, having worked 43-1/2 years for Southwestern Electric Power Company. Dorothy worked as a bookkeeper for several years. Her Steele family history is found in this book, also. Earlene married William E. Carter on December 17, 1948 and they have four children. They are: Steven, Carol, Don and Neal. All are married and have two children each.

Regena married Al Schnackenberg on August 16, 1958 and their children are: Linda and Diane. They are both married and Diane and husband have a son. Nealie passed away July 9, 1983. Hazel is 87-years-old and in good health.

It is interesting to note that the name William goes back six generations in the family to 1781.

William Fine

William Fine was born in 1781 in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, then moved with his family to Cocke County in eastern Tennessee. His father, Vinet Fine was killed by Indians when Vinet, his brothers and other neighbors went on a raid into North Carolina to recover horses the Indians had stolen from the settlers. William married Catherine Sively in Jefferson County, Tennessee on April 27, 1807.

With nine of their eleven children, the youngest two years old, they left Tennessee, October 14, 1828 for Arkansas. They traveled with a big four horse wagon (Prairie Schooner) and a smaller two horse wagon and with a large tent to sleep in. William was a powder maker (for guns) and brought some to sell along the way. They had to stop over during their journey because of a big snowstorm in January, finally reaching the West Fork of White River on March 2, 1829.

William and Catharine (called Katie) left their two oldest daughters behind in Tennessee. Sometime after settling in Arkansas, Katie became homesick to see her girls, so she packed her horse and made the long wilderness journey alone over rough and lonely trails to Tennessee and back. The two older daughters' names are not known. The other children are: Spencer, born 1810, married Jane Brandon, had twelve children; Charlotte born 1812, married Thomas Wilson, had ten children; Jonathan, born 1814, in Alabama, married Rachel Mankins, had thirteen children; William B., born 1816 in Alabama, married Millie Mankins (a sister to Rachel); Alfred, born 1817 in Tennessee, married Rachel Mankins, (a cousin of the sisters, Rachel and Mille), they had nine children; Rebecca, born 1820, married James C. Gilliland, they had several children; Louallen, born 1823, married Sally A. Brown, had no children; Bluford T., born 1824 married Ruth A. Brown (a sister to Sally), had two children; and Lucinda, born 1826 married Thomas T. Brown (a brother to the sisters, Sally and Ruth), they had seven children.

William died September 1865 and Katie died May 1881. They are buried in Gilliland Cemetery, south of Greenland.

The third son of William and Katie, William B. Fine married Millie Mankins in 1836. Millie was the daughter of Peter Mankins, Sr. and Rachel Bracken/Lewis Mankins. William B. and Millie had twelve children, raised at Carter on the Middle Fork of White River; Spencer, born 1837; Henry, born 1839 married Cynthia Barclay, had nine children; Isaac, born 1841, died during Civil War, in the Confederate Army; two infant sons, born and died 1842 and 1844, buried on the farm at Carter; Sarah Ellen, born 1845, married John A. A. Nott when she was 15 years old, they had four children; Zacariah "Zach", born 1847, married Eliza Jane Hutchens, had nine children; Lewis William, born 1849, married (1) Sarah E. Parker, had four children, married (2) Phebe Hoyle, had five children; Bluford M., born 1852, drowned trying to cross the flooded Arkansas River; Samuel, born 1854, left to hunt gold in the Black Hills, was never heard from again; Mary Elizabeth, born 1856, married Steven Parker, had six children; and Malinda Adeline, born 1858, married Henry Matlock, had three children.

Soon after 1870, William sold the farm at Carter and moved "over the mountains" to a farm at Brentwood. William Fine died in 1800, Millie Mankins Fine died in 1894.

Andrew Jackson Fitzgerald

To "Uncle An" Fitzgerald of Springdale, this chapter is indebted for some of the following notes on early "Arkansaw" life, so variously pictured by our humorists, and none give them with greater gusto and humor than "Uncle An" himself. Bear, deer, elk, buffalo, wolf, panther and wildcat were their next door neighbors in those days, and in true cannibal fashion these neighbors mutually preyed on each other. Cornmeal hoe-cakes being so prominent a feature of their eatables, their ingenuity hit upon the following unique form of perpetual motion: choosing a spring with a high opening, a forked stick was fastened before it, and balanced in the fork a pole, on one end of which was placed an inclined water trough, which, when filled by the flowing spring, would drop, raising the heavy pestle hung to the other end of the pole; the water at once being spilled, the trough would resume its position, and down went the pestle into the wooden mortar below, pounding whatever the mortar contained into fine powder. A half bushel or more of corn placed in the mortar at night would be transformed into palatable meal by sunrise. Homemade clothes of cotton, flax, and wool were common; the husband and wife seeding enough cotton by the light of a pine knot or "tallow dip" to keep the busy wife with spinning material for the next day. Wild honey supplied the place of sugar, and when the first coffee appeared, "we tried to bite it like ye do beans, ye know," said "Uncle An". Letters were seldom received, but the advent of a missive was the signal for the neighborhood to gather round the 'Squire, whose learning enabled him to read to them news from the hieroglyphics; and when a like document was to be written, the 'Squire sharpened his goose-quill and, dipping it into the oak-ball ink, became amanuensis for the neighborhood. Card playing was an amusement, and the settlers knew where Troy Gordon's "still" was, but "Uncle An" and his gray-haired compeers affirm that none of the well-known evils of today were attached to them then. "Hoe-downs" and reels—"none o' yer huggin' dances"—were tripped lightly, and with jollity, to the tune of "Roarin' River" etc., which some deft musicians drew from the gourd banjo with its squirrel-skin head and horse-hairs. "We had debatin' sasieties too—bony-fide debatin'", said "Uncle An". "Pursuit and Possession", "Art and Nature", and "Which would a man go further fur—money 'er his best gurl?" were passed upon, and when it came time to walk home with some bright-eyed lass, "we walked a leetle ways off", said "Uncle An", "we didn't clevis arms uz they do now."

Another story about "Uncle An" that appears in the history books goes like this: A 'greenhorn dude' that had moved on property near Uncle An decided that he'd buy himself a calf or two to start himself a livestock herd and for milk. He had heard tales of ridgerunner cattle that had two legs shorter than the other two so that they could stand level on the edge of the ridges and not fall off, so he thought he was fully prepared to buy his cattle and not get slickered by an oldtimer. Having been told that Uncle An might have a calf to sell, he went up on Fitzgerald Mountain to see Uncle An. He asked Uncle An if he had a calf that he would sell him and Uncle An said "Well, I do have one calf I might sell, but it sucks one of Uncle An's cows". The dude, remembering the story about ridgerunner cattle, asked to see the cow saying he wanted to make sure its legs were all the same length. Uncle An obliged and the dude, thinking he had out smarted the old timer, paid Uncle An the lower than usual price required and took his new purchase home. A couple of days later, the dude came by Uncle An's place and remarked to Uncle An that he was unhappy with his cow because he could not get any milk from it since it sucked itself. He said "I thought you told me that the cow sucked one of your cows". Uncle An replied, "I did say it sucked one of Uncle An's cows, but it doesn't anymore. It sucks yours now."

Andrew Jackson Fitzgerald was born in 1822 in Alabama, and died 30 Janaury 1897. His first marriage was in 1844 to Catherine F. Sherrod, born in Tennessee in 1826, died in 1878. His second marriage was on 19 March 1878 to Mary Gamble, born in Tennessee in 1832. Children of Andrew and Catherine: Francis Marion "Bud", b. 1845 in Arkansas, married Mary A. Beasley in 1867. Susan "Sarah", b. 1846 in Arkansas, married a Mayfield. Jasper Newton, b. 1848 in Arkansas, married Mary E. Mayfield 12 February 1871. Gabriel Columbus, b. 28 April 1849 in Arkansas, married Martha Susan Beasley 28 April 1872. John A., b. 1851 in Arkansas, married Augusta K.. Nicholas C., b. 1853 in Arkansas, married Permelia Keele. Mary Angeline, b. 1854 in Arkansas, married John Jones. Martha C., b. 1856 in Arkansas, married Fred Bookout. Margaret Jane, b. 16 July 1857 in Arkansas, married Thomas White Beasley, Jr. 6 September 1876. James Henry, b. 11 October 1859 in Arkansas, married Julie Rebecca Rennels 20 December 1885. Andrew Jackson, Jr., b. 1862 in Arkansas, married Martha Mayfield 29 December 1880. Lucinda C., b. 1865 in Arkansas, married Bob Stewart.

Andy was found in Prairie Township, Washington County, Arkansas in the 1860 census. He was in Springdale in 1880. He went to Texas during the 70s for awhile and was in Wise County at that time. Andy was a farmer, a preacher, and a fiddler. He and both of his wives are buried in Forest Park Cemetery at Springdale. Andy owned property in Springdale that is known as Fitzgerald Mt. He was one of the debaters in the local chautauqua.

Essie Dorothula Fitzgerald

Essie Dorothula Fitzgerald's great-grandparents, John and Mary Fitzgerald, moved to Washington County, Arkansas from Alabama 1828-1833. Their sixth child, Andrew (An, Andy) Jackson Fitzgerald, married Catherine F. Sherrod in 1844 and were Essie's grandparents. Catherine's parents were Arthur Sherrod and Susan Ewin. Arthur was a methodist minister.

Andrew and Catherine Fitzgerald's fourth child, Gabriel (Gabe) Columbus Fitzgerald married Martha Susan Beasley on April 28, 1872. Martha Susan's parents were Thomas White Beasley and Lutitia Hester Stevens.

Gabriel and Martha Susan Fitzgerald's children and dates of birth were: George Lafayett, February 12, 1873; Liza Lutitia, June 14, 1874; Cordelia Catherine, November 17, 1877; Essie Dorothula, March 25, 1880; Eli Boss, March 17, 1882; Walter Five Generations: right to left: Essie Dorothula (Fitzgerald) Mason, age 74; Uda Belle (Mason) Leak, age 58; Dorothy Violet (Leak) Vinyard, age 41; Billie Verline (Vinyard) Maynard (now Shore), age 22 and Dorothy Sue Maynard, (now Staton), age 3 months. Taken December 25, 1954, Westville, Oklahoma.

Christian, June 3, 1884; Ida Belle, June 27, 1886; and Cora Mae, September 27, 1888.

Gabriel had been blinded by a brush fire. Essie told how her father pulled weeds out of the cornfield by crawling along the rows on his hands and knees. Essie's future husband, Wilbert Harrison Mason, worked for Gabriel on his farm. Wilbert told how Gabriel would cut off a plug of chewing tobacco and lay it somewhere for Wilbert to find. Wilbert had the chewing tobacco habit but was too young to legally buy it.

Gabriel died December 14, 1891 and is buried in Forest Park Cemetery, Springdale, Arkansas. When Gabriel died Essie was eleven, Eli nine, Walter seven, Ida Belle five and Cora Mae three. Liza and Cordelia were both married.

Essie always said she had a hard life growing up as the family was very poor. She worked so hard she had little chance for schooling but she learned to read and write. Essie worked for their neighbors near Springdale when she was very young. She said she had to wash sheep hides and it turned her against mutton. She said she dropped corn all day for ten cents a day and if they were paid a quarter they thought they were really doing well.

Martha Susan Fitzgerald married William Ford August 18, 1895. Four months later (December 18, 1895) Essie married Wilbert Mason. She was almost 16 and Wilbert was age 24. Martha Susan and William later moved to Sugar Creek, Missouri. They had several children but all died young except Lenna Anna Ford. Martha Susan died October 13, 1912 and her mother, Lutitia Hester Beasley, died January 29, 1912. Both are married at Sugar Creek, Missouri.

Essie and Wilbert moved to Indian Territory (now Oklahoma) near the village of Checotah where their first child, Uda Belle (Belle) was born, November 13, 1896. While Belle was still a baby they joined a wagon train (five covered wagons) going to Oklahoma Territory. Essie's sister, Cordelia Covington, and her family were with the wagon train as was Wilbert's brother, Andrew Mason. Essie said she got so tired of hearing Andrew sing "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain" on the trip. They were stopped many times by Indians wanting tobacco and whiskey. As soon as they gave it to them, the Indians would leave. She said Belle would sleep while the wagon was moving but wake up and cry when it stopped.

Wilbert and family homesteaded in Caddo County, Oklahoma and lived in a sod house. By 1900 they were living in Dewey County, Oklahoma and by 1903-1905 they were living in Benton County, Arkansas, mostly in the Wet Prairie Community near Maysville.

After Belle, their children and dates of birth were: William Harce, July 21, 1899; Nancy Anna, October 2, 1901; Leona, July 14, 1903; Bessie, July 6, 1905, Lester, September 26, 1908; Ida Mae January 26, 1911; and Doris December 14, 1921.

Wilbert, Essie, and Doris moved to Green, Oklahoma in the 1930s and then to Westville, Oklahoma where Wilbert died November 29, 1941. In her later years Essie made her home near oldest daughter, Belle, who married Theodore Leak and lived near Proctor, Oklahoma.

Essie pieced quilts and sold them. She was a hard worker, never idle, and was noted for her outstanding cooking. The author was Essie's first great-grandchild (the daughter of Dorothy Leak and Val Vinyar). Dorothy Leak was Essie's first grandchild and the first child of Belle Mason and Theodore Leak. The author's daughters, Dorothy Sue Maynard (now Staton) and Valerie Sue Wallace (now Warren) were Essie's first great great-grandchildren. Essie died February 11, 1965. She and Wilbert are buried in Proctor Cemetery, Proctor, Oklahoma.

Ira Irvin Fitzgerald

Ira was born 7 June 1908 in Tomaha, Oklahoma, the son of Lester Ray Fitzgerald and Barbara Daniel Elliott. Lester Ray was a rural mail carrier in Tomaha at the time, however, Barbara did not like all the many tornados that seemed to forever find their way through that part of the world so they loaded up the Springston buckboard wagon with all their worldly goods and came back to Washington County, Arkansas, when Ira was still a toddler. Ira and his two sisters, Ruby and Allyne, attended Springdale Schools. Since Ira's father became disabled with crippling arthritis from mining, Ira had to quit school after the 6th grade and help Barbara provide for the family. He soon managed to come by enough funds to attend a barber college and obtain a barber license, beginning in his first shop in Johnson Switch at the age of 17. He is still barbering in Springdale today at the age of 80. He was also a taxi driver as a young man (for several years before the war) in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma where he had gone to try and make more money. There he met and married Dorothy Marie Lyde, daughter of Walter Robert and Dora Royal Lyde, who was born at Hobart, Oklahoma on 14 February, 1918. Dorothy had attended college in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and was working for an insurance firm as a secretary when she met Ira. He received an award from the City of Oklahoma City for his excellent driving ability which was recommended to be given to him by the Oklahoma City Police Dept. They returned to Springdale, Arkansas in 1939 and have lived there ever since.

is most of the other members of his family, now and in previous generations. He worked for awhile in their mission church, Caudle Avenue Baptist, as Sunday School Superintendent serving under Rev. Roe Matthews. Roe used to call him his walking Sunday School encyclopedia. Ira and Sterling Summers took Roe on a float trip down the White River from Heads Ford to Ellis Ford one Saturday to acquaint Roe with what they thought was so marvelous a hobby and pastime. Roe was made to ride in the middle of the boat and while making a cast got his hook entangled in his coattail, nearly capsizing the boat. Needless to say, while everyone enjoyed the trip, Roe never went with them again.

Ira served in the U. S. Navy during World War II. He was injured while fighting a fire aboard ship when he fell thru the damaged deck. He was offered either a desk job or a disabled veteran discharge and chose to take the discharge and come home. He then went back to barbering and Dorothy went to farming. Ira raised cattle and hay, Dorothy raised chickens and a vegetable garden from which she canned most of their food needs. This they did until they retired from their farm and family raising in 1971 and moved to town. Dorothy then worked as a lunchroom cook in the Springdale schools until she again retired in 1981. They still garden in the back half of their back yard, mostly because farming gets in your blood and becomes a way of life that you don't know how to quit. After all, you've got to do something with your time besides sit and stare at the boob tube, now don't you? You do if you're of pioneer stock like they are.

The following are children born of Ira Irvin and Dorothy Marie Fitzgerald: Loretta Irene born 7 July 1932 in Oklahoma and married Carlton Wesley Wynns. C. W. was an aircraft mechanic at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma more than 20 years following his tour of duty served in the U. S. Air Force where he acquired his occupation trade. Loretta worked in food service establishments during their early marriage years deferring to the occupation of housewife and mother until the girls were teenagers. She then went to beauty school becoming a beautician until C. W. was ready to retire. Their children are Linda Kaye who married Gary Hawkins and gave birth to a daughter named Marla on 13 January 1969, and Lea Ann who married Don Harlan. They also had a son, Carlton Wesley Jr., who was stillborn and is buried in Sunnylane Cemetery in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. C. W.'s hobby is treasure hunting with his metal detector. Genealogy research is a new interest he has recently acquired.

Barbara Jean was born 5 March 1934 and married first William J. Caldwell. They had sons Warren Anthony, who married Rebecca Lynn Camp, and James Gregory. Barbara then married Victor Slavik giving birth to Melissa Jane who is the spitting image of her mother. Barbara has been a secretary and an airline reservationist while studying her way thru college. She studied French for 2 years in Paris, France. Barbara is now a teacher having taught at Baylor in Texas and presently at the University in Oklahoma City. Her hobby is bicycling for long tour distances as well as shorter "keeping in shape" stints.

Irvin Lee was born 14 April 1935 and married first Billie Faye Moore. They had Deborah Lynn born 2 December 1959 in North Carolina. He later married Suzanne Loubol February 19, 1965. Irvin spent 23 years years in the U. S. Marine Corps. His highest rank obtained was Warrant Officer, having served in Korea, Japan, Mediterranean Crisis, Cuban Crisis, and VietNam as well as his normal stateside tours of duty. He was a member of the EOD team and earned 2 bronze stars as well as his other service metals. He and Suzanne managed several convenience stores, after he first retired, prior to moving back home to Springdale, Arkansas. Suzanne went to beauty school becoming a beautician after moving from North and South Carolina to Arkansas. Debbie married Barry Perdue giving birth to a son and daughter of her own. Her family still resides in North Carolina.

Dorothy Gayle was born in Fayetteville, Arkansas on 20 August 1941. She has ash blond hair, blue eyes, stands 5' 6", and is of fair complexion. She is a member of the First Baptist Church, American Legion, Beta Sigma Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, N. W. Arkansas Genealogical Society, Washington County Historical Society, The Shiloh Museum Assn., Arkansas State Employees Assn., and the U. S. Army Reserve. She was elected Asst. Secretary-Treas. and Trustee Board member for the Forest Park Cemetery Assn. and is involved in plot research for the Fitzgerald Cemetery. She married Tony Travis Henry giving birth to Michael Edward and Richard Travis. She later remarried giving birth to John Mark. After 11 years of raising 3 sons alone, she then married Charles Devon Allen, a Fayetteville police officer, in November 1981. Ms. Allen is a veteran, having served in the U. S. Marine Corps 1959-61 as a Corporal in the Provost Marshall Office doing police related work. She presently is a SSgt. in the U. S. Army Reserve serving in military intelligence as an interrogator. She attended Springdale public schools and Fayetteville Business College where she studied business administration and accounting. She worked as a secretary-bookkeeper for 15 years and an office manager-accountant for 3 years. She presently works for the State of Arkansas as a job placement interviewer and also holds an Arkansas Real Estate sales license. She has 2 granddaughters: Mike's Patty Gayle and Ricky's Kimberly Nicole.

Ira Dale was born 24 October 1942 in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. He has ash brown hair, brown eyes, stands 6' 2", and is of fair complexion. He is a member of First Baptist Church and is a veteran having served in the U. S. Marine Corps 1959-63. Most of his military tour of duty was spent in California and Hawaii. He attended Springdale public schools and worked for a while in law enforcement, both in Springdale, Arkansas and Boise, Idaho. Most of his career has been spent in the transportation industry where he has been driver, partsman, service manager, dispatcher, broker, office manager, owner/operator and safety director. His hobbies are waterskiing and hunting for precious/semi-precious stones in Diamond Crater at Murfreesboro, Arkansas. His search has proven quite productive over the years. He married first Charlotte Griggs, having Susan Nalani and Tommy Lee. He married second Yvonne Kern, having Jimmy Ray. He has one grandchild thru Susan.

Walter Ray was stillborn 5 August, 1939. He is buried at Sunnylane Cemetery in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

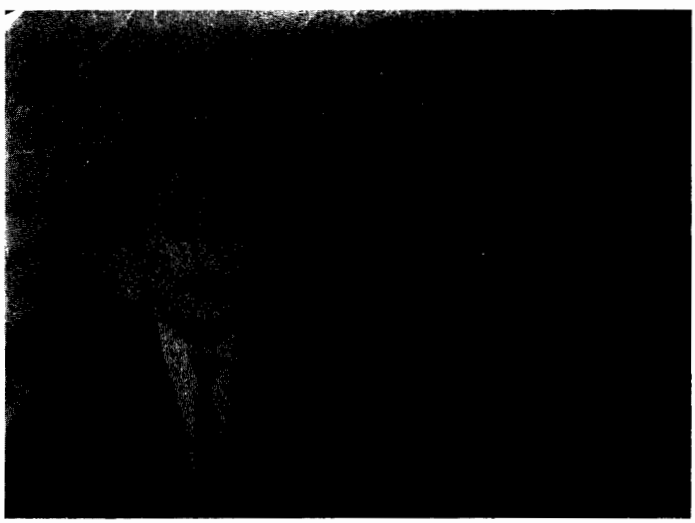
James Henry Fitzgerald

Since the advice of Horace Greeley to go west and grow up with the country was readily accepted, the man with the plow has staged many heroic battles in the development of old Greer County, Oklahoma and has fought to the finish under conditions as adverse as Washington at Valley Forge. Yes, the man with the plow who came here 50 years ago is fast going the way of all the earth. However, it is a great pleasure to ramble around, meet and spend a half day with one of these old soldiers of the plow and we recently had this pleasure with Jim Henry Fitzgerald, who settled 1/2 mi. E. of Hess, 5 August 1890. It was 11 October 1859 near Springdale, Washington County, Arkansas, Jim Henry Fitzgerald, son of Isaac Shelby Fitzgerald, grandson of Andrew Jackson Fitzgerald, great-grandson of John Fitzgerald, was born and lived on the family farm there for roughly 15 of his years. While in his teens, the family moved to Johnson County, Texas and then in 1885, moved to Cottondale, Wise County, Texas.



Francis M. Fitzgerald (b. 1845 Arkansas - d. 21 June 1894 Benton County Arkansas) Son of Andrew J. Fitzgerald and Catherine F. Sherrod. Mary A. Beasley (b. June 1849 Tennessee - d. 1 November 1900 Benton County Arkansas) Daughter of Thomas White Beasley and Martha Ann Haynes. Francis and Mary are parents of Lester Ray Fitzgerald.

It was here Jim Henry grew to manhood, often roving over the farm which in recent years has become famous as the Shannon farm where Urschell, the Oklahoma oil man, was held captive by kidnappers for $200,000 ransom. It was in Wise County, Texas Jim Henry met and married the girl of his choice.

Soon he came to Greer County, building a half dugout for a home. Breaking sod and hauling wood and posts out of the Indian reservation kept him so busy he never thought of hard times. As to whether or not he stole the wood and posts he merely laughs and says he was never caught nor convicted in any court of such a crime, although many of his neighbors served terms behind the bars and paid fines for doing just what he did.

Times were hard in those days. Well, Jim Henry thinks they were in 1893. He hauled wheat to Vernon, Texas from his farm at Hess and 35 cents per bushel was the price paid. Oats sold for 15 cents per bushel, millet seed 16 cents per bushel, large size frying chickens sold for $1.50 per dozen. All these products must be hauled across the sands of Red River to Vernon 25 mi. away. Ox or horse teams were used, sometimes the river would rise from rains or head rises render the stream unfordable, and the pioneers must stay for days water bound, waiting for the river to go down so they could cross to come home. While everything the settlers had to sell was cheap, what they had to buy was cheap flour. The Lily of the Valley brand, well known to all old settlers, sold for $1.50 per hundred. Arbuckle coffee, with a stick of candy in each package, was 8 lbs. for $1.00.

The farmers having all gone broke trying to grow wheat, the merchants of Vernon shipped in cotton seed, giving 5 bushels free to the farmers who would agree to plant and cultivate same. Jim Henry gets his 5 bushels of seed and grows the first cotton ever grown in what is now Jackson County. Necessity is said to be the mother of invention. It was of necessity that cotton was grown. So for a number of years the farmers bought and hauled seed wheat from Vernon and their crops were a total failure.

These were trying times. Drouths, failures and low prices were enough to discourage a wooden man. The spring of 1895 comes. Jim Henry has a large straw stack which had kept his stock from starving through the winter and was still furnishing feed when roaring across the prairie came the king of all sand storms. Steadily without ceasing, the wind for 3 days and nights blew a gale that swept many fields away to the depth that had been plowed. Watching from his dugout he could see his straw stack vanish little by little and when the wind ceased, not one straw was left to show where the straw stack stood. It was then that many of the settlers left the country. The roads were literally lined with ramshackled wagons, poorly clad men, women with children, as they hastened away, going anywhere with the hope of finding some place where they could find a few days work and get something to eat. The old saying that the darkest hour is just before dawn proved true. The gentle rains came and the crops grew, providing feed for man and beast.

Then in 1896 the land question was settled by an act of Congress. Old Greer County was declared to be public domain and subject to settlement under the homestead law. This gives renewed hopes. The ambition to own a home was now a reality. The weatherman was kind, the fields swept bare by the sand storms yielded abundant crops. Cotton had become the staple crop and in 1900 the entire Hess country produced from a bale to a bale and a half per acre.

The price of cotton which had ranged from 3 to 6 cents per lb. jumped to 10 cents per lb. New commodious farm homes sprang up everywhere. Jim Henry Fitzgerald's dugout gave way to a comfortable home. Then as the years go by and old age comes along, like a thief in the night, Jim Henry retired and in 1920 with his faithful companion moves to Altus to await the last roundup. Only 2 children were born to this couple. Ross Fitzgerald, the son, operates the old homestead. The daughter, Mrs. C. A. Fluty, who with her husband were teachers in the various schools of Jackson County for many years, are now living at Norman, where Mr. Fluty is connected with an oil company.

Jim Henry Fitzgerald is not afraid of work and now as he nears the four score mark prefers a cotton sack and a boll patch to a front seat on knowledge corner.

James Henry Fizgerald was b. 11 October 1859 in Arkansas, d. 1 August 1941 in Oklahoma. Married 20 December 1885 in Texas to Julia Rebecca Rennels, b. 17 June 1867 in Alabama, d. 10 August 1961 in Oklahoma. Their children were: Yada Pearl b. December 1886 in Texas, m. 20 December 1904 to Charles Allen Fluty, Hess, Oklahoma; William Ross b. 25 November 1889 in Texas, m. 5 January 1916 to Mary Frank Yeldell, in Altus, Oklahoma; Hercel, b. 23 December 1892 in Oklahoma, d. 1893 in Oklahoma.

Jim Henry and Julia are both buried in Hess Cemetery, Altus, Oklahoma. Hercel is also buried there. Pearl and Ross were both born in Cottondale, Wise County, Texas. On 1 June 1937 Jim Henry lived on Live Oak St. in Altus, Oklahoma, the same street as his first cousin Alvin's widow. Jim Henry can be found on the Wise County, Texas census and on the 1890 Greer County, Oklahoma census. Jim Henry walked from Arkansas to Texas. When he came to Oklahoma he drove a wagon with one mule and one horse pulling it. He had a horse called Mollie with a colt tied on behind. He carried a shotgun and had $40.00. He was a large man, about 6' 1" tall and weighed 250 lbs. He had dark brown hair, turned gray and brown eyes. He wore a mustache and was a rather handsome man. He played the violin and was one of the best old time fiddlers around. He could do the buck and wing and showed his granddaughter Helen how to do the Charleston. Helen now has Jims Henry's fiddle.

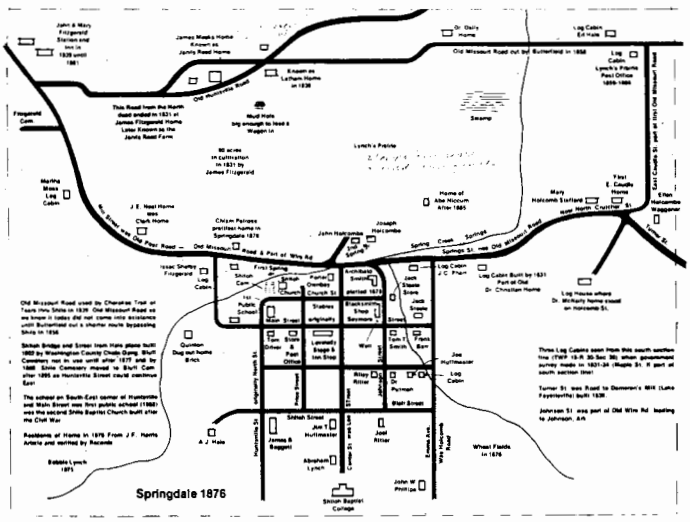
John Fitzgerald

My particular branch of the Fitzgeralds came from Ireland to Virginia and moved on from Virginia to Alabama and from Alabama to Arkansas to become one of the first settlers here in the Washington and Benton County area. Grandpa John's son, John, Jr. "Jack", ran the Butterfield Stagecoach station in Shiloh or Springdale as it's now known. His son Andy, who is also my Grandpa, was a fiddler, farmer, preacher, and a member of the early chautauqua. He was a very young boy when Grandpa John brought his family to Arkansas and rode all the way here on the back of a bull oxen calf.



Springdale 1876

He assisted Goodspeed in his gathering of information for his 1889 edition of the History of Northwest Arkansas. Andy owned all the property now known as Fitzgerald Mountain on the present Beaver Lake maps. Andy rode the railroad the day the track was completed between Springdale and Fayetteville all the way to Fayetteville and walked all the way back home just to see what it was like to ride a train and so he could say that he had done so before he died, which he did on 30 January 1895.

Grandpa John's son, James owned all the prairie that ran over much of what is now the Springdale business district. His daughter, Elizabeth, who married James Meek owned those lands adjoining the east side of James' property and his son Isaac Shelby owned that property adjoining on the west side of James. All three children's property lay to the south of Grandpa John's place.

Our family once owned the property that now has the Springdale Country Club and golf course upon its site.

Many, many of the first settlers in this area migrated from Alabama and Tennessee and were originally from Ireland and Scotland by way of Virginia and North Carolina. My father is Ira Irvin Fitzgerald who has been a barber in Springdale for 53 years, beginning at the age of seventeen. Our family were founding members of the Shiloh Primitive Baptist Church and later became founding members of the Liberty Baptist Church which is now known as the First Baptist Church. Liberty was a little village just 2 miles east of Shiloh which is now extinct. The maternal side of the family was often Methodist in faith through the families of Mayfield, Sherrod, and Banks in particular as well as others in later generations.

John Fitzgerald's will was made October, 1869 and was probated 11 August 1875. It was recorded in will book A & B page 112. It shows John was born in Alabama, living in Washington County, Arkansas, and says that he was a "Pvt. in the 7th Reg. US Inf."

John and Mary were very wealthy and owned slaves. Mary's father fought in the Rev. War and her mother was Dutch and couldn't speak English very well. Mary's mother died in Arkansas. Louisa Fitzgerald (ex-slave) was taking care of John along with his granddaughter Amanda Wolf at the 1870 census. Louisa was 45 at that time. John, Sr. could not write.

John Fitzgerald b. 1783 Virginia, d. 1875 Arkansas, m. 1808 to Mary Anne "Molly" Couch b. 1794 North Carolina, d. between May 1861 & 1870 Arkansas census.

Their children were James b. 1 July 1809 Alabama, m. 13 December 1832, Mahala White; Elizabeth b. 1810 Alabama, m. 1832 James Meek; Jane b. 1813 Alabama, m. 1836, John Reddick; Luvicy Ann b. 1814 Alabama, m. 1839, James A. John Louis Fitzgerald

Louis or J. L. as he was sometimes called, can be found living in the 1st few years of 1900 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. He is in Winslow, Washington County Arkansas on the 1910 census. They moved to Kansas in 1914. Helen lived in Santa Maria, Colorado in 1926 and Eula lived in Kanorado, Kansas in 1926. Myrtle's father was J. B. Bagget. Her brother was J. A. Baggett and her sister was Mrs. "Mint" Lichlyter all of whom survived her at her death and were all living in Springdale, Arkansas at the time. Myrtle is buried in Manhattan, Kansas as is Charles Louis. I believe J. L. is buried there also. J. L. was a preacher. Myrtle's middle name was Elizabeth. She & J. L. were both born in Springdale. J. L. Fitzgerald and his sister Polly Fitzgerald were children of John Fitzgerald Jr., who operated the Fitzgerald Stagecoach Station and his wife Melvina "Viney" Baggett Fitzgerald. Both are buried in The Fitzgerald Cemetery.

According to the Washington County Historical Society, Co. A, 2nd Arkansas Infantry National Guard was organized in Springdale in 1913 as follows: CPT Ownbey, 1st Lt. Louis Fitzgerald, 2nd Lt. Charley Smyer, 1st Sgt. B. B. Brogdon.

In July 1916, Co. A was sent to the Mexican border. They stayed at Deming, New Mexico for 9 months. Brogdon took command in October 1916 as 1st Lt. (Louis must have gotten a discharge as well as Charley Smyer during the 1st 3 years sometime while in Arkansas). The mission was to run a truck train #49 from Columbus, New Mexico to Gen. Pershing's Hqtrs. in Old Mexico. The unit had 52 men and 32 Kelley-Springfield solid tired trucks. They hauled all kinds of supplies & horses to the American Expeditionary Forces.

In Feburary 1917, the unit was demobilized. At that time, the officers were: CPT Ownbey, 1st Lt. Brogdon, 2nd Lt. Harry Hough.

The following information was obtained from the Bible Record in possession of Bill Lichlyter (Bus's son) and from newspaper obituaries:

John Louis Blake Fitzgerald, b. 30 January 1868, Arkansas, d. 15 April 1926, m. 1900; Myrtle E. Baggett Fitzgerald, b. 26 November 1877, Arkansas, d. 24 February 1926.

Their children:

Lester Ray Fitzgerald

Lester Ray was a farmer, a miner and a mail carrier at various times in his life. He, true to the Indian blood in him, loved to horse trade and was always swappin' something—including the house right out from over Granny's head. This was the start of many a quarrel in their younger days. In Grandpa's later years he was severely crippled with arthritis and suffered from kidney disease, bunions, and glaucoma. Granny had a kidney torn loose which floated and which caused her frame to have a hump on her back. She suffered from emphysema, kidney disease, and had a heart attack, but died of malnutrition. Richard and Wayne died from complications from teething which was a normal occurrence in those days. Diarrhea would start and couldn't be controlled in time.

Granny belonged to the 2nd Baptist Church in Fayetteville for many years before her death. Grandpa wasn't converted until several months prior to his death. It was fantastic—for the first time in many years he could walk upright and without his cane. He spent most of his daylight hours in the porch swing, swingin' for as many years as I can remember knowing him. He always wore his brown felt hat to shade his eyes.

Granny was a good cook and all the family gathered at her house every Thanksgiving and Christmas until she was forced to give up housekeeping. During the depression years, she worked for ten cents a day in the school lunchroom as a cook and took in laundry in order to provide for the family. She was no stranger to hard work. Of course, 'Pa Ray wasn't either before he became disabled.

Allyne and Hubert were shipyard welders in Richmond, California during WW II. Later they moved back to Springdale and then on to Tulsa, Oklahoma where she and her children still reside. Ruby and Jim have lived and worked in Ft. Smith most of their years. Jim was an auto mechanic and Ruby a bookkeeper and a sales clerk over the years.

Lester Ray Fitzgerald born 5 May 1882 in Arkansas, died 15 March 1950 in Arkansas; married in 1903 to Barbara Daniel Elliott, born 23 September 1885 in Arkansas, died 14 August 1967 in Arkansas. Their children: Richard Lee born 4 July 1905, died 29 September 1906. Ira Irvin born 7 June 1908, married first Gladys Newman, married second Dorothy Marie Lyde. Harold Wayne born 13 June 1915, died 22 February 1916. Ruby Jo born 3 June 1911, married James A. Arthur. Mary Allyne born 9 February 1918, married Hubert Morgan Cragg.

Luvicy Ann Fitzgerald

Luvicy lived on Hickory Creek Road. It is said that the pioneer spirit of Luvicy helped her to live by her wits and that once when times were very hard, she skinned cats and took them to town and sold them to "those townfolks" for squirrels. The census records show Luvicy and her family in Washington County, Clear Creek Twp in 1850, Big Springs Twp, Benton County in 1860, White River Twp, Benton County in 1870, and Benton County in 1880 also. The 1870 census shows Emily was a domestic servant of Larkin Presley. Her obituary lists her as the daughter of Luvicy Fitzgerald Wolf, widow. Her husband was the son of Coleman Younger and Phoebe Ann Eden McGarrah. The 1870 census shows Amanda living with her grandfather John Fitzgerald. Susan Rebecca is buried in Wilson Cemetery. Margaret and Luvicy were listed as members #8 and #10 of the Shiloh Church in 1840. James joined in 1846. Mary Ann joined in 1856 and was excluded March 1871. Susan joined in 1869.

Mary was shown on the White River Twp, Benton County census in 1870 living with her mother. I do not know if her husband was killed, died, or was merely away for some reason. Since she was excluded from the church in 1870, it is felt that she may have moved out of the area to a place unknown to myself. Mary Ann joined the Primitive Baptist Church in 1856.

William is shown on the Pineville Twp, McDonald County, Missouri census in 1880. The 1900 census shows Rhoda in Hico Twp, Benton County, Arkansas. Her daughter, Mary J. was not shown with her on the 1900 census.

Luvicy Ann Fitzgerald was born 1814 in Alabama, and died after 1880. In 1839 she married James A. Wolf, born 1806 in Ohio, died before 1867 in Benton County, Arkansas. Their children: Mary, born 1842 in Arkansas, married a Sizemore in 1868. William, born 1843 in Arkansas, married Rhoda A., born February 1855 in Arkansas. Margaret, born 1844 in Arkansas. Nancy J., born 1846 in Arkansas, married Chester P. Gomley 14 September 1871 in Benton County, Arkansas. Susan Rebecca, born 21 August 1852 in Arkansas, died 17 April 1930, married 1 January 1880 William Wesley Wilson. Amanda Elmira, born 1854 in Arkansas, married a Smith. Louisa Emaline "Emily" born 25 December 1857 in Arkansas, died 11 August 1930, married Thomas McGarrah. Isaac Joshua, born 1858 in Arkansas, married Emma Buchannan 18 June 1882 in Benton County, Arkansas.

Children of Mary Wolf Sizemore: Luvicy, born 1869 in Arkansas. Children of William and Rhoda Wolf: Mary J., born 1875 in Arkansas (step-daughter); William Adison, born November 1879 in Arkansas; Rhoda A., born August 1883 in Arkansas; Orval, born June 1895 in Arkansas.

John "Jack" Fitzgerald, Jr.

Jack and Viney can be found on the 1870 Clear Creek Township Washington County, Arkansas, census and on the Springdale Township Washington County, Arkansas, 1880 census. Polly and Frank lived in Springdale Township on the 1900 Washington County, Arkansas census. Jack and Viney and Nettie are all three buried in Fitzgerald Cemetery in Springdale within a wrought iron fence enclosure. Frank hanged himself, and he and Polly are buried side by side in Bluff Cemetery Bayless is buried in Bluff Cemetery beside his 1st wife. John died in the Mental Hospital at Little Rock where Polly had him committed when she declared him insane in 1893 after which she sold his land. Jack had been the Overland Stagecoach Station Manager. The station was known as Fitzgerald Station and is located on Old Wire Road near the junction of Randall Road but just a little north of it. Polly died of a brain hemorrhage. She lived with the Stokes (her 2nd husband's 1st in-laws) the last 7 years of her life. They told the papers that she died without any living relatives (not so) and the state disposed of all her properties. Everywhere "Aunt Polly" went she drove around in a black horse drawn surrey with fringe on top and she always was dressed all in black so my older cousins who can remember say.

John "Jack" Fitzgerald, Jr. born 19 January 1833, Arkansas; died 7 July 1894, Arkansas; married 1867. Olive Melvina "Viney" Baggett born 25 September 1838, Illinois; died 10 August 1923, Arkansas. Donald A. Fletcher

The first Fletcher in America I have record of is a John Fletcher who lived in Pennsylvania in 1717. He had three sons, Job, John and Robert. I mention these as the names have been carried down the line into Arkansas. John Fletcher moved to Virginia in 1749, or before, and apparently the boys, Jobe, John and Robert were all married in Virginia. Robert's son, Robert, Jr. was my gr-gr-grandfather, was born July 9, 1788 in Virginia and died in Arkansas January 6, 1856.

Dinner for Ma and J. Frank at the Holiday Inn for their 60th wedding anniversary - 1 February 1965. Clockwise from the left: J. Frank Fletcher, Martin Edward Fletcher, 1st, Margaret 'Markeet' Fletcher Skillern, her husband William Vernon 'Bill' Skillern and behind Bill is their son William Franklin 'Billy Frank' Skillern. Next is Michael Don Fletcher, Edith Ritter, mother of Willis Burgin, Adrienne Fletcher Burgin and daughter Sherri Burgin. Mary Fletcher, Jimmy Fletcher and Andy Fletcher, children of Jimmy and Billye Armstrong Fletcher, the next two. Then Ellis Burgin and daughter Betsy, Martin Edward Fletcher, 2nd. Donald A. Fletcher, Virginia Skillern Fletcher. Pauline, we all called her Peandie, Fletcher and Bertha Anna, 'Ma' Fletcher.

My great-great-grandfather, Robert, married Mary (Polly) Wilson in Kentucky June 27, 1811. Mary or Polly was born November 8, 1795; died in Arkansas November 28, 1875. They had eleven children and I will list them with date of birth and to whom each was married. However, I will list only the children of Job their third child as he is my great grandfather. Robert did serve in the War of 1812 and Polly had some trouble getting a pension after his death. Robert also served as an election judge in the first election in Arkansas in July 1829 as shown by Washington County records.

Their children are as follows: 1. John, b. December 14, 1811 in Kentucky; d. January 14, 1877; married Malinda Price. 2. Timothy, b. 1813 in Kentucky (I think his middle name was Henry). 3. Job or Jobe, my gr-grandfather, b. December 4, 1815 in Kentucky; d. October 11, 1875; married Sarah Ann Williford January 23, 1840. Sarah was born October 5, 1821. 4. Elisa, b. 1816 in Kentucky; married William Albion Throckmorton. 5. Elizabeth (Betty), b. 1820 in Kentucky; married Balis Marshall. 6. James Alexander, b. April 2, 1822 in Arkansas; married Elizabeth Marshall. 7. Andrew Jackson, b. April 25, 1824 in Arkansas; married Mahala Rogers in 1851. 8. Jesse L., b. 1829 in Arkansas; married Cinderella Woods October 8, 1857. 9. Mary Ann, b. 1832 in Arkansas; married her cousin John Fletcher of Illinois. 10. Robert, b. 1833 in Arkansas; married Margaret Mhoon November 20, 1853. 11. Nancy Jane, b. November 11, 1834 or 37; d. January 11, 1860; was married in 1856 to James Robert Hester.

Job's name is spelled both Job and Jobe in various records. I have the original of his oath of allegiance to the United States and a safe pass through the Union lines. Job was a wagon maker. He and Sarah had nine living children and twin girls that died as infants, named Margaret and Martha; b. September 1846, d. December 1846.

Their other children were as follows: 1. Mary Jane, b. November 29, 1840; married Lewis Roberts September 19, 1866. 2. James W., b. May 18, 1842; married Screne C. Lewis, November 13, 1867. 3. Lorna, b. 1845; married Milton Burton in 1869. 4. John Franklin, my grandfather, b. March 4, 1849, d. November 18, 1898; married Sarah Ellen Enyart October 8, 1879. Sarah Ellen Enyart was born March 17, 1858 and died February 27, 1942. 5. Sarah Elizabeth (Lizzie), b. January 13, 1852; married Elliott Sharpe September 10, 1876. 6. Robert Job (Jobe), b. January 25, 1854; married Mary Jane Enyart November 9, 1879, a sister of Sarah Ellen Enyart who married Job's brother John a month earlier. 7. Francis A. (Fannie), b. December 9, 1857; married T. S. Runion August 10, 1879. 8. Thomas, b. September 8, 1860; d. March 22, 1876. 9. Alice Magdalene (Maggie), b. March 10, 1865; married I. W. Williford September 29, 1881.

John Franklin, number four above, was known as John and his brother Robert, number six was known as Job (Jobe) their lifetime. Many times I heard my father, Martin 'Mart' Fletcher speak of his uncle Job. Job and Mary Jane adopted a boy, having no children of their own, and named him Frankie. I mention this so as not to confuse him with my uncle J. Frank Fletcher who married my mother's sister.

Sarah Ellen and Mary Jane Enyart sometimes went by the names of Ellen and Jane depending of which family was speaking of them. I never knew the reason for their having their weddings a month apart when they were marrying brothers. Whether Sarah Ellen or Mary Jane Enyart were daughters of or related to Captain Stephen B. Enyart, of the Arkansas Mounted Volunteers I can not say as I have no direct records though some of the Enyarts did settle out around Oxford Bend and the Richland area.

My grandfather, John Franklin and Sarah Ellen had seven children listed in order of their birth along with their marriages and children. 1. Leland A., b. September 15, 1880; d. July 10, 1910; married Maude Wilkerson April 9, 1904. One son Lance who was raised in California. 2. Bessie L. (Bess), b. March 14, 1883; d. January 12, 1907; married Henry (Buck) Tisdale July 7, 1901; one son, Carman. 3. James Franklin (J. Frank), b. December 28, 1884; d. November 25, 1969; married Bertha Ann Tinker, February 1, 1905. Four children: i. Harold Adrain married Marie White; one daughter Adrienne. Adrain is deceased. ii. Harry Edward married Francis Portis; both deceased. Two sons, Harry P. and Lynn. iii. Margaret Ellen (Markeet) married William Vernon (Bill) Skillern; one son William Franklin Skillern known as Billy Frank or 'Jigger'. iv. An entry in Leland's dairy states — "January 29th, 1905, Tinkers house burned down this morning and we all went up there. Mag and Bertha came home with us." The Tinker house was across the road and west about a quarter of a mile. My grandfather Elisha Tinker had an arm shot off in the battle of Franklin, Tennessee. He was a Union soldier. Grandma Tinker was fitting a wedding gown for Bertha who was to be married to J. Frank when the house caught fire. In the excitement Grandpa Tinker attempted to save the piano he had bought Bertha for a wedding present and pushed it out the front door and off the high porch breaking it to pieces.

A second entry in Leland's diary, "February 1, 1905, I haven't done anything this morning. Frank and Bertha went to town and got married today."

James Vernon Fohrman

It was November of 1918 when James Vernon Fohrman and his second wife, Rosey Wells, arrived with their family and James' mother, Viola Fuller, by wagon in Washington County, Arkansas. News that the armistice had been signed ending World War I had been passed to them by other travelers and in the towns they passed through on their trip. It wasn't the best time of the year to move but the doctor in Tulsa County, Oklahoma had diagnosed Rosey as having "slow consumption" and advised a higher altitude. (It would be several years before an accurate diagnosis of emphysema would be made). James and his first wife, Florence Catherine Ridge, had five children, Paul Vernon, Zelda Viola, Ruth Emeline, Alma Eugene, and Alvin Fredric. Florence had died in 1911 and baby Alvin in 1913; James knew all too well the preciousness of life James and Rosey had married in Springfield, Missouri and continued to live there until after the birth of their first child, Florence C. Their second daughter, Laura, was born after they moved to Tulsa. On their rocky farm near Wheeler, their last three children were born, Margaret Lavern, James Alvin and Leo George. Here, the children attended White Oak School, a two-room, two teacher school. Their teachers included Mrs. Harper, still remembered for the Christmas gifts she gave her students, Mrs. Childs, Mrs. Bollenbacher, Mrs. Beaver, Mrs. Rhoda Vernon and Miss Thomas, who included basketball in the curriculum of her students. There was also a Community Church that the family attended.

There was plenty of hard work to keep everyone busy in the fields, garden, orchard, and 11 acre vineyard. In addition to the domestic maintenance of the family, i. e., cleaning, meal preparation, laundry, butchering, canning, etc. the family needed a larger house and some cash for necessities like kerosene. To earn some cash, James worked as a carpenter in the area often helping build barns on other farms. During his absences, the children were delegated additional responsibilities.

The children managed to find time to play "house" and "store". The girls cut paper dolls from the Montgomery Ward Catalogue and hunted for black walnuts and other nuts along the creek banks. In the Spring, Wildcat Creek had a "washout" that made a great swimming hole, but for fishing, it was necessary to go to the Illinois River where on at least one occasion, they enjoyed a rare delicacy, "Frog Legs".

The Fohrman family left Washington County about 1936 and moved to Benton County. Paul Vernon married Tenie Belle Harper from Fort Smith. Their only daughter, Joan F. and her husband, Norman Curtice Lamb, were killed in an airplane crash in 1972. Their sons are Norman Curtice and Stephen Paul Lamb.

Zelda Viola married Ardle Curry of Wheeler and their children were Donald and Ronald, Iris Iona, Nadine Marcella, Delmer R., Max R., and Winona J. The family has lived in Lincoln County, Oregon since about 1930. Ruth Emeline married Ellis Walter Curry of Wheeler. They moved to Benton County. Their children are Priscilla D., Freda Lawana, Lloyd Odell and Gloria B. Priscilla married Jesse McGarrah and their children are Phyllis Natalie and Larry Neale. Alma Eugene married Hazel Belle Phillips of Drumright, Oklahoma. Their son, Alvin Lee, was born in Wheeler and married Linda Jean Davis (Duncan?). Florence C. married Hugh Walter Pryor Conn in Claremore, Oklahoma. Their son, Terry, married Claudia Mellim and they had one son, Terry Joseph Conn. Following their divorce, Terry married Sue Ann Fankhouser and they live in Oklahoma City. Florence and Hugh's daughter, Mary Aleta, married Ryan Wetherell and their daughters are Wendy and Mary. Wendy is married to Scott Eckert of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Laura married Maurice Gibbs Blake in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Their son, Edward Everett Blake II, is married to Delora Ann Morgan. They have five children, Maurice Gibbs Blake II, Joe Bob, Pamela Dawn, Amanda Love and Edward Everett Blake III. Lavern Margaret married Ernest Everett Conn and their children, Donald Elson, Ronald Ernest and Carolyn Jean, grew up in Lincoln County, Oregon. Donald Elson married and has one son, Donald. Ronald Ernest is married to Donna Lee Baird and their children are Michael, Jason Edmond, Dean Edward and Justin Ethan. Carolyn Jean has two children, Ginger Marie Stockdale, and Howard Henry Hockett Jr. James Alvin married Anna Irmengard in 1949. Their children are Barbara Irene and Roy James. Barbara Irene married Hans Kurkowski and they have a son, James Hans. In 1965 James A. married Christine Ann Jensen. Their children are James Hans and Kathelen Kristine.

Joan Doris Fort

Joan Doris Fort, was born in Davis County, Iowa, on August 28, 1933, I am the daughter of Carl Wilson and Gatha Gladys (Dively) Yates. (See related story Toney Wilson Yates, Sr.)

I grew up most of my younger life in Iowa on farms as my daddy worked as a farm hand for several years of my life.

He always raised a large garden which was a family affair. We all worked together in it. All summer and fall we canned all we could for the long winter months.

We also raised our own chickens and some pigs, so we had lots of fried chickens and plenty of eggs and fresh pork. We smoked the hams and bacon, we also had our little family herd of milk cows, which supplied all the milk, cheese and butter that we could use and then some.

Thanksgiving and other holidays, when we were younger we always gathered at Grandpa and Grandma (Toney and Allie Yates) house. We would kill a fat hen or rooster and make lots of noodles and dressing and we would have roast ham, turkey, mashed potatoes or potato salad, dumplings, pumpkin pie, macaroni and chesse, fruit salad, all kinds of cakes, "and best of all, was Grandma's chocolate pie" and mince meat pies. The mince meat she made and canned so she always had plenty. "And oh yes" those good iced cookies, and coconut bars. I always loved to go to Grandma's.

Our family was large, we didn't have many store bought toys, but we had a lot of fun and love for each other.

When I was 15, we moved to Missouri because of the love my Daddy had for hills, woods and streams. That is where I met my dear husband, to whom I've been married for 35 years.

Wendell Warren Fort, Sr. was born in Cisco, Illinois on July 19, 1933. He is the fourth son of Bernard James and Alma Frances (Sutton) Fort. We were married July 29, 1952 in Holiday, Kansas by the Reverend A. Peay.

From this union there were eight children, the first being, Doris Ann, born August 26, 1953 in Kansas City, Kansas. She married Frankie Dean Foster, on February 18, 1972. They have two children, Laura Ann, was born January 5, 1974 and Danny Dean was born August 7, 1975.

Gatha Frances was born July 22, 1955 in Lawrence, Kansas. She married James McIntyre on May 28, 1976. They have one son, Wylie Isaiah, born April 11, 1977.

Rebecca Joan, born June 1, 1957 in Lawrence, Kansas, and she married Larry Gene Cook, June 10, 1978. They have one child, a daughter, Melissa Joan, who was born on April 16, 1979.

Julia May, born March 28, 1959 in Pittsburg, Kansas, her marriage was to Dennis Joe Griggs on October 1, 1977. They have two children, Samuel Joe, born on August 27, 1979 and Angela Renee, born May 24, 1983.

Alma Jean, born April 6, 1962 in Olatha, Kansas and married Valentine Gutierriz, on September 10, 1979. They have two daughters, Cenorina Alma, born July 29, 1980 and Sandra Raquel, born February 11, 1987.

Carla Joy, was named for her Grandpa (Carl) and was born on January 26, 1964 in Kansas City, Missouri, and is married to Jeffrey Lynn Plumlee on September 26, 1981. They have two children Jeffrey Matthew, born May 26, 1983 and Lindsey Necole, born July 7, 1986.

After six girls we got a surprise, Wendell Warren, Jr., who was born April 13, 1969 in Huntsville, Arkansas.

Then the Lord sent us another daughter to round them all out just right with Leora Jane, born July 10, 1971 in Eureka Springs, Arkansas.

We reside in Springdale, after much moving around. Most of our children live close, and come often to see us.

Margie Alberta Fort

I am the daughter of Boyd Rachel and Ina Beatrice (Benton) Harp of Springdale, Arkansas. I was born on January 29, 1953, in the Springdale Memorial Hospital in Springdale, Arkansas.

For the most part of my life, I grew up in Rogers, Arkansas, with the exception of a three month period form August to November 1958, when my family went to Beulah, Idaho for potato harvest. Beulah is near Twin Falls, Idaho. I started school in September of 1959 at Lowell Elementary in Lowell, Arkansas. From there, I attended Rogers Junior and Senior High School through my sophomore year. In August, 1969, we moved to a community called Nob Hill, Arkansas. I finished my last two years of school in Springdale, graduating in May, 1971.

After graduation, I kept house for my parents. Then on January 28, 1973, I met the man I was to marry at a prayer meeting at my cousin's house. Donald Glenn Fort, born on January 16, 1954, in Garnett, Kansas, is the son of Glenn Melvin Marvin and June Deloris (Yates) Fort (see related story of Toney Wilson Yates, Sr.). He is one of six children. We were married on April 27, 1973, at the Huntsville Assembly of God Church in Huntsville, Arkansas by my cousin, Reverend Willie Foster.

Back row Alberta (32), Glennita (9), Margie (11), front Teresa (5) Fort.

We were then blessed with our first daughter, Margie Dawnetta, born January 30, 1974, in the Huntsville Memorial Hospital. Her dad was away in USMC Boot Camp when she born. After two years in the USMC, we returned to Arkansas. A short time later, we were the proud parents of yet another daughter, Glennita Deloris, born on October 10, 1976, in the Huntsville Memorial Hospital. Her name was chosen by many members of the family.

Our third daughter, Marcella Lynn, born on March 3, 1978, in the Huntsville Memorial Hospital, was killed in a tragic automobile accident on May 30, 1978. Though she lived only three months, she brought many joys to our lives.

In answer to our emptiness, the Lord sent us another joyful daughter, Teresa Michelle, born on September 29, 1980, in Washington Regional Medical Center in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

When I was five months pregnant with our last daughter, many problems developed, resulting in our separation and then our divorce on January 28, 1981.

I knew immediately, that as a single-parent, the girls and I needed a new beginning. Though it took a while to get the money for a move, we finally moved to Iowa Park, Texas, in May of 1982, where I was able to pull myself together and get a new outlook on life as a single-parent. After two years of working at odd jobs, I knew I needed further education. By this time, I had collected myself and was handling things fairly well, so we moved back to Fayetteville, Arkansas, and I filed for grants to attend Northwest AR Vo-Technical School. I took classes in Calculus, Job Preparation, and majored in Architectural Drafting. I graduated in June, 1985. Due to some circumstances, I did not take a job right away, but did some drafting for individuals for the summer. Then in the fall of 1985, I took a job with Dr. John Darrell Ginger, a dermatologist, in Fayetteville, where I have been employed since.

After living in a small trailer for two years, I decided to apply for a loan to build a new home. Seeing as I had drawn house plans in school, I decided to draw my own house plans for the new home once the loan was approved. On May 22, 1987, we moved into our new home in Farmington, Arkansas. The girls and I really have been enjoying the house and we enjoy living in the Farmington area.

The girls are doing very well academically and socially in their new school and neighborhood. Margie is very active in basketball and track. She has come a long way the past few years. Glennita made cheerleader for Farmington Middle School for her fifth grade year. Though small for her age, she is full of spunk. Teresa, even now, is full of laughter and joy. She brings joy to all she meets, which resulted in a host of friends from young to old. She is the socializer of the family.

Although life has had its ups and downs, we are a happy family. The girls and I are friends as well as family. I have worked hard for this to be a part of our relationship.

On occasion, the girls do get to see their dad. Their dad is remarried and has two other children. They are living in Guthrie, Oklahoma at the present time.

Though at the time, I didn't understand the why of everything, I can see now that I would not have ever become the friend with my daughters that I have if there had not have been a divorce, because I was too busy with my husband to ever be the real mother and friend to them that I should have been. There are reasons for every situation and we must be able to see them or we will never go anywhere or improve ourselves in this life.

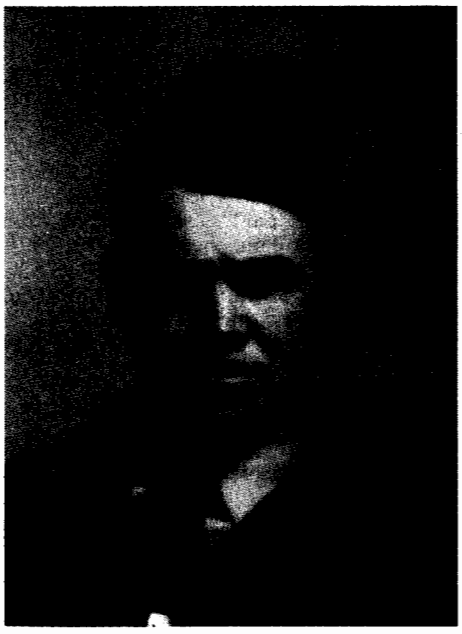
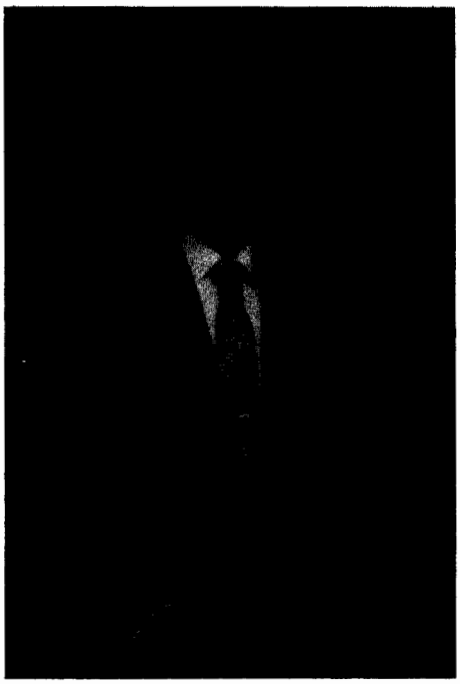
Lee Roy Foster

Lee Roy Foster was born on March 6, 1912, in Winslow, Arkansas. His parents were John D. Foster and Alice Adams Foster. Their ancestors had come here by covered wagon from Tennessee in the early 1800s. Out of fifteen births, eleven children survived. They were Pet (Pauline), Ethel, J. D., Lee Roy, Lorraine, Bessie, Nell, Dell, Charlie (deceased), Maizie, and Virginia.



Lee Roy Foster in 1941

Lee Roy (whom we all refer to as just "Roy") became a man at an early age and learned to harness a team of horses and work them to a plow when he was only seven years old.



Lee Roy Foster aged 75

Horses and mules played a big part in the lives of the Fosters. Roy can remember hearing his mother tell their old mule, "Tobe", when he would balk, "If I had a gun I'd shoot you." "Tobe" seemed to understand that she meant what she said and would start moving again.

The men of the family worked mostly in the timber, cutting railroad ties to get money to feed the large family. When the Mountain Lodge Resort Hotel started up in Winslow, practically the whole family went to work there. Mr. Foster butchered forty chickens every day so the diners could have fried chicken. Mrs. Foster did laundry for the "Summer People" and she was famous for her work. No one could beat her for whiteness of shirts and linens and the collars and cuffs that were starched just so, and ironed to perfection.

The family really prospered while the hotel was running but when automobiles came on the scene, people could travel to other far away places and the hotel was forced to close because of the lack of business.

When World War II broke out, Roy went to enlist in the Army. He was told he could be deferred, if he chose, because of a slight hearing impairment but he said "No", he wanted to go. After intensive training he was shipped overseas with the Third Armored Division. It was in Germany where he was wounded and subsequently captured. Evidently he was in one of the more humane prisoner of war camps because the Germans allowed a Polish Doctor, also a prisoner, to take care of him. This doctor was responsible for Roy's keeping the use of his right arm and hand.

Prison camp life was pretty terrible for the men, but this "Country Boy" took all the hardships in stride since he had never lived a soft life in the first place. His sense of humor helped to carry him through the rough time. Even today he dearly loves to make people smile at a funny saying or a joke.

After being liberated from the prison camp he returned home to Winslow, married Lorene Hampton and had two daughters, JoAnne and Lela. The family moved to Coquille, Oregon, where a third daughter was born named Michelle. Roy worked in the plywood lumber mill there for 23 years. When he reached the age of sixty-two he retired. He and his wife divorced, and he fulfilled his dream of going back to Arkansas.

In 1975 he married Eleanor Hatridge, (who had one son named Michael,) and moved to Greenland, Arkansas, where he now has a small flock of chickens, some dogs, horses and cats. He is very kind to his animals. He has been known to go outside in below-zero weather to put straw bedding in his dogs' houses to keep them warm.

He is a kind and loving man, hard-working to a fault, and it is men such as he that have made this country great. He had a good mother and father that never did anything outstanding or earth-shattering. They just brought children into the world to be honest, hard working, law abiding citizens. I am proud to be part of the Foster family.

Demps Fowler

Demps Fowler was the son of William Henry and Mat Feezer (Redwine) Fowler. He was born September 28, 1888 in Supply, Arkansas.

William H. Fowler was a private in Co. E, 25th Regiment Indiana Infantry during the Civil War. He was born in Randolph County, Arkansas. He enlisted as a substitute for Adam Lowe to serve for one year on October 13, 1864. According to family tradition he had to sue to get his money. He used the money to buy a farm near Maynard, Arkansas where he raised a large family.

After Demps' parents died, he lived with relatives and attended school in Maynard, Arkanas. Later he delivered mail on horseback between Supply and Pittman, Arkansas. He met Myrtle Lee Cox, also an orphan that was working as a domestic for one of his relatives. They decided, since both were orphans, they would get married and start their own housekeeping. They were married March 18, 1909 by C. A. Fowler. Myrtle's parents were Charlie L. and Martha Moss Cox.

While living on a farm near Maynard the following children were born: (1) Mont, born December 11, 1909 and married Maxine Plumee. (2) Lytle D., born June 23, 1913 and died September 13, 1933. On March 30, 1925, Charles Henry was born. He married Vera Lou Goree.

About 1928 Demps moved his family back to Springdale. This time they came in a T Model car. They spent the night in Harrison, Arkansas in a hotel. Charles recalls that he cried for a piece of pie and got it. Lytle and Wilma rode with the Joe Redwine family in their car. The Fowlers lived northeast of Springdale until the winter of 1935 to 1936; then they moved to a new rock house on the Zion road.

Demps peddled apples with Alph Beasley. He also, worked for Springdale water and sewer department and helped lay the first water lines. Clemens Bernhard Franke

Clemens Bernhard Franke born in Cullen, Alabama May 30, 1884, died December 3, 1971 in Springdale, Arkansas of parents who came from Eppendorp, Germany in or near 1882. In Germany, the name was Francke, but the (c) was changed in this country to Franke.

Clemens grew to manhood in Missouri and worked in his brother's store in Willow Springs. The Franke store had a competitor, Ferguson mercantile, where Maude Louise Lovan, a Ferguson in-law worked when she didn't teach school.

Love won out over store rivalry when she and Clemens married and opened a store of their own in Marshfield, Missouri. This is the store that they brought to Fayetteville in 1916 and operated until 1935, when it was the first store on N. Block to burn.

They moved to the south side of the square until they bought a rooming house directly behind Guisinger Music Store and built a store on the side.

They built a home on Mount Sequoyah, and in 1940, Clemens was asked to run the Arkansas Brokerage in Springdale while the owner was in the service. He also was instrumental in starting the Camps Store on Emma Street and worked at Sherry's Shoe Store.

Clemens was married two more times after Maude, who was the only twin to survive a premature birth. Her father had been wounded in the battle of Prairie Grove, and ill health remained with him the rest of his life when they moved to Willow Springs where she grew up.

Maude Franke attended college in Springfield, Missouri and taught school before she married Clemens and had two children: Walter Max, 12-17-12, Marshfield, Missouri, died 7-23-76, Fayetteville, and Frieda Cornlia, born 1-16-13, married a Fayetteville boy, Bertice Monroe Haskins in 1935. They had one child, Lawrence B. Haskins. Lawrence married Joan Harriet Driemier of Saint Louis, Missouri in 1965. They have two children: Kristine, 1973 and Rusty, 1976. Their family resides in Rhode Island.

Walter Max Franke, an electrician, married Cleffie F. Blanton in 1940 and they lived in his family home. Two children, Maude Louise Franke, 5-20-43 was named for her grandmother. She is married to Norman Powers and works at Fayetteville Airport. Norman works at SWEPCO.

Louise has two sons by a former marriage, Franklin Shane Thorpe, 1962, Fayetteville, who has a son, Michael Shane, 11-19-84, who lives with his mother in Fayetteville. Her other son, Jeffrey Paul Thorpe, 8-23-63, lives in Joplin, Missouri with his wife, Joanna Wise of Fayetteville.

Walter M. and Cleffie Franke's other child is Walter Bates Franke (6-17-1947). His family lives in Fayetteville. He works in the University Book Store. His wife, Patricia Kay Bivens 1947, is in insurance. Their only child was born in the Netherlands while he served in U. N. Air Force there, Jennifer Susan Franke (1-4-1971) and is in Senior High School.

Another Franke family living in Springdale, Arkansas is John R. Franke (12-15-1940) Mammoth Springs, Arkansas. He is connected with Tysons and his wife, Catherine Nally Franke (7-23-1944), San Jose, California, were married in California in 1964, moved to Springdale soon to raise his children here. Catherine works in Springdale Hospital. Children: (1) Jeffery Allen Franke (12-14-1966 California) works at Tyson and (2) Deborah Lynn (1-24-1968 Las Gastos, California). Deborah is in her first year at the University. This family came to Springdale in 1978, and John R. Franke's father, also John and Walter M. Franke are first cousins.

John Wesley Freeman

John Wesley Freeman, I, born April 14, 1836, and Docia Caroline Haney, born May 1, 1840, married and lived in Georgia. Docia was born in the Carolinas so it is uncertain where they met and married. They were living in the area of Woodstock, Georgia during the Civil War. During that time it was necessary to hide any food they might have so it wouldn't be taken by soldiers. One day some Union soldiers came by and found a keg of molasses under the back porch where it had been hidden. Since John wasn't home it was up to Docia to defend their property. Being a spunky lady she tried to get the keg back. In the struggle she was pushed and she fell getting her feet tangled in her sweet potato vines but not before she managed to pull the plug out of the keg spilling at least some of the precious molasses. As the soldiers ran off Docia was screaming after them, "You blue devils".

Sometime after the war ended John brought his family to Arkansas. They first settled near the Fourche River in Yell County. Supplies were purchased at Dardanelle. The home didn't have screens on doors and windows and the mosquitoes were so bad that many people were infected with malaria. About 1881 John and Docia decided to look for another place to raise their family since they had lost one child, Luvinna, to the disease. Along with the other five children, Lorenzo born February 10, 1860, John Wesley II born February 14, 1862, Laura born 1864, Fred born September 15, 1869, and Minnie born October 19, 1876, they migrated to Washington County. They rented a small log cabin about two miles south of Clyde on what had been known for years as the Algie Green place.

John didn't enjoy his new home very long as he died on November 16, 1883. Docia, unlike most women of that time, chose not to remarry immediately. It wasn't until her youngest child was sixteen that she married Joe G. Reed on April 27, 1892. She lived until September 25, 1912. John I and Docia are buried in Edmiston Cemetery east of Morrow.

Lorenzo married Clara Simpson May 29, 1901. Children: Bertha, Garland, Docia, Zula, Zelda. John Wesley II married Lula Adams. (See Below) Laura married Jim Reed February 27, 1885. The family lived in the Clyde area then on Skylight Mountain. Lula died December 15, 1896 of appendicitis when their baby, Jettie, was seven weeks old. John desperately needed a mother for his children so he married young Vesta Eaton of Clyde six months later on June 9, 1897. Later they moved to Floydada, Texas where both are buried. John died November 20, 1917 and Vesta died October 6, 1954. Antioch, Bethesda, Cox, Edmiston and Lincoln Cemeteries in Washington County are the resting places for most of the deceased family members.

It was on Skylight that four out of eight children married a Glidewell. Three married local sweethearts and Lizzie chose a Texan to be her mate. All were farmers, some all their lives while others eventually moved into town and pursued other occupations.

John Wesley II and Lula had eight children, thirty-nine grandchildren, seventy-four great-grandchildren, scores of g-g-grandchildren and many g-g-g-grandchildren. Many of these descendants still live in Washington County while others are in surrounding states and some as far away as the east and west coasts.

Henry Froshour

Henry Froshour was born September 9, 1789 in Pennsylvania. Family tradition says he was of Black Dutch background. Other researchers have indicated that he was probably a descendant of Hans Froschauer. In various records, the name has been spelled Frashour, Freshour, Froshour, Froushour. Most of the early records are Freshour, but in later years, he spelled his name Froshour.

In December, 1812 Henry Froshour enlisted as a private in Captain Samuel Bunch's Company of Mounted Militia, East Tennessee Volunteers. He was with them until March, 1813. In June, 1813 he served eight days as a private in Captain Elias Cost's Company, 71 Regiment (Swift's), New York Militia. He once again enlisted in October, 1814. This time as ensign with Captain John Trimble's Company of East Tennessee Volunteer Mounted Gunmen, Major William Russell's Battalion. He was with them for six months, leaving them in April, 1815. He received $8.00 per month for his miltary service. One item of particular interest is his allowance for his horse. He was given an allowance of 40 cents per day.

On May 10, 1821 Henry Froshour married Jane Finley in Shelby County, Alabama. Jane was born about 1797 in North Carolina. Henry and Jane's first four children— Dempsey, Ruth Ann, Dorcas Isabella and Mary J. were born in Georgia. Family tradition states that Dempsey had a twin sister who died in infancy, but no records have been found to prove this. Sometime between 1829 and 1831, the family moved to Tennessee where Nancy was born.

In 1832, the Froshours and some of the Finleys migrated to Arkansas, where their two youngest children, Martha H. and Barbara were born.

For the trip to Arkansas, they built flat-bottom boats. They left eastern Tennessee in the spring of the year to take advantage of the high water during that time of year. They started their journey March 25, 1832 in Calhoun, Tennessee on the Hiwassee River. The original diary of their journey is in the possession of Mrs. Lina Ruth Baker who resides near Van Buren, Arkansas. She is a great-granddaughter of Henry Froshour.

It took them two months to make the trip. They traveled down the Hiwassee until they reached the Tennessee River. During their time on the Tennessee, the journal records that they "ran wild" down the river for three days. This surely must have been a terrifying time for them. Upon reaching the junction of the Ohio and Tennessee Rivers, they traveled down the Ohio to the Mississippi, then down the Mississippi to the Arkansas. They traveled up the Arkansas River to where Fort Smith is now located, then traveled overland to the Vineyard Township area of Washington County.

One of the Finleys who made the trip with them was Jane's brother, Thomas Nesmith Finley. He settled near them in Arkansas.

Although they came to Arkansas in 1832, the first recorded land transactions aren't until 1839. Henry Froshour received land patents for eighty acres in Vineyard Township and for eighty acres just over the line in Oklahoma. This last seems to substantiate the story passed down through the family that Henry brought his horses to Arkansas, planning on racing them. But horse racing was not allowed in Arkansas. He obtained land in Oklahoma, built a racetrack, and raced his horses there. This location is just barely across the state line from Evansville and was known as Wild Horse Canyon.

Henry Froshour was a blacksmith. Family tradition says that he was the only grown man in Washington County during the war years who lived through the Civil War. The story says that neither side harmed him because of his ability to repair their guns. The huge walnut tree under which his blacksmith shop stood is still standing on the old homeplace. The muzzle-loading rifle which he gave to his son-in-law Moses Patrick Ray as a wedding present is still in the family's posession. It is now owned by Harlan Ray of Mulvane, Kansas, a great-great-grandson.

Five of the Froshour daughters were married in Washington County between 1841 and 1858. The oldest daughter, Ruth Ann, married Moses Patrick Ray September 19, 1841. They moved to Marion County, Arkansas settling on East Sugarloaf Creek near its confluence with the White River.

Dorcas married John M. Blevins January 19, 1848. They remained in Washington County, where Dorcas died in September, 1862 leaving her husband and three children: Henry, 13; James, 6 and Crissie, 3. A daughter, Martha, preceded her in death, dying in 1859. Dorcas and John are buried in Lewis Cemetery near Evansville.

Barbara, the youngest daughter, married Augustus N. Smith on January 24, 1856. They had at least two children that we know of: Thomas J. and M. S. They may possibly have had a son Stewart. A family letter refers to the death of a Stewart Smith on August 17, 1875. Barbara and Gus, as they were known, may have died before 1870 as their children were with Jane Froshour in the 1870 census.

In 1857, Martha H. Froshour married Wiley B. Bailey. They had a daughter Gertrude born November 22, 18457. Martha died when Gertie was about fifteen months old. In a letter to Ruth Ann Ray, Mary J. Huffman told about Martha's death. It seems that Martha was doing her washing. She hurt herself carrying a kettle of water from the stream to the house. "That night she was taken with very severe pains in her bowels so that she could not move herself in the least or any person move her without her screaming with pain." The next day they sent for the doctor, but he did not get there until the following day. "When he come he done all he could, but to no purpose. He stayed till nearly night, but could do no good, we think she broke some of her insides lifting the kettle." Martha died the next day, February 24, 1859.

The last of the girls to marry was Mary J. She married Henry F. Huffman September 9, 1858. They had two children: Harvey McDonald and Nancy Amy. Henry Huffman was killed during the Civil War period. Mary lived with her mother until her remarriage on February 23, 1873. She married William M. Finley, a relative on her mother's side of the family.

Little is known about the Froshour's son, Dempsey. Family tradition says that he was deaf and dumb. Census records do indicate that he lived with his parents all of his life. Nancy Froshour was still with the family in 1860, but does not appear with them in the 1870 census. The family says that she was killed when thrown from a horse.

Henry Froshour died of pneumonia August 22, 1869 and was buried in the Lewis Cemetery near his home. At one time, he owned the land on which the cemetery is located, later selling it to Lewis Evans.

At the time of his death, Henry Froshour owned 133 acres of land lying in Vineyard Township. There was a good spring on the land. Also on the land was a log dwelling, a frame kitchen, a meat house and good stables. The well and some of the foundation stones of the house are still visible. At his death, Henry also owned nine head of cattle, about forty-five head of hogs, one horse, one set of blacksmith tools, one plow, two sets of plow gear and three guns. Henry's will left all of his estate to his wife and his son Dempsey "during his life."

Jane Froshour died July 1, 1881, but the final settling of the estate was not made until 1884. This would seem to indicate that Dempsey's death probably occurred in 1883 or 1884. The court ordered that the land be sold at public auction. The sale took place February 23, 1884 on the courthouse steps. T. J. Smith (Barbara's son) bought the land for $441.25. At some time between February and July, 1884 he sold the land to Momes P. Ray.

According to the family, Jane and Dempsey Froshour are buried in the Lewis Cemetery where Henry was buried, but there are no tombstones indicating the location of the graves.

Two of Moses Patrick and Ruth Ann Ray's children later resided in Washington County. Their daughter, Martha Ann Mooneyham was living near Farmington in 1875. She is the one who wrote the letter telling of Stewart Smith's death. Moses P. Ray's son, Jefferson Davis Ray, also resided in Washington County in later years. Three descendants of "Uncle Jeffie" are presently residing in Washington County: his son, Robert Leonard Ray of Lincoln; his grandson, Jerry Ray of Farmington; and his great-grandson, Jerred Ray also of Farmington.

Descendants of Henry Froshour's oldest daughter, Ruth Ann, and her husband Moses Patrick Ray hold a family reunion in Washington County each fall. The third Saturday of October, family members from Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Arkansas gather at the Latta barn in Prairie Grove Battlefield Park for visiting and a carry-in dinner. The oldest living descendant of Henry Froshour was present at the 1986 reunion. She was ninety-five-year-old Lillie Whelchel of Lincoln, Arkansas. Lillie Huffman Whelchel died on her 96th birthday, June 30, 1987.

Louisa Spalding Frost

In 1873, Louisa (Spalding) Frost, widow of James Frost along with her eight children, including Ben, George W., Jack, Charley, Nancy, Henry and Sarah, moved from Missouri to Washington County, Arkansas, settling about one mile south of Durham, Arkansas. James Frost had died in Missouri during a move of the family from Jefferson County, Kentucky to Kansas. All children born in Kentucky except Sarah, who was born in Missouri.

It is thought that Mary Elizabeth Frost, John Will Frost and Eliza Jane Frost did not travel with the family, but stayed in Kentucky.

James Frost was born February 15, 1824 in Kentucky, was married in the Methodist Episcopal South Church in Versailles, Kentucky August 16, 1846 to Louisa Spalding, daughter of George Spalding and Betsy Heathman.

George Spalding, born 1800, was son of Robinson Spalding and Fanny Jones and was married in Orange County, Virginia 1789. Betsy Heathman was daughter of George Heathman.

Louisa Spalding Frost died September 1896 and is buried in Shumate Cemetery just south of Durham, Arkansas beside her son, Henry J. Frost who died May 24, 1883.

On October 27, 1895 at Durham, Washington County, Arkansas, Charles Jordan Frost, son of James and Louisa Spalding Frost, married Martha Jeneta Malone.

Martha was daughter of George W. Malone and Margaret Elizabeth Clark, whose parents are unknown at this time.

Martha had three brothers, all younger than she, but her parents and the two youngest sons died of typhoid fever near Fort Smith, Arkansas about the year 1887. Her brother, Taylor Malone, also survived, moved back to Washington County, married Lillie Frost. The Charles Jordan Frost family and Taylor Malone family later moved to Seminole County, Oklahoma.

Census reports show G. W. Malone and wife Margaret as being born in Missouri.

Arthur Fry

Arthur Fry was born near Dodson, Montana March 10, 1921 on the homestead of his parents, Sidney Wilbert and May Lenora (Brown) Fry. He graduated from high school there in 1939, obtained a B. S. degree in chemistry from Montana State University in 1943 and served in the U. S. Navy until 1946. After the war, he worked as a chemist in Oak Ridge, Tennessee for two years, and then obtained his Ph. D. degree in organic chemistry from the University of California at Berkeley in 1951.

Lois Marie (Gunning) Fry was born in Sterling, Kansas May 5, 1922 to Francis William and Emma Amelia (Willms) Gunning. She lived in Sterling and Hutchison, Kansas near Johnstown, Colorado and at Turner, Oregon where she graduated from high school in 1937. She obtained a B. A. degree in chemistry from Linfield College in McMinnville, Oregon in 1941 and worked as a chemist in Portland, Oregon until 1946. She later became a chemist at Oak Ridge National Laboratories in Tennessee where she met and married her husband in 1947. She obtained an M. S. degree in nuclear chemistry from the University of Arkansas in 1960, and worked there for some years as a teacher and in nuclear chemistry research.

The Frys moved from California to Arkansas in 1951 where Arthur joined the University of Arkansas chemistry faculty; they have lived in Fayetteville since that time. Arthur teaches organic chemistry and has been active in research on determining the mechanisms of organic reactions. His research proposals have been successful for all of his professional life in attracting substantial funding from the Atomic Energy Commission and the National Science Foundation, to support students and to purchase equipment and research supplies. He served two terms as Chemistry Department Chairman and has been on the National Council and the Council Executive and Publications Committees of the American Chemical Society. He has served as President of the Arkansas Academy of Sciences, and as Chairman of the University of Arkansas Faculty Senate, and has been active in many other professional organizations and in evaluating chemistry programs at other colleges and universities. He was made a University Professor in 1984, an honor which he cherishes. He enjoys both teaching and research, and loves interacting with students at all levels. He has directed the research programs of many undergraduates, M. S., Ph. D. and postdoctoral students, several of whom are today science leaders in Arkansas.

Lois has been involved in many church and community projects; some of her most satisfying activities have been working to desegregate Fayetteville elementary schools in 1962-64, being on a church and then a city committee in 1970-75 to enable low-income people to repair their homes, being a volunteer reading tutor in the public schools, being an elder in First Presbyterian Church, and working on service projects with the League of Women Voters.

The Frys have traveled extensively and spent two years on sabbatical leaves in New Zealand and Australia. In Arkansas, they have enjoyed knowing many foreign students. Among Lois' hobbies are weaving, piano, genealogy and hiking. Art's hobbies include sports, flower gardening, hiking and genealogy.

Their children are two sons, Gene and Brian, and one daughter Marian, all born in Oakland, California; they graduated from Fayetteville High School and have earned advanced degrees in economics, marine biology and psychology.

Dr. John Jacob Funkhouser

The Funkhouser family arrived in west Washington County about 1830, and located a few miles southwest of Lincoln, where they established a large farm on what came to be called Sugar Hill, from the many sugar maple trees that grew there. Sugar Hill became the name of a community, and the church building of that name is still in use. The Sugar Hill Cemetery was first established as the Funkhouser Cemetery; it is still sometimes so called.

Much of the following is abstracted, with permission of the author, from Funkhouser, A Swiss-American Genealogy by Frieda Funkhouser Wilson, Copyright 1978.

The place of origin of the family is Trub, in the Canton of Bern, Switzerland. Fankhaus is part of the township of Trub, situated in the Emmenthal, a farming area in the foothills of the Alps. Fankhaus is the name of a farm and a little valley (Fankhausgraben) which was settled about the 13th Century. In the language of that time and place "Fang" was a deep pit or hole, used as a trap to catch bears. "Haus" meant house. so the Fang-housers were those who lived in the house near the bear trap. The name later became Fankhouser, and in the U. S., Funkhouser. In 1978 one Hans Fankhouser, a retired station master for the Swiss Federal Railways was living in Langenthal, Switzerland, supplied most of the above information.

The earliest known reference to the family in Swiss records is April 23, 1364, when "Hans at Vanghus" had to make good on a note he had signed for neighbor Oelrich Koch. Henry Funkhouser, and wife Catherine Boyd, who settled on Sugar Hill, in Washington County were about the same age, born 1780 in Virginia. They were both 69 years old on the census of 1850, Washington County, Arkansas. There are conflicting dates for Henry's death, but Catherine died in 1874, age 94. Both are buried at Sugar Hill. Henry and Catherine may have married in Buncombe County, North Carolina; they lived some time in Tennessee (1830 census, McMinn County) before coming to Arkansas. They had 7 children; Dr. John Jacob Funkhouser, 1802-1874; three unidentified daughters. John Funkhouser, 1818-1852, Allen Funkhouser 1822-1881, unidentified son.

I heard that Henry had a brother Christopher, who left Tennessee with him, but who went north to Illinois. Afterward they never corresponded or visited. I do not think any of the later Funkhousers of Summers knew about the northern branch.

Dr. John Jacob Funkhouser, known as Jacob, first married Jane Tilley, believed to have been a daughter of John Tilley, who lived at the south end of Rhea Valley, west of Prairie Grove, or at least of that family. Dr. Funkhouser bought several hundred acres of land north of Summers, and moved a log house from his father's farm at Sugar Hill, to his land at Summers, using oxen. It stood on the east side of Arkansas Highway 59 some 1/2 mile north of Summers. Jane did not long survive, however; and as his second wife he took Eliza Jane Cole Tilley, widow of Jefferson Tilley of Arkansas and Texas, who had a son Steven Tilley who married (Ann or Anna) Gibson, daughter of Thomas Leroy Gibson, who lived on Ballard Creek, near the Oklahoma state line. Steve and Ann moved to California. Jefferson Tilley was a brother of Jane Tilley, Dr. Jacob's first wife.

Eliza Jane Cole Tilley was a daughter of Dr. John Cole, who owned the farm bordering Dr. Funkhouser's on the west, the farm where I now live.

Dr. Funkhouser had one daughter, Barsheba (b. 1845, d. 1884) by Jane Tilley. Barsheba never married.

The doctor's two other children were Henry, 1854-1925, and Mary Ellen, 1856-1883. Mary Ellen seems to have married a Miller or Mitchell, but divorced. No further information. Henry Funkhouser married Mattie Maxwell, daughter of John and Minerva (Barker) Maxwell, and had four children; Ethel Funkhouser, 1884-1975, married Henry V. (Moody) Brewster, of Cane Hill, no children. Audrey Funkhouser 1886-1971 married Walter D. Parks, no children. John Jacob Funkhouser (Jay) 1888-1955 never married. Virginia Elizabeth Funkhouser (Virgie), 1893-1980, married Charles H. Douglas, and lived in St. Louis, Missouri. One daughter, Audrey Jane, b. 1916 married Gordon Birk, of St. Louis. Four children: Douglas Gordon Birk, Roger Allen Birk, Rodney Birk (twin to Roger, died an infant), and Virginia Birk.

With the death of "Jay" Funkhouser in 1955 the surname disappeared from Washington County, except for a few black families (descendants of the black people owned by Dr. Jacob Funkhouser), who live in Fayetteville.

Allen Funkhouser 1822-1881 married (1) Mary Jane Kellam and Mary E. Fortner. Allen had 5 children: Tennessee B. (girl), John C., William Allen, Albert Henry and Anna Gibson Funkhouser.

John Clinton Futrall

John Clinton Futrall, (1873-1939), was president of the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville from 1913-1939. Futrall was born in Jackson, Tennnessee. His family later moved to Marianna, Arkansas, where Futrall attended grade school and high school. His father, Thomas Futrall, was a teacher and educational administrator in Marianna.

In 1871, with the passage of the Morrill Act, the Arkansas Industrial University was established. In 1899, the state legislature changed the name to the University of Arkansas. In 1888, at the age of 15, Futrall attended the Arkansas Industrial University for two years. He then attended the University of Virginia, graduating in 1894 with the degrees of bachelor of arts and master of arts. He did graduate work at the University of Chicago, John Hopkins University and the University of Bonn and the University of Hale in Germany. In 1920, Futrall received an honorary doctorate's degree in law from Tulane University at New Orleans. Six years later, he received the same honor from the University of New Mexico.

In 1894, Futrall became a professor of Latin at the University of Arkansas, married Annie Gaines Duke in 1898 and they had three children, Clinton Duke, Helen, and Emily, all of whom are deceased. Emily had one daughter, Joan Lines, currently living in Fayetteville. Joan has three sons, John Futrall Lines, William Robert Lines, and Christopher Duke Lines who is presently attending the University of Arkansas. John Lines has two sons, Sam and Justin, and the family resides in Ponca City, Oklahoma. William Robert lives in El Dorado, Arkansas.

Conditions at the university were far from ideal when Futrall became president, according to Robert A. Leflar in his book, The First 100 years, a centennial history of the University of Arkansas. Futrall employed the first registrar, the first business manager, the first superintendent of buildings and grounds, and the first dean of men that the university ever had. He organized the university into schools and colleges. He also formed the student senate. In essence, Futrall formed a modern university, one with a "broadening viewpoint", said Leflar.

For a time, Futrall was an unpaid coach of the Arkansas football team and served as chairman of the Athletic Committee. He also helped organize the Southwest Conference.

Improving the school's library was another high priority for Futrall. In 1914, he appointed a professional librarian and moved the library from the north side of Old Main to the south side of the building. Using his own money, he paid architects for part of the work done on the new library building, which is now known as Vol Walker Hall. The library increased its size from 15,000 books in 1913 to 200,000 in 1939. Philosophy and psychology departments were added in 1923. In 1926, the College of Business Administration was created.

In 1924, the university was accredited and gained membership in the prestigious North Central Association; in 1931, another goal of Futrall's was achieved when the undergraduate program was approved by the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa.

On September 12, 1939, John Clinton Futrall, 66 years old, was killed in a car accident. In his honor the Board of Trustees named the student union Futrall Memorial Hall, along with resolutions of respect from the state and various parts of the nation. President Futrall was a member of Who's Who in America from 1913 until his untimely death.

The wife of John Clinton Futrall, Annie Gaines Duke, was born in Fayetteville in 1872, the daughter of Helen Gaines and Julius Linn Duke, the owner of Duke's Jewelry Store in Fayetteville. Julius Linn Duke's father and mother, Courtney M. and Catherine Jackson Duke, migrated with their infant son to Fayetteville from Missouri in 1854. Julius Duke served in the Confederate army and returned to Fayetteville and the jewelry business. He was buried with the honors of the Odd Fellows Society.

Annie Gaines Duke Futrall served her entire life in Fayetteville, Arkansas, on committees and various organizations to help perpetuate the growth of the University of Arkansas. She died in 1964. Futrall Hall, a dormitory located on the grounds of the University of Arkansas, bears her name.

Ronald "Pete" Gardner

Ronald "Pete" Gardner was born June 25, 1924, the son of Ronald Gardner, Senior and Ruth Young Gardner, in Fort Smith, Arkansas.

His great grandfather, William Henry Harrison Gardner, was born at Cane Hill, Arkansas in December of 1842. The present generation has no knowledge of why the family was there. The 1860 census of Fort Smith shows him residing there with his father, John Gardner, his mother, brothers and sisters.

William Henry Harrison Gardner married Virginia Carnall, a daughter of John Carnall who was one of the founding fathers of Fort Smith. It is understood, by the family, that Carnall Hall (a women's dormitory at the University of Arkansas) was named for another daughter, Emma Carnall.

Ronald "Pete" Gardner attended the University of Arkansas from 1941 until 1945.

Ronald "Pete" Gardner married Jean Richards, born August 4, 1924 in Dow, Oklahoma on July 15, 1944 at Berkeley, California.

In March of 1946, Jean and Pete moved to Springdale, Arkansas from Fort Smith. Their two oldest daughters, Wendy Jean and Sally Ann were born in Fort Smith because Springdale did not have a hospital at that time. The two younger daughters, Cindy Lee and Julie Lynn were born in Washington County.

Pete entered the insurance business in Springdale in 1946 and is continuing in that profession today, 1987. He is vice-president of Rebsamen Insurance, formerly Gardner Insurance Agency in Springdale, Arkansas.

Wendy Jean is married to Frank Grobmyer. She has two children: Ronald Gardner Green and Jessie Mallory Grobmyer, all living in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Sally Ann Gardner lives in Dallas, Texas where she works for American Telephone and Telegraph (AT&T).

Cindy Lee married Herbert Anderson Lewis III "Andy", a descendant of a pioneering Washington County family. Their children are Herbert Anderson Lewis IV, Miles Martin Lewis and Catherine Lee Lewis, and they reside in Fayetteville.

Julie Lynn Gardner Rodgers has one son, John Stanley Rodgers, Junior and resides in Fayetteville.

James Bromfield Garrett

James Bromfield Garrett and Charity Kimmins Garrett came to the Mayfield, Arkansas area in 1857/8 from Hickman County, Tennessee. Their farm was about one-half mile east of Mayfield in Section 15. James Bromfield Garrett died November 25, 1887 and Charity Garrett died April 12, 1896. Both were buried in the family plot on their farm about one-eighth mile west of their farm home. In 1944, the cemetery was fenced but has since been plowed under by a previous owner of the farm.

Charity Kimmins Garrett

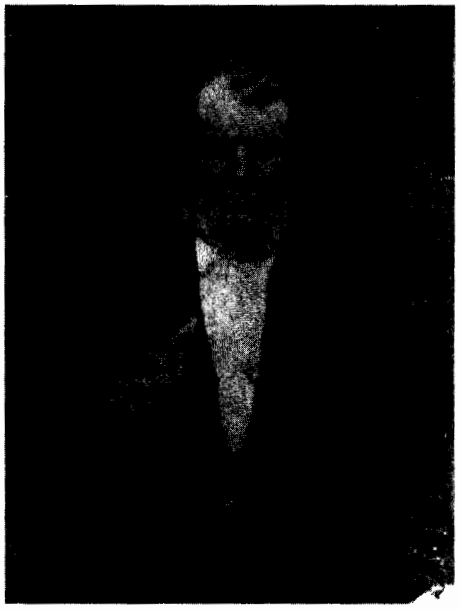
James was born in a covered wagon October 11, 1816 on the road from North Carolina to Tennessee. His mother was named Ann and his father was Levi Garrett. In the history of Hickman County, Tennessee it states that "Brushy Fork in Upper Beaverdam was settled about 1820 by Levi Garrett, John Hinson and the Halbrooks, all from North Carolina." In historical sketches of Hickman County, it states that "Levi Garrett, Robert, Berry and William Hicks settled in Beaverdam Creek in 1815". Charity "Polly" Kimmins was the daughter of Joseph Kimmins, born August 8, 1763 in Ireland and Margaret "Peggy" Cooper born October 22, 1773 in Virginia.

The children of James and Charity Garrett were Joseph Garrett, John Cooper Garrett, Mary P. Garrett, Caroline Garrett,



James Bromfield Garrett

Adeline Garrett and Ann Garrett. Joseph Garrett was born 1837/8 in Hickman County, Tennessee. He married Millie Rice and in 1858 came to near Wesley, Arkansas where a son James W. Garrett was born January 20, 1859. In 1861, Joseph joined the Confederate Army with his brother John Cooper Garrett in Captain Browns Company, Arkansas Infantry. They were in the 16th Regiment Arkansas Infantry in the Battle of Pea Ridge, Arkansas. It was reported that after the battle, the Army went east to Corinth, Mississippi. Here, John Garrett did not reenlist, but returned to Arkansas. Joseph died on the way home at Quitman Hospital, north of Little Rock, Arkansas on July 17, 1862. His wife, Millie returned to Tennessee with her infant son and married William G. Frazier. Her son finally settled in Lawrence County, Tennessee and was Mayor of Lawrenceville for many years. They had a daughter, Kizzie Frazier. Millie was born August 3, 1838 and died September 6, 1919.

John Cooper Garrett was born November 10, 1838 in Hickman County, Tennessee. He married Nancy Elvira Dodson born November 28, 1841 in Tennessee, the daughter of Reverend Thomas Dodson and Nancy Sharp Dodson. He was a Primitive Baptist Preacher and was ordained as a minister in 1840 in the Center Primitive Baptist Church near Beaverdam in Hickman County, Tennessee. In 1850, he and his wife applied for a letter and it is believed that is when they moved to Wesley, Arkansas. He was a preacher at the Richland Church near Wesley. The Drakes Creek Church was constituted in 1874/5 by Reverend Thomas Lodson and the Mt. Pleasant Church was constituted in 1878. He was a minister for 35-40 years in the area. He died December 20, 1884. When John C. Garrett first enlisted in the Confederate Army in 1861, it was with Captain J. M. Nelson's Company of Volunteers. This Company was not mustered into service and he enlisted in Captain Brown's Company of three Arkansas Infantry. When the Company was mustered out of service, he was made First Lt. in the 16th Company of the Arkansas Regiment of Infantry. It was with this that he was in the Battle of Pea Ridge under General Ben McCullough. After the Battle, he crossed over the Mississippi under General Price. Here the Army was reorganized and Lt. Garrett declined reelection and came back to Arkansas and enlisted in J. P. Ruffs Company of Calvary. He was then transferred to Captain D. T. Smith's Company where he remained until the close of the war. He was in no other major battles after Pea Ridge. He was in the Army four years and five days.

The children of John and Nancy Garrett were: (1) Edna Denina Garrett who married Simon Lewis. She was born July 23, 1959 at Wesley. Died July 29, 1928 at Vancouver, Washington. (2) Julia Agnes Garrett who married Thomas Jefferson Shields. She was born October 11, 1961 at Wesley and died June 8, 1951 at Burns, Oregon. (3) Emma Etta Garrett who married Robert Jackson Williams. She was born March 9, 1864 at Wesley and died December 23, 1934 at Burns, Oregon. (4) Erastus (Ras) Cooper Garrett who married Lorena Rader. He was born December 1, 1866 at Wesley and died August 8, 1959 at Winthrop, Washington. (5) Elizabeth (Lizzie) Garrett who married Pleasant Cheney. (8) Joseph T (No period) Garrett who married Dora Caldwell was born August 3, 1878 at Goshen, Arkansas and died December 1938 in California.

John Cooper Garrett was a farmer, cattleman and dairyman all his adult life. One account says that he was in the Mercantile Business. They had slaves. The 1860 census shows one female, age 22, one male, age 6, one female, age 3 and one male, age 2. Edna Denina Garrett Lewis later said that she could remember being raised by a Negro Mammy. During the Civil War, they raised sheep and Grandmother Garrett would take the wool, card it and weave it into uniforms for the Confederate Soldiers. Marie Shields said her mother would spin the wool late at night and early in the morning and her children thought that she never went to bed.

John Cooper Garrett and his family came west to California in 1879 by immigrant train to the home of Mrs. Garrett's brother, William Dodson at Cedarville, California at a place called Surprise Valley. In 1880, they moved to Lakeview, Oregon and in 1882, to Riley, Oregon about 30 miles west of Burns.

In 1900, John Garrett and Nancy Garrett, with Ras Joseph and Stella and her husband, Richard Miller, went to the Methow Valley at Winthrop, Washington. There, they purchased farms and were also in the cattle business. Joseph later returned to California.

James William Garrett

James William Garrett was born August 31, 1831 in Tennessee. In 1850, he was living with his parents Elijah and Polly Garrett in Benton County, Arkansas. On the 1860 census of Benton County, we find him in his own household, along with his wife, Elizabeth (Nail) and four children: Aquilla, Sarah Catherine, Elijah and Mary E. Garrett. Aquilla married Ella May Latta, Sarah Catherine (1854-1942) married first Mark D. Shannon and second John H. Shannon, Mary E. (1858-1916) married Ira Allison McCalib. John and Mark Shannon were thought to be cousins but no proof has been found of this. Other children of James and Elizabeth born after 1860 were Susan P. (1863-1923) who married William Malachi Shannon and Martha J. (born 1865) who married Thomas J. Fletcher.

The 1830 and 1840 census records of Bedford County, Tennessee, show an Elijah Garrett who seems to be the same Elijah as that of Benton County in 1850. Elijah was born in South Carolina but it is not known where in that state.

In 1850 Elizabeth Nail was living with her parents Aquilla and Sarah (Lee) Nail. The Nails came from Tennessee. We do not know what happened to Elizabeth, but on February 1, 1867 in Benton County, James W. married Pamela Malissa (McDaniel) Bennett (1830-1919). They had three children: Amanda 'Delia' (circa 1869-1936) who married Milt Cox; Dora (1872-1952) who married Joe Chandler; and James Uriah Garrett (1875-1954) who married Florence Louisa McDaniel on June 23, 1901 at Paint Rock, Concho County, Texas.

It is not known just when James W. moved to Washington County, but he and his second wife, Malissa took an active part in establishing the Christian Church at Vineyard where he preached. He died August 21, 1892 and is buried in the Vineyard Cemetery, as is Malissa who lived until February 12, 1919.

William A. (Bill) Garriott

William Andrew (Bill) Garriott was born February 6, 1922, in Warsaw, Missouri. The son of William Forrest (born June 22, 1894, at Marshall, Missouri), and Elsie Viola Curtright Garriott, (born August 29, 1894 at Warsaw, Missouri). Bill had one brother, Leonard (Duke) Eugene, born March 30, 1920.

Lewis Leon and Ida Pearl Carrigan Thompson (Sadie's parents).

In 1924, when Bill was two years old, his parents moved to Arkansas. With stories of plenty of jobs, and knowing Arkansas as "The Land of Opportunity", William and Elsie Garriott packed up and left Missouri driving a 1916, 490 Touring Car. Bill's Uncle George Brown and his family came with them. Their car broke down in Bentonville, so they rode a train on in to Healing Springs, Arkansas. The Garriott family rented the upstairs of a two-story building. Uncle George set up a blacksmith shop which he ran until the beginning of World War II. Bill's father worked on farms for a living, and at one time his mother and father worked in a canning factory located over a creek. Elsie took both boys to work with them everyday. The boys played outside around the creek while their parents worked. The Garriott family lived at Healing Springs for two years.

Then they moved to Fayetteville out near Highway 62 West. Bill's father started working at Phipps Hardwood Mill. He worked there until 1929.

Bill remembers his Uncle Jim Swannigan who ran a moonshine still in Missouri. He made and sold moonshine. He once held the Revenue men off with his shotgun. They never did shut his still down.

Bill started school at Mount Zion on 62 West. It had two rooms, with first through eighth grades. (The old Zion school house is still standing). Bill and Duke walked five miles to school along what is now known as the Old Farmington Road. They carried their lunch in a "paper poke". It was a real treat when mom put in a slice of her strawberry pie.

In 1929, the beginning of the Great Depression, the Garriotts moved in a two-story house on top of Hansard Mountain. They could see Old Main at the University of Arkansas from that mountain. Bill still attended school at Mount Zion, which he did so until he finished eighth grade. Bill's father had an apple orchard, and raised tomatoes he sold to a canning factory. Bill was expected to help out with chores. The whole family worked together. Money was scarce in those days, and every penny helped.

The Garriotts later moved to what is now called Finger Road just off Highway 62 West. Bill's father worked for Mr. Charles J. Finger, an English author. His daughter, Helen, is an artist.

In 1933, Bill's father was disabled with arthritis. He bought seven acres from Mr. Finger and had a house built. Bill began working for Mr. Finger before and after school. He did chores earning ten cents an hour. He also picked berries and cut grapes. This helped the family income. After completing the eighth grade, Bill got a job with Tom Eades - Roy Hughes Construction. Working ten hours a day, at twenty-five cents per hour, he recalls they had a construction job in Springdale. Bill walked from his home on Highway 62 West to Springdale twice a day.

Bill later worked for the N. Y. A., a program Franklin D. Roosevelt installed to help youths during the Depression Years. Bill earned $18.75 a month, building cabinets and furniture. He also drove a bus transporting workers from Ozark to Fayetteville. The route was along the Old Pig Trail, a rough and dangerous dirt road.

At the age of 21, Bill was drafted into the Army. First stop was Camp Robinson at Little Rock, then on to Biloxi, Mississippi for basic training. Then on to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri to take training for North African Campaign. Bill fell sick with a fever, and the Army transferred him from the infantry to the Air Force. He went on to Albany, Georgia for training.

Bill remembers receiving a letter from his mother telling him that his brother, Duke, was missing in action at the Battle of the Bulge in Germany. The Garriott family feared they would never see Duke again. The Army finally contacted them that Duke had been found and was okay. Duke had been missing for eighteen days. At that time, Bill was on a cargo plane for the ATC Command on C54 Cargo Shift. He was a crew chief. He remained at this status until he was discharged February 18, 1946.

Bill returned home and bought a 1937 Ford convertible. He paid $300.00 for it.

He got a job helping build the Younkin and Sons Auto Repair Shop on North 71 in Fayetteville. When the building was completed, Bill stayed on and worked as a mechanic for Younkin and Sons for thirty years.

In 1946, Bill married Betty Ann Bohannan. William Ray (Billy) was born June 19, 1947 at City Hospital in Fayetteville. Billy attended school at Bates Elementary and Fayetteville High School. In 1948, Bill and Betty were divorced. Bill became a single-parent. Bill's mother Elsie took care of Billy while Bill worked.

Six years later, Bill married Hazel Edwards Miller. She had two children, Mary Lucille and James E. They were married for ten years.

At one time, Bill decided to build a race car. His son, Billy, helped out as part of the pit crew. Bill raced for almost four years, mostly at Elmdale Track in Springdale.

July 3, 1969, Billy married Brenda Kay Cameron. Billy has three children, Wanda Kay, born July 2, 1970, Amy Lynn born May 2, 1972, and Susan Renae, born May 8, 1973.

In 1965, Bill started dating Jessie Belle Smith. She had three children, Doskie Lee Stacks, Barbara Fern Stacks, and Phyliss Ann Wynne. Bill and Jessie dated for ten years before they married on September 20, 1975.

In 1974, Bill started working for the Washington County Road Department as a gas mechanic. He worked there for ten years until retirement in 1984.

October 18, 1981, Bill and Jessie suffered a tragic loss. Their seventeen year old daughter, Phyliss Ann, was killed in an automobile accident. They will never fully get over the shock of her death.

Bill has one son, four step-children, and nine grandchildren. The grandchildren know Bill and Jessie as Nanny and Pa.

Bill now lives on Van Hoose Drive in Baldwin and is remodeling his parents old homeplace at 633 Government in Fayetteville.

Bill is always quick to lend a helping hand to others. He says he enjoys helping other people any way he can. I feel very lucky and am proud to have him for my father. Many people know and love Bill Garriott.

John George

John George was given a land grant in 1812 in Buncombe, North Carolina for the sum of $50.00. It was a tract of land containing some 250 acres where, it seems, he had been living for some time. John's son Ansel married Sarah Carter about 1832. In 1842 Sarah's father, James Carter, sold Ansel and Sarah some 50 acres of land located in Yancy County, North Carolina for the sum of $150.00. Ansel and Sarah lived on this land until 1855 or 1860. They had 13 children that I can find. They may have had more. They sold the farm in 1855 or 1860 and moved to Laurel County, Kentucky where they lived until their deaths.

Their third child, Samuel, was my great-grandfather, who married Amanda Bowling. She was the daughter of Russell and Julia Bowling. They were married on October 29, 1858 in Clay County, Kentucky. Samuel and Amanda moved from Kentucky to Best, Arkansas where they lived until his death, and she lived with their daughter Lousia Ellkins until her death. They are both buried in the Best Cemetery in Best, Arkansas. They were the parents of 10 children.

Their sixth child, Robert (Bob) George was my grandfather. He married Margaret Elizabeth (Lizzie) Lewis. She was the daughter of Daniel and Minerva Hicks. Bob and Lizzie had 12 children of which 2 died as infants. Bob and Lizzie settled in Alabam, Arkansas (date unknown) where he operated a sawmill.

They sold the mill and moved to Pilgrim's Rest where they lived until his death on October 3, 1954. Lizzie lived with her youngest son Damon until her death on March 22, 1969, where she left some 240 descendants.

Their fourth son, Harvey Hays George was my father. Harvey was married to Effie Ann Wilson, the daughter of James Huey and Emily Alice (Locklin) Wilson. Harvey Hays and Effie Ann were married July 11, 1925 at Spring Valley, Arkansas. They were parents of 8 children, of which I am the youngest.

Arvle Gene George married Sharon Kay Calico May 30, 1959. We have two children and 3 grandchildren.

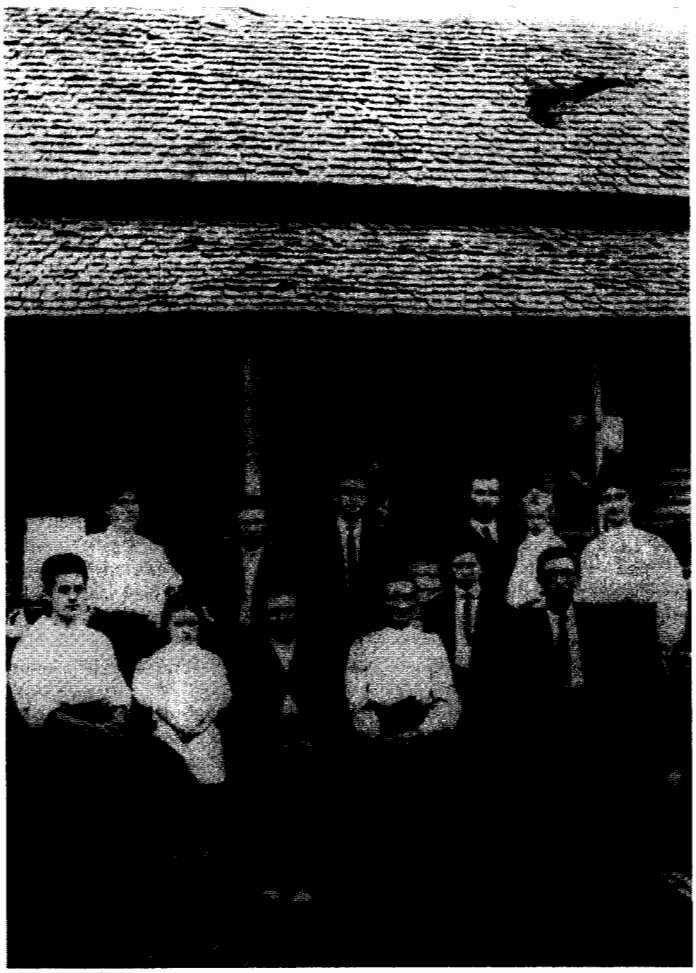
William George

William Andrew and wife Sarah Jane (Sexton) George and family settled in northwest Arkansas in 1887. They originally lived in Indiana, traveled by covered wagon to Texas, and later moved to Arkansas. They were Baptists.



The William Andrew George Family. Front row - first lady and small girl (unknown), William Andrew George, Sarah Jane Sexton George, Henry Lewis George and Charles Lee George. Back row - first lady (unknown), Martin A. George, William E. George, Hal H. Huffmaster, Willie Huffmaster (lived in Carthage, Missouri in 1974) Retta (Rettie) George Huffmaster. Picture taken in front of George home located west of Elm Springs, Arkansas.

Grandpa George homesteaded a farm west of Elm Springs. He was a fruit farmer, planted his own apple orchards, and later built his own evaporator where apples were peeled, sliced, and dried with furnaces. The dried fruit was transported by wagon and team to Springdale and shipped by railroad from that area. The family also raised their own sorghum cane and operated their own sorghum mill each fall. Income from these sources provided livelihood for the family of four daughters and four sons.

My dad, Henry George, was the youngest son. One daughter died at the age of eleven. Another daughter, Jane married the late Jim Luper and died leaving three small daughters. Two of Jane's daughters, Bertha Neal and Anna Morris, lived in Springdale until their death.

Grandpa bought another home in Elm Springs in 1922 just north of the Brush Creek bridge and the house still stands today. Grandpa died in 1927 and our family moved in to take care of grandmother.

My grandparents weren't highly educated, but Grandma could spell any word we asked her to spell. She told us stories of their experiences with wild animals and Indians trying to steal their horses at night as they traveled by covered wagon. Grandma died in 1932. My dad, Henry George, died in 1939.

All of the George children are gone now, but their descendants are scattered all over the U. S. A. A large number are settled in northwest Arkansas, especially the Springdale area. Rettie Huffmaster (a daughter), Bill and Martin George lived and died in Springdale.

The oldest son, Charlie, was one of northwest Arkansas' pioneers in the poultry industry. He operated a produce at Brush Creek and opened an office on East Emma in Springdale in 1931. He was President of C. L. George and Sons poultry business. My dad and John Tyson hauled chickens for the business to live markets in Kansas City and St. Louis and fed them on the way. Charlie was a Baptist and also member of the Board of Directors of First State Bank. He died in 1968, at 80 years old.

Grandma George's father was a Baptist preacher in Indiana. She has two grandsons and two great grandsons who are Baptist preachers today. They are Jessie Huffmaster of Louisiana, Carl George of Texas, and Billy Huffmaster of Mississippi, and Sonny Harvison of Guy, Arkansas.

If Grandpa George were here today, he could receive all kinds of services from his grandchildren and could see the name "GEORGE" flashing at night high above the feed mill at George's, Incorporated. Gene George is Chairman of the Board of George's, Incorporated, and his son, Gary, is President. Frankie George and son Luke work at the George Hatchery. Gene and Gary are also on the Board of Directors of First National Bank where Johnny George is employed. Gene is on the Board of J. B. Hunt Transport, Incorporated.

The Gene George family donated the land for the northwest Arkansas Radiation Therapy Institute on 68 Highway, and Gary George was the first chairman of the Board of N. A. R. T. I. Gene's sister, Lillian, married Joe Redwine was, at one time, a Springdale High School teacher.

Other grandsons: Richard Allen and Richard's two sons work for Heekin Can Company; J. D. Neal runs Neal's Cafe; Jesse Morris was a pump man for years; and John Allen is a CPA on West Emma. A great-great granddaughter, Dianna Bashaw, is also a CPA. Dianna's husband, Danny works for Easco, Incorporated. Several of the great-grandchildren work for Levi-Strauss in Fayetteville.

Other granddaughters: Florene Easley is switchboard operator for Jones Truck Lines; Idena Clark works for a shoe store in Springdale; Lelia Byrd works in a clothing store in Fayetteville; and Helen Pinkley's husband operates a huge grapepicker.

The late Luther George was on the Board of Directors of the First National Bank and member of the Board of Trustees of the Springdale Memorial Hospital (Luther's brother Gene presently serves on this Board). One Huffmaster granddaughter is a nurse in the hospital.

One memory I have of this family is that they were taught to work and to attend church. A lot of the descendants are good singers. One of my granddaughters, Mandy Allen, is studying to be an opera singer at Ouachita Baptist University in Arkadelphia.

Harvey Samuel Gibson was born 21 September 1878 and died 15 May 1963. He was married 7 October 1914 to Anna Mabel (Annie) born 26 February 1890 and died 8 May 1974, the daughter of John (Bud) Gibson and Hettie Gertrude Alexander Gibson. They had one child James Eugene Gibson (the writer), born 2 February 1919 and married (first) 12 February 1942 to Frances Lucille Waite, born 30 November 1919 the daughter of Dr. Ralph B. and Florence Edgington Waite; and married (second) 14 August 1975 to Mary Ellen Willis the daughter of Donald R. and Elna Catherine Fray Willis of Oak Park, Illinois. Children by his first wife: 1) James Patrick Gibson was born 29 October 1943 and was married 3 October 1964 to Elouise Cumbie, born 28 August 1943. They have one child Clendon Samuel Gibson, born 25 October 1972. 2) Margaret Ann Gibson was born 15 May 1945 and married 23 December 1968 to Michael Allen Beckman born 15 May 1945, the son of Bernard and Dorothy Beckman of Searcy, Arkansas; divorced in 1975. They have one child Julie Catherine Beckman born 12 July 1970. 3) Barbara Lea Gibson was born 11 August 1947 and married 26 August 1967 to George Otto Gierow born 6 February 1943 the son of Robert and Stella Gierow of Hot Springs, Arkansas. They have one child, Douglas Eugene Gierow born 14 September 1969. 4) Michael Kevin Gibson was born 5 October 1951 and was married 23 December 1971 to Connie Yvonne Whillock, born 14 June 1951 the daughter of Dean Whillock of Fayetteville, Arkansas. They have one child, Evan Benjamin Gibson born 24 November 1981.

My father was a "dyed-in-the-wool" farmer. He had little liking for any other occupation and any other place than this farm where I now live (1986). During his early years he and older brother John farmed their father's place and also rented land from Mr. Henry Funkhouser whose farm adjoined theirs on the east side. They produced corn, wheat, oats, cattle, hogs, clover and timothy hay, etc. Later, after his sister Ellen married, and she and Harvey divided their father's farm, he worked the 60 acres which fell to his share. Harvey built his house and barn in 1914-1915 in the extreme northwest corner of the place, where his father had deeded him 10 acres. This was a nice pin-oak grove, but when the bluegrass turf was gone (in rainy weather) it became a sea of the stickiest black mud in the whole world. Bermuda grass was planted in the yard which helped some. Harvey was a good farmer and read the farm magazines, Progressive Farmer, Cappers Farmer, etc., for the new ideas contained therein. He also worked with the "County Agent" to learn about improving his land and cattle. Some of the first terraces (erosion control dikes) were built in our fields under the direction of County Agent Heckman, whose widow yet lives (1986) at Fayetteville. Harvey also brought some of the first registered Shorthorn (Durham) cattle to this part of Washington County. He produced nearly all of our food on his own land. He butchered about six 300 lb. hogs every fall and salt-cured the meat. Only rarely was a beef butchered, though; they were to sell. Annie (my mother) had her hen house and turkey pens and we had all the chicken we could eat. There were peach, plum and cherry trees, providing fruit to can, as well as grape vines, black berries and raspberries. Later strawberries were grown as a commercial crop. We did not want for "poke" greens, and sassafras tea in the spring. When I can first remember, Harvey had a team of large sorrell horses names Sorrel and Selim. With these he plowed his fields and planted corn, wheat and oats. Also the vegetable garden which provided potatoes, onions, beans, lettuce and Annie's favorite flowers, zinnias. A "truck patch" produced watermelons, cantaloupes, sweet potatoes, parsnips and blackeyed peas. No, we never wanted for food. My fathers neighbors were the Coffmans on the north, his Uncle George Burkett to the South, and sister Ellen to the east. To the west were John Maxwell and his wife Zettie, and a cousin, George M. Gibson and wife Myrtle Alberty Gibson. Harvey kept a good buggy and a horse that served as both saddle horse and buggy horse, Ol Possum. He always kept the top side curtains of the buggy in good repair, so rain didn't keep him at home.

Harvey's first automobile, a 1928 Model "A" Ford was bought in 1929 from Luther Jones of the West-Jones Ford Agency at Westville, Oklahoma. It cost, as well as I can recall $519. and he paid cash realized from the sale of a herd of hogs he had raised. The next week he sold his horse and buggy to Mr. Urich, the "Watkins man" and pumper at the water tank on the Frisco R. R. a half mile South of us.

About 1910 there was a "land boom" in New Mexico, and Harvey and a good many other young bachelors and married couples went there homesteading 160 and 640 acre claims around Montoya, not far from Tucumcari. They found it was far to dry to farm there and all soon sold out and came home. Harvey's claim was a few miles southeast of Montoya on Ogle Flat and in 1950 when I was there a huge irrigation canal ran along one side of Ogle Flat. He should have kept his claim a few years. My father belonged to the Methodist Church and the Odd Fellows Lodge as long as it was active at Summers. He may have belonged to the Anti-horsethief Association, too, as his father was active in that organization. In politics Harvey was a Democrat. He still associated Republicans with "reconstruction" but said little about it. He walked with a slight limp, a result of a broken ankle, but was a powerful man of 6 feet in height and weighed 260 lbs. in his prime. He raised some of the first "bunches" of broilers grown in our neighborhood, remodeling his hen house to accommodate 500 chicks. A thermostatically controlled wood burning brooder was purchased to keep them warm in cold weather. It took 15 weeks to grow them out.

Harvey farmed with horses until he was 70 years of age. The last 15 years or so he operated a small (15 cow) Grade "C" dairy herd, and bought a Surge "milking machine" to hurry the milking along. Joe Brown picked up his milk to haul to Siloam Springs. In 1951, I bought my father's farm and he moved to a smaller place in Summers where he was living at the time of his death. My mother continued to live there for 9 or 10 more years.

Harvey was very much in favor of more and better public education, and was School Director for many years. He was much involved in having the two additions to the Summers School built as well as the "Gymnasium". I was never permitted to stay out of school because of bad weather. If it was too bad to walk, I was taken on horseback in the buggy or car. No farm work interfered either. School was important.

My father was a quail hunter in his youth and kept bird dogs, the last being "Ol Bird". He had a Remington pump shotgun, which, to my consternation he traded for a single barrel 12 guage that kicked like a mule, about the time I got old enough to hunt.

Harvey also served as Road Overseer for Price Township as did his brother John, and his cousin John. It was he who persuaded the landowners to give right of way so our road to town could be moved out of ditchs and creekbeds and fenced, so we could travel to town without opening gates.

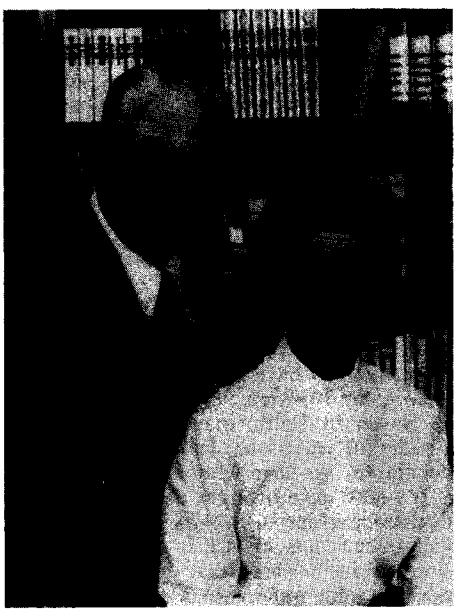
James Eugene Gibson

James Gibson was born on the same farm, and in the same house where he now resides, (though the house has been moved from its original location). Except for a few years in the military service, and two years at Westville, Oklahoma, he has always maintained his residence at Summers. For about 18 years he also had a house at Fayetteville, Arkansas while his children attended the University of Arkansas. James (or Eugene (Gene)) as his neighbors knew him attended elementary and high school at Summers, graduating with six others in 1937, when 18 years of age. At that time he could "make a hand" at any task that came up on a farm except driving the horse drawn grain binder, and butchering hogs. His father always drove the binder, and wouldn't let Gene stay out of school at "hog killing time". (A fact Gene used to remind him of when criticized for bad meat cutting.)



James E. Gibson and wife Mary Ellen Willis

During the summer of 1937, while hoeing strawberries, his father Harvey, asked Gene what he intended doing the rest of his life. Gene didn't know, having never given it a thought. Harvey then said, "Well, I will buy you four mules and harness, and a set of farming tools, rent the Burkett land, and you can farm as big as you can, or if you'd rather, I can send you to the University at Fayetteville, for four years. Take your choice." Gene thought for awhile, reviewed the price of cattle (10 cents a lb.) corn (50 cents a bushel), etc., and the unknown results of four years of college. He chose the college, and in September, 1937 was installed at Mabel Miller's boarding house at 325 Rollston Street, Fayetteville, Arkansas and enrolled at the U. of A. Other students living at 325 Rollston were Clyde Wooten, Doyne Lloyd, Joe Burnham, Francis Turner and Birkhead Jackson, plus, later Bill Myers and Frank Williams.

College proved to be pretty difficult, but after much late night study and some juggling of courses and majors, Gene was awarded his degree in 1942.

At the end of his second year of college Gene applied for the Advanced Course of R. O. T. C. (Reserve Officers Training Corps) and was accepted. This led after two more years to a commission as 2nd Lieutenant Infantry, Reserve. This commission was received in May of 1941, and Gene enrolled in summer school to get three more hours of Spanish needed to complete his requirements for degree. On July 1, 1941, he received orders to report to Camp Robinson, at Little Rock, for one year Active Duty. Then came Pearl Harbor, and Gene spent the next three years or so in the 38th Regiment 2nd Infantry Division. He was first stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas and while there "made" two Louisiana maneuvers. His next station was Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, for cold weather training, followed by Port of Embarkation, at Camp Shanks, New York, thence to Bessbrook, Co. Armagh, North Ireland, where his unit stayed 6 or 8 months, then traveled to Llanelli, South Wales where after a couple of months, they embarked on troop ships for the Normandy beaches. Gene landed on "Omaha" Beach the day after "D" Day, 1944, when he was Company Executive Officer of "I" Company 38th Infantry. Not long afterward the Company Commander, Captain Paul Hamble, was killed and Gene assumed commamd of the Company. Promotion to Captain followed and he served so until 4 August 1944 when he was seriouly injured at Colounces, France, and evacuated to a hospital in Saulsury, England and later to McClosky General Hospital, Temple, Texas. Gene spent the next four years in various Army hospitals, being finally retired for disability because of a withered right arm. During this period he was assigned to a total of a year's temporary duty at the University of Arkanasas as Professor of Military Science and Tactics, and received his promotion to Major.

Gene was awarded the Bronze Star, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Purple Heart, and various campaign and Battle Ribbons while in the service.

After retirement he taught 2 terms of school at Wright's Chapel, South of Westville, Oklahoma, and bought his father's farm and moved his family there. Later his Aunt and Uncle, Henry and Ellen Tennant, sold their farm to Gene and moved to Lincoln, Arkansas. Gene then operated a 160 acre farm raising cattle, taught a half term of school at Cincinnati, Arkansas, and resigning this post accepted a job with the Employment Security Division at Fayetteville, Arkansas, which post he held until his retirement in 1981 at age 62, except for one year when he was employed as Personnel Manager at Shakespeare of Arkansas, then returning to Employment Security Division.

Since 1975, Gene and wife, Mary Ellen have resided on their farm near Summers. He belongs to the Reserve Officers Association, Retired Officers Association, American Legion, Major Fontain R. Earle Camp, Sons of Confederate Veterans, (Commander) and several Genealogical and Agricultural societies, including the Ozark and National Cattlemans Association. Mrs. Gibson is a member of Beta Sigma Phi and Delta Delta Delta sororities at Fayetteville and is active in both.

Gene always liked hunting and guns and kept bird dogs. He still hunts some and still likes guns. He still has the first.22 rifle he ever bought (in 1935) and it is still in good condition and accurate. He is also interested in Citizens' Band and short wave radio.

John Gibson

My great-grandfather, John Gibson, second son of George and Barbara McP. Gibson, having brought back several thousand dollars in gold from California about 1850, in 1860 bought the land where I now live from Larkin Nall. This part of John's land, part of S5 T15N RJ33W, has since been owned and occupied by his descendants. The site was first settled by Dr. John Cole and Polly Cole, who moved to Dallas, Texas, about 1840.

The John Gibson house with granddaughter Mary Ellen Gibson Tennant. The house was built circa 1830 by Dr. John Cole who sold it to Larkin Nall, who sold it to John Gibson in 1861. It was demolished in 1935.

John Gibson was a Confederate soldier who served, probably, in the 34th Arkansas Infantry, CSA? He was killed by "bushwhackers" on the Illinois River, north of Prairie Grove, Arkansas, while home to move his family nearer Fayetteville. John and wife, Virginia Phoebe Carnahan Gibson had two children, Samuel and Matilda Ann.

We do not know where John and Virginia may have lived between 1848 when they married, and 1860, when they bought the Cole place from Larkin Nall. John may have farmed part of his father's place, and/or rented land from nearby neighbors. If he kept accounts, they are lost. We do not have even a photograph of him, although there is one of Virginia. Hers was apparently made long after John's death. For some reason, I heard a remarkable little tale of my great-grandfathers John and William Gibson. I do not know why. It does not appear that John was involved in William's operations, at least I found no mention of him in William's records. Perhaps later searchers will ferret out this information.

In 1848, Samuel, John's older brother, heard about the gold "strike" in California, (possibly from one of the Cane Hill Carnahans) and went to that state, probably to Sutter's Mill (Sacramento). Sometime about 1849, Sam sent a letter home. He did not arrive at the expected time. After waiting for some time, it was decided that John and a younger brother, George (later Capt. George Gibson, CSA?) would also go to California to search for Samuel. At this time, John bought a 12-gauge double barrelled muzzle loading shotgun and a long bladed Bowie knife, perhaps from Martin W. Thornbury who had a store at Sylva, now known as Cincinnati, not far from George Sr.'s house) to take on the trip. The writer still has a handmade Bowie with the brass guard or bolster from John's knife, the original blade having long ago rusted beyond repair. The shotgun is currently the property of John's great-great grandson, James Patrick Gibson, who now (1986) lives at Dallastown, Pennsylvania.

John and George did go to California, finding that Sam had drowned while crossing the Feather River, while on his way home. I suspect he may have been tapped on the head by persons unknown before he drowned. We do not know how long John and George stayed in California. It must have been for some time, John some 10 years later, paid $4,000 in double eagles he got in California, for his farm where I live now.

George, Jr., may have brought back some gold, too, for after the war he was a partner in a bank at Westville, Oklahoma. A good many of descendants are still in banking.

When John Gibson was killed during the war, his shotgun and Bowie knife were hidden in a hollow tree on the Illinois River for several years. They were retrieved, largely undamaged, by John's son, Samuel H. Gibson, who used them all his life. We know John has some slaves; (there were three cabins on the farm), but the name of only one has come down to us. That was Aunt Harriet, who was a wedding present from his father to John and Virginia.

After the war, Aunt Harriet moved to Neosho, Missouri, where she married. My father told me that as long as she lived, my grandfather, Sam, visited Aunt Harriet once a year.

John has an apple orchard and an apple drier on his farm, but probably didn't live long enough to do much with them. His son Sam did, though, at least until my father and his brother built too hot a fire in the drier furnace one fall, and it burned down.

John probably grew tobacco also. There once was a Post Oak tree near my barn, which had a slot about 2 feet high by 6 inches cut vertically all the way through the center. This was used with a series of small boxes, and a system of weights and levers, to press tobacco leaves into "plugs" of chewing tobacco.

Virginia's loom and yarn reel are long gone, abandoned when no longer needed. For some reason her spinning wheel was preserved, probably because she continued to spin yarn for socks. I still have it and it is repairable.

John (Bud) Gibson

This John Gibson, seventh child of William Gibson, (called "Bud" to distinguish him from his Uncle John) was born 9 November 1861, died 30 June 1896, and was married to Hettie Gertrude Alexander, daughter of Barclay (Bartley) and Sarah Lane Alexander. They (John and Hettie) were my grandparents.

John (Bud) Gibson

Bud Gibson and two of his sisters, Mary and Elizabeth bought a farm located a mile or two southwest of Summers, Arkansas in S20T15NR33W consisting of about 120 acres. They all three may have lived there awhile, but both sisters married and moved out, Mary in 1874 and Elizabeth in 1877. Bud may have married in 1889, as his first child Anna Mabel (Annie) was born 26 February 1890. (Annie was my mother.) Bud's second and last child Robert Hillry, was born 17 May 1892. Things seemed to go well with Bud and Hettie. He was a good farmer, and provided well for his family, but suffered from bouts of extreme depression, when he felt he could never support his family. During one of these episodes, Bud shot and killed himself. After this, it became necessary to pay Bud's sister, Mary for her share of the farm, and nearly all the livestock, farm tools, grain, hay, and anything else not nailed down was sold to accomplish this. After he was grown, my Uncle Robert Hillry, repaid his Aunt Elizabeth for her share of the farm. On July 2, 1899 Hettie Gertrude married John A. Tennant, son of a neighbor, Thomas S. Tennant. John and Hettie had three children Ralph and Roy, twins, and Eula. Ralph died in infancy, and Eula died in Memphis, Tennessee about two years ago. Roy still lives at Westville, Oklahoma. Robert Hillry married Iva Marie Moore 14 February 1914, and had children Virginia Ruth and Genevieve. Anna

Hettie Gertrude Alexander Gibson, 1885.

Mabel Gibson married Harvey Samuel Gibson, 7 October 1914: for an account of their descendants, see under John Gibson. Eula Tennant married Hugh Witt, son of Dave Witt and Myrtle Thomason Witt of Vinita, Oklahoma. Their children were J. D. and Buford Witt. J. D. has died and is buried at Vinita. Buford and family live at Memphis, Tennessee where he is a commodities broker.

Bud Gibson seems to have been an effective member of the community, and but for his affliction might have accomplished much more than he did.

At one time, 2 February 1891, he was elected or appointed Road Overseer, (A now extinct Township officer charged with the maintenance of the local roads) and authorized by Justice of the Peace W. D. Parks, to call up, and supervise the work of a group of citizens while they repaired the Line Road, beginning at Summers Store and terminating at the south line of Price Township. This crew included Ben Haws, William Shannon, Ross Little, Ollie Batie, B. M. Alexander (Bud's father-in-law), William Washington, Jim Fletcher, Dude White, and Jake.

Bud was also Road Overseer in 1888, and had a large crew with which to maintain the George Gibson Road (2nd District) from the north boundary to the south boundary of Price Township. Judge Parks also authorized this crew. It included Evins, H. P. Burkett, J. C. Ross, M. C. Smith, Lewis Williams, Heb Foster, Richard Colliver, Jim Fletcher, Jim Carter, William Gibson, William Poston, "Press" (Sidney Preston) Kirk, Trim Barker, Ellis Boland, Aus Boland, Jack Barker, Ky Little, Henry Funkhouser, (col.) Stirling Smith, Fate Snodgrass, John Snodgrass, J. D. Moore, William Shannon, Jim Little, George Gibson, C. Edmondson, Elaxander, A. J. White.

Bud and Hettie traded at Cincinnati, about 7 miles north of their farm. One bill which has come down to me is dated December 1, 1891 from "R. J. Rhea, Dealer in Drygoods, Groceries, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps and Clothing. Highest price paid for country produce." It included "1/2 bu. Timothy (grass seed), $1.25 (by Alexander). One plow share and one wash board, $1.90; 1 pair boys pants, 1 pair shoes and 3 pair socks, $3.40; 6 yards calico, $.30; 10 yards shirting, $.85; towells, $.50; one boys coat, $3.00; 1 pair blankets, $1.20; 1 pair boots, $5.00; 1 pitchfork, $.35; 1 pair baby shoes, $.75. These bills were made between February and August 1891. Items credited against the bills included: Hauling freight, $12.00, Hauling freight (1700lb.), $5.10; Hauling 2 bales of cotton, $2.00; by 100 lb. bacon and 15 lbs. lard, $11.50, etc.

Between August and December 1881 the account included: one Stetson hat and tobacco ($.10) $5.10; Tobacco, $.10; coffee, $.30; two yards of Jeans, $.80; sugar, 1.00; tobacco, $.10; candy, $.05; and crackers, $.05.

Bud, Hettie and Barclay Alexander ran up bills of $92.00 and paid $40.25, still owing $51.85 at the time of billing.

John Poston Gibson

John Poston Gibson was born 17 January 1873 and died 2 January 1954. He was married 4 October 1905 to Erie T. Kirk, the daughter of John H. Kirk and Nancy Jane Plumlee Kirk of Jackson County, Tennessee. Their 5 children were: A) Virginia Gibson, born 23 July 1906 and died 4 August 1906; B) Myrtle Henry Gibson, born 14 October 1908 and was married 10 June 1927 to Cage David Griscom, born 23 July 1904 and died 14 April 1981. Their 4 children were: 1) Billy Gene Gibson was born 18 May 1929 and married 25 March 1953 to Marie Adele Pauline DeMartini. Their children were Launa Marie, born 18 December 1955; Valrie Ann, born 22 June 1960, and John William, born 5 October 1963. 2) Anna May Griscom was born 1 February 1933 and married 16 May 1959 to Clark Ray, son of Earl Ray. They had one child Gordon Eugene Ray. 3) John David (J. D.) Griscom was born 21 January 1937 and was married 14 December 1957 to Jolene Anderson. Their children are Karen Sue and Harold. Karen Sue was born 17 May 1959 and married (first) 29 July 1976 to Bob Faddis, now divorced; and married (second) 20 June 1981 to Curt Roberts. Harold was born 18 October 1961. 4) Mary Elizabeth was born and died on 17 February 1931. C) Samuel Hamilton Gibson a W. W. II Veteran was born 5 April 1913 and died 21 June 1961. He was married (first) to Hazel Trainor (divorced, no children); and married (second) to Lillian Robins, born 1 October 1912. They have one daughter Lillian Katherine (Kathy) Gibson, born 23 May 1952 who married Terry David (Ted) Bryant, born 7 April 1953. Their children are Manon Marie Bryant, born 26 July 1977 and Jason David Bryant, born 8 August 1979. Lillian lives in Yakima, Washington. Kathy and family live in Iowa. D) Logan Harvey Gibson was born 16 August 1915 and died 1 July 1975. He never married and was a W. W. II Veteran. E) Mary Jane Gibson was born 7 August 1917 and was married (first) 21 February 1945 to Walter S. Smith, born 11 February 1902 and died 16 December 1967, the son of James Rufus and Fanny Holt Smith. Mary Jane married (second) 20 February 1980 to Andrew W. Spodnick, born 25 November 1913. No children.

My Uncle John Gibson was an interesting if somewhat taciturn man. He lived in Summers near the school house and in rainy weather I used to spend the night at his house rather than walk home in the rain (about a mile). I know little of his early years, but my father said that he and John used to farm their father's place with horses and mules and besides, rented land "on the shares" from Henry Funkhouser, whose farm adjoined theirs on the east side.

John at one time learned the carpenter's trade and had a complete set of tools including large wooden hand planes for smoothing lumber. He was the carpenter when my father's barn was built and also built my Uncle Hillry Gibson's barn. Both still (1986) are in use.

John was also at one time a "Watkins' Man", one of those then indispensable salesmen who traveled the country in buggies or special "hacks" carrying large cases like foot lockers which contained spices, linament, salve, "chill tonic", pie filling mix, flavorings, and nearly anything else a farm wife might need. There are still a few of them but now they have station wagons.

Uncle John seems to have made at least one trip away from home. I have a letter to his mother dated August 1, 1902, at (perhaps) Williams, Arizona, in which he says he has a good job ($2.00 a day) as off-bearer from block saw. He said " Old Blanch sure puts up good grub." Also that Park and Speight (his cousins, surname Parks) are there, as well as John Smith and Lon (or Tom) Thomas. Last line: "Well, why don't some of you write to me?"

Uncle John didn't stay long in Arizona but returned to Summers where he married and spent the rest of his life. He continued to farm, was a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge, Justice of the Peace, Road Overseer, School Director, etc.

I still have an old account book containing records of the men who worked the roads under him. One list names, as "Hands paid cash in 1907." M. L. Barnes, a physician ($1.50); Robert Ellis ($1.50); T. B. Strickland ($2.25); Robert Kirk with team ($2.25); James Venable ($2.25); William Smith ($1.50); Ed Schlafli ($1.121/2); Fred Howard ($1.50), and Albert Washington ($.75). This was for one and two days work.

This same book contains the minutes of the Coon Creek Literary Club, to which many of John's friends and relatives belonged. There are others of John's personal records, some of which indicate that he and Aunt T. and Myrtle Henry traveled to California, arriving on 15 January 1910, lived at "Chualar" and Salinas and returning to Arkansas January 18, 1911.

Uncle John's last employment was for the Jackson Canning Company of Summers where he was a foreman for about 20 years.

Robert Hillry Gibson

Robert Hillry Gibson was born May 17, 1892 at Summers, Arkansas, and died there December 19, 1970. He was the son of John (Bud) Gibson and Hettie Gertrude Alexander Gibson. Hillry was married February 14, 1914 to Iva Marie Moore, born August 7, 1894, and died July 10, 1977. She was the daughter of Wilson Moore and Minnie Payne Moore. Children: Virginia Ruth Gibson and Genevieve Gibson.

I. Virginia Ruth Gibson, born June 6, 1918 was married May, 1946 to John Rector Kirk, born March 23, 1916 and died February, 1983, the son of Robert E. Lee and "Angie" (Nancy Angeline) Little Kirk, all of Summers, Arkansas. One child, Gerita Kay Kirk was born February 1, 1950 and was married July 15, 1975 to Charles Moreton, born February 23, 1947, Alma, Arkansas. They had two children: Dax Rhys Moreton, born December 9, 1978 and Dayne Ives Moreton, born September 14, 1982. II. Genevieve Gibson was born July 25, 1921, died June 17, 1985, was married September 4, 1946 to Covil Arthur Scott, who was born January 16, 1913 at Snowball, Arkansas, the son of George Dallas Scott and Maud E. Scott. Their children: Warren Keith Scott and Colleen Marie Scott. (1) Warren Keith Scott was born February 10, 1948 and married July 5, 1969 to Brenda Charlene Cox, who was born April 12, 1956. She was the daughter of Thurman Cox of Morrow, Arkansas. They had two children, Robin Raquel Scott, born June 10, 1971 in Tulsa, Oklahoma and Rhonda Renee Scott, born November 14, 1971 in Tulsa, Oklahoma. (2) Colleen Marie Scott born April 12, 1956. Colleen married May 19, 1979 to Gary Morris and they have three children, Derk Morris born October 28, 1974, (Gary's son by a previous marriage), Nicole Van Morris, born September 20, 1981 and Brandi Marie Morris, born December 18, 1983. Gary and Colleen live on the old Pleasant West (or later George West) farm.

Not long after Uncle Hillry and Aunt Iva married, they built a house, barn and "cyclone cellar", on the east side of Uncle Hillry's half of his father's land and they lived there for ten or fifteen years. Hillry farmed with his step-father, John A. Tennant, producing the usual crops, cattle and hogs. He also liked to trade in livestock and was expert in that line. After some years, he and his brother-in-law, Fred Summers, (son of John F. Summers, the early-day merchant for when Summers, Arkansas is named) formed a partnership and entered the mercantile business at Summers.

Uncle Hillry had a small store in Summers at this time, which I think he had bought from Earnst Kirk. I am not certain, but Fred may have had a store there, also. At any rate, they opened their store in the second building put up by Fred's father, John F. Summers. It stood on the northwest corner of the Summers crossroad and had a high, false front, as was the style. It was in fact high enough for two stories and did have a second floor in the rear, which served as an office. The front had shelves (almost up to the ceiling), which held tubs, buckets, hats, horse collars, hames, jugs, jars and "you name it". The dry goods and clothing were on the north side and other things on the south. I recall that Mr. Bob Boles, who lived just across the road south of the store "clerked" for them for awhile. The Summers Mercantile Company was a complete general store. They sold bolt goods for making clothing, sheets, bed "tics" (to hold feathers for feather beds), etc, hats, boots, thread, needles, groceries, candy, axes, saws, nails, horseshoes, tobacco, cookies, pickles, vinegar, kerosene, sacks of livestock feed and all the other items required by a rural community. They bought, or "took in trade" live poultry, eggs, apples, potatoes, cream, fur, sometimes coal for the blacksmiths. They always had lots of huge firecrackers to sell at Christmas time. (This was when we shot fireworks in those days. Very seldom could you get them for the 4th of July.)

This business must have opened in the very late 1920s or early thirties, and it prospered. Many other firms closed during the early thirties, and Summers Mercantile became a busy trade center, moving a block north to a larger building and stocking more hardware and farm machinery parts.

Fred and Hillry also acquired sizeable tracts of land as it was offered for sale and kept considerable herds of cattle and hogs. As the business continued to prosper, other stores were established and, at one time, they had stores in both Westville and Lincoln and perhaps for a short time, at Cincinnati. Fred and Hillry became prosperous farmers and merchants, continuing until they were ready to retire, when they sold the business and divided the real estate. I used to stay the night at Uncle Hillry's house in bad weather, when I was a school boy. He seldom failed to see that we had Van Camp's Pork and Beans for supper on those nights, for he knew I liked them.

Samuel H. Gibson

Sam was but 12 years of age when his father, John, was shot by bushwhackers, and killed. The two were on horseback riding toward the Pyeatte Farm, North of Prairie Grove, when they were fired on by men behind a rail fence. John died instantly, but Sam was unhurt, and spurred his horse toward the Illinois River, where he jumped his mount off a high bank into a deep hole of water, and swam out on the east bank, remounted and escaped, as his assailants would not take the jump. We suppose that Sam made his way to the Pyeatte house, for John's body was brought home for burial in the Gibson-Parks Cemetery.

Sam had recognized one of his attackers, and when he was 21 years old, loaded his rifle and set out to kill that man. His mother, Virginia "got wind" of this however and notified a kinsman, "Uncle Walter" Parks. Uncle Walter saddled a good horse and caught up with Sam before the deed was done and persuaded him to return home. Uncle Walter said, "Sam, the war's over. If you kill him, all that will happen is that they will put you in the 'pen'". (penitentiary) Sam did return home and never pursued this any more.

So Sam became the "man of the house" while in his early teens. He had a "hard row to hoe", too, for the war was to last two more years, with still more loss of life, shortages of food and fodder. Soldier of both sides came to take what they wanted, as well as the irregulars who robbed all indiscriminately.

Sam did well though, and after the war, always kept 2 or 3 black families on the place to do the farming which he didn't like to do. He liked to raise cattle, horses and mules, and kept brood mares, jacks and stallions. He also learned to be an auctioneer and "cried" sales for miles around. In later years he was constable and/or deputy sheriff for many years, serving Sheriff Sam Caudle 2 years as Chief Deputy. Sam often worked with Cherokee Lighthorse's men, (police) Eziquiel Proctor, and Andy Akin, in laying evildoers by the heels.

As mentioned elsewhere, Sam produced fine apples from about 15 acres of orchard, and dried them in his own drier. In the early fall he used to buy a new wagon from the James Oates Wagon Factory at Cincinnati, and a wagon sheet (canvas cover) and bows, along with 4 sets of harness. Several barrels of flour from one of the mills went into the wagon. Sam's own mules brought the wagon home, where the load was filled out with dried apples. When cool weather arrived, Sam hitched up his 4-mule team, packed his grub box, and set out for San Antonio, Texas. The trip usually took about a month or 6 weeks one way. At San Antonio, he would drive his rig up on Alamo Plaza sell the flour, apples, wagon harness, and three mules. He then bought a Mexican saddle & bridle, and rode the fourth mule back home. Sam's brother-in-law, George Burkett said his trips usually netted about $150.00 but he sold out at Dallas and brought his team back home. Sam never said how much he made on a trip. We believe Sam visited his wife's uncle, Rev. W. T. Thornberry on these trips, for Thornberry lived near San Antonio.

I barely remember my grandfather Sam. He was not large in stature, but wiry, with black (tho turned gray) hair and eyes. He smoked a pipe which he lighted by striking sparks into it with his pocket knife and flint. He often wore corduroy, a vest, and a large Stetson hat. Before he died, he gave me his gold Waltham pocket watch, which I carried for many years before giving it to my son, Michael Kevin, of Seattle, Washington.

His shotgun he gave to another grandson, Samuel H. Gibson, who later gave it to my oldest son, James Patrick, of Dallastown, Pennsylvania. Grandpa liked to hunt and took many deer, turkey, quail, rabbits, etc. with his rifle or shotgun. He remembered clubbing passenger pigeons at night, on the roost to bring home to eat.

Samuel H. Gibson and his wife, Mary Elizabeth Barclay had 6 children, John Posten, Harvey Samuel (the writer's father), Mary Ellen, Fannie Nute, Virginia Rebecca and James Leslie. James Leslie died when less than a year old, on 10 August 1877. These children are discussed separately under their own or spouse's name.

Thomas Jefferson Gibson

Thomas Jefferson Gibson was born April 19, 1827 in McMinn County, Tennessee was the son of Thomas Gibson, who in the 1850 McMinn County, Tennessee census gave North Carolina as his birthplace and his age as 57. Thomas Jefferson Gibson married Elizabeth Braden in McMinn County, Tennessee April 19, 1855 on his birthday. Elizabeth was the daughter of James and Sarah Braden.

Thomas Jefferson Gibson and Elizabeth Braden Gibson moved from McMinn County in east Tennessee to Gallatin, Davies County, Missouri in 1858. They had two children born in Tennessee, a son, James Wilbern Gibson, born June 26, 1856 and Sarah H., born September 10, 1857.

The family made the trip to Missouri using three covered wagons. Two wagons were pulled by oxen later used at farm animals in Missouri and Arkansas. When Elizabeth grew tired of riding in the wagon, she rode a buckskin pony. Occasionally, she and Jeff walked along together planning their new life "in the West".

They stopped briefly in Fayetteville, Arkansas to visit Elizabeth's brother Robert Braden who held a county office. The story of Thomas Jefferson's devotion to "Betty" has been told and retold and is exemplified by this anecdote - "In Fayetteville he spent his last and only dime to buy a flower for Elizabeth".

Elizabeth Braden Gibson's parents - James and Sarah Braden - were in McMinn County, Tennessee 1850 census with their son Robert F. Braden, born January 18, 1816 in North Carolina, as head of household. He held the office of sheriff of McMinn County, Tennssee from 1851-1854 before coming to Arkansas. Robert F. Braden gave the land for the Braden School east of Fayetteville. He is buried in the Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville. The obituary in the Fayetteville Democrat, March 4, 1887, page 112, col. 4, gave the date of his death as February 28, 1887. James and Sarah Braden were married in the Funkhouser Sugar Hill Cemetery near Lincoln, Arkansas. The fieldstones used as grave markers are no longer readable, but the place of burial is general family knowledge. The dates are in the Gibson Bible - James Braden died February 9, 1864. Sarah Braden died June 22, 1857. Betty Shelby, wife of Dale, who is the great-great-grandson of Thomas Jefferson and Elizabeth Braden Gibson, listed the children of James and Sarah Braden as follows: Miranda, Minerva, Robert F., W. H. (William Henderson), Leroy, John, Gilmann, Malissa and Elizabeth (Flashback January, 1965). Her information agrees with the Gibson family Bible. This genealogical information was copied by Aunt Jane Gibson Jones of Imboden, Arkansas, sister of Thomas Jefferson Gibson, from the Braden Bible into the Gibson Bible. The copying of the Braden information into the Gibson Bible is in statements of William Alexander Gibson and Mrs. Robert M. Gibson recorded in 1949 for an oral history project of Daughters of the American Revolution - Mrs. Frank A. Gerig, Arkadelphia, Arkansas State Regent of Arkansas and Mrs. Joseph E. (Bernice) Prentice Finch, Malvern, Arkansas State Chairman of Genealogical Records Vol. 32.

The Gibson family was in Gallatin, Davies County, Missouri in 1858. John Wesley Gibson was born January 20, 1859. Malissa was born April 12, 1860. William Alexander Gibson was born January 21, 1862 in Sedalia, Missouri. Lucy A. Gibson was born February 20, 1864. Lewis T. Gibson was born December 17, 1866. These children were born in Missouri.

While living in Missouri, Thomas Jefferson Gibson volunteered for service in The Confederacy. His brother Sam was in the Union Army. Like many families, the Gibsons were divided by The War Between the States.

Mrs. Robert M. Gibson, now 95 years old, remembers Thomas Jefferson Gibson telling of being in the Battle of Prairie Grove December 7, 1862. He was one of the soldiers detailed to aid the wounded and bury the dead as the battle ended. After the battle, he and several other soldiers were walking along Goose Creek near Farmington when he saw a log house and farm. He remarked to his companions that when the war ended he expected to move to Arkansas and own that farm. He did move to Arkansas and he did own that farm, purchased October 25, 1869 from Tilford Denton and his wife Mary Denton and Mary Jane Thompson. In 1902 Thomas J. Gibson purchased a small acreage from Oliver and R. M. Shaw. (Abstract 1868). For 117 years this land has been owned by the Gibson family. In 1901 Thomas Jefferson Gibson built the present home. Mrs. Robert M. Gibson sold the house and land July 3, 1986 to Aubrey P. Garrett who with his family now live in this house. Thomas Jefferson Gibson and his family moved from Davies County, Missouri to Pettis County, Missouri. They were living in Sedalia, Missouri when William Alexander Gibson was born January 21, 1862. By 1868 the family was in Washington County, Arkansas, and by 1869 owned the land Thomas J. Gibson had dreamed of owning. In Arkansas three more children were born - Charles Lee Gibson, born March 14, 1869; Mary A. Gibson, born January 4, 1874; and Robert McKendre Gibson, born July 2, 1879. James Wilbern Gibson, the oldest son of Thomas and "Betty" died August 28, 1872 at age 16. He is buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery near Fayetteville. James Wilbern had been named for the brother of Thomas Jefferson Gibson, born in 1813 in Tennessee. For many years this beloved brother lived with Thomas Gibson family. He died at age 63, February 5, 1876. (Tombstone, Mt. Comfort Cemetery). His children were Thomas, Francis and Marion.

In the Mt. Comfort Cemetery are the following family graves: Thomas Jefferson Gibson, born April 19, 1827, died May 12, 1913 at age 86 years. Elizabeth Braden Gibson, wife of Thomas Jefferson Gibson, born August 11, 1834 in Tennessee, died October 14, 1907. James Wilbern Gibson, son of Thomas J. and Elizabeth Gibson, born June 27, 1856, died August 28, 1872 at age 16. Sarah H. Gibson, born September 10, 1857, died December 3, 1899, at age 42. Malissa Braden, born June 13, 1827, died June 6, 1884 at age 57. William Alexander Gibson, born January 21, 1862, died January 26, 1952. Robert McKendre Gibson, born July 2, 1879, died September 13, 1956. Note: Malissa Braden, sister of Elizabeth Braden Gibson, died in the home of Thomas J. Gibson. In the Mormon Records - Order of the Latter Day Saints, Macon, Georgia can be found her birth - June 13, 1827, McMinn County, Tennessee, the daughter of James and Sarah Braden.

One of the reasons for moving from Missouri was the extreme cold and heavy snow. Thomas J. Gibson described the winter snow as covering fence posts - a solid blanket across the land. He said there were times when snow came up to the windows and made opening outside doors nearly impossible.

When the Gibson family arrived at the farm in Arkansas, most of the area was covered with large trees. William Alexander Gibson (Uncle Will) told of the difficulties of clearing land. Trees were cut and piled, then burned, so the land could be farmed. T. J. Gibson was aided by four sons who were comparatively young but were of considerable help. These logs would be worth hundreds of dollars now. Will Gibson described wild turkeys that came to roost on the hillside or bluff of Goose Creek. They came in such numbers that they covered the hillside and darkened the area they occupied.

Robert McKendre Gibson, born July 2, 1879 died September 13, 1956, married January 2, 1907 to Nettie Geneva Anderson, born September 27, 1890, Webers Falls, Oklahoma. She was living in 1986 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. She is the daughter of Mary Ida Elizabeth Cherry and Robert Alexander Anderson who married March 10, 1889 in Detroit, Red River County, Texas. (Anderson Bible and Red River County, Texas Record). Robert Alexander Anderson was the son of John N. Anderson who was the first person buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery, Fayetteville, Arkansas. His widow, Sarah Tedder Anderson, took her family to northeast Texas, near Detroit and Blossom, Texas. Mary Ida Elizabeth Cherry and Robert Alexander Anderson are buried in The Mountain View Cemetery, Washington County, Arkansas.

Mary Ida Elizabeth Cherry was born March 10, 1874, the daughter of David Monroe Cherry and his wife Susan Malinda Murphy Brumley Cherry. Mary Ida Cherry was the granddaughter of William L. Cherry of Lamar and Titus County, Texas and the great-granddaughter of John V. Cherry who fought in The Texas War of Independence.

Mrs. Robert M. Gibson remembers this incident concerning the death of Elizabeth Braden Gibson - "Thomas Jefferson and Elizabeth were riding in a hack to the Mount Comfort Cemetery with Jane Gibson, sister of Thomas. In front of a two-story house just west of the cemetery, they heard a loud noise under the hack. Elizabeth said not to worry and handed her purse to Jane saying, "You take care of this". Mrs. Gibson fell over dead and was gone immediately. Aunt Jane said the noise was a warning". Mrs. R. M. Gibson said many people at this time believed that noise was a warning.

After the death of Thomas J. Gibson, the farm was owned by Robert McKendre Gibson and his brother William Alexander Gibson who was a bachelor. "Uncle Will" lived in the Gibson household until he died in 1952. He was the one person that all the family, including his brothers and sisters who lived elsewhere, looked to for advice and counsel. Often neighbors and friends came to him for his opinion about matters they were considering. As part owner of the farm he was consulted on all improvements and changes that occurred as the years brought modern conveniences.

Improvements and conveniences began with a dug well. When the well was down about twenty feet the workers his solid limestone rock, and it was necessary to use blasting powder to go into or through the rock. By using this method they went into the rock about five feet. While preparing a hole for the next blasting, which was done with sledge hammer and a large bit about two feet long and an inch and a half in diameter, the bit went through the rock and water poured in through the hole. They had hit a strong stream of water that never weakened and supplied all the water needed for the next hundred and more years. The stream is still as strong as when first found. Uncle Will occasionally cleaned the well by lowering himself into the well and placing a stick that exactly fit into the hole to hold back the water while he cleaned. An electric pump was added to the well when the Gibsons "tied on" in 1950 or 1951 to power made available for farmers by the R. E. A.

The telephone was installed about 1915 in the Gibson home when the first line was constructed through the area. It was a party line out of Farmington. Approximately twelve or fourteen subscribers were on one line. "Mr. Will" was much opposed to the installation of the telephone. Talking on the telephone was quite an experience. When any subscriber was called, all the telephones on the line rang. Usually half or more of the receivers came down to "listen in" on the conversation. All these listeners reduced the volume and made hearing difficult. It was not unusual for someone "listening-in" to "speak up" and repeat what the person doing the talking had said if the person receiving the call could not understand.

Neighbors were more than people who lived close by. They were available to give a helping hand wherever needed. The Gibson family received and appreciated assistance from several good neighbors when they arrived in Arkansas. Some of the names in the community were Marrs, Strange, Pettigrew and Thurman.

The Gibson home was a place where friends, relatives, travelers, cattle buyers and many others were made welcome. They fed and sheltered those who had need of it. James Wilbern Gibson, brother of Thomas J. Gibson and James Braden, brother of Elizabeth Braden Gibson spent years in the Gibson home and died there. Mrs. Gibson made the statement that after the death of Will in 1952 she and her husband spent their first night alone in the Gibson home.

The children of Robert M. Gibson and Nettie Anderson Gibson: Liford L. Gibson, born November 21, 1908 married Mary Dean Magruder May 29, 1937. Ruby Thelma Gibson, born January 9, 1913 married Everett Blain Hill November 25, 1936. Helen Elizabeth Gibson, born November 21, 1915 married Robert Earl Tucker August 1, 1937. Wilkie Maxine Gibson, born June 5, 1922 married Cleo Allen Morris August 16, 1941.

William Gibson's house, when occupied by his daughter and son-in-law Daniel and Amanda Gibson Thomason. c.1900-1905. William Gibson

My maternal great grandfather was William Gibson, third son of George and Barbara McP. Gibson, and was married to Eliza, daughter of Joel and Elizabeth Carter Harrell. Joel and Elizabeth lived on a large farm north of Cincinnati (or Sylva) Arkansas in S17T16NR33W. William and Eliza acquired a smaller farm, about 400 acres, which was a mile east of Joel's, in S15 and 22T16NR33W. This farm was known as the John Dock Thurman place after William's heirs sold it.

We know little about William's early years. He was about 18 years old when he married, and may have worked with his father-in-law in a livestock and produce trading business for several years. We have fragments of an old account book kept by William which mentions the "Partnership money", and amounts of cattle (oxen) etc. bought with it. There may have been several other partners, as the names of Wilson, West, Funkhouser, Alberty, Odle, Guthery, Pevehouse and Pope are mentioned, with amounts of money paid in to the company.

We cannot tell whether or not William was in the Confederate Army. It seems likely that he was, but of the many William Gibsons in the Confederate Index, none are in units formed in northwest Arkansas.

William and Eliza Gibson had 8 children, Jane who married James Pogue Smith; Amanda married Daniel Thomason; Mary married Walter D. Parks; George ("Greely") never married; Elizabeth married Rev. William T. Farley; William M. (Bill) married Nolle Harrell; John (Bud) married Hettie G. Alexander (my Grandparents); Annie Laurie married Joel A. Farley. All the married children left descendants.

William must have liked ham and sausage for in his account book we find that he "put up" in 1858, 2146 lbs. of pork; in 1859, 1958 lbs.; in 1860, 2332 lbs.; and 1861, 2032 lbs. This might represent 12-15 300 lb. hogs. If this seems a huge amount, we must recall that he no doubt provided meals for hired hands and slaves, as well as travelers, and visiting relatives, and the family.

We know that William kept some slaves, but not how many. With a farm of 400 or so acres he could have had perhaps 5 - 15. We have evidence of only two, Pompey, a boy about 4 years of age who was bought of Joel Harrell for $400, and Oscar, age about 21, bought of James B. Powell for $1250, both purchased in 1858. James E. Gibson has the hand written bill of sale for these (1986).

According to William's account book, and as best I can decipher it, he and Joel Harrell bought "for the company" 180 - 190 head of steers in 1855. These were apparently draft animals, as they were listed "1 yoke", "4 yoke" etc. G. P. Reed furnished the largest number (61) for which he was paid $3050. One steer sold for $18 - 24, but in yokes (pairs) they brought $40 - 50.

William must have been a traveler too, for he wrote that on 14 October 1858, he and Thomas Harrell got home from Jackson County Missouri (Kansas City) and drove a yoke of oxen 35 miles after 8:00 o'clock that day. I can tell you from experience that 35 miles per day is a long walk, without driving the oxen.

George Gibson, Sr.

George Gibson, Sr. was born 6 January 1795 or 1797 in Ireland, possibly on the farm of Drumlon, Lisball, Bailieborough, County Cavan. He was a draftsman in a linen mill before coming to the United States. It appears that he and a brother John sailed from Belfast, North Ireland, on 27 June 1816 aboard the brig John & William, for New York, arriving there 19 August 1816. Contact with John's family was lost after the Civil War.

George, Sr. left New York and traveled to Huntsville, Madison County, Alabama where on 28 August 1821, he was married by H. P. Brannen, to Barbara McPhail, daughter of John McPhail, Jr. and Catherine Gilchrist McPhail, and granddaughter of John McPhail, Sr., and his wife Barbara Malloy McPhail, who came to Robeson County, North Carolina in 1783.

Both Kate and John are buried in the Old Union Cemetery. Their children were: (A) William Almer (Berry) Parks born 9 November 1861 and died 10 July 1944. He never married and is buried in the Old Union Cemetery. (B) John James (Jim) Parks born 9 December 1866 and died 3 May 1902. He was married to Agnes? and lived in Arizona, at Bisbee. (C) Walter Davis Parks born 22 August 1869 and died 20 October 1957. He was married (first) 1 January 1893 to Julia Wright, born 1869 and died 18 May 1918. He was married (second) to Auda Funkhouser, born 18 June 1886 and died 19 February 1981. She is buried at Sugar Hill. (D) Elizabeth Dean (Lizzie) Parks born 6 September 1872 and died 24 October 1949. She was married 27 November 1899 to Jessie Smith Tunnell, born 30 March 1859 and died 13 November 1952.

(8) Patrick Gibson born 20 August 1842 and died 10 January 1844. He is buried at the Gibson-Parks Cemetery.

We believe that George and Barbara, with their first three children, traveled with her parents by river boat in 1828 down the Tennessee River to the Ohio, down it to the Mississippi, down the Mississippi to the Arkansas, and thence up that river to Frog Bayou, (now Clear Creek) just below Van Buren. They were all at Frog Bayou in 1829 and 1830. George first settled about 1-1/2 miles northwest of Evansville, Arkansas at the Bean Spring, but that spot was on Indian land, and soldiers forced him to move. He then moved some 20 miles further north to Cincinnati, Arkansas (then Sylva) and settled about 1-1/2 miles southeast of that village in S5 T15N R33W.

George may have been a son or nephew of a John Gibson, who lived in Lisball, Bailieborough, County Cavan, Ireland. John belonged to the United Irishmen in the Rebellion of 1798, unusual for a Presbyterian. It seems odd that we can as yet, (1986) find no trace of him in either Tipperary where he told his children he was from, or in Cavan, where he said he was born.

George became a slave holder, indicating some degree of prosperity. He may have kept 12-15 blacks, but we have the names of only two. Ben, whom he rented from a Mr. Tinnan, and Harriett, whom he gave to my great-grandfather John as a wedding gift.

The War Between the States dealt harshly with George's family. He and his wife and youngest son died during or before the war. Three sons were killed during the war, and one, William, took his own life. In 1866 only two of George's children remained, Catherine Gibson Parks and Capt. George Gibson, Jr.

After George Sr.'s death an inventory of his property included "notes" for money loaned (various amounts) to the extent of $1435.17 to the following persons: Newton Givens, B. H. Pierson, G. Pylant, M. Jones, Samuel Gilbreath, W. H. Rhea, John McPhail, George W. Stark, and Thomas R. Marques. Also included were: one horse, $75; two cows and calves, $40; three steers, $60; and one ox-wagon, $30. His estate paid William C. Jones $8.66 for blacksmith work, shoeing horses, repairing plows, making a "bell clapper", etc. In 1869 my grandfather, Samuel Gibson, and his sister Matilda (Til) received $559.30 as their share of their grandfather's estate.

John Berry Gill

John Berry Gill, born in 1848 and died in 1923, was the son of William Harrison Gill and Elizabeth Abinatha Grammer and the grandson of Harrison W. Gill and Clara Rives Gill and great grandson of Charles Gill and Rebecca Stevers, great-great grandson of Robert Gill and Lydia Wood and great-great-great-grandson of John Gill who immigrated from England to America, settled in Maryland and married Catherine Perridier, a French Huguenot.

The Gills moved from Van Buren to Springdale about 1881.

As early as 1887, the J. B. Gill Nursery was shipping thousands of trees each month during the planting season. In 1887, Gill's nursery shipped 40,000 trees in one month. Mr. Gill was secretary of the Fruit Growers and Shippers Association and the Northwest Arkansas Horticultural Society during their early years. The apple industry received a great impetus during the drought of 1901 when fruits in other parts of the country were practically destroyed while northwest Arkansas escaped almost without harm.

Mr. Gill was in the hardware business (Gill & Harris) and at one time had a grocery store. Family tradition says he planted the first maples on Maple Street.

The Springdale Farmers Club was organized in 1886 with John Gill, secretary. New varieties of fruit were introduced and experimented with, among which was an early red peach "The Governor Garland", named and discovered by John Gill.

On the front of the Golden Edition of the Springdale News, it suggests you go to Gill's Nurseries where you will find the best and most complete stock of apples, peaches, pears, cherries, currants, plums, grapes, gooseberries, raspberries and strawberries. Well-grown stock at bedrock prices were his inducements in 1887.

In 1887, the post office was established and the name changed to Springdale. Mr. John Gill was the fifth postmaster.

Mr. Gill was married to Amy Ann Hubbert. They had four children: Hubbert, Walter, Elmer, and Mary. He was a brother of Martha Ellen Gill Hurst, Emmeline Gill Steinberg and Mrs. Frances Jane Gill Goree.

The John Gill family moved to Texas about 1890.

Daniel Glidewell

We begin our entry with a genealogy of the Glidewell's that we have gathered to this date. It will not be perfect nor complete but we have done our best.

Aymes Glidewell (whom we find listed as Gladwell) was born (ca. 1619) in England and left his homeland on XV Aprilis, 1635 from the Port of London on board the ship "Ye Increase". He landed in Boston, Massachusetts and here we lose track of him. With the help of The Compendium of American Genealogy, pg. 564, we begin to trace our ancestors. Our next records are found in Bristol Parish, Virginia where we find Robert born (ca. 1640), then Daniel (1675-1727). Daniel had one son that we know of: Robert born (circa 1700). This first Robert married Elizabeth, (ca. 1719). Robert and Elizabeth had three children that we are aware of: 1. Nash born June 19, 1721, 2. Susan born November 13, 172__ and 3. Robert born November 23, 1722. All this we located in The British Parish Register. It is also mentioned that the widow Glidewell bore another son: Tarance Lamb on January 14, 1733. Robert, having died in 1728, gives us cause to wonder about Elizabeth's morals. She did, however, have him baptized March 24, 1733. Later in the land records of Dinwiddie County, Virginia (1752-1820) he was mentioned on a tax entry of a Joseph Haxall.

Nash married Martha, (possibly a Banister). The Bristol Parish Register, page 310, mentions a Peter, son of Nash and Martha "Gloydwell", born October 9, 1741 and baptized June 13, 1742. We have no other record of him, so we believe he must have died quite young. Nash's other ten children listed in his will: 1. Robert, 2. John, 3. Mary married Goode, 4. Edy married Gill, 5. Sarah married Glass, 6. Rachell married Elliott 7. Judith married Harrison, 8. Elender married Joseph Davis, 9. Hannah married Whitlow, 10. Jinny or Jenny (not married at time of will).

From the records of the Virginia State Library, we quote the following: (In this quote, Glidewell is again misspelled) "Nash Glidwell enlisted as a private in Captain Thomas Thweatt's Company of the Fourteenth Virginia Regiment on February 14, 1778. He appears on Captain Thweatt's payrolls for April, June and November, 1778. He is listed as a private on the payrolls of Captain John Mark's Company, Fourteenth Virginia Regiment, during the months of July and August, 1778, and last appears in December, 1778 on the payroll of Major "Cabell's Company, Fourteenth Virginia Regiment. During the months of June, July, and August, 1778, he is noted variously as 'sick, absent' or sick at Valley Forge'".

Other information we have received indicates that from Nash's will and inventory, 1799 Halifax, Virginia, he fought in the Revolution at Valley Forge, Yellow Springs, Middle Brook and French Creek in Captain Thomas Thweatt's Company 14th Virginia Regiment commanded by William Davies. His enlistment, 1 year, served April 1778 - February 5, 1779. Nash is buried in Oak Hill Cemetery; Kendrick, Mississippi along with two of his grandsons, Robert and William, the sons of Robert.

John married Nancy Anne Whitlow, September 30, 1785, they had seven children: 1. John, 2. Thomas H., 3. James, 4. Banister, born (ca. 1801), 5. William (middle name probably George), 6. Susan and 7. Gemina.

William is another son not mentioned in Nash's will and it is presumed by his descendants (i. e. Dorothy "Dotty" Jean Hammond of Harris, Missouri) that he might have been the eldest and moved away with his family at the time of the writing of the will. At any rate, William married Susannah, and had at least one son named Lewis from who "Dotty" descends.

Banister and Nancy had ten children: 1. Martha Ann born March 20, 1821 or 1824 married Newell England December 3, 1843, 2. John H. born (ca. 1827) married Martha A. Timmons. John and Martha had four children: 1. John Riley 2. J. F., 3. W. G. and 4. N. F. (This was the second child of Banister and Nancy) 3. Nancy, 4. Thomas G. born February 14, 1828, died March 21, 1907, married Sarah "Sally" Canada born (ca. 1831), 5. (Daniel) Trantum, born March 5, 1833, died September 17, 1903, married Margaret L. Harville born March 12, 1840, 6. William B. born (ca. 1833-34), 7. James H. born February 2, 1835, died July 4, 1911, married Mahala Canada, born September 12, 1838, (Sally and Mahala were the daughters of J. T. and Martha M. Canada), 8. Elizabeth, 9. Joseph H. born (ca. 1842), 10. Mary born (ca. 1860).

Newell and Martha had nine children: 1. Henry M., 2. Thomas B. or R., 3. John B., 4. Daniel H., 5. Nancy Jane, 6. William N., 7. Martha, 8. Mary Catherine born May 14, 1863 married King, 9. J. Isom. Newell England was made administrator of Banister's will. Mary Catherine King was the mother of Mrs. James "Roxie" Stearns of Pocahontas, Arkansas. Roxie and James are a lovely couple and it has been our pleasure to get to know them.

Thomas and Sally had eleven children: 1. Mary Angeline married Andrew Jackson Harville, 2. Martha H. married Ephrim Jackson Norton, 3. Janie married Eli Harville, 4. Margaret married Felix Pickens, 5. Adeline married Riyle Austin, 6. Lucy married Dave Loyd, 7. Jim married Martha Norton when she died, he married her sister Mary S. Norton, 8. John Henry married Tilde Seaton, 9. William T. (Bill) married Sally Lloyd, 10. Nancy married John Wilson, 11. Sarah (Missie) married Bill Kelley. Mary and A. J. Harville's children were: Emma R., Etta, Condis, Margaret Lewis, Jim and Tom Frank. Martha and E. J. Norton's children were: Walter, Tom, Elbert, William Jackson, Sarah and Georgia. Cousins Emma R. Harville and William Jackson Norton married and became the parents of Mrs. Willie K. Norton Gill, author of another entry in this book and our distant cousin.

Daniel and Margaret Harville (not the above mentioned Margaret. This Margaret's father's name was Robert), were wed August 3, 1856 in Lauderdale County, Alabama. To this union fourteen children were born: 1. Nancy Louisa Mahala, born August 25, 1857 died November 3, 1857, 2. Martha Jane born December 10, 1858, died January 19, 1861, 3. James Isom (Jim) born December 26, 1860, died July 12, 1934, married Amma Zelta White born July 7, 1862, died July 30, 1894, he then married Carrie White McCamish, 4. Robert Thomas (Tom) born July 21, 1863 married Margaret Ann Brown, upon her death, he married Ophelia, 5. Margaret Louisa born December 6, 1865, (died young), 6. Daniel (Henry), born May 28, 1868 married Alice Leach January 23, 1890 in Washington County, Arkansas, 7. William Wesley born August 29, 1870, died March 2, 1871, 8. Mary Emaline born February 11, 1872 married Wilburn Baldwin, 9. (Giles) Henderson born July 28, 1874 married Alice Leach Glidewell after Henry, 10. John Banister born February 28, 1876, died July 4, 1877 or 1888, 11. Calvin Marks born October 14, 1878, died 1984, married Julia M. McCamish July 9, 1899 in Washington County, Arkansas, 12. Andrew (Drew) Johnson born March 14, 1881 died September 27, 1945, married Pearl Beatrice Huff January 11, 1903, 13. Alva D. married Zura Sawyers August 8, 1907, 14. Dula (Dulie) married John Brown. After Dulie's death and Wilburn Baldwin's death, Mary and John Brown were married.

In 1850, Banister and family were living in Tippah County, Mississippi. By 1860 both Banister and Daniel and their families were living in Randolph County, Arkansas where they owned land near Pocahantas, close to Eleven Point River.

In 1870, Daniel and family were in Hardin County, Tennessee, but by 1881, they were again back in Randolph County, Arkanasas for that was the birthplace of Andrew "Drew" Johnson Glidewell, the grandfather of this writer.

It has been said that Daniel was quite a wrestler and at one time there was a negro slave who was reputed to be quite good in this sport as well, so a match was set for the two of them. They wrestled bareback and as the two were so evenly matched, they had quite a struggle. As they each began to lose their hold on the other they both fell to the ground. When they fell, the slave's arm was broken, so Daniel was declared the champion.

Daniel might have been called "Lightfoot" due to the fact that he was not only a wrestler, but a foot-racer. This talent, he put to very good use during the Civil War to avoid being caught and enlisted into the army. You see, he didn't believe in slavery and he didn't want to fight for it against any friends or relatives. Because of this attitude, he had many a wild race through the cornfield with the recruiting officer in hot pursuit. He was never caught, therefore, he never had to fight. All of his brothers, however, did fight for the Confederacy.

Daniel and Margaret traveled many times by covered wagon back and forth between Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas before they finally settled in Arkansas. In fact, they traveled so often that they became friends with the people along the route and if they needed to borrow anything, they could repay them on the next trip through.

Sometime between 1881 and 1900, Daniel and family moved to Washington County. We surmise it was probably around 1895 because in June of that year, Daniel was indicted in Randolph County for "Breach of the Peace". He evidently cursed in the presence of Bill McClintock, his wife and others causing Bill to file charges against him. This was never brought before the courts, so we think it must have been settled out of court. We think it was about this time that Dan and Margaret decided to move and when they found the place for them, it was at Skylight. Daniel purchased 120 acres located, 11T-13R-32W, described as NE1/4 of NW1/4 of NE1/4. 80 acres. Here they were well satisfied with the area and the people. They settled down in a log cabin and farmed the land as many of his ancestors had done and as a number of Glidewell's do to this day.

In Daniel's latter years, he developed a cancer behind one of his eyes. He had both the eyeball and the cancer removed without the benefit of an anesthetic. He was just strapped down on a table and the troublesome thing was cut out. Sadly enough, in about two years the cancer returned and this time, he lost the sight of his one remaining eye. Ol' Dan was not one to give up easily and he kept right on working as much as he could. One day, he went to the barn to help shuck corn. As he was feeling around for the corn, he accidentally picked up a copperhead snake. Luckily, the snake was kind enough not to bite him. Daniel eventually succumbed to the cancer and he died September 17, 1903. He is buried in Antioch Cemetery along with several of his relatives.

Andrew Johnson Glidewell and Pearl Beatrice Huff were married at her home in Strickler, January 11, 1903 by B. A. White. Pearl was one of seven children born to Dr. William Stewart Huff and Francis (Fannie) Lacy. Six of these children lived to adulthood: 1. Elizabeth H. married Henry Katyer, 2. John S. died at birth, 3. Martha A. (Mattie) married Elmer Albert, 4. Ella married J. M. Bradley, 5. Joel (Frank) married May Sargent and after her death married Mary Hensley, 6. Susie M. married James H. Rinehart and 7. Pearl, of course, married "Drew".

Drew and Pearl made their home at Strickler for awhile, later they moved into a two-story frame house at Cane Hill. The house sat atop Antioch Mountain and the view from there is breathtaking. One can see for miles and miles from that spot. All that remains of the old place now is a crumbled down chimney and the old well house. The 120 acres were located in 17W-13R-32W, described as SW 1/4 of SW 1/4, NW 1/4 of SE 1/4 and NE 1/4 of SW 1/4. The area is now known as Sam Napier's place and Sam has always made us feel very welcome on the land of our ancestors.

The old grist mill at Cane Hill is a part of the past that we can look at and recall stories we have heard about the family traveling over the dusty roads or through the mud just to be able to get their grain or flour for the next season. When it was time to "peddle" the harvest, Pearl would have baked for days getting baskets of food prepared and packed for Drew and the boys. It took a long time to travel the countryside by wagon in those days and she had to be sure they had enough to eat. It is amazing that none of them ever got food poisoning due to the lack of refrigeration and proper food storage. All of the children of Daniel and Margaret lived in the Skylight, Strickler, Cane Hill, Antioch, Lincoln, and Prairie Grove areas. Alva remained in Strickler, James and Calvin remained at Skylight until their deaths. In later years, Thomas moved to Prairie Grove and Giles moved to Lincoln. Henry continued to farm the old "Home Place" until his death.

William B. (this entry we are very unsure about. We have no confirmed dates, but some of the dates we do have, lead us to believe that the great-great-great-great-grandfather of Keenan Jo Glidewell of Gladstone, Missouri may indeed be this William). If this is correct, William married Delilah and had at least one son: Andrew Monroe born February 1865.

James H. and Mahala had ten children: 1. Sarah Angeline born December 12, 1858, 2. (James) Calvin born March 12, 1861, 3. Nancy (Jane) born December 28, 1864, 4. Martha (Emaline) born March 30, 1867, 5. Margaret (Louise) born August 11, 1869, 6. Mary (Elizabeth) born June 23, 1872, 7. Daniel Thomas born April 13, 1875, 8. Teressa (Hesterann) born October 7, 1877, 9. John (William) born February 14/15, 1880. John was killed accidentally while loading a gun April 9, 1894, 10. Irvin (Andrew) born July 2, 1885.

In 1925, Drew moved his family to Guthrie, Oklahoma. Later, they moved to Aumsville, Oregon where Glidewell Farms were established. Glidewell Farms are well-known in and around that area and are still owned and maintained by the descendants of Drew's eldest son, Elmer.

Dr. Holmes West Glover

Dr. Holmes West Glover was born in 1812 in Tennessee. His parents were Lancaster and Elizabeth Locke Glover. They had the following nine children: 1. Boy Glover 1808, Tennessee. 2. Rev. Clement Cannon Glover 1810, Tennessee. 3. Dr. Holmes West Glover 1812, Tennessee. Died 1886, Elm Springs, Arkansas. 4. Girl Glover. 5. Joseph Locke Glover 1817, Tennessee. 6. Dr. Charles Locke Glover 1819, Tennessee. 7. Girl Glover 1820, Tennessee. 8. William White Glover, Tennessee. 9. Mary Glover, Tennessee.

Dr. Holmes Glover got his medical diploma (a real sheepskin) and a diploma from a botanical college. His medical diploma was from Memphis Medical College in 1848.

Dr. Holmes W. Glover moved from Holly Springs, Mississippi, where he was a doctor of medicines. He was a Master Mason of Lodge 35 in Holly Springs, Mississippi in 1844. His Sheep Skin is in Shiloh Museum along with several other papers and books that are of interest to the Glover Family and Washington County.

It is not known whether Dr. Glover married before or after he moved to Holly Springs, Mississippi, to practice medicine. He did get his 32nd Masonic diploma while in Holly Springs. He married Elizabeth Dresser and they had the following three children: 1. Gardiner Batte 12/20, 1839 Mississippi. 2. Henry 8/21, 1852 Mississippi. 3. Elizabeth 2/22, 1847 Mississippi.

Soon after his first wife died, Dr. Glover then moved to Cane Hill, Arkansas. He didn't live there long before he moved to Elm Springs, Arkansas. 4/4/61 he married Catherine (Kate) Webster. They had seven children, three of whom died young: 1. Holmes Jane Glover 1864, died 1873. 2. Charles Cannon Glover 1867, died 1873. 3. Martha Orella Glover 1871, died 1874. 4. Margaret (Maggie) Glover 1862, died 7/1, 1943. 5. Bell Julimus, 1955. 6. Lula Simpson Glover 1874, died 11/15, 1947. 7. Thomas Clem Glover 1/23/78, died 3/16, 1956.

Maggie married Tom J. Davis. After his death, she married Mr. Smith. And after his death, Mr. Morgan. They had no children. She died and was buried in Elm Springs, Arkansas, 1943. Maggie worked in a Millinery Store at Elm Springs, Arkansas from 1898-1905 with Olive Mount.

Bell married J. P. Donald in Seymour, Texas, where they resided. She had three sons (Glover, George and Charles) and a daughter, Kate. Bell died in Texas in 1955.

Lula married Charles Adams and lived mainly in Chelsea, Oklahoma. She died in 1947 and was buried in Inglewood, California. She had six sons: Harlan, Harry, Maurice, Clare, Chelsea and Jewell.

T. C. Glover married Olive I. Mount. They lived at the old Glover homeplace at Elm Springs. They had three sons: Ralph, John and Holmes, and three daugthers: Kay, Patricia and Madge. T. C. died and was buried in Arkansas in 1956.

The mother, Kate, lived with T. C. for two years, then with Maggie until her death 10/18/1919. She was buried at Elm Springs.

Dr. Glover died in 1886 and was buried in Elm Springs Cemetery. In his day there were no pharmaceutical stores so he had to make most of his medicines from herbs and roots. Some are now coming back into use. He had a recipe for ointment that is still in the family. It was very hot and was used for chest colds and pneumonia. It was very effective for which I can vouch.

Dr. Holmes W. Glover practiced all medicines and rode horse back for miles to deliver babies and take care of sick. He made many of his medicines and even sent to China for some herbs that he combined with his.

Jesse Goddard

Jesse Goddard brought his family to Washington County, Arkansas, about 1831. The family had traveled several hundred miles, undoubtedly in the company of other families from northeastern Tennessee. As was customary at that time, they must have built a boat or raft of some type and set forth from Kingston, Roane County, Tennessee, and floated down the Tennessee River into Alabama, portaged at Muscle Shoals, then continued to traverse the western part of Tennessee, this time from south to north. Up through Kentucky and into the Ohio river, down which they floated into the Mississippi. At the Arkansas river they would have had to pole up river to about Van Buren, then travel overland to Washington County, Arkansas, a land of lush growth and many streams and springs, which produced bountiful crops.

Jesse Goddard was born on February 1, 1795 in Sullivan County, Tennessee, a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Goddard. In the War of 1812 he served in the East Tennessee Infantry as a Private, enlisting on October 12, 1813. In 1816 Thomas Goddard sold their land in Sullivan County and bought 1000 acres in Morgan County, which was newly formed from Roane County.

Jesse married Mary Elizabeth Senter in Roane County, on November 13, 1817. She was born on July 9, 1799 in Hawkins County, Tennessee, a daughter of Tandy and Susan (Lyon) Senter. Tandy Senter was a very colorful man who lived more than 100 years - a frontiersman, Indian trader (and sometimes Indian fighter) and a staunch patriot who fought in the Revolution. Jesse bought land in both Roane and Morgan Counties, but sold it in 1830 before moving to Arkansas.

Jesse and Mary Elizabeth Goddard bought land and settled in Vineyard Township, where they raised their eleven children. Mrs. Margaret Goddard, widow of John Franklin Goddard, still lives on some of this land. Jesse and his family were active and responsible members of their community. The family were Methodists and some became ministers and missionaries. Goddard Memorial Methodist Church in Fort Smith, Arkansas, was named for Reverend Oscar Elmo Goddard, a grandson of Jesse.

Children of Jesse and Mary Elizabeth Goddard were: Susan Lyon Goddard, born October 31, 1818 in Roane County, Tennessee; died December 19, 1861 in Washington County; she married Burton Smith and they lived in Washington County. Tandy M., born October 19, 1820 in Roane County, Tennessee; died December 9, 1879 in Washington County; married Lucinda J. Woody, January 4, 1848 in Benton County; lived in Washington County. Martin L., born March 22, 1823, Roane County, Tennessee; died July 22, 1900, Dutch Mills, Arkansas; married Margaret Aisling on April 30, 1858. They lived in Benton County, where Martin was a saddler until the Civil War interfered; then they moved back to Dutch Mills, where Martin farmed and operated the local general merchandise store. Two or three of his daughters taught in the Dutch Mills school. Greenleaf, born February 27, 1826, Roane County, Tennessee; died May 29, 1900, Evansville, Arkansas; married Eliza Jane Alberty on January 1, 1857. Lived in Vineyard Township. William Thomas, born February 10, 1829, Roane County, Tennessee; died February 12, 1908 in Evansville, Arkansas; married Caroline Woody on December 17, 1869; had one child, John Franklin Goddard. Martha Jane, born August 15, 1831, Washington County, Arkansas; died February 22, 1839. Columbus Evan, born December 29, 1834, Washington County, Arkansas; died March 31, 1910. Sulphur, Oklahoma; married Narcissa Theresa Smedley on March 10, 1855, Sebastian County, Arkansas. One of their sons, Oscar Elmo Goddard, became a Methodist minister of note. Son Herbert Melvin became a Deputy U. S. Marshal and was killed in the line of duty. Albert W., born August 21, 1836. Elizabeth Augusta, born December 22, 1837, Washington County, Arkansas; died August 18, 1895; married William Henderson Edmiston on February 16, 1857/58. John Wesley, born April 10, 1840, Washington County, Arkansas; died August 27, 1863. Mary A., born September 25, 1846, Washington County, Arkansas; died October 13, 1861.

Many proud descendants of Jesse and Mary Goddard now live in Washington County, while others are scattered across the country.

Terrel Glen Gordon

In the summer of 1940 I hitch-hiked from Excelsior, Arkansas (Sebastian County) over the Boston Mountain to enroll in the University of Arkansas; having graduated that spring from the then two years program of Arkansas Tech at Russellville. I returned that fall to enter the University of Arkansas, while living in the 4-H House off the east side of the campus.

Born at Excelsior on February 26, 1920 as the eighth of eleven children to Robert Lee Gordon and Ida Beulah Plunkett Gordon. Growing up on a forty acre farm during the depression years, I was a part of the crew which farmed the forty acres, plus share-cropping other acreages, while my father was a part-time coal miner, black smith. We produced the finest sweet potatoes in the state, which my father peddled to grocery stores in Fort Smith. My father made molasses for all the farmers in the area; we sold them for 50 cents per gallon, and swapped them for groceries in Greenwood and Fort Smith. The molasses were so delicious that folk drove the 16 miles from Fort Smith to buy them.

James R. Gordon, standing, Betty Gordon Webb and Ruth Gordon Halterman

The house in which we lived on the farm had no indoor rest room, no running water, no electricity, no heat in the bedrooms. We took our turns bathing in the no. 2 washtub, in water which had been heated on the wood-fired cook stove. These conditions prevailed through the first eighteen years of my life.

We went to school at the Sandridge School at Excelsior, which offered only the first eight grades. When I was in the 5th grade, our school was consolidated with the Greenwood school system, and I graduated from Greenwood High School in 1938. Between the last two years of high school, with a forced shortened term, I spent a 5 month hitch in the CCC's at Campe Locke, east of Mountainburg. During that hitch I helped to build the native stone buildings which still are in use at White Rock Tower. I was the first member of my family to attend college. At Tech I was in the NYA Program and worked for 12-1/2 cents per hour, 100 hours per month, and this paid my room and board.

In the fall of 1940, at the University of Arkansas, I met Lois June Davis of Fayetteville who was a student at the University of Arkansas. We were married June 19, 1942, by Dr. O. L. Gibson, pastor of First Baptist Church, Fayetteville, following graduation with a BSA degree in May. On July 13, 1942, I was inducted into the army as part of WW II and left Washington County for Camp Seibert, Alabama. My wife went to teach home economics at Norfork, Arkansas. I was at Camp Seibert for 2 1/2 years as part of the training cadre; during that time my wife had moved to Gadsden, Alabama to be with me, and to teach school. On April 6, 1944 a son, James Roy Gordon was born. In September 1944 I was transferred to Edgewood Arsenal, near Baltimore, Maryland, to attend OCS, and my wife and son moved to Baltimore, where my wife's brother lived with his family. I graduated from OCS in November 1944, second highest in my class, and was shipped overseas to Manila of the Philippines to a replacement pool. While waiting there for assignment, a former Company Commander whom I had befriended back in Camp Seibert, Alabama, learned that I was there and requested my assignment to his G-1 Section (Personnel) in General MacArthur's headquarters. When the Japanese generals came to Manila to receive the surrender papers I witnessed them coming into our headquarters building.

In April 1946 I was discharged from the army at Fort Chaffee, and in July moved back to Washington County, to Lincoln as a teacher of Vocational Agriculture in Lincoln High School. That fall we bought our first home for $3,300.00. I began the Vo Ag program at Lincoln where I taught for four years, and supervised the G-I On the Farm Training Program. We helped to build the first gymnasium at Lincoln High, and layed out the first football field. I was a basketball referee in the county, and was active in the Lincoln Kiwanis Club. In October 1959, our second child, Betty Jo, was born in the Prairie Grove Hospital. A few weeks earlier I had been in Kansas City, Missouri with a group of my students at the National FFA Convention, when I received a phone call that my wife had been taken to the hospital to have our child. I loaded the boys on the school bus, and broke the speed limit all the way back to Lincoln, only to find that her trip to the hospital was a false alarm.

From childhood I had been active in a Baptist church. At First Baptist Church, Lincoln, I was ordained as a deacon. Then in 1949 I surrendered to God's leadership to be a preacher of the Gospel. In just a few months I was asked to be pastor of First Baptist Church Lincoln, while at the same I continued to teach school. Realizing that I needed additional training and education to be an effective minister, I decided to go to Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas in 1950. While in seminary I pastored a church in Tom Bean, Texas, and then in Dallas. While in Dallas I dropped out of seminary two years, and began a new Vo Ag program at Buckner Baptist Home for Children, where there were 750 orphans. In December 1951, our third child Ruth Alice was born in Dallas. I graduated from seminary in 1956 with a BD degree.

In July 1957, I was called a second time to pastor First Baptist Church in Lincoln, so we moved back to Washington County. The church grew and we built a new sanctuary, and bought additional land for expansion.

In October 1959, I was called as pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, Fayetteville, one block from Fayetteville High School. While I pastored there for 16-1/2 years the church outgrew the facilities, but was not allowed by the city board to expand our buildings. Therefore, we agreed that part of our members would become the nucleus of a new mission, and in November 1966 we began the Rolling Hills Baptist Mission. While pastoring at Immanuel I was asked by Chaplain Willetts of the Veterans Hospital to be an intermittent Chaplain to fill in for him while he was away. Therefore, beginning in 1960, while still pastoring, I served as intermittent, and then part-time, Chaplain at the VA Hospital until May 1976 when I became full-time Chaplain. I served as Chief of Chaplaincy there until retired in April 1985.

Each of our children graduated from Fayetteville High School. Our daughters attended Junior High in the old high school building on School Street near where the highrise now stands. Each of our children attended the University of Arkansas. On June 14, 1964, our son James Roy was married to Linda Cooksey daughter of Pearl and Joyce Cooksey of Fayetteville. They have two children Shelly Dawn, and Michael Shane Gordon. On November 13, 1969, our daughter Betty Jo was married to James Ray Webb of Savannah, Tennessee, who had come to the University of Arkansas on a golf scholarship. They now live in Sugar Land, Texas, and have one daughter Lindsey Rebecca Webb, and Jim is employed by the LPGA. Our daughter Ruth Alice is married to Danny "Skip" Halterman of Missouri. They have a daughter Marni Rene and a son Bryan. They own and operate the Sure Sign Company in Eureka Springs, Arkansas.

Here in 1987, I am retired and living in Fayetteville with my wife Lois of 43 years, I do supply preaching, and she teaches a few piano pupils in our home.

Earl Goree

Earl Goree was born June 1, 1880 in Van Buren, Arkansas. He moved with his parents to Springdale about 1885.

Earl Goree Farm about 1912 - Strawberry Pickers: On right - Earl Goree and Family In back - Ruby Goree and Merle Goree In front - Guy Carroll and Mildred Goree Goree house and graft house in background.

He attended the Springdale Public Schools.

Around the turn of the century, the Town Football Team defeated the University. Earl Goree was quarterback and his brother, Oscar was a tackle. The town team won in a hard-fought, 7-0 victory.

For a number of years, he was in the nursery business with his father. Later on, he conducted a business alone.

An ad in the Springdale News of February 13, 1913 lists "Best two year apple trees at 6 cents each - one year apple trees at 4 cents each".

Mr. Goree's rose garden was a beautiful sight. They were called tea roses and were a novelty at the time. His girls' teachers were the envy of their co-workers when the girls took gorgeous bouquets to them.

He was married to Ruby Thompson May 12, 1904. They had three daughters: Merle who died November 14, 1926 at the age of 22. She had leakage of the heart. Her mother took her to Mayo's, but they were unable to help her, Mildred who lives in Houston, Texas and Ruth who died soon after her retirement.

Mildred was married to Paul B. Wynne. They owned and operated Wynne Mart on South Main Street in Houston, Texas. Mr. Wynne is deceased.

Mrs. Goree was an accomplished seamstress.

Besides his nursery, Mr. Earl Goree was a rural mail carrier at the time of his death. He died December 12, 1918 at the age of 38 of influenza-pneumonia during the terrible flu epidemic.

John Wesley Goree

John Wesley Goree, born in Montgomery, Alabama November 22, 1848, moved to Van Buren, Arkansas when a young man. On March 31, 1874, he married Frances Jane Gill, who was born in Mount Vernon, Missouri, October 18, 1853. They moved to Springdale about 1883. They had nine children: Stella, Wallis, Early, William Oscar, Mary Mable, John B., Gordon, Nina, Walter Osa and Wesley Roy.

Mr. Goree was a nurseryman, fruit grower and farmer. He had a nursery with Brogdon. In 1890, they advertised all kinds of fruit and ornamental trees. They asked that people write for a catalogue and price list. Later, Mr. Goree had a nursery by himself.

One of his unusual crops was broomcorn. He had brooms made for the entire family. He had several hives of bees so there was honey for all.

On July 20, 1918, Mr. Goree died of a sudden heart attack while sitting in his chair. All of his children were present for his service. Walter and Wesley were at Fort Beauregard in the army getting ready to go to France with Company A from Springdale in World War I. Wallace, Gordon and Mary came from Oklahoma, Earl and Oscar lived in Springdale, Stella came from Fayetteville and Nina lived at home.

Mr. Goree's father, Josiah Goree, was a private in Company H, 6th Regiment, Alabama Infantry in the Civil War. Family members said Josiah Goree was too old to be drafted. A man

John Wesley Goree was too young to fight in the Civil War, but they said he carried the mail to the soldiers on a mule.

Josiah Goree's wife was Mariah Tyler Goree. Their children were: Missouri, Yancy, James Langston, John Wesley, Mary, Lucinda, Silas, Joseph, Martha, Alice and George. The Gorees came to Alabama from South Carolina.

Raymond Clifford Goree

Raymond Clifford Goree was born June 12, 1904 east of Springdale, Arkansas. His parents were William Oscar and Effie Ora Goree. He was the first grandson on both sides of the family. His sisters were Mabel Annis and Lena Louise. His father was killed in a car wreck on Rainbow Curve near Bentonville, Arkansas, August 27, 1921. He and friends were on their way to a baseball game in Bentonville.

Raymond attended Springdale, Arkansas schools and graduated in 1923. He helped his family bud peaches and other fruit in the Goree Nursery.

He drove a road grader for the State under Nolen Webster. He helped build Highway 68 west and many others.

While driving through Lowell, Arkansas one day from Monte, Nebraska, he noticed several girls on the porch of Kelton's store. He stopped and one of them was Helen Nail. They were married in 1929.

Helen Etta Nail was born January 22, 1912 east of Lowell. Her parents were Claude Columbus and Ida Bell Ingram Nail. The Nails were early settlers of the Lowell area. They came from Kingston, Tennessee in the 1830s.

After his marriage, they lived with his mother until they established their own home. Vera Lou was born April 2, 1930 and when she was about four they moved east of Lowell. Patricia Ann was born January 24, 1935 and died October 11, 1937.

Raymond was a farmer also, worked as a mechanic for Welches. He was working for the Benton County Road Department until he had to retire due to his health.

In 1945 he purchased the farm on which they lived on Old Wire Road from his sister and husband, Reverend Clifton and Mabel Bell. In 1948 the present house was built. Helen still lives in it.

After ten years of suffering from rheumatoid arthritis and Parkinson disease, he departed this life, April 27, 1969, and is buried in Bluff Cemetery, Springdale, near his daughter, Patricia Ann.

While he was working for the Benton County road department, during the lunch hour he would lie down for a short nap. This warm day he opened his eyes and a snake was crawling over his body. He lay still and it disappeared in a nearby hole. After that, he checked the ground carefully. One of his fellow workers told us at his funeral, that one day while Raymond was grading the road and pulling his truck behind him, it broke loose and ran in front of him. He waved as it passed him, then realized it was his own truck. We still have his '41 Ford pickup with its dents, and hope to restore it. What stories it could tell, since it has been over most of the Benton County roads.

Mrs. Effie Goree was a member of the Apple Blossom Club. She held offices as Reporter and Recreation Director.

Mr. Goree died at the age of 39 in a tragic automobile accident.

Mrs. Goree spent her entire life at Springdale. She died August 12, 1970 at the age of 85.

James Ship Graham

"James S. Graham, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Washington County, Arkansas, was born January 21, 1818 in Warren County, Kentucky. When he was five years old, his parents moved from their home to Arkansas and stopped in some of the eastern counties; where they remained until 1836 when they moved to Washington County, this state, where 'Uncle Jimmy', as he was familiarly called, spent the remainder of his life, much beloved and respected," - a partial quote from his obituary. He was the son of William Graham and Leah Bloyd.

Rebecca Jane Patton was the daughter of Jesse and Mary Patton. She was born December 28, 1826, near Knoxville, Tennessee. With her parents, she moved to Washington County in 1837.

James S. and Rebecca were married April 4, 1841. They had the following children, all of whom were born in Washington County: Vachel Clark, Peter, Rachel, Dorothea, James S., Amanda Adaline, Benjamin Perry, Orleana J., James Wiley, Cynthia Lee, and.William Paschel.

James S. and his two eldest sons served in the Confederate army from 1863 until the close of the war. His oldest son (Vachel Clark) volunteered in the first company ever organized in Arkansas. Peter, the other son, was a member of the third company that was organized. James S. was a Private in Company G, 8th Arkansas Cavalry.

By hard work and good management, the Grahams became the owner of over 300 acres of land in Sections 28, 29 and 32 in Township 18 and in Section 5 of Township 17.

James Ship died October 5, 1894, at his home near Springdale. His obituary says: "He professed a hope in Christ in early life and joined Shiloh Church of Primitive Baptist at the October meeting 1872 and was baptized by Eld. John Holcomb.

Rebecca Jane Patton Graham died October 28, 1907, near Springdale, at the age of 80 years and 10 months. Her obituary says, in part: "In 1872, she joined Shiloh Church of Primitive Baptists being baptized by Eld. John Holcomb, living an humble, pious and devoted life in the service of the Lord until her demise."

Peter Graham, son of James Ship Graham and Rebecca Jane Patton, was born March 8, 1845 on a farm three miles northeast of Springdale. Temperance Wilson was the daughter of John Wesley Wilson and Rebecca White (see Wilson story) and was born on a farm also northeast of Springdale on March 19, 1850. Peter and Temperance were married April 4, 1869, in the front yard of their pastor, Rev. John Holcomb. The following children were born to Peter and Temperance: Easter Florence (married Benjamin E. Boyd - see Boyd story), Hulda Arizona (married John Anderson), Sydney Johnson (married Mary Jane Loving), Harriet Etta (married Charlie Riggins), Samuel Ira Tilden (married Ollie Sisco), Humphrey Hercules (married Nelle Davis), Ras Bennett (married Maude A. Gregg), Maud Milley, Jasper Owen (married Sarah Elizabeth Riggins), Roy Berry and Daisy Loy (married Seymour Tillman).

A considerable amount of land was owned by Peter and Temperance - a portion of which was in Section 5 and Township 17; and Section 29 and Township 18. Peter gave 260 acres to each of four sons, Ira, Jasper, Ras, and Sydney, upon their marriage.

Peter died at 6:00 p. m. at his home 2-1/2 miles southeast of Springdale on February 12, 1904. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Eld. J. J. Kirkland, Primitive Baptist Church. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity.

Temperance died at 6:00 a. m. at the home of her son, J. O. Graham, in Springdale, on September 1930, of pneumonia.

Peter Graham

There have been many articles written about Peter Graham and his family, many contain errors due to oral family tradition. I have spent twenty years researching this man who was my husband's 3rd great grandfather and one of the first settlers into this county before it was established. Arriving in 1826 with a Lovely County land grant, which he did not use; Peter and his wife Nancy settled on the 40 acres which is now the site of West Fork, Arkansas. Peter Grayham/Graham was b. 1751-55 in Augusta County, Virginia to William Grayham II whose will (Book F, page 70) was probated in 1809 in Caswell County, North Carolina. Land records of 1778 (Book A, page 37) indicate his mother's name was Rachel. Peter's known brothers and sisters were: William b. 1750 d. 1846 in Bardstown, Nelson County, Kentucky; Edward who died 4 July 1823 in Green County, Kentucky; George; John; Charity Allen Davis; Polly, the wife of Charles Elmore and perhaps Lidda Elmore.

Peter, a hunter by trade, was the great uncle of William Mentor Graham, Abraham Lincoln's school teacher and the great uncle of Mary Owens who by tradition was courted by Lincoln.

Peter and Nancy b. 1760 had two daughters in the 1784-87 census of Caswell County, North Carolina. By 1790 he was living in the 96th District in Pendleton County, South Carolina and had added a daughter and 2 sons to his household. Peter migrated to Green County, Kentucky in 1795 and was there until 1811 when he and Nancy sold their land (deed book 6, page 207 Green County, Kentucky) and continued their western migration. Peter crossed the Mississippi at Wycliffe, Kentucky and can be found at the Polk Bayou, Missouri Territory in 1811-12. Traveling up the White River, by 1816 Peter had settled in the upper White River country on the old McBee place below Tolbert's ferry in what is now Marion County, Arkansas, but was then Independence County. In 1823-25 he was a leading citizen of Sugar Loaf Township near Lead Hill, today is Boone County, Arkansas. Peter and Nancy had 12 children, the names of which were preserved by a son; Nelson Reed Graham's descendants. This list matches a probate record (box 2) filed in Washington County, Arkansas in 1869 by Peter's grandson, Wilson Graham. Peter's and Nancy's children were: Keziah "Cissy" b. ca. 1780 d. after 1850 in Carroll County, Arkansas married Wm. Sneed;

Sally b. ca. 1785 d. 1841-49 lived in Shiloh (Springdale) with her husband Freeborn Graham, son of Elijah and Sarah Graham. William b. ca. 1786 d. after 1860 and probably buried in unmarked grave at Friendship Cemetery in Springdale. William married 4 times, first to Leah Bloyd, the mother of his children, Mrs. Mary Patton, Mrs. Martha (Strickland) Pierson Skelton and Mrs. Deborah Lynch, the mother of Martin Alonzo Lynch. Mary "Polly" b. 5 December 1788 d. 1861 married Eli Bloyd, lived and died in West Fork, Arkansas. George b. 1790 d. 1851-59 married Lucinda, by family tradition her surname was Langston; a marriage record or Bible has not been found. George lived and died two miles above junction of War Eagle and White Rivers in Benton County. Ira E. b. 1795 d. 1862 was a constable of White River Township Benton County, Arkansas in 1841. He left a widow Sarah and no heirs. A son Peter b. 1795-1800 who lived in northeast Arkansas possible d. before 1841; Nancy b. 1795-97 d. 1862 Franklin Township Marion County, Arkansas married Payton Keesee. John B. b. 1799 d. August 1870 married Emeline, they lived and died near West Fork, Arkansas. Moses b. ca. 1800 married Sarah Winn. Moses died at West Fork 6 October 1840. His mother Nancy, who lived with him went to live with a daughter in Marion County, Arkansas. She died there in October 1841. Moses wife Sarah married Wm. Ingram as his 2nd wife and moved to Oregon Territory in the 1850s. Rachel b. ca. 1803 (1850 census birth year an error) d. 1851-59 married Thomas McGarrah, son of James McGarrah. Thomas was a brother of Wm. McGarrah, the early Fayetteville merchant of whom much had been written. Thomas and Rachel owned land in Fayetteville then moved to Benton County ca. 1837. The youngest child Nelson Reed born 28 January 1805 married Susan Louiza Landers circa 1831. They moved to Benton County in the late 1830s. Nelson Reed was killed by bushwhackers, as were two other area men on 1 February 1863. He was buried where he fell and thus was the beginning of Phillips Cemetery southeast of Lowell, Arkansas.

The probate record of 1869 lists 24 grandchildren and 6 great grandchildren of Peter and Nancy. Granddaughters named were: Nancy (Graham) Carney, Pernetty (Bloyd) Combs, Nancy (Bloyd) Winn, Sarah Graham Wells, Nancy a daughter of Wm. and Leah Graham and wife of Levi Graham. (Levi the son of Elijah and Sarah Graham.) Granddaughters Kitty (Graham) Smith Boydston, Nancy (McGarrah) Graham, the wife of her cousin Henry C. Graham, Cynthia McGarrah possible wife of James Ferrell, Tempie (Graham) Wilson, Sarah (Graham) Wight, Lucinda (Graham) Easley Phillips. Lucinda was listed as Lucinda Lynch, which was an error; (Ref. Nelson Reed Graham Bible). Lucinda's sister Nancy married Martin Alonzo Lynch. They are the great grandparents of my husband; Richard Lyle Lynch born 1923 in Springdale.

The Graham grandsons listed were Henry C., James Ship, Wilson, Peter, John R., Cyrus, Wilburn D., Silas Marion, William, and Peter. William and Peter Bloyd, and George McGarrah. One I. E. Graham hasn't been proven the son of George Graham. The 6 great grandchildren listed were Seborn Sneed "Sebe Ellis" Graham and Charity (Graham) Lewis, their mother was Rebecca the daughter of George and Lucinda Graham. Their father was Ellis Graham believed to be the son of Elijah and Sarah Graham. Elizabeth (Bloyd) McKnight, Nancy (Bloyd) Webb, C. Lucinda (Bloyd) Karnes, and Martha (Bloyd) Bird. Peter Graham, contrary to family tradition; died in West Fork, Arkansas in 1828 and was buried there. (See S. C. Turnbo manuscripts at Springfield Art Museum in Springfield, Missouri and Christian County Library Ozark, Missouri; A Reminiscent History of Ozark Region, page 359; published by Goodspeed in 1894). Turnbo wrote many stories of the kinship and hardships of our pre 1850 settlers of Arkansas and Missouri. I have cross researched his records with probate, census, cemeteries and other legal records and have found only one error, perhaps even this was a typographical error.

Recently Lottie (Keesee) Handley of Texas, filed with the D. A. R. her Keesee lineage stating that our Peter Graham was her ancestor and a revolutionary soldier. Lottie's ancestor who was a Peter Keesee b. 1830 married Almira Copeland and Amelia Friend. This Peter Keesee was not the son of Payton and Nancy (Graham) Keesee, their son Peter also b. 1830 married Louisa Jane Johnson and Sally Holt. (S. C. Turnbo married the sister of Sally (Holt) Keesee and wrote articles on both Peter Keesee's). Documented proof has not been established that the revolutionary soldier Peter Graham is our ancestor.

Elijah Graham b. 1760-70 d. 1841 Arkansas lived Green County, Kentucky and Arkansas. His wife Sarah, who died 25 September 1845; was the only woman Springdale's Shiloh Church dispensed with services to have a funeral. Rev. Berry D. Graham, the son of Elijah and Sarah; served as part time minister to the church. Elijah's kinship to Peter has not been established, perhaps a cousin.

Peter Graham

A special memento sets on a shelf. A little wicker suitcase was given to me when I was about eight years old by my great grandmother, Temperance Wilson Graham. Each time I take it down and open it memories come flooding back. I shall attempt to record here some of the memories and facts garnered from other family members and official documents about the children of Peter and Temperance Graham (see James S. Graham story).

The Peter Graham family L to R: Sidney Johnson, Harriet Etta, Esther Florence, Humphrey Hercules, Jasper Owen, Hulda Arizona, Daisy Loy, Samuel Ira Tillman, Ras Bennett. Seated are: Temperance, Peter and Peter's mother Rebecca Jane (Patton).

Their oldest child, Easter Florence, born January 29, 1870, married Ben Boyd (see his story). Their daughter, Artie, married Frank R. Sicard and moved to Oklahoma where they spent most of their lives. I was born in McIntosh County, Oklahoma, January 10, 1920. My sister, Lonina Sicard Moore, was born April 6, 1925, in Washington County, Arkansas, on the Boyd homestead where several generations of Boyds had lived. Both of us now resides in Midwest City, Oklahoma.

Hulda Arizona, (b. August 30, 1871 - d. September 25, 1937) and John W. Anderson lived in Sarcoxie, Missouri, and had the following children: Minnie Ethel and George (adopted).

The children of Harriet Etta (b. October 23, 1874 - d. April 23, 1953) and Charles Frank Riggins who lived in California were Frank Leroy, Lawrence Burr, and Mary Helen.

Maud Milley (b. November 1, 1879) and Roy Berry (b. October 18, 1885) died at an early age.

Another of their children went to California. Humphrey Hercules (b. April 15, 1883 - d. March 13, 1956) married Nelle Davis and they had one daughter, Mary Nelle. He was a mail clerk on the train.

Temperance and Peter's youngest child was Daisy Loy (b. April 18, 1887 - d. June 16, 1959). She married Seymour Tillman, who was a telegraph operator for Western Union. They had two children: Marguerite Temperance and Willard Merritt Tillman.

At the marriage of Sydney, Ira, Ras, and Jasper, each was given 260 acres of land. For several years the brothers were in the farming business together (general farming, strawberries and fruit orchards) and also operated an apple dryer. They eventually went into business separately. Sydney moved to Fayetteville where he operated a small grocery store. Ira had a bulk service station. Ras remained on his farm his entire life. Jasper sold his farm about 1929 and opened a grocery store in Springdale. His sons assisted him in this enterprise. Jasper moved to Grove, Oklahoma, about 1939, where he lived until his death.

Sydney Johnson (b. March 7, 1873 - d. May 22, 1947) married Mary Jane Caroline Loving. From this union was born Louis Orace and Letha Marie.

Samuel Ira Tilden (b. June 20, 1876 - d. March 12, 1949) married Ollie Sisco. They had no offspring.

Ras Bennett (b. January 18, 1878 - d. April 28, 1947) wed Maud Adelaid Gregg. They had one son, Buel.

Jasper Owen (b. July 18, 1881 - d. November 5, 1944) married Sarah Elizabeth Riggins. Four sons were born to this couple: Raymond Peter, Lewis Bennett, Harley Owen, and Nolan Hinton.

The oldest descendants known still living are some of their grandchildren: Lewis Bennett Graham (Ft. Gibson, Oklahoma), Harley Owen Graham (Idabel, Oklahoma), and Nolan Hinton Graham (Grove, Oklahoma) - sons of Jasper; Daisy Loy's daughter, Marguerite Temperance Swarner (Dallas, Texas) and son, Willard Merritt Tillman (Aurora, Missouri). These are probably living and are in California: Harriet Etta's children: Frank Leroy Riggins, Lawrence Burr Riggins and Mary Helen Huber; and Hercules' adopted daughter, Mary Nelle MacRoster.

We now close the lid on the little wicker case and place it back on the shelf. The memories of our family, past and present, still remain.

The author is grateful to her sister, Lonina Moore, for her invaluable assistance with this family history research.

Martha Graham, wife of Mathew McGarrah

William Graham

A brief look at the earliest Grahams finds William I, his brothers, John, Robert and Archibald and sister Jane (Graham) Feamster and their families settled in America by 1741/42. After residing in Chester County, Pennsylvania, for a time William I and John settled on the Calf Pasture River, a tributary of the James River in Augusta County, Virginia. We don't know how long they remained in Virginia. Records indicate William II was the son of William I. We find William II in Caswell County, North Carolina in the early 1760s. William II was the father of Peter Grayham/Graham who died in West Fork, Arkansas in 1828. (See Peter and Nancy Graham family - Earliest Washington County Settlers.) William II, his children and their families are living on Hogans Creek in Caswell County in 1777. This area was known as the Hillsborough District. The Grahams were weavers, Indian fighters, hunters, road overseers, ministers, judges, farmers, etc. and primarily law-abiding citizens.

William, the son of Peter and Nancy Graham; married Leah Bloyd in Green County, Kentucky on 24 February 1807. Records indicate Leah is a daughter of John Bloyd and a first cousin to Eli Bloyd who married William's sister Mary Graham. William and Leah migrated from Kentucky after 1818 and by 1836 were in northeastern Arkansas where Leah died. Known to have had eleven children, we can account for nine and possibly ten of those children. Peter born by 1810, John H. born 1810, Benjamin born 1815, Nancy born December 1817, James Ship born 21 December 1818 Warren County, Kentucky, Martha born 25 March 1824, Nelson Reed born 1824, who was named for his father's brother; Amanda born 1828, Moses born 29 March 1833. Merrick H. Graham born 1820 is believed to be a son.

Peter died in Taney County, Missouri shortly after 1840 and left four orphan children: Simpson, Rebecca S., Elizabeth and Charles. John and his wife Sarah lived in Taney County, Missouri in 1840, in Prairie Township, Washington County, Arkansas 1850 and Elm Springs Township by 1860. John and Sarah raised John's niece Rebecca S. Graham. Benjamin and wife Elizabeth also lived in Elm Springs Township in 1860; his wife died on the 3 November 1860. Nancy married Levi Graham the son of Elijah and Sarah Graham. Levi and Nancy reared Elizabeth, who was Nancy's niece, the daughter of her brother Peter. This Elizabeth born 1837 died 1928 is buried as "Lil Grandma Grey"; not because her surname was Grey but because she was tiny and had grey hair according to her grandson George W. Graham b. 1894, d. 1972. Levi and Nancy had 14 children, seven of whom lived to adulthood. James Ship married Rebecca Jane Patton. (See James S. Graham Family for his data.) Martha married Napoleon Clark, Sr. and Mathew McGarrah. Her children, although not legally changed the surname to McGray and thus reads her tombstone at Friendship Cemetery. Martha and Mathew are the maternal great-grandparents of Harvey Jones, who founded The Jones Truck Lines Company. Nelson Reed, Jr. married Kittoree McGarrah, a sister to the above Mathew and Eliza (McGarrah) Atwood. Nelson died during the Civil War years, his daughter Eliza married Vachel C. son of James S. Graham. Nelson's daughter Mary Elizabeth married Morgan Ralls. Mary migrated to Knox County and Clarence, Shelby County, Missouri where she died on 5 January 1927. Amanda the daughter of William and Leah married Rev. James M. Ingram, dying shortly after 1855 in the Hickory Creek community; her husband married 1856-57 his second wife Sarah Elizabeth Easley. (See Flashback - May 1975 issue "A Tale of Vengeance".) Moses Graham married Deborah Jane Lynch (see James Lynch Family for his data). If Merrick H. Graham proves to be a son of William and Leah; he married Sarah T. Biass (marriage recorded as Buie is an error) the daughter of Jesse Biass and his first wife who is thought to be Rhoda Bloyd and a sister to Leah (Bloyd) Graham). No record has been found of the eleventh child of William and Leah; perhaps the child did not live to maturity.

William married as his second wife, Mrs. Mary Patton; who was born 1797 in Tennessee and the widow of Jesse Patton. Mary died in 1852 and on the 19 August William married his third wife Martha Strickland, the widow of William Pierson and William Skelton. Shiloh Primitive Baptist Church records indicate this marriage was not too successful. Although William was among the first members of the church he was excluded in 1853. He evidently liked the wedded life as he married the fourth time on 4 October 1856 to Mrs. Deborah "Phoebe" Lynch, who was the widow of James Lynch. Apparently Deborah died by 1860 as William in the 1860 census is living with his three grandchildren; Charles, Elizabeth and her sons; Asa and Peter and Hulda and her daughter Manerva. Elizabeth's son Peter born 1860 married Nancy Catherine "Rhine" Biass the daughter of Washington Armstrong "Bank" Biass and his second wife Katherine (Bass/Biass) Hawkins. Records indicate Bank's second wife could possibly be his first cousin.

Most of Peter and Nancy Catherine (Biass) Graham children's descendants still reside in the Springdale area. Their 9 children were: Dorothy M., wife of George Scott; Maude Lee, wife of Virgil Lewallen; Lillie Ellen, wife of Charles McGarrah; Rosie, wife of Simeon Joseph "Jody" Parsons; Allie, wife of Edward Allred Arthur Walker; Hattie Marie, wife of Tom Sherry; George Washington, who married Zella O. Harp and Helen L. Cude; Hettie, wife of Garry Fuzzell and Eldridge Earl married Josephine Shriner and Eula Watts.

William Graham died after the 1860 census enumeration and by 1870. His descendants are numerous and can claim an esteemed birthright.

John M. Graham/Grayham

John M. Graham was born on 17 March 1787 in Virginia. He was the son of Jesse Graham from Ireland and Jane Cook from Scotland. He is one of ten sons and two daughters. The family moved to Kentucky about 1800 where Jesse died in 1806-07.

He moved to Santa Cruz County, California, with Napoleon and Jesse. John also had his two nephews, Issac Wayne Graham and Jessie J. Graham with him. John took his nephews to their father, Issac Graham, who is well-known in early California history.

John moved to San Joaquin County, California, in 1860, to Lane County in Oregon Territory in 1870 and to Fresno County, California, in 1880. John lived near his youngest daughter, Mary Ann Graham Akers when he died about 1883.

John served in the Texas Cavalry during the Texas War for Independence and he was discharged 30 September 1836. He worked as a miner in California and he became a physician as listed on the 1870 U. S. census. He was still working as a medical doctor at the ripe old age of 94. John applied for a land grant and received 160 acres in Fresno County, California, on 3 August 1882.

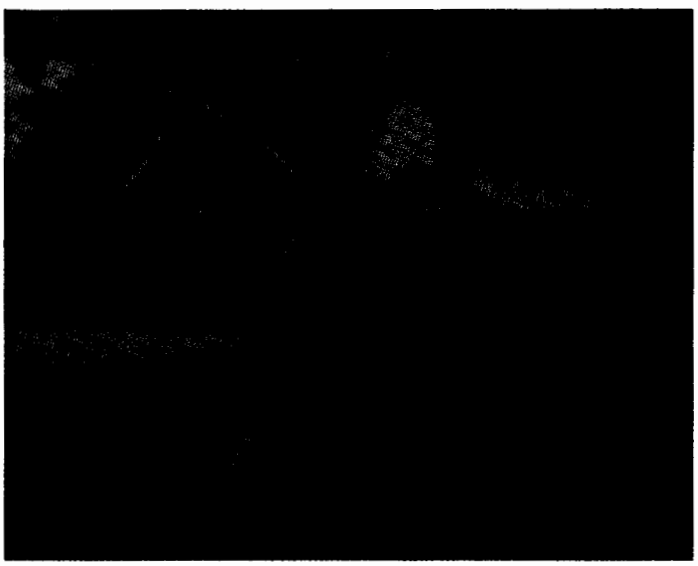
James Albert Gray

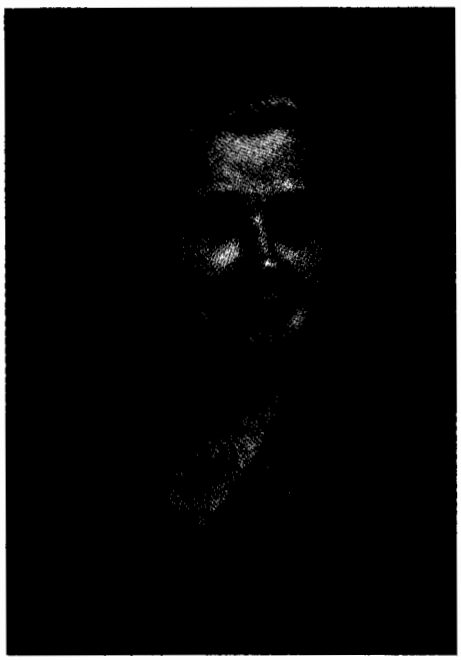
James Albert Gray stood erect, his height towering over many of the guests at his 50th Wedding Anniversary, December 27, 1950. His wife, Lula Mae, daughter of Payton K. and Jane Stout Thomas beamed at his side as they recalled highlights of their marriage. There was much laughter when youthful past times such as taffy-pulling, square dancing and Sunday afternoon buggy riding were mentioned. The occasion was celebrated at the home of their youngest son, Theodore Franklin, and his wife, Ava Anderson Gray.



James Albert Gray about 1937 at 639 North Oliver, Fayetteville.

The son of Ephriam Alvis and Mary Acuff Gray, James

Theodore Franklin, Ava Anderson, James Albert and Lula Mae Gray.



Lula Mae Gray on her 80th birthday.

Albert was born June 23, 1877, in Knoxville, Tennessee. Ephriam Alvis Gray served as 2nd Lieutenant in the 1st Regiment of the Tennessee Cavalry from August 1864 to June 1865. Ephriam Alvis and Mary Acuff Gray died in the spring of 1900 and are buried in a cemetery near Pineville, Missouri. James Albert's brothers, Pryor Theodore and Franklin Noah and sister, Londa Elizabeth, all lived in Fayetteville. There are no records available to determine when the Grays moved to Fayetteville. It is thought they had cousins living in the area or possibly Ephriam Alvis and Mary Acuff Gray lived in the Fayetteville area before moving to Pineville.

James Albert boarded with the Oliver family on Oliver Road before marriage. He drove a delivery wagon for Conners Grocery Store for a few years. Around 1902 he became Farm Superintendent of the University of Arkansas where he was employed until retirement age.

When Dan T. Gray of Virginia became Head of the Agricultural Department, he provided this information. The Gray family of Virginia had three sons. One stayed in Virginia while one migrated to Tennessee and another to Texas. James Lula Mae Gray about 1937 at 639 North Oliver, Fayetteville.

James Albert Gray about 1898.

Alfred Gray of Texas moved to Elkins, Arkansas at the turn of the century. The three men, Dan T., James Alfred and James Albert looked and acted much alike — tall, very erect postures, blue-grey eyes, slightly ruddy complexions and deliberate styles of walking. Although this information regarding the relationship of these three men is purely conjectural, it may confirm Dan T. Gray's explanation of the Gray family migrations.

While working for the Agricultural Department, James Albert pursued an avocation to supplement his income. He bought several small farms northwest of Fayetteville. On each of these farms a tenant or share-cropper lived. After a short time the farm was sold for a profit. Another farm was bought and the process began again. Along with these real estate ventures, another economic project evolved. This consisted of buying vacant lots in Bates Addition, building homes, occupying them for a few years and selling them for a profit. The three homes James Albert built are still in use. They have been enlarged and kept in good repair. Lula Mae contributed to the success of this real estate project. At each place she planted dogwood, red bud, forsythia, japonica and bridal wreath which still burst forth in beauty every year. The maples, oaks and pines she planted tower over the landscape. Also, hundreds of daffodils, jonquils and resurrection lilies bloom each spring and summer. The wild plants Lula Mae transplanted from woodland areas continue to multiply.

When James Albert purchased the lot between the Oliver and Ballard places on Oliver Road in 1937, he also bought acreage west of Oliver Road. Lots were sold and homes were built. Eventually a road connecting Maple and Cleveland was opened. In 1980 the road was paved and named Gray Avenue.

In 1949 James Albert decided the area around Bates Addition was becoming too populous. He bought a place outside the city on Highway 16 West and sold the home on Oliver Road to his son, Theodore Franklin. After James Albert's death in January 1952, Lula Mae bought the old Ballard place on Oliver Road next door to her son, Theodore Franklin. Here she lived for 23 years. At this location she continued to plant shrubs, bulbs and trees.

In Lula Mae's later years, she developed a new creative endeavor and expanded an earlier interest. She became quite skillful in crocheting beautiful rag rugs which she gave to relatives and neighbors. Her concern for world events and political activity increased. As a member of the Democratic Party, she took pride in her responsibility to understand the current issues (county, state and nationwide), and to vote in each election.

Furnishings from James Albert and Lula Mae's home in use by Ava Anderson Gray include a rocking chair purchased by James Albert around 1898, a dining table refinished and converted to a card table and a chest of drawers bought around 1905. A prized possession is a desk James Albert used when he was Superintendent of the Agricultural Department. This style of desk was built in the south only around the Civil War period. Another interesting keepsake is the water jug the men used out in the field during James Albert's tenure as Superintendent of the University farm.

All except one of the children of James Albert and Lula Mae are buried along side their parents in Mount Comfort Cemetery, west of Fayetteville. They were Howard Lee (October 1, 1901-February 19, 1970), Myrtle Lucile (November 14, 1905-August 9, 1985), Albert Wade (November 16, 1907-October 13, 1937) and Theodore Franklin (December 1, 1910-September 19, 1965). There are no descendants of these offspring. One child, Howard Lee was born June 23, 1923, and died February 23, 1924.

Pauline Elizabeth Bell of Belle Vista, Arkansas, the youngest child of James Albert and Lula Mae, was born November 11, 1912, in Fayetteville. On July 3, 1934, she married Elgin Delma (E. D.) Bell, born September 8, 1910, in Chidester, Arkansas.

Their children are Bobbie Lynn Cockrell of Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, born January 20, 1936, in Morrilton, Arkansas, and Don Ed Bell, born September 20, 1941, in Little Rock.

Bobbie Lynn Bell married Phillip Andrew Cockrell on July 11, 1958, in Durham, North Carolina. Their children are Shelby Lee, born February 18, 1959, in Shelby, North Carolina; Phillip Andrew, born October 8, 1960, in Charlotte, North Carolina; Barton Douglas, born October 24, 1963, in Charlotte, North Carolina; Gene Samuel, born February 4, 1970, at Pensacola, Florida; and Christopher Thomas, born October 13, 1972, in Tampa, Florida.

Shelby Lee Cockrell and Bruce Dale Reams were married June 23, 1979, in Tampa, Florida. Their son, Jamie Robert was born October 29, 1982, in Tampa, Florida.

From the offspring of Pauline Elizabeth and Elgin Delma (E. D.) Bell, the writer is confident that the James Albert and Lula Mae Gray traits of ingenuity, industry and creativity are being passed on to generation after generation.

Martha E. Ray Gray

It was "warm weather" in 1906 when the W. R. Gray family made their two-day trek from Marble, Madison County, to their new home in south Springdale. During that dusty journey, Ola Gray Philpott, who was then seven, recalls that the older children ran along side the wagon to break the monotony of the trip. She and her older sisters, Grace Gray Lankford and Amyl Gray Jones, also helped to entertain their young brother, Doyle and baby sister, Pearl Gray Sherman Jones. Two brothers, Lelland and Elbridge (Jack), ages thirteen and six helped with bedding down the livestock and gathering firewood when the family spent the night in Spring Valley.

The first home in Springdale was located near the railroad on an extension of South Holcomb Street that now houses industrial buildings. By 1914, the family had moved to Carter Street where Margaret Ella Ray Gray lived until her death in 1956.

A favorite fascination and pastime for the young boys in the neighborhood was to put pennies on the railroad track. As soon as the train passed, the boys would run to the track to put their ears to it to hear the train's vibrations and to retrieve their flattened pennies. Doyle Gray, who was around nine years old, got to the track too quickly and was seriously injured when the stair projection of the caboose hit him in the head. He smilingly admits today that the game was not nearly so fascinating after that incident.

As was typical of many early households, elderly grandparents lived in the Gray home. When the grandfather, William Jasper Gray died, his body was taken by wagon back to Madison County for burial. The children also remember their grandmother, Margaret Hudson Ray, being with them to share stories and hug away their hurts of the day before she died in 1916. Mrs. Ray and two of her five children are buried in Bluff Cemetery.

Gardening and keeping the cows and chickens tended were chores for all the family. Sundays were special days for Margaret Ella Gray and all those in her household who were scrubbed and polished to attend services at the First Baptist Church on Holcomb Street.

During the late 1920s and early 1930s when money was almost non-existent, Mary Gray Miller and Margaret Gray Whitington, both talented musicians, were told by their teacher, Mrs. Henry Wood, that they could continue their piano study free of charge if they would promise to practice two hours per day. Both the students and the teacher lived up to their promise. The Gray girls were later part of an orchestra in which Mary's husband, Ralph Miller, played the violin.

Coincidentally, it was music which brought Raymond Lankford, Margaret Ella Gray's grandson, to find his future wife. A Saturday rehearsal for the Sunday church service solo took place in the Miller home when Raymond was on leave from Portsmouth Naval Hospital, recovering from a war injury suffered on Iwo Jima in February, 1945. The marriage of Raymond Lankford and Martha Reder followed in June, 1946.

Except for a three year period when the family lived in Seneca, Missouri, the Lankfords have lived in Springdale. Their four children, Karen Lankford Smith, Kathryn Lankford Birkhead, Frances Lankford Sullivan and Michael Lankford are graduates of Springdale High School. Each of the children has two sons. They are: Allen Smith, Chris Smith, Kelly Sullivan, Josh Sullivan, Bryan Lankford, Jonathan Lankford, Nathan Birkhead and Colin Birkhead.

Bertha referred to the hill behind their house as "Ole Sandy". The view of the countryside included Fly Creek and the valleys below toward Morrow. The Greens lived the rest of their lives on this beautiful farm. A. E. died May 27, 1981 and Bertha died September 27, 1983. They were buried in the Cox Cemetery beside her father and mother.

Maston S. Gregg

Some of the account of the Gregg family is taken from the writings of Malcolm H. Hudson. In 1750 John Gregg left Cumberland County, Pennsylvania; in 1758 he died in Augusta County, Virginia. Of his eight children, the seventh, Robert, was living near Staunt, Virginia in 1788, then moved to Greene County, Tennessee where he died in 1796. He had ten children. The second was Samuel b. 1757, d. sometime after 1835 in Washington County, Arkansas, the oldest person buried in Fayetteville's Gehring's Chapel Cemetery, where his grave is marked by local chapters of Daughters of the American Revolution. During the American Revolution, Samuel served as a private in Cuchanan's Company, Vance's Virginia Regiment, in the campaign against the Cherokees in 1774. In his application for pension transfer he signed his name Samuel Gragg. He was in Lawrence County, Alabama about 1830 with his wife, Jane and four sons: John, Henry, Ellis and Samuel Jr., all born in Tennessee. He left Alabama in 1834, went to Missouri, then moved to Washington County, Arkansas in the fall of 1835. His son Henry (1792-1877) came to Washington County about the same time. He is buried in Evergreen Cemetery. He married Mary Murrell in 1815 and had six children: (1.) Maston S. b. 1816 Alabama (2.) Albert (1817-1852) (3.) Caroline b. 1819 (4.) Delaney (1822-1897) m. Wm. H. Cardwell. (5.) Lafayette (1825-1891), a prominent Fayetteville attorney, legislator and banker. (6.) Martha Jane b. 1828.

Maston S. Gregg b. 29 March 1816, married 14 March 1837 Cynthia Ann Loyd b. 1821 in Georgia, d. August 1866. Children: (1.) Paralee b. 30 December 1837 (2.) William S. b. 1840, d. young. (3.) Benson W. (1842-1908) m. Frances Dailey. (4.) A daughter d. at birth in 1844. (5.) Wesley F. (1845-1865) (6.) Sultana Jane (1848-1933) (7.) John Henry b. 9 November 1851, m. Martha Carolyn Quillin. (8.) Mary Sophronia (1854-1877) m. William Boyd, Jr. (9.) Thomas L. b. 1857, died in his teens. (10.) Sarah Helen (1860-1915) m. Wm O. Searcey.

Maston was a Lt. Colonel in the Arkansas Militia before the outbreak of the Civil War, at which time he was devoting full time to his sizable apple orchards on White River. He considered himself too old to take active part in the conflict. In 1864, when John Henry was only 12, and his sister Sultana Jane was 16, a band of bushwhackers, who thought Maston had money on his farm, came and tried to rob him. Not being able to make him tell them where the money was hidden, they hanged him from one of his well tended apple trees. Sultana Jane begged them to spare her father. Finally, when they were convinced he was dead, they agreed to leave if she would give each of them a kiss. She quickly said yes and oddly, as soon as each one had kissed her, they mounted and rode off. She quickly lifted the weight of her father's limp body from the rope that held him, as John Henry came racing down the hillside from where he had witnessed the grusome ordeal. Together, they managed to cut him down, and with the help of their mother, dragged him into the house, hoping to revive him. Finally he began to stir and regained consciousness. The frantic family was relieved to have the father back from the brink of death. Frightened the bandits might return, they hid the injured man in the attic under a folding table, where he remained until nightfall.

The next day, Maston moved his family nearer to Fayetteville where the presence of occupying troops made them safer from outlaws. Housing was scarce, so he rented a room in a log house, later known as the Hale house, located northeast of Fayetteville on the Old Missouri Road. Maston then joined the army and remained there for safety until the end of the war, as many other older men were forced to do.

After the war, he moved his family back to the farm. In August 1866, his wife Cynthia died. About a year later he married Martha, who later died in childbirth. About a week after Martha died, Maston also died. The children who were still at home cared for the baby, Hiram, who they called "Little Bob". John Henry, who was only 16 at the time, had to assume the role of head of the family — a big responsibility for one so young and in such hard times. Little Bob became ill and died when he was about seven years old. The family just about worshipped him, and were heartbroken at his death. The children undoubtedly received help from nearby relatives.

My father worked on building projects. Lots were given in a drawing and my mother drew two lots. We built a house on one. My brother William Garnet was born there on October 10th, 1910. We moved to Ringland, Oklahoma, to run a boarding house for my father's mother and stepfather, William Dulaney.

My mother and father were living there, also my sister Geneva and her husband, Claude Flatt and their son Carl Ellis. My sister Geneva was a beautician, and we bought a beauty salon. And I also became a beautician.

In 1940 I opened a beauty shop in Chouteau, Oklahoma and my husband Eldon worked in the Powder Plant near Pryor, Oklahoma. My daughter Frances Taldo, buried her husband Raymond there in 1976. Mary Madeline Guest Estell, February 27th, 1979, buried near her sister. Alton Dewie, son of Mary Madeline, everyone knew him as Pete Jones ran the Texaco Service Station here in Springdale for several years, died in the Springdale Memorial Hospital, April 21st, 1986.

My son, Gaylord Eugene, and son Steve Carter lives on the old home place. Gaylord has four boys and two girls. He has eight grandchildren. Frances has two boys and two girls, she has nine grandchildren. I have a total of seventeen at this date, most of them living in Arkansas.

We are retired now and enjoying the beauty and pleasure of living here with our children and grandchildren around us.

For the last 25 years we have been active in the Grange work, holding State, County and Local Offices. I served as the State Women's Activities for 18 years, was on the National Grange D. W. A. Committee for 4 years.

We are happy here, and we plan this to be our final resting place.

Samuel Houston Guinn

Sam Guinn was Washington County Sheriff and Fayetteville Chief of Police for a number of years, near the turn of the century. He was born December 25, 1857 in Breathitt County, Kentucky one of twelve children of John and Sarah "Sally" Guinn, both born in 1822, in Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. The others, all born in Kentucky were: Nancy, Allen, Margaret, Elizabeth, James, Martha, Efferella, William M., Mary, W. B. and Nancy. Three of these Guinn children married Osburns. (One of those was William M. Guinn who married Rachel Osburn, and was a teacher, a Mason, had a store and was Postmaster at Dump, now Health, Arkansas. He was also Postmaster at Winslow. After he died, his wife Rachel ran a boarding house at Winslow for summer vacationers. Their son Albert Guinn moved to Casa Grande, Arizona in 1938, where he became Mayor, and had in his possession the Guinn family Bible.

c. 1940 Four generations of Guinns: Left to right, Sam, Lem, Roy & Jack

Sam's grandparents were William Guinn, born 1800, North Carolina, and died 1861, and Nancy, born 1804, Virginia, whose other children besides John were: Sally Deaton, Drury Guinn (died in Confederate Army), Elizabeth Richardson, James S. Guinn (born 1831 in Lee County, Virginia in his biography in 1889 Goodspeed History of northwest Arkansas), and Charlotte Mahon. After the Civil War, Nancy moved to Arkansas with her sons, from Wolfe County, Kentucky, and in 1870 was living in Shepherd Township of Crawford County, Arkansas. When Nancy died, she was buried at the Temple Hill Cemetery, in the Sunset Community east of Winslow. Sam's great grandparents are believed to be James and Jane (Hicklin) Guinn, married January 13, 1792 in Augusta County, Virginia, and thought to be Irish.

In 1873, in Sam Guinn's sixteenth year, he began a long career in law enforcement, when he set out across the Boston Mountains in pursuit of a horse thief. When he caught up with the thief, Sam shot the sock off his rifle, captured him, and brought him back to answer for his crime. In Washington County on December 30, 1882, Sam married a red haired girl Serilda Nichols, also from Kentucky. They had five children, but a son Sewell died in his youth of blood poisoning. Lemiul Guinn married Ida Nail and had Roy W., Louise Neoller, Ruby Curtis, and James Guinn. Bertha married Elmer Jones and had Mildred Lichlyter. Rachel married Jim Cook and had Virginia Tucker, Harris and Jimmy Cook. John married Grace Lehn and had Joye Cooper, Gladys Harp, Violet (died young), Howard Guinn, Helen Watson, Omer Guinn, C. L. Guinn, and Thelma Culwell. Many of these Guinns moved to the Goshen area about 1925.

S. H. Guinn was a charter member of the Masonic Lodge at Winslow, where he moved in 1888 and farmed. He moved to Fayetteville in 1914, and served as Chief Deputy under three sheriffs, then was elected Sheriff for two terms, from 1923-27. He was also Fayetteville's Chief of Police for several years. Serilda died in 1935. At the time of Sam's death in 1942, he was survived by four children, fifteen grandchildren, and ten great grandchildren. Many of this family sleep now in the quiet woodlands of Park Cemetery, among the mountains east of Winslow. This seems fitting for pioneers from mountainous eastern Kentucky.

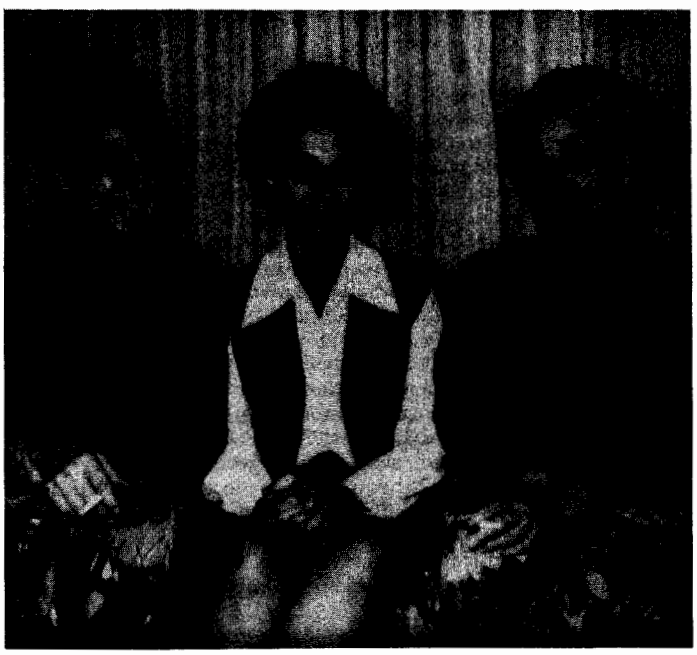
Brian Andrew Hall

Dad, Robert Joseph Hall, was born in West Frankfort, Illinois, 10/12/30. Mom, Kay Boske Hall, was born in Sandoval, Illinois 12/16/33, and my brothers, Robert Victor (Vic), and Jeffrey Michael (Jeff) Hall, were born in Detroit, Michigan, 11/10/55, 2/25/58 and I was born, not in Detroit, in Wayne County, Michigan 5/10/68.



Joanna Johnson Boske, Virginia Johnson Self, Evelyn Johnson Russell, 1969.

Both grandparents (on my mom's side) were born in Illinois, Grandma, Johanna Johnson Boske, was born 3/13/1913. Grandpa, Victor Boske was born 7/7/1913.

I learned to play pool on Grandpa's slate pool table, and before I could see over the top, I'd beg to "rap up" the balls (rack up).

My Grandpa Boske was like an older kid with wrinkles who loved to shoot pool, play cribbage and bowl. He could make or repair just about anything. I still keep a wooden box he made to keep and catalog my collection of baseball cards. He died March 20, 1984 and is buried at Bluff Cemetery.

My Grandma Boske (at 75) still bowls and plays the organ for the First Church of Christ Scientist, even though she's Presbyterian, and she still bowls on a league.

R. Victor Hall, 1985.

Kay B. Hall, July 1988, at work in the Washington County History Book office.

Dad's father, Bert Hall, Sr. was born in 1897 and died in 1952, a few days after Mom and Dad were married. Dad's mom, Berneice, died when he was a baby, and the only mother he ever knew was Audra Vaughn Hall Croft who married his father before Dad was three. Her family came from Kentucky, Missouri and Arkansas.

While our immediate family lived in Westland, Michigan, I have memories of living in a big old house on Ann Arbor Trail across from the nature and wildlife center. Before bedtime, every night, Mom took me to say good night to all the animals caged outdoors.

No one in my family could believe that I really remembered this, except from hearing about it, but when I could even describe the green paint that peeled around the wooden base of the animal cages, and walking down a little hill, they knew I really remembered.

When I was 26 months, we moved from Michigan to Ohio, but Vic, my oldest brother, was 14 and never became a Buckeye fan. He'll live and die a Michigan fan. However, he gladly embraced Arkansas in 1978, when our family made the move from Ohio, while Jeff, at 20, chose not to come to Arkansas but to move with friends to Chicago, Illinois.

Vivid childhood memories include a trip to Florida with Mom and Jeff and the Robert Kovach family in a camper bus. I was five, and we traveled Florida from St. Augustine to St. Petersberg and back. It was two weeks of Disney World, Circus World, Sea World, Cypress Gardens, Busch Gardens, Cape Canaveral and other tourist attractions. I mainly remember Disney World and the ocean. This is what many families did in 1973.

When our nation celebrated its bi-centennial (1775-1776 - 1975-1976), Mom made sure I'd remember it, and we did a lot of sight-seeing and history studying, including a tour of the Freedom Train that traveled and stopped at cities across the nation. It was a museum on wheels. At the Ohio school I attended, we celebrated the bi-centennial by dressing as the Colonials did. We dipped candles, carded wool, churned butter, wrote on lap-slates and sat in the corner with dunce caps.

Mom and Dad took me to Washington, D. C., Mt. Vernon and Monticello at that time, too. Later, Mom and I went to Philadelphia to see the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall, staying two nights at Valley Forge to visit those sites where more Revolutionary soldiers died of dysentery and pneumonia than they did of war wounds. Maybe the Football Hall of Fame and Air Force Museum were more interesting to me back then, but I'm glad I visited other historical sites, too.

Each Christmas, Mom went a little overboard with gifts and holiday themes—even to the bathroom decorator toilet tissue, which at $5 a roll was strictly for company use. But Christmases at our house were memorable. Christmas Eve services were always attended before we opened gifts at Grandma's. We almost always ate Christmas dinner at home with Mom fixing turkey and all the trimmings.

I was ten when we moved to Springdale, Arkansas. In addition to my grandparents living here, three great-aunts have lived in Springdale, too. Mary Ellen Johnson Rei, (now in Michigan) and has one daughter, Pam Rei Ward, (who has a son Jason and a daughter Kristy) Aunt Mary Ellen has a son, Mark, too.

Great-aunt Virginia Johnson Self lived in Springdale first. She and Uncle Russ owned the 5 and 10 variety store on Emma Street. She had two sons, Russell Self, who still lives here with his wife, Mary Eleanor Umbaugh, and Mark Self used to be a radio broadcaster at KBRS and lives here with his wife Clara and daughter.

After the Selfs moved here, my great-aunt Evelyn Johnson Russell moved here. Her husband, Dub, (William George, a retired Army Col.) worked at the post office. Their daughter, Georgeanne Russell, married Joe McElveene, and had sons, Christopher and Matthew. William (Will), Evelyn's son, died at the age of 31 (in 1984). It was after both the Selfs and the Boskes moved here that the C. W. Reis moved here.

My grandfather Boske's parents came to America from Lithuania, the Russian border, and came through Ellis Island and received the name, Boske, either because they couldn't understand the original or spell it. (I can't either). The same thing happened with the Johnson side of the family. At Ellis Island, Gorannson became Johnson (who married Millicent Williamson).

Grandpa Boske's brother, Joe, was shot when his grocery store on the East side of Detroit, was robbed. He is buried at Arlington National Cemetery. That happened before I was born. Grandpa's sister, Lula was born in Scotland, en route to America. Her daughter, Betty Schoonover Paulsen, had three daughters, Linda, Cathy and Anne Marie (who all have children) and Aunt Lula's son, Robert, was named after his Grandpa Boske. We think he's in California.

Grandpa's sister, Diana Boske Pedrick, married T. R. (Jack) Pedrick from Canada. They didn't have children but she was a favorite, doting aunt. (All this came from my mom, an only child who received much of the doting.)

My dad's side of the family goes back many generations in this country, with Halls fighting on both sides during the Civil War. There is a little Indian blood from both sides of my family, Mom's and Dad's.

My dad had a brother, Bert, and a sister Margaret Pauline. Bert died in an airplane crash when I was five. He and his wife, Betty, had six children, Robert, Linda Hall Burdge, Brenda Hall Bedinger (Linda and Brenda are twins), Richard, Bert, Jr., and Scott. They live in Illinois, Texas and Indiana. All are married and have children.

Daddy's sister, Pauline Hall Faro, born 8/23/1928, lives in Johnston City, Illinois and has one daughter, Karen Faro Meracle (who has a son, Jeffrey and a daughter, Stephanie). Pauline's son, Gary, died in 1984 at the age of 24.

I graduated in 1986 from Springdale High School with honors and now attend the University of Arkansas on scholarship. I've completed my second year.

I'm glad we moved to Arkansas. My mom refers to our move as "returning to the scene of the crime." You see, she and Dad were married in Piggott, Arkansas way back in 1952 during the Korean Conflict. Dad only had a few days leave from the Army.

At that time Arkansas didn't have a waiting period of three days to get married. My dad was on leave and wouldn't have another one for a while, so Grandma and Grandpa drove them from Marion, Illinois to Piggott to get married. I guess they'd be called "accessories to the crime."

By the time they arrived in Piggott and found a judge to marry them, it was after midnight, so Judge T. R. French married them dressed in robe and bare feet. After the ceremony they had to go to the courthouse to record it, and even though it was well after midnight, French put it on the books for the previous day, February 13. That's why they celebrate their anniversary on Valentine's Day, while their marriage certificate says February 13.

July 3, 1987 was a milestone for our family of five. Jeff was the first of us three Hall boys to marry. He married a Crystal Lake, Illinois girl, Carol Steinbach. I ushered at the wedding and some of the pictures accompanying this story will be from the event.

Some day, I hope my grandchildren or great-grandchildren read this book and understand that I am more than a faded photograph. I haven't lived very long, but I have hopes and dreams and ambitions that probably won't differ too much from their own.

A. C. Hamilton

In 1896, Andrew Claude Hamilton, en route from Galveston to St. Louis, stopped off at Fayetteville and was so intrigued with potential of the area, that he soon returned with his family. A native of County Downs, Ireland, he brought with him a knowledge of merchandising gained in New York, Memphis and Texas that enabled "A. C. Hamilton & Co." to market millions of pounds of dried apples throughout the U. S. under the "Ulster Brand". Family interests also included a cold storage, a large orchard and lands throughout the county.

W. J. Hamilton's photo appeared on the cover of "Progressive Farmer" in the fall of 1929.

For over thirty years, his wife Mary Kathleen (Downs) presided graciously over their antebellum home in the manner of the Old South. She was born on the Downs Plantation near Waco, Texas and later lived in town at the home of her Uncle William A. Fort. The Fort home has been preserved by a historical foundation as a museum.

Five children grew up at "Locust Shade" which is now the location of the sanctuary of the United Central Methodist Church.

The oldest, Mary Fort, married Roswell S. Lander, an engineer, and later manufacturer and civic leader in Little Rock, where their children, Drew H. Lander and Mrs. John R. Fordyce (Mary Downs) still reside.

Eileen Kathleen married Dr. Neil Carothers, the first Rhodes Scholar from Arkansas. The family lived at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania where he became Dean of the School of Business Administration at Lehigh University. Their sons, Neil III and Hamilton live in Washington, D. C. and the youngest, Stuart, in Princeton, New Jersey.

William J. Hamilton, who married Gladys Hamilton of Reydell, remained in Fayetteville most of his life and is buried at Evergreen Cemetery with his parents. He managed the family business from the time of his father's death in 1913, until it was closed in 1928. Earlier, W. J. attended Davidson College and even spent a time selling for the Company. At one time, his visits were preceded by a postcard billing him as the "world's youngest salesman." His unceasing efforts to promote Fayetteville earned him the title "Bill the Booster" and an editorial in the Northwest Arkansas Times at the time of his death in 1938, said "he was to Fayetteville what W. S. Gregson was to the University". A founder of the Ozark Playgrounds Association, he was its first Executive Director. At the time of his death, he was District Manager of the National Re-employment Service in Little Rock. Mrs. Hamilton is still living there, as are their children, William J., Jr. and Mrs. Kathleen Mohrmann.

Scott D. Hamilton, who attended University of Arkansas and later graduated from Northwestern after serving in France as a Captain in World War I, married Sue McDonnell of Little Rock. He was the manager of Chambers of Commerce in Fayetteville, Hot Springs, Fort Smith and Little Rock. Scott Hamilton Drive, a major thoroughfare in Little Rock is recognition of his contributions in that field. Daughters, Mrs. Walter Riddick (Joanne) and Mrs. Rea Graves (Susan) live in Little Rock. Scott, Jr. is a resident of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Andrew C. Hamilton, Jr., a civil engineer from the University of Arkansas, was the contractor who first paved the square at Fayetteville. He married Hallie De Vanney of Fayetteville and later moved to Dallas, where he formulated and patented a cement used in oil well drilling. It was marketed the world over under the name "Calseal". Their daughter, Mrs. Nelson Hughes (Katherine) died in Dallas.

Other facts on the family's history can be found in the Centennial History of Arkansas"" and in One Hundred Years of Fayetteville 1828-1928"", written by W. S. Campbell, who for many years, was secretary of the A. C. Hamilton Company.

Ronald F. "Ron" Hamilton

George Washington Camden was born September 7, 1867 in Sullivan County, Missouri. He married Molly Shiflett August 9, 1885 in Smith Chapel Methodist Church, Fayette, Howard County, Missouri. They were the parents of four sons, all born in Howard County, Missouri. Little is known about George's relatives, but it is believed earlier generations moved from Ireland, Scotland and England. Molly's parents, William A. Shiflett and Margaret Ann Powell, were married on "Top of Blue Ridge" in Greene County, Virginia. In 1856, they moved to Howard County, Missouri, where eleven children were born. Through the History Of Howard and Cooper Counties, Missouri, (1883) it was learned three Shiflett brothers came to America with Marquis de LaFayette to fight in the American Revolution.

Molly and George Camden Fred and Eleous Roy and William Circa 1894

George and Molly Camden, with their young sons, joined relatives and friends in a wagon train for California in 1896. In Nevada, Missouri, misfortune caused George to seek employment in order to purchase a new team of horses. George's employer owned land in Lonoke, Arkansas and asked George to go there as manager. The family moved to Lonoke, where three of the four sons, William, Fred and Roy attended school, raised rice and married. Eleous was accidentally killed at age 18.

Fred Camden, born in Howard County, Missouri in 1890, married Zelma F. Tilbury in Lonoke in 1919. She was born in Dover, Oklahoma in 1899. Her ancestors had come from England, to Canada, to central Oklahoma, to Arkansas. Their daughter, Helen Louise, was born in Lonoke, in 1920. In 1922, the family moved to Dudley, Stoddard County, Missouri where Fred continued to raise rice. Their son, Fred, Jr., was born in 1924. In 1928, Fred, Sr. moved his family to Wilmot, Ashley County, Arkansas, where he and wife Zelma's brothers were early pioneers of rice farming. While living in Wilmot, two daughters, Evelyn Fay and Marilyn Fern, were born. After some years, Fred, Sr. moved his family back to Lonoke, where he bought the old Hicks farm. He continued to raise rice and Zelma raised turkeys and white leghorn chickens. Ever mindful of her family's health, she cooked freshly harvested wheat grain for cereal and young shelled soybeans long before studies proved these to be "health foods". George and Molly Camden, their four sons, wives Zelma and Mary, are all buried in the Lonoke Cemetery, Lonoke, Arkansas.

Helen Camden married Fletcher Mayo Hamilton of Liberty County, Texas in 1944, at Pine Bluff, Arkansas. He was in the Army Air Corps stationed at Stuttgart, Arkansas, and Helen was teaching at Sherrill, Arkansas. The Hamilton ancestors had originated in Scotland, England, Chesapeake Bay region and, later, Thomasville, Alabama. After World War II, Helen and Fletcher lived in Wilmot, Arkansas and when first child, Ronald Fletcher Hamilton was due, drove to the nearest hospital, Bastrop, Louisiana (1946). The family moved to Lonoke, Arkansas, where daughter, Deborah Jean, was born in 1949. In the early 1950s, they moved to Bastrop, Louisiana and, in 1964, they moved to Houston, Harris County, Texas, where Fletcher worked in the oilfields and was a licensed barber. Fletcher died January 18, 1977 and is buried in the Houston National Cemetery. Helen, a retired school teacher, lives on a farm near Liberty, Liberty County, Texas.

Ronald Fletcher Hamilton married Reta Lietz Keef of Topeka, Shawnee County, Kansas and Houston, Texas, in 1974 at Seabrook, Galveston County, Texas. In less than a year, they moved to Conroe, Montgomery County, Texas, where they resided until December, 1980. Ron had been elected to the City Council that year. Due to a job promotion, Ron and Reta moved to Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, England and resided there in 1981 and 1982. Ron was Chief Executive of Turmeric, Ltd., designers and fabricators of oil derricks and platforms in the North Sea. Upon their return to Conroe, Texas in 1983, Ron continued to travel in the oil business to Western and Eastern Europe, Africa, China, Canada and all southeast Asia. With the decline of the oil industry in 1986, Ron and Reta were forced to move from Texas, leaving behind two sons, Randall Ray Keef, (his wife, Martha Orelia Chapa Keef) and grandchild, David Alexander Keef of Galveston, Texas and Richard Alan Keef (his wife, Linda Louise Gardner Keef) and granddaughter, Catherine Colleen Keef of Conroe, Texas. In November, 1986, Ron and Reta moved to Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas where Ron took a position with Shiloh Tank in Springdale, Arkansas.

This Camden-Hamilton history spans four generations, over one hundred years, of Arkansans.

Richard W. Hammett

Richard W. Hammett was my great grandfather. He was born in 1829 in Marion County, Mississippi. When he was small, his mother, Sara Head Hammett died and his sister, Mary (some 20 years older than he) took responsibility of him. She had an art scholarship to attend the college at Batesville, Arkansas, so she took him with her. Richard grew up in Batesville and attended the college of Theology there, becoming an ordained minister in the Methodist Church. Mary supported them through the years with her art work.

Richard married Elizabeth Dobson of Dardanelle in 1860 at a time when the Civil War loomed large on the country side. They established a home near Ft. Smith. Richard had to decide whether to join his friends and neighbors and fight in the War or to minister to those left behind. He wrote of riding along a road on his horse and seeing a man hanging from a tree, where neighbors had hanged him for sympathizing with the Federal cause. Those were very trying times. Prayerfully, he decided that those left behind needed someone to guide them through it.

He was, what was called a "Circuit Rider", a preacher in the Methodist Church. He rode a horse over the terrain of the Boston Mountains north to minister to the churches along the way. He was one of the first ministers of what is now the Central Methodist Church in Fayetteville. A cornerstone, with his name on it, is among others in the courtyard of the church. When he was scheduled to be in town, a room was reserved for him at the famous " Stone House" off the square in downtown Fayetteville. On one of his circuits he held a meeting at the Bentonville Church. It must have been cold that day and they had a good fire in the big pot bellied stove. Someone thought it would be funny to throw a shot gun shell in the stove near where the preacher stood. It burst his ear-drums and he was hard of hearing after that. From then on he used an "ear trumpet" to hear. He was known to hold "Camp Meetings" under arbors in the summertime near Stilwell and Sallisaw.

He had three children, Ellis Head, James Warner (my grandfather) and Elizabeth Pearl. My Grandfather, James, was born in 1869 in Greenwood. They must have moved to Ft. Smith after that because Great Grandfather had a Church there. He was also a Worshipful Master in the Belle Grove Masonic Lodge there. When my Grandfather was 17 he left home to seek his fortune.

He went over into Oklahoma Territory where he met and married my Grandmother, Mary Mills. They made their home in Muskogee where my father, Richard Leonidas was born in 1895. Grandfather had learned the sheet metal trade and made a comfortable living for his family. However, he decided that Claremore, Oklahoma provided a better opportunity for them so they moved there.

They sent my father, Richard, to the University of Arkansas where he was an engineering student. While in Fayetteville he met my mother, Reuby Landron, while attending the First Baptist Church at College Avenue and Dickson. When he first saw her he told his friend "that is the girl I'm going to marry". And he did. They were married over fifty years.

It seems strange that he met her in the Baptist Church, when his Grandfather had ministered in the Methodist Church only a block away. My mother, Reuby, and her sister, Belle, had attended the Baptist Church all their lives. In fact, they were the first ones baptized in the new baptistry of the First Baptist Church after it was built.

Melinda Gardner Hankins

During the Civil War, 16 year old Melinda Gardner lived at Pinnacle Durham post office area. She and her sister rode horses from Pinnacle to Fayetteville. There they stayed in the Stone House, where they rented a sleeping room. The sound of battle fire made the girl crowd under the bed. A cannon shell went into the wall.

The girls had come to town for supplies for the family. The next morning they started back to the family, near Elkins. They met up with bushwhackers.

The bushwhackers made the girls get off their horses. They gave them sick mules to ride and took off their shoes.

Melinda cried all the way home because they had taken her new handmade shoes and she would now have none to wear.

Their brother was in the War. While home they hid him under the floor. While a bushwhacker was searching for him, a candle sitting on a bushel basket turned upside down, set the bushwhacker's hair on fire. Melinda sicked the dog onto the men—they shot the beautiful dog.

This story of Melinda Gardner Hankins was told by her great great granddaughter, Wanda Leming McCormack.

Melinda Gardner married Pleasant Hankins. Their daughter, Mary Ida married George Wesley Keener. Their daughter, Jessie Lorraine married John Lloyd Leming. Their daughter, Wanda married Charles W. McCormack. They live in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

David Harer

David Harer was one of three Harer (Harrer-Harrah) brothers, sons of John Harer and Sarah Wadkins. The parents are thought to have been immigrants from Scotland into North Carolina about 1750. The family lived in Virginia, Georgia, Kentucky and Lawrence County, Arkansas before moving, about 1828, to Washington County, Arkansas. The three brothers, Enos, Evan and David are listed on the Arkansas Sheriff's census of Washington County in 1829 and on the United States Census for 1830. The move to Washington County was for the purpose of securing homestead land for farming.

While still in Georgia, David married Mary (Polly) McClendon, sister of Obedience, who married Evan Harer. They had four children, Evan H., born 1822, Sarah and Mary, twins, born 1824 (Mary drowned at the age of two), and William, born 1828. These children were left orphans in 1834 when David and Mary died of "southern fever". Their uncle, Evan Harer and his wife, Obedience, took the children into their home to rear them along with their own large family of twelve children. Evan H. married Eliza Jane Tulk on February 3, 1850; Sarah married Stephen Mather Lewis on July 15, 1849; and William married Martha Tulk on April 7, 1850. Eliza Jane and Martha were sisters. These three children of David Harer and their families joined the wagon train leaving in 1852 on the trek to Oregon. On the journey, when cholera broke out among the travelers, Eliza Jane became seriously ill, but did survive. Her infant son died.

Evan H. Harer enlisted at Shreveport, Louisiana in 1846 to fight in the war with Mexico. After returning to his home at West Fork, he married and joined the family group leaving for the west. After the long, hard journey and Eliza Jane's lingering illness, the wagon train reached the Columbia River in western Oregon. There they took passage on a boat going down the river to the Sandy River which flows into the Columbia. Journeying up the Sandy led the travelers to the Willamette Valley, their destination, arriving there October 12, 1852. Following a period of searching, Evan H. located a farm on the hills west of Portland, the site being known as Council Crest. While living in their hilltop home, four children were born—Mary Eliza, Elen Harriett, Emma and William Sherman. Mary and Elen both died shortly after marriage; Emma became a teacher, moving to Hepner, in central Oregon, in hopes the drier climate would benefit her asthma. There, she rode horseback to the next county to visit her cousins, the Wilson Harer family. William Sherman attended Willamette University and the Colorado School of Mines, becoming a civil and mining engineer.

After helping to fight a forest fire, Evan H. Harer became ill with meningitis and died August 7, 1870. Eliza Jane care for her family, some of her grandchildren, and the farm, and lived to be ninety-four years of age before dying on May 11, 1926.

When arriving in Oregon, William settled near Portland, but quarreled with other family members about the Civil War question; he then changed his name to Willis Harrow and moved to Modoc County, California.

Sarah Harer Lewis and family took up land in Douglas County, Oregon, where Mr. Lewis died in 1855 leaving his family of three children. Sarah continued living in Douglas County and married again in 1856 to John Letsom and together they had a family of eight children. Sarah's first son, Elijah David Lewis grew to manhood and moved into the wilderness area of Idaho along the Salmon River and became a government hunter and trapper; he also served in the army during some of the Indian wars. His later years were devoted to hunting cougar and bear, and he became well known for his skill in locating and killing such predators. At ninety-two years, he was persuaded to leave the solitude of his mountain cabin to go to Boise for medical treatment; there he lived only a short time, dying in December, 1937. To honor David Lewis, a mountain peak along the Salmon River was named for the famous old Indian fighter and trapper.

Enos Harer

In the early days of the United States, the Harer family had lived as pioneers in North Carolina, Virginia, and Georgia. Enos was the son of John Harer (Harrer, Harrah) and Sarah Wadkins and was born about 1790. As a young man he was in Georgia and married Jane Craig. Enos, with his brothers, moved to Kentucky, then to Lawrence County, Arkansas, and about 1828 to the newly opened lands of Washington County. To this new farm home at West Fork, Enos brought his wife and the first seven of his ten children. These children were Jemima Jane (md. Ewing P. Craig), David (md. Sarah Standefer), Elva (md. Sylvester Robinson), James C. (md. Jane Standefer), Lucinda (md. James T. Crawford), John W. (md. Sarah Houghmaster), Sarah and Samuel. Two other sisters, Mary and Hester (Hetty) married brothers, David Elbert and Jackson Robinson. The mother of this family, Jane Craig Harer, died 21 January 1847 and is buried in the West Fork Cemetery; a sandstone marker identifies her grave. Later, Enos married a widow, Huldah Dale.

County records show that Enos Harer was appointed foreman of the roads in the district where he lived; it was the foreman's duty to set a time for local residents to come with their teams to level and repair their section of the roads.

Enos's son David has a business in West Fork of a blacksmith shop and a general store. He kept an account book which he retained throughout his life and which was given by the wife of his great grandson (Bryon Elmo Reser) to the library at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington. It lists his customers by name and the merchandise and services supplied.

When western Oregon lands were opened for settlement, Enos Harer planned to make the long journey there so that his married children could take advantage of the free land available. All but Mary and Hester accompanied the family, those two girls being the only ones of Enos's family to remain in Washington County. Before leaving, Enos sold "in consideration of natural love and affection and $1.00" the SE 1/4 of SE 1/4 Section 32 in T 15N R 30W and SW 1/4 of SE 1/4 of Section 32 T 15 N of R 30W 80 acres to Jackson Robinson. The family prepared to join a covered wagon train leaving from Fort Smith, Arkansas, in the spring of 1852. They were to travel by the Evans Trail and the Old Oregon Trail. This was a disasterous trip for the Enos Harer family. On the journey cholera broke out among travelers and caused the death of many of the Harer family, including the father Enos, and his children Jemina Jane Craig and husband, James C Harer and wife and child, and John W. Harer and wife and child. Enos death occurred at Umatilla, Oregon, in October 1852, only a short distance from their destination.

Enos' son, David, settled in the Willamette Valley near Eugene, Oregon, and assumed responsibility for his minor sister and brother. Sarah and Samuel, as well as the three surviving Craig children. He opened a blacksmith shop and made a specialty of cow bells. After ten years in Oregon, David located in Walla Walla County of Washington Territory, and prospered there. He farmed, operated a cattle business, established a butcher shop, and founded the Peacock Mill at Milton, Oregon, one of the first flour mills of the region. David died 17 June 1883. His wife, Sarah Standefer, died in January 1907. David Harer's children were Jemima Elizabeth Jane (md. Andrew J. Kirkland), Alfred Franklin (md. Minnie Louise Beach), Laurinda Adeline (md. David Turner), John Hanks (md. Eva Waterman), and two who died as infants.

Evan Harer

Evan Harer (Harrer-Harrah) was the son of John Harer and Sarah Wadkins and was born about 1790, probably in Virginia. He married Obedience McClendon, daughter of Jackson McClendon, who was born in Georgia in 1793. In 1818 when Evan and bride's first child was born, they were living in Kentucky. By 1822 they were in Arkansas. The family lived first in eastern Arkansas, Lawrence County; Then moved to Washington County where Evan was listed on the West Fork 1829 Sheriff's census of that county.

Evan secured a farm on which the family lived and worked—with the help of the ten sons and two daughters, all of whom lived to maturity. James Joseph, the oldest, was married in 1841 to Katherine Tulk; he became a circuit rider for the Methodist Church. Wilson married Nancy Taylor in 1846 and was also a Methodist preacher. David Asbury married Josephine Bean in 1850. Enos E. married Martha Taylor on 10 January 1847; Evan Harry married Charlotte Howard; Norris married Hattie Howard. The other children married after moving west. Sarah married Robert McClure on 27 April 1859; Obedience married Richard Pierce Hazelton 29 September 1859; John Redman married Margaret Josephine Price; Henderson was unmarried; William Jasper married Clara Cumins Baker; and Nathaniel Green married Trissa Grigsby 28 March 1869.

Evan and Obedience resettled in California in 1857, traveling via the southern route. Their sons, David and Norris had previously moved there and urged their parents to make the change. When the journey was made, all the younger children accompanied their parents, but some of the married sons waited and followed later. They settled in Ventura County, California and farmed there until after Evan's death in 1873. After her husband's death, Obedience went to northern California to the town of Goose Lake in Modoc County, where two sons, Jasper and Redman, were living and working in the sawmill. When moving to Goose Lake, Obedience took with her the two young sons of her daughter Sarah McClure. These boys had lived with their grandparents since the death of their mother, Sarah, in 1863. After Obedience passed away in Goose Lake in 1876, the two grandchildren, Evan James and Green, were taken by their father, Robert McClure, to live with him near Spokane in Washington Territory.

Obedience Harer Hazelton, daughter of Evan Harer and Obedience McClendon.

Evan Harer, age 46 years, son of David Harer and Mary McClendon.

After the death of Evan and Obedience, Arizona became the gathering place for the family. David Asbury Harer had searched for a suitable location for a hog ranch and found it in 1875 in Greenback Valley in the Tonto Basin country of central Arizona. He kept the peace with the Indians by being kind and fair with them and by letting them think he was a snake charmer—he had removed the fangs from a rattlesnake. David drove his hogs to market at Globe, a distance of 55 miles. The valley had remained in the hands of David's descendants and is now run as a cattle ranch by the Conway family, the founder's great grandchildren.

Wilson established his home in Grant County, Oregon, and remained there. Henderson lived nearby. Obedience Harer Hazelton was a widow in 1878 and moved with her family to the vicinity of Phoenix, Arizona. She had eight children and cared for the four young, motherless children of her brother Nathaniel Green.

Near Greenback Valley is a mountain named Methodist Mountain thought to be named for the Harer family because they were staunchly Methodist and because James Joseph and Nathaniel Green were Methodist preachers.

At some time during their travels, Evan and Obedience were in Oregon for I have this note from my Aunt Emma Harer: "Father's sister, Sarah, lived near Medford, Oregon. Their Uncle Evan Harer went through Medford with his large family, traveling by covered wagon train. Speaking of them, Sarah said, 'They looked like the Children of Israel going by.'"

I am the second grand niece of Evan Harer.

Dr. George Vernon Harris

George Vernon Harris was born March 3, 1895, in Vicksburg, Mississippi. His grandfather, James King, born in County Cork, Ireland July 12, 1801, had come to New Orleans as a young man and moved up the Mississippi River to Vicksburg. There he acquired property and opened a shoe store. Young Vernon, as he was called, attended the Brother's School, St. Aloysius Academy. When he was sixteen he went to Jackson to enroll in Millsaps College. Here he obtained a B. A. degree in 1915. That fall he enrolled in St. Luke's School of Theology of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tennessee. He graduated in 1918. He was ordained a priest in the Episcopal Church in 1920, serving churches in Georgia and then Arizona. While in Flagstaff, he married Helen Willits June 4, 1924. He accepted a call to the church in Lubbock, Texas, at the time of the opening of Texas Tech. In 1926 he went to Calvert, Texas, to Church of the Epiphany.

During his stay in Calvert, his eyesight began to fail. In 1930, June 24th, a son, James Willits was born. When he could no longer see to read, he memorized the service and continued to serve in Calvert. Not wanting to be a burden on a congregation, he resigned this charge and moved to Austin where Helen obtained her doctorate in History, and the family once more moved, this time to Denton, Texas, where Helen was a professor at T. S. C. W., now TWU.

In 1938 Helen died and Vernon took his son and moved back to Austin. That summer he met Carolyn Rainey who was visiting in Texas. In February of 1939, en route to the Seeing Eye to obtain his first guide dog, he stopped in Fayetteville for the first time to visit Carolyn. The State of Texas had offered to rehabilitate him as an Osteopath and he chose the Osteopathic College at Kirksville, Missouri. On June 26, 1939, he and Carolyn were married and spent three and a half years in Kirksville. August 12, 1941, George Vernon, Jr. was born. Due to accelerated sessions, graduation came in March 1943. After a year in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, George, as he was now called, decided to return to Fayetteville. He rented an office over Lewis Brothers Hardware, purchased a home, and on January 3, 1945, Frances Carolyn was born. He continued to practice in this locaton, sharing a waiting room with Dr. Moore, the dentist, until Lewis Brothers expanded and took over the upstairs for furniture.

In May 1948, he moved to the Washington Hotel, into offices vacated by the Radio Station KUOA. On June 4, 1948, Samuel King was born. Over the years, the office was moved to the lower level of the Washington Hotel, and then to South Block Street, just off the square, as the need arose. On November 12, 1951, Susan Catherine was born.

In 1962 he purchased the property at 542 Gunter and moved his office to this location, in the same block as his home. Over the years he had four Seeing Eye dogs and was a familiar figure on the streets of Fayetteville. One by one, the children married. Frances to George R. Philip, III. They had five children — George R. Philip, IV, born 1965, Michael Richard, born 1966, Martin Rainey, born 1969, Carolyn Rebecca, born in 1972 and Samuel Rainey Thomas, born in 1976. George Harris, Jr. to Judy Wilson, with a daughter, Donna Carolyn, born in 1970. Samuel King to Catherine Faulkner — two sons Kevin King, born in 1982 and Kelly Rainey, born 1984. Susan Catherine married William Gary Burson. They have three sons: William Harris, born 1975, Gerald Thomas, born 1977 and Matthew Neill, born 1981.

Dr. Harris maintained an active practice until 1979 when he retired at the age of eighty-five. He became less active and died on June 5, 1984, at the age of eighty-nine. His ashes are interred in the Columbarium at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Fayetteville.

Norman Byron Harris

Norman Byron Harris is a retired merchant and postal worker. He was born October 17, 1900, at Wesley, to Samuel Alexander S. and Martha Ellen Harris. In 1901 this family moved to a farm near Durham. Norman attended school there and at Elkins, also Arkansas Tech in Russellville. He is a fourth generation resident of Washington County. His great grandparents, William M. (born 1799) and Basheba Fagen Harris, former South Carolinians, came here in 1853 from Tennessee. They had lived in McMinn County for twenty five years. They came through Missouri by wagon train, with several other Tennessee families. Of William's thirteen children, the following also moved to Washington County: John B., Wm. A. M. N., Stanton Augustus, Wilbur Fisk, Hanna Harris, Minerva (Mrs. John C.) Carrigan, and Nancy (Mrs. Alexander A.) Brown. They settled on a farm with a spring, at the foot of Mt. Salem Hill in the White River Township, near Sulphur City. After the death of Hanna and a grandchild, William M. Harris deeded one quarter acre of land to the Mt. Salem Episcopal Methodist Church (July 4, 1857) for a burying ground. This cemetery association is active and many of the descendents are buried there.

In 1860 Basheba Harris died and William married Sarah Rutherford Dodd. He died in 1876.

The oldest child, John B. Harris was born March 1820 in South Carolina. He married Sarah Gregg in 1841, In McMinn County, Tennessese. She was the daughter of Joel and Eunice Gregg, former North Carolinians.

John and Sarah (Sally) had seven children. They were: Julius N., Julia (Mrs. Sam) Williams, Samuel A. S., John W., William A., Thomas C., and Benjamin Franklin. John and his sons had nicknames. His was "Pickle" for it was said that he was "cool as a cucumber". This nickname was passed to Samuel and his children. John B. and Sam were members of the McGuire Town Masonic Lodge. Julius served with the Confederate Infantry in Boone's Company K, 34th Arkansas, as did his brother-in-law, Sam Williams. John W. (Buck) worked for the railroad and was killed in an accident in Missouri. William A. (Duke) became a doctor and moved to Willard, Missouri. Thomas C. (Barlo) was the family humorist and story teller. Ben F. (Millet) married Narcissa Williams. He and Sam were farmers and operated an apple drying business in 1910. Mother Sarah died in 1857, and John B. married Sarah A. Harrel in 1858. They had a son, Edwin G. Ed was a horse trader who didn't trust a bank with his money, therefore was robbed of his bankroll on several occasions.

In 1869, Samuel Harris took for his wife, Miss Susan Cavener. They had Sarah Ann (Mrs. Edwin G.) Boone, born 1870 at Durham; Thomas Benjamin, 1874, who married Bonnie Vesta Wells; Margret Allie (Mrs. John A.) Reed born 1876; Cora Belle (Mrs. Charlie) Collins, born 1879; Julia Fannie (Mrs. Ezra)

Carrigan, born 1881, and Susie Ardella (Mrs. W. O.) Beddingfield, born 1885. Mother Susan died in 1888. When widower Sam saw that he needed a companion and a helpmate with his children, he consulted his minister who promised to inquire of eligible ladies of his circuit. Miss Martha Davis of Wesley said that she was willing to meet this widower. On December 23, 1890, Sam A. Harris married Martha, daughter of B. B. Davis. Two children were born to this union, Esther and Norman. Esther was born November 1893 at Durham. At age seventeen she started teaching school, and taught for forty-eight years in Washington County. Since retirement she has made her home in Elkins.

Norman Byron Harris married Lila, daughter of Presley Bryan and Caldona Thompson White, on May 20, 1922. They and three daughters, June, Lorine and Donna (deceased). In 1928 Norman was appointed postmaster at Durham. He and Lila also went into the retail grocery business. He resigned as postmaster in 1942, after purchasing the 150 acre Duncan farm, near Combs Chapel. This acreage was later sold to the city of Fayetteville for the Industrial Park. In 1948, Norman and Lila opened a retail grocery business in Cave Springs, Benton County. They were active in the community and he was a charter member of the Cave Springs Lions Club. They retired to Fayetteville in 1969. Two of their six grandchildren, Susan Leslie and Paul Ames, are county residents.

Annette Culbreath, Nolton, Terry and Aven Bull are residents of Oklahoma. Norman and Lila keep their religious faith as members of the Methodist Church.

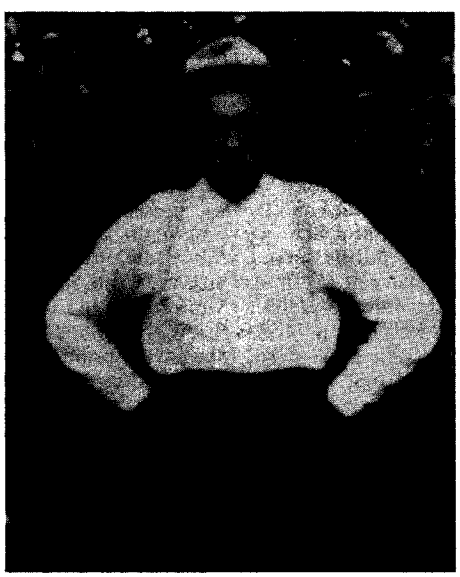
Tom Harris

William Thomas (Tom) Harris, born January 15, 1857 Bedford County, Tennessee. Son of Jasper Crockett and Emily Emaline (Lamb) Harris, grandson of John Taylor Harris, born 1775 in North Carolina. Jasper Crockett Harris, born 1828 in Tennessee, died 1871 in Tennessee, married Emily Emaline Lamb, born 1834 in Tennessee, children: 1. William Thomas (Tom) Harris (Subject); 2. Mary Ann Harris, born 1859 in Tennessee, married Thomas Rich; 3. James H. Harris, born 1860 in Tennessee, never married; 4. Willis H. Harris, born 1862 in Tennessee, married Mattie M. Montgomery; 5. David Crockett Harris, born 1864 in Tennessee, married Ida E. Denson; 6. Joseph Clary Harris, born 1871 in Tennessee, married Myrtle Draper.



William Thomas (Tom) Harris, 1920s

His papa died when he was about 14 years old so Tom had the resposibility of helping his mother with the family. He and his sister Mary were working for Mrs. Lytle of Bedford County, Tennessee in the spring of 1880.

In the fall of 1880 or spring of 1881, Tom Harris, Frank King, John Ryans, T. Graham, Clarkston, Garrett and Overton rode horseback from Bedford County, Tennessee, to Washington County, Arkansas settling near what is now Fayetteville, Arkansas.

In the meantime the family he left in Tennessee migrated to Texas by 1888 and was in Bosque County, Texas in 1900. His mother died in 1904, and buried in Cedar Grove Cemetery in Greenville, Texas.

On September 9, 1885 Spring Valley, Arkansas, Tom married Eliza Jane Johnson, born October 22, 1852 in Washington County, Arkansas, died March 6, 1930. Both are buried in Molly Fields Cemetery, north of Tahlequah, Oklahoma. She is the daughter of Isaac and Susanna (Todd) Johnson. Children are: 1. Emily Harris, born July 17, 1887 Springdale, Arkansas, married A. Shepard and Tom Brewer second. 2. Mary Belle Harris, born 1888 in Springdale, Arkansas, married Will Tye; Daniel Smith and Thorpe. 3. William Mac Harris, born May 14, 1891 in Goshen, Arkansas, married Minnie Belle Davis. 4. Eula Anne Harris, born March 17, 1893, Goshen, Arkansas, married Mack Aven Moore. 5. Thomas (Tom) Graham, step-son (Son of Eliza and James Graham), born September 12, 1875 in Springfield, Missouri.

Tom and Eliza Jane lived on a farm near Goshen, Arkansas on the White River until 1907/08 when they moved to Oklahoma. They traveled by covered wagon taking only the things they could carry. They settled at Lowrey's Prairie and lived out of the wagon until the timber could be cut and hewn out to build a house.

As soon as the house was built, a barn and smoke house had to be built and water to the house. The water was brought to the house by means of a Trotten-Boy. This was done by using rope and pulleys and when the bucket got to the bottom it tripped and filled with water and was drawn back up the rope to the top.

They were farmers, they raised their own vegetable and fruit and furnished their own meat. Each fall after the first freeze, they killed hogs (ones that had been put in a pen and special fed) for meat to last the winter. The neighbors would all join in and help. Nothing was thrown away. The parts that could not be eaten were rendered and the fat was used to make soap. The old black kettle with the fire built under it outside and lye/fat and water were used. This was cooked until a soft texture then put on long board slabs to cool. It was then cut in bars and wrapped stored to use when needed. (Fun part) when we were very small our dad would come in the house to get a jar with a lid (when they were ready to kill the hogs), he made sure we were listening and said "He had to catch the pigs squeal", and until we were older we really believed it. What fun he must have had.

Grandad Tom had lost contact with his family since he left Tennessee, but through a newspaper ad, someone that knew the family in Texas sent word to them that Tom was in Oklahoma. In the spring of 1926 three of his brothers and 2 nephews (David Crockett, Joseph Clary, Will and Davy's 2 sons Ernest Crockett and Dewey Lee, all came to Oklahoma. They had not seen each other for about 45 years. Three years later, March 6, 1929, Tom Harris died.

Laura P. Hart

Born in 1868, Laura Peach Anderson, left a legacy of memories to her family in the form of a diary she kept while traveling from Oelrichs, South Dakota to Bethany, Missouri in 1892. The wagon trip can be traced on a map by her explicit entries.

The diary began Saturday, July 1, 1892 in Oelrichs, South Dakota, where the cover was put on the buckboard at Mr. Weavers. It stopped in Harrison County, Missouri on Monday, August 15, 1892, with this entry, "Will went to Gainesville to attend Teachers Institute. He was brought home sick and died Thursday, August 18, 1892."

"Tuesday, July 12, 1892, Dr. Gillespie came to see us. Pa was on the river fishing. I took his place while he entertained the Dr. My first experience in this line and had such very poor success. We camped near Chadron, made a travel of 16 miles. At noon, some Indians passed by and Pete bought an Indian pony for five dollars. We met others in the afternoon, first I have seen since October last. What a beautiful cemetery at Chadron."

"Monday, July 18, 1892, the mosquitos are eating me up. We started from Merrimen this noon, passed the section house called Eli. Passed through two very deep lakes. They ran into the wagon, but we got through O. K. The mosquitos are very bad so I will go to bed."

They left the railroad at Gody and, traveled across to Crookston, where they saw buck Indians, squaws and papooses. Later they crossed the Niobrasia River on to Arabia, Johnstown, Plum Creek, on to Long Pine, Nebraska. The towns of Bassett, Newport and Stewart were passed by because they went cross-country.

On Sunday, July 31st, Laura saw her first streetcar in Norfolk, Nebraska. It was drawn by two little mules.

January 1918, Laura moved with her husband and four children to Fayetteville, Arkansas where they purchased a house at 510 East Prospect Avenue. For many years in Fayetteville, Laura owned and operated a small variety store at 400 West Dickson Street (where School Street intersects with Dickson Street).

Laura's oldest child, Ralph was an adopted son. Then came Helen, a daughter, and two sons, Randall and Everett. All are deceased now except Everett. Laura had 10 grandchildren.

When she was 74 years old, Laura left Fayetteville to go to Norfolk, Virginia to spend her last 20 years with her son Everett and his wife Nellie. Nellie always treated Laura as if she were her own mother.

At age 80, Laura had her first airplane trip. She flew alone from Norfolk, Virginia to Hollywood, California. There she attended the "Breakfast in Hollywood" show with Tom Brennerman. She was the oldest person there. Along with the usual kiss and a recording of her part in the event, she also received the sterling silver orchid ring which Everett's wife Nellie, now has.

On her 80th birthday, she received over 350 birthday cards from friends in Fayetteville.

Laura was blind the last 8 years of her life. She passed away September 18, 1962 at De Paul Hospital in Norfolk, and is buried in Forest Lawn Cemetery there.

Her last words were, "Nellie, what would I have ever done without you?"

John Reese Harvel (Harvill)

John Reese Harvel, born September, 1860 in Gaylesberg, Illinois, and Mamie May Kane-Harvel born April, 1870 in Paducah, Kentucky, married in October, 1888. They left Paducah, Kentucky in April 1900 on a steamboat bound for Cape Girardeau, Missouri. Later, they moved by train to south central Missouri. In 1912, they moved by covered wagon with their eight children to Fayetteville, Arkansas. John Reese was a salesman. He sold real estate and, at one time, owned land which is now part of the Drake Airport in Fayetteville. He was a distributor for Singer Sewing machines for thirty years. He was well-known for his making and selling cane brooms.

The four eldest daughters, May, Essie, Ruby and Edith were reported to be among the loveliest and most graceful in their community. They and their three younger brothers, Edward, Ted and Charlie were very popular among the younger generation in the communities of Rieff Chapel, Greenland, West Fork, Walnut Grove and Fayetteville. The Harvels were noted for their musical talents, public speaking and ability to memorize poetry. This brief genealogy will pursue the lineage of the eldest daughter, Mary May, who was also the oldest of the fourteen children. She was born 14 March, 1890 in Paducah, Kentucky and was named in honor of her mother, Mamie May Kane-Harvel and her maternal grandmother, Mary Jane Davis-Kane of Paducah, Kentucky. The grandfather was Henry G. Kane, (1820-1888) who was a Confederate Sergeant in the Civil War in Kentucky. Mary May Harvel met and married Alvis Earl Cox in the Rieff Chapel Community. Earl was the youngest son of Lilbern Franklin Cox (1841-1922) and Penelope Elizabeth Marrs, (1853-1944). The Marrs families of Prairie Grove were among the earliest white settlers, about 1815 in Washington County. The Cox familes migrated from east Tennessee to the Rieff Chapel community in the 1840s.

Mary May Harvel and Alvis Earl Cox were married at high noon on her birthday, 14 March, 1917, in her parents home on South School Street in Fayetteville. May designed and sewed her white, lace wedding dress. Earl had just purchased a new black buggy and his father had given him a "span of horses" for a wedding present. The handsome, young, brunette groom of twenty-three years drove away with his beautiful brunette bride.

For two years, May and Earl lived with his parents and farmed in the Rieff Chapel community on the farm homesteaded by Earl's grandfather, Jacob B. Cox, (1793-1870) of Sullivan County, Tennessee. The crops raised were grapes, apples and acres of strawberries. They butchered and cured their own pork and beef, canned fruits and vegetables, made soap, rendered lard for shortening to bake pies, cakes and breads. The ladies sewed the family clothing, sewed quilts, made feather beds and pillows and knitted socks. The two-story log cabin home was demolished in 1970 after serving three or more generations.

May and Earl Cox moved to Tahlequah, Oklahoma in 1920 in a covered wagon. Several trips were required to move household goods, food, cattle and horses from Rieff Chapel, Arkansas. They parented three children; George Franklin -deceased at two years of age and Mamie Elizabeth Cox-Parker who was born in March, 1924. Mamie has one son, James Phillip Parker (1955), who has two daughters, Megan Elise (25 July, 1983) and Kathleen Ann (16 January, 1986). Phillip is married to Susan Elaine Brown-Parker who is a descendant of the Reed ancestors of the 1800s of Washington County.

"Harvel" spelling was used only by descendants of John Reese Harvel. "Harvill" was used by his parents William Smith Harvill (1820-1911) and Mary Ann Bell-Harvill of Illinois and Missouri. Mary Ann was daughter of Samson Bell of Tennessee and at least one-half Indian ancestry. Great-grandparent was Peter Harvill born about 1800 in North Carolina, who moved to Central Illinois, with his wife, Sara Wadkins.

John Reese (1860-1956) and Mamie Kane-Harvel (1870-1951); Earl (1894-1956) and May Harvel-Cox (1890-1953); George Franklin Cox (1920-1922); and three Harvel children peacefully rest in the Ozark foothills of Cherokee County Oklahoma's Tahlequah Cemetery (northeast section). William Smith and Mary Ann Bell Harvill are buried at Arroll, Missouri.

Alvin Hash

Alvin Hash, son of John and Dosha (Sturgill) Hash, was born 18 March 1800 in Green County, Kentucky. Not long after Alvin's death, the family returned to their former home in Ashe County, North Carolina/Grayson County, Virginia. They remained there until about 1815-1820, when they settled in Warren County, Tennessee. About 1822, Alvin married Esther Elizabeth Drake, daughter of Jacob and Esther (Nolan) Drake. She was born in Tennessee 12 October, 1803.

Alvin and Esther joined his parents in moving to Sangamon County, Illinois about 1825. Family tradition says they had inherited some slaves, and being opposed to slavery, wanted to move so they could legally emancipate their slaves.

About 1835 Alvin and Esther moved to Washington County, Arkansas, settling in Richland View township. Esther's family had settled in neighboring Madison County a few years earlier. Alvin built a log house on a hill above a spring. It had a large room downstairs, and an upstairs loft with shutter windows. Their nearest neighbors were more than a quarter-mile southeast. If either family was unfortunate enough to let their fire go out, they borrowed fire from the other. For such emergencies they kept boards strewn along the path. They picked up coals between the boards and started home; when the boards began to burn too much to handle, an exchange was made for two fresh boards along the path.

Like many Washington County families, the Hashes remained loyal to the Union during the Civil War. Several sons and sons-in-law fought for the Union. One son, Ben, was drafted into the Confederate army, but in his old age he remarked that his heart had not been in it.

Alvin was a respected farmer in Washington County, and served as Justice of the Peace. During a typhoid fever epidemic in 1844, both Alvin and his young daughter Viola died on the same night, 18 August 1844. Esther continued to live on the farm until her death 23 August 1878. In 1850, she married Moses Garrett; he died in 1858.

Alvin and Esther had thirteen children. The three oldest daughters married brothers. Salina, born in Warren County, Tennessee 20 October 1823, married Ambrose Clark. She died in Elkins, Arkansas 23 January 1897, and many of her descendants still live in northwest Arkansas. Livonia, born in Warren County, Tennessee 22 January 1825, married Ezra Clark. They moved to Springtown, Texas where she died 22 Janaury 1874. Mary (Polly), born Sangamon County, Illinois 13 January 1827, married Cyrus Clark. She died in Washington County 10 December 1921. Polly and Cyrus managed the Hash farm after Alvin's death, and still have descendants in Washington County.

The oldest son, Fielding Hash, was born in Sangamon County, Illinois 29 December 1828, and married Caroline Counts. They raised their family around Goshen, where Fielding died 16 January 1894. Some descendants still live in Washington County, while another large group came to California around 1900.

Phoebe Hash, born Sangamon County, Illinois 9 December 1830, married Thomas Garrett. They moved to Oregon, and later to Modoc County, California. Phoebe died in Oakland, California 18 January 1905.

Martha Melinda Hash, born Sangamon County, Illinois 5 February 1833, married Leroy Denney. They settled in Madison County, Arkansas where she died 13 January 1917.

Twins Caroline and Emeline were born in Sangamon County, Illinois 20 December 1834, and the next sister Susan in Washington, County 14 February 1836. Emeline and Susan married brothers, William and John Dodson, and set out for California in 1860. After they left, Caroline was lonely for her twin, and hurried after the wagon train to go along. She married Zedikiah Street on the way, in Denver. He was a Madison County resident. The three families settled first near Camptonville, California, then in Modoc County, California. Caroline died in Cedarville, California 22 March 1907; Emeline in Selma, California 5 July 1924; and Susan probably in Camptonville about 1863.

Alvin Calaway Hash, born in Washington County 26 December 1828, married Susan Denton. After his wife's early death, he and his children moved to Reno, Nevada, where he died 8 June 1904.

Viola Hash, born 4 December 1840, died of typhoid fever 18 August 1844.

Benjamin Hash, born 20 July 1842, never married. He lived a fascinating life, living at various times in Texas, California, and Idaho, and died in Visalia, California 5 December 1936, at age 94.

The youngest daughter, Esther Elizabeth Hash, was born about 1844. She married John Pool, and died in the 1880s.

George William Hastings

Thomas Clark Hastings, the other son of George William and Mary Ann Thomas Hastings, is the other member of this family known to this writer to have family descendants in Washington County at this time.

Thomas Clark Hastings married Laura Elizabeth Cowgur in Washington County, Arkansas August 29, 1880.

Laura was the daughter of Alec and Matilda Cowgur. Laura was born February 7, 1862 in Galacia, Illinois. The Cowgurs were on their way to Texas to join other family members there. Laura told me that she could remember riding in the back of a wagon swinging her feet in the swirls of dust the wagon kicked up and her little dog following along behind. Alec Cowgur became sick on the route and died. He is buried in the Bethel Cemetery, Benton County, Arkansas. Matilda buried him there, turned the wagon around and with her seven children, came back to Fayetteville to the Wagon Yard, inquired about a piece of land from a Mr. Roberts from the Round Mountain-Baldwin area, which she bought and settled down to raise her family. This phase of the history has yet to be proven. We do know that the place that Laura and Thomas Hastings raised their family on was divided by a "lane" next to Randal Robert's parents place.

Laura Elizabeth Cowgur and Thomas Clark Hastings had nine children. Their first child, a son, was born and died July 2, 1881. Mary Lou Hastings (called Lula by those that knew her) was born December 1882, married Enos H. Eads September 8, 1903. He was an architect in Oklahoma. They had no children. He died in 1930 and is buried in Oklahoma. She died in 1976 and is buried in Evergreen Cemetery in Fayetteville.

Etta Gertude Hastings, known as Gert, born February 10, 1884 married John Slagle October 11, 1906. They had five children. Last known address was Colorado. She died January 19, 1930 on her way to Fayetteville by car to see her mother. She died somewhere between Tulsa, Oklahoma and Fayetteville. She is buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville.

Jewell Bell Hastings, born July 24, 1887 married Morris Lewis August 27, 1915. They had no children. She died February 2, 1917.

Flora Dee Hastings born February 7, 1889, married Benjamin Price of Sulfur City, Washington County, Arkansas in May 1906. They had one child, Frank. Flora died November 30, 1925 in California and is buried there. Ben Price died in Washington County is the 1950s and is buried here.

George Charles Hastings was born December 3, 1892 and married Rena Ruenson in May 1917. He was a civil engineer. They had no children. He died January 11, 1918 and is buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville.

Roxie Mae Hastings, born November 15, 1896, married John M. Campbell, a 1/16 Choctaw, who was Superintendent of Schools in various locations in Arkansas. They had one child, Frantz. John died in 1946 and Roxie died in 1976 and both are buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville. Sterman Polar Hastings born March 27, 1900 died during the flu epidemic in Washington County September 8, 1919.

Lillian Thomas Hastings, known as Tommy and/or Boots, born December 7, 1901. She was married to Ilo S. Meek May 17, 1941. Ilo had a daughter, Dorothea, whom she raised. She had no children. She died December 1, 1985 and is buried in Fairview Cemetery, St. Joseph, Missouri.

As you can see, there is much to be done but the more things change the more they stay the same. I thank you, Betty Rice Willis, for being my friend at Jefferson School in the 1940s, I appreciate your entrusting me with this work that has meant so much to you. I hope I've written a fitting tribute to you and your husband.

Robert James Yell Hastings

Time speeds on and waits for no one. The genealogical sketch that follows is by no means complete but with the Washington County History Book gearing up for publication I wanted this family to be remembered. I also wanted to dedicate it to Betty Willis who has done most of the work so far. Betty is acutely ill and unable to complete it at this time. She is one of the most beautiful and courageous ladies I have had the good fortune to know.

The Hastings family arrived in Washington County in the vicinity of Baldwin Round Mountain area shortly after George William Hastings was murdered in 1868 about 8 miles west of Decatur, Benton County, Arkansas. His widow, Mary Ann Thomas Hastings married William Blankenship and moved the family to Washington County.

This family can be traced to Robert de Hastings, Sussex County, England on or before the Battle of Hastings in 1066. The first descendant in this country was Thomas and Susanna Hastings in Watertown, Massachusetts in 1634. Susanna died and he married Margaret Cheney in 1650. Descendants of theirs, William and Delilah Hastings moved from Orange County, North Carolina to Benton County, Arkansas where both are buried in Bethel Cemetery between Decatur and Gravette, Arkansas. They died a year apart, he: August 25, 1883 and she; September 20, 1884.

Their older son (before mentioned) George William Hastings was murdered in 1868 (believed to have been done by Carpetbaggers). They had other children: Eliza Jane, the twins, Margaret and Letvy, William Archibald Yell, Lucy and Robert James Yell. William first married Mary A. Turk, and second Louisa Stover Williams. Lucy married a Younger.

Descendants of George William and Mary Ann Thomas Hastings are still represented in Washington County, Arkansas today: those of Robert James Yell Hastings and Thomas Clark Hastings.

Robert James Yell Hastings, born in 1861 in Benton County, Arkansas moved with the family to Washington County in 1868. He married Melissa C. Southerland in Fayetteville, Arkansas May 8, 1881. Robert and Melissa had nine children.

Norah Bell Hastings born January 24, 1881, married Sol Atkerson, died February 6, 1937 at Sequoyah County, Oklahoma. George William Hastings, called Willie, born July 30, 1883, Washington County, died October 2, 1883. Buried in Washington County, Arkansas. Bertha Margaret Hastings born January 27, 1885, Washington County, married Tim Stone, Washington County. She died in California 1956. Cora Elizabeth Hastings born September 15, 1886, Washington County, died 1887 in Washington County, Arkansas.

Oscar Hugh Hastings born October 20, 1889, Washington County, Arkansas, married Maggie Stone. He died March 3, 1952 in Edmond, Oklahoma. Robert and Melissa Hastings moved to Redlands, Indian Territory, Oklahoma in 1890.

Ida Pearl Hastings was born April 23, 1892 in Redlands. She married John Williams in Okemah, Oklahoma August 23, 1909. She died January 20, 1938 and is buried in Henryetta, Oklahoma.

Jessie Thomas and Sessie Beatrice Hastings, twins, were born July 4, 1895 in Redlands, Indian Territory.

Jessie Thomas Hastings married Mata Coker and Sessie married Virgil Harris in 1914, then Gilbert Willis. Sessie died November 2, 1956 in California.

Susie May Lillina Hastings was born December 25, 1901. She married Newton J. Campbell July 25, 1920.

Sessie Hastings and and Gilbert Willis's son, Donald LeRoy Willis moved back to Washington County with his wife the former Betty Rice of Fayetteville, in 1976.

Walter Joseph Haxton

William Bennett Haxton was born on May 12, 1824 in Butler County, Ohio, but was reared in Indiana. About 1870, he shipped his woolen mill by rail from Indiana to Pierce City, Missouri and hauled it from there over land by oxen cart to Springdale, Arkansas. He furnished all the woolen fabric for the public institutions of the Cherokee Nation and also did a large local wholesale business.

Squire Newton Haxton was the second of twelve children born to William Bennett and Margaret Foote Haxton. He was born on March 4, 1848. On November 13, 1875, Squire Newton married Almeda Walker. Elizabeth Puckett Hayes

My grandmother Hayes was Elizabeth Mahala Puckett, daughter of Charles R. Puckett and his wife Eliza Lane. Both of her parents were born in Wilson County, Tennessee: he in 1805 and she in 1807. They were married in Wilson County on June 24, 1828.

According to the 1850 Census, children of Eliza and Charles were: Elizabeth Mahala, born 1833, Sarah born in 1840, Charles born in 1842, Martha born in 1844, Winfield born in 1847 and Almedy born in 1850.

Apparently the family of Charles and Eliza lived for many years in Wilson County, Tennessee since their births are listed as having occurred there, as well as their marriages and the births of their children.

It seems that Charles R. Puckett was the son of Charles S. Puckett and his wife Elizabeth. Their children were: Ben F., Martha A., Samuel W., Mary J., Sarah P., Nathaniel, William A., Caswell, Mahala and Charles R.

Grandmother Puckett's great grandfather was Robert Puckett, born in 1720 in Virginia and his wife Elizabeth Robert was born in Charlotte County, Virginia and Elizabeth was born in Campbell County, Virginia.

Robert Puckett's will, dated September 1, 1795 and proved January 6, 1800 in the Parish of Cornwall, Campbell County, Virginia, names besides his wife Elizabeth, the following children: Clayborne, Patty Lewis, Nathaniel, Ishorn, Fleming, Charles, Shippy, Allen, Thomas, Francis, Sarah Potter (and her children. . .)

Pucketts had lived in Virginia since early seventeenth century. The name has been spelled variously as Pucket, Puckett, or Pickett.

Robert Puckett apparently was descended from John Puckett who seems to have been the first Puckett in Virginia, judging from how often the same given names are used through later generations.

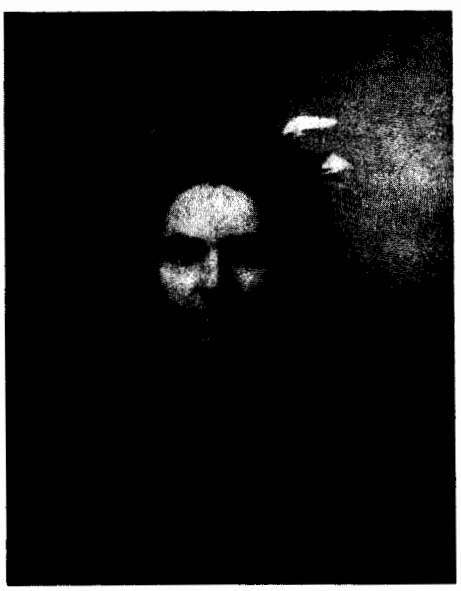
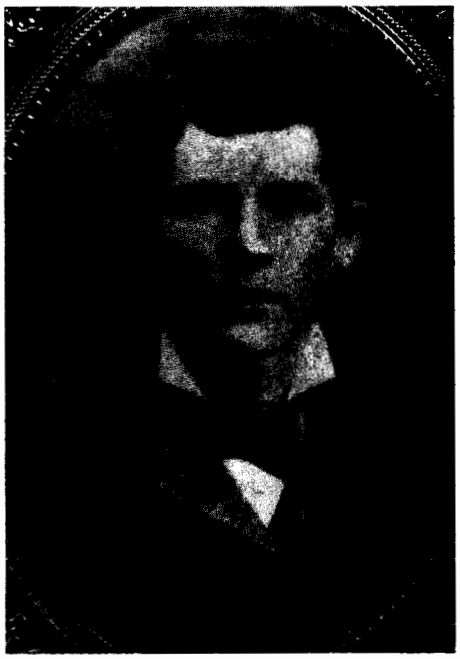
George Winfield (Felix) Hayes

I, Lina Elizabeth Anna Hayes Watson, am the daughter of George Winfield and Martha Elizabeth Clark Hayes. My father was known all of his life as G. W. (Felix) Hayes. His parents wished to call him Winfield after his mother's brother, but his small sister could not pronounce that name.



Martha Elizabeth Clark Hayes, about 1910.



George Winfield Hayes about 27 years old, 1894.

My parents were quietly married May 26, 1912 at Johnson, Arkansas (at that time a small town northwest of Fayetteville), by Reverend G. P. Hanks. That was in horse and buggy days, several years before automobiles were the most common means of travel. Jokes were sometimes played on newlyweds then as now. Some close friends of my father reversed the wheels on his buggy, changing the back to the front and vice versa. Even though such a change would certainly destroy their riding comfort, neither of my parents was aware that anything was different until after the wedding and their return to their house, where my grandmother Hayes and several friends awaited them.

George Winfield (Felix) and Martha Elizabeth Clark Hayes were parents of two children—a daughter first, then a son, both born in Fayetteville.

Lina Elizabeth Anna was born May 15, 1913. She married Edmond Penn Watson on August 23, 1935. They were the parents of two daughters: Janet Lina, born May 19, 1942 and Cherry Elizabeth, born January 22, 1948 and died April 10, 1952. Edmond Penn Watson was born January 1, 1908 and died September 27, 1972. He was the son of E. P. Watson, Sr. and Martha Helen Thompson Watson. He owned and operated the Watson Mortuary in Fayetteville for many years until his untimely death.

Janet Lina Watson married Richard Seay Muse on August 25, 1963 and moved to Hot Springs where he practices law as a member of the Lane, Muse, Arman and Pullen Law Firm. He was born in Hot Springs, August 29, 1936, the son of Turl and Henrietta Seay Muse. Their two children are Shannon Gaye, born June 12, 1967 and Timothy Penn, born August 29, 1972.

Clark Winfield Hayes, son of George Winfield and Martha Elizabeth Clark Hayes, was born January 21, 1915. He married Clara Belle Lee, September 2, 1939 in Washington, D. C. She was born April 6, 1919 at Nyota, Alabama, the daughter of Thomas Felix and Elizabeth Strickland Lee.

Their children are two daughters who live near their mother in Birmingham, Alabama: Sandra Lee, was born in El Paso, Texas April 10, 1942 and married Thomas Milton Berry. Their daughter is Melissa Anne, born May 19, 1972. Linda Elizabeth Hayes was born July 4, 1944 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. She married Carey McNair. Their daughter, Tonya, was born April 10, 1962 in Birmingham.

Clark Winfield Hayes entered military service in 1940 as a member of the National Guard in Washington, D. C. Captain Hayes was killed in Japan, April 28, 1946 during World War II, at the age of 31 years.

My father was almost six feet tall, a good-looking man with black wavy hair, clear blue eyes and a fair skin. He was kind and understanding—a man who made a good school teacher in young manhood in several country schools northwest of Fayetteville.

He attended the University of Arkansas Preparatory Department classes for one year but was unable to attend the University classes. The death of his father left him the breadwinner to provide for his mother and younger siblings. Later he spent twenty-five years or so in various offices at Washington County Court House including several terms as County Assessor from 1920 - 1930.

George Winfield Hayes was the son of George Washington Hayes and Elizabeth Mahala Puckett Hayes. (Various members of the family used or omitted the "e" in Hayes as they chose to do). George Washington was born June 29, 1829 and Elizabeth Mahala was born October 6, 1833. Both were born in Tennessee: he in Rutherford County and she in Wilson County where they were married in the 1850s.

They lived in middle Tennessee until sometime in the 1850s when they must have started by wagon train on their way to Arkansas with their two small children. Apparently, several close relatives had preceded or accompanied them to northwest Arkansas as well as to other parts of this state.

My grandfather Hays was a thirty-one year old farmer and teacher (primarily) of moderate means, and his wife, Elizabeth Mahala, was twenty-six years old. Their first son, Charles Washington, was six years old and their first little daughter was only four in June of 1860. Charles Washington was named "Charles" for his maternal grandfather and "Washington" after his own father.

George Washington and his family had arrived, according to the 1860 census, and were living in the village of Clifty at that time. They had left their home and traveled, doubtless, for many months to make a new home in northwest Arkansas. No doubt they had found it necessary to make many stops along the way. We do not know what route they followed nor what guided them to their destination. If our records are accurate, three of his brothers also made that long trek from Tennessee to Benton County, Arkansas in the period 1850 through 1869, and another brother had turned southwest into Washington County and settled in Cane Hill Township.

By 1870, the family had moved to near Bentonville, and two more children had been born. George Winfield had been born January 14, 1867 while the family still lived at War Eagle, where his father was a Justice of the Peace at that time. (It was here that his father, George Washington Hays drew a deed for Sylvanus Blackburn and wife, Catherine, to Samuel Burks dated February 13, 1868). They had lived somewhere between Clifty and War Eagle when Juliette F., was born on July 27, 1861. Elizabeth R. made her appearance May 13, 1864. Later, in 1869, a son, Stonewall Jackson Hays, was born October 25, but died ten days later on November 4.

Their son, Fletcher, was born January 26, 1871: Hugh Sanders Hays was born April 14, 1873; Bennie, born October 14, 1875 - died July 30, 1883; and Atticus Haygood Hays was born October 27, 1878. "Haygood" may indicate kinship with other early arrivals in Arkansas.

George Washington Hays, who was a farmer and Justice of the Peace, at that time listed his belongings at $500 for the census in 1860. Ten years later, his real property was valued at $1,200, and other belongings at $250. They had a housekeeper, too.

Later, the family moved south across Benton County and, eventually, after living for awhile near Goshen, settled northwest of Fayetteville. He died November 27, 1895 at their home, and his wife, Elizabeth Mahala Puckett Hays, died February 21, 1919. Both are buried in Mount Comfort Cemetery near where they lived.

We believe George Washington Hays was the son of John W. and Lydia Sims Hays, who married in Jefferson County, Tennessee on June 7, 1813. Apparently they lived in Tennessee for a few years before moving to Alabama. Records indicate that they lived in Alabama from about 1816 to around 1828.

At least three of their children must have been born during those years in Alabama: William, born about 1817, Thomas T., born about 1825; John N., about 1827, and after their move back to Tennessee: George W. in 1829 and Robert D. in 1832, both in Rutherford County, Tennessee. Their daughter, Martha E., was born in 1834, either there or in Wilson County where Lydia was living by 1840—according to the census of that year. Apparently, John W. had died between 1835 and 1840, after their return to Tennessee from Alabama.

There may have been other sons and daughters of John W. and Lydia Sims Hays about whom we know nothing.

We do know, however, that according to the 1880 census, William, Thomas T., John N., George W. and Robert D. appear to be sons of John W. and Lydia Sims Hays and all were living near each other and near Bentonville, Arkansas. Lydia Sims Hays was also living nearby. The five brothers appear to have left Tennessee and arrived in Arkansas probably as early as 1850 or shortly thereafter.

The first two children of my grandparents: George Washington and Elizabeth Mahala Puckett Hays were born in Tennessee: Charles, born in 1854 and Sarah, born in 1856. Robert, born in Arkansas in 1859 would seem to indicate their arrival in Arkansas in perhaps 1857 or 1858.

If our data are complete (and there is a good chance that they are not), it would seem that the oldest brother, William A. pioneered the way for these Hays brothers to make the long trek to Arkansas, some returning to their home state at least once. I remember that my father (George Washington Hays' son) told me many times that his father took the family back to Tennessee when my father was a small boy. This seems to be borne out by the birth of one of his brothers (Fletcher) in Cumberland, Tennessee in 1871—after the family had lived in Arkansas for a few years, and they returned to finish their lives in Arkansas.

There may well be other sons and daughters of John W. and Lydia Sims Hays for whom we have not yet found records. Most records seem to indicate a greater number of children in almost all families living in that era. Of course, many did not survive childhood.

It seems that many people from Wilson County, Tennessee migrated to Arkansas beginning in the late 1830s and continued to come until well after the end of the Civil War.

Helen Bailey Hayes

My name is Helen Bailey Hayes. I came to Arkansas in 1915 on the orphan train. I was born Carmel, New York in 1910, to Nellie Blanche Brown and (formerly Bailey). My parents were dairy farmers. They did not own the farm, but worked on it and as I remember, it was a beautiful place. We had a lovely two story house. One morning I came downstairs and found my 12 year old sister taking care of my 8 month old baby sister and waiting for my Dad. He had gone for help for my Mother who was ill, but she was already gone. I was 5 years old. All of the kids were half sick, and two days later we all came down with the measles. Our Dad, knowing that he could not take care of all those kids, made arrangements for us to be taken to the orphanage in New York City. And come to get us, they did. We were taken right from the cemetery where our Mother was buried and upon arrival we had all broken out with measles. Dad said he would get us back when he could, but as it turned out he couldn't. He did, however, find out where we were and when he died in 1955, papers were found that showed where each of us were. He had kept track of us all those years.

Helen standing on the right with two brothers and one sister.

My memory of the orphanage is vague, as can be expected of a 5 year old. I do remember that one time they served rice and I, who had never eaten rice, and refused to eat it. For this I was locked in a pantry. It was dark, with no windows and no lights. I cried and I screamed, and begged to be let out and finally, after how long I don't know, someone came and said if I would eat my rice I could come out. And to this day I can't eat rice. It brings back memories of that dark pantry. As I recall, the place was like a large dormitory with row on row of beds, and the dining room had rows and rows of tables.

I do not know how long we stayed there, but it wasn't too long because they were making up the orphan's train and all of us kids, except my 3 year old brother, who was ill, were put aboard and we took off. It was a long trip. At every stop we were taken off the train and lined up for inspection by the people looking us over. We all had to get dressed up. The girls wore white skirts and midi-blouses. The people looked us all over like cattle. Most really only took us for how much work we could put out. I can remember washing clothes on a wash board after everyone else was asleep and getting up to boil clothes before going to school.

Well, finally the train came to Berryville, Arkansas. All of us kids were taken to the orphanage there. My younger sister about a year old was taken by a family who, after several years of marriage, had no children of their own. Then after 4 or 5 years they had three of their own and were ready to send her back. At length, it was decided she could stay on, but not to share in the family resources. Her name is Violet Baines and when last I heard she was in California. My oldest sister was sent back to New York to have eye surgery and she lived with a family in Brewster, New York. She married and had one daughter and while expecting her second, fell down a flight of stairs and was killed. My oldest brother, he was 10 at the time, was taken by a family in Blue Eye, Missouri and eventually to Idaho. He had a nice family. He, after he got older, located all of us kids and kept in touch. His name was George and he was killed around 1952 by a deer. My next brother, who was 8, was taken by a family, who it turned out made moonshine and he was forced to help to sell it. Once he was arrested for selling moonshine and since he was always made to carry a gun, he shot at the judge. My younger brother, at 3 years old had been left in New York when the train left because he was ill was taken by a nice family. He and my oldest sister knew each other and in time, he also wound up in Idaho. In 1923, the oldest brother came to Arkansas to see me and we went to Berryville to pick up our brother and sister there and we had three days together. That was the last time we were all together.

From the orphanage I was taken by a family named Murphy. They kept me only a short time and decided they couldn't afford to keep me, so I was sent back to the orphanage. Next, I was taken by a family named McCurdy. He was a brakeman for the railroad. Their little blonde daughter had recently died and they thought a new child would take her place. But, they finally decided I, being dark, wouldn't do, so, it was back to the home. Then Mr. P. C. Morgan who ran the orphanage here at Savoy came to Berryville and picked me up with 20 other children and brought them to Savoy. The orphanage was a big two story house located on what is now the University of Arkansas Beef Farm. Shortly thereafter, Mrs. Laura Jane Cohea came to the orphanage and picked me. I was then 6 years old. Mrs. Cohea was the widow of Newman Luther and stepmother of Vester Luther. She had recently remarried and was living near Walnut Grove. I lived with her for seven years until her death. She was a dear lady and was very good to me. It was for her I named my only daughter, Jane. When she died in 1923, her will asked that I live there with her stepson, Vester and his wife Anna Luther. I lived with them until I married in 1925. Their boys were all good to me. In particular Roland, George and Otis. I married Mrs. Luther's nephew, Clyde Hayes and we moved to Detroit. Clyde served his apprenticeship on the railroad. It was during the depression and jobs were hard to come by. We finally loaded all we had into a trailer and moved to where Clyde's folks were, Vinita, Oklahoma. This was in 1931. Clyde was out of work for 2-1/2 years. Then we moved back to Detroit where he went to work for Allied Chemical. He contracted cirrhosis of the liver due to his work with chemicals and passed away in 1960. We had one daughter, Jane. She met and married her husband in Detroit. His family had come from Kentucky. His name is Jim Asher. They have one son, Tommy. He is a high school teacher in Dallas, Texas. In 1963, I moved back to Savoy, Arkansas. Here I bought some land and built my home and I love it here. The people are the best in the world and here I hope to live out my life. My daughter and her husband moved back here and reside in Springdale.

One more word of my father and brothers. In 1948 I had a letter from my oldest brother. At that time he was in New York visiting our younger brother, and asked me to come up and bring my daughter. She was 8 years old at the time. He told me if I would that he would take me home. I went and they told me they had located our father and had visited with him. He was grounds keeper for some large institution. We drove out to his job. I got out of the car and went over to him alone to talk. I asked him if he could guess who I was and he said "Oh yes, you are my little girl, Helen". He went on to say that I was the picture of my mother. You see, he was a sandy haired Irishman and my mother was a dark French woman. I was the only dark one of the family. That was my last visit with any of them. Today I do not know if any of them are still living. When our father died, among the papers we found were records that showed our grandfather had started the Bailey Circus, which later was merged into the Barnum and Bailey Circus. I have had a good life, despite the early times. Many people were good to me and many were not. I had a good husband and wonderful daughter and many dear friends. But I am most thankful that we do not have orphan trains today.

James T. Hayes

In July, 1927, James T. Hayes, wife Nora Belle Hayes and their five children left their home in Artesia, New Mexico for Elkins, Arkansas. The children were: Harold, 11 yrs; Evelyn, 9 yrs; Roberta, 7 yrs; Ruth, 3 yrs; Jack, one and one-half yrs. Readied for travel was a Model T Ford with side curtains. My dad had used his inventive ability to cut the front seat of the Ford at the sides. It would then lay down to meet the back seat to make a bed. Daytime this was put back into position and fastened with screendoor hooks. When the weather did not permit sleeping out all seven used this one bed. The Ford was packed with household items clothing and food. It was a long, hot dusty trip. My mother wore stockings over her arms to prevent sunburn. A tin bucket was always handy to add water to a boiling car radiator. We stopped in Erick, Oklahoma for a short, needed visit. I'm sure my parents needed to rest but for we children it was a time of getting acquainted with my dad's brother, John, his wife Jewell and their three children. To welcome us to Arkansas was my mother's brother Jack Tuttle, his wife Ella and their children. By 1934 there were ten children in that family. A very close relationship developed between the children in these two families. A small farm was purchased between Elkins and Sulphur City with a three room house. My Tennessee born father was more prepared for this new way of living than my mother who was born in Indiana. All five of the Hayes children attended the Sulphur City School. All of our community activities involved that schoolhouse. Teachers that I remember were: Beth Ennis, Lula Underhill and Margaret McKinnon Price. I particularly remember the Friday afternoon spelling matches and fear of having to go to the foot of the line. Valentine Day was also special. We made valentines of all descriptions for a week before. Wallpaper samples made the prettiest ones. Very few were ever bought from a store. The children waited anxiously as the teacher drew valentines from the large decorated box. Of course Santa always found his way to the Sulphur City Schoolhouse. He arrived to hand out a bag of goodies to each child. Often this was the only time a child ever saw or ate an orange. The teacher, with the help of the children, would present a program. Most children received their Christmas presents at home. These were depression years and toys were scarce. I remember one Christmas morning when I found a compact of rouge in the toe of my stocking. I had longed for a bit of makeup and was overjoyed with this gift. In this same school house we attended a Community Sunday School. E. W. Price was the superintendent that I remember. Church services were held at Salem. The cemetery is there. Decoration Day was important to those who had loved ones buried there and many others who came to help. There was a dinner on the ground and everyone brought their best. Then a wagon brought a wooden barrel of ice water. Although these were depression years and our mother was ill with a debilitating disease, our family always had the security of love and discipline. With an ill mother, we learned early the responsibility of work and caring for our selves and our home. We had a very patient, loving father, often being both father and mother to us. Our parents are both buried in Fayetteville. We worked as a family unit to grow corn, tomatos and beans for income in the early years. We also had cows to milk and chickens for both eggs and meat. The wild blackberries were canned along with many jars of other foods. A large crock in the cellar held kraut. Another crock held cucumbers for pickles. Hogs were killed, also salted down. It was not unusual for mama to ring the neck of a chicken. It would be dressed and appear on the dinner table in very short time. Our source of water was from a spring beneath a small hill. All water for household purposes was carried from that spring. This included laundry with a rub board and iron pot. When the laundry was finished we scrubbed the floors with the soapy water. Then there was the Saturday nite baths (when necessary). The kids could quickly disappear when mama or dad found the water bucket empty. Summer months we children picked strawberries for a neighbor and worked at the canning factory. Then Evelyn and I would bury our noses in the Sears Roebuck catalogue to see what school clothes we could buy with our money. Then we waited anxiously for the package to arrive, waiting each day for Otto Layman, our trusted mail carrier. Our dad had a beautiful bass voice. He enjoyed singing. Late on summer evenings we would gather on the front porch and sing. Harold would pick his guitar or mandolin. Others would join the singing and playing. We called this a "musical". Always gathered with us was our faithful dog Trixie. She was a special companion to the family. Our parents were very sociable people and enjoyed our friends. Sundays we did not work. Our house was cleaned on Saturday. Food was prepared as nearly as it could be without the benefit of refrigeration. Early on Sunday mornings, the cooking for Sunday dinner was done. The menu was usually fried chicken, vegetables from the garden or canned and a big cobbler. The favorites were blackberry or huckleberry. When those appeared on the table, all thoughts of those chigger bites and blackberry thorns disappeared. Our dad had a domino foursome, for domino playing that lasted for many years. In the summer they played out in the yard or on our front porch. It was cooler there. Rainy days when field work could not be done they usually got together. The women did the usual cooking and visiting.

Harold the oldest, was killed in a private plane crash in 1953. Evelyn O'Quinn, Ruth Webb, Roberta Edwards, live in Tucumcari, New Mexico. the youngest family member resides in Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Although the girls in the family married Texans, we have never forgotten our friends in Arkansas. These remain very dear to us. When the Christmas holidays come, I look forward to hearing from: Frances McKinnon Hancher, H. D. McKinnon, Geneva Price Brashear, Bille Tuttle Sheets and of course other cousins, nieces and a nephew. Most of all I enjoy the beauty of that state and the beauty of its people. Though times were often "hard" as we were growing up, I feel it equipped us with stability and a greater appreciation of the true worth of those things that bring happiness. Love of God, love of family and love of friends. I especially appreciate my brother Jack who remained in Arkansas. It is a delight to go and visit, enjoy his abundant garden and have the time to reminisce.

Harvey Mills Head

My grandfather, Harvey Mills Head, the 8th child of Joseph and Elizabeth W. (Nix) Head was a gentle man. He loved the land that he farmed, the White River that he knew so well, the members of his family, his friends and neighbors with a caring heart.

"Mills and Willie" enjoyed a unique experience during their life together. They had a spring of cold, sweet water that ran through a small cave located just northeast of their home. It was known as Head's Spring, White River, and here they enjoyed keeping their milk, cream and melons cold.

In the year of our Lord, 1854, Harvey Mill's father, Joseph Head with his wife Elizabeth W. (Nix) Head and family moved from Rutherford County, North Carolina to Washington County, Arkansas. The overland trip by ox drawn wagon took them two months and five days. They arrived January 5, 1855, and settled east of present day Springdale at what became known as Head's Ford on White River. The ford was on the main road from Springdale, Arkansas to Huntsville, Arkansas and was known for more than four score years as Head's Ford.

A historical marker was erected in 1965 by the Arkansas Civil War Centennial Commission, by the east 68 Highway Bridge, it reads as follows; "Two White River Crossings, on the evening of October 21, 1862, General F. J. Herron's army camped near Head's Crossing. After supper, they crossed the river, "water three feet deep, clear and cold." On the 22nd, they got within six miles of Huntsville expecting to attack Confederates there in the morning. Learning that the enemy had retreated across the Boston Mountains, Herron ordered a march back to the White River two miles below the first crossing. At 7:00 a. m., October 23, they began crossing near the present bridge. They reached Cross Hollows that night". "Centennial Observance" "1861 1865".

The Head farm was homesteaded March 10, 1843, by John Jones. A Land Grant was issued to him by United States President, John Tyler. It was sold by John and Nancy Jones to George W. Harris, October 1851. It was sold by George W. and Mary C. Harris, 245 acres, to Joseph Head February 21, 1855. Joseph began clearing the land, built a house for his family and set about to build a community. However, it was not until the year 1896 that the schoolhouse was built, just west of the Head Family Cemetery.

The Head Family Cemetery is located about one-half mile southeast of Highway 68 east, approximately three-eighths of a mile west of Beaver Lake. The cemetery is 34 feet square. The school was named Head School but became known as Jaybird, for Jay Wilkerson, the builder.

During the Civil War, in the fall of the year, 1862, husband and father Joseph Head was captured by "bushwhackers" or taken prisoner by the U. S. Troops. He left his home one morning on horseback with a turn of corn to take to the mill and was never seen nor heard of again.

The mother Elizabeth, with her sons, Harvey Mills and Joseph continued to lived on the farm. Harvey Mills and his brother, Joseph were lifetime citizens of Washington County, Arkansas. Elizabeth writes in a letter to her son, Anderson C. Head in Rutherford County, North Carolina, March 20, 1874, "I and the boys have got 25 acres in wheat, it looks as well as I ever saw wheat look. The boys are breaking corn land. Mills and Joe are good boys to stay at home and work. Write to me every chance you have, write to Little Spring, Washington County, the Post Office has been moved. Your affectionate mother."

Harvey Mills Head purchased the farm property in April 1879, living there all of his life. His sons Carl and Everett had the first general store in the Head community in 1916. After the death of his father in 1943, Carl C. Head purchased the farm property from the heirs. A portion of the land is now covered by Beaver Lake. Lots have been platted and many lakeshore residents enjoy the serenity of the lake and the Ozark Hills. In 1988, this is home to the twin daughters of Carl C. and Leila Head.

Harvey Mills Head's father, Joseph, was the son of Phillip and Mary (Tanner) Head, (both natives of Pennsylvania). He was born in Rutherford County, North Carolina, September 30, 1805, and had three sisters and two brother born there also.

Esther Head, born 1799, married Isham Wood, February 7, 1827. Miry Head, born 1803, married Laban Smith, February 1, 1832. Mr. and Mrs. Laban Smith also moved to the Brush Creek area, Washington County, Arkansas. Lavina Head, born 1818 married James Hall. John Head, born 1800 married Mira Grant, April 19, 1828. Isham Head, born 1814, married Sarah McGuire, September 27, 1837.

Joseph Head married Elizabeth W. Nix, January 27, 1832, in Rutherford County, North Carolina. Elizabeth W. was born September 9, 1809, the daughter of John Nix and Connie Wadkins Nix, (married October 18, 1808, in Rutherford County). Elizabeth died September 17, 1882, and is buried in the Head Family Cemetery.

Joseph and Elizabeth (Nix) Head were the parents of nine children; 1. Gilford Heckathorn

The Heckathorn and Heckadron family name are the same. Some cases lack of education and misspelling on tax records were specified by signing a specific mark. The whole family left Switzerland in 1736. They were considered a wealthy family. They had no political or religious reasons to leave their country. They just wanted to come to America. They sailed down the Rhine to the port. They then sailed for America on the Princess Augusta and landed in Philadelphia on March 16, 1737. The British seized all of their personal belongings not made in Britain. (Britain did not allow the colonies to import goods from other nations.) They were allowed to keep their clothing and personal belongings, providing they paid a special tax. Often, after taxes and special levies were paid the families were broke. The records outlining the arrivals and hardships can be found in the Library of Congress card # 83-82813. The Genealogy Society in Salt Lake City, Utah, furnished further references. These records were compiled by Theodore Heckathorn and printed by Gateway Press, 111 Water Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

There were 8 children in our family: Gilford, Claud, Jack, Leo, Bob, Neda, Zelda and Virgil Heckathorn. Gilford lives in Fayetteville with his wife, the former Gussie C. Wisley of Booneville, Arkansas. Claud lives in Miami, Florida. He married Lois Hayes of Fayetteville. Jack (Laman LeRay) is deceased, Fayetteville, Arkansas. He married Nina Carlisle of Farmington, Arkansas. Leo is a general contractor in Fayetteville, Arkansas, where he lives with his wife, the former Carmogine Smith of Kansas. Bob is a contractor in Fort Smith, Arkansas, where he lives with his wife Jenny. Neda (Heckathorn) Moore, lives in Farmington, Arkansas. Her husband is George Moore, lifelong resident of Washington County. Zelda (Heckathorn) Carson lives in Fort Smith, Arkansas with her husband Ray Carson. Virgil Wane Heckathorn lives in Kansas City, Missouri.

I was born in Mt. View, Missouri in 1915. We moved from Charleston, Arkansas to Fayetteville about 1921. The population of Fayetteville was 5,900 I remember. I also remember the tower on Mt. Sequoyah. It was built out of wood, and looked over Fayetteville. It was really a big thing back then. We lived on Sang Street. We called it the old home place. Hosell Street was a gift of land by Mr. Stone and my dad. As kids we helped clear land for the road so the mail would be delivered. The Honey boys, Jasper Woodruff, and the Johnson boys also helped. I wondered why they called it Hosell Street, when the Hosells fought against the road and his boys would not help. The saying goes that at the valley at Sang Street, which was the old Swaggety farm, and by Marania.

As a kid, I picked up hundreds of arrowheads, tomahawk heads and many Indian artifacts, often after a rain on the plowed ground. I heard it was an old Indian camp ground. There once was a large spring on our old home place. It was still running when we moved there. It finally went dry, and you can't even see today where it was. The land belonged to an old bachelor, Sam Brumbel, who served in the Spanish American War. The only time we would see him was about once a year when he would have my dad give him a hair cut. We kids were all scared of him. He died in his house and 2 weeks later someone found him, possibly his kin folks.

Merkman or Walterman bought the land and later made a grant to the University of Arkansas. He had a riding academy and summer camp there, on top of the mountain. Leverett Street ended at present North Street.

Donal was born at the City Hospital. I told him he should be ashamed to tear down the room where he was born. He was a contractor and built a new wing where the old one was.

My dad had a job at a very early age, but he lost it because he told his boss he wanted to vote for whoever he wanted to. He didn't believe in buying votes. Truth was he wasn't going to vote anyway. He worked on the VA Hospital.

We had a little band and played at pie suppers and such. Marvin and Frank Prince were also in the band.

Andrew Hellstern

Andrew Hellstern, born in Hamburg, Germany on 11/29/1834 to Mary and John Hellstern (a cobbler by trade), was always fascinated by the sea. Andrew worked his way on a ship to America, a three month journey, when he was 16. Seriously ill upon arrival, his return trip was delayed, never to be realized. Somewhere in Pennsylvania he was nursed back to health by Mrs. Pickens (and daughter Abby) in her boarding house. In April of 1862 in Auburn, Kansas-where all had moved-Andrew (typical German-Saxon w/fair hair and blue eyes) and Abby Pickens (Pennsylvania Dutch w/black hair and brown eyes) married. Abby was born 6/12/1845 in Pennsylvania and died of typhoid fever on 10/4/1903 near Elm Springs, Arkansas. Andrew and Abby, her parents and two sisters moved to Benton County, Arkansas before 1863 and settled "in the plains west of Bentonville" where their two eldest children were born and died of diphtheria soon thereafter. They had eight children, four sons and four daughters. The family moved to Osage Mills to a farm in 1868 after the birth of Ernest Dexter on 9/6/1867. Andrew died on 1/31/1917 in Elm Springs, Washington County, Arkansas.

Many community and church related activities were held at Thornsberry Campgrounds in a beautiful wooded valley near Wager, Arkansas west of Elm Springs. One of Andrew's grandsons was killed there in a "runaway" by a team of horses and wagon-Willie, eldest child of Orlando Francis Hellstern. Orlando (4/16/1897-10/18/1944) wed Alice Smith (1/29/1877-1970) at Wager, Arkansas and they amassed several hundred acres in the Osage bottoms west of Elm Springs, Arkansas. They had five children. Sons, Jack (Jessie) and Fred had the Hellstern Brothers Feed Store. Archie and wife (Floy Draper) moved to Siloam Springs where subsequently he died. Jack married Glenna Aaron and Fred married Thelma Mustain. All lived in Elm Springs. Daughter Florence married Pattishaw and had one son, Tommy. Ernest Decker, third child of Andrew and Abby, married Mary Katherine Gambill. She was known as "Katie" and was born at Wager to William Gambill and Nancy Jane Purcell. Her father William and his twin brother Joe were the first born of eight children. Ernest worked his farm in Wager, Arkansas where his son Nolon (12/29/1892-9/12/1985) and daughter Idena (8/13/1895-8/25/1985) were born. Ernest bought 22 acres at Elm Springs, Arkansas in September 1900 and moved his family. From his apple orchard he sold bushels of apples via railroad cars in Kansas and Texas where he contracted typhoid fever resulting in his death 1/31/1919. He also worked as a "Watkins" salesman and blacksmith. Being "lay-leader" of the Methodist Church, he gave land from his farm for a new church and the cemetery where his ancestors (including Andrew and Abby) are all buried.

John Henry Wood Ruble was born 1/9/1857 (died 12/28/1939) in Boone County, Arkansas and married Dorotha Ann Harris (5/7/1857-3/11/1928)-(daughter of Regina Howard and William Harris) on January 13, 1876 in Bellefont, Arkansas where both are buried. Early in 1911, they moved to Elm Springs, Arkansas where "Uncle John" (as he was affectionately known by his congregations) was sent as the "circuit riding preacher". They had twelve children and (Millie) Mae Ruble, the tenth child, was one of three still at home. Idena Hellstern and Mae Ruble became lifelong friends. Idena's brother Nolon was "away" at Springdale High School but he and Mae became "sweethearts". Nolon graduated as valedictorian and attended Kansas City Western Dental College. In 1917 he returned to Elm Springs to open an office there and in Rogers, Arkansas. Nolon and Mae married on 9/26/1917. In August, Nolon enlisted in the World War I army, moving his young bride to Springdale to live with close friends, Dolly Fergus and Harold Henson. When the war was over he re-opened his office in Springdale April 19, 1919. Their daughter Mary Anna was born 3/23/1924 in Springdale. On September 1, 1929 Dr. and Mrs. Helstern (who simplified his last name) moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas where he lived out his 92 years. Mae died 3/15/1969 and Nolon retired in 1973 (and died 9/12/1985), having practiced 54 years.

On December 25, 1924 Idena Helstern (8/13/1895-8/25/1985) married Thomas Lee Fox (7/12/1895-8/15/1986), son of Jacob Fox and Margret Cardwell of Zion Community in Washington County, Arkansas. They moved to the Fox family farm and when Ernest Lee (only son, born 8/8/1925) was small (around 1931) moved to Springdale, Arkansas and then to Fayetteville where Lee worked at the Veterans Hospital in 1934. Dr. Fox (Ernest Lee) attended the same dental school as his uncle, graduating in 1948, and subsequently opening his own office in Fayetteville. Dr. Fox spent two and a half years in the Korean War and returned to his Fayetteville, Arkansas practice in 1953. Idena Hellstern Fox preceded her brother Nolon in death by only six weeks and her husband Lee by one year (almost to the day). All were in their early 90s. Idena and Lee are buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery with her ancestors.

Mae Ruble and Nolon Helstern's daughter Mary Anna (3/23/1924) attended Arkansas University and received a Fine Arts degree. At the University she met Robert Lee Jones (3/3/1924), son of Elsie Faye Oliver and Charles Robinson Jones of Neosho, Missouri. In 1943 Robert Lee enlisted in the World War II Air Force, and on 3/3/1945 he and Mary Anna married. After three years in the service in the South Pacific, he returned to the University of Arkansas and got his business degree in 1951. He took a job with Phillips Petroleum and was assigned to Spokane, Washington, where their daughter Melissa was born 7/22/1952. Robert and Mary Anna moved back to Arkansas in 1955 and spent five years in Mountain Home, Arkansas where their second daughter Lauriel Ann was born 9/30/1956. In June 1958 they moved to Cherokee Village in Sharp County, Arkansas where Bob was in real estate sales and management. October of 1965 saw the Jones family transferred to Benton County, Arkansas with Bella Vista Village. In 1968 after eight years with Cooper Communities they opened their own real estate company.

Daughter Melissa Lee married attorney Larry Garrett (son of Hugh and Velma Garrett of Hope, Arkansas) September 3, 1974 after graduating from the University of Arkansas. They live in Bella Vista Village, Arkansas with their daughter Heather Brooke, born June 12, 1977. Lauriel Ann attended Arkansas University and then attended a fashion design school in Dallas, Texas where she worked and resided for two years. She then moved to Tulsa, Oklahoma for two years and then back to Bentonville, Arkansas where she met and married James R. Howard (born 9/29/1954), son of Betty and Marvin Ray Howard of Chesterfield, Missouri. The young couple lived in Bentonville, Arkansas for one year then moved to Stillwater, Oklahoma where her husband accepted a job in personnel.

This is a true and accurate record to the best of my knowledge and research.

Albert Henbest

Albert Henbest came to America from England as a sixteen year old lad in 1841. While living in Marshall, Illinois he married twice. In 1866 Albert and his wife, 13 children, 15 head of horses, 1 cow, 2 dogs and 3 covered wagons moved to Washington County, Arkansas. The trip took 4 weeks. After a few years the main family moved to Missouri. A son, John Albert, had married Susan Frances Cruse and lived in the White Church Community, and were members of the Cane Hill Cumberland Presbyterian Church. 4 children, Rosetta, Kate, Emma and Roxie were born between 1870 and 1876.

In the summer of 1876 the family bought 120 acres in the Mount Comfort Community. There were 7 more children born between 1877 and 1889 - Edward, Willie, Zoe, a still-born infant, Margaret, Lottie and Mayme. In 1889 the family home burned, and father and mother and 9 living children moved into a log cabin while a new house was being built. John and Susan's 12th child, John Albert, Jr., was born during the log cabin days. In 1893 and 1895 two more babies were born, making a total of 14 children - 10 who grew to adults. Gus, the last baby, was born the night of Mose Baum's fire in Fayetteville.

In 1896 there were 7 Henbest children attending the Mount Comfort school. Their "Pa", John, Sr., was on the school board. Each day the lunch was packed in a large basket and at noon the 7 children would gather around the basket and eat their lunch.

Once before Christmas the house caught on fire. John, Jr. recalled that the Christmas oranges he had bought. His one big concern about the fire was, "Save them oranges! Save them oranges!"

A big garden was always grown to supply the large family. Cows, pigs and chickens help feed those at home. At one time there were 40 acres of strawberries. A potato house was built to store the large crops of potatoes. A bag swing was on the walnut tree near by, and the grandchildren would climb on the roof of the potatoe house, have some one throw the swing to them, jump on the swing and go ever so high.

The family also had a canning factory and a sorghum mill. A great delight of the younger children, and later grandchildren, was tasting of the "loppins" during the process of syrup making.

Sundays were special times. "Pa" would take the children by wagon to the Mount Comfort Cumberland Presbyterian Church "Ma" seldom went, as she stayed to cook dinner for the family and any guest "Pa" would bring home. The long table would seat 16 people, with children waiting the second serving.

Deafness ran in the family. Mayme was the first to show her deafness. She would put her hand behind ear and say, "huh"? One day two mischievous nephews were talking at the noon table. One said, "Let's crawl under the table and pinch Aunt Mayme". They found she could hear better than they thought for she said, "You'd better not!"

One fall, Pa was going to take a box car full of apples to New Orleans. A man called "Crazy Jim" saw Pa getting in the caboose for the trip. He called out, "Mr. Henbest, let me go with you", Pa said no, it was too far from home for "Crazy Jim". Later as the freight train pulled to a stop in New Orleans there stood "Crazy Jim" grinning at Pa. He had gone by passenger train and beat the freight train there.

The house was heated by a big fire place. On cold nights bricks were stood on end in front of the fire, warming, to be later wrapped in old papers and cloth and put to the feet of each person at bed time.

The Henbest Mount Comfort home is occupied in 1987 by Jack Henbest, a grandson of John, Sr., and Susan. Much happiness is recalled by the grandchildren and great-grandchildren as family love is passed from generation to generation.

Thomas Andrew Henson

Thomas Andrew was the younger of two brothers who came to Washington County in 1846 from the Sequatchie Valley, Bledsoe County, Tennessee. Their parents, Jonathan and Lydia Jones Henson had died four years earlier. The boys were moving west in search of better and cheaper land.

William, the older brother, purchased land near Oxford Bend with his share of his parent's estate. Thomas Andrew, "Andy," lived with him four years. At age 18 Andy returned to Tennessee to sell his portion of the family estate. He returned to Washington County and began to purchase and trade in land and livestock.

In 1852 Louiza Maria Kennan came from Columbia, Missouri, to attend the Fayetteville Female Seminary. She lived with her uncle, John Kennan of Goshen Road. Andy met her, and they were married in June 1853. On their farm four miles east of Fayetteville two children were born: Alexander Byrd in 1854 and Laura Louise in 1856. Louiza died suddenly on January 3, 1857.

Andy married Sarah Callie Gregg in September, 1857. They had twelve children: Ezekiel P., William A., James A., Jonathan F., Elizabeth E., Lydia A., Eddie A., Charles N. C., Serenie C., Solon C., Lillie and Minnie M.

During the Civil War Andy freed his three slaves. After an episode with bushwhackers he joined the Union Army, Company 1, First Arkansas Cavalry Volunteers. His family took refuge in Missouri until after the war. As Andy was bringing them home on the Old Missouri Road they passed farmland that appealed to Callie. Andy bought it. They built their home near a big spring where stage coaches stopped to water their horses.

When Andy died on October 1, 1885, he owned 1700 acres of land, much personal property, and quality livestock. Callie lived until May 1927. They are buried in Son's Chapel Cemetery.

Andy's oldest son, Alexander Byrd, became interested in a young lady after she challenged him to a horse race and won. Romance resulted and Byrd married Maud Bridenthal on Christmas Day, 1883. They had nine children: Malcolm Young, 1885-1945; Thomas David, 1888-1906; Lucella Lucille, 1890-1966; Alexander Sidney, 1892-1984; Harold Elgin, 1895-1985; Emery Louis, 1897-1926; Mamie and Mattie, 1899-1899; Ada Marie, 1901-1902.

Byrd and Maud raised grain, fruit and stock on their 240 acre farm south of Springdale. As years passed, Maud became heavy while Byrd remained trim. The story is told that while fluffing their feather-bed, he was instructed by Maud, "Put most of the feathers on my side, Byrd."

Maud died in October 1930; Byrd in February 1932. Both are buried in Shady Grove Cemetery.

Their oldest son, Malcolm, bought the southern-most parcel of his father's land on October 31, 1913. The heavily timbered land was located east of Fayetteville on Highway 45. Malcolm cleared, cut, and hauled wood to town by wagon team. In 1914 he had a house built by Mr. Huddleston with lumber cut and milled on Malcolm's farm. This is where he brought his bride, Effie Roberts Henson, later that year. They had three children: Malcolm Eugene, 1918-1976; David Roberts, 1921; Mary Louise, 1925.

The night Mary Louise was born the horse and buggy were waiting. Something scared the horse, who ran away with the buggy, severely damaging it. Malcolm decided it was time to break down and buy a car.

In 1921 Malcolm established a dairy with Jersey stock. Milk, buttermilk, and cream were produced and bottled. Butter was churned and packaged. Local delivery of these products continued until 1945.

Malcolm was a strong advocate of Jersey cattle because of their rich milk. The 1,000,000th registered Jersey was born on his farm. One of his cows set a record for annual butterfat production.

Malcolm was a board member of the American Jersey Cattle Club, Secretary of the Arkansas Farm Bureau, President of Washington County Farm Bureau, President of the Federal Land Bank Association, Charter member of the farm Bureau Cooperative, member of the Production Credit Association, and helped start the Farmer's Mutual Insurance. He was a deacon in First Baptist Church of Fayetteville. He and Effie helped build Son's Chapel Community Memorial Chapel. He was well known for his generosity. Derek Scott Herndon

Derek Scott Herndon was born December 30, 1985 in Springdale, Washington County, Arkansas. He is the son of Steven Dale Herndon and Lorie Ann Smith. He plays in the yard under huge oak trees and waves good-bye to his brothers who walk to school just a few blocks away. I pray that God will keep this land safe for our children, and their children, always. The clean air, the abundant wildlife, the splendor of her beautiful mountains and lakes and the friendliness of her gentle people makes us proud to call Arkansas our home.

William Herndon

Records on the ancestry of George Henry Herndon, Jr. begin with William Herndon who came to America in 1673. The following information appears in an article on William Herndon, the immigrant ancestor of Dallas Tabor Herndon, Secretary of the Arkansas Historical Commission, Little Rock, Arkansas in The Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy, Volume III by F. A. Virkus, 1928. We acknowledge the work of Doctor John Goodwin Herndon, who privately printed books (1947-1952) about the first seven generations of Herndons in America; and we offer to his memory our deepest gratitude. We are currently in possession of Doctor Herndon's books which are out of print and carefully guarded by those fortunate enough to possess them.

The first generation: William Herndon was born 1649, in Tenterden, County Kent, England. Our first record of William in America is on Virginia land patents dated 1673, which were issued by the King of England to any settler who would pay for the passage of other settlers. Two such land patents were issued to William Herndon, and his partner, Robert Bagby, totaling 2,800 acres for assisting 56 persons; and two patents were issued to William Herndon individually, totaling 494 acres for assisting 10 persons. Land issued to William Herndon was located along the northeast side of the Mattaponi River, near Saint Stephen's Church, New Kent County, Virginia. Today, Saint Stephen's Church is a small community on U. S. Highway 360, twenty-six miles northeast of Richmond, Virginia. William Herndon married Catherine Digges in 1677. Catherine was born 1654, the daughter of Edward Digges (Governor of Virginia in 1655). William Herndon died in 1722, and his wife Catherine died in 1729. They are buried at the Digges Family Cemetery near Saint Stephen's Church. William and Catherine had three sons born in Saint Stephen's Church: (1) Edward information in following paragraph; (2) James 1683-1744 married Mary George; (3) William 1685-1759, lm. nfi. 2m. Mrs. Sarah Leftwich.

Mary was born May 23, 1674 in Newport Pagnell, County Bucks, England, the daughter of John Waller and Mary Pomfrett. On April 18, 1722, Edward purchased 46 acres with house, stables, orchard, garden and waterway in Saint Stephen's. A land patent issued June 16, 1727 to Edward was for 400 acres in Spotsylvania County, Virginia. Edward served as juryman several times between 1733 and 1749. In 1735, he was appointed by the court to appraise the estate of Evan Thomas, deceased. And in 1744, the court appointed Edward Guardian of three orphan children. Edward and Mary lived most of their lives in the area around Saint Stephen's Church. It is presumed that Edward died shortly before the probating of his will March 9, 1758. Edward had nine children by his wife Mary: (1) John 1700-1786, married twice; (2) Edward 1702-1759, 1 married Elizabeth Stubblefield, 2 married Mary Brock; (3) nfi; (4) William information in following paragraph; (5) Richard 1708-1754, married twice (6) Martha 1710-1766, married William Watkins; (7) David 1712-1795, married Mary Lewis; (8) nfi; and (9) James 1716-1764, married Valentine Haley. The date of Mary's death is possibly 1720. Edward married—Leftwich in 1721 and they had one daughter: Esther 1723-1767, married Henry Elley.

The third generation: William Herndon was born 1706 near Saint Stephen's Church, Virginia. In 1730, he married Ann Drysdale, daughter of Hugh Drysdale (Lieutenant Governor of Virginia 1722). By the close of the 1700s, thousands of Americans began to head westward, seeking opportunities for a better life. George and Elizabeth moved to Richmond, Madison County, Kentucky in 1813. They remained there for about eighteen years. The Louisiana Purchase in 1803 offered free land west of the Mississippi River, and in 1821, Missouri was admitted to the United States as a slave state. George and Elizabeth moved westward once again. On November 19, 1831 they arrived at Boonville, Cooper County, Missouri, and settled six miles west of there on 200 acres near Lamine. George Henry Herndon, Sr. and pioneers like him played an important role during the turbulent years as America expanded westward. He was a noted horseman, mule breeder, farmer and rancher. George and Elizabeth lived the remainder of their lives in the area near Boonville. Elizabeth died July 20, 1847 and George died December 20, 1874. They were buried at the Herndon Family Cemetery one mile north of Lamine on U. S. Highway 41. As a young lad, George traveled with his parents and family many miles by Wagon Train from Kentucky, over difficult trails, crossing the Mississippi River to settle in Lamine, near Boonville, Cooper County, Missouri in November 1831. When he was a young man, George traveled to Texas and worked with Oliver Hedgecoxe in surveying a huge land grant issued by Texas to Peters Colonization Co. (Peters Colony). He later moved back to Lamine, Missouri.

In 1836 he moved to Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas where he was in the cattle and farming business. words, a stern rugged individual standing about six feet tall. He was considered by neighbors and friends a just and fair man, dealing harshly with anyone who threatened his property and family. He was often seen riding a stallion named "Cathams" (perhaps taken from the latin word cathedra, meaning chair or throne). At the time of his death, George had built an estate of about 1200 acres, some being parts of downtown McKinney. George and Cynthia freed six slaves on Emancipation Day. Together he and his wife and children survived in a wilderness under constant threat of Indian attacks, cattle rustlers, and thieves. He drove wild ponies with his father-in-law John (Jack) McGarrah to Fort Gibson, Indian Territory (later Oklahoma) and Fort Smith, Arkansas for sale to the U. S. Army as Cavalry mounts. He drove cattle to New Orleans, and Shreves Landing (now Shreveport). These cattle were sold to be loaded onto ships and sent to Europe. He drove cattle up the Chisholm Trail from McKinney, Texas to Abilene and Fort Dodge, Kansas. These cattle were to be sold and loaded onto railroad cars going to Kansas City, Kansas and Chicago, Illinois.

Cynthia Ann was a remarkable woman. Tradition has it that her mother was 1/4 Cherokee Indian. Cynthia was the mother of 15 children, strong and resolute in her faith (Presbyterian), and capable in many ways. She could (and did) kill wild game when George was away before the boys were old enough.

George died 7:07 a. m. September 22, 1902 in McKinney, Collin County, Texas at the age of 84 years and 7 months following a lingering illness. Funeral services for George took place at their residence in town at 10:00 a. m. the following day conducted by Reverend W. P. Cloyd and Reverend Chandler, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of which George was a member. Interment was in the family burying ground at the old homestead 9 miles west of McKinney. A long exemplary life is bequeathed his numerous posterity, as a heritage to inspire them to nobler lives and nobler living.

Cynthia died March 8, 1813 in McKinney, Collin County, Texas, twelve years following the death of her husband. She was laid to rest beside him in the family burying ground at the old homestead. In 1923, George and Cynthia's graves were moved to Rowlett Creek Cemetery, seven miles southwest of McKinney at the intersection of State Highway 121 and Custer Road. At the same time were also moved the graves of their children: Cynthia Ann (infant), Albert H. (died young), and Laura A. (died young). Rowlett Creek Cemetery is recognized as a landmark for being the oldest Baptist Church in Texas (founded 1848 - became inactive in 1935). At the time of this writing, there are well over 50 graves in this cemetery related to the Herndon family. Each year a celebration of "Decoration Day" and the "Old Settlers Reunion" takes place on the first Sunday in May.

George and Cynthia had 15 children. Ben Hicken

My father, Ben Hicken, at 17 emigrated from his native Esens, Germany to America. He worked his way to Diller, Nebraska, where his brother, Frederick, lived.

In Germany, he had schooling and served an apprenticeship in blacksmith. His father, Meno Hicken, and a brother were clockmakers and were disappointed in Papa's career choice.

Papa did not marry until he had saved to buy a small farm and establish a blacksmith shop at Diller. At 32, he married 18-year old Ida Michels, the daughter of German immigrants.

Papa had built a small, four-room house and planted some fruit trees. Mama said their first mattress was made of striped ticking stuffed with clean cornhusks. That was soon done away with as her father gave her a feather tick. One day, Papa gave Mama money to go buy groceries and household necessities. She used it to buy a 100-piece set of dishes. She used to tell us about it and show us the dishes, which were white with a little green flower design.

They had eight daughters. Four died in infancy.

Having no brothers, we girls did such chores as milking cows, feeding calves and bringing in corncobs to fuel the cookstove. My childhood memories are of a freedom that I wonder if all youngsters experience. We had many carefree days. Papa got an old piano crate, which was our playhouse until one day it disappeared. I suppose he needed the boards from it for something. He was quite frugal. Nothing went to waste.

In 1919, our family moved to Springdale, Arkansas and have lived here since. There were three of us children, our oldest sister having married and stayed in Nebraska.

We planned to come in our Ford Sedan, but winter set in so we came by train. It was hot and stuffy. I remember the clickity-clack of the rails. The benches on which we sat were wood, more like today's park benches.

We arrived in Springdale three days before Christmas. We knew no one but soon made friends with the friendly people. At first we stayed at the Commercial Hotel on Holcomb Street. Christmas Eve, we attended the First Methodist Church program.

Apartments were not plentiful, but we found a small one on Maple Street. The only heat was a kerosene heater. We all got sick. The lady, Gladys Jingles, was very nice to us. She loaned me a copy of Harold Bell Wright's popular book, Shepherd of the Hills. I fell in love with reading.

Papa bought a 40-acre place joining the Byron Brogdon apple farm on the south. Our place was in apples, peaches and cherries. There was a neglected rose garden north of the house and near that, a garden plot with a nice asparagus bed. We attended the old Grammar School on Allen Avenue, later going to Central School. The two-story high school was completed on West Emma. My class of 1929 was the first to graduate there.

In 1932, I married Dean Allen, formerly of Cave Springs. As a bricklayer-stonemason-contractor, he worked on many buildings in Washington County and elsewhere, such as Springdale High School, University of Arkansas Fine Arts Building, Baylor Mansion on Callahan Mountain, even the atomic bomb plant at Oak Ridge, Tennesse.

Dean and I had seven children. They are: Leon Allen, Benny Allen and Linda Hild of Springdale; Renelda Hebert of Houston, Texas; Phillip Allen of Albuquerque, New Mexico; and Connie Marshall and Kathleen Allen of Oklahoma City. Dean died in 1975.

My two sisters still reside in Springdale; Wilma Hicken Sohl and Edna Hicken.

There have been many changes here since we came. I remember the street dance held to celebrate the paving of Emma Avenue. The hardships of the Depression just about eclipses such memories.

Papa died in 1952, and Mama in 1976. Both are buried in the Lutheran Cemetery on West Huntsville Avenue.

Papa never did get to return to Germany to see his parents he left in 1885. In 1983, my daughter, Kathleen, and I visited Germany, including the town of Esens. We even saw there the Lutheran Church Papa attended as a boy.

Alonzo R. Hicks

This is my maiden name: Hicks. My father's name was Alonzo R. Hicks. He was born and lived most of his life in Pike County, and he was a farmer.

After his parents died, he moved to Nashville, Arkansas, where he worked on the railroad. I can recall that the family would get a certain number of rides on the train free.

In my father's family were six girls and three boys, all dead now. I don't know where the cousins are.

His sister, Sarah Hicks Funderburk, was the first in his family to move to Washington County. My father, Alonzo, came and brought us to Washington County in November of 1929.

My mother's family name was Meigs, and they lived and farmed in the same vicinity. There were seven girls and one boy. The boy spent his last years in Texarkana, Arkansas. I do not know where the uncles and aunts or their children are.

Meigs family: John Meigs, grandfather; Nettie Meigs, grandmother. Children: Cora, Emma, Rosa, Mattie, Lola, Allie, and Horace.

Mattie Louise Hill, "Honey"

On September 9, 1937, Dr. J. J. Baggett delivered me, Peggy Jane Converse, to my parents, Mary Stella Roberts and Everett Russell Converse in Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Dad drove a bus for Santa Fe Trailways so we lived in several small towns in northwest Arkansas, northeast Oklahoma and southwest Missouri before moving to Wichita, Kansas.

In 1962 I married Jerry Gilbert Drennan and moved to his home town of Winfield, Kansas. Our son Mark is married to Mary Ann Hogan and they live in Rochester Hills, Michigan where he is employed by the Chevrolet Division of General Motors. Our son Steven is a sophomore at Southwestern College, Winfield, Kansas.

Mattie Louise Hill was the grandmother who nurtured my love for Arkansas. When I was young, I would visit her there and she would let me go through her old trunk filled with pieces of my history while listening to stories of family, many of whom were born and lived in Washington County, Arkansas.

Mattie Louise Hill was born June 23, 1893 in Viney Grove, Arkansas to Hypasia Amanda West and Robert Thomas Hill. She outlived three husbands, Prof. Wm. H. Roberts, Henry VanHoose and Anthony Rosebud. No children were born to any of these marriages. She married my grandfather, Prof. Wm. H. Roberts, after his wife, Mary Stella Hill, passed away a few days after giving birth to my mother, Mary Stella Roberts. She raised Mary Stella, Arline and James Roberts, her sister's children.

While visiting with her about our 1975 vacation that included Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, she told me her grandmother, Martha (Rogers) West, was held prisoner in her home by two Northern generals while the Battle of Prairie Grove was being fought. The officers used the house as a hospital for the wounded and stacked five or six hundred dead in the smokehouse. They buried them in a large trench east of the house. After the war they were dug up and buried in a National Cemetery. Her grandfather, Robert Gentry West took his negro slaves south, possibly to Georgia while the war was being fought.

I visited my great-great grandparents home with my grandmother in August of 1944. The next time was in 1976 and the smokehouse had been torn down and the house had been moved about one mile to the north. Frank and Judy West have built a new home on the original sight.

My dear grandmother, Mattie Louise Hill, passed away in Wichita, Kansas, February 19, 1979 and is buried in the Wichita Park Cemetery. "Honey" is on her grave marker as that is what I always called her and that was how Mark and Steven knew her. The aroma and taste of her homemade clover-leaf rolls and the unconditional love she gave each of us is her legacy.

Oscar Marshel Hinds

Oscar Marshel Hinds, born March 19, 1884 in Carroll County, Arkansas was the son of W. A. Hinds and Eliza Jane Phillips Hinds, died March 29, 1952. Rosa Youngman Hinds, born June 6, 1892 in Spring Valley, Arkansas was married to him December 25, 1910 and they had four children: Shirley Hinds Dold, Sherman Hinds, Katie Hinds Phillips and Fred Hinds. They lived on a small farm near Hindsville, Arkansas from 1910 until 1923. Hindsville was named for the family.

Fred Hinds - 1952

In 1923, they moved to Springdale and purchased a small cafe which was located on Emma Avenue in the first block West of the railroad tracks (about where C & C Gift Shop is now located). It was a small, narrow building with a counter and stool and probably seated eight or ten. The name of it was Cozy Lunch

Oscar M. Hinds

Rosa Youngman Hinds

Room and the main menu was Stew, Chili and Homemade pie. There were lots of railroad men who loved home cooking as well as a lot of local trade.

Their first home was on Spring Street (where Bible Believers Book Store is now). At that time, it was a large three-story-house. Their next home was a small farm out on Sunset West about where Food-For-Less now stands. After they sold the Cozy Lunch Room, they purchased a meat market and grocery store just a few doors west of the cafe. Deliveries were made on horse-back or in horse and buggy. Delivering eggs and kerosene by this method was a large task.

Later, they bought a small farm north of town. They raised stock cattle, hogs, vegetables and fruit. This made up the food they ate. Very little was purchased from a store. Strawberries and grapes where the crops that brought in cash for necessary items.

When the children were grown, Oscar worked with real estate, buying and selling property.

They finally retired to 402 Putnam Street. The house is still standing and is one of the oldest homes in Springdale.

Shirley Hinds Dold taught school in area schools such as Sonora and War Eagle. She moved to New Mexico, but retired in Springdale. Sherman Hinds worked on a ranch in California, but returned to Springdale to raise grapes and retire.

Katie Hinds Phillips also lived in California and returned to Springdale.

Fred Hinds never left Springdale. He married Fleeta Jane Brown and their first home was located where the Springdale Sewer Treatment plant is now, just north of Springdale.

Fred owned trucks and hauled live poultry all over the United States. He finally sold his trucks and went to work for Nelson Dodd Produce Company and worked there until he retired to the farm. He and his brother, Sherman owned the forty acres where the Elmdale Baptist Church and Elmdale School are now located and Fred built a home on the north end of that tract. It finally got too close to the city, so he moved to a hen farm in the Harmon Community and lived there until his death in 1980. Fleeta still lives on a part of that farm and their son, Kenneth Hinds lives on the other part.

His hobby and passion in life was horses. He always had riding horses and then got into race horses. He ran on race tracks in Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma and in Hot Springs. He never won any big races, but all his horses were winners to him.

They have four children, a daughter, Joy Drummond, who lives in the Harmon Community and has two sons, Donny and Lee. Joy is the manager of Washington County Abstract & Title Company.

Another daughter, Betty Jackson lives in Springdale and has a daughter, Dawn and a son, Robbie. Betty works for Tyson's. Carolyn Bradley, the third daughter, lives in Tontitown and has a daughter, Teresa, a son, Gerald and a grandson, Jason Crittenden. She owns the KarmelKorn Shoppe at the Northwest Arkansas Mall. Kenneth Hinds lives on the original farm in the Harmon Community and has a diesel shop located next to his house. He has a daughter, Liza and a son, Doug.

Both Moses and Janie Hobbs are buried at Molly Field Cemetery, northeast of Tahlequah, Oklahoma. Moses farmed land along the Illinois River and at times cut ties for the railroad. Janie kept busy with house chores, gardening and mid-wifery. She delivered many of the children in the areas she lived as well as her own and a number of her grandchildren. By the 1930s, dust had taken its toll on many farms and hard times caused by the depression found descendants of Moses Hobbs moving west. They settled in Kern County, California around Arvin and Lamont, where many live today. A number of descendants are buried in cemeteries in Kern County, California. Moses' last years found him bedridden with arthritis and Janie blind.

Malinda Jane (Janie Turner) Hobbs, daughter of Elish B. (born circa 1845 in Indiana, died January 13, 1932/3 Scraper, Oklahoma) and Mary (Hill) Turner (born 1853, Virginia, died 1922, Arkansas) came to Arkansas by horse-drawn wagon at the tender age of 4 years. Elisha and Mary Turner married circa 1874 in Indiana after the Hill family traveled dirt roads from Virginia to Indiana. Mary is the daughter of John Hill, born circa 1828, Virginia, and Malinda Jane (Hillenburg) Hill, born circa 1831 Virginia; Elisha is the son of Thomas (Tommy) Turner, born circa 1823 in Indiana, died circa 1909 Arkansas, and "Grandma" Turner, believed to be born in Ireland. Legend has it that when the Turner and Hill families migrated south from Indiana to Arkansas, "Grandma" brought her yellow canaries with her in their wagon. Arriving in Arkansas and out of bird feed, Grandma decided to turn the canaries loose, hoping they would survive in the wild of Arkansas. To survive, the canaries had to cross-breed with native birds. Today, we enjoy the descendants of these yellow canaries in the little wild finches.

Nancy (Paschal) Hobbs

Tower Mountain, located near Durham, Arkansas was once known as Hobbs Mountain. Jessie H. Hobbs and his family put in long hours of hard work cultivating Hobbs Apples. It had been a hard trip coming to the mountain; however, when Jessie saw it, he knew it was where he wanted to live out his remaining years. Jessie, born April 25, 1825 North Carolina, died April 19, 1898 Arkansas, married February 27, 1847 North Carolina to Nancy H. Paschal (L), born 1828 North Carolina, died January 28, 1882 Arkansas; children: Thomas M., born August 8, 1849 Tennessee, died May 3, 1936 Oklahoma; Lewis Andrew born December 1851 Tennessee, died June 23, 1937 Oklahoma, married Julia Ann Elva Dockery, twelve children; Caleb Joshua (Josh), born 1861 Arkansas; Joseph (Joe) C., born circa 1863/4 Arkansas; John H., born July 1866 Arkansas, died November 1869 Arkansas; and William (Bill), born circa July 1869/70 Arkansas. Jessie and Nancy built a nice, large house on top of their mountain. Today, a microwave tower has replaced that house. The Hobbs and Paschal families traveled together as there was safety in numbers and a helping hand when needed. Moving from North Carolina to Hawkins County, Tennessee then southward down river into Arkansas, the two families had their own small wagon train seeking out new and better farm land. Coming into Washington County, Arkansas, the families settled along the White River area. Their children attended school, did farm chores and on Sunday attended the Whitehouse Church of Christ with their family and neighbors. Both families are buried at the Whitehouse Community Cemetery, Washington County, Arkansas.

Thomas M. Hobbs married first: on July 25, 1868 Washington County, Arkansas to Saphrona Angelina Johnson, born December 23, 1848 Arkansas died December 12, 1903 Oklahoma; children all born in Arkansas: John Harper, born May 22, 1869, died September 25, 1952 Oklahoma; Sarah E., born 1872, married Shackelford; Moses Swim(mer), born February 5, 1873 died August 24, 1951 Oklahoma; Nancy (Nannie) J., born 1876, married Tom Herman; Frances N., born 1879; Clifford J., born 1887; Clifton (Windy) E., born February 1890; Lahoma (Oma); Elva (Elua) married Bob Williams; Laurie married George Youngblood; and a daughter, born December 28, 1885 died September 18, 1886 Arkansas. It is understood that Saphrona (often spelled Sarfrona) was a twin and a full-blood Cherokee Indian. Also, that her father was John Johnson born ca 1808 Tennessee, and his family came from North Carolina. John's wife came from a Gulf Coast State, possibly Alabama.

Working as a laborer, Thomas lived with his family near his parents on Hobbs Mountain until he moved into the Cherokee Strip (today it is Cherokee County, Oklahoma). Seeing the area eighteen miles northeast of Tahlequah, Oklahoma called Scraper, Thomas, like his father, Jessie H. Hobbs knew he would spend the rest of his life in this area. Shortly after Thomas moved his family into the Scraper, Oklahoma area, Saphrona died 1903 and buried in Oaks Cemetery assumed to be east of Scraper.

Thomas married second: Mary Etta (Eddie) Dennis, born 1877 Arkansas, died 1929 Oklahoma; children all but two born at Scraper, Oklahoma: Elijah Everett, born September 29, 1904; Lewis Andrew, born June 24, 1906, died 1976 Sonora, California; George Washington, born December 30, 1908; William Monroe, born December 28, 1919; Opal Adell, born October 25, 1914 married Henderson; Mandy Lucille, born February 12, 1917 Teresita, Oklahoma, died November 2, 1917 Oklahoma; and Clay Lee born February 8, 1912 Teresita, Oklahoma married Dovie Marie Hart. Thomas and Mary Hobbs and many relatives are buried at Molly Field Cemetery approximately thirteen miles northeast of Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

Emanuel Hoff

Emanuel Hoff, born near Martin, North Dakota in 1912, got his first impression of Arkansas and its mild climate while in the army and stationed at Fort Chaffee, Arkansas about 1942. Although he returned to Crookston, Minnesota, where his famlly lived, he never forgot the beauty and mild climate of northwest Arkansas. He married Ruth Wiese from Crookston. They started a family and farmed in Norman and Mahnomen counties of Minnesota for twelve years before Ruth was suddenly stricken with acute arthritis. The doctor said a warm climate might help.

It was the winter of 1956 that Ruth was hospitalized for extended periods of time and was so crippled that she couldn't walk on her own at times. The following spring (1957) Emanuel said he did not want to spend another cold winter in Minnesota. He went ahead and farmed and had milk cows and chickens that spring, but the farm was for sale. It sold in October. On October 22, Emanuel left to drive to Arkansas to seek a place to live. He returned 4 days later and announced, "We are moving to Arkansas". He found a place about three miles west of Springdale. It had a nice house, five acres and a double story broiler house for 7000 chickens. An auction was held one week later to sell the farm machinery and household items. The children's pony, "Dash", was sold and their dog, "Pal", was left at Uncle Gene's farm.

On November 13 everything that would fit was loaded on the truck and pick-up. If it didn't fit it was left behind. It was Arkansas or bust! A friend drove the truck to Arkansas. Emanuel took daughter, Doris, and Ruth's mother, Ada Wiese, along in the pick-up. Ruth and the other children stayed with a neighbor.

Emanuel, Doris, and Grandma Wiese, along with the truck and belongings, arrived in Springdale on November 15. A dog, "Whitey", left by the previous owner was there to greet them at the new place. By midnight the truck was empty, groceries bought, beds set up and appliances hooked up. The pick-up, still loaded, was parked in the garage. Emanuel and the truck driver left at 3:30 a. m. the next day to go back to Minnesota, while Doris and Grandma stayed at the new house. They didn't know anyone and didn't drive so they never left the place but they had plenty of unpacking and organizing to do.

Back at Minnesota, there were tears shed at the many farewells to friends, neighbors, and the many relatives. On November 18, Emanuel, Ruth and the six children packed into the 1949 Dodge and drove 1000 miles to Springdale. The children took turns sitting on a box that would't fit in the trunk. The children were both excited and apprehensive to what Arkansas would be like.

It was the next day, in the evening of November 19 that the Hoff family arrived at their new place. Life in Arkansas was about to begin for Emanuel and Ruth and their seven children: Marlys, 11; Doris, 10; Lois, 9; Phyllis, 8; Dale, 7; Wayne, 5; and Avis, 16 months.

The older five children attended Peaceful Valley Rural School. The children had some adjustments to make. Leaving a new elementary school with two rooms per grade to attending a one-room classroom for six grades under the dedicated teacher, Mrs. Willey. The children soon made friends and adjusted pretty well academically. The big difficulty was the southern accent. There were many discussions about the correct pronunciation of words. It took a while to understand what sounded like "cal" meant "cow", but they soon learned.

Two more children were born to the family: Nelva in 1958 and Ardell in 1959.

Education continued at Central Junior High School. The younger children later attended the same school when it was Central Elementary School so all nine children attended that school. All nine children also attended Springdale High School.

Life was difficult, but hardships were not new to the family and adjustments were made. Many chores had to be done before school as Ruth was not able to do them. Clothes were washed in a wringer washer, rinsed in tubs, and hung out to dry before school. Beds were made, breakfast dishes washed and the house in order before leaving for school. Some of the children also helped Emanuel with milking cows and feeding the calves at a rented barn and pasture. Holidays were especially difficult because the Hoffs were used to being at grandparents or other relatives on the holidays and birthdays, but that was no longer possible. Salem Lutheran Church (in the early years was located on Highway 71 at Johnson Street) was important in the lives of the Hoffs. Many friendships were made in those early years. Emanuel and Ruth became especially close to Carl and Marie Christianson and Emanuel often helped on the Christianson farm near Johnson, Arkansas. The family grew in faith and trust in the Lord. The Lord was good to them and gave them strength through many difficulties.

In 1960 the Hoffs moved to Springdale in a house on Sunnydale Drive. Emanuel took a correspondence course to learn to repair electrical appliances and started his own business, Hoff Appliance Service. For several years he had a shop in the laundry building on Mill Street.

In June of '69, Emanuel became a service repairman for Famous Hardware where he worked until he retired in 1979. Emanuel and Ruth now live northeast of Springdale. They have been blessed with 18 grandchildren, 10 living in Arkansas. Ruth had hip and knee surgery in 1986 and it has relieved much of her pain. Three children, Lois Douthit, Nelva Zimmerman, and Wayne Hoff still live in Springdale and Washington County.

Rev. John Holcombe

The Holcombe family have been long-time residents of Washington County. Cener Holcomb(e) Ellis was born in Springdale on May 9, 1870. Her ancestors came to Virginia from England in colonial days, and some family members went to the Carolinas. Her grandfather, the Rev. John Holcombe, was born in South Carolina on December 10, 1797. On July 24, 1823, in Gibson County, Indiana, he married Dorothea Wilbanks. The couple moved to Fulton County, Illinois, where he served as minister in the Spoon River Association of the Primitive Baptist Church. After several more years in Gibson County, Indiana, the family moved to Washington County, Arkansas. On August 22, 1840, John Holcombe was one of three Elders constituting the Shiloh Baptist Church. On October 8, 1843, he exchanged his patent to land in the West Fork area for land at Shiloh, giving William Quinton a cash payment in addition to the land. In 1843, also, John Holcombe became the first regular pastor of the Shiloh Primitive Baptist Church, serving as its only pastor until his death on December 9, 1876. He and his wife were the parents of sixteen children, the lives of most of whom are intertwined with the history of Washington County. A daughter, Mary, married John N. Stafford, and their son, John P. Stafford, became the long-time editor of The Springdale News.

Though he had served in the Black Hawk War in Illinois in 1832, John Holcombe apparently could not approve of a war of "brother against brother," and he took the feminine members of his family to Texas for the duration of the Civil War. He returned after the war to re-build his burned-down home. The Church building had also been destroyed. His sons, Joseph and William Henry had served in the Confederate Army.

On July 10, 1868, John Holcombe had the County Surveyor lay out and plot the original twelve blocks of Shiloh. Then in 1870 Joseph Holcomb (he dropped the "e"), his eldest son, came into possession of the homestead, and about 1872 he laid out into lots the rest of Shiloh. In 1875 the name of the town was changed to "Springdale". After it was incorporated, Joseph Holcomb in 1879 was elected the first mayor. In 1881 when the Frisco Railroad came to town, he gave the company a lot for the station and additional land. And he gave a lot to anyone who would erect a business building in "New Town." Business was going down the street he had named "Emma Avenue" for his step-daughter, Miss Emma Dupree. As his father is known as the "Founder" of Springdale, Joseph Holcomb is remembered as the "Father". On December 12, 1860, he had married Cener Boone and they had had one son, Herbert. They lived for several years at Mineral Springs in Hempstead County. After her death in 1867 he married Mrs. Belle Smith Dupree on May 25, 1869. In 1870 he returned to Washington County. In 1872 he was elected Circuit Clerk, and he also engaged in mercantile business with Stephen K. Stone, in Fayetteville. He and his second wife had four children: Cener Boone, Bruce, Jobelle and George. He also had two step-children: James Dupree and Emma Dupree. The latter married Mr. J. P. Deaver. Bruce Holcomb became active in banking and business in Fayetteville. He had a son, Crawford, and a daughter, Mary, by his first wife, Mary Lou (Crawford) Holcomb, and a son, Richard, by his second wife, Daisy (Young) Holcomb. George Holcomb married Leila Johnson and had four sons: George Jr., Kenneth, Joe and Charles.

Cener Holcomb(e) married Dr. Edward Forrest Ellis on September 4, 1900, and they had three daughters: Martha Belle, Elizabeth Dupree, and Ruth. (See "Ellis Family" section.)

Before her marriage Cener Holcomb(e) had taught at Harrell Indian Institute in Indian Territory, and in the Preparatory Department of the University of Arkansas. She was very active in community affairs and in the Methodist Church. Jobelle Holcombe, an English professor at the University of Arkansas for many years, was the first woman to be awarded an honorary degree by the University. "Holcombe Hall" was named in her honor.

Luther Bascome Holland

Around 1912 Luther Bascome Holland, a widower and his sons left Enterprize, Oklahoma and moved to a farm northwest of Fayetteville about 1 1/2 miles south of Wheeler. They moved in a hack. Nellie, a daughter, stayed in Enterprize with aunts and uncles. Nellie came up in 1913.

Luther was born in Tippah County, Mississippi February 6, 1858. His father Felix Roberson, a farmer, was born in Tennessee in 1825 and his mother Jane Evelyn Gaylor was born in North Carolina in 1826. His brothers and sisters were: Jan, Lena, Dora, Evie, William Gaylor, Dotson Felix, and others.

When Luther, Dot and Will were young men, they cut timber at Marked Tree, Arkansas. It was here they developed a distinct yell to warn the others when a tree was falling. They would float the logs down the river to the mill. Using a short-cut going to work they would carry their boat across the hill rather than row it around the bend.

Sometime before 1890 they moved near Russellville, Arkansas. It was here Luther met Molly (Mary Francis Norris). They were married November 9, 1890 on her eighteenth birthday by J. L. Turner, Justice of the Peace. She was born near Russellville, Arkansas.

Molly's father James A. Norris was born in Tennessee May 16, 1834. Her mother Catherine Elizabeth Phipps was born in Arkansas April 1856. James was the engineer of the train "Dinky" at Russellville. It was here he met Elizabeth who was a cook for the railroad crew. The train ran from Dardanelle to Russellville.

James' and Catherine's children were: Mary, William, Edward, Susan, Thomas, Ettie, and Macy. James had a son, James and a daughter Jessie by an earlier marriage.

Catherine's mother's maiden name was Ellis.

James' parents were Samuel born 1799 in Georgia and Jane born 1810 in Ohio. His brothers and sisters were: John, Nancy, William, Samuel, Emily, Lucinda, and Lucy born in Tennessee.

Around 1894, the Hollands and Norris moved from Dardanelle, Arkansas to Bell Starr Bluff near Hoyt, Oklahoma, Indian Territory. They were the first settlers. They moved in wagons pulled by oxen and brought their milk cows along with them.

Luther and Molly's children were Hugh Herbert born September 2, 1891 on Crow Mountain near Dardanelle; Nellie Lavanche born March 11, 1893 at Cardins Bottom at Dardanelle. The following children were born near Enterprize, Oklahoma, Indian Territory. Chester Wall, February 11, 1895; O. K., October 15, 1896; Winfield Delbert, February 2, 1899; Jessie Lou Etta Francis, December 17, 1900; Bee Bascome, March 31, 1903; William Felix August 12, 1904.

When Nellie was a young girl she wouldn't take her castor oil so her mother gave her a small glass slipper so she would take it. Unknown to her parents, Nellie ran around the house by the chimney and spit it out. Nellie told the story many times to her children about how she got the glass slipper, but she was 87 before she told about spitting out the castor oil.

The slipper was given to Molly from her father James. Since then, Nellie has passed the glass slipper on to her daughter, Bonnie.

Mollie died February 26, 1905 at Enterprize. She is buried at the Hoyt Cemetery.

Luther has an adopted daughter, Mary Jane born January 27, 1917.

Luther moved to Hindsville for a short time. His daughter Nellie and her husband Walter and her children went to see him. Bee (Luther's young son) and the girl he was courting and later married (Pearl Jones) came by Nellies. They hadn't been to Luthers since he moved but they followed the narrow tire tracks from Walters eight miles west of Fayetteville to Hindsville to Luthers. Nellie loved flowers and when she went there the first time the first thing she did was see what kind of flowers her father had in his yard.

When Luther was old, he had cancer and was very weak. His vision was poor. Will, his brother, caught a ride with someone from Texas to Fayetteville. Walter took him the rest of the way to see Luther in his pick-up. Just before they got to Luther's, Will said stop a minute. He got out of the pick-up and yelled the same yell they used when they cut timber as young men. Then he got back in the pick-up and drove on to Luther's. When they got there, tears were running down Luther's cheeks, and he was saying, "It's Will, It's Will!".

Luther died March 27, 1939 at his home south of Wheeler. His body was taken to Hoyt, Oklahoma for his burial next to his wife.

Many stories were handed down, of hardships during and following the war. Some of the fighting took place on the farm, and cannon balls have been kept that were picked up on the property.

The family became quite skilled at hiding food stuff in secret places, and in hiding farm animals in the woods at the appearance of strangers.

It was a time of great unrest, an uncomfortable social situation followed, carpet baggers and raiders came through, they would kill or just take the live stock, or any thing else that took their fancy, and mostly it was women and children left to defend their homes.

William W. Holmes

William W. Holmes was born October 3, 1918 in Montgomery County, Arkansas, the son of Albert and Hallie Ramsey Holmes, third of seven children. They lived in the farming community of Sulphur Springs. About 1924, the family decided to move to West Texas. They lived in Canadian, Texas and worked in the cotton fields for several months, then moved on to Portales, New Mexico where they farmed as share croppers. They later gave up farming and moved to town. William (Bill) grew up in Portales where he attended school. He joined the CCC's in the late 1930s. In August of 1941 he joined the army, was stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas, was later transferred to Camp Chaffee, Arkansas. He then went overseas to the southwest Pacific. He took part in the battles on Leyte, Mindinao, Luzon, Panai and Negros. He was there 18 months. Was discharged at the end of the war and returned to Portales.

Oleta Francis Reed was born April 26, 1929 in a farming community near Amherst, Texas. The daughter of John F. and Old Thornberry house in Greenland. Was also owned by Verlon & Mary Napier.

Lola Cole Reed. The second of five children. She attended school at Amherst until her sophomore year, then her family moved to a farming community west of Portales called Floyd. She graduated from school there in 1946. She met Bill Holmes after his discharge from the army and they were married May 11, 1947 in the home of Reverend C. F. Booth, by the Reverend Booth.

They made their home in Portales for 2 years where Bill worked for the city. He then took a job with an oil exploration company and they began to move around as this type of work did not stay in one place for very long at a time. They got 8 x 25 foot trailer house to live in and moved all over west Texas and eastern New Mexico, down to south Texas up to Colorado and North Dakota, Montana and Utah.

Their oldest son Gary L. was born in Roswell, New Mexico, September 30, 1950. Alan Paul was born June 17, 1956 in Monticello, Utah. When Gary started school, they settled in Grants, New Mexico. Bill went to work for Cineza Refinery, a branch of El Paso Natural Gas Products Co. Pamela was born September 7, 1957 in Grants, New Mexico. Ronald Brian was born November 17, 1960 in Grants.

Bill having been born in Arkansas had always wanted to return. He remembered the trees and how pretty and green it was so it was decided to make a camping trip to Arkansas and see if a move would be feasible.

In the summer of 1962 they packed a camping trailer and went to northwest Arkansas for their vacation. They visited Oleta's uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cox of West Fork, also Mr. and Mrs. Roy Odom of West Fork. They began looking for a small farm and found one southwest of Winslow. They made arrangements to buy it and then went back to New Mexico and put their place up for sale there. In May of 1964 they moved to Arkansas. The farm was located east of the Bunyard Community. It had a fairly nice house on it, a run chicken house and a barn. They decided to get milk cows and sell milk. After a few months it was apparent that there was not enough land for milk cows so they decided to sell the cows and land and move closer to town so they could work. In November of 1964 they bought a house in Greenland from Verlon and Mary Napier and moved there. It was known as the Thornberry place. Bill went to work for the University of Arkansas in the Heating Plant.

The children enrolled in the Greenland school and were active in school activities. Jay Randall was born in November 17, 1965. Oleta worked for Levi Straus for 9-1/2 years, then took a job as a cook in the Greenland school.

Gary married Marilyn Graham, daughter of Audra and Lucille Graham of Fort Smith on March 4, 1972 in Fort Smith. They have 2 sons Brian Christopher, born April 4, 1973. Matthew Quade, born April 14, 1975. Gary works for Arkansas Western Gas Co. Marilyn works for Shilo Christian School. They live in Springdale, Arkansas. Alan lives in Greenland and works for Superior. Pamela married Jim Benton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Benton of Springdale on November 24, 1979 in Greenland Baptist Church. Pam works for First National Bank of Fayetteville and Jim works for Nelms as a car salesman. They live in Greenland.

Ronald works for Ozarks Electric he had two children, Nathan William born April 13, 1982 and Dacia Frances, born December 23, 1983. He lives in Fayetteville.

Jay Randall joined the army in 1985 and is stationed in Fort Bragg, North Carolina with the 82nd Engineers. Bill retired in 1982.

Mary, also a native of England, was a first cousin to Queen Victoria.

John and Mary lived out their lives at Spring Valley and are buried at the Wesley Cemetery.

One of their 18 children was Levi Holmesley. In 1839 in Washington County, Levi was married (1st) to Zimarou Wagnon. They resided at Spring Valley. After her death, Levi married (2nd) Aly Means. In 1875, Levi and Aly and some of the children went West, settling near Tempe, Arizona. One of their children, Alice Holmesley (Williams), was born in the covered wagon in New Mexico two days before the family reached Arizona. Levi and Aly cleared a section of land and remained there. He died in 1880 and she in 1883. Both are buried at Double Butte Cemetery at Tempe. They were the first white family to settle there.

One of the children of Levi and Zimarou who remained at Spring Valley was Burrell Holmesley. He was a blacksmith. He was born in 1844 and he married Rachel Scott. They became the parents of the following children: Houston, Wesley, Mary, William, Maude, Myrtle, Joe and Peter.

Houston Holmesley married (1st) Mary Savage, and they had one child, Leon Holmesley. Houston married (2nd) Matilda Johnson. They lived near War Eagle.

Joey and Rex and Rex's son, Seth, are the only descendants of Burrell Holmesley carrying on the Holmesley name. There are, however, many descendants in the area of the emigrants, John R. and Mary James Holmesley, who perpetuate the name. These have descended from brothers of Burrell or from their uncles.

On December 31, 1868, Alfred married Rachel Harriet Johnson. Rachel was born March 29, 1852, near Baldwin, to Nellie Lewis and John Johnson, who were married June 5, 1851. Second marriages for both, Nellie's first husband, Payton Lewis, was said to have been her cousin. Nellie, born 1814 in Missouri, was part Chickasaw Indian. Nellie and John Johnson divorced April 23, 1856. Nellie died at Fayetteville, October 6, 1901; both Nellie and John are believed to be buried at Holt Cemetery, Baldwin.

Rachel and Alfred moved to a farm, built a log house and Rachel taught Alfred to farm. Their eight children were: Arminta B. (December 26, 1869) married Robert Norris; Claudia H. (October 13, 1871) married Kinney Armstrong; Millage Alfred (March 17, 1873) married Mary Thomason; Wiley Oscar (April 15, 1875) married Edna Josephine Rude; Rena Laurettte (December 4, 1878) married first Chas. Wiley or "Uncle Wiley", as he was known around town and his Model T truck were a familiar sight in the 1940s. Prior to then, he conducted his light hauling business with a wagon and horse named "Dick".

Wiley wasn't sold on "progress". He wasn't happy when Edna wanted to buy a house on So. School St. and when she decided to have it "electrified", he went to live with his sister, Claudia. Edna paid for the new "conveniences" by taking in washing and ironing.

The separation however, was short, they celebrated their Golden Anniversary in 1950. Wiley died August 21, 1961 and Edna, March 29, 1967. Both are buried at Evergreen Cemetery along with Edna's Dad and Grandmother, Ruth Phillips Rude.

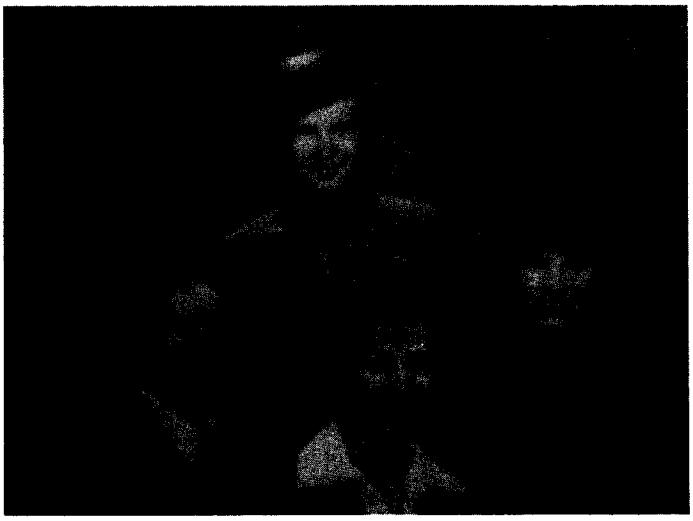
Carl W. Holt

On a frigid New Year's morning of 1970, the Holt family left Tulsa, Oklahoma bound for Springdale, Arkansas. Industrial Uniform and Towel had transferred Carl Holt to this small city of 16,459. The highways were iced over so the moving van would not travel that day. The Holt family set out anyway. Carl had Carl Jr., the older son, in the car with him, and Bonnie Holt and Russell followed with the family pets: a large German Shepherd dog and mother cat with her three kittens. The cats were in a box and the kittens kept getting out; Russell kept putting them back in. The dog was bored with the whole thing.



Carl and Bonnie Holt and sons, Carl Jr. in center and Russell on right in 1970.

The Holt family was not sure what to think of this icy wonderland. It seems it was one of the worst winters in years. The trees looked as though they were made of crystal. As spring came around, the entire Holt family fell in love with Washington County. The dogwoods were in bloom and the streams of clear running water were enough to make anyone want to stay.

As Springdale grew, Industrial Uniform and Towel grew also - as did the Holt family. Carl Jr. and Russell graduated from Springdale High School and a year later married their high school sweethearts. Carl Jr. was married to Connie Lovett on November 15, 1975 and Russell to Valerie Hoag on May 6, 1978. Carl Jr. has a son, Carl Holt III born August 4, 1978 and a daughter, Christen Holt, July 16, 1981. Russell has two sons, Nicholas Holt, born May 12, 1981 and Benjamin Holt, July 31, 1983. The children were all born in Washington County and are attending the Springdale Schools.

In 1984, Cintas, the second largest uniform company in the United States, acquired Industrial Uniform and Towel. Carl Holt, the manager, and Carl Jr. and Russell Holt all work for Cintas. They are helping it grow with the area, while enjoying the many recreational, educational and cultural attractions of Washington County.

John Holt

The John and Elizabeth Pogue Holt family was an important and true pioneer family in Washington County near the north Lincoln area in 1829. This family is not found in the 1830 or 1840 census records. The area was later known as Beaty Mountain, two to four miles north of Lincoln, Arkansas.

The Holt family Bible was found after the Holt Family History was printed, and the 1850 census records gives us more information as do the probate court records.

Each of John and Elizabeth's children were hard workers and left a history of community builders behind them. All of them were interested in the fruit industry. Earl Holt, one of the sons, started the first commercial fruit nursery about 1849.

Descendants of the John Holt family later were part of the town of Lincoln when it was established in 1884-1885.

The Holt's are all buried in the Beaty Cemetery, 4 miles north of Lincoln, Arkansas.

This author is a descendant of Earl and Angeline Collins Holt and of Emily Holt Beaty (Alexander).

Nicholas B. Horn

Horn is a very old name in Virginia. Tradition has a Horn in the Jamestown Colony in early days, quite certain coming over from England. We are more concerned with the ones in Washington County, Arkansas and how they came to be there.

In the mid-1700s, living in Goochland County, Virginia lived John and Sarah Perkins Horn. We think our progenitor, Jesse Horn was their son and M. Susan Spencer in Goochland County. They had a son, Pleasant, and two daughters, then Susan Horn died. Jesse Horn moved on to the border of North Carolina and there he married a widow, Nancy Langley on June 13, 1797. Nancy was the daughter of John Langley of South Carolina. Children of Jesse and Nancy (Langley) Horn all born in North Carolina were: Nicholas, born November 8, 1798, married Nancy Donahue, John B. 1801, Jesse Jr., born 1805 married Jane Betcher, William, born 1810.

Shortly after the birth of the last son, the Jesse Horn family moved to southwest Virginia in Russell County where old Jesse died September 1820. His wife, Nancy lived many more years until June 14, 1855 at age 85 years. She had been living with son, Jesse Jr.

Nicholas Horn married Nancy Donahue on September 18, 1823 in Russell County, Virginia. They were parents of fourteen children, all born in the part of Russell County that later became Wise County, near Colburn, near their farm in the Horn Cemetery where many of them are buried. Children: Sally Horn, born 1824, married Jim Elam; Jesse Horn, born 1825, never married; Mary Horn, born 1826, married William Hill; John Horn M. D., born 1827, married Virginia Beverly, Samuel Horn, born 1828, married Elizabeth Robinette; William Horn, born 1829, married Margaret Hall; Charles Wesley Horn, born 1831; Henry Horn, born 1832; Stephan Horn, born 1833, married Lucinda Bond; Nancy Horn, born 1834, married Martin Fugate; Jane Horn, born 1836, married Berry Ramey; Eliza Horn, born 1838, married Shordrick Gruar; Nicholas Johnson Horn, born 1839, married Virginia Fugate; and Thomas Harmon Horn, born 1842, married Sarah Elizabeth Fugate. Three Horn siblings married three Fugate siblings.

One of the couples remained in Virginia, one came to southwest Kansas and settled, and our ancestor which was Thomas Harmon and Elizabeth (Fugate) Horn came to Washington County, Arkansas.

Six of the Horn sons served in the army of Virginia in the war between the states, including the young Thomas, who served in some units known as "Wise County Yankee Catchers" as his brother Nicholas.

As in most areas of the south, Southwest Virginia was left in dire circumstances with troops from both north and south "living from the land". Many residents moved on, looking for "greener pastures". Among those, were Benjamin Seymour and Elizabeth (Godsey) Fugate and members of the family. These children came along in the wagon train: Dicy Fugate married Daniel Lawson, Margaret Fugate married Bartee, Martin Fugate married Nancy Horn and Sarah Elizabeth Fugate married Thomas H. Horn.

Remaining in southwest Virginia was Virginia Fugate who married Nicholas Horn Jr.

These families started the western trek in early September 1871, bringing all they could load in wagons, also cows to be milked for small children. They came to St. Louis, Missouri where they crossed the Mississippi River on a ferry. From there, they made their way to Sedalia, Missouri where they boarded on a train, MKT, known as the Katy and rode to Oswego, Kansas. There, they settled near what became Bartlett. Family tradition says Benjamin S. Fugate was the moneyed man of those that came west, although much of the money he brought was in Confederate currency. When he died in Labette County, Kansas in 1878, he left land and money to the children. His wife had preceded him in death by a few months. They are buried near Bartlett.

Sarah Elizabeth (Fugate) Horn had an uncle, William Fugate, living in Washington County, Arkansas east of Fayetteville. In 1874 William Fugate wrote to a brother in Virginia saying he had received a letter from "Horn" and that the family was coming to Washington County. They made the trip in about 1876. Rodham Chestnut Horner Rodham Chestnut Horner (1854-1937) came to Arkansas from Bull's Gap, Tennessee, as an adventurous young man, serving as an United States' Deputy Marshall around the Dardanelle and Little Rock area. Later he became acquainted with R. A. Scott (1819-1886) who had sold his property in Little Rock and bought a large farm near Sulfur Springs, Arkansas. He drove a team, helping Scotts move to the new area. He stayed on and worked for Mr. Scott until he died. Then his wife, Eliza Hicks Scott, put R. C. in charge of the farm.

Rodham C. and Lizzie Scott Horner. Hilah, Hubert, Fred and Hampton.

On August 19, 1885, R. C. married the daughter, Lizzie Scott (1866-1906). She seemed a remarkable woman to her grandchildren as she carded and spun wool from their sheep. Her spinning wheel was handmade and rigged to use left-handed. It disappeared on the day of her funeral. She wove a blanket for each of her children (I have a piece of one). She also made each child a special quilt with beautiful artistic work and colors.

Grandpa Horner (R. C.) was a talker! He told such scary tales at night as the family sat around the fireplace that the grandchildren were often afraid to go to bed. Men he hired to help on the farm, bragged about taking "old man Horner" out of half a day's work.

Their children were Robert Hampton (1886-deceased) who married Minnie Bell Harris; Hilah May (1888-1973) who married Samuel C. Divelbiss; James Freddie (1889-deceased) who married Cliffie Literall; Hubert Allen (Bill) (1894-deceased) who married Ollie Swicegood; Isaac Lester (1903-deceased) who married Faye Winans; and Dora (1901) and Ruth (1902) who both died in infancy.

They sold the farm and moved to Fayetteville, where they owned a boarding house and general store. Later they moved to Checotah, Oklahoma, hoping a change of climate would help Lizzie's failing health. After a short time, returned to Arkansas and bought the "Old Boone Place", also known as the "Old Brick House." Lizzie passed away from tuberculosis, which was a common disease at that time. (She was allowed to have her window open the width of a spool of thread.)

Later R. C. married Sarah (Sallie) Yates Phillips. "Grandma" Sallie as we knew her, had an unusual and beautiful flower garden in a corner of the yard. If we were very good, we were given a tour. One of the flowers I remember was a green rose.

This homesite is now the home of Jim and Rose King. The bricks of the original house were hand made by slaves. My dad, Sam Divelbiss, said he could remember the slave cabins along the branch. Clay was taken from the branch or nearby to make the bricks. How they were baked I do not know. The floor joists were made of trimmed tree trunks. Although the house stood for many years, when it was torn down, the bricks disintegrated so badly that very few could be used in rebuilding.

Of historical interest, the house was said to have been built by James Boone, cousin of Daniel Boone. The plat book in the office of the Clerk of the County Court for Washington County, Arkansas, shows that this farm, among other lands, was purchased from the United States of America on the 22nd day of April, 1836.

After his wife Sallie died, R. C. lived about with his children, spending time living in their homes. He passed away in 1937 at his daughter Hilah's home near Checotah, Oklahoma. He is buried with other relatives in the Mount Salem Cemetery, Sulfur Springs, Arkansas.

Harvey M. Hudgins

Harvey Masburn Hudgins was born in 1852 in Houchton, Jackson County, Georgia, the seventh of ten children of Holder Hightower, Sr. and Tremilza Caroline Albright Hudgins. The other children were Joseph Gregory, Jane, Martha Ann, Tremilza Caroline, Bevery (male), Emma, Holder, Jr., Jackson Wharton and Harrison. In 1872, the parents with eight of the children came to Dallas, south of Mena.

Joseph Gregory married Cynthia E. Cecil and had five children; Myrtle, Orin, Nemmy, Anna and Jo. Anna's grandson, Greg Spencer, lives in Fayetteville. Jane married John Randolph, Martha Ann married James Cooper, Tremilza married Hillery Randolph, Emma married Rufus Beane, Holder married Ella Blanche Petty, and Jack married Ida Philomena Dengler.

Harvey owned and operated a hotel in Hot Springs when he and Nora Blakely married in 1883. The first child, Elizabeth May "Bess" was born in 1884. There followed: Jay Guy, 1886; Izetta Dean, 1888; and Harvey Zeno Ross in 1891. Adeline, (see Adeline Blakeley story - this book) the former slave, who had raised Nora, had come to raise Nora's children.

After a devastating fire destroyed the hotel in 1895, the family moved to Fayetteville into the Blakeley homeplace on Rock Street. Harvey operated the Opera House and had all the billboards in town.

September, 1895, "Baby Dean" died of pneumonia. Another son, Jackson Ward Pace, was born in 1897, but lived less than a year. In 1900 were born the twins, Harry King Wade and Helen Masburn, in the same house where their mother was born.

In 1908, when the Baptist Church was erected on the corner of College and Dickson, Adeline made hominy and the twins sold it to help pay for the stained glass windows. "Bess" was the first Baptist girl to be married in the new church when she wed John Middleton Clayton, Jr., the nephew of Powell Clayton, Arkansas "Reconstruction" Governor. John's father had served on the first Board of Trustees of the University of Arkansas from 1872 to 1874. In 1888, while running for Congress, Clayton was assassinated. John then went to live with his Uncle Powell at the Crescent Hotel in Eureka Springs until he came to University of Arkansas, where he was a charter member of Kappa Sigma.

That same year, Harvey constructed the buildings at 11-21 North Block Street. He moved a residence from the site to the lot on the corner of Rock and Block. They moved into the new house, which was owned by the family until Adeline's death in 1945.

Guy graduated from the University of Arkansas at 17, and then went to Yale. After service during World War I, he followed Bess and John to California. There, he was a prominent educator in the San Diego area until his death in 1932.

Nora died in 1917, the night the twins graduated from Fayetteville High School. Disgruntled that he was rebuffed for army enlistment, Wade took off for California, where he did well in business. He died in 1942 in Fayetteville.

Meanwhile, Helen entered the University of Arkansas, majoring in English and working in the library. Her part-time job became her vocation, and she worked in the University of Arkansas Library after graduation, until she married in 1928.

Harvey saw a long time dream come true when he made a trip around the world in 1926, when he was almost 80 years old. Another dream was realized in 1930 when Helen and her husband, C. B. Wiggans presented him with his first and only grandchild, Elizabeth Ann.

Harvey died in his bed in the house on Rock Street in 1934. Adeline continued to live in the house in which Harvey had turned the top floor into apartments. She managed the apartments and took care of the house. She helped care for Ann, as she had four other generations of children in the family.

Even in that day of segregation, Adeline had a myriad of friends, most of them white. When she died in 1945, the following long-time friends were pallbearers: Frank Lewis, Leland Bryan, Frank Suttle, Jim Vaughn, Ralph Dowell, Jack Phillips, Jim Parks, and Ted Wylie. She was buried in the Blakeley-Hudgins plot in Evergreen Cemetery.

After living in Los Angeles for over forty years where John Clayton was partner in a law firm, Bess and John came back to Fayetteville in 1952. John died in June, and Bess died a little over a year later. Ross died in 1960. At this writing, Helen Hudgins Wiggans is the only living member of the Hudgins family.

Bobby Loyd Hudler

Bobby Loyd Hudler, born April 6, 1922, at Wylie, Texas, married Lillie Mary of Dallas June 21, 1952. They lived in Dallas and had three children: James, October 14, 1954; Judith Elene, November 8, 1955; and Linda Gaye, December 6, 1958. Visits to Bob's sister and brother-in-law, Ruby and Bert Brown, who lived on Round Mountain (Maguire Mountain) in Washington County, produced the desire to buy some land and move to Arkansas. The family bought 20 acres three miles north of Elkins and proceeded to build a home which they moved into in June 1965. Up to the year before they moved there was a one-room, one-teacher school on Round Mountain but it closed; so the children went to Fayetteville public schools.

The 20 acres included the only preserved portion of an old rock road going to the old canning factory on Round Mountain. The road was built by Bill Duncan around 1918 using a team of oxen to move huge stones into place. A portion of the property behind the house bordering a creek was known in long-ago days as "ghost hollow." The story was told by Cener Robins, a neighbor, that old-timers claimed to see an old grey-bearded man sitting on a log by the creek. On trying to approach him, however, he always disappeared. This area was a Union campground during the Civil War and James once found a Union bayonet leaning against a tree not too far from the house. An additional 40 acres of adjoining land was purchased with 20 acres of this later being deeded to James. Bob and Lillie moved to a new house in 1978 located on this 40 acres, selling the original house and 12 acres to Lillie's nephew and wife, Owen and Susan Raysor.

Bob worked for Montgomery Wards as an appliance salesman, retiring in 1980. Lillie has worked as secretary in the laboratory at the V. A. Medical Center in Fayetteville for 15 years. Lillie, James and Judy were charter members of the First Baptist Church of Elkins which started as a mission from Ridgeview Baptist Church in Fayetteville.

James graduated from the University of Arkansas with a B. S. degree in geology, and also received a Gemologist diploma from the Gemological Institute of America. He was employed for 1 1/2 years by Underwood's Jewelers and is currently employed by the U. S. Postal Service in Fayetteville. He also operates a part-time jewelry and gem cutting business out of his home. James married Twylia Gwen Tuttle of Fayetteville July 22, 1977. They have two children: Amanda Grace, born Janurary 4, 1982, and Hanna Marie, born May 19, 1985. In December 1978 James began cutting trees for logs to build a large log home on his property. The house incorporates passive-solar heating along with a central fireplace- furnace and was totally designed and built by James with help from his father. The family moved into their home in July 1984, with some finishing work yet to be done. They are members of Grace Baptist Church, Fayetteville.

Judy married Larry Eugene Wolfe from Rogers, Arkansas January 17, 1976, and lived in Fayetteville while attending the University of Arkansas. She studied photography and puts her skills to use at weddings, taking school pictures and portraits. Larry is an ordained Baptist minister and they are members of Mission Boulevard Baptist Church, Fayetteville. They have two children: Matthew Arron, born August 4, 1978, and Saralin Daniele, born October 24, 1980, and live in Fayetteville.

Linda married David Brian Martin July 24, 1976. Brian was in the Navy and they spent a year in Guam and a year in San Diego, California before moving back to Fayetteville. Linda finished school in Guam, graduating from Guam High School. They had two children: Jennifer, August 1, 1980, and Kelly Rene, March 5, 1982. Linda and Brian were divorced in 1984 and she now lives in Rogers, Arkansas with the children.

James Roger Huff

James Roger Huff was born May 23, 1956 in Butler, Missouri (Bates County). He is the son of James D. and Zada F. (Morrow) Huff. His parents were married October 10, 1954 at Poplar Bluff, Missouri where his mother was a school teacher and his father worked as a florist. The family moved to Benton County, Arkansas after living a short time in both Colorado and Tennessee. They settled near Siloam Springs where Roger grew up. Roger attended Ozark Elementary School and graduated in 1975 from Ozark Academy of Gentry, Arkansas. Two years later he returned to Ozark Academy as assistant Dean of Men for a year. In 1976 Roger had attended John Brown University majoring a Social Studies Education but after changing his interests he received licensure as a Licensed Practical Nurse from Northwest Vocational Technical School in 1984. Since graduation Roger has served on the Nursing Advisory board for the school he attended and was named chairman of the board in 1987. In 1982 Roger became reacquainted with a friend of the family, Miss Janet L. Westcott. They became engaged and after a few short months they were married on October 17, 1982 at the Gentry Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Janet Lynn (Westcott) Huff was born July 10, 1957 in Lancaster, California. She is the daughter of Harold S. and Marlene N. (Furman) Westcott. The family had moved to California one year before Janet was born from Niagara Falls, New York where her parents were raised. This move was due to a company transfer for her father who was working for Great Lakes Carbon Company at the time. They spent 13 years in Rosamond, California and their family grew from Carl Richard Westcott born March 26, 1956 and Janet Lynn; to include Lee Daniel born October 4, 1961 and Paul David born March 8, 1963. In 1970 the Westcott's moved to Benton County, Arkansas and settled near Gravette. They purchased a quaint little two story house, later found to origionally have been a two room train Depot on the Arkansas-Oklahoma Railroad line. The property of 28 acres was complete with an old abandoned well in the front yard which was used for the railroad and a ridge of land along the road frontage which had been the railroad bed. Janet attended Gravette High School for two years then transferred to Harbert Hills Academy, a Seventh-Day Adventist boarding school, where she graduated in 1975. Then after attending Southwestern Union College of Keene, Texas; Janet was licensed as a Registered Nurse in 1977. Janet was employed at Huguley Memorial Hospital in Fort Worth, Texas for several years, those years being highlighted by a year she spent in Tokyo, Japan (1978-1979) working in the nursery of Tokyo Sanitarium Hospital and teaching English.

Roger and Janet Huff lived in Siloam Springs, Arkansas; Rogers, Arkansas; and then settled in Washington County in Springdale, Arkansas in 1985. Their daughter, Audra Lynn Huff, was born at Springdale Memorial Hospital on June 26, 1985. Roger has for several years had an interesting hobby of genealogical and local history research. He has served as administrative secretary and editor of the Pioneer for the Benton County Historical Society for nine years, President of the Northwest Arkansas Genealogical Society for one year, and as a member of the board of directors of the Siloam Springs Museum Society for three years. Roger says that with all the history around this area he will never lack for something to occupy his time after he retires. Janet has a hobby of painting with oils. She say she has always been interested in art but has only recently had the opportunity to try out her talents. She has won ribbons at the Washington County Fair and was chosen runner-up for a painting she submitted in the contest for the cover of this volume. The Huff family plan to stay in Washington County and raise their daughter here. They say that their favorite part of living in this area is the beautiful fall colors of the ozarks.

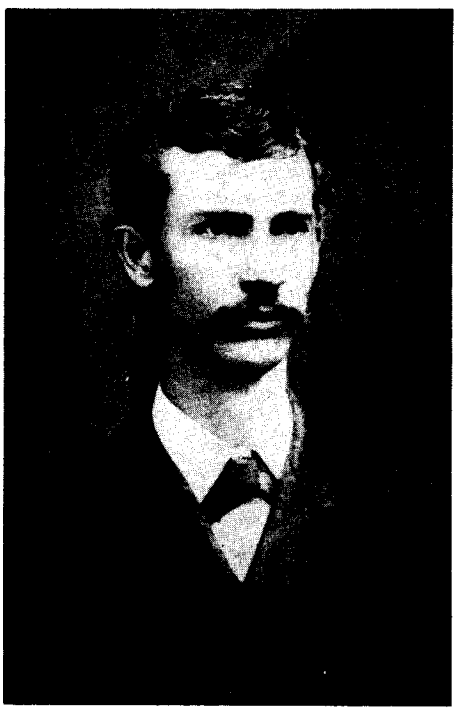
Thomas Jefferson Hughes

Thomas Jefferson Hughes was born in Texas County, Missouri on April 18, 1856. He married in Washington County, Arkansas, Annie Eliza Pumphrey (1867-1959) on June 12, 1886. They had three children who lived, but T. J. died unexpectedly on February 16, 1899. Annie was born September 1, 1867 in Grant County, Arkansas, the daughter of Francis Marion (1838-1877) and Emily Elizabeth (Tatum) Pumphrey (1841-1940). Their children were Ona Velma (1888-1977) who married Harley Whelchel in Washington County on September 6, 1908; Nina Ann born 1890 who married John Wilkins Shannon on December 8, 1912 at Evansville; and Charles Francis Hughes (1896-1972) who married Carnie Garrison (1899-1980) at Fort Smith on August 13, 1918.



Thomas Jefferson Hughes, born April 18, 1856, Texas County, Missouri died February 16, 1899 in Evansville, Washington County, Arkansas. Son of Elkanah and Pelina (Pauline) (Ellis) Hughes.

After T. J. Hughes' father, Elkanah died on May 30, 1864, a POW at Rock Island, Illinois and his mother, Pauline (Ellis) had died sometime before 1870, he, along with his brothers, Benjamin F. and Samuel Fletcher, went to live with his grandparents, Samuel Hughes and his wife. His sister, Mary Ann, lived with a Williams family and his sister, Nancy J., lived with a family by the name of Johnson. Another brother, Charles H. died at Alton, Illinois, a POW in 1862. The grandmother was dead and Samuel had remarried. The step-grandmother was not very good to the children which resulted in Thomas J. leaving home at the age of 14. A marriage record, September 11, 1842 in Shelby County, Illinois, showing Elkana to Elizabeth Young, tells us T. J.'s father was twice married, for he married Pelina (Pauline) M. Ellis in Moultrie County, Illinois on January 19, 1848. Charles was born in Illinois about 1844 so he was a half-brother to the other children.

The great grandparents of T. J. Hughes were Abner (1773-1839) and Emilie "Millie" (Wolford) Hughes (1772-1815) of Sullivan County, Tennessee. Abner was married twice, having eight children by each marriage. They lived on Reedy Creek where he had a powder mill.

It is not known exactly when he came to Washington County, but letters written to his friend, Annie, tell us T. J. was a traveling photographer. He later had the Sunbeam Gallery at Evansville along with a Mr. Beaty. A name written on an old photograph - Wild Bill Beaty. A stamp on a piece of paper with a picture - Beaty and Hughes, Photography. Nina was only eight and a half years old when her father died but she thinks that Mr. Howerton (Father of Zoe Howerton, who married Thomas Jefferson Shannon) and T. J. Hughes worked together at Evansville. A stamp on an old photograph bears the name of Mr. Howerton, Photography, Fayetteville. I have one of T. J.'s little china dishes in which he mixed his paints and a piece of one of his paintbrushes - only the wooden handle remains, the brush having deteriorated long ago.

T. J. Hughes wore a mustache and his daughter, Ona told of a time when he singed it so badly that he had to shave it off. Ona was so accustomed to his mustache that she was ashamed of him without it.

T. J., at the time of his death, had a drug and grocery store in Evansville. His widow, Annie, later married his brother, Benjamin F., but he was not good to her so that marriage did not last long. In 1909, Annie married L. D. Bellamy who had first married Lula Shannon, daughter of Thomas Jefferson Shannon.

Annie's mother thought that Benjamin F. was trying to poison her and it was thought by some that he had poisoned his brother. T. J. had entrusted money to his brother to pay obligations in Fort Smith in connection with his store but Benjamin F. had spent it. This was not known until some time later when creditors came to collect the money. Poor Annie was much distressed because she was left with three young children to support and debts that were supposed to have been paid by her then brother-in-law. How she came to marry Benjamin F. no one could understand. Benjamin F. had several children by his first wife, Martha Lawrence.

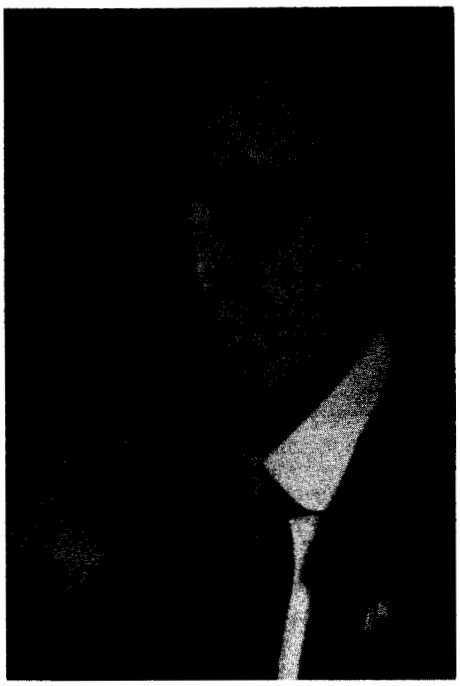
Hiram Lee Hunnicutt

Hiram Lee Hunnicutt and Addie Lovett Moore were married March 21, 1916, Calvert, Robertson County, Texas. Hiram was a veteran of the Spanish American War, serving in the First Texas Volunteers. He was born September 21, 1880, Marlin, Falls County, Texas. Addie Moore was born in Waco, Texas, February 27, 1893. They had one child, Addie Lee, who was born in Calvert, Texas, July 4, 1917.

Hiram Hunnicutt worked for the INGN Railroad in Calvert, and Louis Moore, the father of Addie, worked for the H and TC Railroad. They decided to quit railroading and buy a farm in Crawford County, Arkansas, on which was located Shepherd Springs. The two families moved there in 1919, coming by train to Mountainburg and by wagon to the farm. Miss Minnie Moore, a maiden daughter also moved with them. They raised two crops of cotton along the fertile banks of Big Frog Bayou. In the spring of 1921, Louis Moore died, and was buried in Becky Wright Cemetery, later moved to Highway 71 and now called Vaught Cemetery. Lake Shepherd Springs covers the site of the original cemetery and most of the farm purchased by Hiram Hunnicutt.

After the death of Louis Moore, his widow returned to Calvert, Texas and Hiram and his family moved to Fayetteville, where he became cashier at the Frisco Depot. They lived on West Dickson, then unpaved and with no street lights. He continued to work for the Frisco, and served as agent at Durham, on the St. Paul Branch, as well as a Proctor, Welling and Christie, Oklahoma, on the OC and C Branch, which ran from Fayetteville to Okmulgee, Oklahoma. He served as third trick operator at Fayette Junction several years.



Hiram L. Hunnicutt candidate for State Representative about 1928.

While he was at Durham, his wife was teaching at Mount Zion School between Fayetteville and Farmington. Addie Lee, then five, went back to Durham to spend a week. They slept in the Negro Waiting Room, used by all of the agents for that purpose. He took his meals with "Granny" Meeker. Addie Lee contracted pneumonia, and Dr. Swift, from Elkins, had to ride the train up in the morning and back in the evening to take care of her. While waiting for the train to return, he "held sick call" in the back of Moore's store. Addie Lee's bed was moved from the waiting room, through the big door, and into the office, because in those days it was thought fatal to move a pneumonia patient from the place where the patient "came down". Hiram then became nurse, as well as agent, and performed both duties with equal devotion.

Addie Hunnicutt taught in rural schools for over forty years, taking time out to obtain her degree from the University of Arkansas in 1932, the year her daughter was a junior at Fayetteville High School. Among the schools where she taught were: Miller's Chapel, Signal, Mount Zion, Bethel Grove, Evergreen, Sonora, Brentwood, Wesley, Summers, and Mansfield. While Hiram was depot agent at Stilwell, after WWII, she taught at Chalk Bluff, Ewing Chapel and Baron - all in Adair County, Oklahoma.

In 1927, they bought a farm just west of Farmington where they moved in 1932. They continued to live there until his death in 1970, and her death in 1974. They are buried in the National Cemetery in Fayetteville.

Their daughter, Addie Lee, married Roy Lister, December 29, 1939. She was teaching at Winslow and he was mess sergeant at Devil's Den CCC Camp. He later graduated from the St. Louis College of Pharmacy and practiced pharmacy until his retirement in 1984. They have one son, Terrill Lee Lister who is an attorney in St. Louis, Missouri, where both of these families now reside. Terrill Lee has one daughter, Sarah, who was born October 13, 1982.

Addie Lovett Hunnicutt teacher Sonora, Washington County, about 1950.

Hiram Hunnicutt will be remembered for his unwavering faith, his devotion to his family, his patriotism, and his ability to speak for good causes. His wife, Addie, will be remembered by the many students she taught, as well as the entire communities, because of the exceptional qualities she brought to the teaching profession. She was probably the teacher who inspired the remark - "The influence of a good teacher extends all the way to Eternity". They were dedicated, devoted citizens of Washington County for over fifty years.

Dudley Gilbert Hunt

In 1927 my grandparents, Julia Gertrude Wygant Hunt and Joseph Gilbert Hunt, moved to Springdale from Bartlesville, Oklahoma as Grandpa had a heart condition which they felt would benefit from the good clean air of Arkansas. Three miles east of Springdale in the Hewitt Springs community they bought an eight-acre farm with which Grandpa was unable to cope; they moved into Springdale to be nearer his doctor. Their youngest son, Joseph Maynard Hunt, was a senior at SHS and played football on the 1927-28 championship team.

When they moved into town, Gertrude and Gib's elder son, my father, Dudley Gilbert Hunt, bought the little farm from his parents and moved our family consisting of himself, my mother Eva Blanche Findley Hunt, my brother Dudley G. Hunt, Jr. and me from Bartlesville.

Grandpa died December 24, 1928. Grandma then lived with us, and with her daughter in Texas, but mostly with another daughter in Oklahoma until her last couple of years when she moved into the Masonic Home at Guthrie, Oklahoma where she died in 1966.

As Daddy was often gone from home, working in the oil fields of Oklahoma, Kansas and southern Arkansas, my mother's father, John Bruce Findley from Kansas, lived with us a lot. Our younger sister, Sara Joyce Hunt, was born on the little farm in 1931. Whereas my brother and I had attended elementary school at Fishback, Joyce entered the first grade at Washington School in Springdale in 1937-38, the same year that Dudley as a senior at SHS. I graduated from SHS in 1940.

Daddy worked for the Veterans Administration in the 1930s when the VA Hospital was built in Fayetteville. As a Navy veteran of WWI, he was active in the American Legion and the VFW. He was also very active in the Masonic Lodge, as his father had been. Sometime in the 1950s Daddy transferred to the VA Hospital in Muskogee, Oklahoma where he worked until his retirement. He and Mother then moved to Safford, Arizona where he died in 1964. Mother moved back to Fayetteville, then to Rogers where she lived until her death in 1979.

My brother served in the Navy during WW II. On one trip aboard a transport bringing veterans of the Pacific Theater back to the U. S., Dudley checked the passenger list and found the name of his classmate (and my brother-in-law) J. T. Ames. Needless to say, that trip turned out to be much more pleasant than either of them had anticipated. Dudley received the CPCU designation and worked in the insurance business until his death in Houston, Texas in 1975. He was married to Marcella Fees of Tulsa; they had five children and ten grandchildren. Their two daughters are teachers. Their eldest son, Dudley G. Hunt III, also a Navy veteran, named his twins for my parents, Eva and Dudley (Gib).

My sister Joyce is divorced from Max "Buddy" Cooper, son of Verna and Ellis Cooper of the Oak Grove community. Max was also an SHS graduate; he served in the Navy during WW II, and then graduated from the University of Arkansas Law School. He was in the FBI, then he worked for an insurance company. His present law practice is in Rogers. Joyce works as a court recorder for a county judge in Bentonville. They had three children, Carol Kalamarides who lives in Anchorage, Alaska; and Dale and Claire Cooper, Rogers residents.

I attended Fayetteville Business College and worked in Tulsa for a year before joining the WAVES. My fiance, Billy Ames, was a Navy pilot, brother Dudley was in the Navy, Daddy had been in the Navy, and Uncle Joe was a Marine; it seemed a natural, patriotic thing to do. Billy was aghast and Mother was somewhat dismayed but Daddy was very proud of me. Interested in "doing our bit" for the war effort and in getting our boys home as soon as possible, we WAVES also raised lots of money on the different War Bond Drives.

At Delta State College in Cleveland, Mississippi I earned a BSE, then an MA from the University of Arkansas, and I taught school in Anchorage, Alaska for 18-1/2 years.

Billy Gene Ames and I were married for 27 years. He was the son of Mary Katherine and Horace O. Ames of Springdale. We produced one son, A. Dudley Ames, who lives in Springdale. His son, Gary Ross Ames, will graduate from SHS this spring, 1988, exactly fifty years after his grandfather and two uncles graduated from SHS. And then Billy and I adopted three children, Leah Kay Wendt also lives in Springdale, Joseph Bruce Ames is in Stuttgart, and Mark Nelson Ames lives in Simi Valley, California. These four wonderful children gave us eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Billy owned a milk processing plant, a milk distribution plant, and a crop dusting company, and he worked as a salesman. Following our divorce in Anchorage, Alaska in 1971, he moved back to Fayetteville where he and Doris Ann Ptak were married. He was killed in an automobile accident in 1979.

G. William Merritt, formerly of Massachusetts but a resident Arkansas since 1939, and I were married in 1972. He also has four children, all Arkansas, and three granddaughters. We came to Springdale last fall for Bill to have knee surgery, and the long recovery period gave him more exposure to southern friendliness than he had previously experienced. The warmer climate and less hectic pace were also appealing. So we moved down permanently in May, and we're delighted to be here. Written by Peggy Bruce Hunt (Ames) Merritt.

Robert Hunton

Robert Hunton homesteaded 180 acres of land in the Wedington area near Norwood in 1836. He had two sons, John and Joe.

When the cry of the gold was heard far and wide in 1849, it was said that Robert's father left to seek his fortune in gold and was never heard from again.

Another story handed down was that during the Civil War there were troops of soldiers camped on the banks of the creek near Robert's home and he was forced to hide out in the cave nearby. In the night, protected by the dark, Robert would do his farm work and plowing. But this soon had to stop as his wife was afraid the noise made by the plow would alert the soldiers.

Robert's son John Abner was born April 28, 1856. John would one day become the son-in-law to Joseph and Melinda England.

Traveling from Tennessee was a large wagon train of families leaving their homes to settle in Arkansas and Missouri. Among these families was Joseph England and his wife, Melinda, and their children. Included in this wagon train movement were Joseph, Edward and Horace England with their families.

Edward settled in the Cincinnati area, while Joseph bought 40 acres from Robert Hunton. This was in the year of 1871, the year their daughter, Mary Armenia, was nine years old.

Joseph England established a brick and lime kiln, producing more than twenty tons of agricultural lime, and did very well for himself.

September 1, 1878, John Abner Hunton and Mary Armenia England married. They built a house on a sloping hill opposite to the site of Robert's home.

John and Mary had nine children. Lulu Lavender, the youngest, was born on May 7, 1894. She married Leonard Dabney Cawthon September 10, 1919.

John Hunton was unable to work the farm for many years and due to ill health was forced to leave his farm and move to the home of his daughter's, Maud and Frank Edison, who were living and farming nearby in Norwood Prairie.

After John's death, Leo Cawthon purchased acreage of the other heirs and moved his family to the farm January 1, 1936. Through the years of selling and buying again, Leo eventually got the original 160 acres first homesteaded by Robert Hunton. Leo and Lulu raised three girls, Mary Jean, Theda and Helen.

Theda married Dale Ezell. When Dale became interested in farming and started looking for a farm to buy, the Cawthons offered him a partnership in their farm. This was in 1949.

Leo and Lulu built a bigger house not far from the house John Hunton built and they moved to it after his death.

This house remains today, but has been added on and remodeled by the Ezells since moving into it in 1949. They raised their two sons, Richard and Michael in this home.

Michael has built a house on the farm for his wife Holly and two children.

Leonard Dabney Cawthon was the son of Tobien Dabney and Etta Virginia (Lenox) Cawthon, born July 14, 1876 in Salem, Missouri. As a little boy, Leo's family moved between Springdale and Fayetteville. Tobien farmed the land where Northwest Arkansas Mall is today and the fields below the mall on the east and west side of highway 471. Leo told his granddaughter that when he lived there the whole area at one time was planted in corn. He guessed there must have been near a hundred or more acres of corn.

Ted Huntsman

Ted E. Huntsman was born in Arkansas County, Arkansas at the home of his grandparents, Shannon A. and Martha E. Kennedy on August 29, 1943. Ted's family lived in several cities in Arkansas. When he was twelve years old, they moved to Bauxite, Arkansas where Ted's father worked for Reynold Metals.

Janet B. Huntsman was born in Bauxite, Arkansas at the Bauxite Hospital on February 11, 1944. Ted and Janet were high school sweethearts.

Ted left Bauxite in the fall of 1961 to attend the University of Arkansas in Fayettevilly. He moved into the newly completed Humphreys Hall.

Janet followed Ted the next year and lived her freshman year in Fulbright Hall.

Janet and Ted were married on May 31, 1963, in the Bauxite Methodist Church. The wedding took place in the one week break between the end of spring semester and the beginning of summer school. They lived at 20 S. Hill, Fayetteville, Arkansas in a wonderful house that had been made into seven apartments. The building was owned by T. Ewing Shelton. He was a generous landlord to a point. If we called and complained about the furniture, lighting or floors, he would always send something over to "cover" the problem.

When Ted graduated from the University of Arkansas in January 1965 with a Business Management degree, he was hired by Campbell Soup Company as a buyer for the Feed Mill operation. He continued at this job for two years except for four months spent in the Army. Ted then went to work for Ralston Purina in Springdale as a buyer trainee. After six months at Ralston, Ted accepted an offer to work as salesman and trader for H. J. Baker and Bro, Inc. in Little Rock.

Janet graduated in June 1965 with an Accounting degree and went to work for Douglas Walker & Co. located in the Fayetteville Building and Loan Building at 201 N. East St. in Fayetteville. When Ted took the job in Little Rock, we left our home of six years in Fayetteville and began a circle that would eventually bring us back to Washington County.

Ted Samuel "Sam" Huntsman was born at St. Vincent's Infirmary in Little Rock, Arkansas on May 16, 1969.

The Huntsmans, Ted, Janet and Sam, moved to Colleyville, Texas in the spring of 1971. Colleyville at that time was a small town northeast of Fort Worth in the area of the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport which was under construction. Ted opened an office for BakerBro of Texas, Inc., a spin-off from H. J. Baker & Bro., Inc. for whom Ted worked in Little Rock.

Wade Andrew Huntsman was born on April 26, 1973, at Harris Hospital in Fort Worth, Texas.

In the spring of 1974, H. J. Baker & Bro, Inc. decided to close the BakerBro of Texas office because of supply problems with Mexican producers. Ted was offered a sales and trader position with H. J. Baker & Bro.'s office in Chicago.

This set the stage for our return to Washington County. We quickly decided we didn't want to move to Chicago. The weather, raising our children in a big city, and the distance from family being our main reasons for rejection. After talking to several companies in the Fort Worth-Dallas area, we started looking elsewhere. We wanted a small city, not far from Central Arkansas, that offered the kind of work Ted was trained in—the feed industry. That place turned out to be Springdale. We weren't recruited by the Chamber of Commerce, but we've been operating our business, Huntsman Trading Co., Inc. in Springdale for twelve years. As it turned out, we don't trade much with the Poultry Industry that drew us to this town. Our main customers are cattle feed producers.

Sam Huntsman graduated from Springdale High School in June, 1987. Wade Huntsman is a ninth grader at Central High Junior High. The entire family is active in the First United Methodist Church. Janet is also a member of Arkansas D Chapter of National T. T. T. Society. We all love music—Sam and Wade are singers. Wade plays trombone. Sam is the family actor, writer and computer genius. Ted and Sam are the readers. Wade plays soccer and basketball. Janet is the organizer and taxi driver.

Ella Blanche Hudgins Hurst

"Ella B." - "Miss Ella" - "Cousin Ella" - "Honey Hurst" - those were some of the names for my mother.

Ella Blanche Hudgins Hurst and baby daughter Mary Elizabeth in 1910.

This article by Fred Starr appeared in the Northwest Arkansas Times on October 31, 1962:

"Every fall, while some red and gold are left in the leaves, and the University of Arkansas. . .celebrates Homecoming with a parade of brightly colored floats, rich colored bands, led by gorgeous high stepping majorettes, and convertibles loaded with dignitaries, there is one lone figure who attracts more attention than even the Homecoming Queen.

"Mrs. Ella B. Hurst does not ride on a specially built float. She has no escort. She is not dressed in silk and satin. Her mode of transportation is a horse. Her throne is a $10 side saddle, which she bought at an auction sale. Her costume is a riding habit.

"This horsewoman has been riding in the University Homecoming parade for the last 13 years. She has ridden a horse since childhood and has never ridden astride. . .

"Miss Ella is 76. . .Every year friends urge her not to ride in the parade. They fear her horse might become frightened at the crowd, bolt and cripple or even kill her. To all this, Miss Ella says, "Fiddlesticks!" So what? I can't think of a better way to go.

Ella B. Hurst in Homecoming Parade in 1949.

At least I would die with my boots on. Isn't that what we all want to do?

"This woman has led a life as fraught with excitement as is her side saddle horseback riding. She was a member of the Arkansas legislature for three sessions. Three times she was elected president of the Arkansas Women's Democratic Club. She was among the delegation from Arkansas at the nomination of President Kennedy, and was especially invited to the President's inauguration.

"Mrs. Hurst is a native of Arkansas; born and reared at Dallas - near Mena. She came to the University when it had a preparatory high school. She has been connected with the University much of the time since then. For the past 20 years she has helped in the Housing Bureau. . .

"Between parades Miss Ella looks after her eight University boys in her modest home near the campus".

She enjoyed life. "Live a day at a time" was what she said—and she did. People loved having her around. People who met her only once would comment years later on how much they enjoyed her.

When I left the house she'd say, "have fun". She always had a funny story, a cheerful word, a thoughtful gift. The worst thing she ever said about anyone was, "If I can't say anything nice about someone, I won't say anything. And I can't say anything about him." But she could nearly always find something nice to say. And all people were a little nicer around her. She was a positive influence on many people.

One of my cousins told me that when her mother died at the age of 87, one of her prized possessions was the "store-bought" high school graduation dress my mother, her sister-in-law, bought for her. She said all her in-laws loved her.

Mother said, "There's always a way to get something done." She helped a couple get married during the war by getting a judge, on a weekend, to waive the waiting period for a marriage license. To do something for someone that was "impossible" was a challenge to her. And she loved to do something just a little bit different.

Ella was born on June 17, 1885 and grew up on a plantation in the southern part of the state. Her mother, Ella Petty Hudgins, died when she was born. Her father, Holder Hightower Hudgins, ran the only grocery store between Hot Springs and Fort Smith at Old Dallas. He was one of four Hugdins brothers who came to Arkansas from Georgia.

Her father taught her to ride a horse and do many other things. But ladies just didn't ride "stride" in those days - so Mother rode side saddle. She was sent to a Catholic school when she was young, and tells of being punished for shinnying up to look at the nuns without their head covering on.

In 1901 her father sent her and her brother to Fayetteville to live with her father's brother, the brother of Helen Hudgins Wiggans. So Ella lived there with her aunt and uncle, Nora and Harvey Hudgins and Adeline Blakeley, the former slave who helped raise the Hudgins family. Ella attended the University preparatory school. She said, "There were only two buildings on the campus when I came to Fayetteville - Old Main and the Psychology Building. We walked three times a day from a block south of the Square to the University."

Mother was 15 when her cousin, Helen Huggins (who later married C. B. Wiggans) was born. To Mother, Helen was always "Baby". Helen said she thought Mother was her sister, until she finally realized that there was a reason she called her by what she thought was just her name, "Cousin Ella".

Mother was raised as one of the Hudgins girls and attended the prep school and the University. Mr. Hudgins owned the Opera House, and all of his "girls" would attend free.

In school, she met Abner Hurst. It created quite a stir when, in 1905, Ella and Abner announced they had been secretly married for a year. Mother claimed they never lived together during that time. She also said my dad threatened to go to South America if she didn't marry him. News of their belatedly announced marriage was featured on the front page of the Little Rock paper, the Arkansas Democrat, with pictures and a long story, for Abner Hurst had been elected to the Arkansas Legislature in 1905. Ella was enrolling clerk during the six years he served in the legislature. After studying with an attorney, Ab, who had majored in mathematics in college, became an attorney. He was City Attorney and later a very successful trial attorney in town. He also served in the Legislature again in 1909 and 1923.

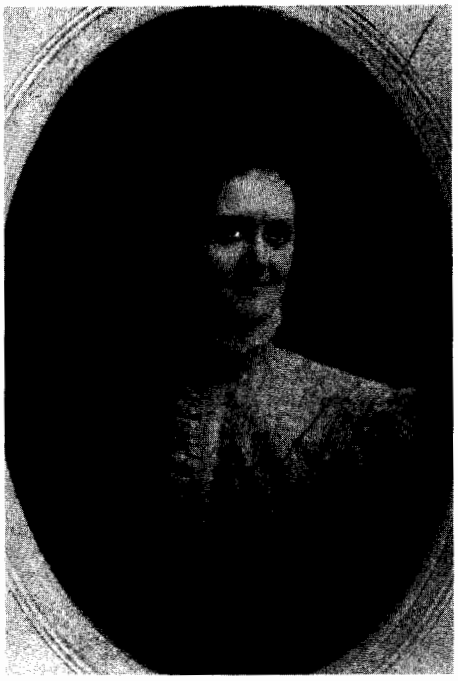
Mother's first of three girls, Mary Elizabeth, was born in 1910. This eagerly awaited event turned out to be a sad one, for Mary Elizabeth was born with the cord wrapped around her neck and she suffered cerebral palsy. She could not walk, talk nor sit alone. She had to be strapped in her wheelchair. But she could nod. And Mother claimed she was very intelligent. Mother and Daddy went everywhere, trying to find something that would help her. Mother was always a very outgoing, sociable person. But for 18 years she was Mary Elizabeth's almost constant companion. Mother loved to play the piano, but Mary Elizabeth did not like it, so she did not play during her lifetime.

When the second daughter, Martha Ella, was born in 1920, she was a normal, active girl - who was given dancing lessons, her own pony, and when she graduated from high school, her own 1937 Dodge, fully paid for. (If you think I felt jealous - I did!).

I was the third girl, George Anna, born in 1928 and my oldest sister died when I was two weeks old. My birth was followed closely by the Depression. Times were hard for attorneys. I adored my father, though. I used to sign my name Geo. A. Hurst to be as much like my father as possible. Mother was 43 and Daddy 45 when I was born, and they knew they were not going to have a boy, which accounts for my masculine name and my nickname of Bill. I got to hunt and fish with my dad and I was encouraged to be more independent than most girls were then - by my mother and by my father.

We lived in one of the oldest houses in Fayetteville when I was growing up, in the Washington Avenue heritage area. The Homecoming parade used to start right in front of our house. Finally, they cut out the other horses, for sanitation reasons, but Mother was allowed to lead the parade well up into her 70s. One year her horse jumped over the hood of a car. She sailed right over with it, and kept on riding.

She could put a bridle on any horse. Horses did what she expected them to do, which was to stand still for her. She never let me ride side saddle, though. Said it was too dangerous. Why did she ride side saddle? She claimed that was the only way a lady was supposed to ride when she grew up. But I know she used to ride bareback, and I can't imagine staying on bareback sideways. I'm sure she did it because it was just a little different.



Ella Blanche Hudgins Hurst in 1905.

She always liked to stand out from the crowd - just enough to get noticed, but not too much. She was, above all, a lady.

In 1934, Ella B. decided to run for the legislature herself. Eight people ran for 3 positions. She received so many votes she did not have to be in a run-off.

In 1935, in the legislature, the Speaker would start off, "Lady Hurst and Gentlemen". Mother and 99 men. She was the sponsor that year of a good election law. She became ambitious and ran for the Senate. At that time, there had never been a woman member of the Senate. She told me that her husband had filed a suit against an important business in town and that he was told that if he didn't withdraw his suit, they would defeat her. He didn't. She lost.

Abner had a whole series of setbacks, professionally and physically, between 1937 and 1941. They had bought land outside of town with the idea of farming it. In 1941 they traded that and the family home on Washington Avenue for a boarding house on Oakland Avenue. There, Mother rented rooms over the next several years, to University students. Eventually the house became the Pi Phi Annex.

Mother decided in 1942 to run again. That was the first year that Bill Fulbright campaigned. He won a seat in Congress. And Mother was back in the House. She was elected without opposition in 1945. She then had a chance to work for the University and was not able to continue as a member of the legislature.

After a series of University jobs, Mother landed in one for which she was ideally suited. She ran the town housing office for the University. She knew the town and the people so well, she could match up the right students with the right landlords. She made many friends of students during those years.

When I got married in 1950, she traded her large house for a smaller house next door to the Pi Phi House. There she rented rooms to boys - boys who didn't smoke or drink - at least not in her presence - for many years. She tooled around town in the little English Ford and later in a Volkswagon Bug that we bought her. She used to say she'd rather lose her house than her car. She loved to go.

And go she did. She went to Hawaii on a luxury cruise on money left to her by her cousin, Bess Hudgins Clayton. She went all over the State on a bus pass. Members of the legislature used to be given bus passes while they were in office. But Mother had been so nice to an elderly gentleman when she worked as a clerk, that his son saw that Mother had her pass the rest of her life. Each Christmas her bus pass would arrive. It enabled her to be a welcome guest all over the State. She could travel on very little money. It is not usual for a woman with limited means to be a delegate to the National Democratic Convention. But Mother managed that, in 1960 and 1964. She knew all the people who made those decisions. She always said that bread cast on the water comes back to you. It did to her, many times. She was never calculating in her friendships or in her giving of herself. But she also was not naive. She knew who made decisions, and she got to know them. But she was no nicer to them than she was to everybody.

It was not until much later in my life that I realized I was jealous of my mother. I loved her. I liked to be around her. I knew she was special - to many people. And I knew I was extra special to her. I recall once telling her that she was a hypocrite because she was nice to everyone. Now, when I look back and see how much pleasure she gave to so many people, I try to be more like her. I try to cultivate the kindness and warmth that were so natural to her. I find myself wearing purple more - her favorite color. And I call one of my closest friends my Mexican Ella B. I am fortunate that I can now enjoy the spirit of my mother in my friend, without the jealousy I used to feel for my mother.

In 1967 Mother was honored as a Distinguished Citizen of Washington County. Helen and C. B. Wiggans, and their daughter Ann Sugg, her husband John, and their four children, helped her celebrate.

When Mother suffered a stroke in 1967, my sister and I brought her to California. My children and my husband had always adored her and they all helped to take care of her. I regret, in our concern for her health, that we did not take her back to her beloved Arkansas, her beloved Washington County, her beloved Fayetteville, and her beloved University. But I know Mother forgave us. She always forgave everybody - and loved them.

When Mother died in 1972 my sister and I went back to Fayetteville for the funeral services in the First Baptist Church. Gladys Sonneman played the organ - as she had for my wedding - and the church was filled, not with sad songs, but with "The Arkansas Traveler" and "Camptown Races". Mother had played the piano by ear. She played the piano for my dancing lessons over the years. So that day I wore a bright dress and listened to the happy songs that Mother used to play. I think she would have liked it.

We gave Mother's three-horned jumping side saddle to the University of Arkansas Museum. I think she would have liked that too. George Anna Tow 1778 Beachwood, Pleasanton, California 90566.

James Ingram

James Ingram was born in Illinois in 1826. His parents are thought to be Pleasant and Celinda Ingram.

During the Civil War, Captain James Ingram raised a company of Cavalry in the eastern part of Benton County, and it served in northwestern Arkansas until October, 1863, when it went south, dismounted, joined and became a part of the Thirty-fourth Arkansas Infantry. After the war he became a circuit minister.

By 1848, he was married to Amanda Graham, born 1828. By Amanda he had William, born 1848, died of malaria in the Civil War; Silas Graham Ingram, born September 5, 1850, called "Sol", Eliza Jane Ingram, born 1853; Miranda "Rindy" Ingram, born 1855.

Reverend James Ingram's wife, Amanda, died sometime after 1855 and by 1856 he was married to Sarah Elizabeth Easley, daughter of William Easley, Sr. and his first wife, Mary. Sarah was born in Tennessee in 1838 and is buried in Dibler Cemetery.

The following children of James and Sarah are: (1) Francis Marion Ingram, born 1857, called Frank, who married first, Nancy Cox. They were parents of three children. Ida Bell, married Claude Columbus Nail; Della, married Lee McGarrah and Salathiel who died while a baby. His second wife was Linda Burch, born to them were: (2) Nancy, born 1859, married the same Jack Autry who had been married to her half - sister, Miranda. Their known children are Ras Autry, born 1880, and Louiza Autry, who married Frank Loyd. (3) Lucinda C. Ingram, born 1860, married Samuel Leak. Sam died in 1880, and she married Ed Smith. (4) Virginia Ingram, born 1867, married John Stanly and they were the parents of Grace Secor, Roy and Etta. Virginia married second, Ed Smith. (5) James Ingram.

Silas Graham Ingram married Mary Docia Easley, daughter of Francis M. Easley. Silas operated saw mills and lost one of his arms in a boiler explosion. Eliza Jane Ingram married James Northan Patton. Miranda Ingram married Frank Earnest; then married German White; then married John Autry.

The following article was published in the Fayetteville Weekly Democrat, September 10, 1870: Foul Murder.

Captain Ingram, a citizen of this country, was most foully murdered on Sunday last, at a meeting house, near his home. He had taken his family to Church, and while going towards the door, a little in advance of his wife and children, a fiend in human shape by the name Stone, shot him in the back, inflicting a mortal wound, but not satisfied, he fired another shot after his victim fell, and then mounted his horse and rode off.

During the late war, Captain Ingram commanded a company of Confederate Partisans, and Stone charged that Ingram killed his father at some time during the war. Whether this is true or not, Stone is not justifiable in committing the act that he did, and we trust he may be caught and pay the penalty for the terrible crime he has commited. Captain Ingram, since the close of the war, had been living as a quiet and peaceable citizen, endeavoring to make support for his helpless family, and to be thus brutally murdered while entering a Church with his wife and little children we think an outrage in humanity, and one that should be condemned by all lovers of law and justice. (The meeting house was Robert's School near Sonora Community.)

Reverend James Ingram now rests in a small area in the fork of two roads. Several others, including a Negro slave, share his resting place. It is located north of Hickory Creek Road in Benton County.

Many of his descendants still live in this area.

William "Billy" Ingram

William "Billy" Ingram was one of eight children, four boys and four girls. His father, old Shadrach Ingram, served faithfully through the War of 1812 against Great Britain. William Ingram was born near Lebanon, Tennessee, March 15, 1815, and remained with his father until he was seventeen.

At this time, Billy traveled to Illinois, near Carrollton, where at eighteen, he became a member of the old school Baptists. There he also met and married Miss Elizabeth Pearson, a Puritan, on March 6, 1833.

Early in September, following their marriage, they started for the territory of Arkansas, arriving at Fayetteville in October and settling near the small village where Billy commenced farming and preaching.

Sometime between 1830 and 1834, Billy Ingram's father, Shadrach, back in Tennessee, became the security of a friend and the result was financial ruin. His small fortune was swept away, leaving his family almost homeless and penniless.

Old Shadrach Ingram must have followed his son, Billy Ingram, to the Arkansas Territory, Washington County sometime in 1836 or 1837.

Arkansas was then a wild and dreary wilderness, and when Billy went out to preach, he could do no better than some of his earliest predecessors did - going without scrip or purse. Wild meat and honey were plentiful, and both proved an acceptable diet in those days.

On the night of November 10, 1833, Reverend Billy Ingram and his wife were four miles south of Fayetteville, sitting with old Uncle Johnnie Miller who was very ill. During their night watch, about 2:00 a. m., the whole heavens were singularly alight by an immense blaze which was found to result from a great meteoric shower. This occasion of the "falling stars" has forever been a matter of historical comment.

John Ingram, one of the seven children of Reverend William and Elizabeth Ingram (four boys, three girls), noted that his father "whose ministry runs back to his eighteenth or nineteenth year, is one whose life has been well spent, like that of Samuel of old, a servant of the most high God." John Ingram continues by saying Reverend Ingram enjoys "the proudest heritage of all mankind, that of knowing his ancestors, for several centuries back, have been prominent in supplying servants and soldiers for the Cross of Christ."

At the death of Reverend Billy Ingram, Sunday night, October 30, 1898, a Fayetteville newspaper included an article entitled, "Death of an Old Citizen" by J. H. Van Hoose. Included in the article Van Hoose noted that Reverend Ingram "was one of the original members of the First Baptist Church organized in Washington County, and at the time of his death was the oldest member of that church..."

In 1848, at the association held on Lee's Creek in Crawford County, Bill Ingram was ordained as a licensed minister of the gospel and was a "co-laborer in the church with those old worthies—Reverends John Holcomb, Thomas M. Brinson, Thomas Dodson and James Mayfield... "

On the first Sunday in October, 1898, Reverend Ingram was attending the Baptist Association held at Wheeler, Washington County and returned home on October 4. He became very ill on October 10 and died twenty days later on the 30th.

The newspaper article continued by saying during those twenty days, Reverend Ingram "often told his family and friends that he never had enjoyed one of their associations as much as the one just closed, saying that there was so much good preaching and good fellowship exhibited among Christians of all denominations that it seemed like heaven begun on earth."

"No one doubted his honesty and integrity. As a neighbor he was kind and obliging, as a friend, true and faithful, as a citizen active in the discharge of every duty."

In politics, he was as honest in his belief as he was in his religious views and never was afraid to speak his honest sentiments. He was proud to be known as a Jackson Democrat.

Reverend Billy Ingram and his wife Elizabeth lived happily together for sixty-one years. His wife preceded him in death some four years.

Reverend William "Billy" Ingram's father and mother are buried in Woolsey Cemetery on Highway 71, south of West Fork, Arkansas. Shadrach Ingram died October 11, 1859. His wife, Mary died September 13, 1857.

David Irwin

David Irwin and Margaret Dickinson were married in Ireland and came to America around 1817. They settled near Greenville, Tennessee. During the war between the States, David's throat was cut by a "bushwhacker." I will call him Dick. David lived long enough to crawl to a neighbor's home where he wrote the name of his assassin on a slate. His young son, Charles Irwin, was determined to kill this "bushwhacker". It was several months before Charles spotted Dick sitting on the porch of the general store near his home. Charles knew he would have to move fast to escape Dick's buddies.

Charles and Mary Irwin, made 1925 at Clyde, Arkansas.

He found their horses, turned them loose, then mounted his horse and rode by the store. As he rode by, he took a shot at Dick. He knew he hit him, but never knew whether he had killed him or not. All he could think of was getting out of Tennessee fast.

Charles had met a young lady, named Mary Carter, to whom he was attracted. He had a good job as a painter in a carriage shop near Greenville so he asked Mary's father to let them marry. Mr. Carter replied, "Mary is only sixteen, and she is going to Greenville to school." Marriage had to wait.

Elam Carter was born in 1805 near Greenville, Tennessee. He married Sarah Smith on February 1, 1836. He and his bride homesteaded a large number of acres of land near Greenville, Tennessee. By 1865 Elam had developed an extensive plantation. He owned a number of slaves and was considered a progressive landowner. He built a nice home, a school, and a church for his family and neighbors. The church had a balcony where the slaves were permitted to sit. He also built a school for his slaves and saw to it that their children attended regularly. Each spring and fall, Elam made a trip to buy food, clothing, seed, and other needed supplies for his family and slaves. Elam and Sarah had nine children, all born on this plantation. Four of these children died before they left Tennessee in 1865.

During the war between the States, the "bushwhackers" were everywhere. They came to the Carter Plantation, stole as much food as they could find, most of their cattle, hogs, and horses, and then rode their horses through the house demolishing most of it.

Elam had outwitted these men by using false floors, doors, and shelves where some of their supplies were always stored. After the "bushwhackers" left, Elam and Sarah gathered their five children, ages nine to 26 years and started south. He knew that any valuables would be stolen if they were attacked so his gold, the family Bible, and all small treasures were concealed underneath a false bottom of their wagon. They traveled by wagon to Rome, Georgia, where they lived for about two years.

Rome, Georgia brought both tragedy and happiness to this family in those years. Sarah Carter, wife of Elam Carter, died. Charles Irwin, the young Irishman who was fleeing for his life from Tennessee, knew his young sweetheart had gone to Rome, Georgia, so he followed her, and on November 14, 1867, he and Mary Carter were married.

Elam Carter had not found the land he wanted to settle on in Georgia, so he moved his family on west to Texas, then to northwest Arkansas. They stopped in the settlement of Dutch Mills, Arkansas, for a year or so. Here Elam met a young lady named Martha, who was willing to become his wife and mother to his two young sons. They moved on to the already settled communities of New Town and Cane Hill, Washington County, Arkansas.

In 1869, Elam Carter homesteaded six hundred acres around New Town. He deeded each of his five children some acreage for their homes.

The new daughter, Bessie, born to Elam and Martha on January 1, 1870, would inherit their home place in New Town.

Mary and Charles Irwin lived on the hill east of New Town. Her father, Elam Carter, deeded on hundred ten acres of this land to Mary Carter Irwin and her heirs on August 6, 1869.

Charles and Mary Irwin had five children. Lola Margaret, James Elam, Annie Bell, Charles Clyde, and a daughter, Henry L., born on this farm.

The little town of New Town, soon to be named Clyde, was growing fast. Charles, being a jovial and very sociable fellow, bought a home across the road from the general store, blacksmith shop, saw mill, and school. They moved off the hill and spent the rest of their lives in this location.

Charles was no farmer, so he picked up his painting trade again. His biggest job was the painting of Old Main on the University of Arkansas campus at Fayetteville.

Charles became interested in politics and, where campaigns were hot, state and county politicians enlisted him as their campaign chairman of Cane Hill precinct. I remember Judge J. Vol Walker and Mrs. Ella B. Hurst of Fayetteville visiting him as late as 1926. Charles was 90 years old then, but still a very staunch Democrat and loved to campaign from the store porch.

Mary Irwin was a very quiet homemaker but always found time to go with Doctors Blackburn and Welch of Cane Hill to help with a new baby or an operation. She never forgot those patients while they were recuperating and would ride her horse over the hills carrying a basket of fresh bread or a bucket of soup for the sick or their family.

Charles Clyde Irwin remained on the farm with his parents and in 1920, bought out the other heirs. In 1921, Mary and Charles deeded the original farm and all other land they had acquired to Charles Clyde Irwin and his heirs, to become effective at their deaths. Charles died in 1927 and Mary in 1933.

Clyde Irwin married Nellie Edminson of Cane Hill in 1920. They built a new home and expected to spend the rest of their lives there. Nellie and a baby daughter died in 1921.

Pauline Clark came from Harrison, Arkansas, to teach at Cane Hill in 1924. She is a descendant of the Marrs family, early settlers of Cane Hill, and Abraham Clark, who homesteaded a lot of land in Newton County, Arkansas. Clyde Irwin and Pauline Clark were married July 1, 1926. They lived with his parents Charles and Mary on the home place.

Clyde bought more land joining the original farm and became a successful farmer. He owned one of the largest apple orchards in Washington County and shipped apples in carload lots to McKinney, Texas, for several years. He also introduced the first Hereford cattle to the southwest part of Washington County.

James Clark Irwin was born to Clyde and Pauline on June 22, 1927, becoming the fourth generation heir to the farm from Elam Carter to Mary Carter Irwin, and the added acres bought by his grandfather and father. Charles Clyde Irwin died April 2, 1942, having spent his entire life on this farm, leaving this land to his widow and son.

During the depression years, Pauline returned to teaching at Cane Hill at $40.00 a month. After Clyde's death, James and his mother stayed on the farm. Pauline continued to teach while James managed the farm. He learned to be quite a stockman.

James graduated from the Cane Hill High School, entered the armed services, and when discharged, he entered the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. He graduated from the U of A in 1949 and opened the vocational agriculture department in the Prairie Grove High School.

James Clark Irwin and Wanda Jean Karnes of Cane Hill were married December 26, 1949. They lived in Prairie Grove until May 1951.

James still loved the farm and went back and forth to look after his cattle and land. In May 1951, they moved back to the farm at Clyde, taking their new born son, James Stirman, who was born April 2, 1951. On August 9, 1952, another son, Charles Clark, was born and on July 25, 1955, a daughter, Paula Kay, was born. The farm was their home until 1960 when James accepted a position with Tyson Foods. They moved to Springdale where they still live, but the three children have pleasant memories of the farm. Jim, Clark, and Paula became the fifth generation to call this farm at Clyde home.

Jim S. Irwin married Judy Showalter May 20, 1978. They live in Little Rock, Arkansas and have one daughter, Jill Shannon, born June 26, 1979 and one son James Clark Irwin, II, born March 12, 1987.

Charles Clark Irwin married Georgi Spillman April 25, 1981. They have two daughters, Carrie Marie, born June 3, 1983 and Lauren Kristin, born October 11, 1986.

Paula Kay Irwin married David Herdlinger June 19, 1982. They have two daughters, Hannah Kay, born June 26, 1983 and Hailey Ann, born August 30, 1984.

These five little girls and one boy are sixth generation heirs calling the Clyde farm their homeland.

James Clark Irwin has bought enough land adjoining the original farm so it numbers not 110 acres but 407 acres. His son Clark still raises cattle and chickens on this farm under the ownership name of Irwin since 1869.

Columbus Jackson

Columbus Jackson, second son of Julius C. Jackson of Louisiana, Missouri, moved to Fayettville in 1853. He was a merchant and got his supplies from his cousins, Wayman Crow and McCreary, who had a large store in St. Louis, Crow-McCreary. He also had a tobacco plantation.

He served in the Confederate Army in an independent regiment organized by a merchant in Fayetteville, Capt. Calmer A. Brooks, in the fall of 1861. He was attached to the Brooks regiment at the Battle of Elk Horn. Later, Captain Palmer was released and Capt. Tuck Smith was in charge.

In the meantime, his wife, Virginia, and three small sons, Everett, Wayman Crow and Ulysses, were living in a house on a hill in Fayetteville about three blocks north and east of the square. It was a large two-story house with an attic from which could be seen the square and also the camp of Federal troops.

Virginia had to take in so-called boarders, or "Wimmin" as Aunt Alice called them—lady friends of the Federal officers, who visited them often. Listening to their conversations and observing movements from the attic, she was able to keep the Confederate Army, through a contact, aware of Federal movements.

One day in January, the 29th, to be exact, 1863, she was arrested and taken to jail to be questioned. Because of her family and friends and the fact that she was only three weeks from delivering her fourth child, she was sent home after signing a "solemn promise on her honor" not to give any more information.

Columbus, meanwhile, had developed a very bad cough. He sent word to her to find the money which he had buried in the yard and take the children to the square to a shelter for army wives and children.

She looked all day in the yard with Federal troops assisting, unasked, and almost at dusk, a sympathetic Lieutenant whispered to her that he had found it but to keep looking. They looked until dark and then gave up. She wore that money in a leather money belt around her waist for the next six months.

Meanwhile, Columbus was sent to a rest camp in southern Arkansas, and it was feared he had tuberculosis. He sent word to Virginia to join him there, which she did, and after she left the Fayetteville house, the Confederates shot a cannon ball through the house. Then they went to Sulphur Springs, Texas, where they stayed until 1866. Columbus received a medical discharge before they went to Texas.

When they returned, they built a red brick house out on Goshen Road, now Mission Road. It was designed to be a plantation-like place but fell short of it. Son, Waymon Crow, planted trees to form a drive up to the house but the road was never built. Bricks for the house were made on the place and records found by Harry Jackson, grandson, later when he lived in the house, showed that master workmen were paid 35 cents per hour and apprentice workmen, 15 cents.

That house is still there on Mission Road and was occupied by Harry's wife, Hope until her death in January, 1986.

Columbus and Virginia had nine children, five of whom lived to adulthood. Columbus died in 1879 and Virginia lived until 1922. Her funeral was a large event and six grandsons were pallbearers: Tom, Homer, Robert, Dawson, Harry, and Julius.

The oldest son, Everett, lived on an adjoining farm. He and Aunt Fanny had twelve children. They were Thomas, Homer, Robert, Virginia, Martha, Columbus, Alice, Dawson and Lawson, twins, Ida, Harry and Julius. Their many descendants live near Fayetteville mostly, but some are at New Orleans; Springfield, Missouri; Westville, Oklahoma; Bartlesville, Oklahoma; Alma, Michigan; Washington, D. C; Stuttgart and Siloam Springs, Arkansas.

Wayman Crow was a lawyer and twice mayor of Fayetteville before going to Indian Territory with the Dawes Commission. He was appointed the Territorial Judge in both administrations of President Grover Cleveland. He married El Freda Coleman, a teacher at Henry Kendall College in Muskogee, now Tulsa University. They had two children, Wayman Coleman and Avenelle Virginia, and their descendants range from Salem, Oregon to South Dakota to New York.

The third son, Ulysses, married Sally Pettigrew of Fayetteville. They went to Muskogee and he founded the U. L. Jackson (Later U. L. Jackson and Sons) real estate firm. They had five children, three of whom grew up—sons Zeb and Garland and daughter Mary. Their descendants live in Dallas, Texas and Oklahoma City.

Daughter, Virginia Alice, "Aunt Alice" to all the family, never married and was Aunt to thirty nieces and nephews. She lived until 1955, having taken care of her mother as long as she lived.

The fourth son, Henry Rush, married Amy Wilson in Denver, Colorado where they lived for some years before moving to Muskogee where he had a commission business. They had two children, Beulah and Henry, and descendants are now in Biloxi, Mississippi and Fort Smith, Arkansas.

In all there have been 139 descendants of Columbus and Virginia Jackson.

William Walter Jackson

William Walter Jackson, who was born in Anderson, Indiana in 1860, moved with his parents, (James Madison Jackson and wife Melinda Susan McAllister Jackson), to Washington County in 1882 and settled near Mount Comfort. The Jacksons purchased considerable property along the present day Highway 112, south of the present day Highway 68 and west toward Tontitown.

Will was a man of strong prejudices; he despised sham and hypocrisy; he was always straightforward and outspoken; he took an active part in politics and his advice was often sought by those in authority. He also loved to joke.

One afternoon, while both were still young men, Will came by Jim Busey's and told him to get ready and they rode their horses over to Wildcat to a dance.

The buildings consisted of two log houses with a covered passage between. On the mantle of the dance room was an old Virginia Cheroot box full of crumbled up tobacco with several pipes lying by it, so between "sets" they could smoke and drink cider. They got their "numbers" so they could be in the same "set", paying 10 cents to the fiddler.

Will asked Jim who he wanted to dance with so they could be introduced and Jim selected a neat nice looking girl about 18. But then Will led him to a great big fat girl. You could just see the grease seeping out around her jaws. She was wearing a polonaise, a tight-fitting garment that reached from her neck to her shoetops. It had blue and white stripes which were supposed to run up and down but which began to turn toward the right, but by the time it ended they were entirely over on one side.

On the way home Jim told Will, "It was like dancing with a sled loaded with mud. You did me a nasty dirty trick", Will just roared with laughter.

In 1885 William Jackson married Mary Ann Busey who had come to this area in a covered wagon from Bloomfield, Iowa. There were eight children born to this marriage: Malcolm, Horace, Harry, Jewell, Jim, Thelma, Loy and Buford. All eventually left this area except for Thelma, who married Walter Watkins in 1926. She is also the only surviving of the Jackson children.

Thelma recalls having to do her share of chores as she grew up. Each child had a cow to be milked daily. This was the milk for drinking and making butter and cottage cheese.

Once while still a young girl, Thelma's brother Jim instructed her to station herself at the gate with explicit instructions to "not move and let the cows come through". If the cattle came through, Jim would have to CARRY water to them; thus, he was trying to save himself some work.

When the cows came running toward her Thelma was knocked down and covered with mud and manure but not injured and she had not deserted her post.

After high school graduation at 17, Thelma received a teaching certificate and began teaching at a rural school called Evergreen. She was saving her money to go to college in the summer.

About this time a young sandy-haired man, Walter Watkins, had moved here from Missouri and he was working for the Welch Grape Juice Company selling grape roots to the Italians. He would drive to Evergreen and pick Thelma up each weekend, take her home to her parents and eventually marry her. Then she moved across the field from the Jackson home to her new home on the Welch farm. Walter Watkins became a very well-liked businessman in the area, a liaison between the Italian grape growers in Tontitown and the Welch Grape Juice Company where he became manager. He was a member of the Springdale Rotary Club and helped organize the first Rodeo of the Ozarks. He always thought of other people-was a very caring, giving unselfish person.

Thelma and Walter Watkins had three children: Peggy Anne Looney, whose husband, Stacy, has been in insurance in Springdale for 33 years. Mary Jane Dortch, who with her husband, Bob, has a steam-operated train and dining car in Eureka Springs. Walter II, President of the Florida division of City Federal Savings and Loan Association.

After Walter Watkins' untimely death from a heart attack at age 47, Thelma returned to school and became a Licensed Practical Nurse. She spent the next 14 years working in the nursery at Springdale Memorial Hospital.

In 1973, Thelma and Walter Watkins II moved from Springdale. She is now in a nursing home in Delray Beach, Florida, due to her non-ambulatory status. On May 7, 1985, Thelma received a Certificate of Recognition from the City of Delray Beach as the only LPN resident at the nursing home. She was awarded this certificate at a dinner in her honor.

Grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Thelma and Walter Watkins include: Mary Anne Heath (children Staci and Steven), Linda Hay (child Carla), Susan Naragon (child Tony) Stacy Looney II (children Cara and Becca), Robert Dortch, Nancy McKinley (Mary Katherine and Ed), David Dortch.

William Clark Jarnagan

William C. Jarnagan was born in Athens, Tennessee, August 3, 1844. He lived near by until he was 19 years of age. The Civil War was raging. Mr. Jarnagan traveled to Jerseyville, Illinois. There he enlisted in the Union Army, occupation farmer.

He was sworn in on the 26th day of February 1864, before Capt. John D. Moon. William was 5'6" tall, black hair. He enlisted in Company 14, Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He also served Detailed Info. Means to Battery, Bufort, South Carolina. He was wounded, sent to Washington, D. C., until he regained his health, then he returned to the regiment. All but 100 men had been killed or taken captive at Acworth, Georgia.

After his discharge at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, the 16th day of September, 1865, Mr. Jarnagan traveled back to Tennessee. Soon after, he married Miss Margaret (Rogers) Jarnagan. Mrs. Rogers people fought for the southern army.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarnagan moved to Jerseyville, Illinois, lived there for six months. Then they went to, or near, Springfield, Missouri. They lived there for 6 yrs. During that time Charlie, Corine, and Oscar were born to the family. Their next move was to Washington County, Arkansas to never live elsewhere. Neither one ever returned to their home land because of slavery.

They moved to a little community called Hazel Valley, there the following children were born: Eddie, Thursa, Temothy, Farmer, Bynum Winfield, Addie, Clark Masion, Ora, Millard.

Mr. Wm. Jarnagan was a Justice of the Peace (law) for many years. He homesteaded 40 acres of land, which today is owned by his granddaughter, Hazel Wilson. The old Jarnagan homestead is presently used as cattle pasture.

At the age of 54, William's health failed. He pursued getting a pension which was quite a problem in those days. Some of the men who signed his papers were Mr. H. C. Osburn, H. C. Thompson, J. A. Hughs and G. N. Lewis, Joseph V. Wallin, James G. Shackelford, and John Lyins.

On May 30, 1902, the Department of Interior in Washington, Claim No. 1,23032, Docket No. 59,458, William C. Jarnagan Priv. Appeal Co. D. 14 IL. Vol. Inf. Dismissed Claim under the Act of June 27, 1890. About the year 1900, Mr. Jarnagan finally began to get six dollars per month.

Mr. William Jarnagan died the year of 1915, he is buried in Hazel Valley Cemetery, also Mrs. Marget Jarnagan along with four of their children.

William Jarnagan had a brother who was in battle with William around Springfield, Missouri, but was never heard from after the war.

William and Margaret had two sons Ed and Clark who worked for the Famous Starrs, in Oklahoma. Ed got into a scrap down in Fort Smith and rather than take his chances with the law he ran off to Indian Territory where he worked for the family of Belle Starr's husband. It was five years before his family saw or heard from him again.

Before the 1900s, they saw many things there that never was told. It was very interesting for them back in Indian Territory days.

His son, Clark M. Jarnagan bought the old home place. He lived until 1920, then he bought another farm still yet in Hazel Valley. His daughter, Hazel Wilson still owns the old homestead having been in the family continuously for 100 years except for a few years someone had charge of the property. One room of the old log house is still standing. No one has lived in it for years now. It was built in 1890 and had more rooms added throughout the years.

The Jarnagans saw many hard times through their married life. One time Mr. Jarnagan was on a business trip to Fayetteville when a storm cloud arose, blew the roof off part of their home. Mrs. Jarnagan was sick in bed with a small child. William Jarnagan had a grandson, Bert Jarnagan, who made a career in the United States Air Force 26 years. Bert was stationed in many parts of the world during his tenure.

William Jarnagan performed weddings, made many deeds in property sales, held many small claims courts in his time of being Justice of the Peace. The family belongs to the Methodist Church of Hazel Valley and many other functions for up building the community.

Millard Jarnagan served in the first world war (1918). He returned to the states and married Martha (Lollar) Jarnagan and they had 3 children. They moved to California. He was buried in the National Cemetery in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Two children and families are buried in the Brannon Cemetery. One son, Bynum, was a timber worker. He once had made enough cross ties to lay rail road track for miles. William and Margaret's offspring are scattered throughout the U. S.

Jacob Fred Jesser

Mr. Jacob F. Jesser, born in south rural Russia, 11/18/1898, and Gertrude Elizabeth Brueckmann, born in Kansas City, Missouri, 1/15/1903, were married on 12/6/1922 in Polson, Montana. Jacob F. Jesser's grandfather, also Jacob Jesser, left Germany with thousands of other German families to develop the wheat land on the steepes of southern Russia at the invitation of the Czar. After much suffering and hard work these German communities began to prosper but the political climate was also changing and many of these German families decided to move to the prairies of America. Many who did not come lost everything when communism took control. Mr. Jesser's grandmother, who stayed, starved to death, and many others were moved to Siberia. The Jessers became Baptists while in Russia and were also looking for a place to worship in freedom.

Gertrude Brueckmann's grandfather, Heinrich Jacob Brueckmann, was converted to the Baptist faith and became a Baptist minister. Two of his sons, Carl and Frederich, also wanted to enter the ministry and since there were no Baptist schools in Germany where Baptists were not a recognized church by the state, they came to America to attend the German Baptist Seminary in the State of New York. Gertrude's father then ministered to German Baptist churches in Missouri, Kansas, and Montana where she met and married Jacob F. Jesser.

Since Gertrude was born in Missouri and her family moved back there when her father died in 1924, she had a deep desire to move back too. When the drought of the depression years of the 1930s hit the wheat country, Jacob Jesser, his wife and three children, Walter, Mildred and Martha, moved to the Missouri Ozarks in 1935. After several other moves they came to purchase a 40 acre farm in 1947, four miles west of Fayetteville on Highway 16, which is now in the Fayetteville City Limits.

Jacob Jesser passed away May 21, 1968 and is buried in the Mount Comfort Cemetery, west of Fayetteville. Gertrude Jesser is currently living in an apartment in Fayetteville. She is an active member of the Sang Avenue Baptist Church.

Earle Jines

When Earle and Billie Jines moved to Pea Ridge July 13, 1967, it was a return to Benton County for Billie, but it was Earle Jines' first residency there.

Earle was born Robert Earle Jines, son of Robert Emmett Jines and Gertrude Park Jines, on March 4, 1919 near Ravenden in Lawrence County, Arkansas. He grew up on a cotton farm, and followed the plow from boyhood until he joined the U. S. Army in World War II. Prior to overseas assignments, he, like farm youths across the nation, was discharged with the responsibility of returning to the farm to help produce food for the nation during the remainder of the war. This he did. After the war, he went to Detroit, Michigan where he was employed in the Hudson Plant.

Early in 1947, Earle came to Springdale, Arkansas, where he had two sisters living. They planned a party to honor him on his 28th birthday and one of them asked Billie, a young widow, to be Earle's date for the evening. Four months later, Earle and Billie were married.

Billie was born in Rogers, Benton County, Arkansas on October 16, 1919, the second youngest child of the large family of Hiram Robert Allen and Nella Lynn Allen. The family resided at Cave Springs, but having lost the child just older than Billie, they sought a different doctor for her birth. They closed their farmhome in Cave Springs, moved to Rogers and rented a home, put the older children in school there, and the next spring returned to Cave Springs.

The Allen family moved to Springdale in October 1926, and when Billie was in the seventh grade, moved to Combs, Madison County, for three years. Returning to Springdale, Billie lived there, except for three years back in Combs in the 1940s where she taught school.

At Combs, Billie was married to Russell Shipman, son of George and Cleo Ritchie Shipman. Russell died of a heart attack while they were swimming together in White River two years after their marriage.

It was three years later that she and Earle were married. They became the parents of three children: Robert Louis (Bob) Jines, Margaret Ann Jines and Matthew Earle Jines. They have eight grandchildren.

Bob and his wife, Carol (Werremeyer) Jines, have three children: Cathy, Stacy and Michael Jines. Margaret and her husband, Jim Cheek, have two children: Lori and Jennifer.

Matt and his former wife, Peggy (Lewis Clanton) Jines, have one child: Vallee Brooke Jines. Peggy has two by a former marriage, Cherie and Michael Clanton.

Bob lives at Monett, Missouri; Margaret at Pea Ridge, Arkansas, and Matt at Garfield, Arkansas.

Earle Jines was employed in several different occupations. He was a funeral director for a Springdale funeral home for four years, an insurance agent, a carpenter, and in the 1960s, he was employed by the University of Arkansas, when he and Billie decided to purchase a small weekly newspaper at Pea Ridge. That was January 1, 1967, the day the paper was one-year old.

Billie had long been associated with newspapers, either as a freelance feature writer or staff employee of various newspapers. In 1959-60, she had been hired by the University of Arkansas to set up its hometown news service.

Under Earle's leadership as advertising/business manager and with Billie as editor, the paper grew from 370 circulation to 2,600 subscribers by 1976. They sold the paper on February 25, 1976 and retired. The paper had won state and national awards. Twice, Earle was on hand to accept awards at the National Newspaper Association conventions - once at Des Moines and once at Rochester, New York.

Their retirement years allowed Earle and Billie to travel to other states in researching family history. They published four books on the subject.

At 65, Earle died May 16, 1984. He was buried at Pea Ridge Cemetery. The wild roses along the fence near his grave bloom profusely each June. His epitaph, based on Micah 6:8, reads: "He did justly, he loved mercy, he walked humbly with his God." His children selected a white oak leaf engraving to symbolize the character of their father.

Billie Jines still resides in Pea Ridge.

When John's brother, Ben, was shot off his horse, practically in his mother's yard, John was just a boy, but swore to kill his brother's killer. He said, "I'm just a pup now, but I'll be a big dog someday." According to the family, he carried out that vow and went to the pen, but the family put the money together and bought him out of prison. He was later killed in a gun battle by a United States marshall, in the hills of Oklahoma after a train robbery. He was buried in a graveyard near by. His brother, Micajah, put up a stone later, but now the family doesn't know where it is. Micajah and a couple of other men were with John. Micajah was just a boy at the time, but when he saw his brother had been killed, he shot and killed the marshall. He was sent to prison for 10 years and a day but got out sooner. From that day on, Micajah was a model citizen. Ben has not been found on the census records, but the family says he did exist.

Isaac and Susannah lived in Missouri after their marriage, but were in Arkansas before their second child was born. They homesteaded land and had eight or nine children and then the Civil War broke out. Isaac and his brothers who were old enough were in the Northern Army, and also his two oldest sons, Billo and Sol. Some of the families went to Missouri thinking it would be safer. Arkansas was divided in its sympathy for the North and South, and there was a lot of conflict among the citizens. Then there were the bushwhackers who chose not to join either army, but rode in mobs killing and stealing to benefit themselves. It is thought Susan probably stayed in Arkansas on their farm and tried to make a living, while Isaac was away. Her last child was born in Arkansas in 1864 before Isaac died September 1865. He was shot in the knee, infection set in and killed him. He is buried in Missouri where his brother Sol and most of his family are buried. There is a stone for both Isaac and Sol. Susan never remarried.

Jean Johnson

Stephanie Lake Johnson and William Ivor Johnson are the original Washington County residents of our family, Stephanie born December 19, 1984 and William November 25, 1987. This is the record of their maternal ancestors. Their maternal grandfather is William Raymond Stocks. Two brothers from England were the original Stocks immigrants and first settled in Tennessee. One of their descendants was Coley Wright Stocks, born in 1880 in Barnesville, Georgia. He was a grocer, an upholsterer, and a farmer. Coley married Lois Amanda Hunt of Brownsville, Texas, and had six children. The family lived on the farm until the early death of both parents. The oldest son, Charles took over the family at fifteen and kept it intact. The youngest child was William, the grandfather of Stephanie and William Johnson.

William Stocks was born February 15, 1915 in Barnesville, Georgia. After the death of their parents, the family moved to Jacksonville, Florida. Like his brothers and sisters, "Billy" worked at many jobs to make ends meet. In 1942, he joined the Army to serve in World War II. He received his basic training at the Ordinance Depot in Milan, Tennessee. It was there that he met Evelyn Nell Bromley. "Evie" had come to Milan to help her sister, Dorothea, after childbirth. She stayed in Milan and began working at a munitions plant. William and Evelyn were engaged and then he left for Europe with the Ammunition Corps. He served in England, Belgium, France, Switzerland, and Germany. They were married on March 16, 1946.

Evelyn Nell Bromley was born in Flatwoods, Tennessee. Two Bromley brothers immigrated from England and settled first in Virginia then moved to Middle, Tennessee in 1830. Family records show generations were born and buried in Bromley Hollow near Flatwoods.

Evelyn's mother's parents, the Bastins, were descended maternally from the Benjamin Kittrell family (originally spelled Cotterell, from Lancashire, England). Benjamin's father George Kittrell was married to Elizabeth Hunter Rutherford who was the daughter of James Rutherford and Elizabeth Cartwright. The Cartwrights were among the first settlers in Tennessee. They lived in the Watauga Settlement which preceded Tennessee's statehood. They traveled to Davidson County, Tennessee from Princess Anne County, Virginia, aboard the Donelson flotilla which disembarked on April 4, 1780, near Nashville. Robert Cartwright was a signer of the Cumberland Pact which was a form of homespun government among the first cabins and cleared trees. Family records also show the service of Kittrell and Bromley men in the Civil War. Albert Patterson Bromley married Lillian Dorothea Bastin on February 8, 1914 and they had seven children, their fourth being Evelyn, born May 14, 1921. She learned to farm, put up food, and make her own clothes. Evelyn played on her school basketball team along with her two sisters, won honors in Latin, and was the class salutatorion.

William and Evelyn Stocks started their family in Jacksonville, Florida with Lenore Jean and then Steven Raymond. William worked at Pittsburgh Plate Glass as a glazer. The family moved to Memphis, Tennessee in 1950. William worked for P. P. G. until his retirement in 1977. They had two more daughters, Robin Lillian and Lois Amanda, shortly after transferring to Memphis. Today Steven is in metal sales. Lois Amanda lives with her parents and is an avid reader. Robin received a Bachelors degree in Psychiatric Social Work and a teachers certification in history from Freed Hardeman in Henderson, Tennessee. She is the wife of Daniel Henry, a Church of Christ preacher in Busy, Kentucky. Lenore Jean graduated from Memphis State University in 1972 with a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in painting. She then acquired a teachers certificate in Art Education and was employed by Memphis City Schools, and it was there that she met another art teacher, Steve Johnson.

Lenore Jean Stocks and Steve Johnson were married and now have three children. Valentine Bromley was born June 3, 1980 in Memphis, Stephanie Lake was born December 19, 1984 in Springdale and William Ivor born November 25, 1987, also in Springdale. The Johnsons live in a home on Beaver Lake that was designed and partially built by Steve. They are members of the Church of Christ. Steve and Jean enjoy the Springdale community and the Ozark surroundings. Steve is employed by Springdale Public Schools and Jean is a homemaker.

John Luther Johnson

John Luther Johnson was born in Stanton, Iowa in 1883. He died in 1966. Helga Marie Swengingson was born in 1881 in Smaland, Sweden, and died in 1957. She came to the United States when she was 18 years old, and worked in a rubber factory making overshoes. She met and married Gus Seaquist in 1903. To this union were born four children, but two died of spinal meningitis, at an early age. Bert was born in 1904 and in 1912, Sophie was born. Seven months later, Mr. Seaquist died. Being a widow with two children, she began to seek work. Mr. Johnson needed a housekeeper and hired her in 1913. He took an interest in her and they decided to marry. They were married in 1915. Dorothy was born in 1916 and two years later, Margaret joined the family. Grandpa Johnson passed away a few days after Margaret was born. The farm they lived on, had to be sold to settle his estate. Mr. Johnson went to Colorado and got a small farm; came back to Iowa, loaded up the household goods and the car on to a rail car and we started out west to Kendrick, Colorado.

We arrived a few days before the car and household goods, so we waited in Calhoun, Colorado. On March 1, 1920, we arrived at our new home. A few days later, we had one of those blizzards with high winds, blowing snow and cold. It lasted for two days. We almost froze to death. Then, spring came. We started to build, planted crops, and forgot about the blizzards. Pauline was born after Christmas, 1920. Four years later, Leonard arrived. Bert joined the Navy and spent four years. After getting out, he settled down in California. He passed away in 1946. The rest of us attended Edison School.

There were years of sandstorms, each being worse than the year before. Our cattle were dying, the crops were being beaten to death, so, the folks called it quits in 1934. We had a sale in December of 1934. We got up early one morning, packed what we could get into a Model "T", including three girls, one boy and a dog and started out for Arkansas. Dad wanted cotton country; mother wanted fruit country. She dreamed of picking berries, wild and tame.

They arrived in Springdale, Arkansas on a Saturday afternoon. They rented a cabin across the street from Central School. The girls wanted to take off into town. They went up 71, came to Salem Lutheran Church and ran back to tell the folks there was a Lutheran Church here. Sunday morning they attended church. The folks being Lutheran, decided to stay if they could find a farm they could afford. They found one south of town, for a year. The family did all kinds of work to make a go of it. The first few years were tough ones, but with all pitching in and working hard, we saw the rainbow. Mother got her wish; to pick strawberries and blackberries. The next year, they moved to a farm west of Springdale. They worked hard, cleaning up and fixing fences and trying to farm. The place was sold. Again, they moved across the road from this place. First, they rented then later on bought it. They moved to town to live in 1954.

I, Dorothy Barker, was married in spring of 1934 to Elmer Barker. We lived in Colorado Springs. Our daughter, Bonnie Jean, was born in 1935. Mr. Barker passed away in 1937. I came down here to be close to my family. In 1942, I married Donald Neff, who was born in 1908 and died in 1985. We had a son, Charles Edward, who was born in 1943. We had five grandsons. A granddaughter, Paula Marie, was killed in a car wreck in 1976 at age 19.

Sophie married Charles Hartman in 1935. Eight children are in her family. Sophie passed away in 1966. Charlie died a few years later. The children live in Texas, Missouri and Arkansas. They had several grandchildren.

Margaret married William Fisher of Montour, Iowa. She found him through a strawberry box in 1940. He bought strawberries and her name was written on the bottom. He answered and they later married. They didn't have any children. Margaret passed away in 1985. Bill is in a nursing home.

Pauline never married. She still works for her employer of forty-seven years. She is retired but couldn't quit Bernice and Harvey Jones; so, she works part time now.

Leonard married Kathleen Springston in 1947. Leonard served in the Air Force. They now live near Lowell and raise registered cattle.

Bonnie lives in Aurora, Colorado. She has three sons; Robert Denard of Oklahoma, Donald Denard of Springdale, Arkansas, William (Bill) Denard of Colorado and three grandchild.

Charles married Karen Ward in 1978. They have a son, Keven, born in 1980. Another son, Steven, lives in Missouri. He was born in 1968. Charles enlisted in the Navy. His father was in the infantry during World War II.

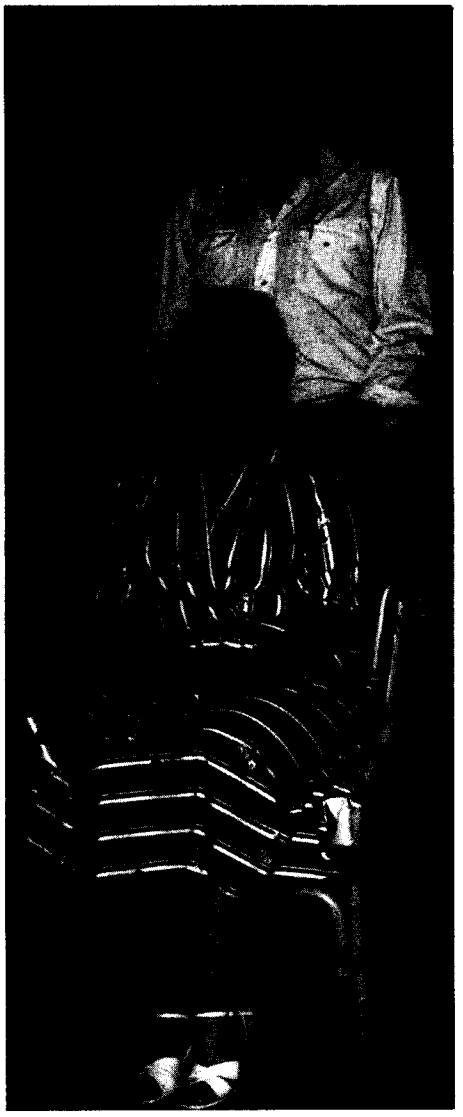
Mary Ellen Johnson

Otis Carl and Lois Cunningham Eubanks moved to Washington County from Madison County in 1949. Their home was on Poplar Street in Fayetteville. Lois worked at Oberman's (a garment factory) and Otis worked for the University of Arkansas in maintenance. Their children: Sharon Kay b. 5/12/45, Larry Dale b. 10/31/46 and Mary Ellen b. 10/23/39, attended Leverett Elementary School and Fayetteville High.



Leroy and Mary Ellen Johnson, 1986.

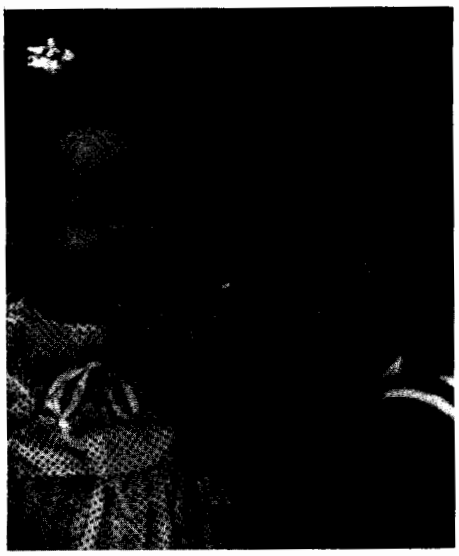
February 23, 1956, Mary Ellen married Marion Leroy Johnson. They had four children: Benjamin Carl b. 6/10/57, Ronald Wayne b. 6/24/59, Anthony Leroy b. 11/19/60 and Mary Renee b. 12/31/62.

Koree Renee Roberts and Marcus Tyler Bowling, 1988.

Jennifer Lee Johnson, 1979.

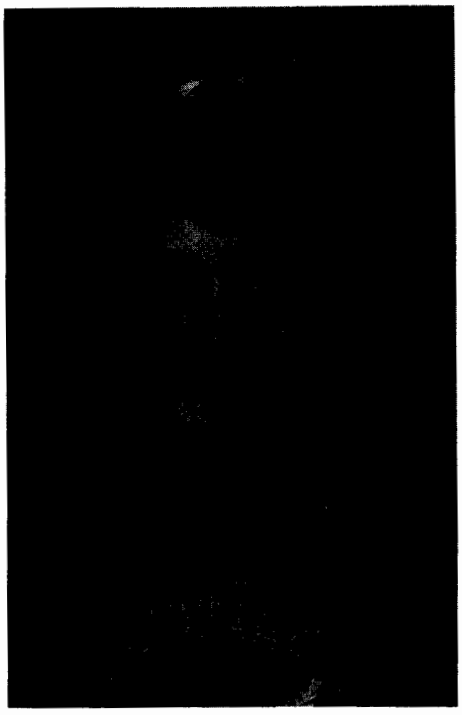
Leroy and Mary Ellen met in a little bit of an unusual way. He was courting Libby White. Libby had invited Mary Ellen home from church with her and while the two girls sat in the porch swing they saw this young man in his '40 Plymouth flying north on Highway 112 right around the corner in front of the house. Libby flagged him down, they went for a ride after Libby pushed Mary Ellen in between herself and the young Johnson boy. Mary was too young to date. Leroy glared at her and really spoke harshly to her. He wanted this snaggle-toothed skinny, stringy-headed blond to get into the back seat and leave Libby up front with him but Mary Ellen didn't know what to do so she just sat and kept quiet. Later, she began to look better to him and in only 3 years they were married.

Mary Ellen's father died when he was 38 with lung cancer. He had lived just long enough to see his first grandchild take his first step.



Natosha Nicole Johnson and Crystal Gayle Love, 1988.

Robin Michelle Johnson, 1987.



Summer Dawn Johnson

Marion Leroy Johnson, age 6 possibly 1942.

The Johnson family mostly live north of the old Johnson Mill west of Johnson, Arkansas. Mary Ellen and Leroy are still living in that area today.

Mary Ellen had eye problems from early childhood. This was a result of a bad case of measles. All through school she wore heavy eyeglasses and when they could no longer help her vision, Dr. Harry Otwell fitted her with handmade contact lens as big as the ball of her thumb. Years later Dr. J. E. McDonald fitted her with special keratoconus lens and restored most of her sight.

Mary Ellen and Leroy did a lot of different things to support their family over the years. He drove an 18-wheeler, worked in maintenance in the Northwest Arkansas Mall, owned and operated the Bresler's Ice Cream Shop and Karmelkorn Shoppe in the Mall, raised cattle and drove a school bus for Springdale Schools. Mary has been a waitress, grocery checker, bookkeeper for Northwest Arkansas Truck and Equipment, counter-clerk for J. C. Penney's in the catalog department, and now is the office director for the Washington County History Book Project (this book you are reading).

Leroy likes western movies, television and eating out. Mary likes love stories, history novels, live plays and eating out. Both like country music, bluegrass live, traveling and picnicing beside the road when traveling. In 31 years there have been good times and bad but both believe when they said "til death do us part" it was a lifetime commitment.

Benjamin, Ronald, Anthony and Mary Renee Johnson.

Leroy has chronic high-blood pressure but controls it with daily medication. He doesn't smoke or drink and watches his intake of salt.

Mary fights being overweight, eats a lot of salt, diets sporadically.

Ben married Terri Lynn Mensch, daughter of Elvis and Janice Gobot Mensch. Terri was born and lived in Texas City, Texas. Their daughters, Summer Dawn and Robin Michelle live with Ben at 710 Maple Drive, Springdale. Terri lives in Rogers. She married Scott Smith after she and Ben divorced. Terri is still very much a part of the Johnson family, dearly loved by Mary and Leroy. Divorce does not need to sever all family ties.

Ron married Jimmie Lee Madden, daughter of James and Helen Madden. Jennifer Lee Johnson, their daughter, lives in Muskogee, Oklahoma, with Lee and Ken Sykora, Lee's second husband. Lee and Ken adopted Jennifer in 1988, with Ron's permission. Her name changed to the same name as her mother, but she will always be a Johnson to Grandma Mary and Grandpa Leroy. The legal decision was a formality her father, Ronald Wayne Johnson, felt Jennifer wanted to make her happy.

Ron married Donna Tuller, daughter of Donald and Joyce Tuller. Their home is in Austin, Texas.

Anthony Leroy (Tony) married Tonya Sue Hamilton Love, daughter of Wayne and Evelyn Sue Bartlett Hamilton of Oklahoma. Their children are Crystal Gayle Love and Natosha Nicole Johnson. In 1988, Crystal is truly a "Johnson" but legally her name remains Crystal Love. She and Summer Dawn are about the same age and are good friends as well as cousins.

Mary Renee married Darrell Bowling, son of Norma Chatham. Marcus Tyler Bowling is their son, and the only grandson of Mary and Leroy at this time. Renee and Darrell later divorced.

Clifford Mark Roberts, son of Clifford Elwood and Sally Jean Diesse Roberts, married Mary Renee on August 29, 1986. Koree Renee Roberts was born in Austin, Texas 1988. Mark was born in Broom County, New York. He moved to Austin, Texas, with his parents when the family moved due to Cliff's job with IBM.

Leroy was hired as a jailer for the Washington County Sheriff's Office (WCSO) in the spring of 1988.

In 1986, Mary Ellen became aware of the placing-out program in America from 1854-1929 known as the "Orphan Trains". She founded the Orphan Train Heritage Society of America, Inc. (OTHSA). See this story in this book in the "Organizations" section.

Mary Ellen Johnson's interest in family history has prompted her to write a complete Johnson Family History soon to be published. The Cunningham family story will be her next "labor of love", due to be compiled in 1989.

July 7, 1989 Ben and Tina Marie (Paxton) Storment plan to be married. Tina is the daughter of Donald Lee and Shelia Rae (Barnett) Paxton. Shelia and Donald with their son Robbie Allen Paxton live in Phoenix, Arizona.

Tina was born January 13, 1967 in Charleston County, Charleston, South Carolina.

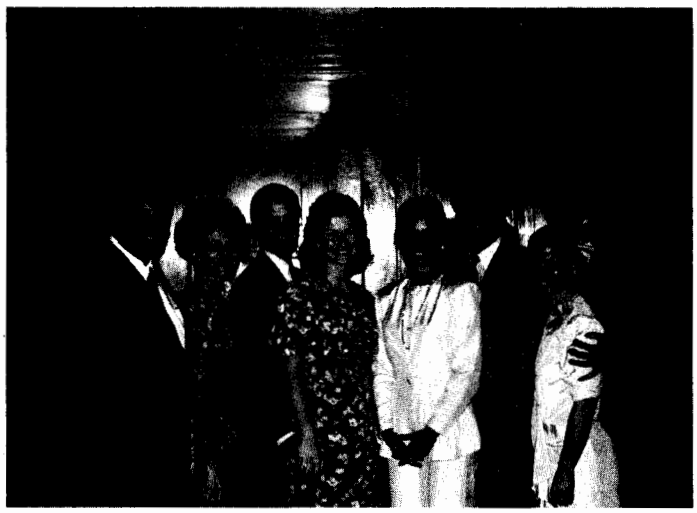
Robert B. Johnson

Little did Bob Johnson think about meeting his future wife when he made plans as a student at Texas A&M to attend an A&M - Arkansas football game in College Station one fall day in 1952. Little did Fay Marie Stafford think about meeting her future husband as she left her job at Humble Oil Co. in Houston, Texas, at the same time to enjoy a football weekend where the Razorbacks were slated to take on the Texas Aggies. An introduction by a mutual friend was followed by two years of dating, and then on May 6, 1954, at the First Methodist Church in Springdale, Bob and Fay Marie married.

Bob, Robin, Fay Marie, Diane, Lorrie about 1972.



Bob, Fay Marie, Tom Joseph, Robin Joseph, Diane Christie, David Christie, Lorrie Cross and Mike Cross. (At University of Nebraska Medical School, Omaha, Nebraska). May 1987.

Bob was born Robert Basil Johnson on July 4, 1930 in Elgin, Illinois, the second son of Dr. E. R. Johnson and Mabel Leona Bystrom Johnson. The first son, Ernest Rudolph, Jr., had arrived earlier on December 29, 1928. In 1931 the Johnsons moved to Lorrie and Diane. 1960.

Bobby in 1936.

Fay Marie in 1935.

Fay Marie, Diane, Robin, Lorrie. Easter, 1965.

Ft. Worth, Texas, where Ronald Wayne was born January 30, 1939.

Fay Marie Stafford was born June 7, 1929, at the family home at 201 Allen Street, Springdale. She is the second child of John Lafayette Stafford and Miles Laverna Harper Stafford. Brother John Miles was born August 31, 1927, and Mary Eleanor arrived on her sister's fourth birthday, June 7, 1933.

After their wedding, Bob and Fay Marie made their home in the Dallas-Ft. Worth area where he worked for Texas Toro. With the arrival of their first daughter, Lorin Leigh, on February 13, 1956, the couple decided to raise their family in a small-town atmosphere and moved to Springdale where Bob was a buyer for Ralston Purina. Mary Diane was born April 18, 1957, and Robin Kay arrived four years later on February 18, 1961.

As the family grew, their activities were centered around home, church, community, and school. The girls progressed from Girl Scouts, dancing, piano lessons, Bible schools to summer camps, school activities, drill teams and cheerleading.

School activities brought a lot of excitement to the Johnson household. In her junior year, Lorrie was selected Miss SHS of 1973. Six years later that same honor came to Robin when she was chosen Miss SHS in 1979. The Razorback football team honored Diane during her sophomore year when they selected her as their 1976 Homecoming Queen. She represented the University of Arkansas at the Cotton Bowl parade and game and was a member of the pom-pom squad for two years.

Robin in 1965.

Bob, about 1948.

All three daughters graduated from the University of Arkansas where they were members of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Lorrie has been a dental hygienist for nine years. On July 31, 1982, she married Michael Justin Cross of DeWitt, Arkansas. Mike graduated from the University of Arkansas and the University of Nebraska Medical School. They now live in Temple, Texas, where Mike is doing a five year residency in General Surgery at Scott and White Hospital.

Diane got her teaching degree and taught two years in a private school in Dallas. She married University of Kansas graduate David Joe Christie of Shawnee Mission, Kansas, on April 5, 1980. David is president of the Christie Real Estate Co. and they live in Mission Hills, Kansas. Their daughter, Natalie Elizabeth, was born in Dallas, October 29, 1984, and their son, Johnson (Jon) David was born in Kansas City, December 8, 1987.

Robin received her degree in 1983 and has been employed as a dental hygienist since that time. She married Texas Aggie Tom Joseph of Hamilton, Texas, April 5, 1986. They make their home in Dallas where Tom is in commercial real estate. All three girls were married in the First United Methodist Church in Springdale.

During summer breaks from college, the girls participated in various activities, including counseling, at the Christian-athletic camps - Kanakuk and Kanakomo - located in Branson, Missouri.

For twenty-five years, Bob's company, Johnson Sprinkler Systems, has been designing and installing underground systems for residential and commercial areas. Fay Marie graduated from the University of Arkansas with a teaching degree in 1951, did substitute teaching several years, and then returned to complete her Master's Degree in January, 1971. She has taught in Springdale elementary schools for twenty-two years.

Although their children have moved away, the family-oriented Johnsons still plan weekend trips to visit them and to enjoy their grandchildren. Bob, a transplanted Texan, and Fay Marie, whose family roots are very deep in Springdale, still believe their decision to raise their family in this area was a wise one.

Solomon Johnson

Solomon "Sol" Johnson was born in 1827, in either the state of Tennessee or Illinois, the son of John T. Johnson and Nancy Whitely. Moving to Arkansas in the 1830s with his parents, Solomon grew up in Washington County near Spring Valley, in Brush Creek Township. On July 20, 1849, in Washington County, Solomon was united in marriage to Zerelda Todd, daughter of Owen Todd and Sarah Felter. Solomon may have possibly been married prior to Matilda Mackey. No information has been uncovered to prove this. Solomon and Zerelda moved to Wright County, Missouri, near Grovespring, in the early 1860s, possibly due to the outbreak of the Civil War or after the death of his father in 1861. She was converted and united with the Missionary Baptist Church at Grovespring, being baptized by the Reverend Pose Mingus. The Johnsons were known to be hot-tempered people, taking after their Irish ancestry. This trait was tragically experienced in the immediate family of Solomon and Zerelda. On Tuesday afternoon, October 27, 1891, their oldest son, John Johnson, was drinking with some of his companions and had become very much intoxicated, when his father, Sol Johnson, appeared on the scene. John at once became insulting to his father and insisted that he drink with him. The old gentleman refused and a fight ensued in which his son used a beer bottle to knock him down several times, cutting his head severely. After being knocked down several more times, the father drew a 38 caliber revolver and fired four bullets into the chest of his son, knocking him to the floor. John died a week later on Wednesday night, November 4, 1891.

Solomon lived out the rest of his life in Wright County and died on Friday, February 7, 1908. He is buried in the Bramhall Cemetery, north of Grovespring, Missouri. Steve Johnson

Horace J. Johnson (born October 18, 1809) was a miller and one time mill owner by trade. In 1835 he married Permelia Ives whose family had come to the Southfield, Michigan area from Vermont by way of the Erie Canal in 1828. They raised four children and eventually owned and farmed 120 acres near Southfield.

One of their children, Jerome Melancthon (born June 3, 1850), grew up to be a cattle farmer and gravel pit owner in the same area. He married Harriet Wright in 1878 and they had nine children, one of which was Grover Cleveland Johnson, born August 5, 1887.

Grover served with Co. K, 145 Infantry, Rainbow Division during World War I. He was wounded 5 times and gassed twice. He married Irene Griffiths whose parents had immigrated from Breconshire, Wales. They raised 6 children, 4 of the boys would serve in the Pacific during World War II.

One of the sons, Ivor Grover (born September 25, 1923) served in the Navy as aviation radio-gunner. He flew the wounded out of Iwo Jima and spent the night in a life raft after being shot down off of Midway Island. In 1944 he met a college student from Caraway, Arkansas named Jewel Carmack.

One hundred years before, on October 1, 1844, Robert Houston Wood was born in Hardy, Arkansas. Robert married Margie Yates, the daughter of English immigrants, and they had 8 children before Robert died in his mid-forties. One of these children was Mary Etta Wood.

Mary Etta married one of two brothers who had moved to Hardy in 1907 from Livingston, Tennessee. Albert Boozer or "A. B." Carmack (born July 24, 1889) was the son of Andrew Jackson Carmack. "A. B." and Mary Etta had 7 children, one of which was Jewel, born November 19, 1926.

In 1925, 70 year old Margie Wood, her eight children, their spouses and her grandchildren bought swamp land from the State of Arkansas in the Caraway area for $1.00 an acre. The entire group moved there and the Carmack family began clearing their 200 acre section, planting corn and cotton with a horse drawn cultivator, and raising livestock. One of the first children born in this new location was Jewel Carmack.

In 1937 the Mississippi River flooded its banks and the fields and homes of the new farms. The raised bed of the railroad was the only land not under water. The families rode in boxcars back to Hardy, returning when the water receded.

By the time Jewel graduated from high school in 1943, modern conveniences such as kerosene irons and gas washers with "kick" starters had made life easier. After high school, Jewel left for college in Memphis, Tennessee. It was there that she met Ivor in 1944.

Ivor Johnson and Jewel Carmack were married and eventually settled in Memphis. They had three children; Mike, Steve, and Loraine. Ivor worked as a purchasing agent and belonged to the Natl. Assn. of Purchasing Agents. He became the Educ. Dir. and later President of the Memphis group. Ivor works for Alumax in Hernando, Mississippi. Jewel ran the household and raised the children.

All three children played in their high school bands. Mike and Steve were in Scouts and later served in the Army National Guard together. Mike lives in Jonesboro and is Principal at Nettleton Jr. High. His wife Sandy is the school librarian and their son Jeff is a baseball-basketball-band star. Loraine is married to Ronnie Tartt and now lives in Chicago where Ronnie works in the executive offices at Firestone.

Steve graduated from Memphis State University in 1973. He first became interested in northwest Arkansas after visiting his brother at the University of Arkansas. In 1979 he began teaching art in the Memphis public schools. Steve married another art teacher, Jean Stocks, and they moved to Springdale, Arkansas where Steve is employed by Springdale public schools.

Steve and Jean have two daughters, Valentine and Stephanie, and a son, William. Valentine attends school in Springdale, Stephanie is the first and William is the latest of this long line of descendants to be born in Washington County.

Thomas J. Johnson was the eleventh child of John T. Johnson. His mother was Elizabeth Dunner, said to have been part Cherokee. He was only seven or eight years old when she died, and seventeen when his father died in 1861. He was born 20 June 1844 in Washington County, Arkansas, and died June 1918. He and his wife are buried in a family plot on the Bill Johnson farm, on War Eagle River. Thomas was a very handsome man with dark hair and blue eyes. On 23 January 1868, he married the very pretty daughter of Maston S. and Cynthia Ann Lloyd Gregg. Sultana Jane Gregg was born 24 August 1848 in Arkansas, and died 18 May 1933.

He had a farm on War Eagle River, thus the nickname "War Eagle Tom" to distinguish him from other Tom Johnsons. He added the middle initial "J." to his name so his mail wouldn't be delivered to other Toms. He and Sultana Jane had eight children, all born in Arkansas.

I. Martha Orelina born 3 January 1869, died 22 January 1933, buried Sonora Cemetery. Married 28 December 1885 in Arkansas to Joseph Aaron Halbrook, born circa 1855. She had hidden her wedding clothes that day where she could get them as they left. She rolled up a blanket and put it under the covers so it would look like she was in bed when her parents checked on her that night, so she wasn't missed till the next day. Little Berry W. Gibson got into some trouble in May of 1913, and disappeared before the last child was born. Cynthia was left with the burden of providing for her large family, which she did very well being a very industrious woman. She had four river bottom farms which are now covered by Beaver Lake. The heartbreak of losing several of her children began in September 1913, when the baby died. Then TB hit, and she lost her third child in 1914. Her second child died in 1916. Her first child was also afflicted with TB, so she rented out the farms and moved to Colorado for his health, all to no avail. He died in 1917. That same year, her fourth child was killed in WW I. She was left with three daughters who grew up and married, but one of these died a year before Cynthia. With all her troubles, she never lost her faith in God. She was a member of the Church of Christ and taught her children about God. She was known all over the area for her benevolence. She delivered babies, doctored the sick and stayed with them, and shared her food and clothing with those less fortunate than she. At one time she gave one of her best dresses to a poor family for the mother to be buried in. She was known as "Aunt Het" by all. One of her daughters, Ruby, didn't even know her name was Cynthia until she was almost grown. She saw some papers with the name Cynthia on them, and asked her mother about it. Billo and Margaret had another son, John, birthdate unknown, who was killed by lightening when just a boy and they were living in Kansas. The date of this tragic accident is unknown. Zay and Tom were in the hay field loading a wagon to haul the hay to the barn, when a storm came up suddenly. John was with them so they told him to go back to the house. As he was climbing through a wire fence, the lightening struck and ran down the fence, killing John. From that day on, Zay was deathly afraid of storms and would go to the cellar every time a storm cloud came up. His son, Jack, said he would wake the family up in the middle of the night and make them all go to the cellar.

Benjamin F. Johnson, Jr.

Benjamin Franklin Johnson, Jr. (1852-1932), hereafter called B II; the son, B III; the grandson B IV, brought his wife, Rachel Elizabeth Divelbiss (1862-1938), and their six children: Mary Eva (1886-1962), Lenora Ellen (1889-1965), Frederick Wayne (1891-1918), Wilton Draper (1894-1966), Arthur Queener (1897-1974), and Benjamin Franklin III (1901 -) from Everton, Missouri in 1908 to an apple/pear orchard south of Fayetteville on Old Wire Road south (later called Cato Springs Road).

The Johnson family, living near Springfield, Missouri, had often been millers. B II's father, Oliver Perry Johnson (1826-1908), operated a grist and carding mill near Everton on the Turnback River. B II's mother, Mary Ann Pilkington (1830-1905), like her husband, was born in Tennessee and died in Missouri. B II (born on Mineral Springs Road near West Fork) was one of sixteen children. Each of the six brothers had ten sisters.

Rachel's father, David Divelbiss (1834-1904), a Union soldier in the Civil War, had been through Washington County on his way home from Texas. He especially liked the Elkins area, and in 1872, he came back with his wife, Mary Draper (1842-1920), and their children. Rachel's mother's family had come from Pennsylvania to Alton, Illinois where they had a pear orchard.

After Rachel graduated from Shurtleff College in Alton, she taught at Whitehouse (south Washington County) school in the early 1880s, boarding in the home of Ben F. Johnson, Sr., (hereafter called Great Uncle Ben) of Middlefork. Great Uncle Ben wrote to his namesake, B II, that he had something he might want to see. B II first saw Rachel coming to Great Uncle Ben's house, riding bareback on a mule with two school children. Soon, she was receiving letters from B II at the Maguire Post Office/Store. Their wedding on January 1, 1885 had to be postponed until January 4th when the preacher could safely cross the flooding White River.

B II and Rachel then lived in Everton, Missouri, where he operated a general merchandise store. One day, a traveling shoe salesman (one of the four Ucker brothers from Fayetteville) saw pears on the counter, from the Johnson's pear tree. B II was urged to visit the Ucker orchard, Rachel warning him to be certain there was plenty of good water. The store and the orchard werre traded even-Stephen. On a cold, rainy Thanksgiving Day, 1908, the Johnsons arrived by train ahead of the boxcar with all their possessions (including two cows and two beehives) and spent the night with relatives Bertice and Lydia Johnson, who owned the Johnson mill in Johnson.

That first hard winter the family lived on Rachel's canned goods brought with them and turnips the Uckers had planted between the orchard trees.

Before the move, Eva, Lenora and Wayne had all graduated from Everton High School. Wilton was attending Fayetteville High School, Arthur and B III were in grade school.

Eva, after graduating from the Fayetteville Business College in 1912, worked in Seminole, Oklahoma as a secretary. In 1920, she finished a B. A. at Missouri State Normal School in Springfield, Missouri, and in 1923 completed an M. A. in business from Columbia University in New York. After working again in Seminole, she and Lenora sailed around the world. Eva spent her last thirty years on the farm.

Lenora, after receiving a teacher's certificate from the University of Arkansas summer school, completed her B. A. at MSNS in 1916, and an M. A. in education from the University of Missouri in Columbia in 1918. After attending the University of Chicago and completing all but her dissertation for a Ph. D in education from Columbia University in New York, she taught at teacher's colleges in Virginia and Louisiana before returning to the farm.

Wayne taught at Hogeye, then sorted mail for the railroad between two main terminals in Bald Knob and Memphis. December 15, 1917, he volunteered for the Marines in Memphis, without knowing that on the very same day, Wilton had volunteered for the Marines in Springfield. At Quantico, Virginia, they both saw mules from the farm. Wilton even saw his favorite mule again in France before one of the main drives. Wayne was killed in action June 25, 1918 in the Belleau Woods battle. His gravestone in the Fayetteville National Cemetery is marked: "16th Company, 5th Marines, 2nd Division". Every Memorial Day, the family places red, white and blue flowers from the farm on his grave.

Wilton, the valedictorian of his Fayetteville High School class of 1912, finished both a B. A. and a B. S. from MSNS after he returned from France. he married Martha Finch in 1922 and completed a Ph. D. in education from the University of Oklahoma, Norman, in 1928. After he had been the superintendent of schools in Skiatook, Oklahoma, he taught history for over thirty years at what is now Northeastern Oklahoma State University in Tahlequah. He and Martha adopted the son of her sister, Florence Daugherty, Edward Finch Johnson. Wilton's gravestone in Springfield's Hazelwood Cemetery reads; "January 26, 1894/October 3, 1966/ Gunnery Sergeant U. S. M. C., 5th Regiment 2nd Division."

Arthur and B III went to grade school at Rieff Chapel, quite near the farm, which held both Sunday Services for over one hundred people and, during the week, a school for sixty students crowded three to a two-seat desk, all eight grades taught by one teacher.

Arthur traveled about before he married Grace Kelly (1893-1980) one of the twelve Kelly children from the next farm. He was especially fond of his registered white-faced Herefords. Both Arthur and Grace are buried in the Rieff Chapel Cemetery on Kessler Mountain.

B III went on to the University of Arkansas Training High School, called Peabody, before receiving a B. A. from MSNS in 1926 and an M. L. A. in landscape architecture from Harvard University in 1930. A ten month study trip to Europe and Egypt preceeded work in Rochester, New York. There he met Lilie Seymour Gordon (1905-1984) at the theatre one evening. They married in 1934. Benjamin Franklin IV was born in Boston, Massachusetts, 1935, and Anne Wellman Beadle in Birmingham, Alabama, 1937. In Houston, Texas, B III had a private practice developing the grounds for estates, public buildings, housing projects, housing subdivisions (Sandlewood and Knollwood) and was appointed City Planning Engineer for the City of Houston in 1943. He returned to live at the farm in 1965, gardening and harvesting pears from the old trees and the fourteen varieties of new trees planted with B IV in 1968.

The present two-story home on the farm was built (1926) around the old home, which was thrown out the windows. A new barn was built (1933) around the old one, which had collapsed under the heavy snow of a rare April 7th storm. Thirty days after the first furrow was plowed for its foundation stones, the first swing load of loose hay was hoisted into the mow.

B II died of pneumonia caught on a fishing trip while he and Rachel were visiting his favorite sister, Lizzie, in Florida. Rachel died at the farm, 1938. B II, Rachel, Eva and Lenora are buried in the Johnson plot at Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville.

Frances Wilkes Johnston

Francis Marion (Jack) and Mattie (Martha) Arminda Saye Wilkes moved from Port Arthur, Texas to Black Rock, Arkansas, in 1921. They and their 2-year old son, Wayman Otis, set housekeeping on the bluffs above the Black River, where Jack dove for pearls. A daughter, Frances Louella, was born in August, 1921. Jack contracted malaria and died in October, 1921, leaving his widow and children destitute. "Granny" Wilkes has often told her descendants how she paid the doctor for his services with the few pearls Jack left; how Jack was buried in a pauper's grave in Powhatan Cemetery; how she didn't have the money for a 2 cent stamp to notify Jack's family in Texas of his death; and how she fled Black Rock in order to keep her children from being taken away from her.

Francis Marion (Jack) Wilkes and Mattie (Martha) Arminda Saye Wilkes - Port Arthur, Texas, October 13, 1917.

Martha eventually settled in Southern California, remarried, and had two more children. The youngest was killed in an automobile accident when he was in his early teens. The elder now lives in Florida.

Wayman Otis is a retired businessman and lives in the Los Angeles area near his mother. Martha's daughter Frances became the mother of Linda Lucylle in 1941. After the outbreak of World War II, Frances became a welder in the shipyards of San Pedro, California, then joined the U. S. Coast Guard as a ship's cook/baker. Billie Susan was born in 1945 and Toni Ann in 1949.

While living in Agana, Guam, Frances met and later married Weldon C. (Shell) Johnston, originally from Heavener, Oklahoma. His parents, Willie Brown and Mattie Izora Johnston, were life-long residents of the Heavener area. They were both born in the area when it was still Indian Territory. Willie was a coal miner, farmer, and a Democrat, while Mattie devoted her energies and talents to making a home for him and their three children: Jessie Izora Johnston McMurtrey of Fort Smith; Jack, now deceased; and Shell.

Shelley Izora, born in 1957, and CarryAnn Arminda, born in 1960, were added to the family. Retired in 1967 after 24 years active service in the U. S. Navy during which he saw combat as a radioman on a minesweeper in the Pacific theatre, Shell, with Frances, Shelley and CarryAnn, settled in Fort Smith. They later moved to Lowell.

Finding the sailor's dream of "a little chicken farm somewhere" (in Shell's case it was a rabbit farm), was really a nightmare, he trained at Sequoyah Vocational School in Fayetteville and gained his LPN license. He worked at the V. A. Hospital in Fayetteville for many years in the ICU and CCU wards. Now truly "retired" Shell and Frances live on Oak Grove Road in Springdale where they garden extensively.

Their children are scattered from coast to coast. CarryAnn is a musician, based in Montana. Shelley married Michael Beale and is the mother of 2 sons, Gabriel Jordan, and Michael, Jr.. They live in Little Rock. Toni Ann is the wife of Pat Mahoney and the mother of five children — Melony, Jeremiah, Teresa Rose, Farren, and Giddian. They live near Washington, D. C. Billie Susan is a sergeant in the U. S. Army, serving at Letterman Hospital, San Francisco, California.

Linda met George Hutchinson, Jr., in San Migual, Philippine Islands, in 1959. He was from Uniontown, Pennsylvania, the son of George Altha and Bessie Irene Oldland Hutchinson. George and Linda were married in Fukuoka, Japan, in 1960. Their first son George Weldon (1961) was born in Sasebo, Japan. In 1964 William Edward was born in Athens, Greece. George and Linda were divorced in 1966.

Now the wife of Charles F. Reed, Linda lives in Springdale. She works as a secretary/bookkeeper, tutors adults in reading, and very much enjoys needlework. Her husband is retired.

Grandchildren of Charles and Linda Reed but very much a part of the family are: Cynthia Lorraine Reed, Charles Bryan Reed, and Cristy Ann Reed; Corianne Reed and Julie Rene Reed; Hilary Reed; Ronald Scott Reed; George Weldon Reed, Jr. and Christopher Robin Reed.

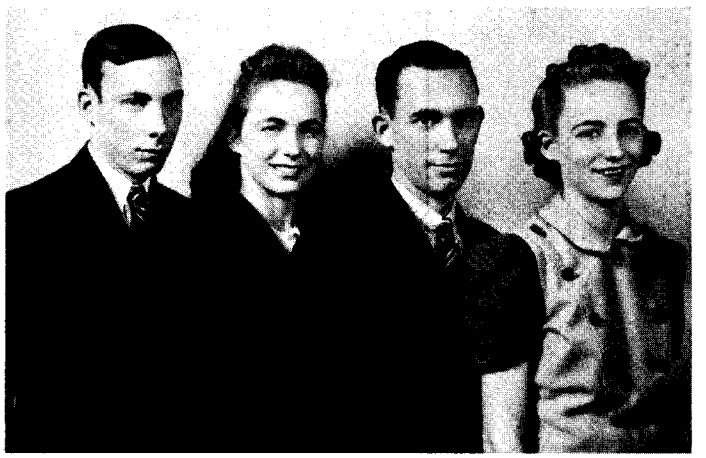
Harry H. Johnston

Harry H. and Lena Barnes Johnston (1900-1978) and their children Vernon, Harold, Patricia and Dorothy moved to the Rhea community (Rt. 1, Prairie Grove) from Sharon, Oklahoma in December 1933.



Harold L. Johnston, Patricia M. Johnston, Vernon S. Johnston and Dorothy M. Johnston

When moving to Washington County from Western Oklahoma, driving a Chevrolet sedan and pulling a small trailer, the family stopped in Siloam Springs on the evening of December 24 to purchase groceries for Christmas dinner in their new home. (The truck with their furniture and horses had already arrived in Arkansas). It was after dark when the family arrived at Prairie Grove where they discovered that a recent rain had left the roads quite muddy, but passable. Driving west they soon found their car bogged down in some deep ruts about two and one-half miles from their destination. It was here that they spent their first night an unusually warm Christmas Eve, in Arkansas. At daylight, Neal and Fannie Cavin, a brother and sister whose home was nearby, invited the Johnston family to breakfast, where the table was heaped with sausages, eggs, biscuits, oatmeal and several kinds of jelly.

Harry H. Johnston, the son of Perryman and Matilda Johnston, was born in 1890 at Monterey, Reynolds County, Missouri, the area which is today the Johnston's Shut-Ins State Park, a state park named after the Johnston family. Perryman Johnston moved his family on a thirty-day covered wagon trip in 1900 to Woodward County, Oklahoma, where Harry grew to adulthood.

Harry Johnston married Verah Ewing at Sharon in 1915, and they had two sons: Vernon Sylvester (born December 2, 1915) and Virgil P. (born January 28, 1917; died March 4, 1922). After Verah passed away in 1917, Harry Johnston married Lena Belle Barnes in 1921. Lena Belle Barnes, the daughter of Richard and Maranda Barnes, was born December 8, 1900 at Perry, Oklahoma. Harry and Lena Johnston had three children: Harold (born December 10, 1921), Patricia (born December 28, 1922) and Dorothy (born February 22, 1924).

At the age of ninety-two, Harry Johnston co-authored a hard-cover book about his early years in Missouri and Oklahoma, Beyond The Limelight, published in 1983.

Harry H. and Lena Johnston spent forty-five years as farmers in the Rhea Community, Washington County, Arkansas. Not only was he a farmer, but Harry Johnston became a self-taught carpenter and rock mason. He methodically tore down the breezy old house with double fireplace, and used the lumber to build a smaller compact residence that he later rock veneered with hand-picked rocks from off the mountain west of the house. He also built and rocked three more buildings; a well house, a cellar with a room over it, and a previously built log chicken house. With very little outside help, he built his own all-purpose barn with hay loft, feed bins, tack room, crib and storage areas, plus a machine shed with timber from the mountain forest. The lumber was sawed to order at a saw mill located south of the house where the barn would be built. A Mr. Perryman from east of Fayetteville owned the sawmill and was given a share of the lumber as payment.

The oldest son, Vernon, attended Oklahoma A&M College in Stillwater and became an electrical engineer, owning his own business in Oklahoma City. He served in the Navy during World War II. He married Martha Mastagni in 1957 (who had two children by a previous marriage: Bernie and Patsy), and they had one son, Randall Vernon. Vernon is now retired and resides in Oklahoma City.

Harold began preaching in rural United Methodist churches when he graduated from Prairie Grove High School in 1941, then attended Hendrix College and the University of Arkansas. During the 1940s he served as a pastor in the United Methodist Church in northwest Arkansas, serving the Monte Ne circuit, the Illinois Chapel-Liberty-Zimmerman circuit, and Wedington Methodist Church. Harold married Virginia Hicks in 1973. He resides RFD Farmington.

Patricia graduated from Prairie Grove High School in 1940 as salutorian of her class, attended Oklahoma City Junior College and the University of Arkansas where she received a B. A. degree. In 1949, she married Elmo Reed at Fayetteville, and they have three children: Jon Kendall born August 8, 1952 married Olivia Pittman in 1980 and has three children (Bradley 1983, Jonathon 1984 and Jennifer 1985); David Barton born July 13, 1955; and Teresa Jane born September 18, 1958 married Paul Roy Brown in 1980 and has three children (Aaron David 1983 and twins Jared Paul and Nathan Joseph 1981).

Patricia has been a school teacher for thirty-seven years, beginning her teaching career at the age of nineteen at Morrow High School. After completing her B. A. degree she taught at Newport, Harrison and Springdale, Arkansas and also at North Lakewood and Littleton, suburbs of Denver, Colorado as a member of the Methodist Church, she served as a Sunday School teacher for many years. She has been a member of Delta Kappa Gamma since 1968 and the PEO Sisterhood since 1957.

She was honored as the Teacher of the Year in Springdale in 1979-1980.

Dorothy graduated as valedictorian in 1942 from Prairie Grove High School, received a B. S. degree (University of Arkansas), M. A. degree (University of Denver), and Ph. D. in psychology (North Carolina State University). She served a number of years as counselor of students at the University of Arkansas, University of Colorado and Florida State University. Later she worked in applied psychology, researching the enhancement of visual performance. Dr. Johnston has served as teacher or counselor in United Methodist churches where she has been a member.

Dr. Johnston has numerous articles in professional journals. She has authored two hard-cover books (co-author Beyond The Limelight, 1983; author History of Rhea Community, Washington County, Arkansas 1987). She has served on national committees involving women and education and women and religion. She has been a member of numerous professional and scientifc organizations. Dr. Johnston's biography is in the Who's Who in American Education publication Leaders In American Science, Vol. VI, 1964-1965, and Who's Who In Frontier Science And Technology, First Edition, 1984-1985.

E. E. Jones

Edward Elmo Jones, born on November 22, 1886 in Owensboro, Kentucky, came to Washington County in 1932. He had worked on canals in Chicago, Illinois, served in the U. S. Army during the first World War and worked in the oil fields of Texas before settling down in Chandler, Oklahoma, with his wife Stella Rogers Jones. She was born in Leitchfield, Kentucky, September 15, 1887. Their first son, Charles Edward, was born on June 10, 1928 and Glen Elmo followed on May 19, 1931. Mr. Jones was an appliance store owner in Chandler. With the Depression came hard times and when the business failed they purchased the old Webb place, a 20 acre site with a small old house on what is now Highway 68 East.

The move brought its heartache as the couple watched one of the trailer loads burn to the ground on the highway between Chandler and Springdale. They moved into the old house with what was left of their household goods and Mr. Jones began raising chicken-broilers.

He was an enthusiastic gardner and they raised most of their food. In 1936 on a windy spring day, Mrs. Jones was preparing lunch on the wood stove. As Glen, then five years old, sat down to eat, two neighbor boys came running into the house screaming, "Your house is on fire" Mr. Jones was at work so Mrs. Jones had only the assistance of some neighbors and two men who had been passing on the road. The wooden shingles burned swiftly. Glen remembers seeing his mother framed in the burning doorway, her arms laden with clothes, stepping out just before the roof caved in. The wind was gusting fiercely and fire department concentrated on saving the house and barn across the road. Charles remembers his father coming to get him at school and going home to nothing but smoke and ashes.

The family was taken by neighbors until a chickenhouse could be made liveable for Mr. and Mrs. Jones. The boys stayed with the Clinkscale family until warmer weather. During that hot, dry summer the family slept on mattresses placed on wire frames in the yard under the stars.

The Depression was at its height and a steady diet of fried chicken and fried apple pies got them through the summer months. The garden dried up due to the severe drought of that year. A new house slowly took shape and by cold weather the family was able to move into the uncompleted structure.

Charles and Glen attended the Old Washington School where Mrs. Matthews was principal. Charles recalls her strong leadership role as essential to the school. The Springdale Public School system served the boys well. Both took part in many activities and were successful athletes in football, basketball and track.

Charles was a member of the Northwest Arkansas Conference Championship football teams of 1944 and 1945. Charles graduated in 1946 serving as vice president of the class. He joined the Army in the summer of 1946 and entered jump school in preparation for service as a paratrooper. After his discharge in January of 1948 he entered the University of Arkansas.

Glen graduated in 1949. He married Loretta Letsch, daughter of Dempsey and Myrle Letsch, local residents, in December of 1950. He joined the Air Force in 1952 and returned to Washington County to attended the University of Arkansas in 1955. He graduated in 1958 and began his career with Pet Milk Company as a plant engineer. He serves today as staff engineer for the same company in St. Louis, Missouri. The couple have three children: Kerry Glen, born May 2, 1953; Steven Paul, born March 20, 1956; and Cheryl Denise, born June 27, 1962. All live in the St. Louis area.

Charles married Elaine Scheele, a classmate, on June 12, 1949, at the old Lutheran Church on Highway 71 in Springdale. That fall, Elaine started the kindergaten at Salem Lutheran Church that is still in existence today. Charles graduated from the University in 1951 with a degree in physics. The couple's first son, Kenneth Edward, was born April 10 of that same year. Charles worked for the aircraft industry as an engineer before returning to the University of Arkansas as a graduate student in physics.

David Charles was born January 23, 1953 in St. Louis, Missouri. Charles and Elaine, with the help of her father M. C. Scheele, built their first house on Hotz Drive in Fayetteville. Elaine continued teaching kindergarten at the church in Springdale.

After completing his master's degree, Charles and his family spent two years in Rolla, Missouri, where Douglas Glen was born September 25, 1956. They then moved to College Station, Texas before returning to Washington County. Charles received his Ph. D at Texas A&M. Roger Alan was born in Bryan, Texas, March 4, 1961 during this time.

Dr. Jones then began teaching in the physics department, serving as an assistant professor at the University of Arkansas in 1962. He built a home on 10 acre site off Highway 45 East. The boys attended Root School, Woodland Junior High, and Kenneth and David graduated from Fayetteville High School. Both boys were active in sports and other school activities. Ken was on the track team in the spring of 1959 and David served as quarterback for the Fayetteville Bulldogs in 1969-1970. Douglas completed the ninth grade at Woodland Junior High and was also active in sports. Scott Martin, born January 5, 1966.

In 1970 Charles accepted the position as department head of the physics department at East Texas State University in Commerce, Texas. They still reside in Commerce at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Jones continued to live on the home place east of Springdale until failing health forced them to join Charles in Texas and spend equal time with Glen in St. Louis, Missouri.

During all the years the years in Springdale, they were faithful members of the First Baptist Church. Mr. Jones was an avid gardener and also raised cattle and hogs. Mr. Jones died on April 2, 1978 in Commerce, Texas, and Mrs. Jones followed him on November 8, 1980 also in Commerce. They are buried in Friendship Cemetery.

David Charles, second son of Charles and Elaine, remained in Washington County. He married Tonia Peoples, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Peoples, residents of Springdale, in December of 1974. Tonia graduated from the University of Arkansas that same December. David worked for Boise Cascade as a wholesale lumber salesman. Tonia taught history at Southwest Junior High and also the gifted and talented in Springdale for 9 years. Their two boys Dylan, born May 11, 1981 and Tyler, born February 27, 1983, were born at Washington County Regional Hospital. They now reside in Little Rock. Douglas graduated from the University of Arkansas with a degree in accounting in 1980. He is now a resident of Fort Smith. Kenneth, a graduate of East Texas State University also in accounting, lives in Dallas. He has one son, Taylor Edward, born October 27, 1983. Roger married Tammy Kirkland in August 1982. They have one daughter, Whitney Elaine, born May 3, 1984, and live in Sachse, Texas. Scott is a physics major at East Texas State University in Commerce, Texas.

Charles and Elaine purchased a 20-acre site in Beaverama, Washington County, and will soon return to the hills of home.

Leslie Jones

Leslie Jones, third child of James Redman Jones and Julia Richardson, was born in Strickler, Arkansas in 1895. He grew up on his parents farm, with the companionship of brothers, sisters and many cousins. In 1916, Leslie married Cora May Upton, daughter of Joseph and Linnie (Tuck) Upton. Two children were born to Leslie and May Jones before they left for California in 1919. Their roots, however, are in Washington County, Arkansas.

Some of the Musicial Jones Family - Strickler, Arkansas - 1921. 1-Stella Jones (with guitar) 2-Burt (in the car) 3-Gladys (with ukelele) 4-Glen (with mandolin) 5-Finley (with Hawaiian guitar) 6-Alvaro (with violin/or fiddle).

Leslie Jones (age 14) in Strickler, Arkansas ca.1909.

Leslie Jones' father, James Redman Jones, born in Randolph County, came as a young man to Strickler, where he married Julia Richardson. James' parents were Isaiah Jones, born in North Carolina, and Charlotte Roach, born in Kentucky. Also, in Randolph County were James' grandparents, William and Martha Jones from North Carolina, and William F. Roach and Laurinda Hubbard from Kentucky.

Leslie's parents, James and Julia Jones, bought a 200-acre farm in Strickler. They sold surplus hay, and apple trees from their nursery. Their children were: Wade, Ada, Leslie, May, Stella, Alvaro, Gladys Glen, Edna and Burt.

Leslie's mother, Julia, was the youngest of the ten children of David Richardson and Amanda Billingsley. Julia's grandfather, John Richardson, came from Scotland to Tennesse about 1798. He married Retta Mann, whose father, David Mann, had come from Ireland in 1810. David Richardson, born in 1812, went to Arkansas about 1837, where he married Amanda. They lived on Fall Creek. David was a cooper and blacksmith. He used to make regular trips to Fort Smith for a wagon load of salt for the people of his community. David Richardson died in 1879, while Amanda lived to be near 100. She died tragically from catching her clothing afire, in 1918.

Julia Jones' grandparents Billingsley were among the very first settlers of Washington County, arriving about 1828. In the book,Billingsley Family In America, by Major Harry A. Davis, Amanda was not included in the family of James Billingsley. However, her death certificate names James and Kitty as her parents.

Our immigrant ancestor, Francis Billingsley, arrived in Virginia in 1649, from Holland, where his family had been living about ten years since leaving their home in England. The Billingsleys distinguished themselves during the Revolution.

Amanda's parents, James and Kitty Billingsley, sixth generation in America, were true pioneers. They and their four children, in 1814, left Tennessee (with two other families of six); traveled by flatboat down the Mississippi River to Arkansas Post; then, by keelboat, up the Arkansas River as land opened up to settlers. After the treaty with the Cherokees in 1828, the Billingsley's settled in the Cane Hill area. They later owned a valley between Hogeye and Strickler. There are many descendants of the Jones, Richardson and Billingsley families still in Washington County.

The Jones Farm is still occupied by family, as well as the Richardson Farm. These families were natural musicians. All the children of James and Julia Jones could play one or more instruments and loved to sing. The "86" district schoolhouse and church was the gathering place. My father, Leslie Jones, played fiddle and guitar and sang a good bass. Although he lived in California, he made annual visits in his later years, and taped many a "Sing" at "86". There was a reed organ in the Jones' parlor, and in 1927, when we made a visit to my grandmother, Julia, I played "General Grant's Grand March" on it. I now have my own reed organ.

Leslie, in 1914, took a bookkeeping course from "The Practical Business College" in Fayetteville. In 1916, he became a rural mail carrier. Riley Jones

Reverend Riley Jones was born on November 8, 1805, at Rogersville, Hawkins County, Tennessee, the son of James Jones and a grandson of Daniel Jones, Revolutionary soldier, and his wife, Harriet Franklin. He married Nancy Bailey born April 6, 1805, the daughter of Carr Bailey and the grand-daughter of William Bailey. Nancy was the great-granddaughter of Samuel Bailey and Sarah Bryan. Sarah and Rebecca Bryan Boone were sisters - the children of Morgan Bryan and Martha Strode.

Riley and Nancy made their first home near Rogersville, building on land that was granted to his grandfather, Daniel, for his years of service. There they became the parents of four children and later they would have six more.

In 1854, Riley sold the land to James Jones and followed his brothers and sisters to Arkansas. His brothers, Claibourne, Samuel (Barney), Enoch, and James Franklin along with three of his sisters, Polly Cavin, Elizabeth Howell and Sarah Long had come to Arkansas before 1850. A fifth sister, Nancy married Stephen Bailey and remained in Tennessee.

Moving first to Hog Eye, Riley became a farmer and it wasn't long until the fertile soil of the Middle Fork Valley caught his eye. He soon moved his family to a farm on the banks of the Middle Fork of White River. It was here that the remaining six children were born.

Riley was ordained a Baptist minister and married many of the young couples around the Sulphur City area.

Riley and Nancy raised ten children. They were: Margaret Frances who married Daniel B. Jones, the son of Robert and "Poppy" Gardner Jones, Eliza Tabitha who married Pleasant Riley Jones, the son of John Jones and Annise Manis, Sarah who married Pleasant Parker, Mary who married August Hicks, Hala Minerva who married Doctor John C. Carter, Elizabeth who married William Jett, Emmaline who married Ephriam Ramey and James Cornelius (Nealy) who married Matilda Lewis.

The Civil War was a tragic time for all the residents of Washington County in the early 1860s and it took its toll on the Jones family. Margaret and Eliza Tabitha were both widowed in 1862. Their husbands, Daniel B. and Pleasant Riley were shot in a skirmish near their home in the fall of 1862. Pleasant Riley died instantly, but Daniel, receiving a stomach wound lived for several days. A year, almost to the time her father died, Daniel's young daughter, Eliza, married Daniel J. Lewis, who was to die a few years later of lung disease contracted during the war. The sorrow continued long after the guns were silenced for the Jones family. On December 27, 1872, James Corneilius married Matilda Lewis in a large wedding. One month from the day of their wedding on January 27, 1873, James was murdered by a young man that Riley and Nancy had taken into their home to raise. The young man was shot and killed the next day in an escape attempt. Having lost Absolom in 1862, this ended the male line and a direct "Jones" line descending from Riley. The girls married and had large families, but there wasn't a son to carry the Jones' name descending from Riley and Nancy. Some time during the years, Eliza Tabitha died leaving several small sons that Riley and Nancy raised, but one of them, William, was shot from ambush and died.

Of the surviving daughters, Margaret, widow of Dan, had several children, including our great-grandmother, Eliza Frances, who married Daniel J. Lewis. They had two children, James Hugo and our grandmother, Margaret Rachel Lewis Malone. She later married Joel Ramsey and had a son, William John. Margaret's last husband was John O'Brien and they had three daughters—Nannie, Mary and Ada.

Eliza Tabitha, widow of Pleasant, had four sons—William, Jesse, John and Benjamin.

Sarah Parker had several children. Mary Gilliland had several children. Lavinia Hicks had two sons: William and Benjamin. Elizabeth Jett had several children. Hala Minerva Carter had children and Emmaline Ramey left a family.

Riley and Nancy lived the remainder of their lives on their Middle Fork Farm. Nancy died on September 9, 1883, and Riley on May 5, 1889. In the fall of 1985, Nancy's tombstone was discovered broken and lying in the weeds. Her great, great, great grandchildren took it up and repaired it and replaced it on its original pedestal. The Mount Zion Cemetery is now part of the Bill Lewis farm. It is kept mowed and is a lovely, peaceful place. It is on the land where the old log church that the Jones family helped build once stood. Lying beside Riley and Nancy are most of their children and the two son-in-laws, Daniel and Pleasant Riley Jones.

Jamie L. Jones, Jr.

Both Jamie and Beverly are natives of Alabama, and are graduates of Alabama Polytechnic Institute (now Auburn University). They were married December 30, 1947, in the First Baptist Church, Cullman, Alabama.

Jamie became Director of the Baptist Student Union (BSU) at the University of Arkansas, on June 1, 1951, and has served in this capacity for the past 36 years. He plans to retire May 31, 1988.

The Joneses have five children—Jamie III (July 15, 1950), Susanne (July 1, 1952), Charles Russell "Rusty" (June 3, 1953), Cynthia Irene "Cindy" (February 23, 1957), and Nancy Camille (November 1, 1964).

Jamie and Beverly were kidded frequently about making it hard to "keep up with the Joneses", even if anyone wanted to try. Also, they were cited as a demonstration of a proverb of BSU origin- "Old BSUers never die. They just marry and multiply."

All of the children, except Jamie, were born in Fayetteville. He was born in Fort Worth. All of the children, except Jamie, attended the University of Arkansas' Home Economics' Nursery School, and all of them, except Nancy, attended the University of Arkansas' Training School, which is no longer in operation. All attended Fayetteville schools, and are graduates of Fayetteville High School. All attended the University of Arkansas.

First Baptist Church of Fayetteville has contributed much to the spiritual welfare of the Jones family. Beverly and Jamie became members in June, 1951. Each of their children was baptized into the church and nurtured by it in their Christian faith and developement. Both Beverly and Jamie have served the church in various responsibilities.

The Jones family has lived in three houses. First, was a small, three-room, upstairs apartment in the dwelling which was the original BSU center, at 944 West Maple (Maple and Lindell Streets). The first floor was quarters for the BSU.

After the arrival of their third child, the Joneses moved to a new home at 1633 North Garland (Garland and North Maxwell), which was made possible through a 25 year, low interest, G. I. loan. The BSU, which had also outgrown its facilities, moved into a new Baptist Student Center in August, 1957, at the Maple and Lindell street site.

In April, 1966, the Joneses moved to the present family home at 1654 East Zion Road. The large, old house and the three acre site, which adjoins the Lake Fayetteville Park property, was a good spot for five lively children, and later, for the ten grandchildren who arrived between 1973 and 1986.

This house was formerly owned by Harry and Virginia McPherson. At one time, it housed a tea room, operated by Mrs. "Mac".

An early meeting of the group which later became the Ozark Society was held in the living room of this house. The Ozark Society became a major force in preserving the Buffalo River as a free flowing stream and in influencing Congress to make it a National River. Mr. McPherson, an archeologist, was an ardent naturalist and environmentalist. He and Jamie Jones were strong advocates of preserving the Lake Fayetteville property when some favored selling part of it for residential developement. Later, the city made it Lake Fayetteville Park. It now includes various recreational facilities and an Environmental Study Center, which is used by both the Fayetteville and Springdale school districts.

In September, 1968, Beverly Jones began her teaching career as an elementary school teacher, with a preference for the second grade. She taught at Washington School in Springdale, and since 1971, she has taught at Asbell in Fayetteville.

Jamie III attended the University of Arkansas on a football scholarship. He received both his B. S. and M. S. degrees, and was selected as Outstanding Senior Man in the Physical Education, Health and Recreation department. he began his teaching career at Hoxie, Arkansas, High School in 1974, and has been head football coach since 1977. He and Cecile Lady of Hoxie, were married January 30, 1971. She received both her B. S. and M. S. degrees in Special Education from the University of Arkansas, and has taught in Walnut Ridge, Arkansas, since 1974. They have two daughters—Hali Nicole (September 17, 1973) and Kathryn Childs "Kakki" (February 9, 1979).

Susanne completed her L. P. N. training at the U of A Medical Center in Little Rock, in 1973. She worked at Washington Regional Medical Center and later at the Baptist Medical Center in Little Rock. She and Marvin Schwartz were married March 7, 1975. Marvin has a Master's degree in Creative Writing from the U of A. He and Suzanne have lived in Guatemala City, in France, and in Miami, where he had teaching assignments. He has written a history of Vista in Arkansas, to be published soon. He wrote the text for Hampton Roy's photographic journal, Greater Little Rock-One in a Million. Several of his poems have been published. They and their two children, Alison Eve (November 19, 1978) and Aaron Whitney (February 5, 1984) now lived in Conway, where Marvin in employed by CCX, Inc.

Charles Russell (Rusty) received his B. A. degree in Psychology from the U of A in 1976. He was active in BSU, serving as both the local and state President, and as a BSU Summer Missionary to the Bahamas in 1973. In 1976-77, he served as both staff assistant and interim BSU Director at the U of A in Little Rock. He worked part-time for J. C. Penney while a student, and upon graduation, became a full-time employee. He is presently Merchandiser for the Men's Department in the Penney's store in the Northwest Arkansas Mall. He and Charlotte Ellen Gill of Dumas, Arkansas, were married August 5, 1978. Charlotte has her B. S. degree in Special Education from the U of A. She taught at Jones Elementary School in Springdale, from 1976-1984. They have four children, Adam Taylor (November 22, 1980), Nathaniel Walker (August 28, 1982), Rachel Ellen (October 11, 1984), and Hannah Elizabeth (October 3, 1986).

Cindy finished high school in 1975 and enrolled at the U of A. She and Michael David Rush were married July 15, 1978. He received his U of A degree in Music Education in 1978. He taught Choral Music in El Dorado Springs, Missouri, and at Ramay Junior High in Fayetteville, from 1981-1986. Since 1986, he has taught math at Woodland Jr. High in Fayetteville. The Rushes have two daughters, Rebekah Ashley (October 3, 1979) and Jamie Ellen (May 5, 1983).

Nancy is a Senior in Marketing at the U of A. In January of 1987, she became a full-time employee of I. B. M. Prior to full-time employment, she had worked part-time for Dillons Supermarket and for I. B. M.

River Jesse Jordan

River Jesse Jordan was born 17 October 1818, in North Carolina. Jesse married Elizabeth Merryman in Green County, Tennessee, 3 October 1836. Elizabeth's parents were William O. and Susannie Merryman, both born in North Carolina about 1800. Elizabeth was born about 1820 in North Carolina.

The Jordans came to Washington County, Arkansas, about 1843, settling in the Rheas' Mill area. They acquired two large farms along the Illinois River and became quite prosperous. Jesse took an active interest in politics. His name appears on many jury panels of early court records. He belonged to Masonic Lodges at Cincinnati and Viney Grove.

Jesse Taylor Jordan and Anna May Shearer Jordan January 27, 1904, Westville, Indian Territory, Oklahoma.

Jesse was an outspoken "Union man" living among Confederate neighbors. During the Battle of Prairie Grove, General Blunt's army camped on one of his farms and Colonel Philips' Indian Brigade camped on the other one. Their forage masters relieved him of a new wagon, a yoke of oxen, 217 hogs, 11 horses, 3 mules, 13 beef cattle, 400 bushels of corn, 2500 bundles of fodder and burned all his fences (estimated at 20,000 new rails). He was shot at while hauling flour and staples from Rheas' Mill to starving Federal families in Fayetteville, risking his life assisting families to move north. He wanted to flee north, but Elizabeth refused to leave their home and her aged parents who had moved to Washington County about 1859. Jesse was arrested and imprisoned at Fort Smith for four weeks, but was released when Union officers attested to his loyalty. Rebel neighbors threatened to kill him, so he visited a daughter, Elizabeth West, in Collin County, Texas, about a year. Upon his return, Rebels burned his home and he hid in the mountains until the war ended. Jesse had trusted Federal officers who had assured him he would be repaid for the supplies used by their army. His claims were denied on the basis that he had supplied a Confederate soldier (his son, John) with a horse, saddle and gun. John had received these gifts before the war began.

Elizabeth Jordan died in 1878. Jesse married Mrs. Antoinette Flynt in 1879. Jesse died 7 July 1904.

Jesse and Elizabeth reared these ten children: William Sanford (married Martha Matthews); Elizabeth (wed Avery West); John Asberry (married Margaret Mateer); Nancy (wed Marshall Dickson); Jesse Powell (married Nancy M. Spears); Newton (wed Margaret Pulis); Mary (married James March); Christopher Freslowe (wed Susie Roote, a Cherokee); Alva D. and Jefferson D. (martial status unknown).

Jesse Powell Jordan married Nancy M. Spears about 1868 and farmed in the Rock Springs community north of Lincoln. Jesse was born 11 August 1845, and "Nannie" was born in 1849 in Missouri, probably to Cherokee parents. Jesse was a deacon in the Rock Springs Baptist Church. Nannie died in 1894. Jesse married Mrs. Matilda Clark in 1911, but they later divorced. Jesse Powell Jordan died in 1933.

Jesse and "Nannie" reared eight of twelve children: William Andrew (married Ida Chism); Sara (wed John Rogers); Laura (married Ellis Taylor); Jesse Taylor (wed Anna May (Mary) Shearer); Mary (married Otis Hulse); Emma (wed Samuel Moore); Samuel (married: 1. Dolly Cheatham 2. Eula Northcutt Pryor); James (wed Daisy Sparks).

Jesse Taylor Jordan, born 11 August 1879, married Anna May Shearer in 1904 at Westville, Indian Territory. Her parents, David Franklin and Mary Elizabeth Scott Shearer, moved from Cave-in-Rock, Illinois, during the "land run." "May" was born 16 March 1886 at Cave-in-Rock. Taylor and May lived at the "fair grounds" and Parksdale communities of Fayetteville. He worked at veneer mills and farmed. Taylor died in 1944, and May in 1959. Their children are: Beaulah (married George W. Drain; three children: Lawrence, Donald Wayne, and Wave); Eula (wed 1. Clyde Jones 2. Duane Gay (no children)); Jewell Maybelle (married Cloe Eugene "Tobe" Drain; one daughter, Frances Lee); Clyde (wed Rilla Shumate; three sons: Clyde Jr., Carl, Jesse); Earvel (married Rosalie Gordan; two children); Loyd (wed Lucille Cook; five children: Linda, Karen, Patricia, Joe, Tessa); Lee (married Caroline Russell; two children: Lee R. Jr., and Susan); Berline (wed 1. Wilmar Drain 2. Ernest Rudin 3. Edward Scrivener; one son Brent Lee Rudin); Christine (married Frank Tomlinson; two daughters: Susan and Jeannie).

Elder Rado Joyce

My grandfather was Elder Rado Joyce. He is listed in the 1880 Washington County Arkansas census, Brush Creek, in the home Alexander and Serena Joyce. I am wondering if he was their grandchild. We do not know who his mother and father were. Elder married Ira Bell Carter in 1905 in Oklahoma Indian Territory. The 1910 Oklahoma census lists them living in Banard Township in Hughes County, Oklahoma and they had three small children and they later had seven more. Their children were Marvin Lofette, John Alexander, Earry Melissa, Denver Lee, Merry Etta, Raymond Edker, Serena, Ora Isebell, Alma Estell, and Jack Melvin Joyce. Five of Elder's children are still living - Raymond Joyce, Mary Sherrin, Ora Lee Tarpley, and my mother Estell Sanders who all live west of Wewoka, Oklahoma and Jack Joyce who lives at 2511 SW 27 Street in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

I will always be grateful to Crawford and Dorothy Morris from Santa Fe Springs, California, for information on Crawford's grandfather. William Henry Oxford and Elder were cousins. Elder Joyce told very little about his life before coming to Oklahoma to work for William Henry Oxford. We know Elder farmed and worked for people. He met and married Ira Bell Carter who lived at a little place called Carson east of Holdenville. They say she had pretty reddish brown hair and loved to square dance. They lived by Wetumka and finally settled in New Lima, Oklahoma a small community west of Wewoka. Ira Bell died in 1937 and Elder died in June 1939. They both died before any of their grandchildren were born. My mother Estell is supposed to have been named after Elder's two sisters Alma and Estell. I don't know if this is true.

Only three of Elder and Ira Bell's children had kids. Fred and Estell Sanders had four. They are Alvie, Rita, Sue, and Linda and eleven grandchildren with eight great-grandchildren. Raymond and Marie Joyce had three children Steven, Mike, and Sherry and they have three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Jack and Lorane Joyce have four children, James, Jackie, Sandy, and John and they have five grandchildren.

I would love to hear from any Joyces living around Springdale or Goshen. Write Rita Orr, 1785 Conner Road, Choctaw, Oklahoma 73020.

Henry Kaiser

In 1978, I began searching for information about my family - where, when and how we came to be where we are today. One of my early findings was in Goodspeed's History of Arkansas published in 1889.

Goodspeed stated that in 1829, my 4th great grandfather, William King, and his son-in-law, my 3rd great grandfather, Turner Hamblet, came to Madison County from Lauderdale County, Alabama. Turner bought property owned by a lone settler, Leonard Koker, while William settled near the Old Campground near present-day Kingston.

History is sketchy in those early years, but the last three of Turner and Hettie King Hamblet's children including my 2nd great grandmother, Nancy, were born in Fayetteville in 1835, 1838 and 1839. Turner was listed on the Tax Assessment rolls from 1832 to 1840 in Izard, Crittenden, Carroll and Madison counties, which was probably due in part to county lines changing. In addition, Turner and his family were enumerated in the 1840 Crawford County census. Little is known of Turner or his family during the 20 year period between 1840 and 1860. He was in Johnson County working as a laborer in the 1850 census but there was no mention of his family.

By the 1860 census, one of Turner's daughters had married a blacksmith named Eubanks and was living in Pope County. Listed with this family were two of Turner's younger daughters, Susan S. Hamblet and Nancy A. Hamblet, my 2nd great grandmother.

Nancy Kaiser married my 2nd great grandfather, Henry Kaiser on July 9, 1860, while living in Pope County. Henry was born in Hardin County, Ohio, in 1838, and it is not known why he came to Arkansas. But in less than a year after he married Nancy, they had moved to Fayetteville where their first child was born in 1861. The remainder of their seven children were also born in Fayetteville.

Henry Kaiser served the Confederacy in the Civil War enlisting on June 20, 1862, in Fayetteville. He was first shown on the Company Muster Roll of Company C, 2nd Regiment, Arkansas Infantry, as a Private. The next Company Muster Roll lists him as a 5th Sergeant in Company C, Brooks Regiment, Arkansas Infantry. He advanced rapidly to Sgt. Major and was present at the Battle of Prairie Grove. He is listed on the Roll of Prisoners of War but there are no details of this era of his life. Little is known of his family's life during these years either.

After the war, Henry and James Pettigrew were partners in the "Retail Liquor and Grocery Business." Advertisements in the Fayetteville newspaper indicate that Henry was also running "Kaisers's Saloon on the East Side of the Public Square." Whether this is the "liquor" part of the store or a separate business is not known. Henry's brother, William, was in business with J. T. McComb in "Mccomb & Kaiser's Bowling Saloon."

Henry was commissioned as a Notary Public by the Governor in 1875, so in addition to his other business affairs, Henry advertised his Notary services with his office located "at the Court House with Reagan & Pettigrew." Many abstracts of title on property in the Fayetteville area reflect Henry's seal so the Notary Public business must have kept him busy. A few months later, an ad appeared in the Fayetteville paper for "Kaiser & Moore, Real Estate Agents, Office at the Court House, Fayetteville." During this time, Henry and Nancy bought and sold several tracts of land in Fayetteville.

In the 1870 and 1880 census, Turner Hamblet was listed as living with Henry Kaiser and his family. Verbal family history informed me that he died shortly after 1880. In fact, tragedy struck the Kaiser family again in May, 1881, when Nancy also died. This seemed to loosen Henry's ties with Fayetteville and in February, 1886, he was working in Walner's Store in Cherokee Town about 60 miles south of Oklahoma City. In August, 1886, Henry was appointed as U. S. Commissioner of the District Court, Western District of Arkansas, the Court of the Honorable Isaac C. Parker at Fort Smith. Then in April, 1887, he was appointed Postmaster at Wynnewood, Indian Territory. Despite the upward trend of his life, he passed away in 1889 and was buried at Wynnewood.

According to one of Henry and Nancy's daughters, Turner Hamblet and his daughter, Nancy were buried side by side in Fayetteville. As of this date, no record has been found of the site. It was said that a large tree was used as a tombstone and the names carved thereon. If that was the case, the "tombstone" has probably long since fallen by the wayside.

Many years passed before direct descendants of the Hamblets and Kaisers again lived in the Fayetteville area. Turner Hamblet's great great grandson, Jim F. Petty (my Dad), moved with his family to the area upon retiring from the Navy in 1957, not realizing how much of their heritage was rooted here. Later, when his Mother, Bertie Mae Petty, visited, they began to realize just how deeply their family was involved in Fayetteville history.

In 1964, I married a "local boy", Randy Bradley, whose roots also run deep in Washington County history. Our daughter, Sabrina Bradley has grown up here and along with us, has a deep appreciation for our ancestors who helped settle this area.

Stirman Karnes

Stirman Karnes and his wife, Gladys Dove (Curtis) Karnes, moved to Cane Hill from West Fork, Washington County, Arkansas, July 10, 1920. They both were descendants of the Andres Karnes -Elizabeth Howry family. Stirman's parents were Charles William Karnes (1868-1944) and Alta Alexander (1873-1966), and his grandparents were John Karnes (1841-1920), Rachel Winn (1843-1915), and William Alexander, (1823-1912), Mary Johnson (1843-1908). Gladys' parents were Robert Graham Curtis (1869-1925), and Effie Stockburger (1874 to 1949), and her grandparents were Franklin Farris Curtis (1833-1902) and Narcissa Jane Karnes (1835-1916), and Alexander Stockburger (1858-1926), Sarah Carroll (1855-1925). John Karnes and Narcissa Jane Karnes were children of Andrew Karnes (1796-1890) and Eliza Howry.

According to a history booklet written by Bernice Rachel Karnes, 1983 entitled George Karnes and Decendants, she writes: George Karnes, Sr. was born in Germany. He was in Botecourt County, Virginia as late as March 20, 1798 when he sold his land. In 1797 he bought land in Hawkins County, Tennessee. His five sons and one daughter were born in Botecourt County, Virginia. All but the last son, Andrew were children of his first marriage. In April, 1794, George married Elizabeth Persinger. In 1796 Andrew was born.

George Karnes, Sr. made a will in Hawkins County, Tennessee on 14 October, 1816 in which he named six children and wife, Elizabeth. George died after 1816, and Elizabeth died August 9, 1839, age 81. Her death is recorded in Andrew's Bible. Both are buried in unmarked graves near Rogersville, Tennessee. According to Prentiss Price, genealogist of Hawkins County, Tennessee. . .

Andrew left Tennessee in 1851, and came to a place south of Elkins in Washington County, Arkansas.

In 1852 Andrew came to West Fork where he stayed on the same place until his death in 1890. In 1820 Andrew married Eliza Howry, daughter of Reverend Daniel Howry and Susannah Wax. Susannah was the daughter of Henry Wax and Margaret Gerschwind.

Stirman Karnes moved to Cane Hill after receiving an appointment to the position of rural mail carrier by the Civil Service. On July 12, 1920, he began a mail route that covered the area south and southwest of Cane Hill; and he carried the mail to that area until his retirement, December 1, 1966.

Stirman was born in West Fork, March 27, 1897. He had spent his entire life in West Fork before moving to Cane Hill, with the exception of time spent in the military service during World War I from September 1, 1918 to December 23, 1918, arriving home on Christmas Eve, 1918. He graduated from West Fork High School and was married to his childhood sweetheart (Gladys) on April 28, 1918, at West Fork. He and Gladys had grown up as neighbors and their fathers were first cousins.

After the death of Gladys, April 11, 1966, Stirman married Grace Raines Webb, May 24, 1970, and they still reside in the Karnes Home at Cane Hill (1987). Grace was a native of Tennessee.

Gladys Dove was born in West Fork, August 15, 1897, and had spent her entire life there before moving to Cane Hill. She graduated from West Fork High School and attended teacher's institutes and normal (as they did at that time) to prepare for teaching school. After being certified to teach, she taught at the following schools in the West Fork vicinity: Manilla, Round Mountain, Sugar Hill and Sycamore. She commuted by horseback from the home of her parents to some of the schools. Her teaching career ended in December 1918 when Stirman returned from the army. After moving to Cane Hill with her husband and first child, she lived there in the same house until her death from a heart attack, April 11, 1966. She was buried in the Cane Hill Cemetery. Gladys was active in her church and community, serving on the original board of directors of the Ozarks Rural Electric Cooperative.

Both Stirman and Gladys were members of the First Christian Church in West Fork, and later became members of the Cane Hill Presbyterian Church.

The following six children were born to Gladys and Stirman. All were born in Cane Hill with the exception of Gladys Merril, the oldest, who was born in West Fork and moved to Cane Hill with her parents. Other children were Carlyn Marguerite, Stirman Warren, Charles Curtis, Helen Allean and Wanda Jean. All graduated from Cane Hill High School; all attended the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, and all were members of the Cane Hill Presbyterian Church.

On May 2, 1964, she married Maurice Glen Brown, a native of Marion, Illinois, who had spent his adult life in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, before moving to Fort Smith in 1963, where he was co-owner of Brown-Norcross Chrysler/Plymouth car agency. After Maurice's death, November 17, 1966, (burial was in Cane Hill Cemetery), Merrill returned to do college graduate work and has been employed by the Fort Smith school system until the present time (1987). She has one step-son, Jay Scott Brown, who resides in Norman, Oklahoma.

Carlyn Marguerite, born December 20, 1920, attended the University 1938-1941, taught school two years, (one year in Cane Hill Elementary School and one year at Sunset Elementary in Rogers, Arkansas) before moving to Tulsa, Oklahoma, July 7, 1943. There she went to work as a service representative in the business office of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. On June 4, 1960, she married Freddie Howard Deaton, a native of Okemah, Oklahoma, who was principal of East Central Junior High School which was later annexed to Tulsa Public Schools, until he retired in June 1980. During her tenure with the telephone company, Marguerite was advanced to a position in management where she served for several years until she retired in March 1981. Loren Kelchner

Loren Kelchner, a leading landscaper of Washington County, was born in Gentry, Benton County, Arkansas January 18, 1935. He moved with his family to Siloam Springs in 1943 and graduated from Siloam Springs High School in 1952.

Loren is the grandson of James Wilson I and Emma (Conner) Kelchner who moved to Benton County from Kansas in 1914. They were both born in Columbia County, Pennsylvania and had moved to Kansas a few years after their marriage of June 1882. James was a farmer and the Kelchner homestead was in the Fairmount Community.

Loren's father, James Wilson Kelchner II, was born in Kansas and went back to Parsons, Kansas for his bride, Ella Toevs Kelchner. He was a carpenter of the old school and was adept at all skills connected with the building trade including plumbing and electrical work. James came back to Arkansas in 1930 and raised his family here. Loren was the youngest child and only son.

In 1956, Loren married Louise Rutherford, daughter of Earl and Trula (Mabry) Rutherford. They became the parents of four children: Steven Earl Kelchner (born December 23, 1958), Janet Diane (Mrs. Steve Burnett. . .born June 7, 1960), Sandra Gail (Mrs. Paige Combs. . .born January 26, 1963) and Brenda Louise (Mrs. Scott Lackey. . .born April 23, 1965). All of the family now reside in Washington County except Janet and family who live in Siloam Springs.

For a time after his marriage, Loren helped his father-in-law with his produce business. Earl Rufus Rutherford was a forerunner of the large trucking interests of today. He hauled apples from northwest Arkansas to Louisiana, then followed the harvest north through Illinois into Michigan. Later, he owned his own bulk feed trucks and delivered feed to area farmers, until his death in 1962 at the age of 58 years.

Loren and family moved to Springdale in 1961 when Sam Peace's Nursery, for whom Loren worked, opened a new Garden Center there.

Peace's Flowers came into existence in Siloam Springs in 1936 when John Samson Peace bought Thurman's Greenhouse. In the 50s, it was moved from near the Peace family home on South Britt to its present location on East Main in Siloam Springs. Young Sam began raising Nursery stock on forty acres on Highway 59 between Siloam and Gentry. Loren Kelchner got his start in the Nursery business at that location. He began by doing hard labor tending the stock and later became Manager of Peace's Garden Center when it opened in Springdale.

John Samson Peace was a true old-time plantsman and nurseryman who had a deep love for and knowledge of plants. He passed this caring and knowledge on to his son. Both old and young Sam were active in Nursery activities throughout the area, and were very helpful to Loren. They taught him all aspects of the Nursery business.

When Peace's Garden Center in Springdale closed its doors in 1970, Loren began his own landscaping business. Then in 1979, he and partner Greg Mohney bought the old Williams Nursery and Greenhouses. In 1984, Loren sold his share in the Kelchner-Mohney Nursery and is currently landscaping on his own again.

Loren and Louise's current pride and joy is the next generation, their grandchildren: Cassidy Marie Combs (born 1983) and Matthew Cole Burnett (born 1984). Soon there will be another addition when Steve and wife, Brenda (Fanning) have their first child. Perhaps it will be a son to carry on the family name.

Carl Kelley

Sebastiano Cali, later known as Carl Kelley was born in Sicily, Italy, February 2, 1878. He died January 25, 1966 and he and his wife, Angela are buried in Cox Cemetery, Morrow Arkansas. He came from Sicily through New York and Ellis Island. Around 1921, he moved to Cove Creek, Washington County, Arkansas, located ten miles south of Prairie Grove, Arkansas, to the top of a mountain, known for years as Kelley Mountain. A two-story log house surrounded by apple orchards is where he made his home until his death. He was a farmer and harvested crops of apples, peaches, tomatoes, beans and strawberries. Carl built a cannery on the land and took his goods to Van Buren, Arkansas by wagon. When he needed supplies, he went into Prairie Grove, dressed in a suit and his best shoes, driving a mule-pulled black buggy, purchased from the Southern Mercantile. He always paid cash and didn't believe in charging. He never learned to drive an automobile and refused to operate a tractor. Many times on trips from the farm to Van Buren, Carl rode his bicycle. A friend named Charlie Lamendola lived nearby and his wife's sister came here from New Orleans. She was an Italian widow named Angela Vacarro Spallitta, with four young children; Mona, Josephine, Jim and Nancy. Carl Kelley married Angela and they had one son, Johnnie, born January 8, 1923 at the farmhouse. All five children were raised on that farm and attended Fly Creek School. Mona married a Terrahova, both now deceased; Josephine married her cousin Nick Lamendola first, then a Guss, all deceased; Jim Spallitta married and now resides in Kansas City, Missouri. Nancy married Joe Giangreco and also lives in Kansas City, Missouri; Johnnie married Maxine Corrine Sellers, February 27, 1943. Maxine was born January 14, 1925 and her parents were Marion Sellers and Lura Jane Wade. Carl and Angela spoke Italian and only a few words of English. They both became American citizens in the early 1940s and had to study many long hours to learn and write their name in English for the naturalization.

Maxine and Johnnie started out as newlyweds at the farm living with his parents. They had the farmhouse modernized and had it wired even before electricity was brought to the rural area. Johnnie served in World War II and received a Purple Heart and medals for bravery and marksmanship. His name is listed as "Kalley" on his army papers. He was owner and operator of Kelley Canning Company, Prairie Grove, Arkansas and provided employment for many area residents. Maxine and Johnnie had three children: 1. Johnnie Lee Kelley, Jr., born July 22, 1944 - Mock Clinic, Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Married Linda Sue Jordan April 23, 1966 who was born April 26, 1947 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Vergie Viola Kelley Vergie Viola Kelley (Ola Kelley) was born April 11, 1876 in Jefferson, Iowa to Elijah Kelley and Mary Harrison Kelley. The family moved to Arkansas when Kelley was twelve years old. On April 12, 1893 she married Henry S. Clardy. Henry was killed in a logging accident in 1896. At the time they married, they homesteaded two hundred acres on White River in the northeast section of Washington County. This branch of the water was dubbed Kelley Creek and is listed on the map of Beaver Lake as Kelley Creek. When Beaver Lake came into existence, it took a large portion of Kelley's land and after her death on October 24, 1968 the remainder was sold.

Henry and Kelley had one child, Mary Emmaline (Emmie) Clardy born April 11, 1895. Emmie is still living in Springdale, Arkansas. When Emmie was three years old, Kelley decided to go to Chicago, Illinois to work. She worked as a cook in a large hotel and her wages consisted of three dollars a week and room and board for herself and her daughter.

While living in Chicago, she met and married Barney Boesen (from whom she was later divorced). They moved back to Arkansas on her two hundred acres but he wasn't satisfied to live here and returned to Chicago. Kelley eventually went back to try for a reconciliation but wasn't successful. She came back home and filed for a divorce. Barney came for the final decree and on the day of the trial after leaving the courtroom, an argument took place and in anger Kelley pulled a knife and cut his throat. He lived but didn't press charges.

During the depression Kelley went to Washington State to pick apples but when she got there the truckers were on strike and the apples weren't being picked. Kelley had sold a pair of mules to finance the trip and didn't have enough money to come home on. She went to a church and asked the pastor for work to feed her and the other members of the ill fated party that spent the winter in Washington that year. When Kelley returned to Arkansas her parents had decided to move back to Iowa and Kelley bought their farm of two hundred acres to add to her own two hundred.

Her daughter, Emmie, had married William Quantreal (W. Q.) Macon on June 8, 1912 and they had three children: Cynthia Florence Macon (Stanphill) of Springdale, Arkansas, Ola Berry Macon (deceased) and Thomas William Macon of Springdale.

Emmie and W. Q. were divorced while he was serving time in the federal penitentiary for bootlegging whiskey (a venture undertaken equally with Kelley but one for which he took the total blame) and Emmie married William Walters and they had one daughter, Opal Emmaline Walters (Clark), (deceased).

Kelley continued to make moonshine and bootleg for a number of years until legal whiskey became too cheap and easily attainable for people to seek out illegal booze.

She acquired another two hundred acres by purchasing the Harve Marks farm which bordered her acreage and quite a bit later, bought the last forty acres that comprised her section of land (640 acres) on the courthouse steps at Fayetteville, Arkansas. The property had belonged to her brother, Bert Kelley, and he had died without a will.

Kelley was a mid-wife, going wherever she was asked to deliver babies. She delivered her first baby at the age of fifteen and it was her sister's. The baby was breech and the mid-wife had given up on delivering it. Kelley washed her hands in whiskey (she believed whiskey was the cure-all), waved her hands in the air to dry them and proceeded to turn the baby. Both the baby and mother lived; probably due to the fact that Kelley was smart enough (long before sterile conditions were considered important to health) to realize cleanliness was mandatory.

Although Kelley lived near water all her life, she never learned to swim and once during an emergency, she drowned a pair of mules trying to get across the swollen creek to go after a doctor. She managed to cling to a limb after both mules were gone and the next day a neighbor heard her hollering and rescued her.

In the early nineteen fifties Kelley bought a pair of old broken down rodeo nags and broke them to pull a wagon. She sworn she put that wagon back together a dozen times after jumping to avoid being hurt by the wild horses as they crashed through the brush and broke up the wagon repeatedly. Kelley was in her seventies then.

Kelley loved music and played the banjo and fiddle every opportunity she had. When she was eighty years old there was a write up about her in the Springdale News complete with a picture of her playing her banjo and the caption read, "Life begins at 88".

She had built a new house, the first modern one she'd ever lived in, and was in the process of building a dance hall and cafe but she had just moved into her house and friends and relatives gave her a housewarming. When someone would arrive, she'd appoint a guide to show the newcomer through. "Be sure and show 'em my new hot water bottle", she'd say from her chair in the front yard. The hot water bottle was a water heater. She couldn't believe the closets in the house either and vowed to take her dresses out of the boxes and trunks where she'd always kept them. Kelley had worn pants all her life (probably close to sixty years before pants became fashionable for women).

Mrs. Kendle Sigmon was there and told the story about the time when she and Kendle had just gotten married (thirty years prior to this) and were working at a canning factory. Kelley was working there too but wouldn't work with the women at the packing shed. She went out to the fields with the men to pick and could pick more tomatoes than any man there. The first night, Kendle said that he would try picking tomatoes just one more day but that if he couldn't beat that old woman at picking tomatoes the next day, he was going to quit. The next day he nearly killed himself trying to out-do Kelley. Kelley sang and whistled and spent considerable time looking at the sky as she picked and she beat him again that day. He quit. Kelley was fifty-eight.

Everyone in the area knew Kelley was an easy touch. She would give the last bite off her table to anyone with a hard luck story and did many times. She was also just as kind hearted with her family. Besides her one child and four grandchildren, Kelley had twelve great-grandchildren: William Quantreal Stanphill (son of Florence Macon Stanphill); Betty Jo Macon Taylor, Willa Dean Macon Johnson, Wanda Macon Paine, Jeannie Macon Reynolds, and Patty Macon Sweat (daughter of Ola Berry Macon); Tommy Wayne Macon, Ronnie Macon, Donald Macon and Shirley Macon (children of Thomas William Macon); and Arvis Lee Clark and Jerry Wayne Clark (sons of Opal Emmaline Walters Clark).

Kelley was ninety two years old when she died and was buried within ten miles of where she'd lived most of her life.

Fisherman from many states can tell you where Kelley Creek is.

Jesse R. Kelly, M. D.

Jesse R. Kelly was born in Habersham County, Georgia, November 29, 1833. He was the eighth of nine children born to Hiram and Elizabeth McGee Kelly, native North Carolinians. They moved to Georgia and settled in Habersham County. They also lived in Cherokee County.

William H., Julia Kelly, and George Lee Benson

Elizabeth died when Jesse was fifteen. He lived on the farm with his father and later studied medicine at Atlanta Medical College, where he graduated in 1859. At age twenty-one he married Elizabeth Ann Richards of South Carolina, who was born October 9, 1835. They had nine children.

In 1858 Hiram Kelly moved to Arkansas and settled in Madison County. In 1878 Jesse and Elizabeth Ann also moved their family to Washington County, and settled in the Goshen Community. In addition to his medical practice Jesse operated the general store and was postmaster there for five years. He was an ordained deacon and also a licensed minister of the Southern Methodist Church.

At age nineteen Julia Ellazene Kelly, daughter of Jesse and Elizabeth Ann, married William Hamilton Benson (b. 3/11/1858). He was the youngest of nine children born to Isaac and Rebecca McDonald Benson. Rebecca was born February 9, 1816, probably in Rhea County, Tennessee. They moved their family to Arkansas and lived in Ouachita County where Isaac died in 1866.

Rebecca decided it was an unhealthy place to live and moved with her children to Washington County in 1868.

Julia and William lived near Fayetteville for about two years. They then moved to a farm located on a mountain east of Goshen. Their youngest daughter still lives there. They also had nine children—George Lee, Lola Earl, Elsie Irene, Rebecca Ann, Clyde Walker, Jessie Hazel, Lennie Velma, William Bryan and Woodrow Wilson.

In addition to saddle horses and mules they had cows, pigs and chickens which provided plenty of milk, butter, eggs and meat for the family. An abundance of fruit and vegetables of all kinds were grown, canned and dried for use during the winter months.

As each child became old enough, they helped with the work. Sundays they went to church or Sunday school. Occasionally there was "all day preaching and singing with dinner on the ground."

Julia disliked shopping, so that was done by her husband or daughters as they didn't mind the long trip by wagon to Fayetteville. In addition to helping with the outside work and housekeeping chores at home the oldest daughter, Lola, stayed with a number of families who needed help with nursing or with housework during an illness. She enjoyed this type of work and did it from time to time for many years.

On a trip to Eureka Springs to visit friends she met George Washington Sawyer. "Mike" as he was called was born in Staunton, Illinois, July 1, 1866. He came to Eureka Springs about 1901, purchased a grocery store and operated it for a number of years. He was married to Tillie McCutcheon shortly after arriving in Arkansas. Their only child, a son, died of pneumonia when he was about four years of age. When Tillie became ill with cancer Mike asked Lola to help nurse her and look after the house. She died several months later. Lola and Mike were married on February 13, 1919.

For a time after marriage Lola helped in the grocery store. They had one daughter, Rebekah June, born at their home in Eureka Springs. About two years later Mike decided to quit the grocery business and buy a farm in Washington County near Lola's family. It was located a mile south of Mayfield and was known as the Allison place.

Since Mike was a "jack-of-all-trades" he built their house almost single-handedly. They planted a small orchard, a big garden and sowed oats, corn and wheat for his horses. Mowing and raking hay, then putting it in the barn filled the long summer days with hard work, but it usually lasted until spring.

In May 1931, Mike died suddenly from a stroke. Lola and June remained on the farm until she entered high school in Fayetteville. After graduating from University High School in 1938. June and David Roberts Henson were married on September 13, 1939.

They had two daughters, Linda June, born September 22, 1940, in Fayetteville City Hospital, and Mary Ann, born in the same hospital on December 11, 1945.

Lola Benson Sawyer lived to see her great-great granddaughter, Sarah Rebekah Garton. Her greatest joy was rocking Sarah to sleep as she sat by the warm fireplace.

Clyde Henry Kendrick

The family history of Clyde Henry Kendrick begins around the turn of the century when his grandparents, John Henry Kendrick and Emma S. Nail Kendrick, traded their homestead and its sod hut where they lived in the Oklahoma Territory for a farm in Lowell, Arkansas. Clyde's father, Garland Edgar Kendrick, was born there in 1902. His mother, Willie Rhea Carter Kendrick, was born in Camden, Arkansas, in 1902. Her family moved to Fayetteville around 1910. They were married in 1920, and Clyde, the second of five children, was born in Lowell in 1923. He grew up on their family farm there during the depression.

Clyde began his first semester at the University of Arkansas in 1941, but interrupted his education there to serve three years as an aviator in the Naval Air Corps during World War II. He was honorably discharged in December, 1945. These years were the only years of his life when Clyde did not actively farm.

Clyde returned to the University of Arkansas in 1946 and continued his education there through 1952 receiving a B. S. degree in Agriculture and doing graduate work in animal nutrition. During those years, he farmed, taught veterans in Rogers, and most importantly married and began a family. He and Betty Lou Wharton Kendrick had known each other from their early years when they rode the school bus together. Betty was born in Lowell in 1925, one of four children of Harley Wayne and Mary Shackelford Wharton. Betty graduated from Central Baptist College in Conway. Clyde and Betty were married in 1947 and lived in Lowell until 1953 when they moved to Springdale. They were both active in church, community, PTA and Jaycees.

Clyde began work in 1952 with the Farm Bureau Co-Op in Springdale as a field service man and finished as nutritionist and production manager in Fayetteville in 1964. During those twelve years that he worked at the co-op, the family lived on Shipley Street in Springdale until 1957 when they moved to a farm on Elm Springs Road. They raised grapes, cattle, and chickens. Betty was a member of Oak Grove's Home Demonstration Club, and Clyde was active in promoting the baking and eating of pies. They lived there until 1978 when Clyde sold his farm, semi-retired, and moved back to part of the original family farm in Lowell, Arkansas.

Clyde and Betty were members of First Baptist Church from 1954-1963 and of Elmdale Baptist Church from 1965-1979.

Clyde and Betty are the parents of four children. (1) John Henry Kendrick was born in Fayetteville in 1948. He and his wife, Patricia Adams Kendrick and their two children, Brian and Andrea, live in Springdale. John is a general surgeon. He and his family are members of First Baptist Church of Springdale. (2) William Charles (Bill) Kendrick was born in 1952, one of the first babies born at Springdale Memorial Hospital after its opening in 1952. He and his wife, Carol Perry Kendrick, and their two children, Carrie Beth and Michael, live in Springdale where Bill is a family physician. They are members of University Baptist Church in Fayetteville. (3) Brenda Ann Kendrick Mallory and (4) Linda Jan Kendrick Wright were born in July 9, 1954. They were the first set of twins born at Springdale Memorial Hospital. Brenda and her husband John live in Little Rock, where she is a departmental business manager at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences Campus. Jan and her husband Chuck live in Hot Springs with their children, Ashley and Spencer. Jan is a physician and director of the Arkansas Rehabilitation Services offices there.

All four children attended Springdale schools, including one year for John and Bill at the Oak Grove two-room school just before it closed. All four attended the University of Arkansas. Remarkably, by working both at his "city job" and on the farm, Clyde was able to put all four children through the University of Arkansas and three of them through medical school.

Clyde is now retired and collects antique wood working tools. His nationally known collection fills a four-room house.

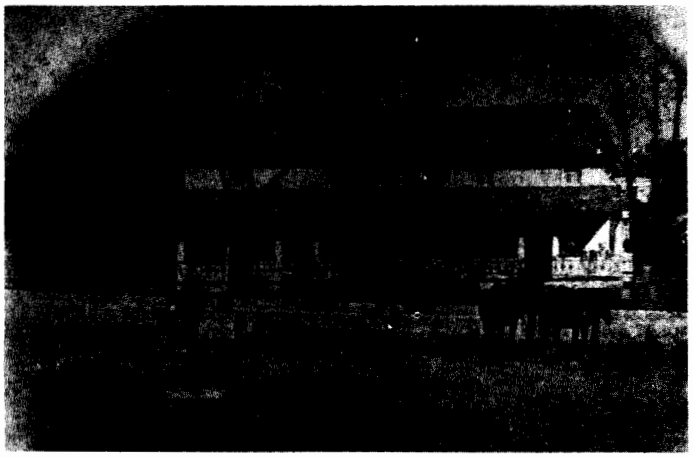
John Kennan

The Kennan name goes back to about 1832 in Arkansas History. I shall try to thread the male lineage to present day, 1987.



This is a picture of John Kennan's home taken about 1860 but torn down in about 1965. He was grandfather of Tom Kennan, Sr. It had Civil War scars-mostly bullet holes and a large spring of water in rear. Had a large farm and when others had crop failure he would give them part of his to tide them.

John Kennan, Walter Alexander Kennan, and George Fickland Kennan.

My basic information comes from a history of the Kennan Family written by George W. Kennan in 1935. George was a jeweler in Springdale, Arkansas. He was a grandson of the first Arkansas John Kennan, born in Kentucky in 1795, homesteaded land in Madison County in 1832, and married Elizabeth Evans. They had eleven (11) children, only four (4) sons lived to manhood, who had children, they were (1) John, Jr., (2) Joseph, (3)

Alexander and (4) George Fickland. John Kennan (d 1884) and Elizabeth Evans Kennan are buried at the Wesley Cemetery in Madison County. (1) John, Jr. b. 1823, first born son of John and Elizabeth Evans Kennan, married Mildred Shumate, they had nine (9) children, only (2) sons have male heirs, they were (1a) Walter Alexander Kennan and (1b) William A. Kennan. John, Jr. was a farmer and stockman, etc. They lived at Draketown in Madison County, Arkansas. Both are buried in the Wesley Cemetery at Wesley, Arkansas. (1a) Walter Alexander (b.1857-d.1947) married Marguerite Parker, they had thirteen (13) children, eight (8) sons and five (5) daughters. John Raymond (J. R.) was a teacher, superintendent and Washington County School Supervisor. He served as County School Supervisor from 1937 until his death in 1980. He had no heirs, but left a great heritage by his contribution to education in Washington County. Norman C. Kennan married Blanche Edwards, they had three (3) children one (1) son and two (2) daughters. Their son, Gary is married and had two (2) daughters. (1a-2) John married Stella Cole, they had two (2) children, one (1) son, Carl and one (1) daughter. Carl married Betty Dickson they had four (4) children, four (4) sons, Edward, Larry, Tommy and Jack. We do not know of any male heirs. (1a-3) Samuel died young, but was never married. (1a-4) Charles M., married a Clark, had three (3) children, two (2) sons and one (1) daughter. One son died young, the other son, Loyd married and has an adopted son, Terry. (1a-5) James D. married a Stokenbury, they had one (1) daughter. (1a-6) Edward married a Boden, they had four (4) children, but no male heirs. (1a-7) Earl married and had one (1) daughter, but no male heirs. (1a-8) Thomas C. married Myrtle Brashear, they had three (3) children, one (1) son Thomas, and two (2) daughters. Thomas married a Bailey, they have three (3) daughters, no male heirs. Earl (1a-7) and Thomas C. (1a-8) are the only surviving children of Walter Alexander Kennan, Earl moved to California in 1922, worked for Standard Oil of California (Chevron) for 41 years, retired and now lives with his wife Nola in Fayetteville. Thomas C. retired from Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, now lives in Springdale, he devotes many hours to volunteer work with the Springdale Chamber of Commerce and other civic interests, plus very active in church work. Thomas served one term as State Representative from District 9. No male lineage through the Walter Alexander and Marguerite Parker Kennan link. (1b) William A., married a Hall, like his brother Walter Alexander, they too, had thirteen (13) children, only one (1) son, George White Kennan. George White had one (1) son, Paul, and Paul had one (1) son Vernard, but as of this date, no male heirs. The end of the John, Jr. lineage.

(3a) George William b. 1861, married a Cannon to this union three children (3a-1) Asa Ray, (3a-2) Earl Leon and (3a-3) Audrey J. George William was a jeweler by trade, for many years he had a store in Springdale. (3a-1) Asa Ray (b.1888) a jeweler and optometrist by trade, his home was in Fort Smith, Arkansas, married a Ford, they have one (1) son (3a-1a) William Ray (b. 1923) he owned and operated Kennan's Jewelry in Fayetteville for many years. William Ray is married and has one (1) son, William Ray, II (3a-1a-1), he is married to a Humphrey, they have two (2) sons and live in Texas, the sons are Jeffrey (b.1977) and Mathew (b.1978). These two (2) sons are the first link with the original Kennan name in the genealogy of the first 'Arkansas John Kennan'. (3a-2) Earl Leon moved to Nebraska from Arkansas, married, but had no sons. (3a-3) Audrey J. (b.1899-d.?) married a Pierce, no children by birth, an adopted son, David. Audrey J. was a jeweler, they owned and operated a store, later they had an antique business for many years in Fayetteville and Springdale, Arkansas. The only link for the third son, Alexander Marshall is through the lineage of Asa Ray (3a-1).

(4) George Fickland (b.1837-d.1896), the fourth and last son of the original John and Elizabeth Evans Kennan. His home was in Rogers, first married a Cartwright, no children, second marriage, he married a widow, Mitchell. To this union four (4) children were born, they were, Jane, (4a) Alvardo Alexander, (4b) William Burnett and Zilphia, only two (2) male heirs. Alvardo Alexander married a Rieves, they had two (2) children, (4a-1) Harry George (b.1891) and Clara (b.1892). (4a-1) Harry George left no male heirs. (4b) William Burnett (b.1871) married Willingham, they had two (2) sons, (4b-1) George William (b.1901) and (4b-2) William Burnett (b.1908). (4b-2a) Billy Bob married a Sue Mitchell, they have two (2) children, they are Amy and (4b-2a-1) William. This date William (4b-2a-1) is not married, therefore, no lineage. (4b-2b) David married a Lester, they have two (2) children, (4b-2b-1) John David and Angela. (4b-2b-1) John David Kennan is direct lineage to the first John Kennan, he is a great-great-great grandson.

As of 1987, there is only two (2) direct links between the first John Kennan of Arkansas, first being Jeffrey Kennan and Mathew Kennan, brothers through the third son, Alexander Marshall Kennan (1831-1916) and the second being John David Kennan a descendent through the fourth son, George Fickland Kennan (b.1837-d.1896).

The Arkansas John Kennan's father was William Berry Kennan of Kentucky. Family folklore has it that this is a direct lineage to Thomas MacKennan, one of two (2) brothers coming to the United States in approximately 1630, Richard and Thomas MacKennan. When they arrived at the ship to sail to America, the "K's" were being loaded before the "M's", the prefix of "Mac" was dropped by Thomas, therefore, he was able to board the ship.

Albert J. Kerr

Benjamin Kerr's three sons were all born in Wayne County, Illinois and raised in Gasconade County, Missouri. When the Civil War came along Benjamin and his two older sons, James and Thomas joined the Confederate Army. Later his youngest son William joined the Union Army. Benjamin died in Gasconade County in 1867 of a disease he contracted while in the army.

James, my grandfather, participated in at least one of the battles at Wilson's Creek, Missouri (just south of Springfield) and it is believed that he spent some time around Fayetteville and in the western part of Madison County during the war. In March 1868 James married Mary Ellen Neely in Gasconade County, Missouri. Their children were: Sarah, Mary, Henry, Martha, Malissa, Ida, John, Albert (my father), Arminia. Mary Ellen died of childbirth complications with a tenth child on July 10, 1889.

James remarried in 1891 in Missouri to Elizabeth. Sometime about 1895-1896 William's wife died, and he and his children and James and his family moved to Fayetteville. James, Elizabeth and their family settled in a house that was located in the vicinity of the old Bear Brand Hosiery Plant, now the University of Arkansas' "Engineering South" building. Albert Jefferson attended school and worked at a store on the west side of the square, until he was 13 years old, at which time, he ran away from home and went to his oldest brother, Henry, in the Indian Territory (Oklahoma) south of Tulsa.

Albert worked as a cowboy until he met, courted, and married the local school teacher, Lenore Algerine Lawrence, my mother, on February 5, 1910 at Okmulgee, Oklahoma.

When Albert got married, he quit working as a cowboy and started farming. Albert and Lenore moved to Green Forest, Arkansas in 1912 and lived in a small house on Lenore's parent's farm. Her parents were getting old, and they had a big farm so Albert farmed their place. In 1924 they moved to Coin, Arkansas (about 6 miles s. e. of Green Forest) to an eighty acre farm they bought. Albert farmed and raised sheep and cattle there for a couple of years.

In 1926 the family moved to a 120 acre farm about two miles southeast of Gentry, Arkansas. The family, in 1928, moved to the Vaughn Community, about 8 miles west of Bentonville, and remained there for sixteen and a half years. Twelve children were born to Albert and Lenore, seven sons and five daughters: however, four of the boys were either stillborn or died soon after birth, the eight who lived were: Mary, Grayce, Alberta, Paul, Betty, Albert B., Jessie, and Karl. Six of the eight children that lived graduated from the Vaughn High School. During World War II all three of Albert's sons served in the army.

In August 1944, Albert sold his farm and he and Lenore moved back to Fayetteville. They bought a small home at 213 East 13th Street (corner of Washington Avenue and 13th Street). In addition to being a farmer Albert was also a carpenter. He worked at this trade until he retired in 1960. Albert died January 28, 1967, and Lenore died February 27, 1974. Both are buried in Fairview Memorial Gardens.

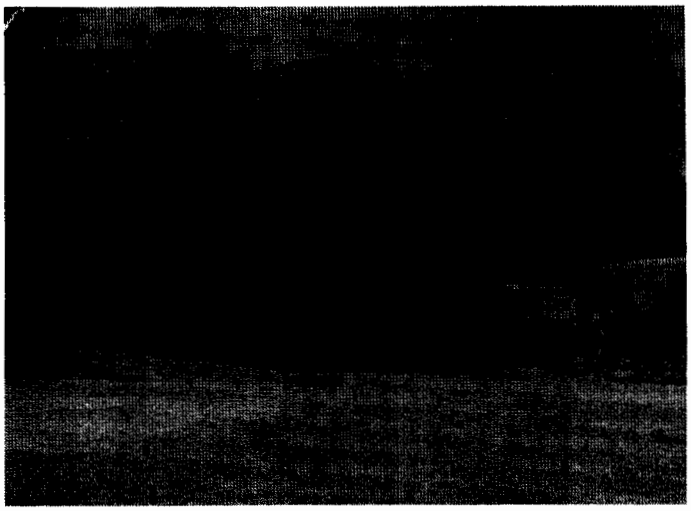
Dr. J. B. Kilgo

Early in the year, before crop plantin' time, in 1892, a young medical doctor named John Booker Kilgo, moved into the beautiful little valley we know today as Savoy. He brought his wife and three children with plans to build his dream home. They came by way of Waldron, Scott County and Sebastian County. He had been trained by his father in the ways of medicine, back in RaraAvis, Mississippi after the War Between the States. It was said he could treat a case of the fever when he was only 12 years old. Dr. A. W. Kilgo, the father of John B. has lost one eye in an accident and his remaining eye was becoming very weak. J. B. Kilgo arrived in Arkansas from Mississippi and settled in Scott County. It was here March 9, 1881 he received his Certificate to Practice Medicine and Surgery in the State from the Board of Medical Examiners of Scott County. While awaiting his practice to build, John taught penmanship at Chaney's School in Gilmore, Indian Territory.

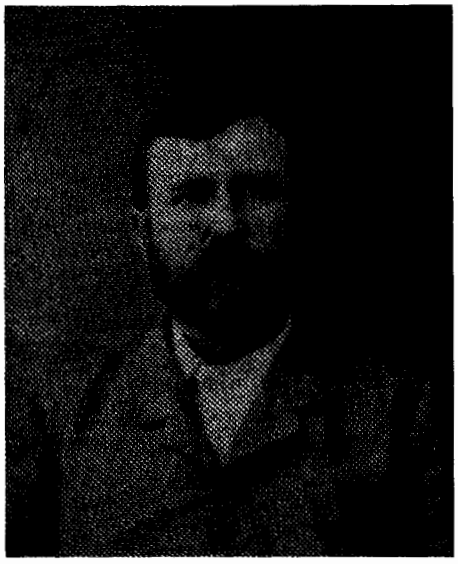
It was in Sugar Loaf Valley, Sebastian County (near Mansfield) that he met, courted and married the beautiful young Leni Leota Smedley (granddaughter of Joseph Smedley, an English subject who came to this country as a missionary back in 1829, and served as minister of the 15th Street Baptist Church in Philadelphia and later was employed by the U. S. Government to teach in the Mushalatubby District of the Choctaw Nation, Indian Territory). Dr. Kilgo and his new bride returned to Waldron to make their home.

In the Spring of 1892 the family left Scott County and moved north to Washington County. There were three children at that time, Lucy Delphia (10) by a previous marriage, Eva Theresa (4) and Booker Benjamin (1). The two youngest were born in Waldron.

Not long after the family settled in, John had an opportunity



Dr. J. B. Kilgo's water-powered grist mill, Savoy, Arkansas.



Dr. John Booker Kilgo

to purchase a water-powered grist mill, located on the banks of the Osage Creek. A dam had been built to raise the level of water to a height for supplying power to the mill's turbine.

The family had selected a choice piece of land on top of a small hill overlooking the valley for building their dream home. It was soon started and a grand house it was . . . solid as a rock, made of red clay brick, featuring a huge front porch on which to sit out the heat of the day, a giant fireplace stood at one end, and the place was fenced all around to keep the children from straying. Pine trees shaded the place where they played. It was a peaceful place until May 20, 1898, when the sound of an oncoming freight train sounded the coming of a killer cyclone. It touched down only a short distance from the house and in seconds destroyed their dream home. Very little was left standing and as nature so often does, left John's mother's mantle clock lying face down on a pile of bricks that was once their house. When the clock was picked up, not a single piece of glass or wood was broken. John dusted it off, set it on a level spot and it started running, beginning at the time the cyclone struck.

J. B. Kilgo, his wife and family lived in Savoy 18 years, doctoring folks, operating the grist mill, running a general store and raising a family. In 1909 they moved with their 10 children to a 600-acre farm, near Cottage Hill in southeastern Benton County, where he built a grist mill and saw mill. Here on what was known as "The Stevenson Place" near the town of Best, two more children were born to the couple. The family later moved to War Eagle, Benton County, only four miles away where J. B. purchased a large water-powered grist mill on the War Eagle river, a fine mill that had been built by a Pioneer settler named Blackburn, prior to the War Between the States. He later purchased a general store, then settled down to a semi-retired life and let his sons and daughters run the businesses.

Dr. J. B. Kilgo died in 1934; Leni Leota Smedley Kilgo died in 1938. They are both buried in the Austin Cemetery, near Best, Arkansas.

Wayne Kilgo is a grandson of Dr. J. B. Kilgo.

John Kimbrough

John Kimbrough came to America from England as a youth. The family was Baptist and came for religious freedom. One of the son's name was Thomas. He came to Dutch Mills, Arkansas in early 1800 from Tennessee.

Thomas had a son named Felix who went to Nacogdoches, Texas to school, married Henrietta Baxter and came back to Dutch Mills where he lived the remainder of his life. Died 1905. He was active in church and was the organist. There have been many school teachers and musicians in every generation since.

Thomas, Felix's father, along with brothers and sisters were charter members of the Liberty Baptist Church now 104 years old. The church is still used by the Baptists and the auditorium is the original. It is thought the lumber was hauled over the mountain having floated down the Arkansas River to Fort Smith.

Felix was the father of my mother, Daisy Kimbrough Luginbuel, born September 8, 1878. She was the oldest of several children. The other children were: Wilson July 23, 1880, a farmer and teacher, married Fannie Allison one daughter Lillian Frances married Odis Jones. He also married Lydia Reed children Henrietta, Wilson Jr. and Jim Kimbrough. Baxter March 21, 1887 married May Washington. He married again Ora

May, 1938. Bill Venable, Jim Venable and Lacy Venable.

White two sons Felix and Baxter Jr. Susie, had a daughter Virginia married Al Hadfield. Ethel, never married and was a school teacher in California. Died of cancer. Albert married Elizabeth Leonard two sons John and Joseph. John Lives in Houston and Joseph in Oklahoma City.

My father, Elbert White (Bert) Luginbuel, was the youngest son of Peter and Elizabeth Reid Luginbuel. Peter was born in Germany and Elizabeth was from Missouri. Northwest of Dutch Mills they moved to a farm he built that is still, standing and the house still has one original room. Bert built onto it and now has eight rooms. Peter and "Aunt Lizzie" lived here until their death and are buried in White Rock Cemetery. He died in 1899 and she in 1921.

Bert was born November 17, 1876. He farmed the place and January 4, 1903 married Daisy Kimbrough. They lived on the Luginbuel place and bought the shares of his brothers and sisters. He was a hog farmer also raising grain. When he had some grain to sell he took it to Westville, Oklahoma where there was a railroad. Much of the grain was fed to the animals, it was a small herd. Daisy churned and sold butter enough to pay for my piano lessons from Mrs. White at Lincoln. I rode horseback unless I had eggs to deliver. Daisy had a flock of Dominac chickens. She set hens in the spring and took most of the summer to have fryer size meat that was canned for winter.

The school teachers at White Rock often boarded at our house. Some farm workers stayed there too. She was a very good cook. She said her father told her when she married he hoped that Bert would make her a good living and she could have all the sugar she wanted.

He did make a good living. Besides this farm he bought the Blake place between here and Dutch Mills. He was elected to be a road overseer in Dutch Mills Township. At that time every man eighteen years and older was expected to work on the road four days a year. He had a very strong team of mules. He rose early and drove miles before the work began on the road.

He was a deacon in the church and was a good bass singer. Daisy played the organ. In 1923 a kidney disease, Nephritis, developed and he was never very well again. He died October 15, 1944.

Daisy spent her remaining days here. Even when Bert was ill, Daisy started a Sunday School class at Glendale where several young girls attended. These girls came to a revival at Liberty Baptist Church in Dutch Mills where several conversions took place and they joined the church.

Daisy had a massive stroke and died March 23, 1953. She is buried in the Dutch Mills Cemetery.

Oscar M. Kimbrough

Oscar M. and Bethene (Beth) Kimbrough came to Springdale in July of 1951 after Oscar's graduation from Dental School in Kansas City, Missouri. Oscar was a native Arkansan, born and reared near Monticello, Arkansas. He served in the National Guard just before World War II and was stationed in Alaska in the Aleutian Islands when war came. He then went to Europe where he served in the Army Artillery until 1946 when he was discharged. He went into the service with the rank of Second Lieutenant and after completing 20 years of service by being in the Army Reserves he earned the rank of Major.

Beth was working in Kansas City when the two met on a blind date in January of 1949 and they married in December of 1949. Beth, who was reared on a farm in Platte County, Missouri, and related to half the people there, was a little reluctant about moving to Arkansas away from all of the relatives that surrounded her during her early years.

It was a very hot day in July when they arrived - very little air conditioning in those days - and Beth was pregnant with their first child. However, they felt very fortunate to be moving into a nice five room house having lived in a very small apartment in Kansas City.

Springdale had a population of just over 5,000 in 1951 and Oscar described it to Beth as not having very many paved streets - he came first to look it over. Beth was pleasantly surprised to find it was a progressive and rapidly growing town and seemed like a good place to live, raise a family and start a dental practice, which all proved to be true.

Oscar purchased a dental office, which was air conditioned and located over the First State Bank, from a dentist who wanted to leave Springdale.

Their first child, Ann Elizabeth, was born October 3, 1951. Oscar's practice grew and also the family. Randal S. Kimbrough was born September 17, 1954. Oscar and Beth became active in church and civic affairs and enjoyed the friendly and growing community.

In June of 1957, tragedy came and their little daughter, Ann Elizabeth died of a brain tumor. The following year on May 20, 1958, another daughter, Anita Lynn was born.

In 1960 Oscar built a dental office on Meadow Street and moved his practice there. On May 10, 1963, another daughter Janet Rae was born.

Oscar bought a farm on Wagon Wheel Road in 1964 and started raising polled herefords and chickens. Although this was a hobby he thoroughly enjoyed, he worked hard at being a part time farmer.

In 1974 tragedy came again to the family and Oscar died of cancer. Randy was in college, Anita in high school and Janet in elementary school. After Oscar's death Beth worked as a secretary for Central Elementary School for several years until the school closed in 1983. She then retired to do some traveling and baby sitting with grandchildren.

After Randy graduated from college in June of 1976, he married Marsha Donathan, a dental hygenist, from Hot Springs, Arkansas, and then went to dental school in Memphis, Tennessee. After graduation they came back to Springdale to practice denistry. They have three children, Scott, born August 15, 1983, Amy, born January 11, 1985, and Mark, born June 1, 1987.

Anita married Charles Deines, who also grew up in Springdale, in June 1978. They live in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and have one child John, born October 31, 1986.

Janet, a teacher at Southwest Junior High School, married Richard Harris, a native of Alma, Arkansas, in May of 1985. They reside in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

L to R, Jack C. (father), Arline L. (mother), Regina D. (daughter-in-law), Corwin J. (son), and Sylvia J. (wife) in front of new house in September 1981.

Jack J. King

Jack was born 24 September 1937 in Keokuk, Iowa and raised in Hamilton and Virginia, Illinois. He married Sylvia J. Shortridge on 1 July 1956. She was born 14 November 1937 in Philadelphia, Illinois. Jack graduated from the University of Illinois. Jack graduated from the University of Illinois with a Bachelor of Architecture Degree on 18 June 1960.

He entered the U. S. Army as an Engineer Officer and served proudly for 20 years. He had not intended to be a career serviceman but liked the leadership challenge of being a Paratrooper. Seven years were spent overseas, three of those in the Vietnam War. He commanded the 307th Engineer Battalion in the distinguished 82nd Airborne Division. His military awards included: Ranger Tab, Senior Parachutist Badge, Combat Infantryman Badge, Republic of Vietman Campaign Medal, Vietman Armed Forces Honor Medal First Class, Republic of Vietnam Gallantry Cross Unit Citation with Palm, National Defense Service Medal, Meritorious Unit Commendation, Vietnam Service Medal with Eight Campaign Service Stars, Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, Bronze Star with Second Oak Leaf Cluster, Meritorious Service Medal, and Legion of Merit.

He was also fortune to have two assignments with the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers at Tulsa District, Oklahoma. In 1970 he worked in part on the McClellan-Kerr Navigation System. His second tour there was in 1979-80. Both assignments gave him the opportunity to see most of Oklahoma and adjoining states where he developed a special fondness for Northwest Arkansas. Jack retired as a Lieutenant Colonel on 1 September 1980.

Jack and Sylvia purchased 200 acres in Madison County in 1971. In 1977, they decided to purchase 40 acres in Washington County, south of Baldwin along Ed Edwards Road on top of Robinson Mountain overlooking Fayetteville.

They moved to Washington County in August 1980 and rented a trailer on Thunder Mountain. Against the advice of numerous friends who said such an undertaking would end in divorce, the Kings displayed their pioneer spirit and commenced building a geodesic dome house on the 40 acres in March 1981. Their son, Corwin J., was born at Fayetteville, North Carolina, on 27 September 1961. He found a few hours while attending the University of Arkansas (UA) and holding down a part-time job to lend a helping hand on the house. Although the house was not finished (It probably never will be to Sylvia's satisfaction; that is good though because it sometimes takes a woman's prodding and always her special touch to make a house a home), they moved into it in September 1981.

Jack thought he had retired from working for others but took a job in July 1982 in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia with Caudle, Rowlett, and Scott and Metcalf and Eddy Architect Engineer Joint Venture. They provided design and construction management of Saudi Air Force facilities. He worked there 27 months and "retired" again in September 1984.

Meanwhile, Sylvia kept the home fires burning in Arkansas. She did join Jack for four trips to Europe seeing parts of these countries: West Germany, Switzerland, France, Italy, Austria, and England. Jack added another 15 countries visited during his military and business careers.

Corwin graduated with a Bachelor Degree in Agriculture Business in May 1983. He married Regina D. Green on 9 July 1983. She was born 27 June 1961 and was from Doddridge, Arkansas. She also graduated from the UA in May 1983 in Journalism. Both enlisted in the U. S. Army to continue the proud tradition of serving their country; they will complete their service soon and have been accepted for further studies at the UA beginning with the 1988 Spring semester.

Jack and Sylvia remain busy with 40 acre, house, garden, horse, and six hunting dogs. They've added to their out-of-doors enjoyment by purchasing 40 acres with small cabin overlooking a beautiful creek in Brown Hollow, almost seven miles east of Winslow.

Both Jack and Sylvia attend Baldwin Church of Christ.

Jack is most happy when Sylvia lets him off to hunt, fish, or train his Labrador Retrievers. Sylvia enjoys traveling and is a loving wife and mother and a great cook.

Jack has a future goal to sketch and paint the beautiful Arkansas Ozarks; we'll hope he starts that soon.

Dessie Harrison Kirk

Edmund Osburn was born in Virginia in 1813, died about 1878 and is buried in the Sunset Cemetery, Washington County, Arkansas. He was first married to a Pennington, who died in Kentucky. His second marriage was to Perlina "Liney" Blevins. Edmund and his first wife (first name unknown) Pennington were the parents of the following children: Nancy Jane, Jesse, Andrew Jackson and Elizabeth. Edmund was a Primitive Baptist Preacher. In 1858, he and Perlina moved with their family to Crawford County, Arkansas. In 1872, he moved to Washington County.

Nancy Jane Osburn, born in Kentucky in 1832, was the oldest child of Edmund and his first wife. At age 14, she married Daniel Blevins, born in 1831 in Kentucky. Dan Blevins was a Mason, a member of K of H and a lifelong Democrat. Old Timers remembered him as a colorful Primitive Baptist Preacher. He was in military service from 1861 to 1865. He served as chaplain with the rank of Captain with the 5th Kentucky Inf., CSA. He moved with his family and parents, William and Ava (Collins) Blevins, to Washington County in 1866. He then moved to Madison County and from there to Oklahoma. He is buried near Braggs, Oklahoma. Daniel and Nancy Jane were the parents of the following children: Malinda, Angeline, Ellen, William Edmund, Nancy June, F. M., John H., Naitelda, Thomas H. and Albert J.

Angeline Blevins was born in 1850 in Kentucky, married Henry LeMaster, born in 1849, also a native of Kentucky. They later moved with their family to Washington County, Arkansas. They were the parents of the following children: Mary Jane, Nancy Ellen, Martha A., Roda Elizabeth, Danel Tomas, Cynthe C., Caldona, W. Harvey, Maga Myrtle, Manford, Walter C.

Mary Jane LeMaster, born in 1868, Washington County, married William Noah Kirk, born in 1860, in Kentucky. Noah was a son of Milford Hayden and Nellie Ellender (Little) Kirk. He came to Madison County with his parents about 1883. His father owned a 275 acre farm near Combs, where he resided until his death. Both his father and mother are buried in the Combs Cemetery. Noah moved to Hazel Valley in Washington County where he farmed. He then operated a grocery store and a teamster service. Later, he farmed in the Wyman and Greathouse Springs Communities. In later years, he operated a grocery store in Pea Vine, Oklahoma. Noah and Mary Jane were the parents of the following children: Alpha, Dessie Harrison, Henry, James, Bertha, Dove, Ernest, Oscar, Jewel and Charlie. Mary Jane told her grandson, John Kirk, that she started smoking a pipe when she was 5 years old. John would always light her pipe for her when she was visiting his family. William Noah was "the horse" of this part of the family. He was slight of build but very muscular. He made quite a bit of money but did not spend it wisely. One story told about him was that when the community had a turkey shoot, they had to furnish two turkeys, one for Noah and another for second place. When asked why his daddy was in the Union Army when Kentucky was neutral, his answer was, "He supposed it payed better than cutting cordwood". When he was in his late 70s, he shook so badly that he had to use two hands to keep from spilling his coffee but could knock a squirrel out of the tallest tree, looking through his Woolworth glasses. When he was 79, he walked from Fayetteville to 5 miles south of Westville, Oklahoma, a distance of 35 miles, in a day. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kirk are buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

Dessie Harrison Kirk was born at Hazel Valley in Washington County in 1888. He married Hester Eliza Tunstill, also a native of Washington County, where they lived their entire lives. They were the parents of three children: Mary Canzaidie, Elizabeth Maxine (married to Prodice Lee Herron) and John William, (married to Thelma Marie Beard). After leaving Hazel Valley, he came to Fayetteville and worked at installing water lines from the square to the University of Arkansas. He was employed on the construction of the Fayetteville City Hospital. He then worked for the W. E. Graham Grocery Company as a clerk. For the next thirty years, he worked as a meat cutter for various markets in Fayetteville. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kirk are buried in the Fairview Cemetery in Fayetteville. About 1825, they moved to Morgan County, Illinois, where they resided until 1832 when they moved near the Goshen Community in Washington County, Arkansas. He was a farmer and a highly respected citizen. They were both members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Alexander and Martha Neill, James and Hettie Oxford and Jack and Lydia Denton founded the Goshen Methodist Episcopal Church in 1853, which is one of the oldest churches in the state. Mr. Tunstill owned and operated a farm in the Richland Community. He sold this farm and moved to a farm on the mountain south of the Baldwin Community, where he farmed and operated coal mines. Their children were as follows: Marvin,, Hester Eliza, Margaret, George, Artie, Harry, William, Clarence and Blanch. (John W. was the son of John G. In 1876, he moved to Oxford's Bend, Washington County, Arkansas, where he farmed for six years. He sold this farm and bought a farm at Goshen and built the Goshen Mill. He owned a 230 acre farm at Richland. He continued running this business until July 1, 1888, after which he farmed and dealt in stock. He was a very successful business man. He was a Mason and a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Tunstill was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. To this couple were born the following children: James, Mary, Maggie, George, Homer, Charles, Eliza, William and Owen. Both John G. and Margaret Tunstill are buried in the Goshen Cemetery.

Hester Eliza Tunstill, born July 15, 1888, married Dessie Harrison Kirk, July 10, 1910; died August 14, 1962. (See John Kirk and Dessie H. Kirk).

Madge Lindsey Kirkpatrick

This is history of my family on my mother's side, from the time they came to Washington County, Arkansas, from Georgia. In 1852 John Calvin Stockburger and his wife Martha Ann Reed came to northwest Arkansas from Cohutta, Georgia. With them came the Reed family, Robert and Elizabeth Fagala Reed and their grown children. They came to Arkansas in a caravan of covered wagons with several other families. Robert and Elizabeth were my great-great grandparents. They homesteaded land about one mile northeast of West Fork near the present site of the Newlin Realty Co., on Highway 71. They built a double log house with a dog trot through the middle. I remember my mother and aunts and uncles telling me about an old hollowed out rock that stood beside the back door of the house. It stood about waist high and was used for washing their hands when they came in from the fields. Another hollow rock on the ground was used by the children to wash their feet after they had been playing barefoot in the yard.

One of the Reed daughters married a man named Wakefield. They lived near the Baptist Ford Community Church south of Greenland. During the Civil War a band of bushwhackers tried to rob them. Wakefield would not tell them where his money was hidden, so they hanged him from a tree in the yard and rode off. Mrs. Wakefield who had been hiding nearby, cut him down with a butcher knife before he strangled to death.

Robert Reed died a few years after they came to Arkansas, but Elizabeth Fagala lived to be 96 years old. She died in September 1897. I remember their telling how in her older days, she smoked a clay pipe, using home grown tobacco. She was almost blind but her mind remained keen. The grandchildren always loved to get a coal of fire from the fireplace to light the pipe for her.

The Stockburgers homesteaded about three miles northeast of the Reed place. They chose a mountaintop for their home. The site was about one half mile north of the present Mineral Springs road. They built a double log house with a dog trot in the middle; it was used as a dining room in the summer. There was a large loft above each room and a cellar under the north side room. There was a huge fireplace in each room and a porch on the back of the house. One of the attractions of the homestead was an everlasting spring of cold, clear water. The spring was about 200 feet down a rocky hillside below the house. The water was drawn up by a windless to a springhouse at the top of the hill where it was carried to the house in buckets. The wash place where the wash kettle and the washboard were kept was by the springhouse.

John Calvin and Martha Ann Stockburger were my great grandparents. They were married in 1849 in Georgia. He was a well educated man for that day. He was a doctor of sorts. Since there were not many doctors in the country at that time, he was called on as a doctor quite often.

They homesteaded and later bought quite a bit of land. At one time they owned all the land from Round Mountain to the White River bottom. They had ten children who lived to be grown. They were: Marcus Alexander. b. 1850; Nancy Elizabeth, b. 1852; Jacob Wilson, b. 1854; John Robert, b. 1856; Martha Annie, b. 1859; Joseph Adam, b. 1861; Mary Dorinda, b. 1864; Elisha Edward, b. 1868; Lydia Emma, b. 1869; Calvin Columbus (Tum) b. 1873. Both Marcus Alexander and Nancy Elizabeth were born near Cohutta, Georgia, prior to the move to West Fork, Arkansas, where the remaining children were born. John Calvin was a ruling elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian church. Jacob Wilson became an ordained minister in that church and preached in many congregations in the area. His name is still on a roster at the West Fork Presbyterian Church.

At the time there were no public schools in the area. There were scattering county subscription schools which held school about three months out of the year. The teachers for these schools usually lived with their student's families and taught school for their room and board. The nearest subscription school was about four miles from the Stockburger homestead. The Stockburger children attended school there until the building burned in the 1870s. This school was called Old Shanghi School. Daniel Chapman gave land about one-half mile from the Stockburger home for a new school. A one room schoolhouse was built on this property and the school was named Round Mountain School after the mountain on which it was located. Capable teachers were hired and paid a salary. The standard books used were the Blueback Speller, McGuffy's Reader, and Ray's Arithmetic. All the Stockburger children got most of their education there. They either walked or rode horseback to school in all kinds of weather. Annie Stockburger taught school at Round Mountain for several years after she grew up.

Joseph Adam Stockburger, the sixth child of John Calvin, was my grandfather. He married Annette Etta Bentley, who came to Arkansas with her family from Wisconsin. Joe and Etta were married in 1882. Grandma's family went on to California and Grandma never got to see them again. Joseph and Etta (As my grandmother was called) had seven children. They were: Ina b. 1883; Ernest Allen, b. 1885; Lee Calvin, b. 1887; Myrtle, b. 1889; Joseph Howard. b. 1891, (died of Diphtheria when four years old) Winona, b. 1895, and Robert C., b. 1898.

The thing I remember about my grandmother was that she was a very unselfish person and enjoyed doing things for her family and neighbors any time they needed anything. Her good cooking stands out in my memory. Her house was always clean and the clothes were washed even when she had to carry them down to the spring branch to get water to wash them on the washboard and boil them in an old iron kettle, My grandfather had a big barn where he kept his horses and cattle and a few pigs for meat. They had a corn crib and a smokehouse. I remember riding in the wagon with grandpa and sometimes he would let me drive a little. He had an old horse named 'Ol' Snip" that I could ride. Grandpa always took his family to church on Sunday. Church was held in Roundmountain School house. I remember my mother telling me that the preacher almost always came home with them for dinnner. Grandma had to cook dinner for the preacher and the family.

Winona Stockburger married Ernest Lindsey in 1916. They were my parents. My father came here with his family from Texas. They lived near Greenland. He and my mother met at the Baptist Ford Church at a Decoration. They had two children; Harold R. Lindsey, b. 1918, and Madge Lindsey (Kirkpatrick) b. 1924. We lived in Texas most of the time until I was grown. My dad ran a cotton gin in Dodson, Texas. About the time of WW II we moved back to Arkansas to live permanently. My parents were active in the Baptist Ford Church. My mother taught Sunday School class and my dad was song leader and was a member of the Church Board.

My husband, Wathen Kirkpartrick, lived in the same neighborhood that we did. He and I both graduated from Greenland School together. We were married in 1941. We have two children, Terrence Lindsey, b. 1953, and Winona Annette, b. 1959. Both of our children graduated from Greenland School and Terrence graduated from the University of Arkansas and from North Carolina State University. Annette attended the University of Arkansas for three years.

Terrence married Toni Anderson in 1972. They have two sons, Matthew Terrence, b. in 1974, and Wesley David, b. 1977. Annette married Boyd Darling in 1980. They have one son, Andrew Boyd, b. 1986. Terrence now works for the University of Arkansas at the Southwest Research and Extension Center in Hope, Arkansas. Annette and Boyd own a florist shop (The Flower Bud) in Fayetteville. Our grandsons are the seventh generation of the family since the first Stockburgers came to Arkansas in 1852. We still live on part of the original homestead of John Calvin and Martha Ann. Most of the Stockburgers who have died are buried in the Baptist Ford Cemetery near Greenland.

Charles J. Kitchel

Charles J. Kitchel and Minnie Johnson Kitchel, originally came to Brentwood, Arkansas in 1922, from Alta Loma, Texas, with three of their four children: Ernest Willard born 1907, Charles Johnson born 1909 and Minneford Francis born 1911. Lloyd Bruce born 1913, died of diphtheria in 1916. All of the children were born in Alta Loma, Texas.

Charles J. Kitchel was born April 2, 1879 in Minnesota. His father was Willard Barnes Kitchell, DOB 1842, and his mother was Mary Norris Kitchel. Willard's father, Edward Cobb Kitchel, DOB 1802, and his eight brothers and sisters, were the first generation to drop an "L" from the original spelling of Kitchell. Edward Cobb Kitchel's father, James Leonard Kitchell, DOB 1777, dropped an "L", after being captured by the British in August 1813, at the Citadel in Detroit, Michigan, without a shot being fired. It is said he was very bitter after a winter of captivity, during which he lost toes and fingers to frostbite, because his British captors failed to provide warm clothing in the harsh winter. Possibly this was his way of protesting - since the Kitchells came to America in 1639 from Kent County, England.

Minnie Johnson's parents were Isaac Ernest Johnson and Lillian B. Ford. Isaac and Lillian moved to Fayetteville in June 1928, and lived here until their deaths. Lillian died in 1942 and Isaac celebrated his 100th birthday on January 25, 1957 and died September 3, 1957. Both are buried at Sons Chapel.

Charles J. and Minnie Kitchel were married January 11, 1906 at Houston, Texas. After arriving at Brentwood, Minnie taught school there in 1922 and 1923. Ernest rode a bicycle from Brentwood to Fayetteville to attend high school during the year. In 1923 the family moved to Fayetteville and on May 7, 1923 they bought property on 3rd Street (now 6th Street) and built a house. Charles was a house painter and had absorbed turpentine through his hands, he died in 1946 of tularemic poisoning. Minnie died in 1974, both are buried at Sons Chapel.

Ernest W. married Eva Andrews in 1932 and moved to California. They had one daughter, Karolyn. Ernest died in 1977.

In 1929, Charles Johnson Kitchel married Anna Marie Morsani, whose parents, Adele Papili and Emedio Morsani, both born in Italy, were among the original settlers of Tontitown, around 1898/9. Charles and Anna's children are; Anna Marie Kitchel Selders, Lillian Adele (Dell) Kitchel Houghland and Margaret Eileen Kitchel Brown-Owens. Charles was a painting contractor for many years in the Fayetteville area. He died in 1970 and is buried at National cemetery. Anna lives in Tulsa.

Minneford Francis Kitchel and Richard Lee Holt were married in Fayetteville, Arkansas on August 16, 1930 by N. M. Ragland. All of her life she was an avid reader and also worked crossword puzzles, her "brain work", as she called it. When the 10 children were growing up, I have been told she would sit in a rocker, with a "babe" on her knee and a book in her hand reading. I guess that's how she maintained her sanity over the years.

At family gatherings over the years - meals didn't start until after the "Doxology" had been sung by the entire clan. At Thanksgiving and Christmas there was always "Fruit Salad" with a special dressing, which many of us have learned to make. These are two of the Kitchel Family traditions, that were carried down from when the family used to gather on holidays in Texas. Many a family dinner has ended with a song fest and are fond memories for all.

Richard died September 18, 1982 and Minneford February 25, 1984, both are buried here in Fayetteville, Ark. at National Cemetery.

The Kitchel-Holt descendants are now scattered in many places around Arkansas and other states. There are many families, from the different lines, still in the Fayetteville area. My information has come from talking and writing to many different people and I have enjoyed them all. They are all part of this history

Ina Helen Knerr

George Frederick Knerr and Nancy Ida Corbett Knerr, my maternal grandparents, first settled in Fayetteville in June of 1910. G. F. Knerr was of third-generation Alsatian-German descent; his parents were George Jacob Knerr and Elizabeth Crile of Allerton, Iowa. Nancy Ida Corbett, of English descent, was named for her maternal grandmother, Nancy Magee Clough (1805-1890), Nancy Magee's sampler made in 1814 when she was nine years old, hangs in my house today (1987).

My grandmother's maternal ancestry goes back to colonial days with William Frampton of Philadelphia, who was a member of the Provincial Council of Pennsylvania and a Justice of Philadelphia in 1686. Later, beginning in 1780, another William Frampton of the same line served three years in the Pennsylvania Militia of Cumberland County, "to guard the frontier against the incursions of the Indians."

The father of my grandmother, Nancy Ida Corbett, was Samuel Rush Corbett, named after Dr. Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Her mother was Evaline Clough, a daughter of Nancy Magee Clough, whose Frampton colonial ancestry has been noted.

These four families - Knerr, Crile, Corbett, Clough - along with many others, had migrated westward from Pennsylvania, as the country moved west, and eventually had settled in southeastern Iowa. My grandparents were married in Allerton, Iowa, on December 3, 1884. Four children were born to them in Allerton: Ina Helen Knerr (1885-1963); Karl Corbett Knerr (1887-1939); Bee Irene Knerr (1893-1971); and Dorothy Dee Knerr (1901-1981).

In 1910 Grandfather Knerr sold his hardware business, and the Knerr family moved to Fayetteville. Fayetteville was chosen over several other locations because of the University, the natural beauty of the surroundings, and because of the availability of a suitable house with land. They purchased the "old Judge Walker house", on a site of about fifty-nine acres on East Mountain (now Mt. Sequoyah), and began their Arkansas saga. At present (1987) their great-grandson, Christopher Bassett T. Williams, called Kit, occupies that very same house on most of those very same acres, along with his wife Emily and their two children, Aaron Evan and Ashley Corbett. It is interesting to note that Kit's great-grandfather, George Frederick Knerr, was born in the year of 1849, while Kit himself was born a hundred years later in 1949.

Grandfather Knerr did much of the work of restoring and improving the old house, which was first built in 1872 and finished in 1878. He laid two large concrete porches with sidewalks; he hammered up a decorative pressed tin ceiling on the upper south gallery; he added a laundry-bathroom downstairs and updated the bathroom upstairs; he built on a concrete-floored kitchen porch; he put in a stairwell and stairs down to the cellar from the kitchen; he enclosed the lower south gallery to make a small, inner sewing room and a south screened porch. And all this was just the beginning. As time passed and allowed, he also built in wide bookshelves for the south parlor (which became the "library"), and a china cabinet in the dining room as well as the storage closets in both stairwells. Outside he built a large barn and put a concrete floor in it. He also built the first concrete-floored chicken house in northwest Arkansas (Aunt Ina Knerr, who always got her facts straight, is my source for this "first").

Ina Helen Knerr, holding baby Jeff Williams, 1946

Grandfather also fenced most of his acreage, including the site known then and now as Ghost Hollow. He gave real meaning to the term: "return to the farm", and he did all this, plus maintaining the necessary livestock, after a successful business career. Incidentally, none of the remodeling he ever did violated the architectural integrity of the grand old house.

Nancy Ida Corbett Knerr, his wife, was widely and thoroughly self-educated; she and her husband had a large library of books. She was a superb cook and an expert seamstress. Her bread and doughnuts were famous among her family and friends. In 1916, she won first prize at the Washington County Fair with her entry of an elegant red, white, and gray quilt in a Double Irish Chain pattern. In 1986, that same quilt was one of thirty selected for an official Arkansas Sesquicentennial event, a display at the Rogers Historical Museum and a book: Stitches In Time, A Legacy Of Ozark Quilts.

Grandmother Knerr was a painter with a good eye, again, self-taught. Her oil paintings and her easel remain cherished possessions within the family. She read the Kansas City Star and the Fayetteville Daily every day. (That was the Fayetteville Daily Democrat in those days). She always had three or four books of substance in various stages of being read, as well as many magazines. She never threw anything readable away so I have a large collection of interesting old magazines today.

Grandmother was a passionate lover of the outdoors and of all plants that bloomed. She enlisted her family in planting a "living fossil" ginkgo tree, a beautiful specimen whose fanlike leaves turn pale gold in the fall and drop off, all at once in one day, in a golden circle around the tree. Grandmother's yellow rose bush, brought from Iowa, flourished, as did the newly planted japonica hedge and the rare, fragrant spice bush. Winter-flowering jasmine grew profusely under the bay windows. Phlox, wisteria, and grape hyacinth added their color in the spring along with the bushes of forsythia, "mock orange", and spirea in bloom. Every year there were all the bulbs, and progressively pansies, petunias, day lilies, and chrysanthemums, just to name the most obvious. There were always flowers from the yard in her house, in what came to be known to her grandchildren as "Grandmother's house". (See: Washington County Historical Society's publication: Flashback, August and November, 1983).

Karl Corbett Knerr, the Knerr's only son, had graduated from the University of Iowa in 1906, and had tried his hand at various business opportunities in Iowa. He came to Arkansas in 1910, however, with the rest of his family, and used Fayetteville as his base of operations for a number of merchandising ventures. In 1918 he enlisted in the Army and served as an officer in the quartermaster corps. At the time of his death in 1939 at the V. A. Hospital in Fayetteville, he had been the manager of the Ward Hotel in Fort Smith for many years. Since he had not yet married, there are no Knerr descendants bearing the surname on this line. Three great-nephews, however, bear his name in part: Jeffrey S. Knerr Williams, Philip F. Corbett Williams and Tod Corbett Bassett. A great-grand-niece is Ashley Corbett Williams. As is evident, Uncle Karl's middle name was Grandmother's maiden name.

Dorothy Knerr, the youngest daughter, was nine years old when the Knerr family came to Fayetteville. She went to Washington School and graduated from Fayetteville High School in 1918. After obtaining her college degree from the University of Arkansas in music and education, she married Lyle L. Bryan in 1922, in the library bay window setting of the Knerr house where her older sister Bee had been married three years before. Lyle Bryan, Dorothy's husband for fifty-three years, was the first and last Packard dealer in Washington County.

Dorothy K. Bryan was a member of D. A. C., P. E. O., Zeta Tau Alpha, and St. Paul's Episcopal Church. She also did early volunteer work for the Red Cross, the blood bank, and the free clinic for crippled children which was held at the new County Hospital (now Washington Regional Medical Center). Aunt Dot and Uncle Lyle did not have any children. They led full and fruitful lives, however, with a large and close circle of longtime Fayetteville friends. Aunt Dot died on Christmas Day, 1981, at the age of eighty.

The oldest Knerr child was Ina Helen Knerr. She achieved many academic honors throughout her entire education. They culminated in being elected to Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Iowa in 1904, the year she graduated. After teaching in Nebraska for some years, she came to Fayetteville in 1910 with her family. Superintendent F. S. Root hired her to teach in Fayetteville High School, then a new building at the corner of School and Center Streets. (Later the building became Hillcrest Junior High School; still later it was torn down to make room for the city's senior housing project, Hillcrest Towers). Aunt Ina taught English for a number of years, qualifying along the way in many other subject areas, as some teachers did in those days. The junior and senior classes of Fayetteville High School for 1914 and 1915 presented her with a handsome engraved silver loving cup when she decided to change fields.

Graduate work in library science at Northeastern Oklahoma College at Tahlequah and the University of Illinois led to a position in the University of Arkansas Library. During her years as head of the cataloging department there, she saw her nieces and nephews go through the University, as well as many profound changes occur in staffing, building, and organization throughout the institution. She was the one staff member to refuse to sign up for Social Security when it first started. No one could budge her, from President Futrell on down. She adhered to her principles of responsible self-reliance quietly but firmly. For years she walked to and from the University, winter and summer. Only the severest weather stopped her, for a ride in Uncle Lyle's current Packard.

Aunt Ina was a member of P. E. O., Chapter K, and the Outlook Club. She helped establish the founding chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the University some time in the thirties. (Only 12 percent of all colleges and universities in the nation qualify to have chapters. The University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, is the only institution in Arkansas that has been granted a chapter).

Aunt Ina kept and preserved many interesting records of her own family, of the old house and the Walker family, of the University, of the town of Fayetteville, and of Washington County itself. She kept a catalogue of the many varieties of annual and perennial flowers and shrubs which she gave her friends and in turn was given by them. She had a particularly green thumb in later years with African violets.

Aunt Ina was a true giver. For years she harvested persimmons from the tall trees by the barn, cracked and picked out black walnuts from the many walnut trees in the big yard, and baked scores of persimmon puddings at Christmas time to give to her friends and family.

Her circle of friends was wide and eclectic; they were all sorts and conditions of people. She was always doing small things for her friends, in ways gratefully received and lovingly remembered. She was the much beloved "Nina" to my three sons - cookie-maker, story-teller, nature-walker without equal. They have honored their unforgettable memories of "Nina" with a special brick in the lobby of City Hospital. To quote the Northwest Arkansas Times' editorial page of December 16, 1963 (back in the days when the death of a well-known citizens was considered news): "Miss Knerr knew the value of being a good friend, and she practiced this art through her lifetime. . . It has been a better world for many because of Miss Knerr." Aunt Ina's family are in heartfelt agreement with this expression.

Finally, the Knerr daughter who produced the only Knerr grandchildren was my mother, Bee Irene Knerr. She graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1916 and taught for awhile in El Dorado. During college she was active in Blackfriars, a drama group, and wrote stories for the university literary magazine. Her favorite courses of study were geology and German. She became a member of Phi Beta Phi, an affiliation she fondly carried on all her life, from seeing her three daughters initiated, to participating actively in alumnae functions, and to becoming a delegate to the National Convention (her first air trip) some time in the early sixties.

Back in 1918 she took a position with a bank in Okmulgee, Oklahoma, and met my father, Woodson W. Bassett. (The history of the Bassett family with regards to Washington County is related in another part of this book by my sister-in-law, Marynm Shaw Bassett). Bee and Woodson were married in January, 1919, in the library window setting of the Knerr house (described before). Three daughters were born in rapid succession, in 1920, 1921 and 1922. So Mother had her hands full from the start, to say the least.

In 1926, my parents' only son, W. W. Bassett, Jr. (Bill) was born, three years before the Great Depression altered our lives. My father had been moderately well off as an oil broker in the boom state of Oklahoma, but he lost everything in the Crash and the successive shock-waves of those terrible times.

Throughout the relatively moneyless years, Mother scrimped, scraped, saved; cooked (lunches for teachers) as well as for her family, sewed all our clothes, canned everything from the garden possible; borrowed money when she had to from Aunt Ina, accepted "hand-me-downs" for us gratefully from better-off friends; used up, made do, and did without. After I graduated from high school in 1937, we moved back to Fayetteville so that we could all go to college. Mother somehow got together the money for our tuition and books. She eventually decided to get a job, and found one in the Registrar's Office at the University. She was forty-eight years old and worked until she was sixty-five. My father, sadly enough, had been fifty at the onset of the Depression and it was too late for him to ever recover much. However, he gradually built up a small real estate business in and around Fayetteville, and was eventually able to produce a modest income. It occurs to me that my parents may have been among the first two-income families for their time and place, even as late as it came.

Mother was a true gourmet cook, from scratch. Her pastries, casseroles, and just plain everyday cooking were without equal. She knew the secret of seasoning, and practiced it so that her art of cooking lives in the memories of all her children. And she could sew anything. She once made me a dress for a dance, that I had only drawn a picture of for her; and she did it perfectly, and in red and white stripes at that. Once she made an evening cloak from our velvet dining room draperies (she no longer had a dining room); I ultimately presented that cloak to the drama department of the University, where I sometimes still see it in productions.

Mother, like all the Knerrs, read voluminously and passed the habit on to all her children. The same year, 1966, in which she observed her fiftieth college class reunion, I observed my twenty-fifth. Mother always had a strong sense of observances, of family ties and values and standards, of family celebrations. When I married Franklin Springer Williams in 1945, the ceremony took place in the same library bay window of the Knerr house that was used by my mother and father in 1919 and by my aunt and uncle in 1922.

The new Williams family went on to grow in its way and to return in its time to Fayetteville, and to put down its roots on family soil. My husband, Professor Franklin S. Williams, now an emeritus distinguished professor of management, bought the Knerr house and land in 1960. In 1975, the house was officially entered on the National Register of Historic Places and designated as the Walker-Knerr-Williams House. Since then the library bay window has again been the setting for the weddings of two more Knerr descendants. Jeffrey S. Knerr Williams was married to Janet Sue Penner on December 23, 1978. Christopher Bassett T. Williams was married to Emily Jean Evans on December 29, 1983.

So the Knerr family, in its traditions and its celebrations, in its values and its choices, has continued a steady line from 1910 to 1987 in Washington County. The youngest Knerr descendant in Fayetteville, though only two, is already happily at home in the big old house and the wooded rolling land surrounding it, found on the south shoulder of Mount Sequoyah and reached by way of Knerr Road.

Irene Stracener Kurnyta

I was born in Jayton (Kent County), Texas on October 14, 1919. I lived a good part of my childhood there, and in LaSalle County where I attended school until the third grade. We had to learn rapid reading, spelling, math, geography and Texas history in those early years. When I was about eight years of age, the whole family moved to Tate (Scott County) Arkansas. Each family traveled separately. My grandparents were in a covered wagon, we were in an old Model T-Ford. They were to go straight to Scott County, we were to stop along the way for work when available. We stayed a short time in Belton, and were there when the big barn burned. I remember being horrified as the pigeons flew over the fire and fell one by one into the blaze.

Irene and Edward Kurnyta at the Union Star School well, September 1942.

We then went to McAlester, Oklahoma. I think my dad worked in the oilfields for awhile. We wound up getting to Tate in January, 1929. That was a bad year, as we all know. Not only did the market crash, but crops failed. Many of our animals died, I never quite understood it. I know we were in trouble. Someone decided to pack up and come to West Fork, where my beloved step-grandfather was able to homestead property, across the road from what is now known as Hardt. (Between the old Union Star School and Blackburn.) My grandfather cut and hewed logs to build a cabin about twenty by twenty, with upstairs loft, (see picture with the John Calvin Stracener history.) We eventually added another room with a breezeway between so there was more room. There is nothing there now except the huge oak tree that stood in the yard. He fenced a part of the fields with rails, that he split himself, with little help from us. I don't remember what happened to the car, but to get to West Fork, we came in a covered wagon. The powers that be were in the process of paving seventy-one highway. It had been gravel to that time. Detours took us in rough and strange country. I think it was through Chester, and up the mountain, however the road came then. I wish I remembered the way it was, but I'm sure glad I don't have to do it now. My four sisters and I attended school at Union Star. We had a different teacher almost every year. My favorite, was the one that sent me to West Fork to sit in on the eighth grade exams. No one was more surprised that I when I received a passing grade and was able to go to high school there. In the fall of 1935-36, I lived with the Walter Doke family who had four year old, Carl and Teddy was on the way. Walter was at Devil's Den in the CCC's and only came home on week-ends, though I was not accepted socially at school, I was very happy in their home. I had enough to eat, and the little boys made me feel loved and needed, as did she. As it happened, I left school to work and help my family. My dear Mom got sick. For a time, we were in a Hazel Valley Orphans Home. My sisters were there longer than I. Through a good friend, I found a job in the Chicago area.

With a bus ticket to Chicago and $3.00, I, in my ignorance, headed for that big, bad city. However, Chicago was very good to, and, for me. I had a job, a place to live, and could be whatever I wanted to be. I was homesick and lonely for my family. I had $10.00 in my pocket on Christmas Eve. I went to a large department store downtown and, for the first time in my life, I could send my sisters Christmas gifts. I got mittens, hats, warm sox, scarfs and such. The nice clerk helped me wrap them and mailed them for me. What a happy experience for that lonely little country girl. I took the elevated train back to Evanston, and as I was walking home through the snow, I heard carols being sung from a tiny church, all the while the bell kept ringing, inviting me to come. I did just that. I have attended many churches since that, and before, but never one that made me feel as warm and cared for. I love church bells. What ever happened to them?

I met Edward Kurnyta in 1939, we were married in September, 1942 and came to the Ozarks and Grandpa's farm for a wedding trip. He had never been out of Chicago, so it was thrilling for me to show him the wilds of "Honey Holler" down back of the (then deserted) log cabin. That life was a million light years ago for me.

I showed him the "then beautiful" College Avenue. We attended the Presbyterian Church, where I knew my favorite people would be. Dora Deen, singing, and Mildred Gregg at the piano. That was the only time he would ever hear Dora sing in her beautiful contralto voice. However, he never stopped telling about her and this country, especially College Avenue with its umbrella of maple trees from one end to the other. We stayed in "The Mountain Inn" when it was an elegant hotel. We could look out on College Avenue, since it was September, the splendid color was in full array. We had a lot of good years together, with some rough years to work through. We were married September 19, 1942. He died June 15, 1979. Our children were as follows: 1. Elizabeth Louise Kurnyta, born June 14, 1943, married May 29, 1961, James E. Dwyer, born November 22, 1936. 2. Rose Mary Kurnyta, born July 16, 1944, married March 8, 1961, Kenneth Winkler, born May 8, 1939. married (2) 5th August, 1965, Robert Edward Morris, born July 9, 1944. 3. Margaret Ann Kurnyta, born December 30, 1946, married August 6, 1972, Edward Martin Bols, born June 25, 1945. 4. Barbara Joe Kurnyta, born January 7, 1949, married December 28, 1973, James David Manning born in April 8, 1948. 1. Betty has one daughter, Jessica Sundet Dwyer, born June 11, 1966. Jessica is currently attending school in Seville, Spain for one year. 2. Rose Mary has three children, two sons and a daughter. Her sons of the first marriage were adopted by her second husband. Robert Wayne Morris, born December 16, 1961, married September 20, 1986, Veronica Ann Kacena, born December 14, 1961. Dennis Edward Morris, born July 16, 1963, Victoria Marie Morris, born June 30, 1966, she plans a wedding in April, 1988. 3. Margaret has one son: Matthew Kenneth Kurnyta Bols, born October 19, 1979. 4. Barbara has no children.

In 1980, I retired after several years of working as a Quality Control Technician for a large pharmaceutical company. I had always said if ever alone, and able to do so, I would return to northwest Arkansas for my retirement years. I hope I am able to return, to a small degree, some of the help and love that was shown me in my early years, not by all, but a few wonderful people. Even though I have used only a few names in this story, you each know who you are and may I publish my undying love and gratitude to each one for what you did for me and my family. I was able to graduate high school, and get some special college courses needed for my job.

I am very proud of my sisters for what they have done with their lives, mostly because they are all honest and hard working people, all like myself, retired. We lost our mother in death July 15, 1958. She had eighteen happy years with us in the Chicago area, mostly with Susan. On October 16, 1985, my sister Susan Stracener Galle died, and her husband, Frank Leonard, followed her a year later, October 24, 1986. They left one adopted daughter. The other sisters are scattered about the country, from Illinois to Arkansas to Arizona. (See John Calvin Stracener History.)

I have great pride in my daughters. They are products of the best years in my life. I enjoy the friendship I maintain with them in their adult life. I especially enjoy being spoiled by them now that I'm in my dotage years. There are very few things I would change if I had my life to live over. I have a rich heritage in Arkansas, especially in Washington County and Hempstead County, where my mother was born. Robert Y. Landron

Robert Y. and Jennie Landron were my grandparents and came to Fayetteville in the 1890s. He was a carpenter contractor in the Fayetteville area. They first lived at 89 Duncan; then they lived at 205 West South Street, a two story house in front and three in the back with a white picket fence around the yard. They had five children of which only two lived to adulthood; Belle and Reuby (my mother).

Their Residence.

Grandfather contracted to build many of the prominent buildings in Fayetteville - the Hotel Washington, the county jail, the county courthouse and many of the buildings at the university. He was a very successful businessman as he retired about 1917 and lived very comfortably until he died in 1944.

Grandmother made sure they always had a cow and chickens to provide the family with milk, butter and eggs. In the summer, the butter and garden edibles were kept in a cellar-like room in the back of the house. In there, they kept barrels of newspaper wrapped apples, as well as a stalk of bananas hanging from the rafter. My mother spent many hours in there after school reading books and eating the fruit and dipping her finger in the butter.

An incident of significance occurred when my uncle Charley was in grade school. He was a very active boy, giggling and talking to his friends in class. Geography books in those days were huge books, maybe 20" square because they had large maps in them. Charley's teacher, with a geography book in her hands, walked up behind him while he was misbehaving and struck him on the back of the head. He fell to the floor unconscious. One of his friends ran to Grandmother's house across the street and told her what had happened. She got a small pistol, and slipped it into the pocket of her apron. The child perhaps saw this and ran back to tell the teacher that my grandmother was very angry. By the time Grandmother got to the school, the teacher was gone. Grandmother tended to Charley and took him home, getting angrier by the minute. She went to where the teacher lived and found she had just left for the train station at the foot of Dickson. When Grandmother got to the station, the train was pulling out. Needless to say, that teacher was never seen in Fayetteville again. Charley was prone to seizures after that and eventually died as a direct result of having a seizure which caused him to fall from a tree.

My mother was a friend of the Judge Williams family who lived in Greenland. Judge Williams served as County Judge for many years and had a large family. This was a marvelous thing for my mother as her only sister was eight years older than she was. She loved to go down to the Williams' house. If the children couldn't play, she helped them hoe in the field while the "Judge" leaned on his hoe and talked to the passersby.

Mother said many times, she and her mother walked to Farmington to pick strawberries in the spring. Also, when the huckleberries were in season, Mother was put on the train to go to Winslow to get some. She was to come right back and was instructed not to talk to strangers on the train.

Since the house Mother was raised in was a large house, Grandmother rented one bedroom to a prominent educator at the University, Professor Root. He loved to play checkers with my mother, who was about 15, in the evenings. His home and family lived in St. Paul, I believe, but boarded at Grandmother's house during the school year. He was fascinated with Mother's intelligence as he challenged her with trick questions constantly.

At one point, while staying there, he became agitated with his students at the university, complaining about how difficult their final exam was for their teaching certificates. He decided he was going to show them that it was not. He told my mother he wanted her to come to the university and just try to answer some questions he had for her. She went and was the only one who made a 95. Professor Root was overjoyed the night of Commencement to announce this fact and present her with her teaching certificate.

Thereafter, whenever a grade school had need of a substitute teacher, Mother would get permission to miss her classes in High School (as she was an honor student) to teach.

One day, Professor Root decided to watch and see how well she was doing. The class was dismissed, and to his surprise, all the children were lined up and as they passed Mother, they kissed her "Goodbye". Professor Root went up to her, shook his head and said, "Reuby, that will never do".

Robert C. Lane, Jr.

Samuel Lane was born January 16, 1817 in Warren County, Tennessee. He came with his parents, Ransom Lane and Nancy Hall Lane and his three brothers from Tennessee, via New Salem, Illinois. They left their farm near New Salem in 1832 and settled on Richland Creek in Madison County, Arkansas. Samuel lost both parents soon after coming to Arkansas and had to make his own fortune. He went to work for $4 per month. He married Nancy Vaughn in 1841, and owning nothing but one span of ponies and their household goods, the couple began married life. Samuel accumulated 700 acres of land and this was divided among his ten children. One of his sons was Zimiri Lane, born May 6, 1846 in Madison County, Arkansas. One of Zimiri's brothers was Robert, who was born in 1842 and killed at the Battle of Pea Ridge. Zimiri, a farmer, met a Tennessee girl, Annis Armstrong, and they married on October 28, 1865. Thomas was one of five boys born of this union.

Their contract was a handshake. Dale's Hardware was located in Dwight Thornsberry's shopping center next to the Post Office in Holcomb Street. He ran this store with his wife until their retirement. Most of the other children are buried in the Bluff Cemetery on Shiloh street in Springdale.

Several relatives or the descendants of this family still reside in Washington County. Lena Lane married Walter I. Kelly on June 28, 1922. Lena was Thomas and Eller's oldest daughter. They had two sons, Walter, born September 29, 1925 and Robert Kelly, born February 13, 1929. Robert is a graduate of Annapolis, retired Commander of the U. S. Carl Lang

Margaret Aiken and Carl Lang were born and raised in Illinois, she in Chicago and he in LeGrange, and had met and married in the "windy city". She was of British ancestry and his family had come from Sweden: their union was a good American blend. They had planned to hold their wedding ceremony in the little Methodist Church they attended, but the guest list kept growing until they had to move the service to a large hotel, but with their own minister officiating. In due time, three daughters blessed the young couple and made them a family: Elizabeth Jane (Betty), Nancy Aiken and Sally Ann. Their mother's musical talent and the family's cultural interests enhanced the girls' upbringing.

Carl Lang operated a "moving and storage" business in LaGrange, but he was not content, and in 1946, he decided to sell out and move to another area. He and Margaret had often read a newspaper column in the Sunday Chicago Tribune called "Marge's 'Sunrise Mountain Farm'", which told about life in Ozarks of Arkansas in glowingly unrealistic terms. The Langs were impressed to go south and see for themselves. Arriving in the Fayetteville area, they were charmed by the people they met and by the beautiful scenery, although the roads were terrible, compared with northern highways.

The Lang's daughter, Betty, had a fine secretarial position in Illinois and wanted to stay, but the two younger girls came: Sally enrolled at Fayetteville High School, and Nancy started her first year at the University of Arkansas in Home Economics. The parents bought what they envisioned as a "retirement farm", a picturesque sixty acre place on Highway 16 East, between Elkins and Durham, on the corner of the Sulphur City Road. Carl took a job with the City of Fayetteville to offset losses when the buyers of his business in Illinois defaulted on their contract.

Margaret, years before, had taken training in business procedures, and had done the work of an executive secretary for Carl's business from their home. In 1956, she was able to use this experience as secretary to the head of the Agronomy Department at the University of Arkansas. Things went well until Carl became very ill. His untimely death on December 15, 1964, was the hardest blow of Margaret's life; yet she managed, with God's help, to make a life of her own.

Mrs. Lang has been involved for many years in civic and cultural pursuits. She has long been an active supporter of the Arkansas Symphony and Guild and of the Mental Health Association, the Fayetteville Public Library and the Music Festival, the Washington County Historical Society and the Arkansas Historical Association, as well as being active in the Central United Methodist Church and in the youth groups it fosters. Margaret has been keenly interested in music therapy, which she has encouraged as a Patroness of Sigma Alpha Iota, a national music fraternity affiliated with the University of Arkansas. She still finds her music a great source of solace and pleasure.

Mrs. Lang has a wide circle of friends in the Fayetteville area, and she knows most of the fine families who have made the city what it is today. Now, at ninety years of age, Margaret Lang is a living sourcebook of information concerning the century she has experienced. With a faultless recollection of detail—dates, names, relationships, events, anecdotes—she loves to recount the happy and sad, the frank and funny episodes of her life and times. Her blue eyes twinkle and her hands gesture as she talks, giving her listeners a feeling of having relived her memories with her. One is led to believe her incapable of forgetting.

Mrs. Lang's three daughters married long ago and moved to distant states with their husbands. But she keeps in touch by phone and letter, and her grandchildren are a great source of pride to her. In January, 1987, she sold her home on Rebecca Avenue and now resides in a lovely apartment in Butterfield Trail Village. However, rather than feeling put "out to pasture", this young-at-heart lady has a fresh outlook on life. She has renewed many old friendships and made any number of new ones. She is frequently invited to play the piano at the Village social events. Even today, her touch on the keys is sure and strong, and everything she plays is remembered from years ago without the aid of sheet music—a nostalgic feast for all who listen.

The Carl Lang family has always supported, and Mrs. Lang continues to contribute to, the best features of their adopted location.

Katherine married Dr. Fegan and moved to Prairie Grove where her youngest son, Henry T. Fegan, was born October, 1917. Dr. Fegan made house calls in a horse and buggy taking his family with him quite often. After the death of Dr. Fegan, "Syl" took care of his mother and 3 brothers. Tom Watson Lavender Tom Watson Lavender was born August 21, 1905 at Prescott, Arkansas. The family moved to Texarkana when he was five years old. He attended school there. He came to Fayetteville in 1925 to attend the University.

Mildred and Tom Lavender, February 15, 1989, in a Valentine photo from the Northwest Arkansas Times where their romantic first meeting (in Fayetteville) was front page news.

In 1929 he met Mildred Louise Cannon (see Cannon line) who was born January 21, 1911, at Mt. Comfort. She attended school there and was in the University when they met. They were married April 12, 1930 in the middle of the depression. Tom did construction work as foreman and superintendent until the war started with Japan in 1940. He worked on defense construction until July 29, 1943 when he enlisted in the Navy Sea Bee Battallions as a Warrant Officer. He was later promoted to full Lieutenant and served in the Solomon Islands until the war ended.

While he was overseas Mildred worked in the Army Flying Academy, where she kept flight records. This was in Ontario, California and Jerry, nine and Fayre, seven, attended school there.

When Tom came home November 12, 1945, we came to Texarkana and started The Lavender Construction Company. We operated the company there until 1956 when we moved most of the operation to Fayetteville. In 1951 we had another son, William Thomas, who started to school in Fayettville. For awhile we operated the business from two offices, at Texarkana and Fayetteville and worked other projects within a 200 mile radius.

In the meantime Jerry and Fayre had both graduated from the University and had married. William had also grown up and graduated from the University of Arkansas. We retired from large construction business in 1963 and started building duplexes and apartments for ourselves. We bought a 209 acre farm for recreation purposes and built a house on it as a second home.

April 12, 1980 we celebrated our 50th wedding anniversary and had a giant family reunion of the Cannon and Lavender families. We had 150 family relatives from both coasts and in between.

Marian Carter Ledgerwood

Although she is not a native of Washington County, Marian Ledgerwood's roots go deep in the county. All of her ancestral lines had migrated to the county before 1850 except for her Carters, who came in the fall of 1851.

Marian Mae Carter was born in Muskogee, Oklahoma on 21 January 1923, daughter of Von Carter and Ella Mae Jones, who were married in Washington County in 1913. Marian was the third of five children. Her sister, Edith Carter, lives in Tulsa, where she was employed by an oil company until her retirement. Von Richard (Dick) Carter lived in Muskogee, Oklahoma where he was Superintendent of the Oklahoma School for the Blind for 33 years. After his retirement, he and his wife moved to Tulsa, where he died in March 1987. George William Carter and family lived in Tulsa, then Chicago area for over 20 years. He also was employed by an oil company, and he has retired to Tulsa. John Ed Carter lives in Columbia, South Carolina, where he is employed by a chemical company.

Each of these Carter children finished high school in Muskogee and graduated from Northeastern State College at Tahlequah, Oklahoma. Marian taught music in Tahlequah High School until she moved to Tulsa to work. She married Leroy William Ledgerwood Jr. (Bill) in Muskogee on 21 July 1946. He is a native of Springfield, Missouri.

They lived in Tulsa, where her husband, a mechanical engineer, was employed by an oil company research lab. In May 1961, they moved to Talara, Peru (South America), where they lived two years. They returned to Tulsa for only 18 months, then were transferred to New Orleans for 18 months. Finally, in July 1966, they were sent to Houston, Texas, where they lived for 20 years. After Bill's retirement, they moved to Hot Springs Village, Arkansas.

The Ledgerwoods have two children and seven grandchildren:

1. Ruth Ellen Ledgerwood, born 11 March 1950 in Tulsa, Oklahoma, married James A. Warren in Houston in 1959. Her husband is employed by a gas pipeline company. They live on the Warren Ranch near Hockley, Texas, and have two children: William James Warren, born 1975 in Houston, and Kelley Elizabeth Warren, born 1975 in Houston.

2. Leroy William Ledgerwood, III (Roy) was born 24 October 1963 in Tulsa. He is a mechanical engineer living in Houston, Texas. He married Sharon Coble shortly after he graduated from Texas Tech University in Lubbock, in 1975. He completed his Master's Degree at Rice University. They have five children, all born in Houston: Suzanna Ledgerwood, born 1978; Alisha Ledgerwood, born 1980; Erin Ann Ledgerwood, born 1981; Leroy William Ledgerwood, IV (Bill), born 1984; Ellen Mae Ledgerwood, born 1986.

Having obtained a degree in piano in 1944, music has been a continuing interest in Marian's life. In 1957, a Ledgerwood genealogist introduced her to the study of genealogy and family history. The fascination of this hobby has resulted in a large store of data on all her own lines, as well as those of her husband. She is currently in process of organizing these data on her computer, and expects the endeavor to occupy most of her time and thoughts for the remainder of her life.

Some Washington County family lines on which Marian has compiled significant information include: Carter, Arnold, Campbell, Rutherford, Jones, Shumate, Hash, and Riddle.

Thomas Jefferson Lee

Thomas Jefferson Lee, of Greenland, was born July 18, 1844 in Monroe County, Tennessee, one of eleven children of Mary Harris and Calvin Lee. Thomas J. Lee was the grandson of Captain Thomas Lee, who served in the North Carolina Militia and the Revolutionary War. The Lee's had extensive land holdings and slaves in North Carolina and later in Tennessee. Land grants were given to Captain Lee for service in the Revolutionary War.

Thomas Jefferson Lee married Eliza Catherine Eakin, March 22, 1866 in Monroe County, Tennessee. She was born June 7, 1842 and died January 17, 1908 in Greenland, Arkansas. Thomas and Eliza were the parents of nine children, all of whom were born in Tennessee, except Amanda. The children were: Susan E., 1867, Taylor F., 1869, Margaret, 1869, Mary E., 1871, Eliza A., 1874, Nancy J., 1877, Thomas Sherman, 1878, Amanda, 1881, and an infant son who died at birth.

Thomas J. Lee joined the Union Calvary at age twenty, 1863, for a period of three years and served at Natchez, Mississippi until 1865, (eastern Tennessee remained loyal to the Union during the Civil War). His health was poor for some time and he later received a pension for disabilities that were service connected.

The Lees moved to Arkansas in 1881 in a wagon to Waldron and a little later to Greenland. He was a farmer and added to his land as he was able and was a respected member of the community. Eliza took her spinning wheel and her loom and was known for her weaving abilities, making coverlets and rugs for her family and others.

Mary (Polly) Lee was the only daughter to marry and raise a family. She married Ellis Edward Sutton and they had seven children. (See Jeremiah Sutton Family). The four other sisters-Susie, Liza Nannie and Mandy were known throughout the area as "The Lee Girls". All lived well into their nineties.

Taylor Lee married Belle Snyder and had four children: Maude, Dora, Robert and Dee. Sherman married twice: Bertha Miller, who died at the birth of a child and then Carrie Williams. Sherman died at age forty-five in 1924. Nancy (Nannie), at about age fifty, married Jake Cruise, who was from Tennessee.

In the early days of Greenland, there was a post office, a general store, and a blacksmith shop. Nannie, at one time, was the postmistress and was proud of the fact that she "worked out". The "Lee Girls" lived life in a quiet, hard-working manner with courtesy and gentleness and continued to live in the family home until death.

Thomas Jefferson Lee and his wife, Eliza, lived until 1910 and 19, respectively, and are buried in Campbells Cemetery, as are the other family members. The Lee land was divided among family members and much of it is still owned by family; five generations and more still living on the same land.

Carl Roy Lenox

Ed Snow, half-brother to Eva, Carl Lenox, Carl's dog Spot. At house at Fishback School in 1920s.

Carl Roy Lenox

Carl was born in Washington County, Arkansas, near Springdale, April 21, 1896, first son of Richard Cameron (Cam) Lenox (born June 5, 1868, near Republic, Missouri) and Fannie Belle Riggins (born in Arkansas, December 17, 1872). Cam (24) and Fannie (18) married August 16, 1891 by J. L. Routh, JP, per original license. Married Lic. Book J, P. 22. Other sons were William Archie (born November 26, 1903), Harvey Edgar (born March 15, 1907) in Arkansas. (See related biographies of Thomas M. Sullins and Eva F. Gash.) Cam was a farmer. They lived near Zion and Sonora in Washington County, Arkansas. The three boys attended grade school but Harvey never did want to go. In the mornings he'd climb a tree so his mother couldn't catch him and make him go to school.

Carl married Eva Gash Sullins (widow with 3-1/2 year old daughter, Ada) on August 26, 1919, Edward E. Hale officiated (from original license). Carl farmed; they rented several places, one from his grandfather, John Riggins, on Clear Creek. They lived on Ira's corner and Carl had a job digging the ditches and laying the water lines in Springdale in about 1920. There is a picture of this. Carl and Eva picked strawberries in Missouri, picked apples and cut grapes in Arkansas. Carl worked for his Uncle J. O. Graham at Fishback in the apple orchards. Ada started to school at Fishback. Carl also worked on the same place for Quality Orchards after J. O. sold the farm. They lived on Mr. Riggins' farm when Ada was about 8 and she went to school at Zion. The house set back up on a high hill above Clear Creek and above the spring from which they carried water to use in the house. When the creek would be flooded, Carl would use John Henry, a balky horse, to set Ada across the creek so she could go to school. He used John H. to plow and to pull the buggy. One time John H. wouldn't go when hitched to the buggy; Carl got so mad he gathered sticks and built a fire under the horse's belly. John H. merely moved up enough to get away from the fire, leaving the buggy directly over the fire and Carl had to fight fire like mad to keep from burning the buggy. The writer always bet on a horse named John Henry, who ran until he was 10 years old, because of this old balky horse that they had when she was a child. They finally sold John H. (the balky one) although the writer was always fond of him.

Ada also picked strawberries and grapes when she wasn't in school. Finally, on December 4, 1926 Carl bought 20 acres of the land from his mother which she had inherited from her father, John Riggins. Price was $800 and a vendor's lien was retained for $750 at 8% interest to be paid within 5 years. The family moved on to it and built a little house. Mrs. Lenox wasn't a business woman; she had mortgaged 40 acres (including Carl's 20) to E. B. Cummings for $290 on July 6, 1925. They foreclosed on the 40 acres before Carl knew it was mortgaged; that was after the death of his mother in 1928. So, they took the place and Carl and Eva moved back to Fishback where Carl worked for Quality Orchards. Ada graduated from 8th grade at Fishback. About 1931 Carl received a bonus from government for service in World War I. Carl served in the army in WWI as a private in the Infantry from May 26, 1918 until he was honorably discharged on April 4, 1919. His discharge shows he was a farmer, dark brown eyes, black hair, ruddy complexion, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 22-1/2 years old. His character was excellent. Notations in his diary: "Sailed for France about September 22, 1918. Landed in France October 6, 1918; boarded ship at Marseille, March 1, 1919". (To come home) "Landed in Spain March 4, 1919. Sailed 6, landed in New York March 17". He also had a lot of addresses in the book of his army buddies. Stamped in book, "Grown and packed by A. P. Bayless, Butterfield, Missouri". That is where Eva and Carl went to pick strawberries, so Carl carried the book with him after the war. He was only in touch with one of his army friends after the war and he lived at London, Arkansas. They never did get to see each other but did correspond.

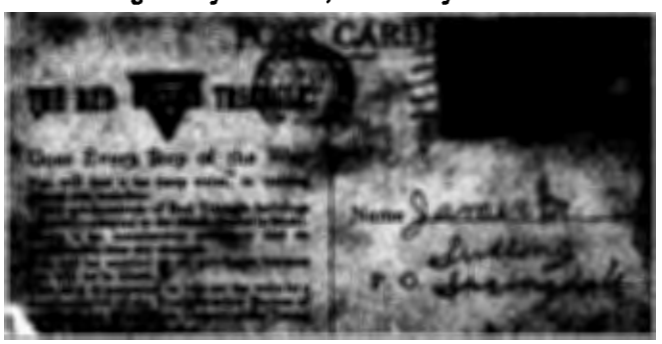
After Carl got the bonus, he bought back 10 acres of the original 20 he had bought from his mother, paid for it, farmed and raised chickens until Eva got sick in 1952. Carl was very sick in 1937 with a goiter; had surgery and spent many months in VA Hospital in Fayetteville. Carl deeded the farm to Ada in 1937 because she had never been legally adopted, but they were to used it as long as they needed it, which they did.



Card from Carl Lenox at Camp Pike to James R. Sullins, Springdale, Arkansas, dated June 12, 1918 during WWI.

The Lenox men were usually short and all of them became prematurely bald. Carl wore a size 6 shoe. His father's mother was supposed to have been 1/2 Cherokee Indian; could have received land and money but she refused to admit she was Indian and wouldn't apply for her Indian rights. Carl's father's parents are buried in Friendship Cemetery near Springdale but their names are not now known. Mona Cooper Sullins said that Carl's grandfather worked for her father in about 1894. Mona was born July 8, 1886, died August 14, 1972 and she was about 8 years old when he worked there. His wife had been dead several years. Mr. Lenox finally went blind. Richard "Cam" lived with his son, Archie and wife, Lona, after his wife had died and he was old. Fannie died in 1928 of a ruptured appendix (it is thought). She couldn't be persuaded to go to the doctor; said it would kill her if she had surgery. Eva, her daughter-in-law, stayed with her for about 10 days, cooked waited on her, did the washing, etc. until Fannie died. Ada stayed with her granddad Sullins during this time. Cam died March 28, 1939. He and Fannie are buried in Zion Cemetery. Richard and Rebecca Lenox could have been Carl's grandparents. Lenox people came to Missouri from either Kentucky or Tennessee, and later some came to Arkansas. Carl and Eva had no children. Carl taught Ada how to shoot a 22 pistol when she was at home, about age 14. She wouldn't try a shotgun. Carl always liked kids. He taught the neighbor's son how to drive a car, to plow, took him fishing and camping, after the boy's father died. This one said Carl was like a second father to him. Carl also helped his two younger brothers. Carl liked hunting and fishing. Most of the time they had a dog.

Archie, second son of Cam and Fannie, married Avis Benson (sister of May who married Will Riggins and Garcie who married Otto Sullins); had one child, Hazel who is now living at Lowell. She married Howard Ingram; they have children and

Marvin was killed in a car wreck in 1966 and the other two are deceased now, too. Lona lives in Wichita, Kansas. Archie and Lona had Betty and Jolene. Betty married Mendal Frank Butler, son of Frank Butler of Pratt, Kansas, November 27, 1953. They have lived in Wichita for many years and Betty has taught school. She worked her way through college. Their children: Melia, born 1955 or 1956, Linda and Michell. Jolene married Larry Dinkel, had Andy, Alan Thomas and Angela. Jolene worked up until she died on December 30, 1986 in Wichita. Ada bought a house in Fayetteville in 1951. Archie had been a carpenter in California and he worked on the house; so did Carl and Eva. Eva became very ill in 1952; Ada took her to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis; came by ambulance on September 1, 1952. She'd had a heart attack in the hospital. Lona stayed with her in the daytime for awhile at Ada's house. Lona and Archie were divorced in about 1954. Arch married Martha Sturdy who had 3 sons by her first marriage. Martha helped him regain his health after he became ill with Tuberculosis. They lived in Lincoln, Arkansas where he helped run her business until he died January 23, 1985. He is buried in Zion Cemetery. Martha is living in Lincoln and helps run her family's business. The third son of Cam and Fannie, Harvey, married Lucille Smith; had son, Alvin. When they divorced Alvin went with his mother. February 13, 1943 Harvey married Jewell Weston. She had started working as secretary at the University of Arkansas in the 1930s, going back and forth on the train; took many courses while there. After many years, she took a job at George's in Springdale, then with Willis Shaw, Elm Springs, Arkansas. Jewell retired at age 70. She and Harvey took care of Jewell's mother for 16 years (until her mother's death). Mrs. Weston thought of Harvey as her son and he returned the affection. Harvey died after a prolonged illness on March 6, 1985. Jewell still lives in their home at Elm Springs. Harvey's son, Alvin, visited him after he grew up and he now

The story goes that a distant kinsman of Carl was killed and his wife was hanged by bushwhackers after the Civil War.

Fannie was the daughter of John H. Riggins, born April 21, 1839, died July 31, 1923 and Sarah Cathern Billingsley, born October 31, 1848, died April 24, 1929. Both are buried in Zion Cemetery. John Riggins had two sisters: One married a Graham: children - Frances married Cooper; Alice married Cooper; Bob, James and William. Mary married George Cornwell who was killed by bushwhackers after the Civil War. They sent two little boys to the house but kept the wife there while they killed her husband. She cried until her eyeballs came out. Not much is known about John Riggins before he came to Arkansas. He must have had a substantial amount of money. He always wore a black suit and didn't seem to work, yet he left six living children land and money (about $18,000) when he died in 1923. They thought he had more and that he had buried it. Many people dug around over the land for years hunting treasure. None of the land remains in any heirs' hands at this time. Sarah was an invalid for many years. They always kept a hired girl. John would get in his buggy and go to Oklahoma to buy a barrel of whiskey which he brought home and stored in a little well house beside the dug well. His grandson, Carl and a friend got to taking some out and replacing it with water. Carl was about 16. Finally Mr. Riggins said, "Egad, this tastes just like water". Carl's brother, Archie, seven years younger, told on them, so that put a stop to the whiskey stealing.

Henry Lewis

Henry Lewis was second of sixteen children born to Bracken and Matilda (Preston) Lewis, the first nine born in Floyd County, Kentucky before the family moved to Washington County, about 1835. Bracken Lewis was the last of three children of Zachariah and Rachael (Bracken) Lewis, married 1786 in Orange County, North Carolina. Zachariah died about 1802 and Rachael married Peter Mankins (1770-1881) in 1803; they had eleven children, most of whom moved to Arkansas with the Lewis children.

Henry Lewis, born November 23, 1822, married February 4, 1847, Mary Elizabeth Massey, born 1830 in Wayne County, Indiana, the daughter of Matthew Massey (see sketch) and Mary Ann Mills, daughter of Seth Mills and Charity (Thornburg). Henry and Elizabeth had seven children: (1) Matthew, born about 1848, died at age 21; Mary Jane (1850-1883) married May 26, 1867, William Springston (1846-1923) had six children; lived near Elkins and Durham, Arkansas. (3) Nathan, born about 1852, married his step-sister, Lucinda E. Pool, had three children, Moses L. and twin sons who died in infancy. Moses L. Lewis was born about 1875, married but his wife died in childbirth, and he went to New Mexico with his cousin, Leland Stanford Terhune. On July 30, 1907, he murdered Leland and buried him in an irrigation ditch, where the body was found several days later. After Nathan's death, Lucinda married Lewis Stone. (4) Bracken Lewis, born about 1854, also married a step-sister, Emily Jane Pool; in 1881 they moved to Bell County, Texas, where her health failed, and she was bedfast over ten years before Bracken died with liver cancer. They had no children. Emily moved back to Fayetteville where a niece cared for her. (5) Edie/Edy (1856-1885) married Dr. William Orrick Shannon in Washington County in 1873, and had four children: (a) Ober Lee (1874-1955) m. in 1896, Mary Lourinda Taylor and had 14 children born in Durant, Oklahoma, where he was a substantial business man. His wife died in 1960. (b) Cora Priscilla (1876-1907) married William Isaac Conn; had 4 children. (c) Allen Dewitt (1878-1891) and (d) William O. (1884-1884). (6) Sarah Adeline Lewis (see below; and Joseph A. Terhune sketch) (7) Henry (1862-1878). Henry Lewis, father of these seven children went to the Civil War and died in a southern prison in 1863/64 and was buried in Little Rock, Arkansas. In 1866, his widow, Mary Elizabeth (Massey) married Auguston Clayton Pool at Springston, Arkansas. He was a widower with five children: Mary; George Washington; Lucinda E. and Emily Jane who married Lewis' brothers (above); and Margaret who was blind. He and Mary Elizabeth had Seth, born 1869, and Julia, probably Seth's twin, and Lillie Ann Pool, born 1872, who married Jesse Franklin Son and had ten children: James Walter; Bert Franklin; Arthur Ellsworth; Nellie Vivian; Gertrude Emily; Jimmie Ray; Edgar Allen; Oren Justus; Cecil Augustus, Jesse Clayton. (6) Sarah Adeline Lewis, born September 5, 1859, was a very small girl when her father, Henry, went away to the war. That occasion was imprinted on her mind because her mother cried; someone seated the little girl on the gate post and held her safely there to watch her father's departure. A few years later, Auguston C. Pool became the father remembered from her growing-up years. On September 28, 1876, Sarah Adeline married Joseph Allan Terhune (1856-1937) and had 10 children: 1. Milton Augustus; 2. Annie Belle; 3. Leland Stanford; 4. Myrtle Alma; 5. Hubert Lyman; 6. Joseph Edmond; 7. Ina Mildred; 81. Pearl Eugenia; 9. Susan Jewell; and the tenth child, Glenn Allan Terhune, who is the only survivor in early 1987. (See Joseph Allan Terhune).

James Lewis

James Lewis was born in Ashe County, North Carolina, about 1801. His parents, John Lewis and Rachel Henson moved to Cutshin, Kentucky, where his paternal grandparents, James Lewis I and Winetrey Henson lived. James grew up on Cutshin Creek, moving with his parents to Morgan County, Kentucky, some time between 1826-1828.

In Morgan County he met Nancy Reed, the daughter of Revolutionary soldier Benjamin Reed who had received a land grant in Morgan County in 1824. James and Nancy married in Morgan County on August 18, 1828. Soon James' sister, Martha Lewis, married Nancy's brother, Daniel Reed.

In 1834, both the Reed/Lewis families moved to Washington County, Arkansas leaving behind Daniel and Martha Reed. Traveling by wagon train, the company consisted of James Lewis and wife Nancy and their 6 children, William R., Benjamin, James and John and 2 small daughters, Ben Reed and his son James and wife Nancy Ferguson and children and several more families who settled in the Middle Fork Valley.

James and Nancy Lewis are listed in the 1840 census of Washington County in White River Township.

In 1844, they had another son, Daniel J. Lewis. Daniel J. was their last child as James died shortly after Daniel's birth. In 1845, widow Nancy Lewis married Kelly Ferguson. They moved to Lawrence County, Missouri, leaving Nancy's older sons, William R. and Benjamin with Nancy's nephew, Daniel Reed in Washington County.

In 1851, William R. Lewis married Nancy Webb and moved to Burnett County, Texas. About this time Nancy Lewis Ferguson died in Missouri and the Lewis children apparently were placed in the homes of relatives as they disappear until October, 1863, when Daniel J. Lewis returned to the Middle Fork Valley to meet and fall in love with Eliza Frances Jones, daughter of Daniel and Margaret Jones. They were married on October, 1863 by Eliza's maternal grandfather, Reverend Riley Jones.

Daniel Lewis enlisted in the 1st Arkansas Cavalry Company B on September 25, 1863, the same company that his father-in-law had served in the previous year and had lost his life in a skirmish near their home. Daniel remained in the service until August 25, 1865, when he was mustered out in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Daniel and Eliza established a home on the banks of the Middle Fork River where Daniel took up farming. In January, 1866, their first child was born - a son named James Hugo. Two years later he was joined by a baby sister, Margaret Rachel.

Daniel's health was deteriorating by August, 1870. He had contacted a lung disorder while in service and had never recovered. Realizing his life was ebbing, he took Eliza and the children to Burnett County, Texas to be near his older brother, William R. He died there on August 15, 1870. Eliza and the children returned to Arkansas to her mothers home on Middle Fork.

Eliza married Joel Ramsey before 1880 and they had one child, a son William John. Joel died and she married John O'Brien. They became parents of 3 daughters - Nannie, Mary, and Ada Mae, born at Tacoma, Washington. Eliza died of a heart attack in Tacoma and was buried there. John brought the children back to Arkansas and lived at Springdale.

James Hugo Lewis married in Texas Rachel Arsula Cornett and had several children. The family lived in Arkansas until after 1910 and then moved to Washburn, Missouri, where they lived until their deaths. Both are buried in Washburn Prairie Cemetery near Washburn.

Margaret Rachel Lewis married James Monroe Malone on June 11, 1883. They lived near West Fork in the Mineral Springs Community and raised a large family. Margaret Rachel died on September 3, 1942, and is buried in the Mineral Springs Cemetery besides her husband, James Malone.

R. M. Lichlyter

The following is a history of the coming to Washington County of the pioneer Lichlyter and Woods families. It was related in 1934 to Miss Hester Lichlyter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lichlyter, by R. M. (Dick) Lichlyterof Johnson on the occasion of an Old Settlers Reunion at Cane Hill.

It was spring and there was a hurry and bustle in the two mountain cabins near the river. The poplars and oaks were budding in promise of future foliage to match the green of the pines and cedars scattered over the steep hillsides. But nature could offer no greater hope than that which stirred in the hearts of the two mountain men who all winter long had sat by their great log fires while the rain and snow swept over the thickly wooded region, and dreamed of the coming of spring and the beginning of their great adventure. It had been strange how these two, upon coming from the settlements along the coast had built their cabins near the same clear spring on a mountainside in eastern Tennessee and there had become fast friends.

Their children had played together. They had shared fortune and misfortune together. One's joy was shared with the other and one's sorrow was grief to the other as well. So it was not unusual that when more families moved in from the east and the settlements became larger that these two, more timidly at first and later with more confidence, began to speak of opportunities to be found beyond the mountains.

Travelers from the west country spoke of rich lands and sparkling springs, along with adventure and freedom to be had for the taking. So it was that these two fast friends planned that in the spring when streams were full enough to insure safe passage they would pack their personal effects and along with their families would journey through the mountain passes into the land of promise, the ever-beckoning.

At first they had considered using their great wagons, pulled by their trusty oxen, but the roughness of the surrounding country and the absence of trails and roads necessitated travel by water rather than land. Accordingly, they felled two immense poplar trees and after days of painstaking labor hewed out the logs to be used for boat gunnels.

Upon these two gunnels was built a sturdy flat boat large enough to accommodate the two families and those things necessary for the establishment of their homes in the new country.

At last all was in readiness in the year of 1840, and the families of R. M. Woods and David T. Lichlyter launched their great flat boat on the French Broad River in the Lookout Mountains of eastern Tennessee, near what is now Knoxville, intent upon finding for themselves and their children success in an unknown land.

The boat, of necessity, was large. The Woods family consisted of the father and mother and seven children: Kizzie, Mintie, Dick, Jr., Joe, Jake, George, and Mary.

The Lichlyter family included father, mother and eleven children: John, Aaron, Anderson, Gideon, George, William, Rufus, Julia, Jane, Phine, and Harrison. So the happy group departed from those things familiar to them and steadfastly turned to the west, the land of hearts desire.

Following the course of the French Broad River until it flows into the larger Tennessee River at Knoxville, the happy families continued on their journey guiding their boat into the waters of the Tennessee, floating down the river through the scenic Lookout Mountains past the settlement of Chattanooga and then bearing south and west, floated through northern Alabama, back into Tennessee again, past the towns of Columbia and Nashville, on past Paducah, Kentucky, to where the Tennessee joins the Ohio in its journey to the great Mississippi.

The days began to increase in number, and no doubt the hearts that were eager and hopeful in the beginning were heavy with misgivings and doubts. As nearly as possible these people continued their usual home life on the boat. Dirt was piled in one corner so that a fire could be built on which meals for the hungry children could be prepared. The fire was probably kept blazing throughout many nights to drive away the gloom of darkness and chill of the night air on the river.

Difficulties were encountered on the way, but none approached the proportions of that which confronted the little party at the passage in the river now known as Muscle Shoals. The fact that their boat was large and unwieldy presented an immense problem to the two men as they looked over the foaming water churning and roaring through the boulders and narrow passages. Pilots who knew the channels were hired and by diligent work of all hands and the shrewd knowledge of the pilots the large vessel was finally steered through the dangerous shoals and rested in the smooth water on the other side. Thankfully the little group continued their way down the majestic Mississippi. Each day brought new wonders. Rich dark soils, huge trees, climbing vines and many other new views now greeted the travelers.

At last, safe sailing brought them to the mouth of the Arkansas River, and with encouragement of friends, there they decided to go up the Arkansas until they should find a desirable landing place.

Accordingly, their boat was towed up the Arkansas by a steamboat and the wanderers landed in the settlement of Van Buren. In this settlement they heard of regions to the north which were open for settlers. Moreover, these regions promised good water and health for their families, as well as desirable land for their families.

So, deserting their commodious flat boat, they loaded their property into ox wagons and trekked slowly overland until they chose a place near the head of Cove Creek. There they built cabins and established their homes to rear their families.

As the children grew from boys and girls who had been friends into adulthood, they married and established homes of their own. Mintie Woods became the bride of John Lichlyter, and Mary Woods married Joe Reed, and Kizzie Woods married Jonse Reed.

After several years David Lichlyter and his son John moved north to the little town of Springdale. From that date to the present many of their descendants have lived in Washington County, particularly in the Springdale and Johnson communities.

It is interesting to note that much of the land in Springdale, especially around the Memorial Hospital was once owned by David, while much of the land south of Highway 68 and west of Highway 71 and in the Shady Grove area was owned by his son John Lichlyter.

A genealogy of the Lichlyter family from 1741 is available in the Springdale Library.

Oscar Lierly

The Lierly family arrived in Washington County, Arkansas in 1883 when Stephen Chesley Lierly (September 24, 1841 to September 21, 1911) and his second wife, Martha Goodson (March 5, 1851 to June 16, 1888, moved their family by wagon from Winfield, Kansas. They brought with them their daughters Ida May (November 23, 1871 to December 15, 1924, married Ham Tressner), Mary Bertha (March 15, 1876 to February 18, 1939, married Ed Rice), and sons Stephen C. (November 6, 1878 to September 6, 1883) and Oscar Leonard, Reverend (April 17, 1881 to September 5, 1960). The family settled on a small farm one quarter mile west of the Round Mountain Cemetery. The family had moved to Arkansas hoping that the mountain climate would improve the health of Martha who had tuberculosis.

Oscar Leonard Lierly and wife "Allie" on Mother's Day 1947.

Shortly after their arrival tragedy struck. On September 6, 1883, Stephen C. died of diphtheria and his infant brother died on the same date. The two were buried in a common grave in the Round Mountain Cemetery. They were joined by their mother on June 6, 1888.

All of Lierlys in the U. S. A. (some 16 different spellings) can trace their ancestry to a Solomon Layrle (1710 spelling) who was born in Constance, Germany in 1681. Solomon's son, Johann Christopher, was born in 1710 at Constance. Christopher came to America in 1736 as a Lutheran missionary-teacher for the Dutch colony near Charleston, South Carolina. (The Dutch had left New York when the English took over the colony.) After serving for a number of years, Christopher returned to Germany where he remained until 1754 when he returned to America on the ship Richard and Mary. He landed in Philadelphia where on September 30, 1754 he took the oath of allegiance to the English Government.

According to Strassburg, Pennsylvania German Pioneers, Vol 1, pgs, 605, 607, and 608, Christopher signed his name three different ways: Christipher Layrle, C. Leyrle, and Johnn Christopher Layrle. Soon after his arrival, Christopher married Anna Maria Catherina (last name unknown) and moved to Harper's Ferry where their six children were born. Zachariah (June 6, 1757 to 1847), Thomas?, Peter (1760), Christopher, Jr. (1763), Jacob (1766) and Barbra (1770). Zachariah served as a soldier in the Revolutionary War, while Christopher, Jr. was a wagonmaster.

In his book Rhinelanders On the Yadkin, Carl Hammer has reproduced the original German-language will of Johann Christopher Layrle, date October 12, 1784. In the English tradition of the same will, the name has been changed to: "John Christopher Lyerly, a planter in Rowan County, in St. Luke's Parish and state of North Carolina. . ." (Lyerly is the current spelling in North Carolina). In the will he has this for his sons: "Second, to my eldest son, Zacharius Lylerly, because he, when he reached his majority, received a mare, a cow, and a calf, but shamefully lost them by gambeling and drinking and entered upon a very Godless life, indeed, even cursed his father and laid hands upon him and threw him to the ground, I leave one shilling Sterling and exclude him from everything else". "Third, to my son Peter Lyerly, because he left his father for a considerable time and also leads a dissolute life; notwithstanding, if he marries a wife of German nationality, he shall have a horse and fifty acres of land. . .should he marry, however, against my will, into another nationality, then he shall not have land, but the young horse".

Zachariah and wife Catherine Van Pool were the parents of John Lirele (1850 spelling) who was born October 9, 1798, Rowan County, North Carolina. In 1816 the family, with others, started a westward trip that carried them to Union County, Illinois. On the trip they wintered in Tennessee in 1817 and Morganville, Kentucky in 1818. Arriving in Union County, Illinois in 1818, they settled at the junction of the Hughes Creek and Clear Creek. Here, Zachariah and others were instrumental in the founding of St. John's Church in Union County.

John Lirele moved to Missouri where his son Stephen Chesley was born September 24, 1841 to his second wife, Elmira Lane. The family later moved to Winfield, Kansas where Chesley married Mary A. Gaunt and on her death to Martha E. Goodson.

In Arkansas, Chesley supported his family by farming and working at his trade, carpentry. The children attended the Round Mountain School and the Baptist Church of that community. (Chesley and his wife had been members of the religious group known as Dunkards.) They baptized the candidate three times, face down, once for the Father, once for the Son, and once for the Holy Spirit.

Young Oscar attended school for only three years (the term was only 3-4 months depending upon the amount of money raised) and then dropped out to learn the trade of carpentry and to assist on the farm. On October 2, 1898 he was married to Mary Alice (Allie) Kirkland, a neighbor and former classmate. Their first home was a small rented farm on Round Mountain. It was here that the Lierly children were born: Garland Lee (June 7, 1900 to October 15, 1970, married Velma Thomas), Lemuel Marion (February 23, 1902 to February, 1983, married to Mila Osborn), Bonnie Earline May 21, 1904—married Lester Atkinson), Opal Flora (March 14, 1906 to July 29, 1982, married Virgil Ray), Raymond Leonard (May 27, 1909—married Louise Williams).

In 1913 Oscar purchased a small farm located at the junction of Arkansas Highway 16 and Harris Road. Here a two room house and barn was built. There were many overnight visitors as the house was on the main road to Fayetteville and people traveling from eastern Washington County and Madison County would spend the night before going to Fayetteville and often as they returned.

In 1917 the farm at Harris was sold and 80 acres of rough, hill land was purchased, two miles west of Wheeler, Arkansas in the White Oak Community. The family remained here until 1939 when the house was sold and a house purchased at 812 North Leverett.

Oscar Lierly was called to the ministry in 1913 and at once began to preach in the local Baptist churches. Becoming a preacher was very difficult for Oscar because his limited education made reading difficult. To solve this problem he took his Bible with him each time he went to the field and while the team would rest, Oscar spent the time reading the Bible. This became a life-time habit, whenever he was resting he would read from the Bible. When his sight failed him he would sit and repeat the many scriptures he had memorized.

From his conversion until his death, Oscar was active in the Fayetteville Baptist Association. He is first mentioned in the associational minutes in 1914 when he was often the chairman of the Foreign Missions Committee. This interest in mission work continued until his death. Brother Lierly served the Fayetteville Baptist Association as local missionary 1917-1922, 1929-1933 and 1946-1958.

Brother Lierly was ordained February 7, 1915 at the Pleasant Valley Church. At the time he was pastor of four churches, preaching at one each weekend (normally there were services on Saturday night and Sunday morning and evening.) These churches were Apostolic (now Round Mountain), Goshen, Mt. Vernon and Pleasant Valley.

From 1914-1923 Brother Lierly traveled by horse to pastor the churches and to hold revivals. As a missionary he was normally away from home for 200-250 days each year.

During his years on the mission field Brother Lierly was responsible for leading more than 3,000 to Christ, performing 1,500 marriages, and conducting over 2,000 funerals. In April 29, 1917 he was instrumental in the establishment of the Sycamore Baptist Church at Wheeler, Arkansas. In 1931, he assisted Brother D. N. Keck in the establishment of Calvary Baptist Church of Fayetteville, Arkansas. The original church building was located at the corner of Cleveland (York) and Leverett. He became the pastor of Calvary in 1933, a position he held until 1945. Brother Lierly retired from the ministry in 1958 because of failing health.

During his ministry Brother Lierly served as pastor of the following churches: Apostolic 1915, 1936; Bethlehem 1922; Calvary 1933-45; Goshen 1915; Liberty 1924-25, 1928-30; Little Elm 1924-25, 1931-34; Mt. Pisgah 1924; Mt. Vernon 1915; Oakland 1924-26, 1928; Pleasant Valley 1915; Prairie View 1955-56; Providence 1936; 1946-48; Spring Creek 1922-23, 1928-31; Sycamore 1922-25; Zion 1935.

Thomas Macklin Liles

Thomas Macklin Liles, born August 12, 1889 on a farm southwest of Fayetteville on the old pump station road. His father's parents were Eli S. Liles, born June 2, 1818 - died April 4, 1889 and Nancy E. Liles, born July 3, 1823 - died July 13, 1905. His mother's parents were George Chamberlain, born in 1848 and died in 1943 and Martha Ann Claton Chamberlain who died in 1879. Mack's parents were Henry Rufus Liles, born September 11, 1848 - died October 16, 1929 in Upland, California and Jennie Jane Chamberlain Liles, born January 4, 1873 in Alabama - died April 15, 1971 in Upland, California. At the age of fourteen, Jennie's family moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas where she met and married Henry Rufus Liles. Mack was the oldest of thirteen children. In 1898, the family consisting of four boys and one girl moved to Cisco, Texas. Before returning to Fayetteville in 1906, Mack worked a few months for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Mack made his home with two aunts - Mrs. Emily F. Black and Miss Mary E. Liles - while attending school and working nights as an operator for North Arkansas Telephone Company. Mack and Ola Mae Easterly were married May 17, 1910. They were transferred to Sallisaw, Oklahoma and then to Westville, Oklahoma. In October 1912, they moved back to Fayetteville where Mack went to work for Southwestern Bell which had bought North Arkansas in 1911. A new office was built on the corner of Meadow and Block Streets, a two story brick building. There were 547 telephones in Fayetteville at that time, most of which were out of order more than were working. Everything was different when he started to work. They used the big, long telephones with wet batteries and one was all a man could carry. Mack liked all telephone work, but preferred outside. At first they did not have autos and very poor roads. Mack, being responsible for the long distance lines from Winslow to the Missouri line had to hire a saddle horse or a horse and buggy in order to locate trouble. Sometimes he rode the train as the long distance lines were located along the right of way. In 1916 Mack sustained a fall which broke his back and kept him off work about two years. Mack was very respected among the telephone men and trained many of them for the company. He was promoted to Wire Chief - a title he held until his retirement in 1954 with 44 years of service. He was a member of First Baptist Church, and honorary deacon, a 32nd degree Mason, a member of Washington Lodge #1 - with both York and Scottish Rites - a member of the Shrine Scimitar Temple of Little Rock, a member of Amritta Grotto of Fort Smith, and a member of Eastern Star of Arkansas, University Chapter #495. Mack and Ola Mae have two children, George Henry and Martha Maxine. George followed his dad starting his telephone career in 1934 in the construction department. He married Margaret Elizabeth Eason, they have two children, Vida Mae and Thomas Arthur (Tommy). George worked in various departments for Southwestern Bell. He retired in 1975 as an Engineer with 41 years service. Daughter Vida Mae married James C. Atherton, Jr., they have three sons, Chris an oil field worker in Texas, Bob with an air conditioning company in Corpus Christi, Texas and David with a subsidairy of Sears in Hondo, Texas. They also have seven grandchildren. Vida Mae works for G. M. A. C. in Corpus Christi, Texas. Tommy had two children, George Lamar of Rogers, employed by Wal-Mart and Mary Margaret of Harrison who works for Levi-Strauss and attends college. W. E. Linebarger

The Linebarger Family arrived in Washington County in the person of David Monroe Linebarger. He was our grandfather. He was the son of Michael H. Linebarger and Elizabeth Smyer Linebarger.

New Methodist Church that Daddy built - 1931

D. M. Linebarger was born at Newton, North Carolina in 1851. On his way to Springdale, he stopped at Hindsville, Arkansas in 1871 to marry Susan Whitner, our grandmother. Soon after, they moved to Springdale where they lived fifty years. Grandpa was actively engaged in the early growth of Springdale. He was in the lumber and building business. He built one of the first homes on Holcomb Street. It was throught Grandpa's efforts that the Lutheran Church was organized. When he died, he was the last charter member of his church.

David and Susan's family grew up to eleven children and seven survived; three sons and four daughters. They were Elmer, Loy, Everett, Anna, Bertha, Mary and Maud. Our father William Elmer Linebarger was born in 1882. As time passed, six of the children moved to other locations but Daddy, known as Elmer, remained in Springdale.

Grandmother, Susan Linebarger, died June 9, 1919. We, the twins, Faye and Frances, were born June 7, 1919. Daddy said he took us next door so Grandma could see us before she died. It is impressive to us that Grandpa died exactly fourteen years later June 9, 1933.

Our parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Linebarger were married October 27, 1914. Our mother's name was Bennie Webster when she married Daddy. Her parents were William Atkinson Webster and Sara (Sallie) Elizabeth Greathouse. Grandpa Webster was born in Tennessee in 1848. He came to Washington County soon after the Civil War and married December 25, 1879. They lived at Elm Springs and reared five daughters: Aunt Nora (Mrs. J. G. Webber), Aunt Nellie (Mrs. Lee Fair), Aunt Bob (Mrs. Frank Smiley), Aunt Fannie (Mrs. Lee Derrick), and our mother, Bennie (Mrs. Elmer Linebarger). Grandpa Webster's family were actively engaged in the Civil War as revealed by the legacy of letters sent home from the battlefield. Grandpa Webster died 1927 and Grandma in 1933. Mother said that her daddy worked hard so that his daughters did not have to work in the field but could become clerks and school teachers.

More written records were kept of Grandma's, Sarah Elizabeth's family. Her mother and father were Robert Ambrose Greathouse and Margaret Blount Greathouse. Members of the Greathouse family have lived in Arkansas more than 150 years. The first ancestor in America was Herman Groethausen. In 1709, it is recorded in Springfield Township, Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania that Herman Groethausen obtained 500 acres of land from William Penn. The Greathouses came to Washington County in 1856 and settled in what has become known as Greathouse Springs. Grandma grew up at Greathouse Springs and after she was married, she lived at Elm Springs. When we were growing up, we usually went to Elm Springs Sunday afternoon.

The William Elmer Linebarger family began when our brother, Richard Webster Linebarger was born August 18, 1916. World War I was in progress and Daddy registered for the draft. The great flu epidemic reached Washington County and Daddy was not called to war because he caught the flu. Around 1922, the Elmer Linebarger family moved from the little white house on West Emma to the house westward.

It is no exaggeration that growing up in Springdale on Emma Avenue was the happiest of times for us, Richard, Faye and Frances. It was climbing trees, playing hide and seek, riding a new tricycle or bike, popping corn, making fudge, catching lightning bugs and picking strawberries to earn money for 4th of July. We remember when Daddy killed hogs and Mother made sausage, when Daddy milked the cows and Mother churned butter and we made ice cream. Daddy brought in bushels of apples, peaches, grapes and Mother made good things to eat.

Daddy built buildings over the state of Arkansas. When Richard was grown, he joined his father in the Linebarger Construction Company. Daddy built the first movie theater, Concord, in Springdale. It cost ten cents to go to the movies to see Tom Mix, Hoot Gibson, Tom Tyler, Richard Dix, Clara Bow, Our Gang, Will Rogers and Shirley Temple, to name a few. At the Concord, we saw the first "talkie" movie, Al Jolson, in the "Jazz Singer" and in 1941, we saw the first long epic movie "Gone with the Wind".

In the twenties and thirties we could walk to school, church and town. Miss Ola Watson taught us first grade reader "Baby Ray". Miss Ola also taught our father. Miss Deaver taught us second grade. When we were in the third grade, we went to grade school on Highway 71. Daddy and Mr. Fraser built the new high school on West Emma and when we went to seventh grade, we could just walk across the street. The E. B. Cummings house was just west of the new high school and the W. E. Linebarger house was directly across the street. Edward Cummings was Richard's friend and Lula Mae Cummings was Faye and Frances best friend.

In 1931, Daddy built the new Methodist Church, on Main and Brother Bolin was our preacher. As senior adults in 1987, we remember the old M. E. Church South on Emma Avenue where we were converted to Jesus Christ and joined the church. Daddy contracted, hammered and sawed and when the new church building was finished it was free of debt. Daddy use to say, "I handled every stone that went into that building". Mother and Daddy loved their church. We grew up, were married and our babies were dedicated in the church. Brother Wiggens dedicated Faye and Fred's son, Walter, with water from the river Jordan. The first funeral in the new church was for Uncle Jim Webber, husband of Aunt Nora. Our parents last service was in the church that they helped to build. Our memories of friends and experiences could fill a book like the church choir, Mrs. Price singing and Clara Ewalt Shaw playing the organ.

In between his construction business, Daddy found time to build a rabbit house so Richard could raise chinchilla rabbits. Rabbit was supposed to be better than chicken to eat. We had only one meal of rabbit that no one could eat. This project was short lived. We always had a family of kittens to take care of. Then we liked to go with Richard to take the cows to pasture on Pleasant Street past the Watts, McQuaids and Owens.

It was a happy time. We had a horse named Reddy. Our cousin, Buddy Linebarger, came from California and he wanted to ride in front of Reddy so he could "steer". One time, Richard built a tree house in the big Walnut tree in the field and mother made a telephone from it to our back porch with a copper wire and cigar box. In those days, we cut out paper dolls from Montgomery Ward Catalogs and Ladies Home Journal. We also liked to swing on the grape vines across the street where Mrs. Kelso lived and where the new high school was built later.

We played horse shoes, hop scotch, marbles, jacks and walked on stilts and almost wore out our knees and the sidewalk roller skating. Mrs. Crutcher lived in the big house on the south corner of West Emma Avenue and Highway 71. We were halfway to town when we crossed the highway on our way to Cogers, Joyces or Applegates to get a Coca-Cola or Eskimo Pie. We shopped at the Cash Dry Goods, the Hub and later Lichlyters. Groceries came from Needham's maybe Savit or Clems Grocery across the tracks. It was an exciting time of the year when we picked wild flowers, filled match boxes and secretly delivered May baskets up and down Emma Avenue to the Farrers, Jarvis', Allens, Cummings, Gibsons, Fowlers and Knolls.

Daddy and Mother drove us on a trip to California and we went swimming in the Pacific Ocean. Mother had her long hair cut and her cousin talked her into riding the roller coaster. We rode the ferry, visited Fisherman's Wharf and Richard was lost a short while in Golden Gate Park. It shocked all of us to see women wearing beach pajamas on the streets of San Francisco on their way to the beach. We saw the Mojave Desert, the Great Salt Lake, Yellow Stone National Park, Pikes Peak and many relatives. Mother and Daddy took us on other big trips like an excursion trip to the Rio Grande Valley and the Chicago World's Fair.

When we were very young, we had a Model T., Dart, Hupmobile. They had running boards. Sometimes Daddy would stop his car and offer someone walking a ride. Maybe he would accept and when his destination was just a block or two, he would ride standing on the running board at the front of the car. In those days, car doors opened from the front to the back. Daddy had to replace many back car doors. He would start to slowly drive into the garage on Pleasant Street and one of us would jump out of the back seat, leaving the car door open. One time, we drove out to Elm Springs without a back car door.

In 1987, Bennie and Elmer Linebarger's children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren live all over the United States. Their son, Richard Webster Linebarger married Selma Corinne Batson in Dardanelle, Arkansas in 1940. Richard was educated at Kemper Military College and both Richard and Corinne at the University of Arkansas. Richard served in the U. S. Frances met Henry when he was teacher and athletic coach at Springdale High School. It was war time and Faye's husband served the U. S. Marines as a doctor in the South Pacific Command. Frances' husband served the U. S. Air Force as a flight instructor in the Air Training Command. After the war, Dr. Wallace became an opthalmologist in Memphis and there, Fay and Fred raised their family. Col. Reeves served thirty years in the Air Force and Frances and Henry raised their family in eight different states and Alaska and Germany.

This is the story of the W. E. Linebarger family of Springdale, Arkansas to 1987, and to be continued.

Remembering today: Sara, two year old falling in the fish pool and grandmother having it filled up for a rock garden; grandmother's canary dying and Sara and Kathy singing "Who Killed Cock Robin" for its funeral; Sara and Kathy dressing up in old formals to present "plays"; all of us going to church on Easter and hunting Easter eggs; Sara writing her name on the wall of her newly papered room; grandmother stuffing a Santa Claus suit one Christmas and putting him outside the window so the grandchildren could see him and them rushing to bed because Walter heard reindeers on the roof; Dick singing "How Much is that Doggie in the Window" and "All I Want For Christmas is my Two Front Teeth"; and Kathy and Fred building a little green turtle village and Susan, Sara, Ann and Kathy playing in the red bud tree and drinking koolaide.

James Litteral

James Litteral and his wife Ruhama (Welty) are buried at the east end of the Mount Comfort Cemetery, in this county. He was born circa 1801 in North Carolina and died in 1882. She was born circa 1805 in Tennessee and died in 1886. They were married and all their children but one were born in Tennessee (probably Meigs County), before they migrated to Washington County, Arkansas in 1846, where James Litteral is listed in the Original Land Entry Book. Litteral Township of Washington County, Arkansas was named for his son Jacob Litteral, who owned a large farm on Clear Creek, in the present Wheeler Community.

Their children were: (1) Susan Narcissa "Sukie", born January 6, 1832 and married Benjamin Franklin "Doc" Pollock, a Springdale druggist, after Civil War service. (2) Elizabeth "Liz", born January 23, 1833 and married George W. Sparks. (3) Jacob W. "Jake" Litteral, born August 10, 1840 and married Adelia Ann Hatcher whose uncle founded Webb City, Missouri. About 1893, after serving in Civil War, they moved to that area of Missouri, where Jake was involved in the mining boom, and banking interests. (4) Penelope Jane, born October 20, 1843 and married Daniel Lanning Bruner, a Benton County farmer and Methodist Lay Preacher, who also served in the Confederate Army. (5) Sarah M., born circa 1844 and married Lafayette "Fete" Mason, listed on census as Clergyman, and also served in that war. (6) James Litteral, Jr., born circa 1850 in Arkansas. In 1870 he married Margaret Bonham, and it is believed they moved to Walla Walla, Washington.

Nathan Washburn Tuttle, born September 12, 1802 in Georgia, was the oldest son of Solomon and Mary (Patrick) Tuttle, pioneer settlers of the Mt. Comfort community northwest of Fayetteville, in this county. The subject apparently was named after his paternal grandmother, Rebecca Washburn, who married James Tuttle, Jr. Nathan was a circuit riding preacher of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. On February 2, 1826 he married Ann Elizabeth "Annaliza" Riddle, who was born May 7, 1807 at Rowan County, North Carolina, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Slater) Riddle. She was the granddaughter of Stephen Riddle, who established Riddle's Ferry on the Yadkin River in North Carolina in 1777.

Nathan Tuttle's farm, southeast of the Mt. Comfort Cemetery, much later became the Washington County Poor Farm, for a time. Nathan died at the age of 37 years, on October 26, 1839, leaving reportedly three daughters, but as of now the middle one, Martha Green Whitacor, remains only a name. Annaliza Caroline "Callie" Tuttle, born June 5, 1827 in Tennessee, and married Benjamin Henderson "Hence" Wilson, had four daughters before her death in 1855. Mary Elizabeth "Mate" Tuttle, born September 6, 1835 and married George Singleton "Sing" Trammell, and they and their eight children lived at Tuttle, Arkansas. Around 1847, the mother Ann second married a widower named Thomas Smith, a prominent farmer, and miller of Tuttle, Arkansas. The two room brick home they lived in during the Civil War, where bushwhackers burned Tom's feet in the fireplace, is still standing, just east of Tuttle. No evidence is left now of the 100 grave pioneer cemetery on this farm, behind the house and barn, where her daughter Callie was buried. Tom and Ann Smith's graves are in the Tuttle Cemetery, as are the Trammell's.

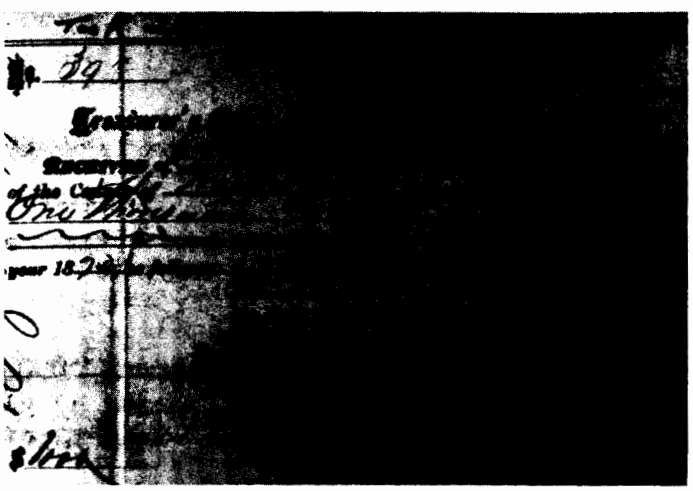
Benjamin Franklin Little

Benjamin Franklin Little was the first Republican sheriff of Washington County, serving from 1868 until 1872. He was born in Bedford County, Tennessee on September 13, 1839, the son of John and Margaret (Johnson) Little. John and Margaret were married in 1829 in Lincoln County, Tennessee and then moved to Bedford County, Tennessee, around the Shelbyville area. The 1850 U. S. census shows John Little and his family to be living in Civil District #3, Bedford County, Tennessee.



June 3, 1868, Benjamin Franklin Little. First Republican Sheriff of Washington County, Arkansas.

Benjamin Franklin's parents were early settlers in Washington County, coming to West Fork from Tennessee around 1851, where they settled down and John began farming. John and Margaret Little had twelve children—Elizabeth Ann "Betsy" (1831-circa 1900) who married John Farmer Brown and then Israel Boren; Angus York (1833-1895) who married Clamency Lenis Brown; Lucy Matilda (1835-1898) who married John Steele; Samuel R. (1837-1908) who married Judy Ann Robinson; Benjamin Franklin (1839-1909) who married Elizabeth Caroline Woolsey, John (1840-?) who left as a young man headed for California and was never heard from again; Rebecca "Becky" (1842-?) who never married; Pamelia "Amelia" (1845-1906) who married William B. Parks; Martha Eliza (1847-1923) who married Alexander Robinson; Mary E. (1849-1935) who married Henry Ramsey; Nancy (1854-1893) who married Robert Weber; and Mark "Bud" (1835-1926) who married Sarah Hope.

Benjamin Franklin Little was eleven years old when he and his family moved to West Fork, Arkansas, and 20 years later on November 13, 1870, he married Elizabeth Caroline Woolsey (born July 29, 1845; died March 21, 1910; buried at Goshen, Washington County). They had six children; two of them died as infants. These were Mary Caroline "Babe" (1872-1874) and Julius Caesar (1876-1877). Both of these two babies are buried at Baptist Ford Cemetery, located between Greenland and West Fork.

Their other children are as follows: John William "Bill" (1873-circa 1930) who married Josie Mhoon, moved to Whittier, California and died there; Emily (1878-1957) who married William Ryder Sweetser and who is buried at Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville, Arkansas; Lillie Dell "Liss" (1880-1955) who married Dr. Charles E. Swift and is buried at the Goshen Cemetery; and Minnie Bell (1883-1937) who married Felix A. Oliphant and then Henry M. "Buck" Tisdale, and she too is buried at the Goshen Cemetery.

During the Civil War, Benjamin Franklin Little served for three years as a Sergeant of Company D, 1st Arkansas Cavalry, United States Volunteers. His army record with the War Department shows the following: B. F. Little, age 17 years, height 5'9", complexion fair, hazel eyes, dark hair, born in Bedford County, Tennessee, occupation farmer, enlisted June 23, 1862 at Washington County, mustered into the service July 3, 1862 by Lt. Col. Mills at Springfield, Missouri. He was promoted to Corporal on July 1, 1863, promoted to Sergeant on June 1, 1864. The Company Muster Roll of January/February 1863 shows him to be on attached duty with a forage train; August 31, 1864 he is sick in camp; March/April 1865 he is on detached duty with a train to Ft. Smith, Arkansas; August 23, 1865 Muster Roll shows that he was last paid to February 28, 1865; his clothing account was last settled on October 31, 1864. The amount for clothing in kind or money advanced was $42.95, due U. S. for arms, equipment returned $3.00, due $100, on Remington Revolver returned $8.00.

The balance of his service record from the War Department were General Affidavits concerning his application for pension. These affidavits were from people who personally knew of his illness while serving in the army at Springfield, Missouri. One was dated November 18, 1889 from Wm. P. Clarke, 1st Lt. Co. D, 1st Arkansas Cavalry stating that Benjamin F. Little had served as a Sgt. in Co. D, 1st Regiment Arkansas Cavalry commanded by Jessie M. Gilstrap and was discharged at Fayetteville, Arkansas August 1865 and that while on duty at Springfield, Missouri he was disabled by chronic diarrhea.

Another affadavit dated December 19, 1889 from William N. Taylor, a resident of Anna, Crawford County, Arkansas, stated that he knew of Benjamin F. Little's condition with diarrhea disorders. Dysentery was a common ailment among soldiers on both side during the Civil War with thousands of deaths occurring from it. Benjamin Franklin stated in one affidavit that he had been unable to obtain his records from either of the two Regimental Surgeons and that the two doctors who had been treating him since his discharge, Dr. Pollard and Dr. Paddock, were both now dead. Noland Northern of West Fork stated in an affidavit that he had known of Benjamin F. Little's disability for the past 19 years and James Graham of West Fork also said that he knew of Mr. Little's suffering for the past 10 years. Also, there are affidavits from Joseph C. Bellew of Fayetteville and Joseph E. Smith of Goshen stating that they have personal knowledge of Benjamin Franklin's illness.

In 1872, Benjamin Franklin Little moved to the community of Goshen where he owned a farm of over 222 acres. In 1895, the following was listed as personal property for taxation in Goshen Township for him. Four horses valued at $140, 7 cattle valued at $60, 3 mules valued at $70, 10 sheep valued at $10, 18 hogs valued at $20, 1 carriage valued at $150, 1 gold watch valued at $5, 1 piano valued at $30, $300 in cash and $50 listed under Other. The total assessed valuation was $700 and it showed that Benjamin F. Little was in School District 128.

When Benjamin Franklin Little died, the following was in Fayetteville Weekly Democrat: "Ben F. Little died at his home near Goshen this morning of a complication of ailments. He was 68 years of age and was extensively acquainted, having been sheriff of the county after the war. The burial will take place tomorrow". He is buried along side his wife in the Goshen Cemetery.

There are quite a few descendants of Benjamin F. Little and Elizabeth Caroline Woolsey in and around Fayetteville today. Eliene Sweetser Morrison and her husband Doyle Morrison live in Fayetteville. She is the daughter of Emily Little and William R. Sweetser, and granddaughter of Ben F. Little. Joe Swift and his wife live in Bentonville. He is the son of Lillie Dell Little Swift and is the grandson of Benjamin F. Little.

member as Washington County was dear to their hearts and held many happy memories. Four years later, July 20, 1914, Sarah Ann Elizabeth died. She was taken the 10 miles back to Evansville to be buried beside her husband, Dr. Felix Nickle Littlejohn in the Lewis grave yard. The hearse was drawn by horses. A topless surrey carried the family. Frank Waters drove the team and Hamlet (Uncle Pole) sat beside him. Bish, Gertrude and three children sat in the front seat and Opal and Ruby sat on the back seat, each little girl held a white all over embroidered parasol, as a shade from the hot July sun.

The Littlejohn families were a part of the early history of the area, living there long before Arkansas became a state. Sarah Ann Elizabeth's parents were William and Elizabeth (Lipscomb) Littlejohn. He was a lawyer. Her brother, N. B. Littlejohn was a veteran of the Civil War, where he lost a leg. Others in her family were teachers and doctors. Samuel Alford Littrell

Samuel Alford Littrell was born January 21, 1866 in Eudora, Kansas to Alford and Teresia (Allen) Littrell. Around 1884, Samuel married Malinda Alice Lee, born April 17, 1870 in Osage, Arkansas. Malinda, nicknamed "Kate" was the daughter of George and Margaret (Mulholland) Lee and was the great-niece of Robert E. Lee and John C. Calhoun.

Samuel and Malinda's first five children: Alfred, Fred, Harley, Clarence, and Winnie were born in Berryville. Later, living in Drake's Creek, three more children were born: Cliffie, Ray and Fay.

In 1919, the family moved to the Wheeler community, farming before moving on to Fayetteville where Samuel worked for a Mr. Harter. It is during this period, that Samuel and his son, Ray built the gate posts and dug the first grave in the Fairview Cemetery, east of town. He also was the custodian for the First Christian and Presbyterian Churches.

Henry Pinkney Loftin

Great-grandfather Thadyus Henderson "Coop" Loftin was born in Alabama, March 11, 1858, and came to Arkansas with his mother when he was a small boy.

We believe his mother to be buried in the Antioch Cemetery, 4 miles south of Morrow, Arkansas, with only a rock for a headstone in the Loftin row. No one knows her name.

Coop Loftin possibly had two brothers, but they had gotten separated from the family during the Civil War. George and Jessie, apparently older brothers and they were thought to be married, Jessie to a Mary and George to a Elizabeth. One had a son named John.

Great-aunt Luannie "Annie", daughter of Coop, always said if we find other Loftins with their name spelled the same, they must be our lost relatives.

Thadyus Henderson married Sarah Francis Burrow March 14, 1882 in Crawford County. They had three children: Henry Pinkney Loftin (my grandfather), James Abraham Loftin and Luannie Loftin (who never married).

The Loftins lived in the communities of Skylight, Cove Creek, Garrett Hollow and on to Morrow, where they lived until their deaths.

After Coop Loftin's wife Sarah died, his daughter, Annie lived with him until his death.

Sarah (Burrow) Loftin's parents, Isam K. and Mary Ann (Clanton) Burrow are buried in Garrett Creek Cemetery, south of Prairie Grove and Cove Creek.

The Garrett Hollow School located in the Prairie Grove Battlefield Park was the school where the Loftins attended when it was located at Garrett Hollow. My dad, Oscar Omer Loftin and his brother Vernon, sons of Henry P. Loftin are in the school picture in front of the school building.

Henry Pinkney Loftin had five sons: Oscar Omer, Vernon, Ray, Ernest Omer (Grandma forgot she had already named her oldest son Omer, it was told) and Arvel Stanford. Vernon and Ray did not have middle names.

Grandma was Florence (Walton), twin to Flora, two other sisters, Fanny and May, brothers - Fred, Elmer, Alfred and Virgil Walton. Parents were Mary Ellen (Rhodes) and John Walton both born in Indiana. Married May 7, 1885 in Washington County, Arkansas, they later moved to Morris, Oklahoma. After John's death??? she, Mary married George Cole and left him, came back to Arkansas about 1920 and lived until her death, 1959. (Always remembered as Grandma Walton). She lived with her daughter, Florence and Henry; his sister, Annie, had moved in with them after her dad Coop had died. Annie was always helping out her brothers, Henry and Jim, with their families and grandchildren.

Grandpa Henry used to laugh and joke about the "bad times" all three women gave him. He was a very good Christian man. I never saw him mad at anything or anybody. I spent a lot of good times with them.

Grandma Florence raised her five boys, washing on a rub board and she couldn't see going modern, to a wringer washer, during World War II, I remember. She didn't want the butane refrigerator that my dad tried to give them before they put in electricity. They kept milk and butter in a well bucket, hung down in hand-dug well and the icebox with big block of ice came later.

James Abraham, (Grandpa Henry's brother) married Alta (Pitts) and they had six children: Charlie, Irene (Loftin) Abshier, Clyde, Glenn, Dean and infant Eugene, who died, two days old.

My dad Oscar Omer Loftin married my mother, Martha Maude (Cuzick) from Odell, Arkansas. She had only been off the Mountain at Odell, once, I believe she said when she married my dad. They were the parents of three of us children: Icephine (Loftin) Sears, Aftin Leroy and Jimmy Dale.

My dad worked for the Washington County Road Department most of his working years, grading roads. Moved to Beaumont, Texas, in 1945, worked in shipyard, at end of war moved to Yakima, Washington, for a while. Back to Arkansas and to Washington County Road Department until retirement.

Jackson Long

Jackson Long was born in 1817 in Kentucky. His father's name is not known, his mother was Elizabeth _____ Long, and was born in 1788 in Virginia.

He moved to Morgan County, Indiana and married Sarah Ann Weathers August 21, 1839. She was the daughter of John Weathers and Elizabeth Cooper. They lived there until 1842-43 when he moved his family to Pulaski County, Missouri where he and the family were enumerated in the 1850 U. S. Census. He then moved on west to Bolivar, Polk County, Missouri for two years before moving to Marrs Hill Township, Washington County, Arkansas.

Land records show that he bought 40 acres in Section 22, Township 15 N., Range 32 W., October 23, 1856 and paid $150.00 for it. Most of this 40 acres except for the extreme upper north side is under the waters of the Bob Kidd Lake; two miles west of Prairie Grove. The hill to the north side of this lake rises to 1400 feet.

He kept this tract of land until the 20th day of June, 1859, when he sold it for $140.00. He continued to live in Marrs Hill Township and was enumerated there in the 1860 U. S. Census, with the post office address listed as Fayetteville, Arkansas. Listed in the family at that time were: Jackson Long, age 43, born Kentucky, Sarah, age 38, born Indiana, Mary, age 16, born Missouri, John, age 12, born Missouri, Martha, age 10, born Missouri, Lucinda, age 7, born Missouri, Andrew, age 5, born Missouri, Isabel, age 4, born Arkansas, James, age 9 months, born Arkansas, John Taylor, age 26, born Arkansas, Elizabeth, age 19, born Indiana.

The oldest daughter, Elizabeth, age 19, had married John Taylor and she and her husband were living in the household. The family continued to live there or near by and John Marion Long told of carrying water for the troops during the Civil War, as they maneuvered into position for what was to become the Battle of Prairie Grove, Arkansas, December 7, 1862. On hearing the gunfire on the day of the battle; he climbed the hill to the north of their place, and looked below into the valley to the northeast. He recalled the men, firing and shooting, horses were neighing and mules braying and tolf of "openly crying" as he watched what was happening.

No record is known when and where Jackson Long died, however, the family moved on south to Scott County, Arkansas after the Civil War.

Marian Lucinda Long, age 7, in the 1860 census, married Edward Wells Barnes December 18, 1867, and this writer descends from the fourth of their fifteen children.

William Lynn

William and Anna Lynn, my great-grandparents, would have been born in the early 1800s probably in Indiana. Family letters, dated 1879, indicate they were related to the Lynns of Lynnville, Indiana, where John Lynn was the founder of that small town.

William and Anna had three daughters. Laura was born 1842 (probably Indiana) and Lydia D. was born 1844, Indiana. The third daughter, my grandmother, Mary Ann, was born in Washington County, Arkansas, on 15 March 1857.

Before coming to Arkansas, William and Anna moved from Indiana to Granby, Newton County, Missouri. Lydia married there "at her parents home six miles from Granby" as stated in her husband's (Jonathan Wood) Civil War pension records.

Laura married Mr. Sullivan and went to live in Webb City, Jasper County, Missouri.

The earliest known date that William and Anna were in Washington County was 1855 when William and "Ann" joined the Shiloh Baptist Church at Springdale. In October, 1856, they left the church.

Sometime after Mary Ann's birth, it is believed William and Anna left Washington County. My great-great-great uncle, Joel Baldwin (Bentonville, Benton County, Arkansas) wrote in 1879 to his nephew and niece (William and Anna): "It seems that you have got youre fill of Indian Rule and customs. I thot it would not suit me to live amongst them. . . Now, you say you think you will settle youre self. I think that is the best you can doe for youre self and family for you and Anna are getting old and you cant make a holmb (home) by moving from place to place. How fare are you from Cincinate in Washington and Illinois Creek Church. It seems we are in adjoining counties once more."

Two months after this letter was written, Mary Ann Lynn was married to my grandfather, David Wesley Mahan, on 4 July 1879, in Fayetteville, Arkansas. In 1880, they were living in Pope County, Arkansas.

After years of searching, nothing further has been found about William and Anna. Are they lying at rest someplace in Washington County or did the wonderlust once again urge them on to other frontiers?

John Little Lyons came to Washington County, Arkansas before 1880. He was born February 27, 1849 in Morgan County, Kentucky to John and Clarissa Lyons. They shipped their possessions and the family made the transfer by train. John farmed at Winters Valley for a year, and then bought a farm. In 1908, he bought a Blacksmith shop in Ben Lomond, Arkansas. While he lived and worked in Ben Lomond, a team hitched to a wagon ran away with John severely injuring him.

The family moved to the country between Ben Lomond and the Cassatat River at Gravely Point. Here, the children attended school and church. During the time the family lived at Gravely Point, John took Pellagra and was hospitalized for 1-1/2 years at Broken Bow, Oklahoma. His son, Harley, lived at Broken Bow.

Mary Ann and the family moved to Forman, Arkansas so she could find work and provide for the family. She worked for a doctor. After John's return from the hospital, their last move was to a farm (known as the Body Farm) between Forman and Red River, so the children could work.

John Little Lyons died May 8, 1928 — Little River County, Arkansas. Mary Ann Leslie Lyons died July 21, 1930 — Howard County, Arkansas. John L., Mary Ann and Ted Lyons were buried in Dollie Hyde Cemetery in Little River County.

John Brackin Mankins

Much has been written about Peter Mankin(s), Sr., but I have found little concerning his oldest son, John Brackin Mankins, my great grandfather.

He was born June 23, 1804, in Orange County, North Carolina, and was five years old when the family moved to Floyd County, Kentucky, where they settled on the Big Sandy River.

It was there that he married Mary "Polly" Sloan on November 9, 1819 at the tender age of 15 years.

He relocated to Washington County, Arkansas, probably in 1833 when Peter Sr. and other family members made that move. While Peter Sr., Peter Jr., and Samuel settled on the Middle Fork of the White River, about one mile west of Sulphur City, early land records show that a John Mankins located east of Durham on or near the White River and the Madison County line. I believe this to be John Brackin Mankins.

This would be where the last three of his and "Polly's" children were born.

Two other brothers, Isaac and Walter, settled at Hazel Valley, close to where two branches come together to form the Middle Fork of the White River.

Next he married Matilda Gibson on June 24, 1839, in Washington County. Their six children were born in Madison County; their fifth, John Henry Mankins, my grandfather, was born on March 4 or 8, 1848.

Land records of 1845 indicate that John Mankins was located just north of state Highway 16 and little to the east of where Hickory Creek flows into the main White River. This would be between Patrick and Combs.

In 1850 he was mining in the Mt. Shasta and Placerville area in California. Family tradition says that he made several fortunes in gold but squandered all by gambling in San Francisco.

I remember as a child I played with gold veined rocks that my father said were from various mines of his grandfather (John B.).

In the History of Tulare and Kings Counties, California by Eugene L. Menefee and Fred A. Dodge (1913), there is an article telling of John Mankins and party arriving in that area. It reads: "Late in April, 1854, had one been standing on Main Street, Visalia, he would have witnessed the entry of a unique cavalcade. There were ten riders traveling in single file - your humble servant one of them.

"That broad-shouldered man, weighing above two hundred and twenty pounds is "Dad". He is always in the lead and is dressed throughout in smoked buckskin with fringes up the legs, and a hunting shirt, also fringed roundabout. Add to the costume a very high plug hat, imagine him then with a mop of raven black hair falling over his shoulders, with coal black piercing eyes, seated on a large dapple gray horse. A hunting knive is at his girdle, a six-shooter on either side of the saddlehorn and he carries a "sharp-shooter" rifle in front. Such was J. B. Mankins, forty-niner and pioneer of pioneers.

"After Dad came next two boys, nearing manhood, one girl of eleven, a young Indian boy, two Jews and then three boys aged fourteen, eight and six. We were all, except the Jews, dressed wholly in buckskin, well fringed. For hats we wore bearskin caps.

"We pitched our camp just across Mill Creek, north of Visalia. The tules then came very close to town and the mosquitoes were very numerous. The town consisted of one store, a blacksmith shop and a tavern. . . "I remember quite well Mrs. John Keener, Sr. She had gotten sight of us and perceived that we were sadly in need of repairs, for you see, we were half-orphans. So she had Dad get some cloth, and she made us up some clothes, for it became necessary for us to conform to the usages of civilization".

The article was written at a later date by the six-year-old - my grandfather, James Henry Mankins.

The Mankins name is recorded, probably for my grandfather, James Henry Mankins, on maps in the foothill area west of Sequoia National Park where there is a Mankins Spring, a Mankins Flat, and a Mankins Creek.

There is also a Mankins Circle, a residential street in Porterville, California named for my next to oldest brother, Elvin Orland Mankins, (deceased), former Agricultural Commissioner of Tulare County.

On December 7, 1864, John B. married a third time, to Lydia Boyd in Tulare County, California. He returned to Washington County, Arkansas and married there a fourth time, to Jane Wood on September 25, 1869.

John Brackin Mankins died in 1876. I have no knowledge of where he died but I have heard that he is buried near Mariposa, California, just west of Yosemite National Park.

That would indicate that he had returned to California after his fourth marriage.

Peter Mankins

Peter Mankins was born in 1770 in Maryland to John and Masa Mankins. Tradition says his mother was a full-blood Delaware Indian. As a young man he moved to Orange County, North Carolina. There he married a widow with three children. They later moved to Floyd County, Kentucky, then on to Washington County, Arkansas in 1829.

A grandson, George Van Hoose, tells of his family's trip and arrival in Arkansas. They left Floyd County, Kentucky on the 3rd of May 1839 by way of the Big Sandy River, in a moving Boat and two flat boats loaded with tanbark and hogshead staves for the market at Cincinnati, Ohio. They camped at Covington, Kentucky for two weeks to sell out there, then boarded a steamboat, the "Trident", for Van Buren, Arkansas. They went through the canal at Louisville which was just opened, then down the Ohio to the Mississippi, which they followed until they reached the mouth of the White River. They then proceeded up the White to a cut-off between it and the Arkansas. They traveled the Arkansas until they reached Van Buren, a town of "possibly a dozen houses". They camped there a week until two ox-drawn wagons came for them, driven by George's Uncle Bracken Lewis and his cousin, "Brock" Lewis. About noon, June 17, 1839, they arrived at West Fork and went to Wilson's (Charlotte Fine Wilson) where a big dinner and relatives waited to greet them. They then went over the mountains to Middle Fork to his grandparents, Peter and Rachel Mankins, arriving at their farm about five that evening. He was so overjoyed to be at "Granny's" that he went out and found a huge flat rock, climbed upon it and "danced for joy".

He speaks of a cave where bears and panthers once lived, and where the walls were covered with names and dates of previous visitors-many of them his boyhood chums. I remember my grandmother telling of panthers circling their house and screaming in the night. She also spoke of a spring with the "best water you ever tasted".

Peter Mankins married September 23, 1803, Rachel Bracken Lewis, a widow with three children: George Washington Lewis, born 1797, in North Carolina, married Mary Mankins, had 9 children, married twice later, no children; Lydia Lewis, born 1799 in North Carolina, married John Van Hoose, had 12 children; Bracken Lewis, born 1801 in North Carolina, married Matilda Preston, had 15 children. Peter and Rachel had 11 children: John B., born 1804, North Carolina, married "Polly" Sloan, had 8 children, married Matilda Gibson, had 6 children, two other marriages, no children; William, born 1806, North Carolina, married Mahalia Preston, had 2 children (William was killed in 1932); Walter, born 1806 North Carolina, married Polly Low, had 8 children; Edith "Eda", born 1810, married Enos Mills, had 4 children; Henry born 1811, killed in a sawmill accident, not married; Peter, Jr., born 1813 in Kentucky, married Narcissa Mills, had 10 children, married Esther Hanna, had 1 child; Samuel, born 1805 Kentucky, married Docia Williams, had 14 children; Millie, born in Kentucky, married William B. Fine, had 12 children; Rachel, born 1819 Kentucky, married Jonathan Fine (a brother to William B.), had 14 children; Sarah, born_____; and Elizabeth, born_____.

Peter Mankins, Sr., died December 30, 1881, aged 111 years. Unusual note: Peter Mankins, Sr., was born September 1, 1770 and for the next 6 generations a female descendant was born in September. His daughter, Millie Mankins Fine was born September 10, 1817. Her daughter, Sarah Ellen Fine was born September 15, 1845. Her daughter, Mary Minnesota Nott Newkirk was born September 25, 1865. Her daughter, Alta Elizabeth Newkirk Cutright was born September 3, 1903. Her daughter, Betty Jean Cutright Pulley, was born September 7, 1926. Her daughter, Peter's great-great-great-great-granddaughter, Pamela Dianne Pulley Mathis was born September 29, 1953.

Rachel Bracken Lewis Mankins

Peter Mankins lived for 111 years, three months and eleven days; was one of the early pioneers in Arkansas Territory and the progenitor of many Washington County families. As a child he played around the George Washington Home, lived thru the Revolution, the War of 1812 and the Civil War.

Arkansas (from the Indian word meaning downstream people) became the 25th state on June 15, 1836. Fayetteville was incorporated as a village the same year. One of the chain bearers for the surveyors was named Mankins.

There were but few houses in Fayetteville when the Peter Mankins family came to the Arkansas Territory. Peter cleared the cane breaks along the West Fork of the White River, built a home near the river and lived there for the rest of his long, eventful life. In 1834 three parcels of land were listed in his name in Township 15, 29th West and 5th meridian, known as White River Township.

Here Peter had celebrated statehood in 1836, supported the building of schools and churches; worked for good government, never missed a chance to vote, first as a Whig and then a Democrat. He had voted for Thomas Jefferson and General Hancock and 13 others in between. He went thru the turmoil of the Civil War; in 1861 saw Arkansas become one of the Confederate States of America, the division of families and friends. At age 90 he was held prisoner by the Union troops. In 1868 saw Arkansas re-admitted as a state under the Reconstruction act.

Peter Mankins, Sr. was born September 19, 1770 at Cedar Point, Maryland now in the DC area, in almost the exact spot where the Kennedy Center is located. Died December 30, 1881 and is buried in the Reese Cemetery. His death was reported to the newspaper by Col. J. H. VanHoose who wrote "I dare say he never uttered an untruth willfully in the whole course of his life; there was no deceit or hypocrisy in him. He was always plain and outspoken, honest in his dealings with his fellow man, and ever ready to assist the needy and distressed. If he ever had an enemy he outlived them all for he had only friends."

But Arkansas is not the only state Peter helped settled. As a lad he had watched George Washington's army as it marched thru Alexandria, Virginia, to meet Cornwallis. In 1803, in Orange County, North Carolina, he married Rachel Bracken Lewis, widow of Zachariah Lewis and mother of three children at the time of her marriage to Peter. (George, Lydia and Bracken Lewis).

Peter and Rachel had eleven children, six sons and five daughters. Three sons, John B., William and Walter - named for his uncle, were born in Orange County, North Carolina.

In 1809 the Mankins and the Lewis children came from North Carolina thru the Cumberland Gap to the Block House, a rude fort, near Prestonburg in Kentucky. Peter cleared a beech forest and built a home near the fort.

During the War of 1812, that solidified American Independence from England, Peter was in charge of Harmon's station; repair the block houses and put them in condition to protect the women in case of trouble with the Indians. In 1827 Peter sold his farm to Samuel Porter, went to the newly opened country of Illinois for a year; returned to Kentucky, purchased a big farm near Paintsville, sold that one to Moses Preston. Returned to Illinois stayed there for about another year before his move to the headwaters of the White River. The eight children born to Peter and Rachel in Kentucky were: Peter Jr., Henry, Samuel, Edith (married Enos Mills), Rachel (married Jonathan Fine), Millie who married William B. Fine, Sarah and Elizabeth.

Rachel was the daughter of Isaac Bracken and Rachel Stalcop, whose marriage is recorded in the records of the Old Swedes Church, Wilmington, Delaware on August 31, 1769.

Members of the Price family (now owners of the farm in White River Township) think it was Peter's first wife, (Rachel) who is buried on the farm that was their homeplace.

He homesteaded land on Blackburn Creek in the community known as Anna that is now included in the Devil's Den State Park. Part of the fireplace chimney can still be found and most of his children were born here. He was a deeply religious man, reading the Bible to family and visitors nightly. He had a beautiful tenor voice and could be heard singing over the valleys.

He was a good provider, a farmer and blacksmith. And a great lover of flowers. A seed catalogue was a prized possession.

After the death of his father, Francis, though only 13 years old, worked for a freight wagon route from Fayetteville to Springfield, Missouri. He told of one trip they were hauling large wooden barrels of whiskey. The older men made a hole in the barrels under the hoops, bored holes and drank and drank all the whiskey they wanted before plugging the holes and replacing the hoops. Because of his young age Francis wasn't allowed to drink.

The schooling obtained by the children of Francis and Susan was from the Mt. Olive School in Blackburn and the building was used as a church on Sundays. Most only got to go through the fourth or fifth readers or grades.

Moses Mannon

The Mannon family clan came from Tiaquin County Galway, Ireland. Their chief residence was the Castle of Clogher until most of their estates were lost to the O'Kelleys in the 17th Century. Moses Mannon married Mary Simpson of Ireland. they, along with four Mannon brothers, Hawkins, Taylor, and Eaton families came to Tennessee, then moved by oxen pulled freight wagons to Cane Hill, Arkansas. They lived in these wagons until they could build their cabins.

Records show Moses paid land taxes in 1828. He was granted Patent Number 894, April 15, 1837, township 14, North Range 33 West and signed by Martin Van Buren for 80 acres and another 80 acres September 20, 1839.

Moses died in the late 1840's on land he homesteaded on Lee Creek in Blackburn, Arkansas. He is buried in the Taylor, Mannon, Eaton Family Cemetery. These acreages are now included in Devil's Den State Park. It is reported that Mary Mannon married John Eaton after the death of Moses. Later tax records show the two younger Mannon children - Charity and Ira Washington living in the Eaton household and Mary is now the wife of John Eaton.

Children born to Moses and Mary Mannon were Faith, Sarah, Henry Dave and Isaac but no information available of these. Other children were Victoria Mannon, married Andrew Poor. Betsy Ann Mannon born Cane Hill 1828, married Charles Toon (their children were William, Ira, Mary, Shelton and Charity). Amanda Mannon born Cane Hill 1834. Francis Marion Mannon born April 9, 1836 Cane Hill, Arkansas, died August 21, 1899 in Blackburn, Arkansas, buried in Blackburn Cemetery on land donated for a cemetery by his oldest son, John Hiram Mannon. Charity Mannon born Blackburn, Arkansas 1842. Ira Washington Mannon born November 26, 1844, Blackburn, Arkansas, died March 18, 1887 in Mansfield, Arkansas and buried in Mansfield Cemetery. Married Melvina Nancy Taylor. Two sons were born to them - Hiram Hosea, born 1860, died 1883 from Tuberculosis and Frank Furiban Mannon born 1868, died April 30, 1901. Married Adelphia Stanford (their children were Caryle and Hiram Gladstone Manning - born June 21, 1891 and died July 11, 1963). He had five children.

Second marriage of Ira Washington Mannon was to Rebecca Elizabeth Duncan, born October 2, 1854, died January 10, 1918. (Their children were Oscar born 1879, died 1894. Susanna (Suzie) born March 22, 1882, died March 26, 1970. Married Green Bethel Henley, their children were Reba, Clara, Edith, Roy, Naomi, Lowell and Mildred.) Isaac Mannon was born March 10, 1886, died March 12, 1956, buried in Mansfield, Arkansas. He married Della Hanes. (Their children were Wilma, Joel, Bermond and Delia.)

During the Civil War, Ira Washington and his brother, Francis Marion Mannon enlisted in the Union Army June 14, 1862 and served together under Captain James Allison. They were first sent to Springfield, Missouri, then in the battles of Pea Ridge and Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Both were discharged August 23, 1865. Ira was 23 years old and Francis was 29. Ira developed digestive and lung problems while in the service and never in good health again. His grandson, Bermond Mannon still lives in the Mansfield area.

Descendants of Moses and Mary Mannon now live from Virginia to California and many places between, many use the name Manning but know it was originally Mannon. The Mannon, Eaton, Hawkin and Taylor families were some of the first settlers in Washington County, Arkansas. Records show that many of these died from Tuberculosis, known as Consumption then. This disease was widespread among early settlers, some were later treated in a Hospital in Booneville, Arkansas.

Descendants of Ira and Francis Mannon have an annual reunion in May to keep in touch. There were Mannons living in Washington County more than 150 years, the last one was Clifton Mannon who died May, 1982, a great grandson of Moses. Submitted by Irene Mannon Gant, Great granddaughter of Moses.

Joy Pratt Markham

Joy Pratt Markham typified the motto which appears on Arkansas license plates. "Land of Opportunity". She was a nature mystic and an idealist.

Once Sunbeam Thomsen swam with her in the camp she ran on the hill west of the stadium. Sunbeam said, "Let's kill that poisonous snake", but Joy said something like, "No, it's a child of nature just like us".

Joy taught the children of Fayetteville gentry more about horses than just how to ride them: "You won't enjoy your ride unless your horse does," she said.

She sponsored the University Horseback Club. Emerson "Hoppy" Foulke, a blind student from Joplin, Missouri, rode with them. Joy assigned one member always to ride beside him and tell him when to duck under branches.

When she gave birthday parties for her son, Gay Pratt Markham, born about 1930, she would let the other children play with his pet snakes (non-poisonous).

While a student at the university, Gay flew a small plane with another student, Ray Bowman of Chicago. They crashed and died. But Joy and family didn't have elaborate funerals, didn't discuss death and sickness.

People come to the "land of opportunity" to fulfill their dreams, as did Joy, and find fertile ground. For instance, when that fellow came to build a pyramid at Monte Ne, he was not the butt of all jokes, as he would have been in Texas. Nor did people flock to his feet to relish his ideas for a season, as they would have in California. But, when authorities announced long after his death, that his pyramid would be covered by a waterway, the press was full of indignant articles.

Isaac Marrs

It is believed that Isaac Marrs and his two brothers Hugh and James, came by flatboat up the Arkansas River and made the first settlement in Prairie Grove Valley in 1826. Isaac and his wife Catherine came from Logan County, Kentucky with the following children. John b. 1803, Hugh b. 1805, William b. 1806, Jane b. 1808, Catherine b. 1810, Franklin b. 1812, and Andrew Jackson b. 1814. They settled for about 7 years "somewhere" in Arkansas, where two of their children were born: James b. 1821 and Alexander b. 1824. Final settlement was made in Washington County where the following children were born: Rosanna b. 1826, Elizabeth b. 1828, and Andrew Buchanan b. 1831. Although Isaac appears on the Sheriff's census of 1829, his first land purchase was for 160 acres near Cane Hill on 1834. Isaac died in 1851 leaving Catherine, who lived with her daughter Rosanna and son-in-law Levi West until her death sometime after 1860.

Isaac Marrs is father of Andrew Jackson Marrs.

Andrew Jackson Marrs lived in Washington County until 1836 when he and his brothers John, Hugh, William, and Franklin resettled in Newton County, Missouri. Andrew Jackson married Martha Danley in 1837. He had some formal education, was a lay preacher, a Republican, and a Southern sympathizer during the Civil War. He owned over a section of land and donated acreage for Hazelgreen Cemetery in Newton County. His obituary stated that he was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the county and that he died at his residence in Benton Township. His death occurred in 1888 and Martha (Danley) Marrs died in 1882, both are buried in Hazelgreen. They had the following children: William b. 1839, Isaac b. 1840, Andrew b. 1841, John, Ira, Martha b. 1843, Nancy b. 1845, Sarah b. 1851, Mary b. 1853, and Claiborne b. 1861.

In his will Andrew Jackson Marrs left his daughter Martha Borden approximately 360 acres in Benton Township, which Will and Martha lived on until their deaths, his occurring in 1910, Martha died in 1919. Ader Borden b. 1876 married in 1893 to Allen Hansford "Hance" Green (b. 1873 Madison County, Arkansas. He served as Newton County jailer and deputy sheriff). Their wedding announcement stated: "the bride was dressed in cream cashmere, trimmed in cream silk, lace and ribbons, the groom wore the usual black". Ader (Borden) Green died 1954, "Hance" died 1936, both are buried in Hazelgreen. Their children, all born on "Marrs" land were: Cecil b. 1894, Nellie Grace b. 1897, Mary Ruth b. 1904, Willa Mae b. 1910.

Faun Martin

In 1883, Adeline Hunter Martin (born 1858 at Excelsior Springs, Missouri) left Linn Creek, Missouri, with her mother, Minnie Wells, and Adeline's two children, five-year-old Molly Hunter and her two-year-old half-brother Faun Martin. Adeline, who was 3/4 Cherokee and 1/4 Irish, walked with her little group from Linn Creek to Lead Hill, Arkansas, a distance over one-hundred miles. At this time, Adeline was married to Thomas Martin (born 1845 at Okemah, Oklahoma). Martin, a Cherokee, was an evangelist who traveled throughout the Cherokee Nation preaching his sermons. Probably due to his frequent absences, Adeline left her husband and started walking to Arkansas, hoping her first husband would help care for her family. However, upon arriving in Lead Hill, William Hunter refused to take in the bedraggled group. Instead, his brother or son, Charley Hunter, took in the family.

Shortly after the women and children settled in with Charley, Adeline became ill and died of pneumonia. Minnie also became sick and died several months later of the same illness. Charley continued to care for Molly, but allowed a nearby couple, Benjamin and Josie Barnes to adopt Faun in 1883.

Benjamin Hubert Barnes, born in New York City in 1847 and his wife, Ana Josephine Stolzel, a native of Bremerhaven, Germany born in 1854, changed Faun's name to William Lester and raised him as their only child. As a small boy, W. L. Barnes was visited several times by his grandfather, Dave Martin, Indian name Wahitchka. Martin, a tribal leader of the Cherokees, was married to Ruby Martin, Indian name Acheecaw. W. L. apparently never met his father, Thomas.

W. L., in fact, did not know he was a Cherokee or adopted until he reached his late twenty's. During this period, he met and married Sarah Effie Hardee, an Anglo, and had four children; Lillian Mary (born 1902), Josephine (born 1905 and died several years later from diptheria), Bertha Thelma (born 1906 in Brightwater, Benton County, died 1982 in Fayetteville) and Benjamin Hubert (born 1913).

After living in the Harrison area several years, the Barnes' moved to Siloam Springs. Despite his failing eyesight due to a bout with childhood measles, W. L. worked for the railroad. W. L. died in 1964 and Effie in 1972. The oldest daughter, Lillian, lives in Baldwin and Benjamin later moved to California.

As a young girl growing up among other Indians, Bertha was greatly impressed with the "Medicine Man". Once, after thinking to herself that she was hungry, the medicine man brought an apple out of his pocket and gave it to her. This same man would never cross a bridge without first looking underneath, for the Indians would leave unwanted children there for others to find. Bertha remembered the medicine man raised at least fifteen of these "bridge" children.

Bertha married L. E. McCoy (1904-1980) in Siloam Springs in 1926 and had two children. John Robert (born 1929) lives in Durham, has one son, Steve (born 1952) and is married to Sandra Wyatt. Betty Jean (born 1931) married Barry Houston Parks in 1957, lives in Prairie Grove, and has two girls, Susan Lynn (born 1962) and Karen Kee (born 1965).

Littleberry Epps Mason

Littleberry Epps Mason, born 22 January, 1809, Greensville County, Virginia was fourth of eight children of William and Rebecca (Richardson) Mason. Littleberry's father, Major William Mason and grandfather Major John Mason served in the Revolutionary War in Virginia.

Anna Elizabeth Mason 1875-1920, first wife of William Alex Philpott, daughter of Henry Clay and Nancy (Watson) Mason and granddaughter of Littleberry Epps and Anna Rebecca (Morrison) Mason.

The Mason family moved from Virginia to Athens, Limestone County, Alabama. Littleberry's sister Mary Gilliam Mason married Joshua Lanier Martin, governor of Alabama. Littleberry's sister Mary Gilliam Mason, Mary M. Martin married Joshua Lanier Martin governor of Alabama. After Mary's death, Governor Martin married Sarah Ann Mason, Mary's sister.

In 1835 Littleberry married Anna Rebecca "Ann" Morrison and moved to Washington County, Arkansas. Devout Methodists (the Mason family were founders of the first Methodist church in America), Littleberry and Ann deeded 1.6 acres of land in 1861 for the establishment of Mt. Hebron Church and cemetery. Because of the Civil War the deed was not recorded until 1866. Church trustees then were Thomas Bingham, Samuel H. Johnson and Littleberry and Ann's son John Mason.

Littleberry and Ann were the parents of eight children: 1. William Henry Mason 1839-1890, married 1868 Emaline Holmes, daughter of Watson and Dorcus (Snider) Holmes. 2. John Mason 1840-1864, married Glorvinia (maiden name unknown) in 1860. 3. David Mason 1841-1909, married 1867 Darcus T. Williamson. 4. Lafayette Mason 1844-1907, married 1863 Sarah M. (maiden name unknown). Lafayette was a Methodist minister. 5. Mary Gilliam Mason 1846- married 1872 Hugh H. H. Blair, son of Andrew and Nancy Blair. 6. Martha Jane Mason 1848-1871, married 1874 Robert Buxton. 7. Henry Clay Mason 1849-1871, married 1871 Nancy Malinda Watson, daughter of Isom and Elizabeth (Stephens) Watson. 8. Thomas Maxwell Mason 1852-1916, married 1875 Mary Adeline Steward, daughter of William and Martha (Haback) Steward.

Littleberry and Ann were living in Clear Creek Township in Washington County at the time of the 1850 census. Littleberry purchased land in Benton County from Frederick Cox in 1851. Several other land transactions are recorded in Benton County from 1851-1870 between L. E. Mason and others, including several of his sons.

Ann Mason died in 1864 and Littleberry died in 1878. Even though Mt. Hebron Cemetery was well established at the time of Littleberry's death it is said that he was buried beside his wife Ann on the family farm in Benton County.

Mathew Massey

The four Massey children were born in Wayne or Randolph County, Indiana. They moved to Washington County, Arkansas in 1838 and settled in White River Township. They are listed there in the 1840 Census page 255 with their step-father Joseph Thompson. Joseph went to the gold rush of California prior to 1850 and was never heard of again. His widow, Mary Ann (nee Mills) is listed in the 1850 Census, Washington County with some of her children.

Mary Ann Mills was born November 7, 1811, Jefferson County, Tennessee, died 1884. She was the daughter of Charity (Thornburg) and Seth Mills 1782-1976 (see his history). Mary Ann married October 12, 1825 in Wayne County, Indiana, Mathew Massey. His will was proven February 18, 1833 in Randolph county, Indiana. They had four children. 1) Sylvester C., born about 1826. Married March 12, 1846, to Perlina Skeen. About 1853 they moved to Lane County, Oregon. 2) William M., born about 1827/8. Married March 6, 1851 to Nancy Lewis in Washington County. 3) Mary Elizabeth, born 1829/30. Died June 4, 1878 in Washington County. Married February 4, 1847 in Washington County to Henry Lewis born November 23, 1822 in Kentucky. After his death she married Augustus Clayton Pool. 4) My ancestor, Jane Massey, born September 22, 1831. Died March 23, 1884. She was a seamtress and did beautiful handwork and hemstiching, which she taught to her children and grandchildren. They taught the art to all of their family. She married in Washington County, September 30, 1847 to Claudius George Karnes, born October 20, 1828, died July 1, 1856. They had four children. William Knox Karnes 1802-1872. She had two children by her second husband, John Hendrickson 1825-1884. The Bible lists John's nine children by his first wife Rosina D. Bone, born October 30, 1830, died July 19, 1867.

We know that Mathew Massey had two brothers, William and Phineas and we think there was about twelve of the children of Jane (Morrison), born August 26, 1773 in Orange County, North Carolina. Died about 1840 in Randolph County, Indiana. She married in Orange County September 30, 1791 James Massey. They had both been members of the Quaker Church but got kicked out of the church because of their civil marriage. Besides our subject, Mathew Massey, we know that William married May 17, 1820 to Bathia Craven; and Phineas, married December 11, 1826 in Wayne County, Indiana to Elizabeth Ann Mills, born June 23, 1809, Jefferson County, Tennessee, died October 15, 1829. Before February 1830, Phineas was dead leaving a son, John an orphan. Betsy and Janes were daughters of Seth Mills and Charity. Both were Quaker families.

Mary Ann (Mills-Massey) 1811-1884 and her second husband Joseph Thompson had five children. (A) Aaron Linton, born September 23, 1836, Indiana. Died 1885 in Arkansas. Married October 18, 1860 Sarah J. Pool and married July 8, 1870 Mrs. Eliza (Summer) Prater; (B) Henry, born about 1838 Washington County; (C) Martha A. "Polly", born about 1840 Washington County, married about 1867 Bracken Wilson; (D) Seth, born about 1842, died in 1863 in Confederate Army; (E) John C. Thompson born about 1844 Washington County, died Fort Smith, Arkansas.

Mathew Massey's will was dated December 3, 1832 and filed February 18, 1833. The Massey-Thompson family left Randolph County, Indiana 1838. After a long journey of several weeks east of the Mississippi River, they crossed at St. Louis and continued their journey to Washington County, Arkansas. Settled on land at the Middle Fork of the White River. In the area later known as Carter's Store, near Durham.

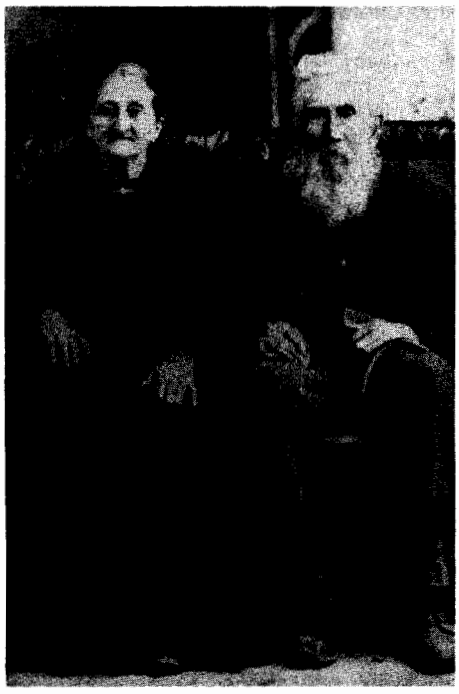
Charles Willett Masterson

Charles Willett Masterson was born in Ohio December 8, 1828. He came to Washington County, Arkansas about 1874. Charles was the eldest child of 15 born to Smith G. Masterson and Margaret Reed of Ohio. He was the grandson of Charles Masterson and Esther Smith of Kentucky and Ohio. Charles was the great-great grandson of John Masterson and Louraina Willett of Virginia to Mason County, Kentucky. According to family legend, John was the son of William Masterson, who married Jemima (?) Tucker from England. William, Hugh, and Moses came to Virginia from Ireland in the mid-1700s and their forefather was Aaron Masterson of Scotland.



Charles Willett Masterson and Nancy Jane Prunner Masterson

Charles Willett married Susan Reddick in 1849 in Schuyler County, Illinois. They had three children. Smith Jonathan was born in 1850. Two daughters, Melvina and Dorcus, were born in 1858 and 1862 in Illinois. Susan died and Charles married Nancy Jane Prunner (the daughter of John Prunner and Phoebe Foglesong, who were both born in Virginia) in Schuyler County, Missouri on January 11, 1870. They moved to Monegaw Springs, Missouri. Charles was a farmer and befriended Cole Younger of the infamous James-Younger-Dalton gang even though he was a volunteer and some of his brothers served in the Union Army. According to legend, Cole and his brothers Bob, John, and Jim came to the springs to visit Charles. They were caught by the Pinkertons and a gunfight ensued in which John Younger was killed. The Youngers then killed the Pinkertons and left John to be buried by Charles Masterson. Charles gave him a nice funeral and Cole maintained their friendship and repaid his debt in later years by helping Charles when he was in need.

Charles and Nancy Jane had 10 children: Moses in Missouri, Viola in Benton County, Arkansas (08-14-1875), William J. in Washington County (03-07-1877), Aaron Thomas in Washington County (04-19-1879), Minnie in Washington County (06-12-1881), Noah in Washington County (08-30-1883), Albert, Laura (02-24-1889), and Fanny (all in Washington County), Clara in Madison County (02-13-1893). Most of the descendants of Charles Willett Masterson had large families and lived in or near Washington County. Charles died January 14, 1917 and is buried near Stilwell, Oklahoma. Nancy Jane died in 1927 and is buried at Qualls, Oklahoma.

Charles Willett built the large house which still stands. Every brick in the chimney is still intact and the pecan trees he planted are still bearing fruit. The japonica, forsythia and roses, even though mowed down, sprout annually. Their seedlings have been transplanted in many states preserving a cherished heritage that is forever ours.

Smith Jonathan married Mary E. and moved close to Charles Willett's brother Sylvester in Franklin County in 1880. He had Kay, Clay, and Margaret. Melvina married Monroe Brashear and had Major, Dorcus, and Maude. Dorcus married Douglas Kees and had Charles Willett, Melvina, Minnie, Monroe, Nancy, Amanda, and James. Moses died in infancy. Viola married Otho Melton and had Grace, Clarence, Blanche, Ora, Ina, Fama, Freda, and Alma. William J. married Minerva Hall. They had Doyle, Charles, Lola, Viron, George, Orpha, Orva and Freida. They also had a baby boy that died in infancy. William J.'s second wife was Nora Russell. They had a daughter named Loreta. Aaron married Mollie Eubanks and had Clyde and Mittie. His second wife was Rosa Della Smiley, the daughter of William Smiley and Mary Myers. William was the son of Sam Smiley and Rose Ann Myers of Cumberland County, Kentucky. Sam was the son of Daniel Smiley and Esther Ritchey, both of whom were born in Virginia prior to 1774. Legend tells that the parents of Daniel came from England around 1700. Aaron and Rosa had Cora, Ova, Dora, Grace, Charles, Emma, Lola, William, Carl and Louise. Minnie married Abraham Eubanks and had Ted, Glennie, Jewel, Abraham, Richard, Euell, and Cecil. Noah married Minnie Allen and they had Earl and Irvin. Albert died in infancy. Laura married Commodore Rogers and had Elsie, Ola, Juel, Earl, Claude, Clyde, Bertha, Blanche, Clara, Nettie, Vernon, Laverne, and Will. Fannie died in infancy. Clara married Claude Hutchinson and had Lester, Harold, Claude and Scott.

Charles Willett and his sons were land owners in Washington County. They grew, hunted, and trapped their food, spun, knitted, and sewed their clothing, and many of them danced and sang for entertainment. Aaron Thomas did the Jig, Knock the Back Step, and Double Shuffle. They played games of horseshoes and cards.

Their descendants proudly carry on the family heritage throughout the world.

Mary A. "Cole" Mathis

Mary "Cole" Mathis was our beautiful wonderful Mother. She was raised in Jacksboro, Texas, Jack County. Mary was the great granddaughter of John Cole and Mary McDonald Cole who settled in Summers, Arkansas in 1829. John and Mary moved to Texas in 1843. As Mary Anne put it, I had the best Daddy in the world, and proud of being a Cole. The years she was growing up were happy. Grandpa had a big farm and a few cattle. They went to a little red school, it had one room. She told of the trips to Dallas, and of all the pretty clothes she bought and had their pictures taken, and about visits to the family. They had big birthday parties, since she was born on April Fools Day. They always played jokes on her, the one she repeated every birthday was when they baked her a cotton cake and came in singing "Happy Birthday" then when she cut it found it was made of cotton, she cried, then they brought the real one. Grandpa hired a lot of men at certain times of the year, and the older girls had to help Grandma cook for them, Aunt Pearl took care of her. They had a lot of music in their home. Her Daddy played the violin and Mom played the piano, they played for the town functions. Mom could play the French harp too. We used to marvel at her playing "Red Wing" on it. She told me about her very old Grandmother, Grandma "McBride" Branson, I think she was her great grandma. Mom said she would sit in her rocker upstairs all day smoking a corn cob pipe. When company came from out of town to stay, she had to sleep with her and she would wrinkle her nose and say "My, she smelled awful". The older girls married and moved to Oklahoma. Aunt Maggie died three days after her child was born. Grandma Mary Elizabeth, born January 3, 1854, died March 17, 1908. After Grandma died, Grandpa married Cora Singleton, Aunt Maggie's mother-in-law. Grandpa died November 29, 1912. The children buried him next to Grandma with a double headstone, with beautiful inscriptions of poems on each. Aunt Pearl said "even though Grandma was their step-mother, she was the best". Grandpa took a boy to raise by the name of Oro, no one knows who he was. But it shows what Mom always said, "William P. Cole, Sr." was a good man".

James Martin Mayberry

The Maberry/Mayberry family of Washington County, Arkansas is thought to have originated in New Jersey with Fredrick and Barbara (Nalls) Mayberry. They were the parents of eleven children of which their son Jacob married Rhoda Womax, March 4, 1790, in Bedford County, Virginia.

The Mayberry family appears to go their separate ways, some into Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, Texas, Arkansas and many other states along the way. David Maberry, Sr. appears to have settled in Overton County, Tennessee and to have married Nancy Stroud. They were living in Fentress County, Tennessee in 1831 with five children and were listed in the 1840 Census in Cane Hill Township, Washington County, Arkansas where he continued to live until his death in 1877. He and Nancy are buried side by side at Prairie Grove Cemetery along with their daughter Rachael who died at about thirteen years of age. Sanders Mayberry

One of my ancestral lines is from Washington County, Arkansas. Their earliest appearance is in 1832. And with a mountain along the western edge of the county named for them, Mayberry Mountain, they must have been among the earliest arrivals in this part of the state.

In some of the families papers we found a statement. By following the names given we have found it to be true, as far as we have gone. It is: "Mary Jane Mayberry was the daughter of Rachel Moore, who was a daughter of Lucinda Crawford, who was a daughter of James Crawford and Nancy Crawford, which said Nancy Crawford was a daughter of Hannah Buchanan Sawyer, which said Hannah Buchanan Sawyer was a daughter of Andrew Buchanan, who was a son of Samuel Buchanan who came from Ireland about 1702."

My Granny, Maggie Belle Sanders was born in Washington County, Arkansas in 1880. Married Benton Jackson Wilson in Oklahoma where their four children were born. They moved to southwest Missouri in 1916, where they lived their remaining years.

Maggie's father was Isam Hurney Sanders (b. 1841 in Tennessee, d. 1886 in Arkansas), son of Steven Sanders and Hexie Harris. Mary Jane Mayberry (b. 1847 in Arkansas, d. 1928 in Oklahoma) was the daughter of Jacob D. Mayberry (b. 1826 in Tennessee) and Rachel Moore (b. 1825 in Tennessee, d. 1857 in Arkansas). The other Mayberry children were: Nancy, Martha, Sarah, Margaret and Amanda.

Jacob D. Maybury was the son of David Maybury (b. 1799 in Tennessee, d. 1877 Washington County, Arkansas) and Nancy Stroud (b. 1799 in Tennessee, d. 1884 in Washington County, Arkansas). They came to the valley area of Rheas Mill. Most of these ancestors are buried in the Prairie Grove cemetery. Other Maybury children were: Sarah, Elizabeth, George, David Jr., John, Mary, Rhoda, Abraham, Rachel and Artema.

Rachel Moore Maybury's parents were John Pyeatte Moore (b. 1788, d. 1844 in Arkansas) and Lucinda Crawford Moore (b. 1799, d. 1881 in Arkansas). Lucinda Crawford Moore was a daughter of James Crawford (b. 1772, d. 1854) and Nancy Sawyer (b. 1771, d. 1854). James Crawford was a son of John Crawford (d. 1846, Lincoln County, Tennessee) and Elizabeth Nancy Sawyer was a daughter of Hannah Buchanan and James Sawyer. Hannah Buchanan Sawyer was a daughter of Andrew Buchanan (d. 1794 in Washington County, Virginia) and Joanna Hay (died c. 1795). Joanna was a daughter of Patrick Hay of Ireland.

We hope to continue the search for the rest of the family who helped to settle northwest Arkansas.

Amanda Peerson Mayes

My grandmother, Amanda Peerson Mayes was born in Washington County, Arkansas and spent most of her life there. She lived during part of the war years in California, (Manitou County) Missouri, and also in southern Indiana. Her memory books, in which friends had inscribed pleasantries and poetry to her, have several addresses in Newtonia and California, Missouri. Many pictures of her as a young girl were made at Jerseyville, Illinois.

There was never a more patient or kind grandmother than my grandmother, Amanda. She was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church in Springdale and I can recall going to church with them on Saturday morning when a foot-washing was held. I was about 5 or 6 years old but have a vivid recollection of a red-bearded, tobacco-chewing preacher harranguing the audience in a sing-song manner, leaning off the pulpit now and then to let go in a convenient spittoon. In spite of this, the people were attentive and reverent. My grandmother Amanda, in fact all the Peersons that I knew, were always clean and neat in personal appearance and in their homes and yards where everything was spic and span. My grandmother was well-known for her needle work and quilting, and the last time I was in the old Mayes house west of Johnson, Arkansas, the rings were still hanging in the ceiling where she hung her quilting frames.

My father Charles S. Mayes, was born at Johnson, Arkansas 28 November 1872. He attended college in Fayetteville. He was married 16 August 1893 to Lillie E. Slauter of Springdale, by Rev. Davis. Mrs. Maude Hanks, a life-long resident of Johnson until recently, wrote me about the wedding and how the wedding party was taken to the Petross home in Springdale in a coach drawn by 4 show horses, then to the Slauter home for the dinner for the wedding party. Father and Mother then boarded a train for Eureka Springs for their honeymoon. On their return, Amanda (Mrs. Wm. Mayes) had a dinner for them and friends from Johnson, including Mrs. Hanks, attended.

When they were first married, they lived at Johnson, about 1/2 mi. west, known as the John Late Place, and 2 sons were born there, Buell and Dayne. A few years later they built the home one block east of the railroad which was later to become the Hugh Lichlyter home. Charles Mayes ran the store at Johnson for a few years and about 1904 to 1909, farmed and ran a strawberry shed at Johnson. In 1909 or 1910 he moved to Waterloo, Iowa, buying fruits for Waterloo Fruit & Commission Co., and this firm is still in business.

I was born in 1906 and named after a Mr. Vale, the founder of this firm. In 1911, I believe, we returned to Johnson and I attended the 2nd grade there, moving to Muskogee in 1912. Charley Mayes, as he was generally known, became one of the largest handlers of carlot produce of the time and was particulary heavy on strawberries from that time until the mid-30s. At one time he and another interested party bought 150 carlots of strawberries at one time. He maintained a seasonal office at Springdale or Fayetteville for many years, during the spring and fall seasons, and in 1929 was sales manager for Central Sales Agency at Fayetteville, which comprised leading associations from all of northwest Arkansas.

My father told me of the time, about 1880 to 1881, when Grandfather Mayes took him on one of those freight wagons to Ft. Smith. There were several wagons in the train and father said one of the drivers stopped at a still located in a hollow not far from Fayetteville and bought a gallon jug of whiskey. Late that evening as it was nearing supper time, the train passed a little farm house in the hills with a split rail fence around the yard. The chickens had just been fed, and this particular driver who had been tapping the jug, stopped his team, wrapped the lines around the brake handle and walked over to the fence, watching the chickens for a moment. Then he pulled out his pistol and started shooting into them. The astonished farmer and wife came out barefooted to see what was happening, but the driver just climbed the fence and started picking up chickens. He then settled with the farmer, and before long everybody was eating fried chicken. Father's biggest thrill came the next day when he saw his first railroad train in the distance, from the top of a hill near Van Buren.

I also recall a story which was told as truth but may have been a gag of the times. Grandfather being a Republican had little opportunity to celebrate a political victory in that area which seemed to be predominantly Democratic. However, it was said that a Republican Senator was elected and the Senator with the Republican leaders attended a rally at the schoolhouse. The schoolhouse was across the creek, with access by a footlog, and horses left on the other side. After the appropriate number of speeches given and the appropriate number of jugs sampled, they started home on this bright moonlight night. Grandfather said the first man out, mistaking the shadow of the footlog for the log itself, walked out into the creek and yelled back, "Look out thar, Senator; thars been a helluva rise; that water's waist deep over the footlog".

Carl Mayes was Asst. Postmaster at Fayetteville, and he died in December 1929. Carl was also Postmaster of Springdale for 9 years, before the 11 years he spent at Fayetteville. Charles S. sold his home in Johnson, Arkansas to Gideon Lichlyter in 1909 when he moved to Muskogee, Oklahoma.

James P. Mayes

Mary LouVena Long was born July 22, 1854, the 11th of 12 children. She was born to Nicholas and Jane (Cooter) Long. She was a small black haired, blue-eyed girl. On March 26, 1871, she became the bride of a young neighbor lad, James P. Mayes, born October 10, 1850.

They were raised outside Morristown, Tennessee and were both members of the Kidswell Ridge Baptist Church.

A few days after their marriage they set out on a long journey to northwest Arkansas. The first step of the way was by train to Memphis, Tennessee, then the long way down the Mississippi River by steam boat. They hired a wagon in Van Buren, and came over the mountain to Fayetteville, Arkansas, where they were met by James' brother (Black Bill). Black Bill's mother was half Cherokee; she wanted to name him Little Black Hawk, but Dad wanted to name him William so he ended up being named Black Bill William Mayes. They arrived in the afternoon on Good Friday in the Mountain Home community, northwest of Goshen, Arkansas.

They bought a farm about 1882 and lived the remainder of their lives there. They raised 8 children, losing only one small girl.

In the spring of 1883, James received word that his mother was on her deathbed and he went back to Tennessee to see her. Vena was left with 5 children, but she plowed the crops and had them laid by when James returned in August. Two letters that he wrote are in existence.

The last three children were born, and September 1894, James died of typhoid fever. Vena's parents also died; she never saw any of her relatives except one of her sisters after she left Tennessee in 1871. Her two youngest children, Benjamin H. and Bessie (Hilton) lived at home with her.

Benjamin married Fannie Scott on October 1, 1911. They raised two children, Kendall, born August 23, 1912, and Mayne, born May 15, 1919.

And on one of the hottest days in August, Kendall took a bride, Bessie Kelly. Bessie was born February 9, 1913. They slipped off on August 20th, 1932, went into Fayetteville, Arkansas, were married and kept it a secret for three weeks before they told their parents. Kendall's parents said they were going to have it annulled, but they never did.

Kendall and Bessie lived on the homestead and raised five children. Kendall went into the Navy in February 1944; he left the homestead, 4,000 chickens, and 4 small children for Bessie to take care of. When Kendall came home from bootcamp he found everyone fine, but things weren't so good when it was time for him to report back to duty. He left his Bessie expecting their 5th child. But everyone made it just fine while Kendall was away serving his country. Kendall passed away July 16, 1977.

Four of their children are still in the area, Carl, born September 5, 1933; Donald, born June 5, 1935; Peggy, born August 21, 1941; Larry, born January 6, 1945; Preston, born November 2, 1937. Preston makes his home in Missoula, Montana.

Larry and Peggy live near the old homestead on a farm that Kendall and Bessie bought in 1942.

Larry married Myrtle Sue Stansel, born June 3, 1948, on August 3, 1973 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. They have two children who are being raised near the old homestead. They lived in Fayetteville several years before they bought their house and had it moved on the farm that was bought back in 1942. They bought their home August 9, 1984.

Tim Stansell, from my first marriage, born July 27, 1967, graduated from Springdale High School June 6, 1986. Shay is in the 6th grade at Lee Elementary in Springdale, Arkansas.

Samuel Mayes

Samuel Mayes, was born in Georgia, probably Elbert County, on 7 August 1808. His father is said to be Edward Mayes but no proof of this. It is obvious however from various Georgia and South Carolina wills, that he descended from the Scotch-Irish Mayes that came from Ireland into Lancaster County Pennsylvania, about 1725. Some of these Mayes migrated about 1760 into Iredell County North Carolina and on to Union County and Spartanburg County, South Carolina a few years later. The parents of Samuel Mayes and his wife Susan/Sussanah apparently moved on to Georgia in very late 1700s.

Samuel's mother was Susan/Sussanah Rutledge, the daughter of John James and Jane Officer Rutledge. According to some biographers she descended from Edward Rutledge, a Governor of South Carolina and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Such writers as Carl Sandburg, and historian Ida Tarbell so stated, but no direct descent can be confirmed. It is believed her father was a cousin of this distinguished Rutledge.

Samuel Mayes had four sisters that are known, Mary, Jane, Malinda and Minerva. There may have been others.

About 1805 many of the Georgia Mayes, Rutledge and other members of Cumberland Presbyterian flock, that included Millers, Camerons, and Hawthornes under the guidance of Rev. James McGrady moved on to Henderson County Kentucky. Samuel's parents, however remained in Georgia and from an old letter it is said they both died in 1814 from a malady said to be milk fever. About 1812-13, most of the group in Henderson County Kentucky, had migrated on to Illinois territory in what is now White County, then Gallitan County. From this same old letter as quoted by Mrs. Chalon T. Land of Enfield in 1965, it was stated that uncle Tommy Mayes and uncle Billy Rutledge cut rounds from a large tree to fashion wheels for an ox-cart and went back to Georgia to pick up the five Mayes children. Some Georgia relative donated a mule and on the return trip Mary the oldest rode the mule carrying Minerva, a small baby on a pillow. Samuel trudged alongside the ox-cart and Jane and Malinda rode the cart with their belongings. On arrival the orphans were parcelled out among their kin.

Three of the Rutledge families of White County, Illinois, moved on to Montgomery County, Illinois, ca 1826 and Samuel Mayes, then about 18 years went along and there worked in the tannery of Joseph Miller. On September 22, 1833, he married Lucinda Miller, daughter of Joseph Miller and Jane (Duff) Miller and the Millers along with their family, their new son-in-law and his bride all moved to Arkansas territory, settling south of Fayetteville just north of the present airport in Washington County.

Samuel worked in Miller's tannery at Fayetteville and became a substantial citizen of Washington County. He served as Justice of Peace and performed many marriages, owned land and farmed south of Fayetteville.

Samuel and Lucinda had six known children, Joseph M. Mayes m. (1) Sarah P. Collins who died shortly after marriage. M. (2) his widowed sister-in-law Rhoda (Sutton) Collins. Second child Emily Mayes married John W. Wilson, son of John and Jane (Ratliff) Wilson. It is told that she was tortured by bushwhackers during civil war, being tied up by her thumbs and pulled from the floor, but would not reveal whereabouts of her husband. Third child was Robert H. Mayes who married Charlotte Wilson, the daughter of Thomas and Charlotte (Fine) Wilson, lived near Farmington. The next son was William E. Mayes,, m. Amanda E. Peerson, daughter of John and Sarah (Sally Miller) Peerson. They resided at Johnson, Arkansas. Another son, Samuel Jr. Mayes m. (1) Jane Webb and on her death m. (2) Rebecca Ford, daughter of James and Amelia (Ingram) Ford. The youngest son, James Franklin (Frank) Mayes m. Germania Belle Shreve daughter of Wilson and Barbara (Mock) Shreve.

After the civil war, Samuel Mayes Sr. and son William E. Mayes joined with Jacob Q. Johnson to restore the old Hewitt Mill at Johnson. It had been destroyed through depredation of the Civil War. Samuel lived just west of the mill and Johnson lived east while William E. Mayes lived on the farm adjoining Johnson to the east.

A few years after death of Samuel Mayes Sr., that occurred 3 February 1879, William Mayes sold his interest in the mill to the Johnson family. He then engaged in farming and stock raising. William Mayes had served in the Union Army during civil war, as Lieutenant in Battery A., First Arkansas Artillery, and was commander of this battery at end of war, as Capt. Denton Stark was absent.

Samuel Mayes Sr., was a first cousin to Ann Mayes Rutledge, of New Salem, Illinois, daughter of James and Mary Ann (Polly Miller) Rutledge. She was known in legend as sweetheart of Abraham Lincoln and it is believed would have been his wife but for her untimely death in 1835.

From the descendants of Samuel Mayes in Washington County, Arkansas, there were marriages noted to following families: Barker, Porter, Driver, Owen, Timbrook, Tuck, Lewellen, Douglas, Rogers, Caldwell, Gilbreath, Gollahar, Cowan, Witcher, Reiff, Arnett, Hudson, Hight, Giles, Moore, Hayes, Peerson, Slauter, Johnson, Roberts, Aherns, Guisinger, Harrison, Towery, Swaggerty, McKee and others.

Two other Mayes families came to Washington County, Arkansas, early but no known relationship with the above.

Rev. John Mayes b. Guernsy County, Tennessee, 23 June 1810, married Sarah McGhee. Rev. Mayes was son of William and Elizabeth Moody Mayes. His son Wm. Zarro Mayes was builder of University of Arkansas "Old Main".

Wm. H. Mayes b. Tennessee 8 January 1832, md. Louisa Joyce came to Washington County, Arkansas, about 1858, lived in Goshen area.

William E. Mayes

There is no doubt in my mind that the mounted officer in the picture of the 1st Arkansas Battery U. S. A. was my grandfather, William E. Mayes who was Lt. in command of the battery after 25 January 1864. Cpt. Stark had been removed from command due to illness or injury. I am sending a later tintype of him and you will note the likeness in face, beard, size and build. I have the buttons and epaulets from his uniform. My brother had the sword that he is holding upright, and the sash that is wrapped around his waist.

William E. was the most colorful of my Arkansas ancestors. He had a quick wit and a story for every occasion. His father, Samuel, born 1808 in Georgia, came to northwest Arkansas in 1830, settling near the site of present-day Greenland. His mother was Lucinda Miller Mayes.

William E. joined the Confederate army in 1862—forced to join according to Goodspeed or possibly joined as a home guard. He was signed by Col. T. M. Gunter and listed as a Pvt. in Co. A, 2nd Regiment, Arkansas Infantry. Shortly thereafter he was listed on the company roll as a deserter. At the same time he was shown as enlisting in the U. S. Army and assigned to the 1st Arkansas Light Battery Vol. as 1st Sgt.

His brother, Samuel, was also shown on the CSA roster (AWOL) and then enlisted as a Pvt. in the 1st Arkansas Battery U. S. A. William Mayes was promoted to 2nd Lt. on 10 September 1863. I am attaching copies of his Civil War record which covers various phases of his war experience. He saw active duty at Cassville and Rolla, Missouri; at Fayetteville, Prairie Grove and Ft. Smith in Arkansas and at Ft. Gibson. He was in the battles of Prairie Grove, Pryor Creek, the Narrows and Fayetteville, plus several skirmishes. I have heard him tell of the fighting at Prairie Grove and about turning over bodies after the battle to see if any were his brothers.

He told me of an amusing incident in Fayetteville near the close of the war when all hands were bored and wanted to go home. Some curious and enterprising soldier discovered that there were kegs of liquor in a commissary building up on a piling foundation. By the use of a brace and bit and a little "wildcat drilling", they soon struck oil, or liquor if you please, and shortly, several nose bags (for horse feeding) were filled and just as quickly emptied. Everything was getting hilarious until the officer of the day had the bugler give the "Call to Battle". My grandfather said everyone sobered to a degree and that his brother Samuel, who was in charge of a 4 horse team to handle an artillery gun, brought up a cannon at a gallop with only 2 horses hitched.

After the war (1869) William E. married Amanda E. Peerson and shortly thereafter built a home at Johnson, the lumber being hauled from War Eagle sawmill. With Jacob Johnson and the Sr. Samuel Mayes, he built and operated the old mill at Johnson in Washington County. It was run by a water wheel, powered by a mill race utilizing the big spring which is now at the fish hatchery.

He also operated a freight business for many years, between Fayetteville and Ft. Smith, taking flour and meat to Ft. Smith and bringing back freight for Fayetteville merchants. After 17 years he sold his interest in the mill to the Johnsons and it is still (1963) being operated by them. The last time I was in this mill, a few years ago, the original walnut timbers inside were slick and polished by almost 100 years usage.

William E. was a student in Arkansas College, Fayetteville, leaving school there about 1860 or 1861. In 1889 he was Commander of the GAR Post 34 in Springdale. He was a member of the AF&AM. I also recall that when I was a boy, he was active in the Anti-Horse Thief Assn. which was quite a social club as well as a protective organization. He was a staunch Republican and was candidate for office at times but never elected. He was several times Marshal of the Day at the Decoration Day observance and parade in Fayetteville. He was one of the organizers of the Fruitmen's Union at Johnson, Arkansas, and one of the first to raise strawberries in that area.

I recall reading about Joe Ellis in one of the Flashbacks"" and he was well-known to me as a child, for he lived with my grandfather most of his life. I believe his real name was James Malcomson. He was Scotch-Canadian and, as I now recall the story, had enlisted for some wealthy northerner for a fee of $1000, which was permissable, and it was thought that he had repeated, by deserting and enlisting again for someone else. At any rate, he was supposed to have marched to the sea with Sherman and drew a pension as Joe Ellis. He was the first postmaster of Johnson and the post office was then in my grandfather's home. Joe was killed by a passenger train at Johnson when he failed to hear the train due to deafness. I am sending a picture of him and also his obituary. This obituary was written in the Springdale News by "Mulkeepmo", which was the name used by Marion Mason of Johnson, Arkansas, a brother of Mrs. Maude Hanks.

Great-uncle Samuel Mayes II served with the 1st Arkansas Light Battery U. S. A. Cpt. Denton D. Stark wrote a letter on his behalf for having been a. w. o. l. beyond his leave due to the presence of guerrillas in his neighborhood. They lived in Elm Springs, Arkansas most of their life and both are buried there.

James Mayfield

James Mayfield, a Baptist minister in Washington County, Brush Creek Twp., 1850 census, was born 14 May 1801 in South Carolina. It is not definite that Elijah Mayfield was his father as the courthouse in Hickman County, Tennessee burned in 1865, destroying most records. However, it is definite that Elijah Mayfield and the Langleys were acquainted there before both families removed to Arkansas. Elijah stated in his Revolutionary War pension application that he was born 10 June 1762, in Amherst County, Virginia. At the age of twelve, he moved with his family to Montgomery County, Virginia and enlisted in the army there in 1779. After his discharge, he went to Davidson County, Tennessee where he was captured by Indians and held in captivity about a year. Around this same time his father, James, and two brothers, Isaac and Sutherland were killed by Indians. Elijah married at Long Island of the Holsten River and went to South Carolina for 17 years; to Jefferson County, Kentucky for 16 years; and to Hickman County, Tennessee in 1818. The Mayfields arrived in Washington County, Arkansas in 1840. The James Mayfield killed at Eaton's Station near Nashville had a wife named Ellender.

James Mayfield was killed by bushwhackers in 1865 while working in the fields. The younger men were away at war and the women had to carry him up the hill, dig his grave and bury him. Dying intestate, his wife, Matilda, and Alfred A. Langley were appointed administrators and in the affidavit, the following were listed ah heirs: Elizabeth M. Neil of Missouri (she had married James R. Neil in 1852), Mary S. Langley and Susan Langley of Madison County, Arkansas, Martha J. Smith (married Robert C. Smith in 1855), Elijah Mayfield, Harriet Hickman, Polley Mayfield, Ellender Mayfield, Lucinda O. Mayfield, Aramanta Mayfield and William G. Mayfield, all of Washington County, Arkansas.

The following was copied from the James Mayfield family Bible; copied by Ovid Puryear of Mayfield, Arkansas who is the last living grand-descendant of James Mayfield. He was married twice and the Bible record was dlvided by children of the first wife (name unknown) and children by the second wife, Matilda Jones, born 1 September 1818 in Kentucky, died 4 February 1892, buried Mayfield Family Cemetery. James died 7 June 1865, buried Mayfield Family Cemetery. Elizabeth born 13 September 1827 in Tennessee; William F. born 22 December 1828 in Tennesse; Mary Saphronia born 13 November 1832 in Tennessee, married Alfred Langley 19 August 1860; Martha J. born 29 January 1834 in Tennessee; Elijah born 3 January 1836 in Tennessee; Harriett born 12 March 1840 in Tennessee; Mary "Polly" born 20 August 1842 in Arkansas, died 10 March 1902; Susan born 3 July 1844, married 19 November 1865 to James K. "Polk" Langley, died 25 January 1892; James L. born 24 July 1847 in Arkansas; Ellender born 13 May 1849 in Arkansas, married "Polk" Langley, died 12 February 1893; Lucinda Orlenda born 31 March 1852; Armanta born 16 September 1854, died 28 September 1910, married William F. Clayton born 28 September 1856, died 9 April 1950; Abigail born 1 May 1857; and William Green born 31 October 1859, married Sarah J., died 11 March 1935. Polly, Susan, Ellen, William G. and his wife, Mary E. Griffin, Mantie and William F. are all buried at the Mayfield Family Cemetery as well as Allen A. and James A., sons of J. K. and Susan Langley, and Jane, wife of J. H. Griffin, born 10 August 1861, died 30 September 1887.

William Arthur's father was Sutherland Mayfield. His mother was Elizabeth S. Mayfield. Nancy Liggett's father was John Liggett. It is believed that she is buried beside William A., who is buried in Forest Park Cemetery at Springdale, Arkansas. They are found on the 1850 and 1860 Washington County census for Arkansas. Isaac Lynch is the son of William who is kin to John Wesley Lynch who married Elmira Fitzgerald.

William Arthur Mayfield was born 28 October 1818 in Hickman County, Tennessee and died October 1885. He married circa 1838 Nancy Liggett, born 1818 in Ohio, and died April 1898. Their children: Phebe born 1839 in Arkansas, married William Sims; John born 1840 in Arkansas; Mary E. born 1842 in Arkansas, married 24 February 1871 Jasper Newton Fitzgerald; Sarilda born 1843, married Isaac Lynch; Caroline born 1848; James Archibald born 1849 or 1850; Martha born 1855, married Andrew Jackson Fitzgerald, Jr.; Rebecca born 1852.

James K. "Polk" Langley was born in Hickman County, Tennessee, and his family moved to Arkansas in 1847-48. His father was Alfred A. Langley, born in Wilson County, Tennessee in 1811. His mother, Elizabeth, died in 1860. Soon after, Alfred married Mary Saphronia Mayfield. On 19 November 1865, "Polk" married Mary's sister Susan. After Susan's death in 1892, he married their sister Ellen. His fourth wife was Sallie Blake. He died in Thalia, Texas. The family Bible of "Polk" Langley and the comments I have regarding Robert E. Griffin I will leave out in the interest of space since they have nothing to do with the Fitzgerald portion of the family. If you want to read about that it has been published once in the Flashback.

Elijah Mayfield died in 1930. He and his wife, Sarah J. (born 1837, died 1909) are buried in Goshen Cemetery. Before 1898 George Mayfield carried mail by horseback from Fayetteville to Huntsville for $10 a month. In the spring of 1925 a canning factory was built in Mayfield for processing tomatoes. The land was granted by Big Green Mayfield. The canning factory was the only factory in Mayfield that furnished work for the Mayfield community people in the fall, as well as furnishing nearby markets for the tomatoes grown in that area.

Lucinda C. Wright McCamey

Lucinda C. Wright McCamey, known as Lucy, born December 17, 1872 in Randolph County, Arkansas.

Daughter of William M. and Adeline (Brown) Wright, moved to Springdale when Springdale was a small town.

Lucy and her brothers picked strawberries on their farm, and sold them in town going door to door. They resided in the area when the railroad was built thru Springdale. The children sometimes carried drinking water to the workmen.

Later, their father bought a farm ten miles west of Springdale, on the Wildcat Creek, which was later to become the Harmon community. She married William F. McCamey on February 9, 1893, and together they raised eight children.

John McClellan

John McClellan, born December 23, 1768, Washington County, North Carolina, died November 15, 1842, Boonsboro, Arkansas (changed to Cane Hill in 1843), the son of William McClellan and his wife Barbara Walker. He married in 1794, Knox County, Tennessee, Mary "Polly" Wallace, daughter of William Wallace. Kings Mountain Men by K. K. White (1924) states: "John McClellan was a Lieutenant and served under Shelby at the Battle of Kings Mountain and in 1790 was sent to Southwest Point Station to keep the Indians from molesting the Cumberland settlement." Sevier Family History by Cora Sevier and Nancy Madden makes note that Capt. John McClelland commanded the garrison at Southwest Point, the junction of the Clinch and Tennessee Rivers, in protecting the settlers and travelers from the Indians. He also served in the War of 1812.

The nine children of John and Mary Wallace McClellan were born in Tennessee and the family moved to Somerville, Alabama about 1820. John's brother, William L. McClellan with his wife, Elizabeth Conway Sevier, daughter of Governor John Sevier, had arrived at Fort Smith, Arkansas in the spring of 1826, where he had been commissioned by the Department of War, Office of Indian Affairs, to serve as Indian Agent for the Choctaws west of the Mississippi, and was probably responsible for his brother and family coming to that area.

Col. John McClellan was named as one of the board of trustees when Cane Hill College was founded, and was nominated as a presidential elector in the Campaign of 1840. A weekly newspaper, The Tornado, published at Little Rock during this campaign, dated September 26, 1840, states: "John McClellan is an old bear hunter and land surveyor in Washington County, where the people know, esteem and respect him. He has done his country service in the Indian Wars, and Arkansas will do him the small honor to make him the elector of the highest office of the world. He, too, is a good Democrat, and will go for Van Buren and Johnson."

John McClellan was probably the first of his family to be buried in the family cemetery on his farm at Cane Hill, which later belonged to his son, Evan White McClellan, and in 1962 was owned by the late Charles Getty McClellan, a great-grandson of White McClellan. It is no longer owned by the McClellan descendants.

Children of John McClellan and Mary Wallace McClellan. 1. Matthew Wallace McClellan, born 1795, married in 1814 to Dolly Amanda Campbell. He died in 1872 at Cane Hill, Arkansas (10 children). 2. William Blount McClellan, born in 1798, married in 1825 to Martha Thompson Roby. A graduate of the Military Academy at West Point, he served in both the Alabama House and Senate for a number of years and in 1836 was elected Brigadier General. He died at his country estate, "Idlewilde", Talladega, Alabama, at age 83, October 11, 1881. (He had 16 children). 3. Barbara Walker McClellan, born in 1800, married in 1819 to John Taylor Rather, died in 1826 in Alabama (had one son). 4. Charles McClung McClellan, 1802-1844, died Cane Hill, Arkansas, unmarried. 5. Elizabeth Price McClellan, born 1804, married Ewing W. McClure, a merchant and postmaster at Cane Hill (1845). They lived in a home near the Old College Spring, also known as the McClure Spring. She died in 1885 at Cane Hill, Arkansas, no children. 6. Sarah Walker McClellan, born in 1806, married first Judge Charles W. Peters and second to John Wilson. She died in 1860 at Cane Hill, Arkansas, no children. 7. Olivia McClellan, born 1809, married to William Harvey Campbell. They came to Cane Hill, Arkansas in 1833, but returned to Alabama, where she died in 1837. (They had one son). 8. Chalmer Kirk McClelland Chalmer Kirk McClelland came to Fayetteville, Arkansas from Newnan, Georgia, bringing his wife and five small children, aged 11, 9, 4, 2 1/2 and 1 years of age. He was a descendant of the Eleven Lords of Kircudbright, Scotland from whom most McClellands, Mclellans, and other variations of the name 'Maclellan' descended.

Chalmer Kirk McClelland was raised on a farm near the Ohio-Pennsylvania stateline, graduated from Ohio State and Cornell Universities and took employment with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and, ultimately the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture at Fayetteville. During his tenure there, he helped train thousands of young Arkansas boys to be good farmers, at the same time doing tremendously important crop research on corn-hybrids, cotton diseases, and soybean cross-breeding. One variety of soybean was named the "Mack" by geneticists with the National Soybean Association, honoring his outstanding research, all of which was done at the University Farm in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

His wife, Annie Hibernia Bramlette, born in Pontotoc, Mississippi and raised in Longview, Texas in a family of thirteen children, was an elementary teacher in Plain Dealing, Louisiana, having been educated at the Women's Teachers College in Denton, Texas.

After marriage, they had five children and lived at government experiment stations in North Carolina, Kansas, Hawaii,

Arkansas and Georgia, before moving to Arkansas after World War I. Their five children all survived, all attended the Fayetteville Public Schools and the University of Arkansas, and all grew up, married and had families of their own, some of whom still reside in Fayetteville and Washington County.

During the period from 1920, when this McClelland family first came to Washington County from Newnan, Spalding County, Georgia, until 1956 and 1959 when the father and mother, respectively, passed away, they devoted themselves to raising and educating their children to be industrious, God-fearing citizens and patriotic Americans. Brief, thumbnail biographies of these children follows:

(1) Ann McClelland, also known as A. G. and Annie Grace, born December 10, 1910, resides in Houston, Texas. (m. Richard Maxey, deceased) lived in Tulsa, Oklahoma, Mammoth Springs, Russellville, Pine Bluff and Fayetteville, Arkansas before moving to Houston, Texas. A licensed attorney in Arkansas, she served as corporate secretary and as an executive officer of an oil refinery in Houston, later being employed by the Astrodome at its inception, is now retired and devoted to her many nieces, nephews and a host of friends all over the world, as well as her four brothers.

(2) Colonel Chalmer Kirk McClelland, Jr., (U. S. A. Retired), resides in San Antonio, Texas, is a property-owner in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Born December 28, 1911, graduated from West Point, married Mary Josephine (Dodie) West of San Antonio, Texas, retired from service after World War II, acquired a small trucking firm, which he promptly built into a major refrigerated common carrier, supplying national distributors across the country with frozen meats. Is part-owner of the New Orleans Saints, NFL Football Professionals. He and his wife also have four daughters, all married with children of their own, all residing in San Antonio, Bexar County, Texas.

(3) Clement Bramlette McClelland, born September 24, 1916, now resides in Fayetteville, Arkansas, married to Doris Cook of Mexia and Houston, Texas. After graduating from the University of Arkansas, attended the University of Texas Law School, practiced law in Houston, served as Probate Judge of Harris County, helped found an International Franchising Corporation (Kwik-Kopy Printing), retired to Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas, to assist his wife, Doris, in operating a uniqely appointed restaurant called The Farmers Daughter, and his franchised business. They raised three children, two of whom lived in Fayetteville, as do two of their grandchildren.

(4) James Edward McClelland, born January 12, 1918, now resides in Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas, married Maurice Ash of Fayetteville, Arkansas (Washington County), graduated from University of Arkansas Engineering School, served as Commissioned officer during World War II, and after being associated with an engineering firm for two years in Houston, Texas, "Ep" and Maurice settled down into the community life of Fayetteville, Arkansas whre he has had an active career as a professional engineer, served as head of the Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, and like his father, has faithfully served as a member of the Presbyterian Church choir, and has also sung in civic opera and other civic entertainment, as well as other projects aimed at the betterment of the city, county and state. He and his wife sired three children, all educated in Fayetteville and Washington County, and they have several grand-children. In addition to musical patronage, he has actively participated in the arts and is recognized as a talented watercolor artist.

(5) Thomas Bramlette McClelland, like his brothers and sister, he received his education in the public schools of Fayetteville, graduated from the University of Arkansas School of Engineering, followed by a Masters Degree from Purdue University, married Virginia Cowen of Canada. When the City of Houston decided to harness the nearby San Jacinto River for its fresh water supply, and needed a civil engineer trained in soils engineering, they sent to Indiana for him. After completion of the San Jacinto Dam, he formed an engineering consulting firm that soon would have offices in all parts of the world, serving the needs of several major oil companies, and he still heads this company, although his business is temporarily oil-depressed. he and his wife, and their five children, all work and live in Houston, Texas.

As heads of the McClelland Family in Fayetteville and Washington County, both Chalmer Kirk McClelland and his wife, Annie Hibernia Bramlette McClelland, did their utmost to set good examples for their children, participating in as much of the community life around them as possible. She was president of several PTA groups, depending upon which school her children were attending sometimes. Kirk, for part of his contribution, helped farmboys take part in the Washington County Fair activities, encouraging them to exhibit their livestock, poultry and produce and showing them how to attract the eyes of the judges at the fair. Annie was Chairman of the Harmon Playground Planning Committee and was largely responsible for the founding of the playground and athletic field that is still today an important part of the Fayetteville School System. Kirk, as he was known by many, or "Professor Mack" helped support his family by "Keeping Gardens" on the East side of the University campus near where he raised his family. All the neighbors on Reagan Street, Ida Avenue, Gregg Street and Arkansas Avenue enjoyed the 'fruits of the labors' of Professor Mack and his boys. In addition to canning many vegetables and some fruits from the University Farm, Annie was busy being chairman of the Fayetteville Library Board. The library at that time was in a little green clapboard house, one block North of the Fayetteville Square on East Street where part of the McIlroy Bank & Trust Company main offices are now situated. Kirk supported Annie in her many civic endeavors but once he said to her in his typical Scotch humor, "Annie, the telephone company says that when you die, they are going to put a telephone on your grave, because you are one of their best customers and they don't want to lose you." Kirk and Annie are both buried in the National Cemetery, located South of the Fayetteville Square. Kirk was a veteran of the Spanish American War. Also, he was active in Washington Lodge #1, A & A F M, and received a 50-year pin recognizing his active Masonic life. They were the mainstays of the old First Presbyterian Church that stood for many years at the corner of N. College Avenue and Spring Street but is gone now, replaced by commercial buildings. Kirk sang in the choir, was Sunday School Superintendent and a Ruling Elder. Annie gave the Ladies Auxiliary her untiring assistance.

Clement Bramlette McClelland

One of five children of Chalmer Kirk McClelland and Annie Hibernia Bramlette McClelland, brought to Fayetteville and Washington County in 1921 from Newnan, Georgia where the older McClelland owned three bottom-land farms. He and all of his brothers and sisters were raised in Washington County and all attended public schools and the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. "Clem" was born in Griffin, Georgia, was only 4 years old when he arrived in Arkansas. The family lived in several rent houses during the early residence in Fayetteville, and all of the residences were one block or, at the most, two blocks from the University of Arkansas campus where the family head was employed as a professor of Agriculture. Clem attended Leverett School, Fayetteville Jr. High School and the University High School (Peabody) followed by an arts and science curriculum at the University of Arkansas, including 2 years of law school. After obtaining an arts degree, he transferred to the University of Texas Law School at Austin, Class of 1939, was licensed to practice law in Texas and did just that. . .in Houston, Texas, for ten years, served as Probate Judge of Harris County, Texas for twelve years and lived in Texas for 36 years before returning to Washington County, Arkansas in 1976, where he resides as of this time. While growing up in Fayetteville, he was part of the life of the First Presbyterian Church, he was active in the Boy Scouts of America, participated in several dramatic productions, and played the saxophone and clarinet in Owen Mitchell's dance band after he entered college, where he also became an active member of several campus organizations. He was a member of Sigma Chi, national social fraternity, Blue Key Honor Society and was elected Business Manager of the 1936 Razorback, U of A Arkansas year book.

While growing up in Fayetteville and Washington County, Clem was a fairly normal product of the times, and, though times were hard during the 20s and 30s, he and his associates laughed a lot, and their existence was happy and wholesome, even in the depths of the Great Depression. Folks did not have much, nor did they expect much. One family car and one overcoat was shared by the McClelland boys. If one of the brothers was wearing "the" overcoat, the others went cold, or did not go out. If it was one of the brothers' time to use the family car, the others either rode with him, or rode with someone else, or walked to wherever they needed to be. There were a lot of "leg muscles" developed during that time.

After landing in Houston, Clem met and married Doris Cook, the belle of Mexia, Limestone County, Texas, and they sired and raised three children, two of whom later moved to Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas. Their three children, all born in Houston, Harris County, Texas are as follows: Micki Flintoft, a writer, born 25 October 1945, first married William S. Newkirk, then Emanuel A. (Buz) Lawrence, deceased, then Donald Flintoft who is a successful criminal lawyer in Houston and is currently helping to raise Chablis Lawrence, the product of her first marriage, who attended Leverett School when she was younger and when she was residing in Fayetteville with her grandparents, currently attends Emerson College in Boston, Massachusetts. The second child of Clem and Doris McClelland was Anne Hamilton, born March 24, 1947 and while married to Jim Hamilton, had two daughters, Daphne and Hayley, currently resides in Washington County, Arkansas, and after a number of years learning air tariffs, trade routes, etc. is currently employed as a Travel Agent for World Travel at the Mall in Fayetteville. The third child, a son, Clement Kirk McClelland, was born March 7, 1949, married Jocelyn Brady of Miami, Florida and Kennybunkport, Maine, received drama scholarship to Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida, but changed career goals and transfered to University of Southern California where he graduated Cum Laude in Cinematography. Kirk and his wife lived in Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas for several years where he managed the restaurant inaugurated by his parents in 1973 and known as The Farmers Daughter Restaurant. After several years of residence in Washington County, he and his wife moved to Sarasota, Florida to commence his career as a film producer. Currently they still reside there and are the parents of a son, Catlan Adam McClelland.

Doris Cook McClelland, wife of Clem McClelland and the mother of Micki, Anne and Kirk McClelland, as stated above, having actively engaged in supporting her husband's commitment to a public career, and having thoroughly devoted herself to her children's activities, whether it was Girl Scouts, Brownies, Pta, March of Dimes, or a myriad of other activities, decided to move to Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas and start a restaurant, which she did in 1974, and chose the old farmhouse built by the Davis-Nettleship families on old Johnson Road, as the location for the restaurant, known as The Farmers Daughter, and she operated it successfully until its closing in 1984. Her arrival in Fayetteville preceded the return of her husband Clem by two years. In 1976, he opened a Kwik-Kopy Printing franchise at 2218 N. College which he continues to own and operate at this time, although he ended his "36-year leave-of-absence" to come back to Fayetteville and retire. Prior to returning to Washington County, he had always been a "joiner" (Chamber of Commerce, Masons, the Shrine, Alumni Associations, First Presbyterian Church, Bar Associations, and other organizational groups), so it was his vow not to "join" anything, but he made one exception: He applied for and was accepted by the Sons of the American Revolution. He has always had a keen interest in his ancestry and the subject of genealogy, ergo: Family History.

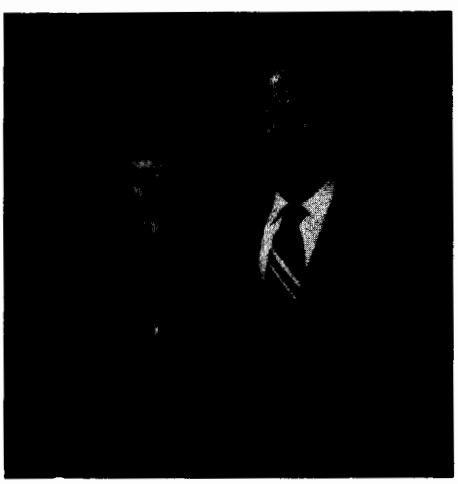
James Edward McClelland

James Edward McClelland, Sr., was born January 12, 1919 in Griffin, Spaulding County, Georgia, of Chalmer Kirk McClelland, Sr., and Annie Hibernia Bramlette McClelland. He was the fourth child and the third son of that union. When Edward (as he was called by his parents) was 26 months old, the family moved from Georgia to Fayetteville, Arkansas, where the father was to be employed as a teacher and a researcher for the College of Agriculture, University of Arkansas.

Raymond & Lillian Ash, parents of Mrs. J. E. McClelland



J. E. and Maurice Ash McClelland

Edward was ten years younger than his sister, Annie Grace (later "Ann", the oldest child of the family) and the sister enjoyed asking him, when he was very small, to tell visitors his name. Not yet speaking plainly because of his age, Edward would say, "Eppie Ma Cutter", and the sister began calling him "Eppie," and later shortened it to "Ep." Edward was known to all from that day forward, as "Ep" or sometime "Eppie." Parents of the children never changed, however, because the nicknames seemed inappropriate to them. To them, their son was always "Edward."

Edward ("Ep") received his early education in the Fayetteville Public School, and was a student under such notables and long-time Washington County residents as Mrs. Bunn (Louise) Bell, Miss Clarene Tribble (later Mrs. Virgil Blossom), Miss Mary Ripley (later Mrs. George Holcomb), Mrs. Norman (Elizabeth) McCartney and Miss Ruth Crozier. After graduating from Fayetteville High School in the spring of 1935, Edward attended the University of Arkansas and, in 1940, received a Bachelor of Science Degree in Civil Engineering. While in attendance at the University, Edward entered the advance ROTC program, and in his senior year was chosen to be the Captain (Commanding Officer) of both the Pershing Rifles and Scabbard and Blade. That same year he served as Lt. Colonel (second in Command) in the Cadet Corps.

Upon graduation, Ep worked for Arkansas Power & Light Company in Pine Bluff, Arkansas and the St. Louis-Southwestern Railway Company (Cotton Belt), also in Pine Bluff, and on July 9, 1941, was called into military service as a Second Lieutenant. He was ordered to Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, where he was assigned to research and development of arms and ammunition of all types.

On May 16, 1941, Ep married Lillian Maurice Ash of Fayetteville, the daughter of Raymond F. and Lillian Turner Ash. Maurice was born in Bartlesville, Oklahoma on October 31, 1920, and the family moved from Bartlesville to Fayetteville, Arkansas in mid-year, 1921. Maurice also attended the public schools in Fayetteville and the University of Arkansas. While in the University, Maurice volunteered for pilot training under President Franklin Roosevelt's program to mass-develop pilots during peace-time. Maurice was the first woman in Arkansas to become a certified pilot under the CAA program. After World War II, Ep entered the construction business in Fayetteville following one year in Houston, Texas where he worked for a consulting engineering firm. In 1963, he formed a consulting engineering firm which he incorporated in 1967 under the name, McClelland Consulting Engineers, Inc. Ep and Maurice bought a household goods (Red Ball Transfer & Storage Co., Inc.) company in 1956, and Maurice operated the company until 1971, when it was sold. Ep and Maurice were active in community, professional and service organizations within Fayetteville and the State of Arkansas. Ep was active in the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce, the Arkansas State Chamber of Commerce, the Fayetteville Rotary Club and various engineering organizations. Maurice was active in the Altrusa Club, PEO, was in the City Hospital Auxiliary and was on the Board of Directors of Abilities Unlimited. Both were active in their church, the First United Presbyterian Church, and both worked for the cultural betterment of the community, through the NW Arkansas Community Concerts Association, the North Arkansas Symphony and its auxiliary, and the Music Festival of Arkansas. Ep continued his army affiliation through the U. S. Army Reserve and retired from that program as a Lt. Colonel in 1965.

From the marriage came two sons and a daughter: James Edward (Jim), Jr. (b. July 30, 1943), Raymond Kirk (b. December 14, 1945 - named for his two grandfathers, Raymond Ash and Kirk McClelland) and Linda Maurice (b. September 30, 1949). Jim was born during World War II, in Baltimore, Maryland, while Raymond and Linda were born in Fayetteville. All three attended public schools in Fayetteville and all attended the University of Arkansas. Jim worked for a consulting engineer in Little Rock after graduation and lated joined his father's engineering firm (McClelland Consulting Engineers, Inc.) where he became President of the Company in 1986. Jim married Patricia Ann Finley of Little Rock in 1965, and they had two children: James Edward (Jay) McClelland, III (b. September 7, 1969) and Kirk Finley McClelland (b. October 13, 1974.)

Raymond turned to beef cattle after attending the University, and chose a farm west of Goodman, Missouri, for that enterprise. He married Connie Garlow Creamer of Joplin, Missouri in May, 1986. Connie had a daughter by her first marriage, named Audra, who was eleven years old at the time of Raymond's marriage to Connie.

Raymond also worked for the Veteran's Administration in Neosho, Missouri, and Connie was a secretary for the manager of an industrial plant in Joplin, Missouri. Raymond and Connie were landlords, also, owning rental houses in Joplin, Missouri. The Garlow's (Connie's family) were natives of the Neosho area in southwest Missouri.

Linda McClelland studied music at the University of Arkansas, choosing the piano as her major. After graduation. she entered the Campus Crusade for Christ program, and served at the University of Nebraska and at Rice University in Houston, Texas. Linda married Joseph Rogers of Mena, Arkansas, a graduate in architecture at the University. Linda and Joe settled in Dallas, Texas, where Joe graduated with a master's degree from the Dallas Seminary, then began his career as an architect. Joe and Linda had two children, James Lucas (Luke) Rogers (b. August 30, 1978) and Ann Katherine Rogers (b. September 9, 1984).

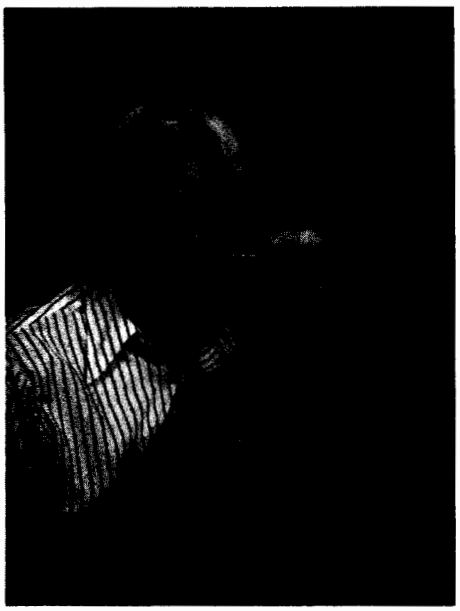
The family moved to Washington County, Arkansas in 1935 to manage a farm owned by V. P. Rader. The farm was located three miles north of Cincinnati, Arkansas on the old line road.



Buck and Juanita Wilson - 1975

The depression was still existing and there was a drought which made things very bad. Mack managed that farm very well. He had a sawmill, raised strawberries, milked cows and had beef cattle. He also farmed. He employed many of the local citizens, paying them the going wage. To some, he paid.75 cents per day, plus their noon meal, others he paid.10 cents per hour. With five children, one might think he got free labor from them, but those five chidren had to be clothed and fed. He made a profit for V. P. Radar, but none for himself. It took all that he could make to raise his family. While living in Cincinnati, he was on the schoolboard and used his influence to establish a hot lunch program for the school. He was influential in obtaining "rural electric" for the community. He was very energetic and civic minded. He belonged to the Cincinnati Masonic Lodge #102 AF&AM. Mary belonged to Eastern Star. He left the farm in the early 1940 years and went to Bremer, Washington. He worked in the shipyards to help in the World War II effort. After the war was over, he returned to Siloam Springs, Arkansas and operated a feed store for a few years. He even fed a few bunches of broilers himself, manually. He owned and operated a semi-trailer rig, going across the country to do his hauling.

He moved into Fayetteville, Arkansas and bought the University Apartments, which he operated for several years, then sold them in the 1960s. He invested his money in three homes on Oakland Street, all of them side by side.

After he retired, he got a job with the City of Fayetteville as Constable. He held this position for many years, until he could not walk or drive. He died in November of 1981. He had given his best to his fellow man. Mary died in November of 1984. Both are buried in "Old Union Cemetery", in Cincinnati, Arkansas.

Four of their children live in Washington County, Arkansas. Carl McConnell married Doris Buckley and lived in California for forty-two years. He divorced her and came back to Fayetteville, Arkansas in 1984. He married Mattie Prather, the widow of the late Jim Prather. Juanita McConnell married Glenn Randolph. He was killed in an automobile accident in 1961. They have two children, Glenita and John. In 1971, Juanita married Buck Wilson, a World War II veteran. She has never moved from Cincinnati, Arkansas. Irene McConnell married Leon McReynolds, a World War II veteran. They lived in California until 1977, then moved back to Arkansas. They have three children, James, Brenda and Jackie. Irene lives in Cincinnati, Arkansas.

George McConnell was in World War II, then went to Oregon and California. He has two children: Rusty and Sallie. He now lives in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Vivian (Bib) McConnell married a Camp Chaffee soldier, John Patrick, moved to California and had a son, Thomas. John died in 1962. Later, Vivian married Fred Meisel. She still lives in California.

Dr. E. G. McCormick

James McCormick, a Scottish colonist and strict Presbyterian, moved to Londonderry, Province of Ulster, Ireland, some time in the mid-1600s. In 1702, he and his wife had a son, Thomas. When Thomas reached the age of thirty-two he emigrated to America, along with a brother, Hugh. Both men lived in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, until Thomas crossed the Susqehanna River in 1745 and settled in Cumberland County.

Tired of fending off Indian attacks, Robert moved his family to Rockbridge County, Virginia in 1779. Another son was born in 1780 while Robert was serving in the Revolutionary War under General Nathaniel Greene. Robert was wounded during the fighting at Guilford Court House, but recovered and returned to his family where he stayed until his death in 1818.

Robert and Sarah's fourth child, William (1776-1837), remained in Rockbridge County and married a Sarah McClelland. One of their sons, Thomas M. (1809-1887), owned and operated flour mills in Rockbridge and later Augusta County. Thomas married Elizabeth Campbell on November 25, 1830 and had six girls and one boy. After his wife's death, Thomas, along with a son, James William (1833-1886), sold their flour mill in 1875 and moved to Prairie Grove, Arkansas. James brought his wife, Mary J. (1833-1891) and their seven Virginia-born children. The oldest was twenty year-old Ephriam Graham (E. G.) (1855-1938), Thresa (born 1857), who married W. N. Butler in 1880, William T. (1858-1907), Sally A. (born 1861), Lafayette (Fay) Clark (1863-1951), Dorse (1866-1938), and Jennie A. (born 1872), who married James Pittman in 1899.

James' eldest son E. G. spent three years traveling and teaching school in Washington County, Prairie County and Iowa. In his spare time, he studied medicine. He enrolled at Missouri Medical College in St. Louis and graduated with a Phd. in 1881. Dr. McCormick practiced medicine in Lee's Creek (Crawford County) and married Mamie Gilliam (1866-1950), daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. D. Gillliam. The McCormick's had three children, W. Grover (1885-1958), Minnie Myrtle (1886-1978), and Arthur A. (1891-1949).

Dr. McCormick and his wife moved to Prairie Grove in 1884. The area of Dr. McCormick's practice covered about thirty miles, and on excursions into Indian Territory, he rode "Old Dick", an Indian pony. Besides his medical practice, Dr. McCormick was also active in community affairs. In order to curb the prevalent drinking and rowdiness ocurring on the streets of Prairie Grove during the 1880s, Dr. McCormick and a Dr. Mahan incorporated the town on a piece of notebook paper by writing a petition and sending it to the county judge.

Dr. McCormick also opened the first drug store in town with his brother William, started the first canning factory, founded the local paper, and helped develop the Southern Presbyterian Church in 1888. That same year, Dr. McCormick strung a telephone wire from his office to William's Pharmacy, and eighteen years later, he and M. M. Collier incorporated the Prairie Grove Telephone Company.

The McCormick's eldest son, Grover, attended the University of Arkansas and was a member of the Student Army Training Corps during World War I. Grover lived his life in Prairie Grove with his wife, Annie Magruder (1876-1949).

Myrtle married James Clay Parks in 1910 and had five sons in their Prairie Grove home. The oldest boy was James Fay (1911-1976), followed by Howard (born in 1913 and died in infancy), identical twins, Barry Houston and Donald Ephriam (born 1919) and Joseph Carroll (1922-1984). The McCormick's youngest child, owned a Ford dealership in Prairie Grove and married Ruth Fain (1900-1956). They had two daughters, Berniece (born 1919) and Dolly Ann (born 1932). Berniece, who lives in Prairie Grove, married Willard Brooks (1915-1986) and has two children, Mary Patricia (Treka) (born 1944) and John Charles (born 1948). Treka lives in the Gentry area with her husband Curt Vaughn and two girls, Treka Brooke (born 1974) and Amy Laurel (born 1982). John works for Cooper Industries in Bella Vista, and is married to Carolyn Watson (born 1950). They have one daughter, Ashley Ryan (born 1978) and a son, John Crawford (born 1982).

Dolly Ann and her husband, Vance Ward, live in Hanover, Pennsylvania, not far from where brothers, Thomas and Hugh first settled in the 1730s. They have two daughters, Lesa Ann (born 1955) and Vicky Ruth (born 1957). Lesa is married to Fred Darville, and has two children, Hunter Ward (born 1985) and Laura Taylor (born 1987). The Darville's reside in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Vicky has one son, Colby Ward (born 1984) and a daughter, Kristin Taylor (born 1980), and lives with her husband, Ed Jacobs, in Hanover.

John McCoy

The first record I find of the McCoys in Arkansas is the 1870 Census listing my great-grandfather D. N. McCoy, wife Mary E. and four children, J. H., M. E., John and William. They came via wagon train from Greene County, Missouri along with other relatives and acquaintances. They were farmers and after settling first in Elm Springs Township where other cousins lived, they migrated to Clear Creek, near Greathouse Springs. They grew hay and corn in the bottom land and grapes and strawberries on the higher ground. They also grew apples at Grandview, where the old Grandview Church and Cemetery once stood. This is where I grew up. I remember standing on the front porch and admiring the towers of the University of Arkansas, which my father had attended and dreaming of following in his footsteps some day.

My grandfather was called "Big John" McCoy and he looked even bigger beside his petite wife, the former Emma C. Hewitt, daughter of Lewis and Angeline Hewitt of Elm Springs. The Hewitt Clan had migrated from Tennessee. My grandmother told of coming by covered wagon and of encounters with Indians on the way. I think she was relating stories she had heard her mother tell, because she was born in Arkansas. She was quite a story teller, but she couldn't hold a candle to her younger sister Ellen (Mrs. John Cline). They told how, during the Civil War, the bushwhackers robbed them of their money, horses, meats, canned goods and household belongings. Their father, concerned how he was to feed and clothe his family, saddled up his horse and left his pregnant wife and seven children and went to Texas to earn money to buy winter clothes and food. Upon his return on October 2, 1864 he was greeted by his older children who told him they had a new baby brother. He ran into the house, picked up his week-old son and returned to remove his saddle bags and was shot and killed with his baby in his arms. The thieves then took his horse, saddle bags and money and fled into the woods. Needless to say, the family really had a struggle from that time on. "Big John" and Em, as my grandmother was called, had three children. Myrtle, who was a school-teacher, died at the age of 26; Carl who attended University of Arkansas and Fayetteville Business College, then wound up marrying a "school ma'am", Mae Meade, granddaughter of John and Elizabeth Good of Salem and eventually joined his father in the farming industry. His sister, Helen went to Business College and moved to Muskogee, Oklahoma and eventually to Los Angeles, California where she met and married Earl Kilgore. After a few years, she convinced her parents and "Little Meade", Carl and Mae's oldest boy who had spent most of his life "helping out" at his grandparent's farm, that they should come to California. Meade stayed in California, but Grandpa was not well, so the grandparents returned to Arkansas where he died in 1928.

Carl and Mae, my parents, had five children. Besides Meade, born December 21, 1908, there was Frank, born January 19, 1911, Pauline (me) born December 10, 1912, John Perry (who everyone called J. P.) born March 27, 1915, and Harold born January 8, 1917 and died in infancy. We lived in the country and did all the things country kids do. We attended Stony Point School. My first teacher was Miss Gusie Phillips and Mrs. Frankie Cardwell Reed was my teacher when I graduated from eighth grade. My brother Frank and I went to high school in Johnson where Jeff Banks was the teacher. Sometimes we rode double on horseback and how well I remember one morning the horse was "loping" along and the saddle girth came loose and the saddle turned and came completely off, and with it Frank and me all in a heap. Another time, we hitched "Redwing" to a racing cart and gave him a loose rein. As we approached the gully between Archie Luper and Bennett Maxey's house, right at the bottom of the dip "Redwing" stumbled, the cart flipped and out we flew. We brushed the dirt off ourselves and the horse, righted the cart and continued on to school. My mother (Mae) renewed her teaching credential and went back to the schoolroom for four years. She taught at Stony Point, Salem, Peaceful Valley and Shady Grove. At Salem she taught all eight grades, in the other schools she was principal in two-room schools. In the fall of 1929, we had a public auction and loaded our 1926 touring car with all our belongings and Mother, Dad, three kids and our German Shepherd named "Barry" joined Meade, Grandma and Aunt Helen in California.

Aunt Helen was a public stenographer and Grandma McCoy (Em) was making a good living peddling dressed chickens and eggs door-to-door. Her customers all called her "the poor lady from the chicken farm" while in reality she picked up the dressed chickens at the warehouse and re-sold them. She died in Los Angeles in 1939 and was buried at Mount Comfort.

Aunt Helen (McCoy) Kilgore, then divorced, returned to Arkansas where she worked for Judge Volmer at the Courthouse in Fayetteville for a while, then bought and operated the Elberta Hotel in Gentry for a year or so, then retired in Springdale, where she lived until her death in 1976.

Unable to find employment in the Los Angeles area, our family (Carl, Mae and four kids) moved to Betteravia, a small settlement owned by Union Sugar Company, which had a factory there. Carl and the two older boys, Meade and Frank went to work at Puritan Ice Company in the nearby town of Guadalupe, while J. P. and I attended high school in Santa Maria. Meade and Frank worked in the packing sheds and vegetable fields for several years, then eventually married. Meade and wife, Katherine had two children, James Harvey born 1938 and died 1965 and Janice Carol (Trefts) born 1941. Janice has three children and five grandchildren. Meade died in 1984.

Frank and Benita (Powell) raised four children, Mary, Beverly, Donald and Frances and have twelve grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Frank worked for Union Sugar Company from which he retired in 1973. He died April 25, 1987.

After two years of junior college, I (Pauline) worked for General Telephone Company for thirty-five years, first as an operator, then as a supervisor. I married Albert Domingos in 1940 and we have raised four children — Robert who is a bilingual school teacher with two children Marie and Clay. Carlos (Carl), who owns and operates a muffler shop, is married to Georgeanna, a high school tennis coach; and they are the parents of two boys Tony, age 18 and Paul age 16. Tony is a Freshman in college and Paul is in high school. Gary, our youngest son, after spending two years in the Navy, graduated from San Jose State College and is now an Electrical Engineer in Scotts Valley, California. He is the proud owner of two black and white dogs. Our daughter, Joy Annelle died of cancer in 1965 at the age of 17.

My mother (Mae) died in 1967 at the age of 87 and dad (Carl) after retiring from Union Sugar Company, Betteravia in 1956, died in 1983 at the age of 96. J. P. is retired and he and his wife, the former Ruby Gray live in Laguna Beach, California near their three children Debbie, Linda and John and their three grandchildren.

Samuel Houston "Huce" McCoy

Samuel Houston "Huce" McCoy, son of John Newton and Martha Cox (Delozier) McCoy, was born May 17, 1870, at Robinson, Benton County, Arkansas. In his years of young adulthood he taught school at Wager, Jay Bird, Stoney Point and Brush Creek. On December 23, 1900 he married Flora Ellen Wilson. She was born July 24, 1880 at Benton County, Arkansas, daughter of Will Arch and Charity Angeline "Angie" (Estell) Wilson.

They had two daughters, and while they were small, Huce had a general merchandise store in Elm Springs, and Flora kept boarders. Their two girls were, Violet, born February 26, 1905 at Robinson, Arkansas, who married Elliot Cole and had Frances Sue Talley; and Adene, born February 1, 1915 at Springdale, Arkansas, who married Allen Nelson Hallberg and had Ingred Ann, Richard Allen and Joan Lee. Then tragedy struck the young family. The father died on the younger girl's birthday, February 1, 1916, and he was buried at Elm Springs Cemetery.

Left to raise her girls, Flora traded their farm for the Commercial Hotel in Springdale on Holcomb Street. In 1919 she sold it and built the Southern Hotel on Holcomb Street, which was later called the Alvin Hotel. In 1935 she bought a two story house on Main Street (where the auditorium of The Art Center of The Ozarks now stands), remodeled it again called it the Southern Hotel. She gained a wide reputation for mouth-watering meals served to boarders. Pictures of the hotel and an article about it can be found in the January 12, 1967 issue of Springdale News, before Urban Renewal tore down the landmark structure.

Flora then married widower Henry Bloomfield Rice on February 3, 1918 at Springdale. He was the mayor of Springdale from 1921-22. He and his first wife Nannie Vaughn children were: Bulah, Victor, Gene, H. B., Jr., and Don Rice. Henry died March 2, 1956, at age 82, and was buried at Bluff Cemetery. Flora died March 10, 1967, at age 86, and buried at Elm Springs.

David McCurdy

About 1835, Elizabeth Appleby McCurdy moved with her children and their families to Washington County, Arkansas. One son, John stayed in Williamson County, Tennessee. Some of the Appleby family may have made this move with the McCurdy's. The two families were not only close friends but had inter-family marriages in several generations, which began in Pennsylvania.

Sometime around 1730, the McCurdy family came to the colonies and after a short time settled in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania. John McCurdy, Sr. was born about 1708 in Ireland and died 1761 in Cumberland County. According to the Orphan's Court records, he had twelve children. We have no information on these children except David. David was born about 1728 and in 1752 married Agnes Weakley, who was the daughter of James Weakley and Jane Wilson Weakley of Devonshire, England. David Sr. and Agnes had six children; Agnes who married William Appleby (his second), John 3rd married Elizabeth Groves, James, Mary married John Calvert, David Jr. married Elizabeth Appleby and Janet who married William Hodge. In the years 1787-1791, several families of McCurdys, Applebys, Groves, Hodges and others moved from Cumberland County to Elbert County,, Georgia. Of John McCurdy Sr.'s children, records indicate that only David, Sr. and his children with their families made the move to Georgia. In 1787, Stephen Groves, John McCurdy, Jr. and some neighbors sold their lands in Cumberland County and made the first group movement to Georgia. When they reached South Carolina, they were told about the Creek Indian raids on the frontiers of Georgia. Because of this problem, they stopped in Abbeville County, rented lands, raised a crop and continued their journey in the fall of 1788. They settled in what is now Madison County, Georgia. In 1806, Allen Leeper made a trip to Tennessee and purchased land in what is now Marshall, Maury and Giles Counties. He returned to Georgia with such glowing reports of the area that many of his neighbors and friends joined him in the Duck River area in Tennessee. David McCurdy, Sr. died in 1795 in Elbert County, Georgia, so David McCurdy, Jr. and his family joined the groups who moved to Tennessee. David McCurdy, Jr. was born about 1769 in Cumberland County and married Elizabeth Appleby who was the daughter of William Appleby and Nannie Megehin. David and Elizabeth had ten children; William, James, David, John, Nancy, Samuel, Isabella, Allen and Wilson. David Jr. died in Bedford County, Tennessee in 1834. Shortly after he died, his wife Elizabeth and children moved to Washington County, Arkansas.

During the years since 1850, some descendants remained in Arkansas, but many moved to Greene County, Missouri and various parts of Texas. Of course, as in all families, the McCurdys and Applebys are scattered to many parts of our country. The descendants (over 1500) are too numerous to list them all. Several of the McCurdys and Applebys are buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery near Fayetteville, Arkansas. Among the earliest is Elizabeth Appleby McCurdy (1770-1845), who was the wife of David McCurdy, Jr.

My ancestor, William McCurdy, son of David McCurdy, Jr. and his wife Elizabeth Cheatham McCurdy moved from Washington County to Greene County, Missouri sometime before 1850. They were married 28 December 1814 in Williamson County, Tennessee and had six children. The name of the first child is unknown, then, Phoebe, William Cheatham who married Nancy Tomerlin, Thomas married Nancy Appleby, James married Sarah Appleby, Mary Elizabeth married James Appleby. William and his wife Elizabeth also had guardianship of David Appleby McCurdy who was born 1834 in Arkansas and he was married to Hulda Jane Gregory. Unsupported facts indicate that David was the son of William's brother Allen. No record can be found for Allen and his wife Elizabeth.

William Cheatham and his wife Nancy Elvira Tomerlin moved to Greene County between 1851-1854. William and Nancy had eight children; Sarah, Mary, William Alexander, Ann, David, Martha, James and Elizabeth. No information is available on these children except William Alexander who was born in 1847 in Washington County, Arkansas. William married Sarah Jane Mitchell in 1866 and had eight children; Edward, Margaret, John, Charles, Clara, Mary, William and James. Edward, who was born in 1867, married Ellen Adkins and they had eleven children. Of the eleven children, only William Edward had children. William married Almeda Jane Perry in May, 1922 and they had two children; Patricia Jean born in Oklahoma and Margaret Mignon born 1932 in Oklahoma. Margaret married John Millin and they had three children, Patricia Anne, born 1955 in Missouri, John, born 1960 in Ohio and Michael born 1961 in Pennsylvania. Patricia Anne married Jack Barker and they have one daughter, Sarah Elizabeth born 1982 in Oklahoma. As of the writing, Margaret Mignon and her husband John Millin are living in Columbia, South Carolina where he is a doctor in the Army based at Fort Jackson. Patricia, Jack and Sarah Elizabeth are living in Somerset, New Jersey, son John is living in Dallas, Texas, and son Michael is graduating from medical school in May of 1987 and has not determined where he will live. The other daughter of William and Almeda is retired from American Airlines and living in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

James Donald McCurdy

Almost all of his ancestors were closely inter-related as far back as the 1700s when they settled in Pennsylvania after immigrating from Northern Ireland. The McCurdys descended from a Scottish Clan that occupied the Islands of Arran and Bute just off the coast of Scotland since the 1300s. The first documentation of the family name was on August 16, 1506, when King James IV granted title to lands on the Isle of Bute to the Clan.

James Donald McCurdy and wife, Judy Ann Kifer, after their marriage in 1853.

Almost all of the family was killed in the religious wars that King James I waged against the Presbyterians who refused to convert to Catholicism. In November of 1666, King James sent the Royal Army against the Clan on Bute Isle and almost all of the Clan was killed except five brothers who stole an open row boat and, without provisions, headed for Northern Ireland. Four of them survived the cold windy crossing and landed in County Antrim where they settled and at least two of them married and started families. One came to America shortly after they arrived in Ireland but there is no record of his descendents. All of the McCurdys in America are descendents of these brothers.

The Washington County McCurdys descended from a John McCurdy through his son, David, and his grandson, David, Jr., who was born in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania ca. 1769 and married Elizabeth Appleby, daughter of William Appleby, August 25, 1789. David, Jr.'s will, probated in Williamson County, Tennessee in 1834 leaves property to his wife, Elizabeth and his children: William, James, John, Samuel, Allen, Wilson, David II, Mary Dryden and Ibby W. Brewer. All of these beneficiaries except John and perhaps the daughters moved to Washington County and settled in Prairie Township in 1836 and most are buried in Old Mount Comfort Cemetery.

On the plaque at Old Mt. Comfort, in addition to listing the Applebys as Pioneer families, it states that a McCurdy was one of the first four Confederate soldiers from the county to die in the Civil War at Wilsons' Creek. Others recorded as serving in the Confederate Army were James D., 34th Arkansas Infantry and William (Will) McCurdy, a son of Samuel, who later moved to Crawford County Arkansas served in the 8th Arkansas Regiment.

When she was in her 80s, Mary Jane, oldest daughter of James Donald, dictated a narrative of her life and of her parents and grandparents to a daughter-in-law describing the family's move from Tennessee, the lifestyle as early pioneers and relates in vivid detail the devastation inflicted on the area by the "Feds", the suffering of the civilians and the aftermath of the battle of Prairie Grove which was fought a short distance from their farm.

William (Will) Appleby, the father of Elizabeth, was born in England, ca. 1742, married Nannie McKeehan ca. 1765 and at least two of their children were born there. They settled in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania in 1771 where Will served in the Revolutionary War. The children of his first marriage were: William, Jr., Elizabeth, Grace, Jean, John, and James.

After Nannie's death in 1780 in Pennsylvania. Will married Nancy Agnes McCurdy, daughter of David McCurdy, Sr., on February 7, 1787 and from this marriage two children were born, David and Samuel.

This was the first of many marriages between these two families. Two of Wills' daughters, Elizabeth and Grace, married brothers of Will's wife Nancy - Elizabeth married David McCurdy, Jr. and Grace married James McCurdy. Nancy, therefore, was not only the sister of Elizabeth and Grace, she was also their step mother-in-law. Among the Applebys who also moved to Arkansas with the McCurdys was Andrew Appleby who married Susanna Kifer, Joseph Appleby and H. Appleby.

Martin Kifer, born 1812 in Sevier County, Tennessee was a son of Jacob Kifer whose father was from Wintenberger, Germany, and Susan Welty whose father, John Welty, was from Bren, Switzerland. Martin married Rachael Clabo in Tennessee and most of their twelve children were born there. Their oldest daughter, Judith (Judy) Ann was born 11/2/1831 and married James Donald McCurdy 10/12/1854 in Fayetteville. Martins' wife, Rachael, died in Prairie Township in 1863 at the age of 52 and avoided most of the suffering her family endured during the Civil War. Martin died and was buried at Bowie, Texas, in 1897.

James Donald McCurdy, son of Allen McCurdy and Elizabeth Herrin, was born in Williamson County, Tennessee, 11/2/1831 and became an orphan at the age of four and was raised by his uncle Wilson McCurdy and died in Prairie Township, where he was a farmer, at the age of 44 as a result of the CSA leaving his wife, Judy, with eight children; Mary Jane b. 1855, Martin b. 1857, David b. 1859, Thomas William b. 1861, Lee Ann b. 1863, Charles b. 1867, Jacob Rufus (Rufe) b. 2/15/1869 and James D., Jr. b. 1875 - the same year his father James D. died. Judy was a very devout and an exceptionally determined woman. After her husband's death she moved with her children (the oldest of whom was Martin age 18) to a farm in Denton County, Texas, later bought her own farm and raised all of her children there. When she was 91 years old she had an eye removed at home and lived two active years afterward.

Most of the McCurdys and some of the Applebys moved to Texas but the oldest son of David, Jr. and Elizabeth Appleby, William, with some of the Applebys moved to Greene County, Missouri.

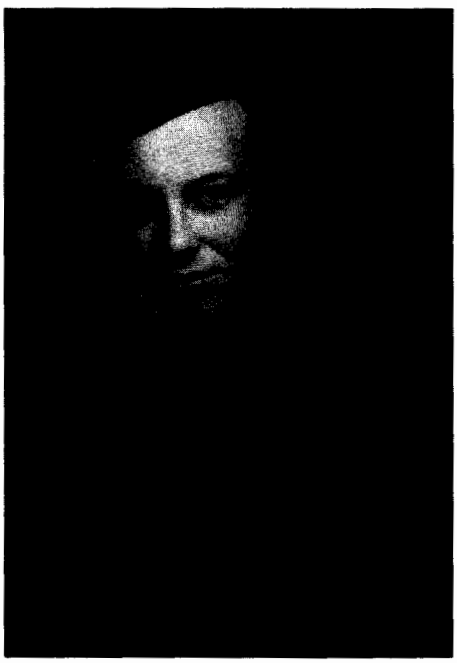
T/Sgt. James (Jimmy) E. McCurdy

Jimmy descended from the McCurdy's of Washington County through both of his grandparents, Jacob R. McCurdy and Willa Stella McCurdy who were second cousins. Jacob R. was born 2/15/1869 in Washington County, the seventh oldest child of James D. McCurdy and his wife, Judith (Judy) Ann Kifer.



T/Sgt. James (Jimmy) E. McCurdy, US Army Air Corp.

Stella McCurdy was born 1/15/1876 in Arkansas, the first born child of William (Will) McCurdy and Annie Bledsoe. Will was born in Arkansas, the third oldest child of Samuel McCurdy a brother of James D.'s father, James.

His grandparents, Jacob R. and Stella were married in Denton County, Texas, where both families had moved to after the Civil War and his parents, Clarence E. b. 11/30/1894 in Denton County, and mother, Bernice Exum, b. 12/6/1896 in Bell County were married 7/4/1917 in Wheeler County.

He was born 12/19/1919, graduated from Amarillo High School as a member of the National Honor Society and was attending Amarillo College when he entered the Army Air Corp in 1942. He graduated from the Spartan School of Aeronautics at Tulsa, Oklahoma, completed Gunnery School and Combat Crew School at Biggs Field, Texas, and was assigned to the 351st Bomb Group as an Engineer-Gunner.

His crew went to England in April of 1943 and began flying combat missions on B-17s over Germany with the 8th A/F. On July 30 after completing a mission to Kassel, Germany, while returning to England the plane lost an engine and, as stated in the November issue of Air Force Magazine, became a straggler and a target for enemy fighters which destroyed the hydraulic system, the electrical system, shot out the remaining three engines one by one after the original damaged engine had been restored to partial operation.

Jimmy was mortally wounded and three others severly wounded but they destroyed three enemy fighters, one of which was shot down by Jimmy after receiving his mortal wound. The crippled B-17 made it to England with the one remaining damaged engine and crash landed at an Air Field under construction but Jimmy died the following day from his wounds.

He was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the second highest decoration for military action. The citation states: "T/Sgt. Jimmy E. McCurdy, 34149971, Air Corp, Army of the United States, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism while serving as an Engineer-Gunner on a bombing mission over continental Europe, 30 July 1943. The airplane on which St. McCurdy was serving was knocked out of formation by enemy fighters, thereby becoming the target of concentrated attacks. During the air battle which followed, Sgt. McCurdy was mortally wounded by an exploding cannon shell. Despite great pain and with complete disregard for his personal safety, this airman stuck to his guns and fought the enemy until he collapsed. The extraordinary heroism in the face of death, coolness and skill displayed by Sgt. McCurdy reflect the highest credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States.

As a memorial to T/Sgt. McCurdy the Air Force named the Base Headquarters Building at Amarillo Air Base after him. In 1987, Sgt. McCurdy was selected as a Centennial Celebrity for the Panhandle of Texas. His body was returned home and is buried with his parents and grandparents in Llano Cemetery at Amarillo, Texas. His younger brother, S/Sgt. J. R. McCurdy b. 12/10/21 was also an Engineer Gunner flying on A-20 Attack aircraft in the Pacific Theatre with the 3rd Attack Group of the 5th A/F.

James (Jimmy) E. McCurdy b. 12/1/1950 and Ann B. Marrow b. 10/16/61, the children of J. R. are sixth generationTexans and live in Dallas which is less tha fifty miles from where the families settled after moving from Washington County, Arkansas, in 1876.

Wilson McCurdy

Wilson Appleby McCurdy, son of David McCurdy and Elizabeth Appleby, was born about 1816 in Tennessee. After David died the family moved to Washington County, Arkansas. Wilson and his wife, Rhoda Elvira Tomberlin McCurdy, were living there at Prairie Township at the time of the 1850 census with children; William 6, Mary 4, and Franklin 2.

In the 1860 census Wilson, called William, was living at Ada, Mountain Township with his wife, Rhoda and children; William 16, Mary 13, Franklin 12, James 10, John 8, Robert 7, Nancy 6, and Samuel 10 months. It is thought that Wilson and Rhoda moved to Llano County, Texas, after the Civil War.

William, son of Wilson and Rhoda, married Mahala Fowler in 1869 and they spent their last days in Texas. Their children were Baxter born 1870 at Arkansas, Charley born 1873 at Arkansas, Walter born 1875 at Texas and Minnie born 1878 at Texas.

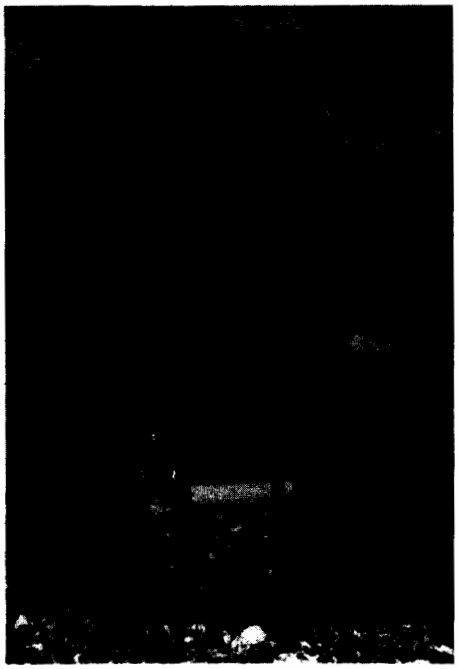
William McDonald

William and Rebecca McDonald came to Washington County, Arkansas from Barourville, Knox County, Kentucky in the 1800s. They had nine children, five sons and four daughters. They were Gillis, Abner, Prichard, William, Jim, Dora, Rachel, Susan, and Katherine.



Rev. William McDonald and his wife, Rebecca McDonald.

The McDonald's homesteaded land and built homes. Rock was chiseled for the foundation and chimneys. Logs hewn and hauled from trees cut to clear the land were used to build the home. The roof was covered with reved shingles, lumber was sawed at Caudles's sawmill on Lee Creek to floor it. Water came from dug wells. Food was grown on the cleared land to feed the large family. The children learned to work at an early age.

Jim followed his father by becoming a minister. He and Nancy Smith McDonald raised 10 children, seven sons and three daughters. Henry McDonald was one of the seven sons. He was my father.

Jim (my grandfather) passed away before I was born, but I have good memories of watching my grandmother, Nancy, carding and spinning wool with which she knitted socks and things.

Living near my grandmother's home, I was privileged to see her live a long and active life.

As the oldest son of Jim and Nancy McDonald, my father had more work to do and was responsible for helping to make the living. He married my mother, Martha Cau in 1893.

To this union six girls and one boy were born: Maud, Mae, Minnie, Louella, Lillian, Ida, and Jim.

Living on a farm, we were just about self-sustaining. We raised all the food we needed. My father owned a steam engine and grain separator that he used to thresh grain in the summer. He had a sawmill also, that was run by the steam engine. Weather permitting, he'd saw lumber for neighbors and others in the community all winter long. When it was too cold, he'd sit in front of the fireplace and make axe handles by hand. He'd get 25 cents for each axe handle. He also half-soled shoes for extra money.

George McGarrah

This is a brief recounting of McGarrah family history as told to me, Ruth Morris, by my maternal grandmother, Elizabeth McGarrah Reed, born in Fayetteville, March 9, 1843, third child of William McGarrah and wife, Sarah Elizabeth Wolfe McGarrah, and granddaughter of George McGarrah and wife.

McGarrah's were Scottish - Date unknown, they sailed from native Scotland to Nova Scotia, where they remained for a time. Not content, they chanced passage on a ship sailing for Charleston, South Carolina, America. We know a son, William McGarrah was born January 1, 1790 to George McGarrah and wife, in Charleston. It was in Carolina they met and decided to join company with the two Simpsons, Shannon and Alexander families for the journey westward. These families and their belongings, loaded onto a flatboat, came down the Tennesse River into the Ohio, down the Mississippi to the Arkansas, where they were towed up the Arkansas to Phillips Landing (Van Buren).

From Phillips Landing, they traveled north into Lovely Territory. Not aware they were trespassing on Indian rights. (Near the Arkansas-Oklahoma line.) In the area that became Vineyard, they chose to settle. Claimed land by possession. . .planted corn. . .attempted permanent settlement. In August, 1826, a company of U. S. soldiers from Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, were sent to order them off as they were considered trespassers. Soldiers cut down the green corn with their swords. After the soldiers left, families shocked the cut corn and considered where to resettle.

After their long travel together, families decided to choose different directions. Alexanders to (Greenland), Shannon (southwest of Lincoln), Simpson (Vineyard-Evansville) McGarrah's going northeasterly, settled at site of the big spring McGarrah's Spring, Spring Street, Fayetteville). Here they claimed rich land and marvelous timber. Wild game in abundance. . .even buffalo and elk. Bear and elk were many, as late as the late 1850s. (Grandmother and slave, Caroline, had an encounter with a bear in a blackberry thicket) near the big spring.

Log cabins were built. McGarrah's were skilled in blacksmithing. . .opened a shop. It was in McGarrah's blacksmith shop, on a Sabbath afternoon in 1830, a handful, faithful to Cumberland Presbyterian belief, assembled and organized a church. Among those who signed the charter covenant were, Mr. and Mrs. George McGarrah and sons, John, James and William. Members worshiped in the blacksmith shop for one season, then in homes of members, among them James McGarrah.

First court sessions - March and July 1829, held in McGarrah cabins. First expenditure of first Circuit Court, $8.00 to John McGarrah. William McGarrah opened a store at present site of the Hilton Hotel. (Store key, walnut yardstick used to measure bolt goods, and tailor's walnut pressboard are still in family possession). April 11, 1836, Judge J. M. Hoge directed the court clerk to "pen to William McGarrah and Mathew Hubbard a dram shop license" for a twelve month period to retail spiritious liquors in Fayetteville, upon sheriff's receipt of $20.00. William prospered, became a slaveholder. Was commissioned First Lieutenant, First Regiment, Arkansas Territorial Militia, May 5, 1830. His company was mustered out when the Cherokees were brought through. William deeded ten acres for site of Arkansas College/Christian Church. (Corner of College and Dickson.) In July, 1858, he sold John Butterfield land for the Overland Mail Station, (now courthouse site). William sent Sarah and Elizabeth to private schools, supported church and education.

Civil War upheaval was to cost William his life. Bushwhackers raided his home. They tortured him to reveal money. Enraged because he had none, they hung him from a tree in his yard and left him to die. When bushwhackers left, wife and slaves rushed to save him. He survived this cruel experience, but was never "right" again. He had hung too long and suffered brain damage. . .an invalid. He died May 3, 1864. A sad ending for a man who had been kind to man. . .white or black.

William and Sarah were survived by their children; Sarah, Mathew, Elizabeth, James Sutton and Mary Jane. Their grandchildren were borne by daughters, Sarah (Mrs. Thomas Williams), and Elizabeth (Mrs. A. W. Reed).

Elizabeth's children were Robert Wakefield, John Albert, William Martin, Jerdon Carter, Mary Elizabeth (Mrs. H. R. Hope), Emma Josephine (Mrs. E. L. Morris) and Miss Rachel Augustine Reed.

Mathew McGarrah fought for the Confederacy, survived the battle of Prairie Grove and the Civil War, to meet an untimely death at 38, when kicked in the head by a horse he was attempting to shoe.

James Sutton McGarrah married Mary Irvin. Farmed near Harris Switch. Died June 8, 1911 without issue. Mary Jane (Mrs. Robert "Texas Bob" Reed) died in childbirth, without issue.

The gold rush of 1849 had lured Colonel John McGarrah (commissioned August 13, 1832 - Arkansas Territorial Militia), and brother James to California. James vanished. . .no information as to his fate. John tired of California. . .resettled in Texas to live out his life.

William McGarrah was only son of George McGarrah and wife to have issue. Death of James Sutton left none of McGarrah name. Descendants of "Aunt Sallie" Williams and Elizabeth Reed represent this pioneer family in Washington County, one hundred and sixty-one years from the beginning in 1826.

John F. (Jack) McGarrah

John F. (Jack) McGarrah was born March 8, 1805 on Caney Fork, Tennessee. Jack and his twin brother George McGarrah, Jr. were the sons of Colonel George McGarrah, Sr. Soon after the twins were born, the family moved to Missouri. In 1820 John F. (Jack) McGarrah married Mary Pauline (Polly) Graham in Missouri. Polly was born 1804, in Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas. Tradition has it that Polly was one-fourth Cherokee Indian. Polly's mother and father, Elijah and Sarah Graham moved from Green County, Kentucky in 1811 to settle in Washington County, Arkansas. The story of their lives is written in this book.

Jack and Polly McGarrah could neither read nor write, but each had great natural abilities. The uniqueness of these brave pioneers is found throughout the story of their lives. In 1823, Jack and his brothers George and William, moved from Missouri to Fayetteville which in those days still a young pioneer town and beginning to grow. That same year, Fayetteville was named the County Seat of Washington County, and the brothers helped to build most of the public buildings there. Jack was a man of vision, and well liked among the men of the community. His keen interest in politics led to his being elected to serve two terms as Representative to the Second and Third Arkansas General Assemblies 1838-1840.

August 13, 1832, Jack McGarrah served as a Colonel in the 2nd Regiment of the State Militia Cavalry, Crawford County, Arkansas. In 1842, Jack sold land in Sec. 12-T18N-R30W in Benton County, and the family moved to Texas where he established a Trading Post at Buckner, three miles northwest of McKinney.

On April 3, 1846 an Act of the Texas Legislature created Collin County, and Buckner was chosen as the County Seat. Jack was Buckner's first Postmaster (November 25, 1846 until June 10, 1847), and donated 50 acres of land to be used for the town's public use. He was also the first Representative elected from Collin County to the Texas State Legislature.

In February of 1843, Jack McGarrah and his friends, J. H. Wilcox, David Helms, Joe Harlan, Blankenship and Rice were putting up logs for the Trading Post, when Dr. Calder from the new settlement of Cedar Springs (now Dallas) rode by. He asked if there were any hostile Indians in the area. They assured him they had seen none. He had scarcely ridden 200 yards, when he was ambushed by two Indians who dragged him out of sight behind a group of trees. Then sixty more Indians came riding out of the woods with bows and arrows and attacked the men building the Trading Post. When daylight came, eleven men rode out to rescue Dr. Calder. The Indians set fire to the prairie in an effort to stop them, but the men were able to get through. They found Dr. Calder in the woods. He had been scalped. They brought his body back to camp where they buried him. McGarrah bravely stayed on for the next five years at the settlement under the constant threat of another Indian attack.

In 1848, it was determined that Buckner was not the geographical center of the county. That spelled the end of that historical old settlement. The Courthouse and the Post Office were moved by ox teams across the open prairie to the present site of McKinney, and Buckner reverted to agricultural land uses. Today a new community is growing where Buckner once stood. A Texas Historical Marker has been placed three miles west of McKinney on State Highway 380 honoring Jack and Polly McGarrah as early pioneers.

In 1848, gold was discovered in California. In 1849, companies of men were gathering at Johnston Station (now Arlington), and the new Fort (Fort Worth) to begin the trek to the California gold fields. Jack once again showed himself to be a man of vision, an opportunist, and a man of great dreams. He was forty-six years old, and the father of a large nearly grown family, when he followed the lure of California gold. In 1850, he and Tola Daingerfield Dunn (Tola was Jack's son-in-law), Thomas McDonald, George Washington (Wash) Ford, and other neighbors and friends joined a caravan of one-hundred fifty men gathered at Fort Worth and began the slow overland trip to California. Descriptions of these groups of Argonauts tell that each man usually had a couple of pack mules as well as their saddle horses, and trailed at least one beef for food.

This is the story of their journey as told by Wash Ford. The route went through Comanche country to El Paso, passed through Apache land and the deserts of the southwest. The caravan lost all its animals in raids by the plains Indians. The group was almost without food for six days. On one occasion when starvation threatened, a Mexican horse was killed and eaten. After seven months on the trail, suffering the scorching heat of the desert, the freezing cold of the mountains, lack of food, sickness, and constant threat of Indian attacks, only half of the men reached California.

The Collin County men went to Sonora, Tuolumne County, California, in the Sierra Nevada Mountains east of San Francisco. Sonora was known as "The Queen of the Southern Mines", the site of a big bonanza often called the "Richest Single Pocket Mine Ever Discovered in California". Jack McGarrah died of a fever around 1852 at Sonora, California. Daingerfield, McDonald and Ford decided to return to their homes and families in Texas. Remembering the hardships of the overland route, and being successful enough, it was decided to make the return by ship. They sailed from San Francisco in 1853, and after touching port at Acapulco, cholera broke out aboard the crowded ship. About two hundred died and were buried at sea. Mr. Ford said it was through fear and trembling that he reached Panama, and crossed the Isthmus by foot. They then boarded another ship bound for New Orleans. Tola Dunn contacted Yellow Fever and died in Alexandria, Louisiana, unable to reach his home in Texas. Wash Ford and Thomas McDonald returned to Collin County to tell the story. Whether or not they brought back any California gold remains a mystery. Mary Pauline (Polly) Graham McGarrah died in 1887 and is buried at the McLarry Cemetery, three miles north of McKinney, Collin County, Texas.

Jack and Polly had ten children. The first two were born in Missouri: (1) Elizabeth McGarrah, born September 15, 1821, married James Herndon in Arkansas had twelve children: Mary Elizabeth Herndon, married Alexander M. Ingram; John McGarrah Herndon, 1st married Lafayette Atkinson, second marriage to Ella Chastain; George Henry Herndon, married Lucy Frances McDonald; Joshua Dillingham Herndon, married Catherine Telitha Jenkins; Virginia Herndon, married Evan Faris; James Herndon, Jr., married Diantha Thompson; Walter Leslie (Tobe) Herndon, married Mary Montgomery; Ell Nora Herndon, married John Charles Montgomery; Harrison Jamison Herndon, never married and three infants deceased. (2) Male died young, born 1822, living in 1840 Arkansas census.

They had one daughter: Emeritt Jones, born 1860 in Collin County, Texas (4) Cynthia Ann McGarrah, born September 10, 1827, married George Henry Herndon, Jr. The story of their lives is written in this book. (5) Jane C. McGarrah, born 1828, died 1829. (6) Eliza Jane McGarrah, born 1831, married November 11, 1847 in Buckner, Texas to Dr. Gerard Alexander Foote, a pioneer physician. He served as a surgeon in the Texas Rangers. Eliza Jane and Gerald had six children: Laurence A. Foote; Henry S. Foote; Edwin Foote; Ludwell A. Foote; Mary E. Foote, married R. H. William "Bill" McGarrah

In 1912, William moved with his folks from Idaho to Devils Den area in Arkansas to cut timber ties for the railroad. He would load his wagon at night and leave early the next morning for Winslow. He was paid 1.50 per tie.

In 1918, he moved to Rogers, Arkansas and started to work for Coin Harvey at Monte Ne. He helped build the railroad from Rogers to Little Piney. If you look, you can still see where the railroad went through the bluff at Monte Ne.

He hauled the mussel shells that were used in the building of the fireplace in hotels. He also turned concrete by hand to earn ten cents an hour. He kept records and placed them into Mr. Harvey's tomb for future generations and stored a Model T Ford in the cave that was sealed up by Beaver Lake engineers.

Mr. Harvey built two log hotels that were the largest in the world, at that time. They were called Row Hotels. One was Missouri Row and one was Oklahoma Row. A lot of famous people entertained there: The George Ell Girls and fiddlers. Pless Matthews famous jig dancers would be there to shake bones and wait for spectators to pitch coins to them.

Blanch May Leas McGowan

Blanch's husband Cyrus died in 1957. When the last child left home, Blanch moved in with her daughter Ruby's family in Lowell, Arkansas. They soon bought a house in Springdale, Arkansas and moved into it on August 3, 1960.

Blanch took care of her granddaughter, did the housework, took care of neighbor kids before and after school for working parents.

In 1962, Blanch bought a trailer house. They set it up in the back yard for her. Now she again had a home of her own.

Blanch loved to walk. Until the age of 74 she walked to town with her grocery cart. She'd shop, go to the library and to the beauty parlor. Her one "splurge" in life was having her hair done. She'd return from her walk with a full cart. This kept her healthy and happy.

The grocery cart took the place of the "little red wagon." It was a portable, lightweight fold-up cart with two wheels. Made of aluminum, it had a deep wire basket, a shelf beneath and a long continuous handle and could be pushed as easily as a baby buggy.

Blanch May Leas (38) and Cyrus Erwin McGowan (43). Sulphur Springs, Arkansas, Dickey Heights. Mom in her sweet heart apron with a paring knife in her hand. Summer 1941.

Every summer, Blanch would go visit her children who lived all over the United States. She had little chance to travel while her own family was growing up. She was at home raising 14 children without even having a family car.

Now she traveled by Greyhound Bus and rejoiced in seeing things she'd only read or heard about. What a thrill for her to visit the United States Capital, to sit in on a Senate session and to see the Changing of the Guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

A lifelong ambition was fulfilled when she visited the place where her great-grandfather Gordon fought for the Iowa North in the Civil War—Gettysburg.

On the west coast Blanch felt the ground move, her first earthquake. The powerful Redwood Forest impressed her with its size and beauty. She visited the U. S. S. Osterhaus De 164, the ship on which her son served during WWII. She was awed and delighted with history and beauty from all over the United States. The birthplace of Abraham Lincoln held special meaning for her as did her own place of birth in Northboro, Iowa.

Blanch kept busy cutting out patterns wherever she visited. There were always new babies needing diaper shirts or grandchildren needing pants or play clothes. She was always available for birthings or operations as members of her family needed her.

Quilt pieces and books traveled with Blanch, too, and there was a handmade quilt for each child and grandchild. Some members received a baby quilt at birth and a full size quilt later.

She was well known for the quilts she made from material saved from worn out overalls, tied or tacked. Her picture appeared with an article about her hand-made quilts in the Springdale News in 1976. She pieced quilt tops until arthritis forced her to stop.

When this happened, she could hardly hold a pen and was forced to give up another pastime, letter writing. Her letters had been a much awaited joy for many who depended on her for family news and a word of comfort.

During her lifetime, cars, planes, moon walks, radars, electricity, indoor plumbing, telephones, air conditioning, television, paved roads and additional states had been added to the Union. She had watched the burden of housework lightened by modern conveniences she'd never dreamed of in her youth.

Today, 10 of Blanch's 14 children are living. All were raised in Sulphur Springs. She has 25 grandchildren, 31 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.

Blanch still reads, watches birds, rabbits, squirrels and the neighborhood cats and dogs. She still loves her flowers and the Ozark Hills of Arkansas.

In 1978, after respiratory failure, diabetes was found. In 1984, a hysterectomy and cancer (her first surgery, at 81) and in 1986 a broken left hip. She's more steady now, on her feet, than before but still walks with the help of a cane.

We are blessed, for she is a joy to still have with us. The Lord has been very good to the McGowan family. (Please see McGowan Story in Benton County History Book.)

Leon Lomax McKeehan

Leon Lomax McKeehan from Texarkana, Arkansas (son of James W. and Pearl Lomax McKeehan), and Lillian Grettelle Durham from Ringgold, Louisiana (daughter of John Pinckney and Minnie Estes Durham), were married August 22, 1925 in Springhill, Louisiana. She, a graduate of Louisiana College, taught Home Economics, and he, a self taught accountant, worked for the railroad.

A son, Maclyn, was born to them August 29, 1926. A trip to northwest Arkansas persuaded them to settle in Fayetteville in 1927. Fortunately, Leon secured the position of Chief Accountant at the University of Arkansas. They became lifetime active members of First Baptist Church of Fayetteville. That December 18, their first daughter, Mateel was born, and the next year they bought a house on Ozark Avenue, where I, their second daughter, Marleen, was born June 4, 1931.

A dramatic change came in 1934 when we bought a 20-acre farm on Goshen Road (now Highway 45 East) bordering Oakland Road. This has now come to be known as McKeehan's Corner Road. The farm, covered with apples, grapes and strawberries, gave us fruit to eat, sell, and trade in those depression years. Through my childhood we ate a diet so weighted with grapes and apples, that I was forty before I'd actually select any dish containing these. There was one benefit; however, we traded fruit for subscriptions to a dozen magazines in the mid-thirties which ran clear into the sixties.

The children began school at the University Training School, then transferred to country schools; Maclyn and Mateel to Son's Chapel, and I to Braden School. We then went to University High School (which was closed about 1960).

My father had lost a leg at 16 in a train accident, so he continued to work at the University during World War II, up to 12 hours a day, adding to his own job, those of Business Manager, Purchasing Agent, and Comptroller. At the war's end, rather than return to his former position and salary, he resigned, and worked two years for the U. S. Government inventing uses for war surplus.

In 1947, my parents created McKeehan's Fabric Center, the first store of its kind anywhere. Located at 18 East Center, it offered in one facility, every item one could need for sewing and other needlework, plus a sewing room with cutting tables, metered sewing machines, and even an instructor to assist or sew for you. Women's Wear Daily, the 'Bible' of the clothing industry, had a feature on this unique store which was later condensed in Vogue, and again in Reader's Digest. The sewing "boom", and quality products spelled the store's success until my parents retired in 1965.

From the time they moved to this county, my parents worked for its betterment. My father labored almost single-handedly to get electricity, and later natural gas to the rural areas, and persisted until he saw Highway 45 paved through to Huntsville. Througout life, Leon had many inventions to his credit, such as automobile turn signals.

Leon died February 5, 1975 at 81; and Lillian, May 15, 1987 at 82 in Fayetteville. They are buried in Son's Chapel Cemetery. Both live on in their accomplishments, their friends, and their family. All three of their children received Bachelor's degrees from the University of Arkansas. Maclyn went on to receive his Doctorate in Nuclear Physics at M. I. T. in 1951 at age 25, then worked on the "H" Bomb, and helped design the first nuclear powered submarine. "Nautilus". December 24, 1955 he married Georgette Deignault from Vermont and they had two children, Grant and Michelle, who live in Boston, Massachusetts. Mac, 31, died of brain tumor August 6, 1958.

Mateel went to Dallas to work after college, where she met and married lawyer William Howard Gray of Huntington, West Virginia in 1950. They have three sons: Scott of Phoenix, Arizona; Kirk of Austin, Texas; and Brent, also of Phoenix, Arizona. They have one grandson.

After getting a B. S. in Zoology, I attended Southern Baptist Theological Seminary one year in Louisville, then went to Texas Women's University in Denton, Texas to get my Occupational Therapy Degree. While doing my clinical training, I met Clare Venema, a student at the University of Michigan Dental School in Ann Arbor. We were married on August 31, 1956 in Fayetteville, returning here in 1961. We have five children, Chris, Craig, Karen, Kathryn and Kimberly. We have a granddaughter, Sarah Crettelle Hunter. See History of Dr. Clare Venema, and Marleen McKeehan Venema; this document.

George McKinney

George Fredrick McKinney (1887-1962), youngest son of Sarah Frances Webb and George Franklin McKinney, a native of Belfount (Boone County) Arkansas and Lillie Mae Staten McKinney (1895-1977), only daughter of Jessie Buchanan and Rufus Staten, of Ponitac, Mississippi, moved to Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas with their 11 year old son, Bobby, in 1939.

George McKinney had been in the insurance business in Harrison, Arkansas in 1932 and traveled the state from 1935 to 1939 for The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York as an agent and field man.

Lillie Mae and George established the McKinney Insurance Agency on the second floor of the old McIlroy Bank Building (north side of the square) on July 5, 1939. Lillie Mae was the first secretary and the first policy issued was insuring a car owned by Phillips Motor Company, the Chrysler/Plymouth dealer in Fayetteville.

The McKinneys lived on East Lafayette at the time, across from St. Joseph's Catholic Church, and Bobby went to Washington Grammar School, and Fayetteville High School. He became the unofficial "head of the household" when George entered World War II as a "recalled" Captain of the Coast Artillery.

Lillie Mae continued the business until the spring of 1945 when George came home. Lillie Mae remained active professionally, being a member of Altrusa Club. She was a Board Member of Arkansas State Teachers College in Conway (now U. C. A.), and also was appointed to the War Manpower Board from Arkansas during the Korean Conflict.

The two senior McKinneys left a heritage of family commitment, a strong protestant work ethic and community service.

Bob McKinney attended Fayetteville High School where he was a cheerleader, vice-president of the senior class and a member of the National Honor Society. He attended Boys State and was elected a representative. In 1946, he was an orationical champion from Fayetteville High and as Northwest Arkansas representive, placed second in the state contest. Bob attended the University of Arkansas and graduated in 1952. He was selected for Who's Who on the U. of A. Campus and was a distinguished military graduate of R. O. T. C.

During his high school years Bob dated a lovely blond girl whom he had met in the third grade in Little Rock. Julia Ann Paisley, only daughter of Jewel Clinton Blackwell who was born in Nocona, Texas in 1898 - child of Julia Agusta Clinton and James Sandy Blackwell of Dardanelle, Arkansas - and Thomas Paisley, born in 1894 in Auverne, Arkansas - only son of Loula E. Rankin and Drury Lacy Paisley. Julia Ann grew up in Little Rock, graduated from Little Rock Central High in 1946, Southern Seminary and Junior College, Buena Vista, Virginia; in 1948, and the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville in 1950. Bob and Julia Ann were married in Trinty Cathedral in Little Rock on June 16, 1951.

Of this union, four children were born. George Thomas, born at Fort Benning, Georgia, December 6, 1952; John Robert born at Army-Navy Hospital in Hot Springs, Arkansas March 3, 1954; Richard Paisley born in Honolulu, T. H. (now State of Hawaii) June 22, 1956 and Mary Jane born in Fayetteville, Arkansas February 10, 1964.

At the time of this writing, Tom is in Graduate School at the University of Arkansas. He married Vickie Lee Hileman on October 25, 1986 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. John married Cynthia Ann Rea in Temple, Texas on December 31, 1983 and they are living in Pottstown, Pennsylvania. Rick married LaNita Carol Terry in Fayetteville on June 26, 1982 and they have one daughter, Paisley Anne, born August 29, 1987. Janie has graduated from the University of Arkansas with a B. S. in Earth Science. David Joshua was born to Cindy and John on October 24, 1987 and Vicki and Tom are expecting a baby in October, 1988.

Tom, John, Rick and Janie have all been an important part of the McKinney agency, working summers and while they were in school. We are very proud that Rick is a partner in the Agency and his wife, LaNita is the office manager. They are the perpetuity of the Agency. The McKinney's will follow a rich tradition in helping build northwest Arkansas, following George and Lillie Mae McKinneys lead in contributing to civic pride and growth. The family continues to serve the area in community and business-professional service. There's no doubt that the younger members of the clan will carry the standard into the next generations.

Lewis McMillan

The McMillans (McMillens), a family of Scotch-Irish origin, first settled in Arkansas in the early 1800s. Lewis McMillen, son of the Illinois pioneer, Hugh McMillen, moved with his wife Charlotta (Joy) McMillen to Arkansas to settle near Fayetteville. Prior to 1822, they moved back to Illinois where Lewis died, leaving Charlotta a widow with five children to raise: Hugh, Polly, Comfort Allen, Perminde, and Lewis.

Charlotta stayed in Illinois until 1834, when she returned to Arkansas with her children. On June 11, 1836, she received a U. S. land grant in Washington County, Arkansas, in Section 29, Twp 16N, Range 29W.

Her oldest son, Hugh, born 1815, married and he and his wife, Hannah, lived in nearby Madison County, Arkansas, for a while and later moved to Neosho, Missouri, where he made his living as a merchant. They raised seven children; Mary, Andrew, John, Martha (Kammenzind), Louis Allen (m. Sarah Murrin), Nancy, and Kesler Lawson.

Polly (Mary) McMillen, born 1816, was Charlotta's oldest daughter. She married Tom Moulden and they raised four children; James Liburn (m. Susan Murphy and later became the Sheriff of Collin County, Texas), Nancy (Sanders), Eveline Mary (Skelton), and Marinda.

Comfort Allen, born 1818, married Lydia Maxwell and they had six children; William Andrew (m. Fanny Reed), James Rylie (m. Mary E. Thomas), Martha Jane (Taylor), Mary Elizabeth (Turner), Elbert Newton who died at the age of 16, and Henry Lewis who died at the age of two when he drowned in a washpot.

Perminde (Mindy) McMillen, born in 1820, married James Collins and they were the parents of one child who died as an infant.

Lewis McMillen, born in 1822, married Almeda Tunley and they raised seven children; William Alan (m. Martha Jane McMillen), Benjamin, Lewis Wes, Elisa J. (m. D. M. Lovelace), Ethalinda (m. G. T. Johnson), Thomas (m. Mary Mankin), and Charley who died while still in his youth. After the death of Almeda in 1884, Lewis married widow Mattie Flowers and they had one child, Bula.

The family was very faithful to the Presbyterian Church and all were staunch Democrats. They attended the White River Congregation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Charlotta (Lotty) is listed in the church minutes of the September 12, 1835, meeting of the Session at the "campground." Her son, Comfort Allen, later joined the church in 1838. In 1851, Lewis McMillen and his wife, Almeda, gave 14 square rods of land in Washington County for the "valuable consideration of having a convenient school house and meeting house."

Mustering Officer.

When the Civil War began, three of Hugh's sons, John, Andrew, and Lewis, went to Washington County, Arkansas, and joined the Union Army. They all served in Company L of the 1st Arkansas Cavalry. Many years later, Lewis would entertain his grandchildren with the story of how they spent a long rainy night in Mississippi after being captured by Confederate soldiers, and how they managed to break apart a rain barrel and fashion a make-shift ladder out of the barrel staves to escape during the thunderstorm.

Early in 1845, the Comfort Allen McMillen family, along with the Maxwells, and others living nearby, left Washington County to travel overland by ox teams to Texas to settle on Peter's Colony land grants. They settled in Collin County and Comfort Allen McMillen is credited with being one of the founders of the community of Murphy, Texas.

After her family had been raised, Charlotta lived for a while with her son, Lewis, and his wife, Almeda, and helped with their brood of children. In the early 1850s, Lewis and Almeda also moved to Texas and settled near his brother, Comfort Allen, in the community of Allen, Texas.

In 1854-55, Comfort Allen returned to Arkansas to bring his mother, Charlotta, and his recently widowed sister, Mary Moulden, and her family to Collin County, Texas. Later his sister, Perminde Collins, would also join them and locate to the north of Murphy, Texas.

Like so many others living during these years, Comfort Allen and Lewis made their living by farming and raising livestock. Their mother, Charlotta, was a weaver and Mary Moulden helped support her family as a knitter.

Patsy Jo McMillan, the author of this sketch, is the daughter of William Franklin McMillan and Katheryn Drake McMillan of Wylie, Texas, and is the great, great, great, granddaughter of pioneer Lewis McMillen and his wife Charlotta. She and her husband, James Cron, live in Mesquite, Texas, and both work for the Dallas County Sheriff's Department.

Descendants of this fine family number well into the hundreds. D. B. McNeal

John McNeal, born in County Down, Ireland in 1779, came to America and settled in Washington County, Pennsylvania. One of his sons, James, went west to Washington County, Ohio, where a son, David B. McNeal was born. It is with David B. (D. B.) McNeal that the story of the McNeals of Washington County, Arkansas begins.

McNeals taken in Hartford Arkansas about 1905 From the left standing Eva McNeal, Ernest McNeal, D. B. McNeal, Mable McNeal, Fred McNeal, Charles McNeal, Roy NcNeal, Seated Blanch McNeal, child is Grace McNeal

D. B. McNeal migrated to middle Tennessee and married Eva Baldwin, a school teacher from Marysville college.

In the 1890s D. B. moved his family to Missouri and then down the wire Road into Arkansas, with the women and children in the wagon and the boys and cow walking behind. They camped one night at the spring just south of the present Fayetteville High School.

The family settled in Hartford. With the help of Eva's brother, a merchant in Mansfield, D. B. established a general store in Hartford. D. B. was a good businessman and Hartford was a lively coal mining and farm trade center. The store prospered and the children were educated at Henderson-Brown College in Arkadelphia. Son Charlie won several gold and silver medals. One year he received both athletic and scholar of the year awards.

About 1910, D. B. retired and moved to Prairie Grove. He opened the Prairie Grove Drug Co. With his son Fred as manager. Fred McNeal invented a tray to hang on automobile doors as a food tray. He reaped little or no benefit from this widely used invention.

A daughter of D. B. and Eva, Mable, married Harley Lunday and lived in Tulsa. A son, Roy, became head coach and athletic director at Southern Oregon College. Ernest died while in college.

D. B. was one of the few staunch Republicans in the county and he let it be known. When asked by the reunion committee to fly a Confederate flag on the drug store, he agreed but put a Union flag above it.

In 1913 D. B. established the D. B. McNeal and Son General Mercantile in Farmington, with son Charlie as partner. Originally the mercantile was in the brick building east of the present post office, but in 1915 they purchased and moved into the Sidwell store next door. Charlie married Sue Woodruff, a student of Cane Hill College. The McNeal store prospered. Starks Brothers Nursery employed sixty men. The trip to Fayetteville was difficult, so farmers came to trade at McNeal's. We stocked everything, food, hardware, farm supplies, clothing, and bought flour and feed by the train car load. It was reported to be the largest store in Washington County. In strawberry time it required ten people to handle the trade. I guarded the cash drawer. Troy Toney operated a satelite store in the Appleby Farm.

Aside from family, Mace (Red) Howell was the only full time employee. He was a very talented person. He could build or repair anything.

When discipline was necessary, Charlie went to the buggy whip rack. The dogs tucked their tails and slunk away, and the boys promised to cease and desist from their mischief.

With the depression came hard times. Books of account show total sales of less than five dollars some days. A huxter line was started. A truck would be loaded with merchandise and go from farm to farm. Some sales were for cash or credit, but most were trades for chickens, eggs, and butter. Wiley Hembree ran the route for two dollars per day.

About 1932, a hammermill was added to the operation. The farmers brought in grain and it was ground into feed, flour, and meal. A portion of the finished product was usual payment for the grinding. My job was to sack feed and to weigh wagons on the wagon scales. One day the engine blew up, setting the mill on fire. The fire spread to the old mill on Goose Creek and the McNeal store outhouse. All three structures burned to the ground and were never replaced.

With the approach of World War II, business improved and Sue McNeal operated the store until 1974. The building now houses a furniture and antique business.

Charlie and Sue McNeal had two sons, Bill and Charles. After military service Bill traveled the northwest selling for Budd Post and Hardwood Co. He later owned McNeal Pump Co. Bill married Loss Ann Beaver. They had one daughter, Debbie. She is now Mrs. Eddy Hill, a school teacher, residing in Benton, Arkansas.

Charles left Washington County at an early age and served in the U. S. Marine Corps in World War II and Korea. He is now owner and manager of Goff-McNair Lincoln Mercury in Fayetteville. Charles married Ruth Smith daughter of Alfred Smith, manager of the large Appleby farm in Bethel Grove. They have four children. David, an entomologist in Washington D. C., Eddie, sales manager at Goff-McNair, Marcia, now Mrs. Mark Taylor of Fayetteville, and Marty, a musician, assistant manager and bouncer at Norma Jeans.

David and wife Jennifer have two sons Robert and Will. Marcia and husband Mark have three children Shannon, Zack, and Nicole Taylor.

Thus the seven generations of the Washington County McNeals.

Alfred E. Mileur

The family of Alfred and Mary Mileur moved to Washington County Arkansas in December, 1936. They drove a car pulling a three-wheel trailer with their belongings from Sudan, Texas. At that time they had a small son and Mary was expecting her second child in about a month. On the trip from Texas, the trailer jack-knifed and overturned. They spent one day recovering their belongings and a number of chickens that Alfred was moving. He had show chickens and received many blue ribbons from Texas and Oklahoma. This story was passed down through the years.

Alfred Emil Toussiant Mileur was born November 1, 1896 in East St. Louis, Illinois. His father was a French immigrant, coming to America when he was fourteen years old. His name was Henry Alfred Mileur, born July 26, 1868, in Bourdonnay, France. Alfred's mother was Barbara Lucy VanClooster of Murphysboro, Illinois, where the Mileurs had settled after coming to this country. Henry and Lucy were married April 19, 1892, in Murphysboro. They moved to St. Louis, St. Jo, Joplin and finally to Indian Territory around 1900. Henry acquired 160 acres in the Oklahoma land run. The land is still in the Mileur family at Rush Springs, Grady County, Oklahoma.

Mary Magdalene Coleman was born in Henderson County, Kentucky, March 29, 1900. Her parents were Albert Francis and Alice Marine Searcy Coleman. They were both born in Crawford County, Indiana. They moved to Rush Springs, IT in 1901. There Alfred and Mary met, grew up and were married July 11, 1921, in Wichita, Kansas. The Colemans moved to Lincoln in 1926. Their health became bad and this was the reason for Mary and Alfred to move to Arkansas.

Alfred worked in oil fields of Oklahoma in the early days of the oil boom, living in Santa Fe, Ardmore and Rush Springs. Their first child, Robert Joseph, was born July 13, 1927 in Duncan, Oklahoma. Alfred and his family then moved to Sudan, Texas, and worked in a chicken hatchery and feed store, then to Washington County, Arkansas. They moved onto a small farm in the Beaty Community north of Lincoln. Their second child, Mary Alice, was born January 9, 1937, at Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Bob and Mary Alice both attended the one room Beaty School. Bob attended eight grades then transferred to Lincoln High School where he graduated in 1944. He was employed by the Bank of Lincoln for a number of years. He married Verona Bella Kidd, July 4, 1948. They then moved to Oklahoma City. They later moved to Midwest City where they are still living. Bob and Belle were both employed at Tinker Air Force Base. They have two children. Sharon Swain of Lincoln and Ronald Gene of Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mary Alice graduated from Lincoln High School in 1953. She married Roger Pitts June 22, 1958. After Roger's graduation from the University of Arkansas in 1961, they moved to Hot Springs and later to Hope. In 1964 they returned to Lincoln where they are living now on the Sugar Hill Ranch. They have children, Russell 22, Sarah 20 and Alicia 18.

Alfred and Mary's third child, Barbara Ann, was born August 15, 1941 in Prairie Grove. The family moved off the farm into Lincoln in 1945. Barbara attended twelve years of school in Lincoln, graduating in 1959. She married Don Griscom July 11, 1964. They live southwest of Lincoln on a farm, raising cattle and apples. Don also drives a bulk milk truck for Mid-America Company. They have two children, Cara, 21 and Curtis 17.

Alfred and Mary had an enjoyable life in Lincoln. Alfred was a meat cutter and worked in several of the local markets. He also enjoyed the outdoors. He liked fishing, hunting and gardening. Woodworking was also one of his hobbies. Mary enjoyed all types of handwork and sewing. Another hobby of hers was music. She was pianist and organist at the Methodist Church in Lincoln where the family belonged.

Alfred died December 2, 1973, at his home in Lincoln. Mary continued to live in the family home until 1980 when her health failed and she moved into the home of Roger and Mary Alice Pitts. She remained there until April 1983 when she was moved to Sunrise Manor in Fayetteville. She died in Fayetteville September 12, 1983.

Alfred and Mary are both buried in the Beaty Cemetery north of Lincoln.

Joseph Miller

Joseph Miller and family came to Washington County, Arkansas in the fall of 1833, settling about three miles south of Fayetteville at north end of present airport, on what is presently known as Willoughby Road.

He was born in Kentucky in 1795 and his parents are unknown to compiler, but he had brother Benjamin born 1790 or earlier, that married Eliza Briggs and another brother, John Miller, born Kentucky, 1793, married in Gibson County, Indiana in 1814 to Mary (Polly) Roberts.

Joseph Miller is first found in Gibson County, Indiana, when he married Jane Duff November 17, 1817. Joseph and Jane Duff Miller had three children that showed their birth being in Indiana, but do not find them in census of Gibson County, Indiana in 1820. About 1823, Joseph and family moved to Montgomery County, Illinois in or near Hillsboro, Illinois. There, he was engaged with his brother, Benjamin and Judge Hiram Rountree in several business enterprises, a tannery, a freighting business and a tavern. The tavern located just across from present Court House, and according to a local history the rates at tavern set by city fathers at 12-1/2 cents for room, same for horse with hay, 12-1/2 cents for breakfast and 18-3/4 cents for dinner and supper.

A severe blizzard in winter of 1832-3 killed a large amount of wild animals and domestic, as well, curtailing the tannery operation and it is presumed this caused the family's migration to Arkansas Territory.

After arrival at Fayetteville, he built his tannery in a ravine just west of square near present Frisco Railroad tracks. A spring on the hillside supplied water for the operation. A few years ago, a Mr. Berry had a flower growing operation on this site and related that he plowed up bits of oak timbers and pieces of skinning knives there. Joseph Miller built a two-story stone house, which has since been reduced to one story, unoccupied for quite a few years, but still defying the elements, on Willoughby Road about two miles east of U. S. 71. A very interesting stone above and to the left of front door has many peculiar markings cut into the stone, reminding one of the hex marks on the homes and barns of the Pennsylvania Dutch. Also, the huge capstone on the well made from one stone.

From Joseph Miller's first marriage, he had the following children: Lucinda, born 1818, married 1833 to Samuel Mayes, she died 1888, buried Combs Cemetery, Washington County, Arkansas. A son, William H. Miller, born Indiana in 1820, maried Martha Landers in 1840, died 1871, buried Miller Cemetery on home place. Third child was Julia, born Indiana in 1822 married F. L. Nathan Thomas. It is believed she died in 1859, place unknown. John McDowell Miller, born 1826, Illinois, married 1846 in Arkansas to Clarissa Privett. He died 1897 in Collins County, Texas near Weston. Daughter, Nancy, born Illinois, 1828 married 1847 to _____? Evans, married (2) John T. C. McCaffery, no other information.

Joseph Dillard Miller, born 1833 in Illinois married 1854 to Elizabeth Paul and have no further information. In 1840, census of Washington County, Arkansas, there was a child (female) in the Miller household that I cannot identify and not found in 1850 census. A son, Hiram Rountree Miller was born 1835 in Arkansas and there are three marriages in Washington County, Arkansas for him (1) to Mary E. Cox in 1858, (2) to Rebecca Rutherford in 1860 and to Mary E. Carney in 1870. Apparently left Arkansas as no further information. A daughter, Harriett Miller born 1836 married Thomas Howes 1851-3. Believed she moved to Texas where husband died as she resided back in Fayetteville with father in 1860 census and she had three children. Last child from Joseph Miller first marriage was Mary, born 1837, married to Obed C. Cate, 1853. She died in 1890 and buried Reiff's Cemetery, Washington County, Arkansas.

Apparently, Joseph Miller first wife Jane died about 1840-42 as he married (2) Cyrene Flack, widow of Willis Hill Privette about 1842 or earlier, and she brought five of her children from first marriage to this household. A daughter, born in 1843, was Phoebe Jane, and she is believed to be from second marriage. She married first, Orin August Phillips in 1861 and (2) William T. Jones in 1865. From second marriage of Joseph and Cyrene Miller, also had two more daughters, Cyrene (Caroline) married to George Mayes, she died 1903 in Bailey, Oklahoma and Sarah (Sally), born 1948 married Thomas Fine in 1866 and believed to have migrated to Collins County, Texas.

Joseph Miller died February 18, 1869 at home in Washington County, Arkansas. Although many descendants are buried in old

Miller burying ground about 1/4 mile south of old home, do not find a stone for Joseph or wife. He had accumulated in his lifetime about two thousand acres surrounding what is Greenland and it was known as Miller's Valley.

In Illinois, he was a member of Methodist Church. After second marriage, was member of Christian Church. His second wife, Cyrene went to Collins County, Texas, where some of her children had settled and she died there in 1883.

Gussie Jennie (Jean) Miller born December 25, 1891 - died July 13, 1980, married Delbert W. Hall. Issue one daughter: Dorthea Elaine Hall born January 30, 1921.

Stella Adair Miller born October 14, 1895 married Alva Wilcoxen. Issue two daughters: Francis Virginia Wilcoxen, Muriel D. Wilcoxen.

The following is an autobiography by Henry Miller, preacher and poet, Round Mountain community. Taken from Browns Memorial Sketch Book. Written circa 1938. "I was born in Indiana February 14, 1868. When three years old, my parents moved to Kansas, lived there nine years, moved then to Washington County, Arkansas where I still live. I was ordained to the Ministry at the age of 43. I pastored churches as Missionary and also as Moderator of the Fayetteville Association. My grandfather, John Wagoner Miller lived and died a Missionary Baptist preacher. My father, Peter Miller died a deacon in the Missionary Baptist Church. I have a son, Ray Miller who is a Deacon in our church, making four generations of Baptists.

My nearest church, when I was converted, was at the district school house four miles away. Seven of us got letters and organized a church at a school house one mile away. That was in 1902. In 1925, we built a church house on land that joins my farm. Now I am 70 years of age, and can go to church and not get off my own land. The Lord seemed to move the work nearer me as I grew older and used me in helping to establish this church, with a Baptist preacher for a son-in-law, and a Baptist preacher for a brother-in-law, and my wife and three children are all in the Baptist work. I feel like I merit a place among Baptists".

Jacob Grant Mills

This is the story of my grandfather, Jacob (Jake) Grant Mills, born near Fayetteville, Arkansas, Washington County, September 15, 1865. A few months before his birth a group of hostile renegades came by their home and murdered his father and two brothers. Another brother escaped through a side window. The men tried to set fire to the home and his mother and his older sister, Lettie would smother out the flames. Several years later, he and his family moved to Texas. They settled in Hamilton, Hamilton County, Texas. On the 9th of August, 1894, he married Sarah Castle (Cassie) Dawson.

Jacob and Sarah had five children. Their first born, a daughter, Bertha Viola, was born April 18, 1896 in Holland, Bell County, Texas. She married Ollie Kinsey. They had no children and she passed away in the summer of 1934. Their second child, Barney Tolbert was born December 18, 1897. He married Frances Miriam Johnson and they had four children as follows: Leona Daphine, Dorothy Nadine, Elsie Mae, Clarence Barney. Barney Tolbert was born in Holland, Bell County, Texas and he died in June, 1978 in Roswell, New Mexico. The third child was Elsie Bell, born April 29, 1904 in Harvey, Bryan County, Texas. She married Woody Washington Newton in 1923 and they had three children: Cassie Mae, Dollie Jean, and Woody Duane. She resides in Garden Grove, California and at the age of 83, she rides her bicycle to the store and beauty shop. Her second husband is Clarence E. Roark. The fourth child of Jacob and Sarah was Sherman David, birth date July 28, 1906. His birth place was Hydro, Caddo County, Oklahoma. Seth Mills

About 1838 Seth's family and grandchildren followed his brother Isaac and others of the family to Washington County, Arkansas. They crossed the Mississippi River at St. Louis, Missouri. Most of the family settled in the area called the Middle Fork of the White River. Seth gave each of his children land and a good start in life as they married. He gave land for Mount Zion Church, school and cemetery. Enos L. Mills, born December 7, 1831, died September 7, 1868, buried there may be a nephew.

Seth Mills was born June 19, 1782 and his wife, Charity Thornburg, January 18, 1790. Both in Guilford County, North Carolina to strict Quaker parents, Walter and Mary (Baldwin) Thornburg: Aaron and Charity (Mendenhall) Mills. Seth was married October 16, 1808 at Lost Creek, Jefferson County, Tennessee. They moved to Wayne County, Indiana August 1814. Some of their thirteen children had civil marriages there. Four children died in Indiana.

Bushwhackers lamed Seth by burning his feet to make him tell where he had supposedly hidden some money. He was not able to continue farming so became a shoe cobbler. He was killed in a peach orchard near Ramey's Farm. I think his wife Charity died in 1875*. I believe they are buried in Mills Cemetery. The headstones were removed after 1904. Seth's administrator was Benjamin Ramey, April 1876*. Benjamin was husband of Seth's granddaughter Lavinia Lewis 1851-1949.

Seth Mills

Seth Mills (June 19, 1782-1876) was born in Deep River, Guilford County, North Carolina to Aaron and Charity Mendenhall Mills. December 12, 1794, Aaron died the next year in 1795 and the Mills family moved to Lost Creek, Jefferson County, Tennessee. In 1804 Seth made a trip to Ohio and stayed a year and returned to Tennessee where he married Charity Thornburg on October 16, 1808. The Mills and the Thornburg families were devout Quakers. It was about this time that the Quakers were migrating from Pennsylvania and from the south east toward Ohio, Indiana and west from there.

1815 was the date for Seth Mills family to move to Lick Creek MM in Orange County, Indiana. Seth Mills was installed as the head of this church. Charity Mendenhall Mills died February 19, 1836 at the age of 82 years.

In 1838, Seth, his brothers Isaac and Aaron, Jr. migrated to Arkansas from Indiana. They planned on setting up a Quaker settlement in Arkansas. This could not be done as Arkansas would not let them practive the Quaker religion in a public church. So they met in their homes.

Isaac Mills went back to Missouri with the intention of going to California. I have not found proof if Isaac made the trip to California. I have heard that he died in Missouri and his family went on to California. The Isaac Mills left two daughters with Seth and Charity to live in Arkansas, Julia Ann Mills, married Selvester Powell November 20, 1851 and Narcissa married Peter Mankins, Jr. Aaron Mills lived with Seth and Charity the rest of his life in Washington County, Arkansas. He is probably buried in Mt. Zion Cemetery as is the rest of the family.

Seth owned a lot of land which he gave to some of his children. I have been told that Seth Mills was a large man over 6 feet tall with brown hair and blue eyes. Had a very good personality. He liked to tell stories of his past life and was very, very religious.

During the Civil War some of the publications says that his feet were burned by bushwhackers. I have been told by my grandfather whose father told him that his feet were burned and the right foot was broken and cut. This foot was probably never set and that is why he could not hardly walk again. I was told that the family knew the men who did this horrendous torture to Seth as an old man. They thought that he had money, but Seth never gave in to them. My grandfather was George W. Mills (1876-1966) was 89 and 9 months, was the son of James W. Mills (1856-1941). James W. Mills was 20 years old when Seth Mills died. He lived very close to him all his life until 1876. In fact Seth saw my grandfather as a little baby.

Seth Mills lived to see all his sons die and most all of his grandsons before his death. He was living with his grandson Franklin Mills who was the son of Jacob Mills when he died at the age of 92 years old.

Seth was buried in Mt. Zion Cemetery which is located close to the Reece Cemetery on the White River. Seth gave the land for the church, school and cemetery in 1863 when his grandson Enos, the son of Aaron L. Mills was killed by bushwhackers while coming home from the hospital in Fayetteville after being wounded and the Confederate Army had taken over the hospital and released the prisoners. He was in Lewis Bracken's apple orchard and bushwhackers shot him. He was dragged into the bushes until all was clear and then buried in Mt. Zion Cemetery.

Seth was a kind man who lived his beliefs. Charity Thornburg Mills (January 18, 1789 - to about 1875) born in Deep River Guilford County, North Carolina. She and Seth were born and raised in the same community. Both families moved at the same time from North Carolina to Tennessee. Charity was the daughter of Walter and Mary Baldwin Thornburg. They were also devoted Quakers.

Charity was a small woman who had brown hair and brown eyes. She was a kind and gentle person. She loved people and was loved by every one who knew her. She, like so many other pioneer mothers, had so many hardships. She smoked a pipe, as the Quakers called a pipe of peace.

Charity died before 1880 census and is buried in Mt. Zion Cemetery with Seth. It is thought that she died about 1875.

Seth and Charity had thirteen children. They raised ten children to maturity, their children are as follows: Betsy Ann Mills, born July 23, 1809, married Phineas Massey December 11, 1826, died October 15, 1829. 2. Mary Ann Mills, born July 7, 1811 married first to Matthew Massey and second to Joseph Thompson. She had children by both marriages. She died 1886 in Belton, Bell County, Texas. Joseph Thompson was a County Judge. 3. Aaron L. Mills (November 19, 1812) married Pamelia Samuels, November 5, 1832 (D) January 3, 1852 in Little Rock, Arkansas. Aaron L. and Pamelia were married against the Quaker Church as she was not a Quaker. She joined the Quaker church and all was well. Aaron L. died after an extended trip to California, Panama, Havana, New Orleans. Coming home he died of pneumonia and Yellow Fever. Pamelia Samuels Mills married James P. Dickerson June 1852 and had several more children. 4. Kimsey Mills, May 3, 1814 and died June 16, 1834. Was 20 years old. 5. Enos Mills, born February 29, 1816, married Edith Mankins June 14, 1838. 6. Henry Mills, born May 22, 1817, married Milly Reed. It is not sure whether he died in Missouri or Arkansas. 7. Sarah Mills, born October 8, 1819, married December 18, 1845 John Camp. She and John was given land by Seth but sold out and went to Missouri, came back to Arkansas. She died in Greenfield, Arkansas. 8. Jacob Mills (February 6, 1822), married Edith Lewis December 18, 1845 and (D) 1862 was killed by bushwhackers during Civil War. 9. Seth Thornburg Mills (February 2, 1824) married October 14, 1852 to Minerva Strain and (D) 1862 during the Civil War with measles. 10. Rachael Mills (March 1, 1826), married 1841 to John Jackson Van Hoose, died January 13, 1886.

11. Lettie Elizabeth Mills (December 20, 1828), married George Washington Lewis, November 6, 1845. (D) March 14, 1913 is buried in Mt. Zion Cemetery. 12. John Kindley Mills, born June 29, 1830, died March 2, 1832. 13. Lucinda Mills, born, March 4, 1834 - died same day.

I am a direct descendant of this family. In fact George Washington Mills was my grandfather, James W. Mills was my great grandfather, John Mills was my great-great-grandfather, Aaron L. Mills was my great-great-great-grandfather and Seth Mills was another generation.

My great grandfather and grandfather told of their past history on numerous occasions. They lived in those times and therefore I can pass the information on to others of another generations. Each generation married young so a lot a generations could be passed on down. Most of the men lived long lives. Seems as if the Mills family was a strong stock and healthy and sturdy stock. All of them were Quaker down to James Mills. His father died when he was a boy of 6 years old. So the others in the family were helpful in his raising. They all lived in a close community. I am very proud to be a descendant of this family.

Isaac Mills, Sr.

Isaac Mills, Sr. was born March 29, 1786 to Quaker parents Charity Mendenhall, born January 19, 1754 Rowan County, North Carolina. She died February 10, 1836 in Wayne County, Indiana. Married January 18, 1774 in Guilford County, North Carolina, Aaron Mills, Sr., born December 22, 1749 Frederick County, Virginia, died December 15, 1794 in Jefferson County, Tennessee, prior to Isaac's marriage there June 23, 1811 to Rachel Beales in a civil ceremony. Both were disowned by the church for marrying contrary to discipline. If they were reinstated into the church, the records have not been found. Isaac must have been a high tempered young man as he was condemned a couple of times for fighting.

Isaac and family moved to Wayne County, Indiana about 1815 and on to Washington County, Arkansas prior to 1836 when his daughter Narcissa was married. Isaac and son John are on White River Township 1840 census. Isaac sold his land in the spring of 1843. I think he went to Dade County, Missouri before going to Oregon. Some neighbors from Missouri and family members went with Isaac, including son Owen who left his wife behind. Polly and William Wilson, Margaret and John Mills with their families went to Oregon. Some of the family stayed in Washington County.

Isaac Mills (1786-1855), wife was Rachel Beales born 18 or 28 November, 1793-5, died in Oregon February 28, 1889. Her parents were John and Abigail (Morgan) Beales. I am sure their records can be found in the Lost Creek Quaker records of Jefferson County, Tennessee.

Isaac and Rachel had thirteen or more children (1) Priscilla born July 20, 1812, died December 29, 1900, married December 27, 1829, Obed C. Austin Millsap

"Early in 1954 our Millsap's Family Association in Jackson, Mississippi, was formed for the purpose of collecting family history on the descendants of Thomas Millsap I, who came from Ireland to Augusta County, Virginia, about 1740. He was a weaver and settled there with his wife and their four sons — Robert, Thomas, William and Joseph. There were also daughters in the family but not as much is known about the daughters. Their descendants have scattered to every state in the union and spell their names in various ways — Millsap, Milsap, etc. Millsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi, was founded in 1892 by the Methodist Episcopal Church South was named in honor of one of the descendants, Major Millsap." From Mrs. John T. Watkins, Hammond, Louisiana.

My grandfather, Austin Millsap (a descendant of Thomas Millsap) lived in Washington County from 1894 until 1951. I lived with him and my grandmother for three years. He often told about things that happened in his early life. I remember how he told me that the origin of the name Millsap was derived from a river in France where the family lived until about the 15th or 16th century. They then went to Ireland and lived there until coming to America in 1740. Around the Revolutionary Period Thomas Millsap went to Georgia. My grandparents often talked of their days in Newton County — how grandfather had hunted for bears in his early days and how he made trips by wagon from Jasper to Clarksville, Arkansas, and to Springfield, Missouri. The move from Newton County to Washington County was made by covered wagon drawn by oxen. Before moving to Washington County, Austin served as postmaster of Walnut, Arkansas from September 24, 1883 until March 26, 1886.

The following is taken in parts from an article written in 1950 when grandfather was 100 years old. He was then living with my aunt, Mrs. Carl Stearns, near Tontitown. (By Fred Starr for the local Fayetteville paper, 1950.)

"Mr. Millsap was born in Fanning County, Georgia, September 12, 1850. He was the son of Thomas Millsap and Winnie Coats Millsap. He was the oldest of six children — three boys and three girls. He moved with his mother to Jasper, Arkansas, in the late 1860s where he lived until moving to Washington County near Greenland in 1894. He resided there until 1942. He recalls vividly the horrors of the Civil War for those living on the border between the north and the south. He witnessed the murder of his father by bushwhackers the day before he was to leave to join the Confederacy. The taste of poverty and suffering his family endured in the lean years following the death of his father is still fresh and bitter to him although 85 years have elapsed. In those far-away lean years the family subsisted without any "store bought" goods, either food or clothing."

On St. Valentines day 1880 at the age of 30 he married Jane Snow in Walnut, Arkansas, (now Swain). They had seven children — six boys and one girl. They now make their home with Laura, the only girl and her husband, Carl Stearns. The sons were; Chester, Artiebury, Walter, Talmadge, Coats and Jesse.

"Mr. Millsap has spent his entire life on the farm and has never "honed" for the bright lights. He is a member of the Methodist Church and has never indulged in the use of tobacco and strong drink. When asked to what he attributed his five score years of healthful living he didn't think his habits had much to do with it. He just happens to come from a family of long-lifers. His mother died at the age of 94. The Millsaps have 25 grandchildren and 35 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild."

Plans are being made to hold open house for relatives and close friends of Mr. Millsap on September 12 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stearns. There will be a cake topped with 100 candles and the honoree seems to think he has enough pep left after 100 years of living to blow the candles out with one mighty puff.

Author's note: Mrs. Laura Stearns Harper, now 91, lives at Springdale, Arkansas, the only child of Austin and Jane born in Washington County.

Dwight Almond Mitchell

Mariella Tennessee Cuthbertson Nash, (b. 9/7/1913 at Ivanhoe, Oklahoma), married William Ernest Nash, (b. 8/2/1907 at Blackwell, Oklahoma) on September 1, 1932 in Maysville, Arkansas. Their four children are Darla Jean Nash b. 12/13/35, Billy Dean Nash b. 7/12/37, Mary Anita Nash b. 3/2/40, and Bobby Wayne Nash b. 2/3/46.

Ray Almond Mitchell b. 7/19/1910 and Hazel Fern Deal of Kay County, Oklahoma, had Dwight Almond Mitchell b. 8/24/36, Danny Ray Mitchell b. 2/10/35, and Karen Fern Mitchell b. 12/30/44.

Dwight Almond Mitchell married Mary Anita Nash on June 19, 1960, in Blackwell, Oklahoma. To this union was born Stephanie Jean Mitchell b. 4/23/63 and Kristi Dawn Mitchell b. 1/11/66.

In June 1972, Dwight, Mary, Stephanie and Kristi were preparing to take their usual vacation in Arkansas when some friends from Ponca City, Oklahoma, called and told them about a "Tastee Freez" being for sale in Springdale, Arkansas. This was of interest to them since Dwight's job with Clinton Oil Co. had turned into more hours and days than he had been hired for thus making a change in careers look pretty good.

They purchased the business and took possession August 22, 1972. Boy did they ever jump out of the frying pan right into the fire. Dwight had never cooked a hamburger in his life, to sell, but in a short time the little family got it all together.

Stephanie started the 4th grade in Westwood Elementary and Kristi started 1st grade at the same school.

Four years later the business was sold as was their home at 2903 Morlan. The family moved on some acreage south of Tontitown, Arkansas and began farming.

In time a swine farm was in full swing with Chester White being the predominant breed. Cattle were soon grazing on the farm. Helpful neighbors came around to answer questions and solve problems.

Dwight went to work for the University of Arkansas Swine Research Farm in the fall of 1983.

Both girls became involved in 4-H activites, which involved Dwight and Mary, also. Both girls graduated from Springdale High School.

Stephanie graduated from the U of A with a degree in elementary education. She and Ralph Kendall Pendergraft b. 5/27/62 were married July 16, 1983. On June 22, 1987, little Megan Michelle Pendergraft made Dwight and Mary very happy grandparents. Stephanie is presently employed at Cintas in the office and Kendall has a part ownership in a 4-K dairy farm.

Kristi started working for Springdale Memorial Hospital in May of 1983 as a receptionist in the emergency room. She worked there through her 12th grade in high school and two years of college at the U of A. On 8/1/87 Kristi went to work for the Family Clinic in Springdale as an X-ray and lab technician. Kristi also works evenings and weekends for the Express Clinic as a receptionist.

March 2, 1981, Mary began an art business. She hand-paints pottery which is sold in stores such as the Ozark Bazaar. She enjoys painting Indian Chiefs. Two of her paintings, Dull Knife and Quannah Parker, hang in the office of Northwest Arkansas Refrigeration.

Richard Mitchell

Moving West, Richard and Cynthia H. (Owenby) Mitchell were surely on the move in 1850 as they have not been found in any census. However, there were two Mitchell girls (Jane - age 17, and Lucinda - age 10) living in Franklin County, Arkansas, with the William Londagin family. We believe this to be the Mary Jane in this story.

Richard and Cynthia purchased land on Round Mountain, Washington County, in 1858. They had the following children who were born in Tennessee: Sarah; Mary Jane (born September 6, 1833); William A. (married Harriett W. Shipley); Lucinda (married James Hughes); Benjamin (married Nancy Dunlap); Martha Ann (married James R. McClelland); Elis (?); and John (married Emaline (?). The following were born in Arkansas: Caroline (married John Thomas); Nancy L. (married William W. Barrett); and Harriett C. (married William S. Looper).

This couple is recorded in the 1880 Census as living with their son, John. Richard is shown as having been born in Kentucky, and his parents in Virginia. Cynthia was born in Tennessee, and her parents in North Carolina. The Springdale News printed a list of "Old People of Elm Springs Township" on July 16, 1887. Therein, we find Richard and Cynthia. This is the last record we have on this couple.

Mary Jane Mitchell married William (Wid) Boyd (see Boyd story) on November 8, 1855, in Washington County, Arkansas. They had the following children all of whom were born in Washington County: James C. - February 2, 1857; Margaret L. - November 25, 1859 (married Thomas J. Oxford); Katherin - March 1861 (married Seymour Smith); Benjamin Edward - October 22, 1863 (married Easter Florence Graham - see Graham history); William Ann - February 9, 1869; and Thomas Wright - April 1879.

Mary Jane and Wid lived on a farm which was a land grant received in 1860, plus additional land purchased adjacent to this property. The land is ten miles east of Fayetteville and south of present Highway 45. In 1874 they acquired 40 acres on Round Mountain for the timber thereon. The farm had two good free-flowing springs which have never been known to go dry. Wid built their house above one of the springs so they would have easy access to the water. He planted an orchard around the house.

The date of Wid's death is unknown except that it was before January 1888. Mary Jane's son, Benjamin Edward (Ben), assumed responsibility for the farm and taking care of his mother and the children still at home at an early age. Some years later Mary Jane moved to Westville, Oklahoma, to live with a daughter, Margaret L. Oxford. She died April 1, 1917, from a stroke. She is buried in the Baptist Mission Cemetery, Westville, Oklahoma. Her grave was unmarked until about ten years ago when we placed a small marker thereon.

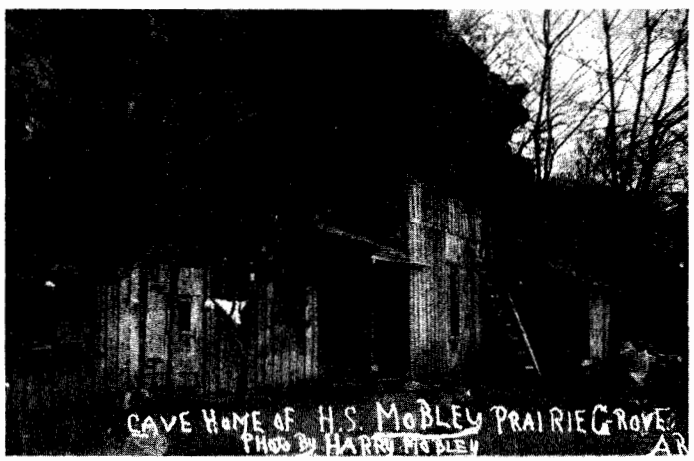
Rev. H. S. Mobley

H. S. Mobley was born in Florida, 1869, but the family moved to Missouri when he was just a lad. Educated at the University of Missouri, Columbia, he met Blanche Hamill of St. Louis while she was visiting friends. They were married in 1892 and moved to Evening Shade, Arkansas.



Original cave home of H. S. Mobley family near Prairie Grove. Later wood was replaced with native stone.

At Corning, Arkansas, H. S. headed a lumber company and later owned and edited a newspaper. He actively continued theology studies and preached from time to time.

In 1904, the young Mobley family moved to Prairie Grove, Arkansas, where he became the minister for the Christian Church.

In 1908, H. S. Mobley bought 168 acres of mountain and forest land near Prairie Grove. (In 1988, this farm is partially under the present Prairie Grove city lake.)

Rev. Mobley reasoned that it was only sensible to use the resources provided free of charge by nature. The overhanging cliffs on the property were soon converted into living quarters for the family. Later this became known as "Cliff Heights".

When H. S., Blanche, and sons, Harry, Clayburne, Charles and John Roe moved into the "cave" it consisted of a sheltering cavity approximately 16 ft. high, 78 ft. long and 18 ft. deep.

The ceiling that nature had provided was a vaulted dome shape, curving downward in back. The light brown, dull red and grays of the rocks gave a neutral background to the Mobley furnishings. A great, square, sweet-toned ebony piano and a heavy old mahogany sideboard were placed in the home near the easy chairs and books below the coal-oil lamps for good visibility.

Partitions were built to give the bedrooms privacy. A chalk line on the floor indicated where the kitchen ended and the dining room began.

A modern sink was installed for Mrs. Mobley. Baby George was born in " Cliff Heights". His swing hung from a ledge jutting from the back wall.

Sixteen glass windows were placed into the new rock work when Edgar Reese agreed to help the family remove the original boards placed on the front and replace it with stonework.

Reese built the silo and many improvements to the farm and home, including the fireplace which is still standing in 1988.

The wood floors were covered wih linoleum and the fireplace was used only for heating. A large cookstove was the appliance used for preparing family meals.

Water came from a nearby spring flowing into a retaining cistern, then into the house.

A section of the overhanging cliffs became a "boys club" where friends of the Mobley's spent many happy hours. A music room, photography studio, and workshop eventually evolved.

Apple Hill was both school and church for the Mobley family. H. S. was actively involved with the Farmers Union of Arkansas, Federal Farm Land Bank, and many state agricultural colleges. He traveled extensively for the International Harvester Company's Farm Life Extension Bureau.

Mrs. Mobley and the boys tended to a dairy and farm.

Harry passed away in 1988 in Prairie Grove, Arkansas. He gave the information for this story along with Maisie Mobley, his wife, and Alma Mobley, a sister-in-law to Mary Ellen Johnson in May of 1987.

A newspaper, the Chicago Commercial Appeal, printed an article about "Cliff Heights", January 25, 1925. Another article was printed by the Springdale News (Washington County, Arkansas), May 17, 1987.

John Rippeto Moneyhun

John Rippeto Moneyhun was born in Hawkins County, Tennessee, December 26, 1838, the first of twelve children of Thomas and Jesten (Delp) Moneyhun. He was of Irish descent as both his great-grandfather and great-grandmother Moneyhun were born in Ireland.

The family lived in Pumpkin Valley on the north side of Copper Ridge in that part of Hawkins County which later became Hancock County. They raised flax and sheep from which they obtained linen thread and wool yarn and in turn made their clothing. Thomas made the shoes for the family. All the children learned to read and write.

John married Susannah Hartley in 1860, and to this union ten children were born. They were: Cornelia, George, Mary (died young), Tom, Lula, Jessie, Harry (died young), Maude, Ben and Earnest.

On October 1, 1862, John and two of his brothers, Larkin and Benjamin, enlisted in the Confederate Army. Larkin had enlisted earlier, was wounded and honorably discharged. Toward the end of the war Larkin received a second wound and Ben was captured and put into prison where he was held about six months and set free.

Soon after the war was over, Larkin and Benjamin went (probably by horseback) to Madison County, Indiana, where Moneyhun and Delp relatives lived. John and Susannah with their two children and only the clothes on their back went by horseback into Scott County, Virginia, where some of Susannah's relatives lived.

John was still in Scott County, in 1867 according to the Tax List, but in 1870, he was in Richland Township, Indiana, working as a farm hand. His mother and father, Thomas and Jesten, had gone to Indiana earlier after much persuasion from family members living there. In Indiana, the soil was richer than back in the mountain country but the climate was miserable. Malaria was the dreaded disease.

Apparently the climate affected Susannah's health because her Hartley relatives living in Arkansas, wrote and begged her to come to Arkansas for her health. About 1878, John and Susannah came by covered wagon to Washington County, Arkansas, and settled east of the Oakland Church. Here their last two children, Ben and Earnest, were born. The family lived in two different houses there, one being on the 'Old Shepherd Place'.

The 1880 Census, Springdale Township, (Vol. 2, p.258) lists: John 43 Tennessee, Susannah 40 Tennessee, Cornelia 16 Tennessee, George 14 Tennessee, Thomas 12 Virginia, Lula 10 Indiana, Jessie 8 Indiana and Maude 4 Indiana.

The 1890 Washington County, Prairie Township Assessment lists: J. R. Moneyhun 1 poll tax, 4 horses/125.00, 4 cows/20.00, 2 hogs/5.00, 1 carriage or wagon/20.00, 1 watch/5.00, value of all other property/40.00, total value/90.00. School District 4. J. George Moneyhun's name appeared in 1890 in the Richland Township, and in 1892 George was listed in the Prairie Township.

John Rippeto was a religious fellow. His daughter, Cornelia, had a preacher son, and John's son, George Moneyhun, became a preacher of the Holiness Faith, and preached over a large area of Washington County. His daughters, Lula, Jessie and Maude, taught school in many of the schools of Washington County and the surrounding area. All his sons were carpenters and farmers. . .trades they probably learned through life out of necessity.

Lula, Jessie and Maude returned, one by one, to Anderson, Indiana, to live. Jessie came back to Washington County, and lived out the last few years of her life. The other children of John R. Moneyhun spent the remainder of their lives in or near Springdale.

In 1910 John and Susannah observed their 50th Wedding Anniversary at their home near Springdale. This writer's husband, Keith Moneyhun, has a punch cup (with gold trim) from this event.

For years relatives gathered in Anderson, Indiana, for an annual Moneyhun Reunion. John and his family attended several of these reunions. In 1913, at the 10th annual reunion, the only reunion where all eleven surviving brothers and sisters gathered, John was 75 years of age and the oldest member of the family present.

In June of 1919 John went to Anderson, with two of his children, to attend a Gospel Trumpet Meeting and stayed for the reunion in August. He died the following December 20th, just 6 days before his 81st birthday. He was buried in Friendship Cemetery on the east edge of Springdale, Arkansas.

Charlotta Lynch Morgan

Charlotta Lynch's life in early Arkansas had it's adventures. Her granddaughters, Grace Bell Goucher, remembered stories Charlotta told her, and recorded them for history. Charlotta was born in Tennessee July, 1840 to Joseph and (Lucinda?) Lynch.

Charlotta recalled her father, Joseph Lynch, building a houseboat and set out westward, with his children on the Mississippi River. She had two brothers; Hiram, and Isum. Five sisters; Caroline (Evans), Elizabeth (Ford), Sarah (Woodruff), Susan (Moore), Adeline (Hutton) (Evans).

When they arrived in Arkansas, Joseph traded the houseboat for a wagon and team and continued westward to the Clifty Community where they homesteaded and built a log cabin. The area was still untamed and sparsely settled. One of the problems the new arrivals faced was that of "big cats", presumably panthers or cougars.

One of Charlotta's daily rituals was carrying water to the homestead from a nearby spring. On one such trip, Charlotta noticed a big cat watching her. He followed her path from above, tree to tree. When she told her father about the cat, he speculated that the animal was trying to find a place to attack.

Not long after that, Charlotta was preparing supper in a newly built cabin which was still without a door. A baby was on a pallet on the floor. Suddenly, a large cat appeared in the doorway, and Charlotta watched as it gazed at the baby. Having heard cats were afraid of fire, they grabbed pieces of lighted stove wood and backed the cat out of the door. The next day, the door was framed and finished.

Day to day existence demanded much of the family, who had to kill or grow what they would eat and preserve it to last through winter months.

During the Civil War, Joseph Lynch left his daughter, Charlotta in charge of the family.

One morning, Union soldiers came to the Clifty homestead. They told Charlotta she must get ready to leave because the "Bushwhackers" were coming, and the area would soon be a battleground. The Lynch's belongings were hurriedly packed that night. The next morning soldiers brought her a wagon and team of oxen, since she didn't have a team of her own. Their belongings were loaded and the Lynch family set out for Fayetteville. As they left, Charlotta noticed the soldiers had taken the wagon and oxen belonging to her neighbors.

In Fayetteville, Charlotta began work in the Union Army Hospital. There she met a young, dark-eyed Union soldier who was recovering from smallpox, Morris Henry Morgan. Charlotta and Henry were married about 1865. They lived in Blue Mound, Missouri and later moved to Clifty.

The couple had four children; Thomas, Hattie (Bell), Isum and Sarah (White).

The children shared in the sorrows as well as the joys of the community, rather than being "protected" from the certainties of life, children attended funerals of neighbors, and grief was learned through experience.

Grace Bell Goucher remembered when her grandmother, Charlotta and mother, Hattie Bell, voted for the first time. Jim didn't think his wife should vote, but she was interested in the elections, and voted despite his objections.

As the years wore on, Charlotta and Henry grew older. They moved in to the Long Valley Community to live with their daughter and family, Jim and Hattie Bell.

Beautiful bed coverlets were made by Charlotta and her daughter, Hattie. Assorted fabrics were cut into designs and pieced into quilt tops. Charlotta's great-granddaughter, Rita Goucher Sharp has a section of a quilt top pieced into dime-size octagon shapes, sewn together in tiny stitches to form a larger octagonal piece.

Bible reading was a daily part of Charlotta's life. Her children recalled that she often read as they sat and listened. She walked to a Nazarene Church, when she lived at Blue Mound, Missouri.

In April, 1928, Charlotta lapsed into unconsciousness. She had a gangrene infection in her leg. Dr. Acree of Huntsville attended her, but said he could do nothing. Three days later, she died. Charlotta Lynch Morgan is buried at the Huntsville Cemetery, beside her husband, Morris Henry Morgan, but the tales of her adventures and daily life keep her memory alive in her descendants the memory of a strong woman - an Arkansas pioneer.

Charlotta's sister Caroline's children were: Ed, Frank Evans. Frank married Cherba Brown. The child of Elizabeth Lynch (Ford) was George Ford. Sarah Lynch (Woodruff) didn't have any children. Susan Lynch (Moore) had two children; George and Ollie Moore. Adeline Lynch Hutton, Evans had three children, Will Hutton, Babe and Herman Evans.

Hattie Emaline Morgan was born January 10, 1881 at West Plains, Missouri. She and James Jeffery Bell were married on April 15, 1900 at West Plains, Missouri. Hattie died March 4, 1956 at Hermisten, Oregon.

James Jeffery Bell (Jim), was born March 6, 1873 at Searcy County, Arkansas, the son of Malachi and Martha Hilsabeck. He died at Hermisten, Oregon.

The family of James Jeffery and Hattie Bell were Gladis (Lawson), I. L. Bell, Emery W. Bell, Letha (McBroom), Grace E. (Goucher), Virgie V. (Harrington), Niada (Harrington) (Brown), Laura Bell (infant death), M. Irene (Wallingford) and James Jeffery (Jay) Bell.

James (Green) Clark Morgan

James Green was born in New York, October 22, 1909. While P. C. (Perry Chances) Morgan was the Orphan Train agent that took James (Jimmie) Green from the Children's Aid Society in New York, and rode the train to Washington County, Arkansas. He first was adopted by a Mr. Clark but would run off and come to Mr. Morgan's until finally Mr. Morgan adopted him. He took the name James Clark Morgan, which he used the rest of his life. Jimmie became the 13th child of P. C. and Lizzie Porter Morgan.

At the time P. C. and Lizzie separated, there were four children at home; Lucy, Ruby, Tommie and adopted son Jimmie. The children were divided. Lizzie took Lucy and Tommie. P. C. kept Jimmie and Ruby. P. C. was a school teacher so the little family moved around a lot. It was about 1928 when Ruby was burned very badly and died. She was married to Harley Longenbaugh. She is buried at Pitcher, Oklahoma.

October 14, 1932, Goldie Frances Morgan, daughter of James Lee (P. C. and Lizzie's oldest son) and Ocie Tess Rice Morgan, became the bride of Jimmie Clark Morgan. He was her uncle by adoption, but no "blood" relation. They lived at Bixby, Oklahoma.

Jimmie was farming and the next year, August 18, 1933, a baby boy was born to the young couple, named James Marion. While Jimmie and Goldie were living in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, their daughter Vivian Gale was born March 9, 1935. This completed their little family. Times were hard, it being the middle of the depression and Oklahoma suffered drought for several years. Jimmie and Goldie moved themselves and their two little "tots" to California. For a time, they lived at a government camp called "Sun Set Camp", in Kern County, California. Jimmie worked in the orange groves, his wife, Goldie, worked as a waitress. Then they moved to Edison, California and from there to Napa, California. At Bassalt, Jimmie worked in the shipyards as a welder. This was during the years of World War II.

After the War, they moved back to Edison where once again Jimmie worked in the orange groves and Goldie waitressed. In 1948 or 1949, Jimmie and Goldie bought a cafe in Lamont, California. The rest of their lives were spent in business for themselves. Jimmie and Goldie are buried in Arvin Cemetery, Lamont, California.

In later years, Jimmie loved to go to the mountains and to fish. Usually, he went alone. Jimmie never talked much about the Orphan Trains or about being adopted.

Jimmie had a "real" brother, Deyo Clark that was on the Orphan Train at the same time but they became separated when Mr. Morgan took Jimmie off the train in St. Louis because Jimmie had typhoid fever.

(In the summer of 1987, Vivian Gale received a call from Naomi Mitchell in Fayetteville, Arkansas asking about her father's early life. Naomi Mitchell is the daughter of Deyo Clark. Cousins that did not know about each other had found a connection. Naomi was indeed Jimmie's brother's child. The brother he never mentioned to his children).

Jimmie, their son, married Lenore between 1960-1964, Vivian Gale married Jesse Marney, in 1955. Vivian Gale and Jesse Marney's children are Steven W. Marney and Dewayne.

Steven married Dianne who had a daughter, Janine, by a previous marriage. They have two boys, Steven W. Marney and Sean Matthew Marney.

DeWayne married Pam. They have two girls, Meridith Leah and Amanda Renea Marney.

The government camp mentioned earlier was near Bakersfield, California in Kern County. The name was changed to Sunset Camp Grapes of Wrath. This is one of the things President Franklin Roosevelt did for our country during the depression.

Jimmie Clark Morgan and Deyo Clark's stories are stored in the archives of the Orphan Train Heritage Society of America, Springdale, Arkansas.

Josiah Rufus Morgan

Josiah Rufus Morgan, known as Jo or J. R. was born 19 August 1888 at Winslow. He was the first born of nine children born to James S. and Martha Jane (Harlan) Morgan. James was the second child born to Joseph and Nancy Catherine (Smith) Morgan who came from Whitley County, Kentucky to Crawford County, Arkansas (1880-1900 census). Martha Jane Harlan was a daughter of David B. and Elizabeth C. (Dorris) Harlan. (Subject of another sketch)

Josiah grew to be a tall young man of six foot one and loved music. He took piano lessons for a time but was unable to pursue it as he would have liked. He met a young girl from Mountainburg just under five feet tall and 89 pounds whom he wished to date, but she said "no" and left it at that. Josiah later found out what church she attended (Cain) and decided to go there to see her once again. After church he waited for her at the door and when she got there she said to him "you think you are smart, don't you." Anyway this led to a courtship which ended in marriage on her parents front porch. Josiah and Maggie Elizabeth (Johnson) married 23 August 1908 at Turner Settlement near Mountainburg. Maggie was born 1 June 1888 at Mountainburg, the oldest of six children born to William Henry and Martha Arsinda (Snider) Johnson. Martha being a daughter of Chester and Elizabeth (Pickard) Snider. William Henry Johnson was born in Vienna, Illinois 1843 and died in Little Rock, Arkansas 1915. Upon his death bed he confessed to his family his real name was "May" and not Johnson. His parents have not been determined to this day.

Upon their marriage Josiah first got Maggie some chickens as he knew they had never been allowed to have any at home. The family moved soon to Maple, Oklahoma (Sequoyah County) where they appeared on the 1910 census. Here they started their family of ten children. (1) Joseph Clifford, born June 1909 (died July 1909) (2) Minnie Viola, born 1910. She married Henry Clay Hayslip and had five children. Gene, Betty, Almeta, Jerry and Brenda. Viola died 1986 in Oklahoma City. (3) Lovie Bell, born 1913. She married Miley Lee Curtis and had three children: Joy, Duane and Linda. Lovie married 2nd to Charles Arnald Head and now resides in Oklahoma City. (4) Hettie Mae, born 14 January 1915 and lived 15 days. (5) Ruby Marie, born 1916. She married Joseph Abner Mullins and had three children: Melba, Jo and Ronnie. She now resides in Clute, Texas. (6) Gracie Leona, born 1918. She married Vernie Robert Weitner and had two sons, Bobby and Wayne. Gracie and Bob now live in Burnet, Texas. (7) Marvin Harold, born 1921. He married Virginia Wright and had five children: Bill, Dennis, Deanna, Connie, Ronnie (twins) and David. They now live in Oklahoma City. (8) Thelma Lorene, born 1923. She married Elwood Kenneth Jones and had children Kathy and Ken. Thelma died January 1960 in Oklahoma City. (9) Flossie Oleta, born 1925. She married Clarence Marvin Davis and had Kathy Jeanette Davis and Martin Dean Davis. Kathy married Walter Patrick Hollomon and had Kim and Renee; Martin married Cherly Bruce. Flossie married 2nd to Herman Dewey Owens and had a son Howard Dewey Owens (unmarried) living in Austin, Texas. Flossie and Herman live in Freeport, Texas today. (10) Bertha Rae, born 1926. She married Robert Everett and had children; Glenda, Charles and Tina. Bertha married 2nd to Walter Holbrook and now live in Ardmore, Oklahoma.

Josiah and Maggie never forgot their Arkansas roots, but upon moving to Oklahoma they were sharecrop farmers for many years. They later (1939-40) moved to Oklahoma City where he became a carpenter and along with his son-in-law Miley Curtis built many homes there, one of which he lived in until his death, 14 February 1976. Maggie preceded him in death, 15 January 1972. Both are buried in the Resthaven Memorial Gardens there. They were members of the Bethlehem Primitive Baptist Church. Their children have held the "Morgan" Family Reunion each year in Lake Murray State Park near Ardmore, Oklahoma since their death.

Morris Henry Morgan

Morris Henry Morgan was in a fix. The Rebel soldiers' horses were overtaking his. He spurred his horse into the brush and crammed the message he was carrying into his mouth, as he had been instructed to do. As he passed a blackberry patch, he threw himself into the briars. It was dark enough that the Rebs followed the horse. Henry stood up slowly and returned the order to his pocket.

"If there was a place on me not stuck, I couldn't tell it", he would later tell his children. "I hurt all over".

Now he was in enemy territory without a horse, and a Rebel regiment not far away. Henry knew this part of Arkansas, and remembered a hollow tree near the spring where he thought they would camp. He crawled into the tree and waited. Eventually, Henry heard horses approaching and managed to peer out through a crack at Rebel soldiers. The captain came so close that his horse looked at Henry's feet and legs and he feared the animal would give him away.

The men went down to the spring, and began supper preparations. Tired and stiff, Henry waited and watched, planning his escape route. At last, the soldiers bedded down and Henry began to work himself out of the tree. He made straight for the Captain's horse, a good mount. "The horse seemed to know what I meant to do. As soon as I jumped on his back, he was in a dead run", Henry remembered.

He made for headquarters with the Rebels in pursuit, but he had chosen his horse well, and it outran them.

Henry recounted this Civil War adventure to his children and grandchildren. It is only one of his many stories compiled by his granddaughter, Grace Bell Goucher, before her death in 1984.

Henry was born in Overton County, Tennessee on March 31, 1841, and died in the Long Valley Community in Madison County, Arkansas in 1930.

His father came from England to Tennessee. His mother was a Cherokee Indian. Henry's father was a millwright by trade, except for one month out of each year when he would travel to St. Louis, Missouri, to settle land disputes with farmers. Henry's father would build a mill on a river with living quarters connected. The Morgan family would live there until the mill could be sold, and then move on to start another mill home.

When the south began recruiting and drafting soldiers, Henry and Mitch, his brother, were in a quandary. Neither believed in slavery. So the two boys and a friend set out on foot to join the Union Army.

Knowing their plans, Rebel sympathizers set out after them on horseback. The boys headed for a bluff that was almost a mile long, counting on the rough terrain to slow the horses. About 30 feet from the bottom of the bluff, there was a tall tree that leaned over into the bluff's top. The boys had climbed it once before on a "banter", or dare, but this time it meant the difference between being a Yankee or a Reb. They made the climb and reached Union headquarters at Cassville, Missouri to enlist in 1862.

The boys were separated. Henry, small for his 21 years at 5'5", was chosen for dispatcher in company E and B, First Arkansas Calvary under General Blunt. Mitchell, it is believed, served in the regular army.

A volunteer was needed to take a dispatch from Missouri to Fayetteville. It was many miles, enemy territory, and the chances of making it were not good. The captain asked for volunteers. Nobody came forth. Finally, Morris Henry Morgan said, "I will do it, but I want my pick of the horses". The captain was not real happy, but agreed. He was instructed that if the enemy came close and was going to capture him, he was to take the written dispatch, put it in his mouth and swallow it. It was a difficult ride and he encountered the enemy many times on the trip. He said he had the paper in his mouth several times. He finally reached the post where the message was to be delivered. The horse fell dead when he stopped. (The location was where a livery stable then stood at the location of the Center Street Church of Christ of Fayetteville.)

Henry frequently complained to listeners about the food in the war. "We hardly ever got to eat beans that were well done. The cook had a large kettle, and when they had to move camp, two soldiers carried the kettle on a pole riding horseback to a safer campsight, where the cook would start another fire for the beans.

Henry served three years for the Union Army. His name is on the muster-out roll at Fayetteville, Arkansas, August 23, 1865. He contracted smallpox, and was admitted to the Union Army Hospital in Fayetteville. There he met Charlotta Lynch, a young girl from Clifty, Arkansas, who was working in the hospital. After his recovery, they were married.

They had four children: Thomas, Isam, Hattie (Bell) and Sarah (White).

Henry professed the Christian faith. He went to church once a year, and was baptized in a river.

As he grew older, he walked the three miles to Huntsville. Upon his return, the grandchildren ran to meet him, hands outstretched for their usual treat of peppermint stick candy.

Morris Henry Morgan died quietly at the age of eighty-eight. He was buried by his wife, Charlotta Lynch Morgan in the Huntsville Cemetery.

Myrtle Jennings Morgan

Myrtle C. Jennings and Clifton C. Jennings were two children who came on the Orphan Train from New York to Arkansas. Born in New York, they were taken to an orphanage in 1904 due to the death of their father. After approximately three years in the institution, Perry C. Morgan brought these two very frightenend children to new homes in 1907. Myrtle hung on to Clifton for dear life. He was all she had left in the world. Clifton assured her that he would take care of everything and tried to console his little sister. Clifton was two years older but they were so near the same size that folks thought they were twins and this kept them from being separated.

Their first home in Washington County, Arkansas was with a family named Shreaves. A very young Shreaves boy was showing the chickens to Myrtle and Clifton, who had never seen one before, and showed them how to gather eggs. So enthused with their new responsibility, the children gathered every egg in sight, including the ones under the "setting hens". With pockets bulging with warm eggs and carrying all their hands could hold the three started back to the house. The young Shreaves boy tripped and all three children fell. Eggs were smashed everywhere, including those about to be hatched. All three were soundly admonished, (thrashed).

Later Clifton and Myrtle were moved to the home of Mr. Porter. He was a crippled man that had to crawl on his knees to get around. He had a large dairy and Myrtle recalled him on his knees planting garden and letting her help put the seeds into the ground. They were exceptionally good foster parents even though they had three children of their own. Myrtle and Clifton loved Mother and Grandpa Porter very much and stayed in touch with them until their deaths.

Myrtle returned to New York several years later to live with grandparents. When her grandparents died she was again brought to Arkansas by Morgan. She was about 16 years old and was taken to the Morgan home. Paul C. Morgan, son of Perry and Lizzie Morgan, came home on a visit and met Myrtle. It was love at first sight. In 1918, they were married in Wheeler, Arkansas by Reverend Lierly.

Perry "P. C." Morgan was in real estate and was a school teacher in Kansas as well as Arkansas. Myrtle remembers the story of the Morgan horse. After transporting Mr. Morgan, and whatever others attended school at that time from the Morgan household, to school, the horse would take the empty buggy home and return at the proper hour to re-load for the trip home.

Myrtle Jennings Morgan is the last one of P. C. Morgan's immediate family still living. She and her husband Paul, moved to California in 1936 and have lived there over 50 years. Paul died in 1970.

P. C. and Lizzie Morgan had thirteen children. They are all deceased, but there is a host of grandchildren and great-grandchildren scattered throughout the United States.

Myrtle and Paul have seven children. They are; Daisy Cotton of Bakersfield, California, Ernest Morgan of San Diego, California, Helen Wiltfong of Bakersfield, California, Maxine Hollingsworth of Bakersfield, California, Jean Blair of Atascadero, California, Ralph Morgan of Sacramento, California, and Lola Ledbetter of Bakersfield, California.

Clifton Jennings married Lola Cottle of Mounds, Oklahoma. They had two sons and lived in Okmulgee until their deaths. Clifton was a very successful businessman. He was a painter, paper-hanger and owned an aluminum screen business. Their two sons are; Clifton Jennings of Tulsa, Oklahoma and Roscoe Jennings of St. Louis, Missouri.

P. C. Morgan's story and others of his family are elsewhere in this history book.

Perry Chancy Morgan

P. C. (Perry Chancy) Morgan was born August 12, 1861, in Elkhart, Indiana, the son of Chauncey D. and Lucy Ann Wasp Prettyman Morgan. His father, a private in Captain Townsend's Company, of 48th Regiment in Indiana, Infantry, Volunteers, died June 8 of July 1863 at Millikins Bend, Pest Hospital, Louisiana of smallpox and camp diarrhea. His mother died about 9 years later and his only sister, Capitola, a year or two after that.

Being left without family Perry lived with a lawyer who had a large library which he had access to. To keep from being lonely, Perry read books and became self educated.

June 28, 1885 at Clinton, Henry County, Missouri, P. C. married Elizabeth Caroline (Lizzie) Porter. She lived at Montrose and he at Brownington, Missouri. Lizzie, the oldest daughter of James S. T. and Virginia Porter, was born December 27, 1866 in West Virginia and moved west in a covered wagon pulled by oxen.

Soon after James Lee was born, the Morgans moved to west Kansas near Garden City, where several more children were born. Then one evening P. C. came home in a hurry, with moving on his mind. He and family loaded 3 wagons quickly and in the middle of the night pulled out for northwest Arkansas. It was on July 21st, 1898 they stopped at El Reno, Oklahoma where son, John, was born in a covered wagon. Lizzie being one of the drivers. They waited three days before moving on to Savoy, Arkansas. Later they lived at Fayetteville, Springdale and Wheeler, where they had a nice home. One house burned and they built another still bigger and better. Lucy said it had 13 rooms, but a cousin said 23. So it was a big house in its day. P. C. Morgan taught 39 or 40 terms of school, sold real estate and was an orphan agent for about 10 years. It was between school terms when P. C. and Mr. Trent (orphan agents) went to New York City, New York traveled day and night by train bringing with them the homeless children whom were taken from their parents. If for any reason parents could not provide for a child it would be taken away and placed in the Childrens Aid Society, then put up for adoption.

Myrtle Jennings and her brother Cliff, were born in Brooklyn, New York. Their father died so they were taken away from their mother to a Catholic convent in New York City, this is where the orphan agents got them and brought them to Arkansas with the rest of a train load of children.

P. C. and Mr. Trent would take the orphans to the court house at Fayetteville, line them up on the lawn for prospective parents to look over. Myrtle and Cliff were picked by a lady who only wanted Cliff. The agents would not allow the children to be separated. So she took both of them. She was so mean to the children, worked them hard and long hours with little to eat until after about three years the agents took them away from her.

Another orphan, James (Jimmy) Green was adopted by a Mr. Clark. P. C. would place him in homes but he would always run away and come back to him. P. C. liked Jimmy and finally adopted him increasing his family to 13 children. Their children: James Lee, Dave Estes, Florence Elizabeth, Minnie Virginia, Katie Faer, Joseph Frederick, Paul Christain, John Oliver, Frank Cameron Porter, Lucy Capatola, Ruby May, Thomas Samuel and adopted son, James Clark.

Tom Porter said of P. C., "he had a way of getting a job and making good money when no one else could", of which he spent. P. C. played the organ and piano and taught music lessons — was also an artist, painted many water color scrolls for family records.

P. C. and Lizzie separated, dividing their possessions and the children who were still at home. P. C. took Ruby and adopted son, Jimmy. Lizzie got Lucy and Tommy. P. C. was mean to his own family, many leaving home or getting married to escape his cruelty.

In later years Perry Chancy Morgan lived with his children. One day he had Frank Roat take him to the Old Folks Home at Bristow, Oklahoma where he died March 24, 1939. He is buried in J. B. Renolds Memorial Cemetery, at Mounds, Oklahoma where he was given his cemetery plot by a friend. His tombstone reads, "Perry C. Morgan 1861-1939". It seems a small monument for a man who made so great a contribution as a teacher and founder of homes for so many orphans. P. C. Morgan never forgot his early life as an orphan, and perhaps that is one good reason he will be remembered.

Grandma Lizzie had a little house by her son, Jim, near Sapulpa, Oklahoma. While there she helped start the June-Rose Assembly of God Church and taught the little tots in Sunday School for many years before moving to Bakersfield, California, living by her son Paul, for many years. She was sick with cancer when her son, Frank, took her home with him to Lake Port, California, where she died, April 27, 1959, but is buried at Bakersfield.

William Wesley Morgan

The history of the Morgan family in Washington County began with P. C. Morgan. Although P. C. played an important role in the placing of hundreds of orphans during the 1910s, he and his wife Elizabeth (Lizzie) Caroline Porter Morgan, also raised thirteen children of their own.

Willie and Mary Alice Morgan "1933"

One of these children was Dave Estes Morgan. Dave was born July 14, 1888 in Garden City, Kansas. He married Alta Lou Richardson, daughter of Sam and Julie Richardson, in December of 1910. They raised six children; Georgia, Willie, Aileen, twins Raphael and Ralph who died as infants, and Rephael.

William (Willie) Wesley Morgan was born March 8, 1916 in Hogeye, Arkansas. In his boyhood years, his education started at the Sycamore school in Wheeler where his grandfather, P. C., was the teacher. Willie was delighted that his grandfather was going to be his teacher. His happiness was short-lived however, for when he arrived at school, his grandfather did not greet him the way he was accustomed. Instead of treating him like his grandson, he treated him like any other student. P. C. did not want to show favoritism toward Willie and his sister Georgia, so he was more strict with them than the other students. He expected them to set the example for the rest of the class. While this did not seem to bother Georgia, it did not set well with Willie. Willie attended many other schools including White Oak, Goshen, and Fayetteville, but his fondest memories come from the little school which sat on the banks of Clear Creek, Sycamore.

During this time, a young girl from Horton, Kansas came to Wheeler with her mother Georgia Anne Brown and step-father Francis Ellsworth Brown. Her name was Mary Alice Happy. Georgia Anne had always wanted to return to a farm like she had lived on in her childhood. Since Mary Alice was accustomed to the city, she did not share her mother's delight with the new farm life. Her temperament eased somewhat as she soon began to discover activities to her liking. She took piano lessons from Grace Lively for 25 cents a lesson, even though she had to ride a horse two miles to get there. Mary Alice became so accomplished that she began playing the organ at the White Oak Community Church. Mary Alice also enjoyed various school and church functions. It was at one of these functions that she met Willie Morgan. They had met years before when they attended White Oak School and didn't pay much attention to each other. However, that night, there was a spark of interest between them. After years of courtship, Willie and Mary Alice were married in the Howe church on April 28, 1934.

After they married, they lived in the White Oak community and then moved to Siloam Springs. In September of 1934, Willie and Mary Alice left Arkansas and moved to Oklahoma. They bought some land in Pryor, Oklahoma and have lived there for the past forty-six years.

Willie and Mary Alice have three children: William Wesley, Jr., James Darrell, and Donna Leazette.

William Wesley, Jr., born December 28, 1935, married Patricia O'Bannon July 2, 1960. They have three children: William Scott, Robert Jarrell, and Patricia Lynn.

Darrell, born May 5, 1941 married Barbara Willis March 31, 1962. Their children are Shanan Renee and Jay Darrell.

Donna, born May 27, 1957, married Craig Hendrickson August 4, 1979. They have one child, Katherine Amanda.

Although Oklahoma is embedded in the everyday lives of Willie and Mary Alice, the fond memories of Washington County keep Arkansas forever in their hearts.

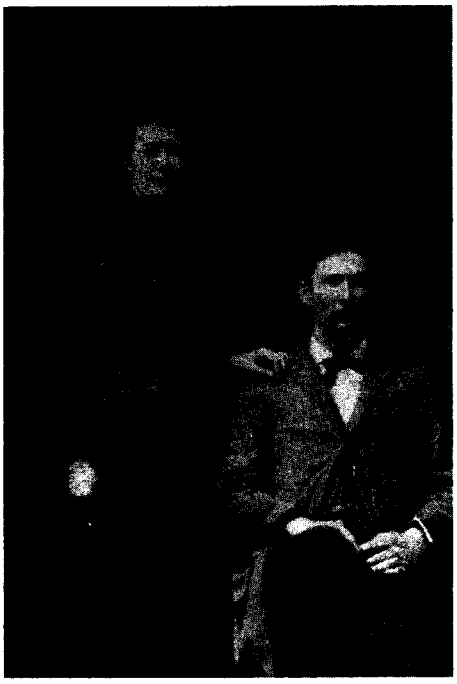
Emmett L. Morris

It was the "first" day of school in Hood, Arkansas (later Elkins), a damp September morning in 1887. Sixteen year old Emma Reed and her cousin, were discreetly appraising their new teacher. He was attempting to build a fire in the wood stove to break the chill in the schoolroom. What could they expect of him? Would he be lenient or stern? Their conclusion, judging from the frown on his face, as he struggled with the fire — He would tolerate no breach of discipline. (Their decision proved correct). Twenty-six year-old bachelor, Professor Emmett L. Morris, recently from Kansas, was too absorbed in his duties of the day to give particular notice to any pupil. It was not a romantic setting. . . the first time Emma Reed saw E. L. Morris, nothing to foretell that five years later, they would be married.

For Professor Morris, the school term went well. He made friends, as well as enjoyed the social life of the community. He was invited to make his home with John Ballard and his wife, Ann Shumate Ballard, both descendants of early valley settlers, whose farm lay along the White River bottom. He accepted their offer of hospitality, and a friendship was formed between



Emmett Lee Morris and Emma Josephine Reed Morris

Ballard/Morris families that has lasted more than one-hundred years. Between school terms, he grew corn crops in partners with Mr. Ballard. He began to feel "at home" in Arkansas, and he was courting Miss Emma Reed, daughter of A. W. Reed and Elizabeth McGarrah Reed. In 1889, she wrote in his Autograph Album. May the 6, 1889 - In the Book of Life - God's Album May your name be penned with care. And may all who here have written-Write their names forever there. It was signed: Emma Reed.

In the Spring of 1892, they were making wedding plans. Relatives and friends would attend church services in Elkins, then gather at the Reed home (later known as the McGarrah - Reed House) where Emmett and Emma would exchange vows before the Reverend L. J. A. Prather, a Presbyterian minister, at noontime. Afterward, the wedding dinner for the party. And so they were married. . . a lovely Sunday, May 15, 1892. The next day, Ann Ballard gave the "Infare" dinner for the couple. (Customarily given by the groom's family). Emmett was living in the Ballard home, and had no relatives nearer than Morris cousins in North Carolina. (One was William Morris, Keeper of the Perpetual Fire, near Saluda, North Carolina. Now a historic site). Ann and John were happy to host his Infare dinner. Ann's wedding gift was a hand-painted glass, coal oil lamp. The couple lived in Elkins a few years, but both preferred living in the country. Emmett bought good orchard land on Salem Mountain (Mt. Salem, betweem Elkins and Sulphur City). Set an apple orchard of Ben Davis, Winesaps, Mammoth Black Twigs, Arkansas Blacks, which in time grew prize winning apples. He was combining farming with his teaching career. Through the years, sons were born to Emmett and Emma. Their first born, Everette, lived only three weeks, born at Elkins, July 25, 1893, died August 15, 1893. Earl Reed, born August 20, 1894 at Elkins, died August 22, 1971 at Lincoln. John Howard, born September 15, 1896 at Carter's Store, died at Farmington, August 7, 1967 buried in Farmington Cemetery. Willard Lee, born May 12, 1899 at Sulphur City, died at Lincoln, Arkansas, August 28, 1981. A daughter, Ruth was born October 19, 1912 at Sulphur City. Sons Everette, Earl and Willard are buried in Mt. Salem Cemetery. In 1918, it was from this farm home near Sulphur City, that sons, Earl and John were called to serve in World War I. Earl served in the Medical Corps, Base Hospital, Camp Travis, Texas. John served on the battlefield in France. No news from him until a telegram in 1919 from the ARC that he had landed at Newport News, Virginia. The family had not known whether he was living or dead. Emma Morris kept every communication from the War Department, Earl's letters, and mementoes. John's few letters from France, that came in a bundle, months after his return home. Uniforms, all items related to their World War I service, until her death November 7, 1957. Ruth Morris continued the preservation. In October 1987, Shiloh Museum of Springdale, Arkansas became interested, presented a display of the Emma Reed Morris Collection of World War I Memorabilia. In January 1988, Ruth Morris was pleased to formally donate this significant collection to Shiloh Museum, for permanent preservation. In 1919, Professor Morris went to the Lincoln area to teach Belview School. In 1922, a final term at Pleasant Hill School (west of Lincoln) closed his forty year teaching career. He had moved his family to a farm one mile east of Lincoln, and bought in February 1920 (now Ruth Morris home on Highway 62). His widow, Emma (born September 3, 1871 at Hood, Arkansas) survived him twenty-five years - dying November 7, 1957, in the home. Together, they lie in Mount Salem Cemetery.

Two tributes to E. L. Morris, in regard to his life as teacher and friend were well expressed by a relative, and a fellow teacher. Brother-in-law, J. C. Reed said, "Emmett would live as long as there was anyone alive, who had known him". The fellow teacher concluded his written tribute with the line, "He lived by the side of the road and was a friend to man".

John Morris was the only child of Emmett and Emma to marry. Texas born, Gladys Loraine Houser, (born December 2, 1900) in Collin County, became his wife October 19, 1929. To them was born one child, John Howard Morris, Jr. (born December 5, 1937) in Corpus Christi, Texas. He inherited his grandfather's teaching talent, is a history professor in a Wharton, Texas college. Earl and Willard Morris lived on the Lincoln farm until death. Willard was an insurance agent for Washington County Mutual Insurance Company of Fayetteville for forty-five years. In 1988, their only daughter Ruth, and grandson, John (both single) are left of the Morrises.

Upon reaching manhood, Franklin Clay Morris left home going to Springfield, Missouri to study telegraphy. It was the desire of so many young men at this time in history to secure a job with the railroad and this was a requirement to know telegraphy. The depots hummed with the rhythmic clicking of the telegraph keys, sending messages across the wires. Young men starting a career as a telegraph operator faced a rough road at first. The railroad's system of seniority permitted an operator to "bump" anyone who had fewer years of service. Because of this, beginning operators must expect to work at the less desirable places until seniority was accumulated. Thus, railroad families moved many times. At the age of 23, Franklin Clay married Flossie Mae Boatright, August 14, 1914 in Huntsville, Arkansas. She was born April 2, 1894, died January 24, 1963, buried in the Huntsville Cemetery.

Franklin Clay began his railroad career working for the Illinois Central Railroad in Love, Mississippi on a spur out of Batesville, Mississippi. The railroad hauled spruce pine for airplane props. In the spring of 1918, he began work with the Frisco Railroad in Arkansas, living at Mountainburg, Arkansas. In 1933, the family moved to Springdale, Arkansas, where Clay worked until his retirement in 1949.

The children of Franklin Clay and Flossie Mae (Boatright) Morris are: Kenneth Albert Morris, born November 16, 1916, Batesville, Mississippi, married Drucilla Ann (Head) on March 16, 1946 in Springdale, Arkansas. She was born June 23, 1923. They have one son, Gary Lynn Morris, born December 24, 1946. He married Carolyn Louise Ames, born July 11, 1947 on October 2, 1970. Issue, one daughter, Alicia Dawn Morris, born March 24, 1973, Fort Smith, Arkansas.

James Arthur Morris, born September 11, 1918, Combs, Arkansas, married Izella Mae Brewer, born November 23, 1919, Rogers, Arkansas. They were married in Pineville, Missouri, September 7, 1940. The family of Carolyn (Morris) and Reverend Doug Westmoreland; Sonja Ann Westmoreland, born December 31, 1961, Tupelo, Mississippi, married James (Jim) E. Carlton, October 29, 1983 in Nashville, Tennessee. Jim was born January 20, 1960, Nashville, Tennessee. (The wedding ceremony was performed by her father.) Sandy Jo Westmoreland, born November 20, 1963, Tupelo, Mississippi, Scott Morris Westmoreland, born July 31, 1976, Nashville, Tennessee. (2) Martha Fay Morris, born April 2, 1943, Rogers, Arkansas. Married William Paul Schroeder, II, born January 8, 1943, married July 23, 1966, Corinth, Mississippi (The wedding ceremony was performed by her father). They have two children, Virginia Davin Morris, born November 4, 1977, Jackson, Mississippi, Claire Elizabeth Morris, born May 22, 1986, Jackson, Mississippi.

Franklin Clay and Flossie Mae (Boatright) Morris were the parents of two sons, named above, and one daughter, Betty Jane Morris, born February 23, 1923. She was a school teacher and loved her students dearly. She died May 10, 1978. Buried Huntsville Cemetery.

Edward Morris, Sr.

Edward Morris, Sr. came to the colonies about 1655, settling in Northumberland County, Virginia. He married Elizabeth Presley relict of Peter Elder in 1687 in North Farnham Parish. (Book B 1, page 101, Index to Rappahanock and Essex Counties.)

Their son, Edward Morris, Jr. married Elizabeth Hammond, May 25, 1727. Their son, Hammond Morris, Sr. born December 5, 1733, married Mary Tuggle Brown. Hammond and Mary sold land in Prince William County, Virginia in 1778 and moved to Stokes County, North Carolina.

A cake recipe was written by Mary Tuggle Brown Morris and has been handed down in the family, it is in her own writing and is dated 1779. "Bath Cake Recipe", "Mix together one quartern of flour and a pound of butter, five eggs and a cup full of yeast and set before the fire to rise. When effected, add quarter pound of sugar mauled fine in an earthen pottle and (add) an ounce of carraways mixed in. Adda little treakle. Make into little cakes the size of a pippen and place in an iron spider, and cover with cloth, to rise. When affected put on the iron top. Cover same with hot ashes and coals and surround with same, and bake. These cakes are good with tea. If they are to be sent to a fine gentleman's table omit the caraways. Split and butter and insert berries or fruit and pile same on top. Whist some fresh cream and add some sugar mauled fine in earthen pottle. Put some on top of cakes and sent away. This recipe is more than 100 years old. My people brought it from England to the colonies. (Signed) Mary Morris.

(History tells us there are hot springs at Bath, England. Here the Roman Colonists in Britain developed a fashionable watering place. Ruins of the Roman Baths at Bath, England may be visited today).

Three of Hammond and Mary Morris's sons served in the Revolutionary War, William Morris, N C S # 7252, Jesse Morris, N C S # 38236 and Travis Morris, N C and Virginia S # 33123.

Their son, named Shadrack Morris, Sr. born 1773 in Prince William County, Virginia, died December, 1848 in Limestone County, Alabama, near Athens, Alabama, married Elizabeth (Sallie) Hutchings. She died in 1823 in Stokes County, North Carolina. Their son, Joshua Morris, born May 3, 1807, died in Arkansas at the close of the Civil War. He married Eunice Jordan. Their son, John Shadrack, born December 27, 1829, at Sparta, Tennessee, died December 27, 1912, married Elizabeth Margaret Hudson. Their son, Moses Burl Morris, born March 28, 1861 Madison County, Arkansas died June 16, 1933 in Kingston, Arkansas, Madison County. He is buried at Lower Camp Ground Cemetery. He married Catherine Bell Merrick, born August 16, 1865, died February 13, 1971 in Springdale, Arkansas. She is buried at Lower Camp Ground Cemetery.

They were married in Lawrence County, Missouri, October 12, 1884. Much has been written about this remarkable person, Catherine Bell (Merrick) Morris. At the time of her passing, she was 106 years old.

In an interview, when asked as to what she credits with her long life and preservation, she said by living close to the Lord. She further stated that she came from a family of Republicans, but that her husband was a Democrat. When the time finally came, with the passage of the Woman's Suffrage Amendment in 1920 that she could vote, she, at the age of 55, started voting regularly a straight Democratic vote.

Born the year the Civil War ended, Catherine Bell moved with her family from Lawrence, Kansas to near Springfield, Missouri, when she was four years of age. She lived there until her marriage at the age of 18.

The wedding took place in October, and all through the summer, the bride-elect had busied herself with putting up food for her new home. Her husband's parents made the trip with him to Missouri for his bride, and three days later, they started back to Arkansas. They had to camp out two nights on the journey home. Catherine Bell remembered that she had the wagon so full of canned goods and other items for her new home that her husband's parents hardly had room to sleep in the wagon.

It was to be two years before the young bride would get to go back to visit her family.

The couple first settled in Big Sandy Mountain and West of Marble in Madison County. Later, they traded their farm and home for a drug store in Marble, Arkansas, which Mr. Morris operated for some time. Then the family moved to Purdy, Arkansas, where Mose Morris established the first Post Office in the community. He served as postmaster and ran a general store, keeping a farm going all the while. After his retirement, the couple moved to Kingston, Arkansas where they were living when Mr. Morris died. After his death, Catherine Bell moved to Springdale, Arkansas, to make her home with her daughter, Edith Pearl Morris Boydston.

At the time of this writing, her daughter, Edith Pearl Boydston is still living, being 100 years old.

Moses Burl and Catherine Bell (Merrick) Morris were the parents of ten children. (See the Franklin Clay Morris Story.)

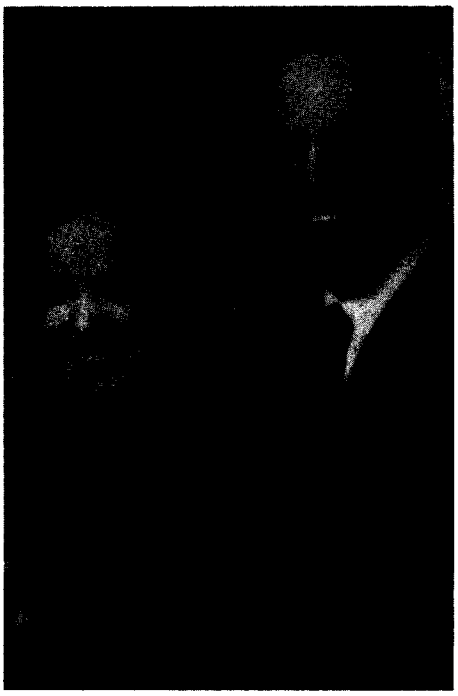
Charles David Morrison

As one would travel on Highway 71 about nine miles south of Fayetteville in West Fork, there stands an old service station, its use now changed from years ago. Our folks purchased an old homestead of about 30 acres in 1950. This was located some 200 yards north of the old service station. The property was purchased from the Newlin Real Estate at that time.



Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Morrison

Prior to moving to West Fork, Mr. Morrison started working for Gulf Oil Company in Cleveland, Oklahoma about 1934, went to Hobbs, New Mexico with Gulf and on to Oil Center, New Mexico. He then retired from Gulf Oil as a switcher after 30-31 years of service. This is when they decided retirement years would be enjoyable in Arkansas thus they purchased the farm to raise sheep and hay. A fire destroyed their barn. It was thought the fire was caused either from a transient or spontaneous combustion from freshly cut hay stacked in the barn.

During the time they lived in West Fork, Mayme Morrison worked for a time canning spinach at the cannery where Popeye stands today in Springdale.

They decided that farming was too much for them and they leased the property to their neighbors, Kitty and Reubel Neely and moved to Glendale, California in 1964 leaving some of their household and personal belongings in their care.

Charles and Mayme Morrison had 3 children. Their son, Charles, Jr. joined the Navy from Fayetteville, and he has 4 children. The daughters are Betty Weiss of Riverside, California (3 children) and Zelma Gates of Las Vegas, Nevada who has one child.

George Morrow

The Reverend George Morrow was the first of the Morrow family to settle in Washington County. He was the son of John Morrow. He was born December 2, 1800, in North Carolina. He later moved to Tennessee and from there to Cove Creek in Washington County, about 1820. Apparently he followed his sweetheart, Elizabeth Buchanan, from Tennessee. The Buchanan family came from Ireland to Virginia in 1702. Then moved to Tennessee. Elizabeth was the granddaughter of Samuel Buchanan, first member of the Buchanan family in this country from Ireland. She was the daughter of John Buchanan. She was born December 25, 1797. After George and Elizabeth both settled in Washington County, they were married December 28, 1820. They built the Morrow homestead in Morrow in 1828.

To George and Elizabeth were born ten children. John, William, James, Hugh, Mary, Robert, Julian, Amanda, Margaret and George Wilson.

When the Morrow homestead was built, native timber was used. They raised their own food and meat. They farmed the land with the use of slaves. The family was active in the Presbyterian Church. The girls played their grand piano for entertainment. After the Civil War, carpetbaggers came through Morrow. The family had to hide food in a chimney. The carpetbagger emptied all the feather beds and pillows looking for money. The Morrow home was one that was not burned during the War. George died August 23, 1892, after being thrown from a horse. Elizabeth died July 25, 1877. They are buried in a family burying ground behind the homestead.

The youngest child of George and Elizabeth was George Wilson, born May 2, 1842. He stayed on the homestead in Morrow. He married Samantha Russell of Cane Hill, December 7, 1865. Samantha, daughter of Ann Coulter and James Bryant Russell, was born January 14, 1840 at Cane Hill.

The children of George and Samantha Morrow were Annie,

Hugh, Ena, Stella, Maggie and William. This family also grew up on the homestead. George Wilson died February 18, 1935, at the age of 93. Samantha died June 21, 1905. This family of Morrows are all buried in the Bethesda Cemetery near Morrow.

Of the six children of George and Samantha, Hugh Oscar stayed in Morrow on the homestead. Hugh was born in Morrow December 6, 1876. He married Mary Elizabeth Cole of Cane Hill, June 5, 1904. Mary Lizzie was the daughter of Mary E. Woods and Samuel T. Cole. She was born June 19, 1873, at Cane Hill. The Cole family was orginally from Pennsylvania. The Samuel Cole family moved to Washington County from Russellville. They were cotton farmers on the Arkansas River. The weather and malaria was so bad they decided to move to the mountains. Samuel Cole died October 31, 1951. They are buried in Bethesda Cemetery.

The children of Hugh and Mary were, Mansie Elizabeth, born March 30, 1908. Samuel Wilson, born October 24, 1910. Reuben Cole, born August 31, 1912. Sidney, born April 13, 1916. Of these children, Wilson stayed in Morrow and is still living in the original Morrow home. Wilson married Pauline Reed of Cane Hill on July 7, 1934. Their children were Patsy, born August 25, 1935. Keith, born December 5, 1937 and Paul, born April 12, 1940. Patsy Morrow married Charles Cluck of Summers on December 26, 1953. Their children are Anita Young, born October 14, 1954. Samuel, born February 22, 1956. Charlotte Allee, born June 9, 1958. Eric, born September 22, 1959. Regina Yell, born June 18, 1961.

Keith married Sylvaleen Long of Prairie Grove on May 1, 1958. Their children are Richard, born September 9, 1958. Gary, born August 29, 1959. Linda, born September 16, 1961. Keith died January 1, 1984 and is buried in Bethesda Cemetery.

Paul married Betty Deichler of Kansas City July 15, 1961. Their children are Paul, born January 5, 1963. Jennifer, born March 22, 1968.

They came to Arkansas in 1830, locating near Prairie Grove, Arkansas. William Morton was a member of the Presbyterian Church and strongly opposed to slavery. He died in 1880. Rachel Morton died in 1877. William and Rachel were the parents of: James Alese Morton - born December 23, 1828 - died May 26, 1830; Twins: James A. Morton and Nancy Jane Morton - born February 19, 1831; John Macklin Morton - born September 4, 1833 - died in 1905; Twins: Martha Elizabeth Morton and Mary Margaret Morton - born February 27, 1838, Mary Margaret died February 28, 1838. In 1860, James A. Morton married Harriet Louisa Tollett, daughter of Henry and Eliza Brown Tollett, and they located on their farm east of Prairie Grove, Arkansas.

In 1861, James A. Morton was strongly opposed to secession, but when the war broke out he joined the Confederate Army. He was captured about 1862, and was held a prisoner at St. Louis, Alton, Rock Island and New Orleans until the war ended. He returned home to find his property had all been destroyed, but he immediately set to work and became one of the wealthier land owners of the county. James A. Morton died November 30, 1885, and Harriet Tollett Morton died in 1905. James and Harriet were the parents of three sons: William Hubert (Will) Morton - born July 28, 1861; Roland Macklin (Mack) Morton - born June 3, 1866; and James Edward (Ed) Morton - born??.

William H. (Will) Morton married Betty Smith, daughter of William Clayburn and Katherine Hunter Smith, on March 13, 1884. They were the parents of three daughters and two sons. Will Morton died on April 12, 1934 in an automobile accident. James Edward (Ed) Morton, youngest son of James A. and Harriet Tollett Morton, married Molly Johnson, and they were the parents of a daughter, Frances and a son, Austin.

On December 19, 1886, Roland Macklin "Mack" Morton, married Katherine "Kate" Smith. Kate was born on February 27, 1865, daughter of William Clayburn and Katherine Hunter Smith of Farmington, Arkansas.

William Morton and Mack Morton married sisters.

Mack Morton was one of the pioneer leaders in the Ozark Canning Industry, a partner in the first canning business established in northwest Arkansas. He was also a successful stockman and farmer (the first to raise strawberries in the community).

He served as sheriff of Washington County for four years. He served as superintendent of the Walnut Grove Presbyterian Church for over fifty years and served as an Elder of the Church for over forty years.

In a letter to a Fort Smith paper in 1926, Mack Morton wrote of going to Fort Smith, Arkansas with his father in the early winter of 1874. He was eight years old at the time. They were on the road for three days, a snow storm struck making travel difficult. They remained in Fort Smith three days selling a load of apples.

On the return trip, they brought three bales of cotton back to be delivered to Neosho, Missouri. They rested two or three days at their home at Walnut Grove and were then on their way to Neosho to deliver the cotton. While there, Mack Morton saw his first railroad mail car, and two passenger cars. His father insisted that he go through the train and look it over, but he was afraid and was content to stand off at a safe distance and watch it pull out for its destination. On the return trip home, his father took on a load of freight for Fayetteville.

Mack Morton died June 30, 1945, in the same house in which he was born. His wife, Kate Smith Morton, died August 12, 1953, at the Fayetteville City Hospital. They are buried at Cemetery Hill, Walnut Grove Community, Washington County. Mack and Kate Morton were the parents of: Grace Morton - born October 27, 1887. She celebrated her 100th birthday on October 27, 1987. Ruth Morton - born March 9, 1891 - died October 8, 1919; Albert Russell Morton - born February 27, 1894 - died July 15, 1908; Mamie Morton - born March 24, 1897 - died February 13, 1985.

On November 23, 1910, Grace Morton married Johnathan Clark (Jonce) Barnett. He was born January 20, 1876, to George Washington and Martha Ann Clark Barnett of the Steele Community in Washington County. Jonce Barnett died July 1, 1959.
