Joseph Daniel Mott

During the late 1870s, the Motts began homesteading in Arkansas. Loammia O. and Mary J. Mott with their 19-year-old son, Joseph Daniel, moved to Benton County from Missouri and established residence along the river near what is now the Evert Andrews farm. Loammia's older son, Sye B. and Sye's wife, Artemetia also relocated in Benton County.

When Loammia O. died in 1881, the river was flooding and the family was unable to reach the Brady Cemetery. Therefore, Loammia O. Mott was buried high on the quiet, peaceful 'mountain' above his home. The grave is marked with an engraved tombstone and is visited by various members of the family. The location of Mary J. Wheeler Mott's grave is unknown at the present time.

In 1881, Joseph Daniel married Lydia Ann Wheaton and established their home in Washington County. The forty plus acres bordered the Oklahoma Territory line, three miles north of Cincinnati. Joseph and Lydia had children Mary Alice in 1882, Benton Elmer in 1883, Cecilia Elizabeth in 1885, Loammia Orange in 1886, Fredrick Arthur in 1888, Joseph Edwin in 1890, an infant son who died in 1892, Sye Orion in 1896, Edna Letitia in 1897, Lydia Abigail in 1899, and Theodore Earl in 1902. Two children died in their first days and Cecilia Elizabeth died at 16 months of age.

Joseph Daniel and his oldest sons farmed their land, occasionally hiring out to neighbors. Lydia and the girls made their own soap in a big kettle in the yard and dried fruit on the roof of their log home.

In 1903, Edna became ill with diphtheria. Her parents carried her to the loft of the cabin to segregate her from the other children. Edna survived the dreaded illness and none of the other children became ill.

In 1905, Joseph Mott was seriously injured in a hunting accident. In spite of available doctors, the leg had to be amputated below the knee. His condition was so critical that his brother, L. O. Mott of Braymer, Missouri, was telegraphed to come to the bedside. L. O. wrote the following account of his visit for the Kansas City newspaper, The Comet.

"I left Braymer Thursday the 23rd and took the Kansas City Southern for Siloam Springs, Arkansas, arriving there at 10:30 the morning of the 24th. From Siloam Springs to Ballard, near the Arkansas line; there, I had to go on foot through a heavy timber country for about four miles east to Washington County, Arkansas. I found my brother very low and weak. I stayed with him until the 30th, on which date I started for home. He was receiving the very best of care, and nursing by his neighbors - a noble, generous, sympathetic, big-hearted Southern people. We hear lots of hard yarns on Arkansas and on the Arkansas people, but I want to say that they are as a rule, as law abiding people as we could see anywhere, and have some of the best laws. They have a whiskey law there prohibiting the sale of whiskey, and the law is fully enforced. Sunday gaming and hunting and Sabbath breaking is a thing of the past in northwestern Arkansas."

L. O. also mentioned the courtesy of the train crew on the Port Arthur Route, and the thousands of acres of apple and peach orchards bearing fruit. He also wrote about a short trip to Siloam Springs, saying "On the road I wanted to smoke and soon found I had no matches. We stopped at two or three houses to get a match, but matches seemed to be scarce. I finally loaded my pipe, went to a house, and asked for a light. I was told to help myself at the stove. I raked the ashes around and finally found a small coal, lit my pipe and started away. I was just climbing into the buggy when the lady came running out after the coal of fire, saying it was all they had. The fire was all out."

Joseph Daniel recovered from the surgery with only one minor complication. The amputated leg was buried in too small a box, making Joseph so uncomfortable that the boys had to rebury it in a larger casket before their father could rest and recover his strength.

In 1906, Joseph and Lydia sold their homestead to R. S. Morris and moved to the Oklahoma Territory near what is now Glencoe, Oklahoma. In 1915 they moved to Stillwater, Oklahoma, where they lived comfortably until their deaths at ages 78 and 71, respectively. Their surviving descendents include 24 grandchildren, 62 great-grandchildren and a large number of great-great grandchildren.

John Isham Mount

John Isahm Mount born June 29th, 1844 near Cainsville, (Wilson County) Tennessee moved with his parents to Washington County, Arkansas about 1850. He enlisted in the Confederate States Army in Co. "G" 16th Arkansas Infantry in October 1861 and served with that unit until the end of the war.

Catherine Elizabeth Barnett was born November 9, 1846 near Shelbyville, (Bedford County) Tennessee. She and John Mount were married February 25, 1869 by the Reverend M. D. Steele in the Methodist Church at Elm Springs, Arkansas.

John and Catherine lived in Fayetteville, Arkansas where he held several elected offices. He was a deputy sheriff there. Sheriff Patton and John Mount were patrolling the streets on July 2, 1881, the night President Garfield was assassinated. That night, three or four of the drunken Reed family from West Fork, Arkansas rode into town which they did frequently. They wore guns and shot out store windows, terrorizing people and rode upon the steps of the Courthouse. The previous week, one of their gang swore that they would get Patton. John Mount was killed instantly by mistake and Patton died soon thereafter.

Catherine Mount (John's wife) was left with four small children and the fifth child, a baby girl, was born two months later. Their only son, Edgar, was eight years old the day his father was buried in Mt. Comfort Cemetery, Arkansas.

John Mount was a Mason, and the Masons bought a ten-acre farm on a rocky hillside with a two room house and a pair of oxen which they gave to the family. Their boy (Edgar) had to stop school entirely as he was the sole bread-winner for his mother and four sisters. In those days, women could not work outside the home if they had children. However, they could teach school, if qualified, or become a servant.

Their children were: Emma Dean Mount Farish, born February 1, 1873 near Elm Springs, Arkansas died February 17, 1924 near Stony Point, Arkansas and buried in Elm Springs Cemetery. Thomas Edgar Mount, born July 3, 1875 near Elm Springs (Washington County), Arkansas. He died July 17, 1927 and was buried at Yale, Oklahoma. Martha Elvira Mount born April 3, 1878 at Elm Springs, and died in June of 1946 at Elm Springs, Arkansas.

Olive Irene Mount Glover, born August 29, 1879 at Elm Springs, Arkansas (Washington County). She died October 26, 1962 in Los Angeles, California, and was buried in Elm Springs, Arkansas. She taught school several years at Mount Comfort. John B. Mount, daughter and youngest child (named after her father) born to John B. and Catherine Mount August 16, 1881 at Clear Creek, Washington County, Arkansas. She died April 6, 1909 in Elm Springs, Arkansas, and was buried in Elm Springs Cemetery. She also taught school at Mount Comfort. From the above five children, a total of fifteen grandchildren were born. Farish: Ada Craig, Carrie Sutton, Jewell Diven, Tom Farish and Hunter Farish. Mount: Brent Mount, Carmen Bell, Lillian Rigney and Billy Hardesty. Glover: Ralph, John and Holmes Glover. Three girls, Kathryn Glover, Patricia Glass and Madge Noel.

John Mount's sister, Susan married Catherine's brother, Tom Barnett. They helped Catherine with the children after John Mount's untimely death.

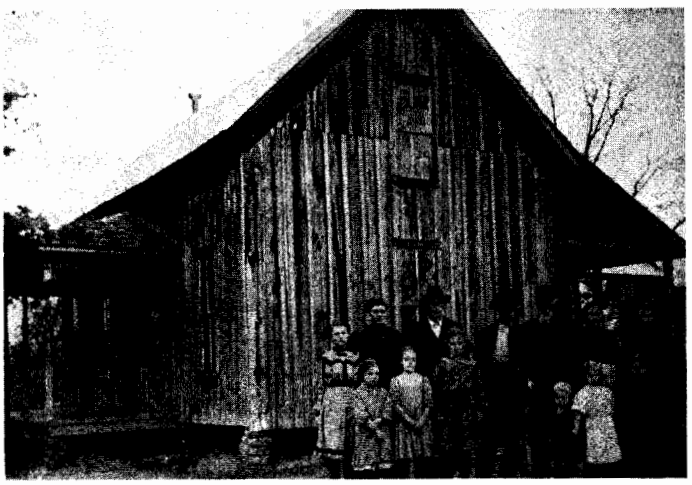
Fred Pennington Murrie

Fred Pennington Murrie, a prominent farmer of Washington County, Arkansas, was born in Illinois February 2, 1852. He was the son of Joseph G. Murrie b. 1813, Illinois, probably of Welsh-Irish descent. We have no record of the number of his family. Three of his sons arrived in Washington County, Arkansas in the last quarter of the 1800s. Fred Pennington arrived in 1878. He was living in Missouri near Poplar Bluff, when he married Sarrah Owens, b. July 12, 1857. This was 1873. One child was born before they left for Arkansas. Thirteen children were born to them. James Collin, 1876; Cora Bell, 1878; Granville, 1880; Phinley Bell, 1881; Ollie Grover, 1884; Sarrah Charlotte, 1886; Albert Clinton, 1888; John Wesley, 1889; Mary Leah, 1891; George Leonard, 1892; Rubin Fredric, 1893; Joseph Solomon, 1895; and Thomas Jefferson, 1896. He was in World War I and died while in the army, 1919.



Fred and Sarrah Owens Family, 1896, Cincinnati, Arkansas. The family was raised in this house. Back row L-R: Phinley, wife of James Collin, James Collin, Granville, Fred P. (father of Cora Bell, Sarrah (mother)). Front: one of three girls would be Sarrah Charlotte, next three would be Rubin, Leah and John Wesley. Leah is white dress. G. D. (Buck) Wilson, born in this house.

Some members of this family could have died quite young. In the 1880 Washington County Census the Fred Murrie family had only one child listed, Granville. We know Ollie Grover died the same year he was born, 1884. The early members of this family are buried in the West Cemetery, Cincinnati, Arkansas. Many are marked only with a sandstone rock. The Murries came across country from Poplar Bluff, Missouri to Washington County, Arkansas by wagon, coming over some very rough and hilly terrain. Members of Sarrah Owens Murrie's family came with them. Her father, John Owens, b. 1804, d. 1880, her mother, Rebecca Owens, b. 1820, d. 1899 and a brother, Henry Owens, b. 1861, d. 1879, they are buried in the West Cemetery, Cincinnati, Arkansas.

Fred purchased a farm about three miles east of Cincinnati, Arkansas. He paid for it in gold. He reared his family in a two story board house that sat on rock cornerstones. There were four rooms downstairs and two rooms upstairs. They farmed and at one time had a broom factory on the farm, growing their own broom corn, making the brooms, then delivering them to surrounding towns and villages, all family operated. This farm was in the Murrie family for 65 years.

Tom Murrie b. 1884 after coming to Washington County,

Arkansas, married and lived most of his married life in Indian Territory later named Oklahoma. He was living at Skiatook, Oklahoma, when he died. There are still descendants of his living there.

Charlie Murrie, b. February 18, 1856, had stayed at Lead Hill, Arkansas, when the family came across country. He married Eliza Gassett in 1880. Shortly after their marriage they loaded up their belongings in wagons and came across to Washington County, Arkansas. They had just dug their sweet potatoes so brought them along to eat on, along the way. As they traveled the weather got freezing cold, their sweet potatoes froze. Rather then lose their valuable food, the family camped and boiled them before they could thaw. They put them in trunks and ate them as they crossed country. The early family of this line died between the years of 1908-1916, except for one son, William Lorenze. All are buried in the Wedington Cemetery, Wedington, Arkansas.

Dorothy Murrie Glenn, daughter of William Lorenze, lives in Siloam Springs, Arkansas. The Murries were a thrifty and hard working people. They had little of life's luxuries. Probably no more interesting or lovable people have ever lived. Often they lived in a one or two room cabin. Large families slept several in a bed. They went through many hardships in their search for land.

I am married to G. D. Buck Wilson, son of Mary Leah Murrie Wilson. He was born in the house on the Murrie family farm, Cincinnati, Arkansas.

Andrew Nail

Andrew Nail was born in 1795 in East Tennessee. His parents were Nicholas and Mary Ann Whitfield Nail. September 20, 1817, he married Sarah "Sallie" Harris. Sarah was born in Virginia March 30, 1796. They came to Arkansas between 1830 and 1836. Also, they may have been in Oklahoma. By 1840, Joseph, Aquilla, Alexander, Matthew and Sarah, the widow of Andrew, were listed in Washington and Benton County Census records.

Nicholas Nail died sometime between October 1813 and April 1829 in Roane County, Tennessee near Kensington. According to Roane County court records, he wrote his will in 1813. In the fall of 1836, Mary Ann wrote hers sons in Arkansas that she was having trouble with the slaves not working and her son Matthew was constantly getting drunk and none of the other children would help her; so she wanted them to come home and help sell them. It was decided that Joseph and Andrew would ride back to Tennessee. (Another son, Thomas, was supposed to be in Arkansas according to Court records, but I haven't located him.) On the way Andrew was ambushed and killed between Arkansas and Tennessee.

After the estate settlement, Joesph started home with the money. From Court records we find he was chased by his brothers but managed to get away. He picked up his family in Arkansas and they moved to Texas.

The widow Sarah began to try to settle Andrew's estate. Several records show that she tried to get Andrew's part of Nicholas' estate. During this time she married Richard Daggett. She was still trying to settle by 1844.

Sarah died September 11, 1856, and is buried in Goad Springs Cemetery west of Lowell. Sharing her tall stone is her daughter, Minerva Graham, born January 18, 1834; died November 9, 1856; Bunk Graham, son of Minerva, born November 9, 1856, died September 16, 1857, and her son John, born November 18, 1820 and died January 9, 1837.

The following are the children of Andrew and Sarah Nail: Nicholas (Nick), married Sarah; known children are: James, Andrew J., Alexander, Lutisha and Mary. Columbus, born 1825 and died 1899, married Martha Ann Cowan, 1849. Martha was born 1825 and died 1900. Had the following children: Milton T., born 1850, died 1918; married 1870 to Mary E. Bradley, born 1852; died 1910. Ann P., born 1856; died 1920; married William Smith; M. V., born May 30, 1854. Alexander. Sarah Ann, married Benjamin Ford. Andrew, born 1830 or 1832, died March 1, 1892; married Henrietta Whitehead, July 19, 1864. Henrietta was born August 22, 1840; died December 28, 1929. Their children: James, John, Samuel Hunter, Joseph, Walter Alexander, Charles Oscar, William Henry, and Claude Columbus. They all lived in the Bloomington area east of present Lowell, Arkansas. John, Manerva Jane, born 1834, married Robert Wright Graham. Parents of Bunk Graham. She died in childbirth. Luticia, born 1836. Married Obediah Kendrick. In 1860 Census a Luticia is listed in the Benjamin (Berry) Ford family as a domestic.

Several descendants still live in Washington and Benton Counties.

Betty Ruth Neal

Betty Ruth Neal, my mother, was the youngest of eight children born to Jasper Monroe Neal (born January 18, 1893, died February 4, 1967) and Laura Pearl Hooper (born February 16, 1893, died August 2, 1985). They were married in their buggy August 10, 1912 at Prairie Grove, Arkansas. After seven sons: Gaylan, 1913, Howard, 1915, Carl, 1917, Wayne, 1919, Kenneth, 1922, Junior, 1924, J. C., 1927, Betty was born in 1929, the only daughter born to this union. I am sure this would have a lot to do with Grandma and Mom's closeness. As friends, Grandma and Mom would often do large family chores together. I want to share a few of these chores in this history book, as they may be forgotten by our youth.

One large family chore which my children will probably never take part in is that of butchering hogs. Of course, on many occasions, my Grandpa Neal and Dad slaughtered the hogs themselves. But sometimes they would have them scalded and gutted, then bring them home for the family to scrape and cut the meat up. The meat was either salted down for curing or frozen. Mom and Grandma would cut the fat off and would render lard in the old black kettle. It was a half-day job to melt the fat over a fire, and we children were warned to stay away from the hot kettle. Mom and Grandma took turns keeping it stirred. When the lard was done, they strained it and put it into lard cans. Then we all enjoyed the "cracklins" which are small pieces of fried skin. We also would enjoy the pork rind, which she cut from slabs of bacon, cooked on baked sweet potatoes.

Mom and Dad, at one time, milked fifteen cows by hand and sold the milk. Again, my children will not experience this, as dairies of today use electric milkers. Mom was really good at milking, as I recall. She could squirt milk across the barn, through the cracks, and straight into our mouths. Our job, while Mom was milking, was to hold the cow's tail so she would not swish Mom with it

Another chore that my sister, Mom and I still do is that of dressing chickens. I know this chore will not be passed on to my daughter, Laura, as I cannot wring the neck off as Mom does. Nor could my son, David, chop the head off as my Dad does. As a child, I was always so fascinated when Grandma and Mom would dress as many as twenty-four chickens in one day. When they would wring the necks off of four to six chickens at one time, we kids would chase the jumping, headless birds till they were lifeless, then would gather them up for Grandma to scald and all of us to pick the feathers. There always seemed to be one headless chicken that just knew where I was standing and it would jump at me which always made me scream, and my brother, Donald, laugh.

I really enjoyed spending the night at Grandma's. One of my earliest memories is that of Grandma quilting. Her quilting frames suspended from the ceiling and in front of the TV. My sister, Barbara, and I would sit under the frames poking the quilt so that her chalk and thimble would jump off. Soon she'd play "Timble Thimble, whose got the Timble" with us before going to bed.

My parents saw many important changes in their lives and I think have shared a lot of good times and hard times together. Charles Russell Walker and Betty Ruth Neal were married January 12, 1948 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. They have four children: Charles Larry, born November 18, 1948; Donald Eugene, born May 8, 1951; Candes Ann, born November 3, 1952 and Barbara Ruth, born March 16, 1955.

Larry is married to BeAnn Dennis and have three sons: twins, Charles Douglas and James Brian, born 1967 and Eric Wade, born 1974. They live on a farm in Viney Grove, Arkansas, and have a successful business, Walker Masonry Company.

Donald is married to Sheroll Smith and have one daughter, Jessica Dawn, born 1979. Don received his BS degree in Agriculture at the University of Arkansas in 1973. He is the president of the First National Bank of Siloam Springs, Arkansas, where they make their home. Sheroll received her BS degree in Elementary Education from the University of Arkansas in 1974.

Candes is married to Jim Wilson and has two children: David Oliver, born 1978 and Laura Ann, born 1980. They live in Greenland, Arkansas. Candes received her BS degree in Home Economics Education from the University of Arkansas in 1975. Jim received his BSBA degree in 1974 and is Vice President at McIlroy Bank, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Barbara is married to Clay Woody and has three children: Jeremy James, born 1978, Kara Suzanne, born 1985, and Andrew Clayton, born 1987. Clay is the Service Manager for Lewis Ford Company in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Milton Newendyke

I was born August, 1940, the youngest of four children, Ronald James, Eunice Jane and Elizabeth Ann were all older than me.

I played a piano at the age of 2. I could play my sisters' simplest piano recital pieces at this early age. I visited my sisters' school, but I could not attend there because I had to go to a special school in Jacksonville. I had to stay in a dormitory with strangers and it didn't work out so well, so my folks had to move to Clinton, Iowa, where I could go to school and come home at night.

I had a strange experience when I ran my hand along a store counter and touched a cactus.

My mother got me an old-fashioned Edison phonograph that I used a lot.

I once tried to stay at the school because my sister thought I should. I was in the 4th grade. I got mother-sickness, homesickness or whatever. I only stayed a week, then returned to my old routines of day school.

I knew too much was done for me, but that was just the way it was.

In 1953, epilepsy hit me. Strange lights began flashing and I didn't know what was happening. I was told that I had suffered terrible convulsions. I had to go to the Mayo Clinic.

I have been collecting bells since I was 7 years old.

In Colorado, the schools were falling down, in bad need of repair.

By this time, studying was hard because of the medical strain. Several of us school children were taken to a concert, afterwards we (myself and a girl-friend) missed our bus, but some people came along and took us home.

I knew Leon Carpenter, a barber in Colorado, who had been a director of a symphony in Austria.

I became a Christian when I was 9 years old because I felt I needed help to get through the epilepsy.

I tried the Arkansas Enterprises for the Blind, but the rowdiness was more than I could stand, so I came home.

My mother died in 1985 with breast cancer.

I have learned to do a lot of the housework.

I have always had a Braille dictionary and Braille Bible in my room. I have a piano, organ and accordion in my room. I can play all three of them.

Dad doesn't like the idea of my selling the piano and organ, but they belong to me. If I ever move out of my father's home, I will not be able to find a place to move them to.

I went to a Halfway House in Colorado that was for the elderly, retarded and other handicapped people. I made some things there and we made some trips, but it closed, due to lack of funds.

Dad is almost 84 now. He is becoming feeble.

A babysitter discovered that I was blind when she realized I could not see the bottle, she had to touch it to my nose in order for me to know it was there. When my mother returned, she told her that I could not see. Somehow, my folks had just not noticed.

I learned to ride a merry-go-round after several attempts. I liked the music, but the horse bucking with me scared me.

I had music lessons.

Jonathon Newman

The Jonathon Newman family migrated to Washington County, Arkansas about 1836, traveling by wagon train from the Cherokee Indian Territory of Alabama along with the Buffington family. The Newmans settled near (Summers) and the Buffingtons nearby in the Going Snake District near Westville. According to family legend, Jonathon was born August 19, 1796 in Green County, Tennessee. He married Rebecca Anna Drain Newman (or Whited). No records have been found to establish parentage of either. Records show the family was in the St. Clair area of Alabama during the first part of the 1830s where Jonathon was a teacher in the Cherokee schools and in 1833, was elected Justice of Peace in the Terrapin Creek area. It was here the oldest daughter Louisa Buffington married Ezekial Buffington of Cherokee blood. After arrival in Arkansas, Jonathon was a Justice of Peace and in 1844, became the seventh Judge of Washington County, holding that position for twenty-four years. A number of old records bear his signature. Seven known children were born to Jonathon and Rebecca Anna. 1. Louisa, born 1817, Tennessee, died 1898. Married Ezekial "Zeke" Buffington. One of their sons, Thomas Buffington, later became a principal chief of the Cherokee Nation. 2. Rebecca Shores Nall, born 1822, Tennessee, died 1909, married first to Shores, married second to John Larkin Nall. 3. Mary "Pop" Pogue, born 1823/24, Tennessee, died 1859, married John Pogue. 4. John Wesley Newman, born 1827, Tennessee, died 1878, married first Minverva Riddle, married second Joan Davis Bennett. Lived in California and Arizona. 5. Lydia Elms, Bower, Day 1833, Alabama, died 1912. Married first Edward Elms, second William Bower, third Ruben Day. 6. Aaron Newman, born about 1836, Alabama or Arkansas, married Sarah Choate. 7. Rachel Lovina, born 1839, Arkansas, died 1859, married Edward Osborne Elms. The mother, Rebecca Anna, died February 2, 1848. It was passed down that she was buried somewhere on the home place near Summers. No stone or other trace found. Jonathon married a second time on July 23, 1852 to Matilda Bell, widow of James C. Bell. They had a daughter Matilda Margaret who died at the age of seven in 1862. Jonathon died October 31, 1862 in (Marrs Hill Township) and is said to be buried on the ("Widow Bell's Place"). His will was not probated until after the close of the Civil War.

Andy Nickell

Andrew T. Nickell was an old time Methodist circuit riding preacher. The Reverend Andy came to Arkansas from Hazel Greene in Wolfe County, Kentucky in 1874 to locate land for a homestead. He was looking for good healthy water and a land of good hunting. He found it in the hills of northwest Arkansas near what is now Hazel Valley. He returned to Kentucky for his family. It is said that among things that prompted the move was the Reverend Nickell's contention that just too much bourbon whiskey flowed in Kentucky.

The Andy Nickell family moved to Arkansas in 1880. This included his wife China Wallin Nickell and three children: Alice, Bob and Miles. Also included in the Nickell caravan were Andy's parents John B. and Betty Baker Nickell; Andy's four sisters Jane, Fannie, Perline and Polly Ann; Andy's mother-in-law Margaret Jane Graham Wallin and her young son Frank (7 yrs. old), Andy's brother-in-law Joe V. Wallin and his wife Lottie Grubba Wallin; and the George Barker family.

The Nickell caravan crossed the Mississippi River by boat and traveled by train to Alma, Arkansas, which was the nearest railway station. They were met there by John Dees from Hazel Valley. He brought wagons and oxen and the caravan made the long rough journey up the Boston Mountains along the Frog Bayou. A heavy snow fell and they had to camp just below Low Gap which is west of Sunset. Andy had dead branches and wood gathered and a huge log heap was made and fired. When it had burned down sufficiently he had the unburned logs pulled away and the embers cleaned off, and the women and children were bedded down on the resulting warm earth. The rest of the company kept warm by the still burning logs.

It is thought Mr. John Dees was also from Kentucky, but was here much earlier. He took the family, sheltered, fed and cared for them until they could be established in their own home. Mr. Dees lived where Joe Nickell and later Luther Dennis lived. The Nickell cemetery is also located on this land.

All those who made the trip settled in Hazel Valley. Andy was a land surveyor as well as a circuit riding preacher, and made many trips to the land office at Harrison in behalf of the settlers obtaining land patents. He was also good with carpenter tools and made coffins for neighbors when needed.

Traveling by horseback the Rev. Nickell preached in churches in Hazel Valley, Brannon Mountain, Delaney, Dutton, St. Paul, West Fork, Mountainburg, Alma, Rudy, Chester and Winfrey. He also traveled to other churches in Madison, Newton, Johnson, Boone and Crawford Counties. It was on a trip to Johnson County that his son, Miles, met and married Ruth Everil Wallis, and to Crawford County that his son Jep met and married his wife Beva Coleman, and to Boone County that his oldest grandson Ernest Wilson met and married his wife Bertha Anderson.

Rev. Andy was told as he neared one church that he might have a rough time of it. He was told there were some rough boys there and he might get run out of the community. The reputed leader of the gang was a large gangling red-haired boy who was the toughest of the lot. Rev. Andy was not discouraged and as soon as he arrived went looking for this big lad. He introduced himself and told the youth that he had been told his bridle and saddle might be cut while he was preaching inside. He asked the lad if he would be so kind as to watch after his horse and gear while he was preaching. The boy proudly accepted the chore and there was no trouble during a successful revival.

The Nickell family was noted throughout the area for their group gospel singing and several of them played the old pump organ. They traveled to many churches and gatherings singing and playing in addition to the elder Andy's preachings. One of the younger sons, Fred, could play several instruments and sing in a lovely tenor at the same time. I have seen him play the harmonica and a guitar at the same time or the harmonica and the organ at the same time.

Andy Nickell lived a busy and fruitful life and many stories and legends grew around his life. He was an outdoors man and an avid hunter. One of his favorite sports, although at that time it was a necessary way of life and also a means of providing food, was coon hunting. He often referred to the baying of his coon dogs as "heavenly music".

One time when Grandpa Andy went to the land office in Harrison, the agent there had a bloodhound which had just whelped. He gave grandpa two of the baby pups and he carried them home in his saddle bags stopping along the way getting milk for his pups. They made the journey safely and grew into very good coon dogs. One of them became a favorite of grandpa's and he named him "Ol Riley" probably after the land agent.

The children of Andy and China Nickell were: Alice Elizabeth b. 1874 d. 1965 m. 1891 to Thomas James Wilson b. 1865 d. 1942. Robert Vardiman Nickell b. 1874 d. 1944 m. 1897 to Lucinda Blevins b. 1878 d. 1917, #2 Lela Wilson b. 1897 d. 1972. John Miles Nickell b. 1876 d. 1961 m. 1899 to Ruth Everil Wallis b. 1872 d. 1938. James Henry Nickell b. 1881 d. 1951 m. 1902 to Martha Mae Osborn b. 1886 d. 1964. Georgia Ann b. 1882 d. 1973 m. to Riley Smith b. 1882 d. 1911, #2 William Dunaway (deceased). Jeptha Curtis Nickell b. 1883 d. 1969 m. 1901 to Beva Coleman b. 1883 d. 1966. Beulah b. 1886 d. 1912 never married. Geneva b. 1888 d. 1971 m. 1901 to Franklin Peters b. 1878 d. 1962. Josephine b. 1890 d. 1957 m. 1906 to Luther Dennis b. 1885 d. 1965. Richard Nickell b. 1893 d. 1946 m. Alpha Brooks. Fred Nickell b. 1895 d. 1926 m. 1918 to Angie Skelton (deceased). William Nickell b. 1897 d. 1954 m. Eunice Chandler (deceased), #2 Addie Wittmeyer (deceased).

In 1916 the pioneer Andy Nickell was laid to rest in the little cemetery which bears the Nickell name. His wife China followed in 1924. Both are laid to rest among their kin in the hills they were proud to call home.

Dora Alice Nickell

Dora Alice Nickell, the daughter of Joseph D. Nickell and Mary Ann Leslie was born September 10, 1895 in Washington County, Arkansas. Dora was the youngest of four daughters, Elizabeth (1888), Purlena (1892) and Millie (1894). Her family lived in Reed Township when she was very young.

In 1905 or 1906, Dora moved to Sevier County, Arkansas with her mother, step-father John L. Lyons, half-sister, Rosa and half-brother, Ted. There was another half-sister, Mamie, and two more half-brothers, Walter and Densmore born in Sevier County. Dora lived at Lockesburg and then Ben Lomond until around 1914 or 1915. The family moved to Little River County. She met and married Wilbur Franks and they had a son, Wilbur. Her son was mute, and was very near to her heart. Dora often spoke of Wilbur in her latter days of life. Wilbur died at six years of age in the late 1920s.

Dora's last husband was Manuel DeLapaz. They lived at Seagoville, Texas (South of Dallas) on a ranch. They lived there until the 1950s or 1960s. From Texas, she moved with her husband, Manuel, to Tipton, California. She remained in California until Manuel's death in early 1970's. Dora sold out and flew to Memphis to make her home with her half-sister, Rosa Lyons Hart Stepp at Marianna, Arkansas. Soon after Dora's move to Arkansas, she was admittted to a nursing home at Stuttgart, Arkansas. When space became available, Dora was transferred to Crestpark, Retirement Inn in Marianna, Arkansas; so she would be near her sister, Rosa Stepp, nieces and nephews. Dora remained in Crestpark until her death August 13, 1984 at the age of 88 years 11 months and 3 days. Dora was interred in Memorial Park Cemetery, Marianna, Arkansas—August 15, 1984.

John Miles Nickell

John Miles Nickell, born in Kentucky on April 22, 1876, was the third child of Reverend Andy T. Nickell and China Wallin Nickell who came to Arkansas in 1880 and settled near Hazel Valley in southeastern in Washington County.

Miles was only four years old when the family made the trip. It was a presidential election year. James Garfield was the Republican candidate and was elected. When the Nickell clan would stop at towns or gatherings, young Miles was put upon a box or store counter and told to holler for President Garfield. On one such occasion, he was put upon a counter and yelled loudly, "Hurrah for John B. Nickell." John B. was his grandfather who also was making the trip.

Reverend Andy Nickell was a Methodist circuit rider and on one of his trips to Johnson County, his son Miles met Ruth Evere Wallis. Miles and Ruth were married March 1, 1899.

Miles came to Washington County while very young and grew up with all the Civil War stories and early settlers. He remembered them very well and told his children these stories many times with no variation. He was the greatest storyteller his children ever heard.

Soon after their marriage, Miles and Ruth bought a hillside farm from his uncle Joe Wallin for $350.00. The transaction and deed were made on October 4, 1899, but the deed was never recorded and a new deed was made and recorded April 11, 1907.

This is the story of their years on this farm as my father, Miles Nickell told me December 31, 1958.

"Uncle Joe Wallin set the orchard out in 1885 with an orchard contract through Stark Brothers Nursery. They were to get the first two crops from the orchards. Uncle Pack Bogan and Uncle Zack Bogan set out orchards at the same time. John White also set out one at the same time, but he set it on government land. Stark Brothers lost their crop there but they made a killing on the other apple crops.

"I made $2,200.00 clear one year on the orchard. Uncle Lewis Thompson wanted to buy it, but I told him he couldn't afford to buy it for what it was worth. Harrison Claypool at Springdale bought apples that year. He bought apples from all over the United States. He said my orchard was the prettiest one he ever saw.

"Another year I sold the crop for $1,600.00 and kept all the off falls. I sold the apples one year to John Osburn for $500.00 and never had to touch the apples. Then another year I sold the crop to Sandford Warford (he was Chris Ritchie's father-in-law) for $500.00 and again, never had to touch an apple.

"I made enough off that orchard to pay for this place (a bottomland farm) if I had taken care of it. I ran sheep and they kept the orchard clear of sprouts and weeds. It sure did help the trees. Most of the trees were York. There ought to be some of those old trees left (actually there was a few Jonathans).

"Uncle Joe put the orchard out on raw new ground. We rolled big ash logs 4 feet through into heaps and burned them. There was no market for the timber then. Every year our apples hit because the north wind was kept off by the Root place which was adjacent to our. One thing that made the land so rich was the buzzard's roost (where those buzzards roosted was the richest ground of all).

"The apples were put in wagons and hauled to the railroad at Thompson Cut.

"Uncle Joe was a rambler and wanted to go raise cotton. He sold the place to your mother and me and moved to Mena, Arkansas".

In 1911, Miles and Ruth Nickell bought the bottomland farm from Aunt Sis Douglas, a widow of George Douglas. They sold the hillside farm to Ernest and Betha Wilson in 1918. The house that was there was built years ago (it may have been over 100 years old) by George Lewis. It had two large rooms with a fireplace at each end, and had high ceilings - 10 feet or more. A kitchen and dining room were on the east side of these rooms and on the west side a new room was made for Aunt Sis to live in for awhile. My mother used to paper the large south room every year with newspapers. We children learned our letters from the walls. My father tore his old house down and built the one that now stands in 1936.

Eight children were born to this union. The first two died as infants and a son died when he was sixteen. Four daughters and a son lived to adulthood and are still living. Hirrel Nickell Prichard was the oldest, Chester A. Nickell next, then Alice Nickell Springston, Bonnie Nickell Paschal, and Crystal Nickell Paschal. All have finished the University of Arkansas and all have taught school. The son and the youngest daughter did not like teaching, but the combined years of teaching of all is well over 120 years.

Chester is today a Baptist minister and a grandson, Jerry Paschal, is also a Baptist minister.

My parents moved to Fayetteville when my older brother and sister finished grade school at Hazel Valley.

We often sang as a family group. Papa as tenor, my brother as bass, one sister and mother as alto and the rest of us as sopranos. We all worked hard, but had fun as a family and have many cherished memories.

Papa and Mother always took us to Sunday School and Church. I remember when I was about four years old how we rode in a new surrey which my father bought for that purpose. We were very proud of that fine surrey. We attended church and school at Hazel Valley, but later when the district boundary was changed we went to school and church at White House.

My father was active in church; he was a Methodist. He was also active in school and community affairs. He served as school director for years and sat on the election board many times. I remember how we used to go to the School Rally at Hazel Valley. This was held on a Saturday sometime in the fall after crops were in. There was always a good speaker, good singing and dinner on the ground.

In the earlier years the men folk played basketball which was quite a sport at that time. My parents worked hard all week through, but when Saturday noon came the men folk went to play ball.

One time my sisters and I drove a buggy pulled by a very spirited mare to a ball game in a field above Hazel Valley. As we were returning home, the mare became excited and ran away, turning the buggy over and throwing us girls out. No one was hurt, and the buggy was not ruined as she stopped soon afterwards. Friends helped set the buggy upright and we drove on home.

In 1944 when Miles Nickell was 68, he returned to his birth place in Hazel Green, Kentucky. He remembered how as a youngster he used to take his mother's goslings down to a spring and let them swim in a pond below the spring. He went to the spring, but he said "Things just don't seem quite natural".

My mother, Ruth E. Nickell, passed away March 11, 1938. My father, Miles Nickell, passed away March 2, 1961. Both are laid to rest in the Nickell Cemetery.

They both worked hard to give their children an education and advantages which they never had. Their is a rich legacy which they passed on to their children. We are proud to be their children.

George C. Norwood

George C. Norwood was born May 13, 1850 in Camden, Maine. He was the son of John and Sally Norwood. His wife's name was Sophie. He preceded his nephew, Francis Marion to Fayetteville, but we do not know the date he came. He was a member of the Seventh Day Advent Church. He built the church that still stands on East South Street. They are buried in Combs Cemetery east of Fayetteville.

Francis Marion was born in Illinois (probably Monmouth, Warren County) June 25, 1865. He was the son of Hiram Adelbert and Elizabeth Amanda Smith Norwood. He was marri[illegible] Martha Ellen (Ella) Fulk about 1862. She was born in Virginia. He became ill and the doctor told him he should go to a warmer climate. They had two children. Elmer Francis born May 11, 1886 in Monmouth, Warren County, Illinois and Justice Harry born July 22, 1890 in Galesburg, Knox County, Illinois. They came by covered wagon and had to stop and work along the way to earn their living. They had four more children on the way: Arthur born December 28, 1892 and Bertha born March 20, 1894, Buford Marion born November 28, 1895 and Arville born February 28, 1897. All four were born in Missouri, but the last two were born in Grant City, Worth County. They came first to Mena, Arkansas and Elmer, age fourteen, and Jess, age ten, worked in a sawmill. Their last child, Etta, was born July 24, 1902 near Mena, Polk County, Arkansas. Francis Marion's uncle George C. told him if they would come to Fayetteville he would teach Elmer and Jess the carpenter trade. They came from Mena to Fayetteville in the wagon and Francis Marion was on a pallet, not knowing if he would make it or not. They camped on top of Mount Gaylor for a few days so he could regain some strength. It took them two more days to arrive in Fayetteville.

George C. taught Elmer and Jess to build houses and Marion's health improved and he became a miller and lived until July 3, 1922. All the children grew up in Fayetteville and continued to live there during their lifetimes.

Elmer married Pearl Flora Clark June 16, 1909 in Fayetteville and they had the following children: Ruth Elizabeth born June 9, 1910 was married to Martin Lewis Barnhill, Harold Lee born September 10, 1912 never married. He worked with his father in the business. Elmer Francis, Jr. born August 8, 1927. He taught at West Seattle High School, Seattle, Washington for twenty-six years.

Elmer, after running a woodworking shop for a short time, began building houses. In 1928 he and Clyde Williams became partners and built the Norwood and Williams Construction and Lumber Yard. They remained in this business until Clyde's health failed and the business was sold. Elmer then built a shop, office and lumber shed back of his home on East South Street and worked there until he had a stroke in 1960. They were members of the First Christian Church all their married life and Elmer served as building supervisor when the church was built. He died May 10, 1965. Pearl died October 16, 1982. They are buried in the Evergreen Cemetery in Fayetteville.

Justice Harry Norwood

Justice Harry (Jess) married Bessie Grace Sinclair July 17, 1911 in Fayetteville. He remained a carpenter throughout his lifetime and built a number of houses in Fayetteville. Their children were: Opal Jessie born July 22, 1912. She worked as a bookkeeper until her retirement; Helen Altine born September 17, 1914 married Joe Mack Woods; Marion Douglas born August 18, 1916 married Ella Mae Bennett. He worked for Campbell 66 trucking firm for many years; Elmer Mack born May 30, 1924 married Wanda Mae Robinson; Charles Edward born May 2, 1926 married Barbara Ball. Jess died July 29, 1939 and Bess died January 10, 1973. They are buried in Fairview Memorial Cemetery in Fayetteville.

Arthur (Art) married Lillie (Lil) Thomas about 1916 in Fayetteville. He was a carpenter and worked on many houses in Fayetteville. They had one son, Aaron Howard born July 27, 1917 who married Mabel Alberta Follett of Rogers, Arkansas. He was a fine finish carpenter and formed a partnership with Clifford Ward. Their business was known as Norwood and Ward. They did cabinet work for large contractors. Art died March 11, 1959 and Lil died July 4, 1982. They are buried in Fairview Memorial Gardens in Fayetteville.

Bertha married Will Poore December 24, 1910 in Fayetteville. She was a member of the First Christian Church. They had the following children; Pauline born June 14, 1912 married John Burson; Billie born February 3, 1914 married Inez ____; Ellis born September 3, 1915 married Carmen Stringfield. He worked for the fire department until his retirement; Lucille born March 9, 1918 married John E. Doren; Doris Jean born March 4, 1923 married Stanley Ruhl; Betty born August 22, 1925 married Clyde Terry; James born September 4, 1928 married Joan Rouse; and Jo Ann born May 17, 1931 married Frank Reilly.

Buford Marion married Lillie Belle (Lillian) Thompson February 19, 1918 in Tulsa, Oklahoma. They were members of the Assembly of God Church. They had the following children; Buford Norman born June 3, 1921 married Maureen Williams of Idabel, Oklahoma. He became a homebuilder in Houston was owner of Monarch Home, Inc., which became one of the top five homebuilding companies in Houston in the early 1980s; Glen Noel born July 2, 1924 married Lois Pearl Treece. He organized a home building company, Norwood Homes, Inc. and became the largest homebuilder in Texas in the 1960s; Jack Paul born May 12, 1927 married Betty Jane Harrod. He also became a homebuilder in Houston and Richmond, Texas with a company named Norwood Builders, Inc.

Arvilla married Bert Rike around 1920. They had no children.

Etta married Robert Dinsmore (Jake) Yarberry December 22, 1919 in Fayetteville. He worked for Bell Telephone Company, beginning as clean-up boy at the age of twelve and staying until retirement. They had two children: Donald Ray born June 11, 1927 married Bille Jean Schoeppey from Fort Smith, Arkansas. He died February 17, 1960 and is buried in Fairview Cemetery in Fayetteville; and Leta Mae born June 18, 1929, who married Allen Ingram. She died April 6, 1949 and is buried in Forest Park Cemetery in Fort Smith, Arkansas.

William Henry Harrison Nott

William Henry Harrison Nott, born 1818 in Ohio, married Phebe Remy in 1840 in Floyd County, Kentucky. About 1843, William and Phebe and other relatives came to Arkansas settling in the West Fork area.

William and Phebe had seven children, the first two born in Kentucky and the rest in Arkansas: John Arbuth Allen, born 1840, married Sarah Ellen Fine; Samuel, born 1842, died in Arkansas 1846; Christopher Columbus, born 1845, died in Missouri 1863; William, born 1848, died 1854; Cyril Ward, born 1850, married Leathy Forrester, had three children; Peggy Elizabeth, born 1852, died 1856; and Francis Marion, born 1855, married Martha Forrester 1875.

William H. H. Nott died in 1881, buried in Brentwood Cemetery. Phebe Remy Nott died in 1891 in Texas.

John A. A. Nott taught schools and penmanship classes in Missouri and Kansas, then moved to Texas where he was postmaster for many years. He and Sarah Ellen had seven children, all born in Washington County: Calista, born 1861, died 1862; Luallen, born 1863, died 1864; Mary Minnesota born September 25, 1865, married John Franklin Newkirk; William Zachariah, born 1868 - died 1872; Frances Olive Adaline, born 1873 - died 1876; Norma Arizilla, born 1877 - died 1914, not married; and Henry Clinton, born 1879, married Cora Mae Helms, lived in Texas.

John A. A. Nott died in 1919 and Sarah Ellen died in 1921, in Texas, but both are buried in Lowell Cemetery in Cherokee County, Kansas.

Mary Minnesota (called Minnie) married in 1883, John Franklin Newkirk, son of a prominent Dade County, Missouri farmer. Frank and Minnie went to Texas with her parents where they operated a store for a few years, but returned to live near Southwest City in Newton County, Missouri. During this time, two children were born, Arbuth Elwood, 1888 and Sarah Edna in 1892. When Arbie was four years old, he became lost in a wooded area near the Cowskin River. He was found with his dog, safe, about thirty hours later, and seven miles from home. Arbie died of typhoid fever at age twenty-one.

From the Southwest City area, they moved into Indian Territory (now Delaware County, Oklahoma), where their youngest daughter, Alta Elizabeth was born in 1903. In 1905, they bought a farm south of Lowell, Kansas, in Cherokee County, moving there by covered wagon.

J. F. Newkirk died in 1940 and Minnie died in 1959. They are buried in Lowell Cemetery, Cherokee County, Kansas.

Edna Newkirk married Bert Estabrooks and they had five children: Frank, born 1916, married Doris Carr, they have two children, Franklin Howard, Jr. and Leona Elizabeth; Rachel Irene, born 1914, not married; Helen, born 1919 (twin), married Albert Fifhouse, they have two children, Janice and Albert; Hollis, born 1919 (twin), married Carl Colvin, had one son, Eddie, born 1947 - died 1956 and Burton, born 1923, married Frances Whitmer, they have two sons, Burton and Andrew.

Bert Estabrooks died in 1926 and Edna died in 1979. They are buried at Lowell Cemetery, Cherokee County, Kansas.

Alta Newkirk, married Albert Cutright, they had two children. Alta died in 1976 and Albert died in 1957. They are buried in Hillcrest Cemetery, near Galena, Kansas in Cherokee County.

Betty Jean Cutright, born 1926, married Raymond Francis Pulley, they have five children: Mary Margaret, born 1946, married Darrel Endicott, they had one son, Steven Craig, born 1965, died 1981; Ronald Eugene, born 1948, married Barbara Hall, they have four children, Roxanne, Tony, Valerie and David; Pamela Dianne, born 1953, married (1) Daniel Brand, they have one son, Jason; she married (2) Joe Mathis, they have one daughter, Kelly Jo; Patrick Linn, born 1956, married Charlotte Early, they have two children, Adam Scott and Sara Kathryn; and Roberta Dianne born 1965.

Ronald Petty Cutright, born 1935, married Nina Luppold, they have four children: Carol Ann, born 1959, married John F. Ryder, they have three children, Matthew, John and Hallie; Robert Petty, born 1960, married Janet Bowles, they have two children, Austin Petty and Arien Kristina; Phillip Edward, born 1962, married Lauren Minea, they have two children, Dustin and Courtney, and Karen Sue, born 1966.

John J. O'Neal

John O'Neal was born in Cocke County, Tennessee September 8, 1821. He was married in Decatur, Meigs County, Tennessee July 30, 1844 to Mary Ann Moore who was born March 3, 1823 in Cocke County. She was the daughter of Daniel Moore and Catherine.

Mary Ann Moore O'Neal Family about 1895. Back- Louiza O'Neal Webb, Tennessee O'Neal Wiswell, Emily O'Neal Cawood, Tennie Thompson Kennan, Ruby Thompson Goree, Beatrice Cawood Gregory. Front- Ruby O'Neal Eidson, Lillian Webb High, Maud O'Neal Nail, (Effie Webb Goree) standing behind Maud, Myrtle O'Neal Morgan, Nancy Jack O'Neal holding Earnest O'Neal, Grandmother Mary Ann Moore O'Neal, Syrena O'Neal Thompson holding baby Nellie, Mayme Thompson Robinson, Emma Thompson, Harry Cawood and Garland Thompson. The little dog was named Smarty. The lady on the porch was a neighbor. The story as told was that the men got tired of waiting for the photographer who was late coming and went for a walk. They were gone when the photographer arrived, so he took the picture without them.

The O'Neals moved to Washington County, Arkansas sometime between April 10, 1849 and April 12, 1851 since the first three children were born in Meigs County, Tennessee. Harrison Napoleon O'Neal was born in Meigs County April 10, 1849 and the next child was born in Washington County, Arkansas April, 1851. The other children were born in Arkansas.

John O'Neal was a farmer. He had land patent for 40 acres and 3 hundredths of an acre signed by President Buchanan the first day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and fifty nine.

A granddaughter who is now 100 years of age said the O'Neal family moved around during the Civil War so that John O'Neal would not have to fight in the war. That is possible since a child died in March of 1864 in Johnson County and another child died in Madison County July 31, 1864.

One of the terrible tragedies in the family was the death on May 9, 1880 by accident of C. C. Cawood, son of W. H. and Emily Cawood. He was 3 months and 21 days old. He was thrown from his mother's lap when the horse ran away. It was told that the mother said she would never wear kid gloves again. She thought she could have held onto the baby if she hadn't had the gloves on.

Many descendants of John and Mary Ann O'Neal still live in Washington and Benton County. Among them are Ada Kennan Reis, Robert Eidson, Neva Eidson Buchanan, Agnes (Peggy) O'Neal Mason, Gertrude High Sherman, Hazel High Cooper, Montez High Nail, Harold High, Wilma Webb Samuel, Thelma Webb Harris, Vera Lou Goree Fowler and Mabel Goree Bell. There are many others of the next generation and the next.

James William Oglesby

On November 5, 1935 James W. Oglesby and his family moved to Springdale, Arkansas into a rented frame house on an unpaved road. The road was West Emma Avenue and the house, 1115 West Emma, has been replaced by the Springdale High School.

Born of Welch and Swiss parents on December 23, 1894 in Tonawa, Indian Territory (Oklahoma) he was the second of four children of James William Oglesby (1858 - 1937) and Savannah Poorman Oglesby (1866 - 1953). He spent the first eight years of his life in Caulksville, Arkansas where his father owned the general store and financed cotton planters who utilized his cotton gin. To escape the malarial climate of this Arkansas River area the family moved to Gravette in Benton County in 1902. His parents, both registered pharmacists, opened a drug store on Main Street, one block from their home on Second Street.

Educated in the Caulksville and Gravette Public Schools and the Kansas City College of Pharmacy, Jim passed the Oklahoma State Board of Pharmacy on April 14, 1916 with the highest score of anyone to have taken the examinations to that date. He missed only one question. Part of the exam was to identify by smell alone a collection of unlabeled pharmaceuticals. One eluded him - a pungent, distinct liquid. It was paregoric that kept him from having a perfect score.

His first position was in a drug store in Collinsville, Oklahoma. During World War I he served as a pharmacist with the United States Army Medical Corps at Camp Pike, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Following the Armistice he married Edith Thompson on December 31, 1918 in Fort Smith, Arkansas. His wife, the daughter of Dr. John Sherman Thompson (1866 - 1948) and Lydia Lourania Davis Thompson (1866 - 1916) of Gravette, was a teacher in the Gravette School System and had completed a wartime position in Washington D. C. with the Ordinance Department. Jim returned to pharmacy in the family drug store in Gravette and Edith returned to her teaching position. In 1920 they built a home on Second Street from plans drawn by Edith on butcher's paper thumb-tacked to her kitchen dough board. Their home was the first in Gravette to have central heat. They became the parents of two children: James William (April 8, 1922) and Betty (March 18, 1924).

In 1929 the family moved to Oklahoma City where Jim became manager of the Crown Drug Store there. In 1931 he purchased a drug store in Fort Smith, Arkansas on the corner of Grand and Greenwood Avenues. The drug store featured motorcycle delivery of prescriptions, a soda fountain and luncheonette with curb service, a cosmetic and fragrance department, a newspaper, magazine and book department and a branch post office.

In 1935 Springdale was in the depths of the Depression but there was a busy seasonal fruit and vegetable market. It was in the center of this area that Jim found a building for his drug store, 316 East Emma. It opened for business on January 1, 1936. Expansion became necessary and space was tripled by a move eastward in the same block to 320 East Emma in 1941. Following the end of World War II both the building and the interior of the drug store were extensively remodeled and were the cover photograph and feature article of The Midwestern Druggist Magazine Vol. xxvii, No. 2 (December, 1951). Periodic remodelings continued and in 1967 the store area was doubled by expanding into an adjoining building. A customer parking lot was added.

In 1972 the store was sold and after 36 years in the same business block Oglesby's Drug Store was operating without Jim Oglesby.

Jim retired to his home on West Emma Avenue (long since paved). His custom home, a modern stone, glass and wood structure had received world-wide recognition; it had been published in a national periodical and internationally in book format in three languages. His house was in the next block from his first residence in Springdale.

He enjoyed travel in the forty-eight contiguous states, Canada and Mexico but rarely spoke of it. Instead, he talked about his shop - a wood-working shop incorporated into his home. It was completely equipped with power and hand tools, some of which belonged to his great grandfather who came westward from Virginia in 1835. Most of his projects were furniture.

He was a member of the Arkansas Pharmaceutical Association, The American Legion and the First Baptist Church. On May 24, 1967 the Arkansas State Board of Pharmacy honored him with its Honorary Certificate in recognition of fifty years of servce.

He died May 22, 1982 at the age of 87 and is buried in Bluff Cemetery, Springdale. He was preceded in death by his daughter (Betty, 1924 - 1958) and was survived by his wife, his son and a granddaughter, Debby (Mrs. Terry Coppage), Tulsa, Oklahoma.

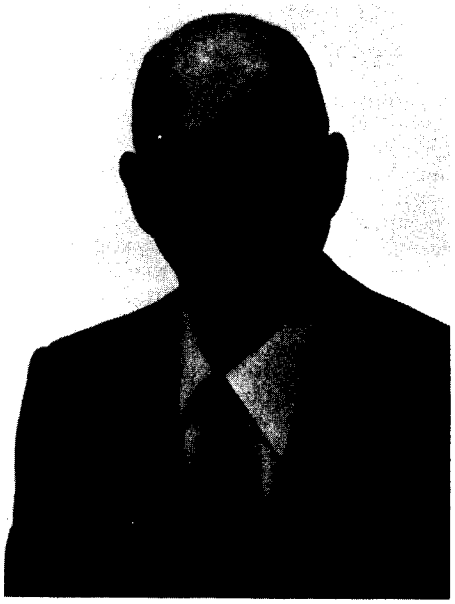
William Rolen Orton, III, Lori Ann Orton, Marion Rogers Orton, William Rolen Orton, Jr., Lisa Marion Orton, Benjamin Rogers Orton, Fayetteville, Arkansas - - 1964.



William Rolen Orton III

William R. Orton, Jr. was born on May 4, 1922 in Texarkana, Texas although the family home at the time was in Fulton, Arkansas, thirty miles north. His father was William Rolen Orton and his mother Mignon Jeanette Johnson Orton. Bill, Jr. was raised in Fulton and Hope, Arkansas. From 1940 to 1943 he attended the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, majoring in music. During World War II he served as a First Lieutenant Platoon Leader in the Fourth Infantry Division in the European Theatre, seeing action in Normandy, the Battle of the Bulge, the Hurtgen Forest and southern Germany; he was awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart medals. After the war he returned to the University of Arkansas and then the University of Illinois where he received his Ph. D. in Mathematics. After a year as a Fulbright student in France he taught for one year at Oberlin College in Ohio and then in 1953 was appointed Assistant Professor at the University of Arkansas. He retired as Professor Emeritus in 1987. Professor Orton's speciality was mathematics education. He wrote numerous papers and developed many special courses for secondary and elementary mathematics teachers; he also directed many in-service, summer, and academic year institutes for teachers. During 1966-67 Dr. Orton worked as Staff Scientist in New Delhi, India under the USAID program; during 1977-78 he served as a Fulbright Lecturer in Tehran, Iran. His hobby was music and he sang supporting and leading roles in several community musical productions. He was active in church work and served as lay preacher and Elder in the Presbyterian Church.

In 1950 William Orton married Marion Claire Rogers of Urbana, Illinois. They had four children - Lori Ann born in 1952, William Rolen, III born in 1954, Lisa Marion born in 1957, and Benjamin Rogers born in 1959. The biography of Marion Rogers Orton appears elsewhere in this volume. Some of the ancestors of William Rolen Orton, Jr. are listed below: Grandparents - George Washington Orton and Cornelia Alice Phillips, August T. Johnson and Sarah Virginia Moss; Great-grandparents - Robert Weakley Orton and Sarah Cochran, Boling Clarke Phillips and Mary Elizabeth Sandefur, Theodore Johnson and Bertha Herrer, Matthew Moss and Jane Elinor Evelyn Herring; Great Great Grandparents - Richard Orton and Lucy Bond, William Cochran and Elizabeth, Eddins Soloman Phillips and Patsy Clarke, Patrick Sandefur and Sarah Dickinson, Gustav Herrer and Wilhelmina Rabel. Great Great Great Grandparents - Robert Orton and Mary, William Bond and Ann, Matthew Moss, John Steel and Ellen Woods.

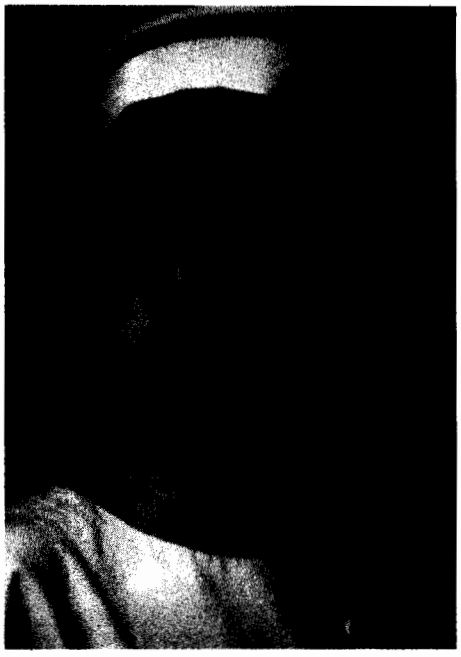
Thomas Overton

The history of the Overtons in Washington County begins for me with my great-grandfather, Thomas Overton. He was born Thomas Lamb in Bedford County, Tennessee in 1836. The family story says he got into a fight with a man in Tennessee and beat him to death, and threw the body down a well. He then came to Arkansas on horse back. He changed his name to Overton after the famous Judge John Overton, one of the founders of Memphis. Judge Overton was one of the richest and most influential people in the country at one time, and helped his good friend Andrew Jackson to become President. At least in changing his name, he picked one with respect, money, and power behind it. Perhaps he wanted people to think he was related to the Judge, even though he wasn't. Or maybe it was just a name he would be able to remember. There was a reward out for Thomas of $100.00 for the killing. Hearing of this, Thomas returned to Tennessee in a year, and collected his own reward. He told authorities he knew Thomas Lamb quite well, and knew for a fact that he was dead. So they gave him the reward — which was really on himself — and he returned to Arkansas where he married and started a new life. My father told this "secret", but after he died, I found out the "secret" had been passed down to everyone in the family, and then some.

His sister, Emily Lamb, married Jasper Harris, and they settled near Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

Thomas married Nancy Johnson, born in 1847 in Arkansas. Nancy was the daughter of Isaac and Susan Todd Johnson.

Isaac was born in 1822 in Tennessee and died in 1865 near Cassville, Missouri during the Civil War. (Union side) Isaac's father, John T. Johnson was a preacher, and also came here from Tennessee. John T. Johnson was first married to Nancy Whitely. They had 4 sons: Isaac, William, Solomon, and Micajah. He then married Elizabeth Dunner and they had 7 sons: Albert,



Kerrie Lee Overton, daughter of Raymond R. and Phyllis Overton

Jackson, Francis, John, Thomas, Samuel and Joseph. His third wife was Casy Quillan. He died ca. 1862.

Susan Todd's parents were Owen Kentucky Todd and Sarah Felter. Susan was born near Lexington, Kentucky in 1824. She was a cousin to Mary Todd who married Abraham Lincoln. Susan was 1 of 11 children. The others were: Martha, Eliza, Zerelda, Jane, Maria, Owen Warren, Isabella, Victoria, Elijah, and William. Three of the Todd sisters married three of the Johnson brothers. Susan married Isaac, Zerelda married Solomon, and Jane married Albert. Most of the children were married here and lived in the Brush Creek Community. Susan died here in 1892, and is buried at Joyce Cemetery. Isaac and Susan (Todd) Johnson had 9 children: William, Nancy, Isaiah, Cirelda, Martha Deliah, John, Eliza, Sarah, and Micajah "Cade".

Thomas Overton and Nancy (Johnson) Overton had 6 children: Minnie, John, Edd, Jake and James Riley. Nancy had a son, Jarrett from a previous marriage. 1 Jarrett Garrett married Rhoda McCoy; 2 Minnie Overton married Phillip Mayo and lived in Oklahoma; 3 John Overton married Annie Johnson and lived in California; 4 Thomas Edd Overton was an early pioneer of Springdale, having a fruit packing house here. He married Wonderland Edwards and had a son, Bill. He then married Nora Myrick. Their children were: 1 Eula married a King, then a Clarady. Their children were Dorothy King and Raymond King. 2 Hazel married Charlie Hunt. Their children were Betty and Helen. Both children died young. 3 Harvey married Montez Leak. They had a successful garden center, "The Green Thumb", which is still run by their children. Their children are Donnie, Teddy, Leon and Loretta. 4 Thomas Edd "Cokey" married Betty Jo Dummitt. He was a truck driver for Jones Truck Lines. They had 2 sons, Tommy and Mike. Tommy married Betsy Rhodes; Mike married Vickie Jones 5 H. D. "Dee" married Rose Davis and they had one son, Randy. He then married Inez Nix and they Shirley Overton Quick and daughter Lana Kay.

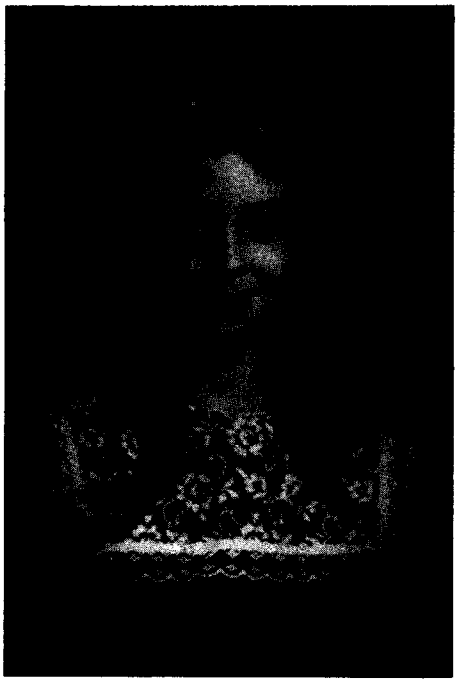
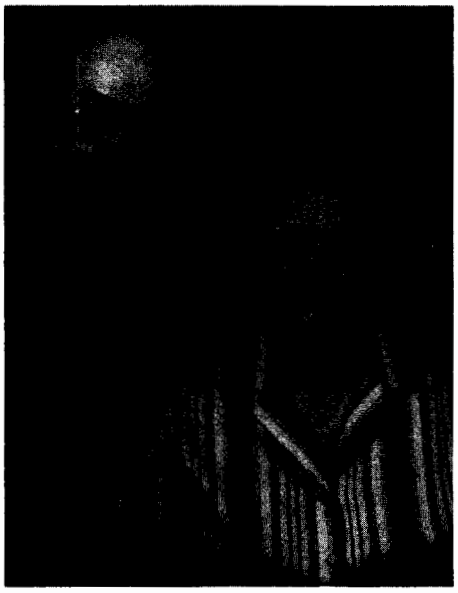
Raymond Overton, wife, Phyllis and son, Raymond Wayne (Butch) Overton.

James Riley Overton son of Nancy and Thomas Overton.



Lana Kay Quick

had one son, Steve. He also was a truck driver for JTL. 6 Maxine married Alan Brisco and lives in California. Their children are DeAnne, Jim Ed, David and Susan. 5 Jake Overton married Opal Vaughan and then Ommie Wright. 6 James Riley Overton was my grandfather. He was a farmer. He met Maude Bragg near Tahlequah while he was at his aunt's house picking cotton. Maude and her folks were traveling through in a wagon. He married Maude after a short courtship and her folks went on and settled near Ava, Missouri. James Riley was born in 1886 and killed in 1931 by a gunshot wound from his brother-in-law while he was sitting on the front porch washing his feet. James Riley and Maude had four children: 1 Minnie married Tidy Leslie. She had one son, Eugene Cloer. 2 Tom married Alice McDonald, and lived in Iowa. Their children are Margaret, Donnie, John Robert and Mary Lou. 3 Oval married Ab Whittle. They had two children, Harold and Vonda. Widowed, she later married Bill Perryman. 4 John Riley was my father. He was born in 1913 in Goshen. He married Mildred Todd. He worked as a mechanic, and was burned in an explosion in his shop when I was 3 years old. He spent 5 months in the Veterans Hospital, and almost died. He was in WW II in the Navy. We moved to Wichita, Kansas for 9 years. Being a mathematical genius, Dad designed and made tools for Boeing Aircraft. This was a great help to me in checking my math problems for school. He could figure the answers in his head faster than I could on a calculator. Boeing, thinking he had a math degree in college, asked him to teach a math class for them, not knowing his education ended in a country school with an 8th grade education. When we came back to Springdale, he was a truck driver, and had his own small trucking company before he died in 1983.



John Riley Overton and wife, Mildred Overton on their 50th anniversary.

There were two children in my family. My brother Raymond, married Deloris Ford and had one son, Raymond Wayne. He later married Phyllis DeSart and they had a daughter, Kerrie. My Raymond Wayne married Chong-Hui Kim, and they have a daughter, Katherine. My brother loved to fly and worked as an airplane pilot. He died in 1972. I am Riley's daughter, Shirley. I was married to Carroll Quick, and have a daughter, Lana Kay. I am very proud of my family and all my relatives. I wish I could have written more about each one, but then there wouldn't be any room left in this book for others to tell of their relatives that they are also very proud of.

Porter Morgan Ownbey

In the year 1728, the King of England granted a large tract of land in what is now the state of North Carolina to several of his cousins who were known as the Lord Proprietors. One of these cousins was the Earl of Granville who later sold his share to a land company in Pennsylvania known as the Movarians. In 1752, the Movarians had the large tract of land they had purchased, surveyed and found four white men living in the vast wilderness. One of these men was Jonathan Barrett with his Cherokee wife, "Jarfly" Jarman. One of their daughters, Bathsheba, later married a young man by the name of Samuel Oxford who came into the area from Virginia in 1756.

Among the descendants of Samuel and Bathsheba Oxford, who were early settlers in Washington County, were two Ownbey brothers, Porter Morgan and James Lafayette, sons of James and Elizabeth Oxford Ownbey. In 1856, in Washington County, James married Ava Oxford, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca Goodwin Oxford. In 1877, they moved to Bosque County, Texas where he was County Commissioner.

Porter Morgan had married Martha Ann Martin in Walker County, Georgia in 1851. They were the parents of seven children: Judson (married Cornelia Hartley), Julius (married Elizabeth Eidson), Adolphus, Canzadie (Mrs. Will Searcy), Idella Elizabeth "Ida" (Mrs. Sterling Hartwell "Hart" Slaughter), Florence who first married W. H. Bryant and then Almond Olmstead and Theodocia (Mrs. L. B. Reed). They had a large farm in the Sonora area and attended Friendship Baptist Church between Springdale and Sonora. In 1881, the Ownbeys, along with the Boydstons and Bennetts, deeded to the town of Springdale lots 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 in Block seven for public use: it is the site of the Shiloh Museum today. When Porter Morgan

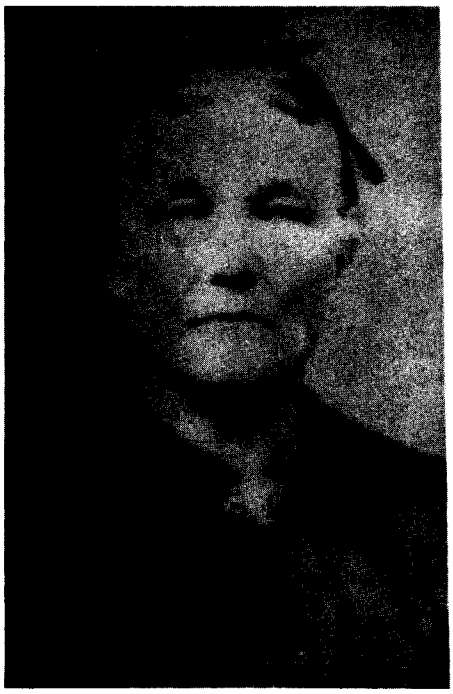
Sterling Hartwell and Ida Ownbey Slaughter - 1878

Ownbey died in 1899, the obituary in the Springdale paper called him "Uncle Porter". Porter Morgan and Martha Ann Ownbey are buried in the Friendship Baptist Church Cemetery. Today, many people in Northwest Arkansas are descended from Porter Morgan and Martha Ann Ownbey. Porter Morgan and Martha Ann are buried in the Friendship Baptist Church Cemetery. Canzadie and Will Searcy had four children: Frank, Lockwood

Marguerite, Birdie and Julian Ownbey



Elizabeth Oxford Ownbey, mother of Porter Morgan Ownbey.

Colonel William Garland Ownbey

W. (married Annabelle Applegate), Millie and Lawrence. Lockwood and Annabelle lived in the Searcy House which is now part of the Shiloh Museum.

Ida and Hart Slaughter had six children: Judge John Lionel "Lona" (married Ada Bevers), Porter Otto (married Mamie Sherrod), Dr. Theron Hartwell (married Hazel Sandoz), Idessa (Mrs. Edgar J. Browne), Zoe (Mrs. John Hamilton) and Bernice (Mrs. Allen Erwin). Zoe's daughter, Martha Ann (Mrs. Garvin Filton) lives in Harrison. Lona's daughter, Frances lives in Fayetteville and is the widow of Colonel William Carl Smith who was commanding officer of the 142nd F. A. Bn. from 1946 to 1952.

Julius and Lizzie Ownbey were the parents of William Garland, Carl Adolphus and Cora who died in infancy.

Carl A. married Beulah Jones and they had four children: Virginia, Louise, George and Carl Jr. who is married to Mary Gale Booth and lives on a farm west of Farmington. Carl Jr.'s hobby is hiking and he has walked both the Appalachian Trail and the Continental Divide from Canada to Mexico.

William Garland Ownbey (1877-1928) was educated in the public schools of Springdale, the University of Arkansas and the Ohio Institute of Pharmacy. He was a breeder of Champion German Shepherd dogs, a Pharmacist and owned drug stores in Springdale and Fayetteville. In 1899, Garland married Birdie Parker (1878-1952), a native of Illinois and daughter of Theodore and Jane Prater Parker, who came to Springdale about 1887 and Mr. Parker engaged in the produce business. William Garland and Birdie were the parents of two children: Julian and Marguerite. W. G. served the City of Springdale as Alderman, City Recorder and Mayor. His military career included service in the War with Spain in 1898 at Chickamauga Park, Mexican Border service at Demning, New Mexico in 1916-17. He rose to the rank of Colonel and served with the 142nd F. A. Bn. in France 1918-19 and as Commanding Officer of that unit in the 1920s. He was buried with full military honors. Both Colonel Ownbey and Birdie are buried in Bluff Cemetery in Springdale.

Julian Parker Ownbey (1904-1961) was born in Springdale and was also a Registered Pharmacist like his father. Before moving to California in the 1940s, he was manager of the family drug store in Fayetteville. He married Darlene Owens of Rogers in 1929 and they had two children: Martha Ann (1933) and Vena (1934). Julian died in California in 1961.

Marguerite Elizabeth (1908) was born in Springdale and attended Springdale Schools. Stephens College in Columbia, Missouri and the University of Arkansas. She married Martin Lowry Walker of Springdale in 1929. They had one son, William "Bill" Calvin Walker who is a fifth generation of the Ownbey family living in Springdale and a third generation of the Walker's in Walker Brothers Insurance Incorporated in Springdale. Bill is married to Betty Hooker and they have two children: Juanita Jean "Jeanne" and Jan Elizabeth.

Abel Oxford

Abel Oxford born about 1780 in North Carolina the son of Samuel Oxford Jr. and Bathsheba (Barrett). Abel married Edeith (Rogers) December 25, 1800. They lived near Oxford Creek named in honor of Abel Oxford in McNairy County, Tennessee.

Abel and Edeith had ten children: the first Jacob born December 28, 1801. John, Samuel, Thomas, Lavina, Elizabeth, James, Berry Hill, Margaret, and Claiborn. Abel and Edeith moved to Arkansas Territory about the fall of 1830. They are listed in the 1830 and 40 Washington County Census and Abel is also mentioned on some early Washington County juries. He owned land and a deed recorded October 16, 1843 by Abel and Edeith is the last record we have of them.

Jacob, Abel's oldest son came to Washington County also from McNairy County, Tennessee. He arrived about 1833, Jacob and 1st wife Avy had seven children: Lucinda Menephee, William D. (Dock), Thompson, James R., Willis, Lousea M., and Louisa.

Jacob was well known in the community as a good neighbor with an open door. At various times he took in widows and orphans, sometimes even strangers sick or well were welcome. Jacob owned land in the Oxford Bend, Habberton area near Highway 45 East. He left a farm to each one of his children after his death. Oxford Bend, is located in an attractive valley six miles east of Fayetteville. The name Oxford Bend was derived from the names of the pioneer settlers, Abel and Jacob Oxford, and the fact that the settlement is on a bend of the White River. The river winds around the valley, which was renamed Habberton when postal service was established in 1901. In the 1980s the small valley was incorporated with Goshen, Arkansas. When Abel and Jacob settled here, the valley was almost entirely woodland, they both homesteaded a large acreage.

Jacob's second wife was Rebecca (Culwell) they were married in 1839. She came from Alabama with her Uncle James Culwell. She was born August 23, 1823 and died January 2, 1982. She is buried in the Goshen Cemetery at Goshen, Arkansas. Jacob and Rebecca had nine children: Avy, John Wesley, Jacob Jackson, Joshua G., Issac Wesley, Nancy Elizabeth, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Lafayette and Mary Narcissa (Molly). Jacob died of typhoid August 29, 1872. He is buried in the family cemetery at Oxford Bend.

One of Jacob's sons Andrew L. (Andy) continued the family farm in the valley, he was born April 16, 1855 he first married America (Whitney) they had two children Minnie E. and Thomas E. America died December 30, 1879.

Andy then married N. Lucreacy (Howard) they had one daughter Oley Frances. (Creacy) died February 11, 1883.

Andy married Susan (Sharp) his 3rd wife, the daughter of James Sharp and Sophia Caroline (Churchwell). Andy and Susan had four children; William Early, Wilbern Clinton (Clint), Tishue Lucreacy (Lula), and Eler Jewell. Andy enjoyed hunting and fishing. He continued to farm in the same valley as his father Jacob and grandfather Abel.

Andy's son Clint was born October 9, 1889. He married Ethel (Roberson) February 28, 1912. She was the daughter of Ezra Ezry Roberson and Alwilda (Webb). Clint continued the tradition of farming in the Oxford Bend Valley. They had two sons Euel Ezra and Glen Leon. Euel was born May 25, 1913, he married Eileen (Burson) December 22, 1937. She is the daughter of William H. Burson and Lucy Ellen (Stuart). Both Euel and Glen had farms in the same valley, as previous generations. Euel, died February 20, 1984 of cancer. Clint, Ethel and Euel are buried at Sons Chapel Cemetery.

Euel and Eileen have two sons Deryle born December 18, 1938. He married Patricia (Eldridge) they have two children Bradley and Kimberly.

Keith Euel, born January 21, 1945 married Linda (Fields) July 6th 1971. She is the daughter of William J. Fields and Virginia (Elliott). Keith and Linda had four children: Sarah Deann, Kraig Douglas, Laura Leane and Kyle Duane, twins. We still continue the tradition and live in the Oxford Bend Valley today.

Clint's son Glen born January 20, 1915 married Helen (Heinrich) July 4, 1945. They have four children; Gary, Glenda, Larry, and Randall. Glen, Helen, Glenda and her son John Paul Thomas, Larry his wife Pamela (Black) and their two sons Andrew and Jeremy also live in the valley and we hope the tradition continues for several more generations.

Dr. Keith Euel Oxford

Dr. Keith Euel Oxford, was born January 21, 1945 in Fayetteville Arkansas. The son of Euel Ezra Oxford and Eula Eileen (Burson). He grew up on his parents farm in the Oxford Bend Valley. They grew poultry and cattle. He went to school at the Habberton School for six years. Then he went to Springdale High School.

He went to the University of Arkansas Medical School in Little Rock, Arkansas for five years and received a B. S. in Pharmacy. After the six month apprenticeship to receive a Pharmacy license, he joined the United States Navy. He spent the next six years at various duty stations: California, Portsmouth, Virginia, Orlando, Florida, and on the U. S. S. Sanctuary in Vietnam.

After his tour of duty on the Sanctuary Ship, he returned home on a short leave. He had met Linda (Fields) the daughter of William J. and Virginia (Elliott) Fields. They met at the Church of Christ in Fayetteville, once before he left for his first Navy duty in 1969. They wrote for three years every day and spent short leaves together.

When he returned from Vietnam they were married July 6, 1971, in the home of her parents.

They moved to Corpus Christi, Texas for two years to finish his service at the Naval Air Station. They moved back to Fayetteville in the summer of 1974 Keith had applied for a job at the Washington Regional Medical Center in order to get back to Washington County. Both our families live here.

Our daughter Sarah Deann was born November 14, 1974. In the Spring of 1975 we started building our home at Oxford Bend in the Habberton Community, now annexed by Goshen. We moved in on Halloween night in 1975 and have lived here for twelve years.

Our son Kraig Douglas was born December 4, 1978, he died shortly there after. After much pain and prayer and trying to deal with the grief we found ourselves expecting again six months later.

At thirteen weeks the doctors did a test and discovered twins. They did not have much hope of a complete pregnancy with two previous miscarriages and the loss of our son, Kraig. However again with much prayer and hope, six months in bed and six weeks in the hospital, fraternal twins were born, Laura Leane and Kyle Duane. They are now happy and very healthy. Sarah Deann is looking forward to going to Junior High next fall and the twins are in Butterfield Trail Elementary.

We live on the bend of White River, named in honor of Keith's great-great-grandfather Jacob Oxford in the 1830's. Keith just finished thirteen years as a Pharmacist at Washington Regional Medical Center. We raise registered, Angus, Hereford, and Simmental Cattle on two hundred acres in the same Oxford Bend Valley six previous Oxford Generations have lived and we hope to raise our three children up to continue the tradition.

Joshua Oxford

Southeast of Springdale on the White River is a bend called Oxford Bend. Nearby is the " Oxford Plantation House". Before the War Between The States it was owned by Oxfords. Clysta (Mays) Grey of Meredian, Idaho recalls visiting relatives at the Polly Hash house in Fayetteville in 1927. She recalls that a nice looking, distinguished black man came to the door and asked to see Clysta and her brother. He told Clysta that his mother had been a slave on the Oxford Plantation. When Emancipation came, his mother was given, by the Oxfords, her little shack and a yard-garden. Clysta's Great Grandpa Oxford gave the ex-slave a bred heifer and a bred sow. She never wanted to leave the Oxford Plantation. At a later date Arta (Oxford) Langham, a cousin to Clysta, told Clysta that the black man was a porter on the railroad and had been a playmate to Wilburn Oxford.

Lugenia and Joshua Oxford, baby Etta Oxford

No one in the family can remember the name of the father of Joshua Oxford. He was the owner of "The Oxford Plantation". Joshua married Ameta Kirby, however everyone called her Lugenia. She was born on December 5, 1852, at Pineville, Missouri. They married on February 14, 1869. They are both buried in the Goshen Cemetery. They had six (or more) children. They were: Wilbur, who was married to Allie; Thomas Teel, who was born December 27, 1869 at Goshen, Arkansas; Carrie Oxford; Rethie (Hays); Bertie who married Ward Mays and moved to Idaho, where she died; and Dolly who married Cleo Robinson.

Teel and Francis lived in Spring Valley and had three sons. Wilburn died very young at age fifteen or sixteen. Riley died in an explosion in Fayetteville. Ambrose lived his adult life in Oklahoma.

Rethie Oxford married a Will Hayes. Ralph, Orville and Melvin were their children's names. Ralph was killed by a train in the seventies. Orville lives in Modesto, California.

Cary Oxford married a woman named Betty. They had one child named Laughvon. Bertie (Oxford) Mays used to say Laughvon and Clysta Mays were twins, for they were born on the same day.

Bertie Oxford married a man named Ward Mays and had two children by him (Carl Deviere and Clysta). Bertie developed cancer and in the twenties doctors were recommending a change of climate for that type of cancer. Ward took his wife and children and went to Idaho. Joshua and Lugenia followed but developed "homesickness" and returned to Arkansas before Bertie succumbed. Clysta recalls Joshua taking his violin to a shed and playing soulful tunes. They mirrored his homesickness and despair over his daughter's condition.

Dolly Oxford was married briefly to a Jim Henry. He went away looking for work. Clysta thinks he went to Idaho. At any rate he never returned and Dolly married Cleo Robinson by whom she had three children. They were: Etta Berry now of Plant City, Florida; Noma Welch now of Hermosa, California; and Pat Robinson who was murdered in Florida a decade ago. Dolly died in the flu epidemic of 1918.

Houston M. Parks

Houston M. Parks (1850-1882), a son of John P. A. Parks (1808-1892), was born in Tennessee and settled in Hogeye, Arkansas with his family in the 1850s. In the early 1870s, Houston met and married Laura Adline Kidd (1855-1933), daughter of Tandy Kidd, a miller from Cane Hill. Houston, a farmer, and Laura lived in Hogeye with their two sons, Tandy (Mac) McKee (1875-1934) and James Clay (1882-1958). Houston died of an illness in 1882 and Laura later moved to Prairie Grove and married Lafayette (Fay) Clark McCormick in 1888. They had two children, Nettye and Frank Grady. Fay, like Laura's father, was a miller and owned his own mills in Prairie Grove and Farmington.

Houston was possibly one of fourteen brothers and sisters. Two of his Tennessee-born brothers who settled in the Hogeye area were William B. Parks (1894-1893) and John O. Parks (1841-1889). William, married twice, first to a Narcissa J. (1836-1867) and after her death, wed Pamelia C. Little (1845-1906). They had five children, Melinda (born 1862), John (born 1865), Albert B. (born 1870), Emma (born 1870) and James (born 1875).

Trephonia Adline Dyer (born 1844) married John O. Parks. They had one daughter, Ida (born 1870), who married J. E. Rogers sometime before 1900. John O. served as a Captain in the Confederate Army and after the war the ex-soldier ran a general store in Hogeye. He was also a graduate of the University of Arkansas.

Houston's oldest son, Mac, and his wife Dora Shannon (1875-1928) lived in Prairie Grove, where Mac was a self-employed painter. In 1910, his younger brother Jim married Minnie Myrtle McCormick (1886-1978), daughter of Prairie Grove physician Dr. E. G. McCormick and his wife Mamie Gilliam. Jim and Myrtle lived in Prairie Grove and had five boys, James Fay (1911-1976), Howard (born 1913 and died in infancy), Barry Houston and Donald Ephriam, identical twins born in 1919 and Joseph Carroll (1922-1984).

After his marriage to Myrtle, Jim Parks worked for the Prairie Grove Telephone Company, eventually becoming General Manager and then President. His oldest son, James Fay, moved to Chicago and worked as a sales manager for WLS radio. He later produced the radio shows "Quiz Kids" and "Arch Obler", among several others. James married Janet Findelsen (born 1922) and had three children, Michael Anne (born 1942), James Clay II (born 1945) and Tandy Shaw (born 1948). Michael Anne is married to John Dailey. Tandy and her husband, Norbert Weisser, have one son, Morgan (born 1971) and Jim is a writer.

James and his young family moved to California in the late 1940s where James was station manager for television station KNBC in Los Angeles. All three of James' children today live in California with their families and his wife Janet resides in Spain.

Barry and Donald Parks have worked for the Prairie Grove Telephone Company almost fifty years. Barry married Betty Jean McCoy (born 1931) in 1957 and had three children, Craig Houston (born 1960 and died in infancy), Susan Lynn (born 1962), and Karen Kee (born 1965). Barry was president of the Telephone Company from the time of his father's death until 1986. Donald married Peggy Murphy (born 1927) in 1949 and had one son, David McCormick (born 1955). Donald is General Manager of the Telephone Company, David became President in 1986 and Barry is now Vice-President.

The youngest of James Clay's sons, Joe, began working for the post office in Prairie Grove in 1948 and was later appointed Postmaster. He married Geraldine Rutherford (born 1925) in 1950 and had two children, Carol Jean (born 1955) and James Arthur (born 1960), who lives in Farmington with his wife, Donna DeVault.

John Hamilton Parks

Walter Davis Parks, born November 10, 1803 in Virginia, came from Tennessee to Texas then on to Arkansas for his health. He lived one year after he got here. He died January 16, 1850, at 47 years of age. Buried in Old Union Cemetery at Cincinnati, Arkansas.

He married Mary Park Parks, born in Ireland September 8, 1808, moved to Kentucky, then to Tennessee. Married in Kentucky and moved to Arkansas with her husband. Her father was J. H. Parks of Virginia, but born in Ireland. They were a distinguished French Huguenot family that moved because of religious persecutions. Came to Pennsylvania, to S. W. Virginia, North Carolina then to Tennessee. She died April 9, 1889. Buried in Old Union Cemetery. She had 11 children. She raised them by herself. She owned all the land north of Summers on both sides of the road from the Funkhouse farm to our place. She gave each child a farm according to 1860 Census. She was a wealthy woman. Besides all the land, she had $5000.00 in money.

Her children: Joseph Reeves Parks, born June 2, 1830. Married Jane Pastom 1854. Lettia Hamilton Parks, born April 5, 1832, died 6-25-1833. Martha Jane Parks, born March 7, 1834. Married Henry Spring 1852. John Hamilton Parks, born June 26, 1836, died January 26, 1917. Married Kate Gibson September 20, 1860. Elizabeth Dones Parks, August 11, 1838, married William D. Jacoway 1858. Walter Davis Park, born March 17, 1932, buried Old Union Cemetery. (1) wife-Sophia Gilbreath, born 1869, buried Old Union Cemetery. (2) wife-Mary Gibson, born 1852, died 1915, buried Old Union Cemetery married March 1874. David Harvey Parks, born July 4, 1842, died July 2, 1844. James Parks, born September 29, 1843, died June 12, 1844. Mary Parks, born December 27, 1846, married Thomas O'Brien 1870. Samuel Henry, born December 15, 1848, married Drucilla Wortham. William, born December 15, 1849, died 1936, married Caldonia Smith October 26, 1876.

Children of John Hamilton Park: Williams Almer, born November 19, 1861, died July 10, 1944, buried Old Union Cemetery, never married. John James, born December 1866, died March 10, 1902 in Arizona. Walter Davis, born August 22, 1869, died October 20, 1957, buried Old Union Cemetery. Married (1) Julia Wright, (2) Auda Funkhouse. Lizzie Dean, born September 6, 1872, died October 24, 1949, buried Old Union Cemetery. Married Jesse Smith Tunnell November 27, 1899.

Kate Gibson Parks got the farm from her mother. The deeds are on lambskin and dated in the early 1800s. It had the President's signature on it. The place is where we live now about one and a half miles south of Cincinnati. They raised all four children there. They lived here until their deaths.

John P. A. Parks

About 1853, John Perry Aaron and Mary Ann Hollabaugh Parks came by boat and covered wagons with their entourage of eight children and many slaves from Hickman County, Tennessee to Washington County, south of Hogeye, then known as Billingsley. He was born January 20, 1808 in Bedford County, Tennessee, the oldest of twelve children of Theophilus "Opie" Parks and Mary "Polly" Lyons. They were originally from Elbert County, Georgia.

"Opie" and "Polly" moved their family from Bedford County to Hickman County, Tennessee. It was here that John P. A. met and married, on January 1, 1828, Mary Ann Hallobough, who was born in 1811 in North Carolina. In 1837, "Opie" and "Polly" preceded their son John P. A. to the frontier of Arkansas by moving to Searcy County.

After John P. A. and Mary Ann settled in Arkansas two more children were born, making a total of fourteen. The ten known are as follows: Mary S., born 1828, married Richard Bean; Elizabeth Jane, born 1830, married John L. Blakeley, died 1888; William Bradley, born 1834, married #1, Narcissa Billingsley in 1856, #2 Sarah Carlisle Head Reed, 1868 and #3 Permelia C. Little, 1879, died 1893; Sarah Sophie, born 1837 married Barton Arnold Carl, 1857, died 1925; John O., born 1841 married Tryphena Addie Dyer, 1868, died 1889; James Clay, born 1842, fought for the Confederacy and was never heard from again; Bird E. born 1849, died 1861; Houston M., born 1850 married Laura A. Kidd, died 1882. These were all born in Tennessee. Born in Arkansas were Frances Camelia "Fannie", born 1853, married #1 "Colonel" John or Sam Morrow about 1876, #2 George Washington Sloan about 1885, died 1922; Levisa A. G., born 1855, died 1857.

The Parks owned many acres of farmland on the Butterfield

Overland Mail Line. From 1858-1860, John P. A. was the station agent at Parks Station. The house which served as home and station stood until the late 1980s on Highway 265 across from Parks Cemetery. Originally, it consisted of two rooms connected by a dog trot, and built of logs.

John P. A. served in the legislative session of 1861 that voted to secede, even though he had originally opposed secession. During the war, he narrowly escaped assassination by a party of Yankees sent to "get old man Parks, dead or alive".

The Parks family line can be traced back to Ireland, with Theophilus' father being Charles Parkes, Jr., who was born in 1744 in Albemarle County, Virginia, and who died November 2, 1806 in Elbert County, Georgia. Charles Parkes, Jr. was the son of Charles Parkes, Sr., who was born in 1714 in Essec County, Virginia and who died after 1784 in Georgia. Charles Parkes, Sr. was the son of Thomas Park(es) who was born between 1670 and 1675 in Ireland. Thomas Park(es) died around 1761 in Albemarle County, Virginia.

The Parks have many descendants still living in Washington County including Donald and Barry Parks, grandsons of Houston; Lena Carl Helm and her sister, Sarah Carl, granddaughters of Sarah Sophia; Martha Morrow McBride, granddaughter of Frances; Helen Hudgins Wiggans, granddaughter of Elizabeth Jane; and Patricia and Drennan Parks, great grandchildren of William Bradley.

John P. A. died April 20, 1892 and was buried beside his wife, who died June 18, 1883. Their graves are marked by elaborate headstones, and they lie amidst the graves of many of their children, grandchildren and slaves in Parks Cemetery on Highway 265.

Lloyd Clarence Parks

Lloyd Clarence Parks was born in 1892, the son of Virginia Victoria "Jean" Miller and John Barton Parks. Jean was born in 1868 to Delilah Blackwell and Dr. William Steel Miller in Eaton, Ohio. The family later came to Washington County and settled in the West Fork - Woolsey area. John Barton was born in 1864 to William Bradley Parks and Narcissa Billingsley, the first of his 3 wives. He was the fourth of 5 children born to them before her death. William Bradley was the son of John P. A. and Mary Ann Parks, who brought their family from Tennessee to Washington County in 1852.

John Barton and "Jean" Parks settled in Winslow, where he was engaged in a number of business enterprises, including building contracting. He built and occupied the house that was for many years known as the W. V. Land residence, and here were born some of their children, including Earl Othello, Lloyd, Bertie, Estin Llewellyn and Virginia.

Lloyd Parks traveled for 15 years for a wholesale grocery before his marriage to Clara Olivia "Dottie" Toll of Little Rock on September 3, 1929. Bertie married Earl Carter, and later O. B. Hairston; Estin married Wallace Crutchfield; Virginia married Emmitt Davis of Winslow, Arkansas.

Lloyd also sold carloads of feed and flour for McDaniel Milling Company of Carthage, Missouri until the early 1930s depression. At this time Parks gave up the carload selling and shipping to smaller sales being delivered by budding trucking companies. Lloyd joined his brother Estin at the Winslow Mercantile Company, and to survive hard times they conceived and executed a profitable plan of bartering. They sent a newsletter to the people in the rural communities, inviting them to bring in skins of wild animals, in trade for commodities in the store. The pelts were sold in distant markets, to the benefit of the entire community.

Lloyd liked to see young and older people have fun, and for several years he provided a place for movies, alternating with popular musicals, bands and singers. He also operated a square dance platform in the summer. During the 1940s and early 50s, he operated the Farmers Trading Company at Winslow.

Lloyd was a lover of fox hunting, and served as president of the Washington County Fox Hunters Association for a number of years. Several state and county meetings were held in the Winslow area. "The True Tale of a Fox Hunt in the Ozark Mountains" is one of the stories he loved to tell around the campfire on fox hunts.

Lloyd and Clara had two children, Lloyd Drennan, born in 1931 in Little Rock and Patricia Clarice, born in Fayetteville. Parks moved his family to Fayetteville in 1952, and opened a Western Shop with "everything for the horse or its rider" on Highway 71 north. Lloyd died in 1968 and is buried in the National Cemetery in Fayetteville.

Drennan and Patricia both attended the University of Arkansas. Drennan operates a gun shop, with motorcycle and vehicle parts on Highway 71B, and was the 1986 Northwest Arkansas District award winner in the "Acres for Wildlife Preservation Program". Patricia worked as a U. S. Postal employee in Tulsa, has been engaged in "Bread and Breakfast" hostessing in Denver, Colorado and in Fayetteville. Lloyd's widow married Elmer Griffith in 1970 and they live in Fayetteville. Estin lives in Dodge City, Kansas and Virginia lives in Fort Smith.

Children of Estin and Wallace Crutchfield are Wallace David and Paddy Carol. Children of Virginia and Emmitt Davis are Robert Gene and Virginia Ann Baker.

Elmer Griffith was born October 25, 1896, the son of John Jay and Mollie Jones Griffith. They moved to Winslow when he was 5, from Aurora, Missouri. He has engaged in building, stone masonry, trucking; and retired in 1961 as a rural mail carrier. Children of him and his first wife, the late Mabel Smith are, Betty Irene Schauweker of Springdale; Ruby Nobel of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania; Myrtle Center; Paul and Carol Talley of Winslow; Earl of Fort Worth, Texas; Jeanette Matzella of Le Roy, Michigan; and Thomas of Lowell, Arkansas.

Simeon W. Parrish

The Simeon Washington Parrish family, seeking a new start in life from the aftermath of the Civil War, left Randolph County, North Carolina in 1871 and came to Washington County, Arkansas. They settled in the community of Brentwood, about 15 miles south of Fayetteville, Arkansas, with five other families: his brother-in-law, B. H. Mays and family, the Hutchins family, the Thomas Jones family, and the other two families are not known. They came to Little Rock by train, by boat to Van Buren, and finally by wagon over the Old Wire Road to Brentwood.

for $14 in Arkansas at that time. Simeon was so disappointed at what he found here, the stories he heard did not match what he found. He was heard to have said, "I would return to North Carolina if I had the money." Three dollars was all he had left after the move from North Carolina. They set in to build their new home of native logs, fireplace made with native stones using clay and lime for mortar, two rooms with a dog trot between. As their family grew, they added side rooms to the log house. They were married in 1867 and had one son when they came to Arkansas. My father, Isaac Norman was born the year after they came in 1872.

They made their living in the early days from farming, hunting wild game (deer and turkey), working in the timber, and raising domestic animals such as sheep, cattle, and hogs. As they cleared the land, large fruit orchards were planted from which their cash flow came in the fall seasons. Grandmother made most of the family's clothing, some cloth she made and some she bought.

From 1869 to 1895, they had ten children, nine boys and one girl. All are deceased at this writing except one, Floy Parrish, widow of Simeon Bruce, who lives in a nursing home in Van Buren, Arkansas. The names of the children were: Manny, Norman, Filmore, Benson, Daniel, Thomas, James, Minnie, Oscar, and Simeon Bruce.

Most of the family married and raised their children in Washington County. Some became farmers, merchants, blacksmiths, carpenters, and teachers. My father, Isaac Norman, was a school teacher for a short period between 1892 and 1895 at Valley Grove. This school was located between Winslow and Brentwood, on what is now 71 highway. Norman married Sevilla Jane DeVore on October 27, 1895 and to this union were born 14 children, 12 of whom were raised to adults and were all living until 1975. Four are deceased, and eight are still living at this writing.

Norman and Sevilla (Vid) along with several other families - two of whom were his brother Filmore and wife Elsina (sister of Sevilla) and a Hutchins family - went to Bartlett, Texas to farm. Some of them traveled by wagon. They stayed there for about five or six years and there three daughters and a son were born. Their first child died of choking at age 22 months, and her grave is marked in the old cemetery in Bartlett, Texas. At the encouraging of his father, Norman returned to Washington County and settled on a 160 acre farm six miles east of Winslow. Sevilla did not want to leave Texas, but was overruled in the matter. They built a new four-room house with upstairs and half basement in 1917.

Norman and his brother Manny ran a general store in Brentwood about 1920, and later Norman became the manager. He lived on old highway 71 near the store in a log house where I was born in 1921. This didn't last too many years until he returned to the farm east of Winslow.

The depression days were hard and the drought was severe, but they managed to get by with God's help. Dad always had notes to pay - the Federal Land Bank note on the farm and personal notes he had co-signed for others. Norman kept his word. He was a good manager - a hard-working, honest man who believed in God and prayed to God every day. No foul words were in his vocabulary, and he was always helpful to his fellow man. Dad always said grace or gave thanks before every meal. We children were well disciplined and had great respect for our parents. We were a musically inclined family. We played the piano, violin, guitar, mandolin, French harp, and the jew's harp. Our favorite pastime was playing music about every night. We played at community musicals about every week, usually at someone's house. Sometimes we would play on Saturday on the Fayetteville Square, but didn't collect much from the sidewalk audience - people were too poor. In later years we played for square dances in homes. We charged twenty-five cents per couple-some on credit which we never collected.

O. D. Parrish family, June 1981. Omer D. and Opal-children: Norma Jean, Garry W., Gerald L., Charles B., Nadine, Nedra

All of Norman's children went to school at Black Oak which is located east of Winslow, and it still stands today as the Church of Christ. From the oldest to the youngest, their marriages are as follows: Dolphy to Opal Lynch, 1918; Minnie to J. R. Dockery, 1920; Ruby to Doc Collins, 1925; Doyle to Ruby Lehn, 1926; Osie to Lena Sanders, 1926; Vivian to John Garner, 1929; Vera to Allen Fox, 1935; Lloyd to Berlene Jamerson, 1938; Scott to Alta Dixie, 1939; Donnie to Hazel Skelton, 1942; Omer D. to Opal Jamerson, 1943; and Miron to Wanda Bishop, 1953. Scott, Donnie, and Omer D. served in World War II, and all came back safe and well. Today the youngest living child is 62 and the oldest is 86.

Omer D. and Opal have six children, three boys and three girls. Their names and their children's names are as follows: Mrs. Norma Jean Parrish Posey, Roxanna Posey Mesplay, Terrie Lynn, and Summer Dea; Garry Wayne and Janet Brown Parrish; Gerald Lee and Brenda Byrum Parrish, Brandon and Cameron; Charles and Nancy Davidson Parrish, Vanessa and Rachael; Mrs. Nadine Parrish Huddleston, Julia and Scott Allen; and Nedra D. Parrish. They live in Arkansas, Tennessee, Minnesota, and Iceland (temporary residence). They have one great grandson, William David Mesplay. Occupations of the children are seamstress, businessmen, Air Force recruiter, insurance businessman, preachers of the Church of Christ, personnel director, and secretary. The children were all born in Washington County, graduated from Greenland High School, and three graduated from Harding University in Searcy, Arkansas. O. D. was employed at the V. A. Hospital for 29 years and a minister of the Church of Christ for the past 33 years.

W. W. Parsley

William Wintford Parsley born January 3, 1885, in the Hickory Flat Community of Washington County, Arkansas. He was the youngest of seven children born to Alonzo Franklin and Elizabeth Miller Parsley. His father was not the best provider for his family. He liked to do what pleased his own fancy. Wint took over the responsibility of providing a home and making a living for himself and his mother at the young age of 12 years when his father left them to roam around as he seen fit. Wint's education was not more than to fourth or fifth grade (his father and mother could neither read or write). January 31, 1910, he married Lorena Welch, daughter of Levi and Mattie Wiley Welch of Spring Valley, Arkansas. To this union was born six children: Vol Parsley, born December 10, 1910, Vernon Augustus Parsley, born August 29, 1912, Elsie Beatrice Parsley, born March 22, 1914. They were born in Spring Valley Community in Arkansas. They moved to eastern Oklahoma where Leota Pearl was born March 14, 1916, Ethel Nadine Parsley, born October 10, 1921 in Wyandotte, Oklahoma. Johnnie Franklin Parsley born December 15, 1925 in Braman, Oklahoma.

The family moved from Wyandotte to Pitcher, Oklahoma. From there to Blackwell, then to Braman and on to Marshall, Oklahoma, working at various jobs in the oil fields. In 1929, they made a big move to Arizona, spending only the winter. By spring, everyone was ready to return to the midwest, then the oil field at Oklahoma City was at a big BOOM The Depression was starting and the economy was in bad shape. They found work at different jobs and stayed there until the summer of 1932. They then moved back to Arkansas and located in Fayetteville where they bought an old saw-mill located in Baldwin, Arkansas.

By then the children are getting grown and leaving the nest to make homes of their own. Vol married Laura Jean Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Johnson of the Pilgrim Rest Community, October 19, 1932. Beatrice married Wayne Vansandt son of Walker and Edna Homesley Vansandt of the Pilgrim Rest Community. Pearl married Clark Trowbridge of Fayetteville, March 1934. Vernon married Gladys Graue February 2, 1935, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Graue of the Zion Community. Nadine married Ervin Anglin June 12, 1939. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Anglin of Elm Springs, Arkansas.

Wint and their sons continue to operate the sawmill with the book work being done by Lorena who was very capable. In 1936, they bought a corner on Shady Grove and Highway 71 south of Springdale, moved their mill there. It was located there until in 1944. Johnnie volunteered into the Navy and the selective service took most all the young able bodied men of the nation to fight in World War II. The mill was disposed of and Wint and Lorena begin to lead a retired life, they now have taken on the name of "Pop" and "Mom". They carried that the rest of their lives. April 1945, Johnnie was killed aboard the Aircraft Carrier, U. S. S. Franklin, he was buried at sea. This was a great loss to the family.

In 1951, they built a new dwelling where the saw mill set and lived there for about fifteen years. They built a new house in Bethel Heights on the Moody Acres. They lived the rest of their lives there.

In about 1960, Wint's health had began to fail. He had to have a kidney removed which was malignant, he was a fighter and wouldn't give up. He did a lot of fishing and real-estate transaction and enjoyed life until September of 1987 when he was hospitalized for several weeks. After that, he was admitted several times, on March 22, 1968, he passed away. He is buried in the Sonora Cemetery east of Springdale, Arkansas.

Lorena continued to live alone in her home after Wint's death until October when she fell and broke her hip. After her recovery from that, she did real well until 1970 when her hip started giving her a lot of problems. She was advised to have an artificial hip joint put in, (ball and socket). She made a remarkable recovery from that surgery. In about three years, she had to have a knee joint put in. She came through that with flying colors, but after that, she walked with a cane to be more secure. Later, she had a colon section which was malignant. After the death of her daughter, Pearl Trowbridge and her son-in-law, Wayne Vansandt in 1980, she lived with her daughter, Beatrice Vansandt. She suffered a heart attack in a Dentist office August 7, 1984, she passed away that nite at the Springdale Memorial Hospital. She is also buried in the Sonora Cemetery.

James Parsons

Both Jim and Mary were born near Marysville, Yuba County, California. Jim was the son of James and Annie (Austin) Parsons; Mary was the daughter of Joseph H. and Nettie (Reader) Dudley. Both attended local elementary and high schools, Yuba County Junior College, and the University of California, Berkeley.

James and Mary Parsons

Jim (deceased 1979) received a B. S. degree in Food Science; Mary received a B. A. degree in English/History, a Graduate degree in Library Science, and Elementary and General Secondary Teaching Credentials.

Jim served in World War II, entering as a Second Lieutenant from the California National Guard and being discharged as Lieutenant Colonel in the U. S. Army Quartermaster Corps.

After the war he was employed as chief chemist of the Madrone Winery Company at Morgan Hill, California, and later as manager of the dehydration unit of Basic Vegetable Company in Vacaville, California.

In 1955 Jim and Mary moved to Mexico. James accepted a position as manager of La Fortalez, S. A., a Mexican company engaged in the dehydration of garlic and onions. In 1961 he became manager of the banana processing plant of the United Fruit Company in Manzanillo, Dominican Republic. In 1966 he was transferred to the Boston office of the company where he designed a banana processing plant for Compania Agricola de Rio Tinto in Honduras.

Later Jim and Mary moved to Honduras, where James supervised the building and operation of the plant. During that period he was also in charge of building a similar plant in Panama. From 1972 until his retirement in 1975, he was engaged in research and development of banana products for the United Fruit Company (now United Brands.)

Mary held various positions in the University of California Library, Berkeley, including Head of the Education Library; Director, Mexico City College Library, Mexico; Consultant in Latin American Library Affairs for the Organization of American States and the Rockefeller Foundation; Principal, American School, La Lima, Honduras. Her employment at the Shiloh Museum began in 1977. She began as a volunteer, worked part-time for some years, and finally was made assistant director. Her activities have included management of the photograph collection and the museum's Shiloh Store and preparation of museum exhibits.

James Monroe Paschal

James Monroe Paschal was born to John and Celina Paschal September 1856 in Missouri. He moved with his parents and brothers to Washington County, Arkansas prior to 1860. We know this because the family is listed in the 1860 Census.

James married 16 year old Sarah Elizabeth Porter January 1, 1880. Sarah was called Lizzy. She was the daughter of William H. and S. E. (Thomas) Porter, also of Washington County.

At first in their marriage they lived with James' father and step-mother Rachel, also living with them were James' brother Thomas' three children.

Lizzy and Jim had nine children born to them but only seven lived to adulthood. Seven of the nine were born in Washington County near Fayetteville.

About 1895 James moved his family to Parker County, Texas settling near Weatherford. Their two youngest children were born here in 1896 and 1900. The family moved to the Patilo Community of Erath County, Texas in 1900.

The children were reared in this area. James Monroe farmed land here. Their children grew strong and happy. They married in this area. James and Lizzy moved to Mount Houston around 1923. Some of their children moved there also.

The grandchildren that still remember Pa Paschal, as he was known to them, say he was a happy loving man that spoiled his grandchildren. They say he was tall, about 6', dark hair and eyes. Ma Paschal (Lizzy) was a small woman, about 5'2". She was sweet tempered and liked her snuff. She loved a glass of buttermilk and a piece of cornbread. Lizzy was a wonderful cook making cakes with too much butter and sugar so they would fall and she put jam on them. The grandkids say they were heaven on earth. Lizzy was very talented with a needle and made beautiful quilts that bless the homes of her grandchildren and great-grandchildren to this day.

James Monroe Paschal left this world on the 14 of July 1927. He died of Brights Disease in Houston. He is buried in the Brookside Memorial Cemetery in Houston.

Sarah Elizabeth Porter Paschal left us on March 17, 1940. Also in Houston. She died of a heart attack. Lizzy is buried next to her husband in Houston.

Their children and grandchildren are as follows: Lula Paschal, born 1882, married (1) Ammon Bond, (2) Voss, (3) John Carswell; (A) James Floyd Bond, married Nonnie Hendrick (B) Joe C. John Paschal

John Paschal was born November 9, 1818 in Rockingham, North Carolina. He died November 6, 1911 in Washington County, Arkansas and is buried in the White House Cemetery on the Middle Fork of White River Washington County.

Ancestors of John Paschal are: Mark and Mary Burchett Paschal, John and Mary Robertson Paschal, Samuel and Phereba Ward Paschal and William Paschal of the Land Grants, Granville County, North Carolina.

His parents were Mark and Sarah Burchett Paschal. John married Selina Brooks of Hawkins County, Tennessee in 1842. In the 1850 census of Hawkins County, we find his immediate family, also his father Mark and mother Sarah, his sister Mary, his brother Thomas Hiram, and a brother James and wife Mary, a sister Francis (Fanny) was counted with James and Mary, a brother Ezekiel and wife and their children living as neighbors.

Sometime in the middle of the 1850s John, Selina and children, his father and mother, sister Francis, brother Thomas Hiram and his new bride, Rachel (Brooks?) and Selina's brothers Thomas and Lafayette Brooks moved to Missouri. After living about three years in Missouri, this group moved on to Washington County, settling in the Middle Fork Valley near the White House vicinity.

After Selina's death, May 20, 1861 and burial in the White House Cemetery, John married Mrs. Rachel Friley. There is no record of any children being born to this union. However, Rachel raised John's children "as her own". Rachel was born May 23, 1827 and died March 14, 1912 and is also buried in the White House Cemetery.

Selina Brooks was one of fourteen children: seven boys and seven girls - born to William and Susan Price Brooks, and granddaughter of Thomas Brooks who was an early settler of Hawkins County, Tennessee.

The children of John and Selina are: William born 1843, Thomas C. born 1845, Jasper born June 25, 1850 died March 17, 1863 and is buried in the White House Cemetery, Alfred Houston, born October 12, 1852 - died October 27, 1913 and is buried in Rusk Cemetery in Texas, James Monroe born 1854 - died 1926 and buried in Harris County, Texas, Jesse H., born February 25, 1858 - died December 20, 1938 and is buried in Rieffe Cemetery in Washington County, Arkansas, and John Wesley, born March 12, 1860 - died December 7, 1917 and is buried in the White House Cemetery.

John Wesley Paschal

John Wesley (Jack) Paschal was the youngest of seven children born to John and Selina Brooks Paschal. He was born March 12, 1860 and died December 7, 1917 and is buried in the White House Cemetery. He married Margaret White born July 15, 1870 and died July 27, 1928 and is buried in the White House Cemetery.

John Wesley (Jack) and Margaret (Mag) and two sons: John Thomas born 1895 and died 1951 and William Sherman (1887-1968), both are buried in the White House Cemetery. The couple also raised Hazel Hughes who they adopted, and her brother Sid Hughes who was never adopted, and Mae White, Margaret's niece.

John Wesley was a community leader in the Christian Church and also in the school community serving as school director for several years and was instrumental in changing the district boundary between Clifty and White House districts. They also had a large farm that had an apple orchard on it as well as other land which was tillable.

Margaret, known as "Aunt Mag" made lots of apple butter out in the yard in a large wash kettle. She had an apple peeler which cored and peeled the apple at the same time. Then she cut the apples into small pieces and started the fire early in the morning, but she was very careful to not get the fire too hot, because it might scorch the apple butter. She stirred the apples with a home made big, wide, wooden paddle. She stirred and stirred the apples, and added the spices and sugar and stirred and cooked slowly until in the evening sometime the butter was at the right consistency. She then put it into jars and sealed it. Sometimes she put it into stone jars and sealed them with paraffin and put them into the cellar for later use. She also sometimes used molasses instead of sugar in making the apple butter.

Sherman's children often visited their grandpa Jack and grandma May and stayed overnight. After putting the children to bed, their grandma Mae would come back and ask, "Have you children got plenty of kivers?" The children would then pull the covers over their heads and say "Kiver, Kiver, Kiver!" Then Grandma Mag would say, "I'll kiver you if you don't get to sleep." It was a game they played every visit.

It was in a very bad cold storm that John Wesley came down with pneumonia. He only lived three days and the storm was still raging. A minister from Fayetteville was to preach the funeral. The burial crowd waited and waited in the appointed evening. Finally, it began to grow dusky dark and they decided to proceed without the preacher. A next door neighbor, Britt Harris jumped to his feet and said, "Jack Paschal was too good a man to be put away without some word being said," where upon he gave a very honorable eulogy to Uncle Jack.

Martin Luther Pasley

My grandfather, Martin Luther, was born May 8, 1865 in West Washington County, north of Rheas Mill about two miles. He lived near the place of his birth all of his 81 years.

He married Lizzie Ethel Jones, March 6, 1889. She was born March 4, 1870 in Missouri. They lived on his land a short way

Rhea, Arkansas around 1907; father: Martin Luther Pasley; mother: Lizzie Pasley. Esther, Fred Pasley. Team of horses and 2-row corn planter.

Mr. & Mrs. W. M. Pasley (Rita's great grandparents) Will b. 1838 Indian Territory; Lucinda from his birth place in a log house. Road now known as Wedington Road where Esther Jane was born on February 28, 1895 and Fred Barton on July 20, 1897.

He was a Mason, a Methodist, a farmer threshed his own wheat. Had sorghum cane, made it into sorghum. Stored fruit, milk, butter, and canned food in cellar where they used a dilutor to bring the cream to top of milk. Cellar was also used when a tornado was sighted. He had an apple orchard—hauled the apples by wagon to Suttle Switch to railroad to be shipped, which was south of them four or five miles on now Wedington Road. They made their own quilts and clothes. Took wheat and corn to Rheas Mill to be ground.

He and Lizzie were married 61 years when he died August 23, 1950. Lizzie died March 15, 1952. They are buried in Prairie Grove Cemetery.

My great grandfather, William Pasley, was the first Pasley to settle in West Washington County, north of Rhea where Luther was born. He was born in Indian Territory in 1838 died January 20, 1920. He married to Lucinda Jane Devin in 1861. She was born December 11, 1828 in Lincoln County, Tennessee, died November 5, 1909. Both are buried at Rhea's Cemetery. They had four children: Mack, Loretta, Luther and Hattie. He fought in the Civil War at the Battle of Prairie Grove. He was held prisoner by Union troops in Rheas Mill. Managed to escape in a wagon dressed as a woman.

My great-great grandfather, first name unknown, Pasley, married a full-blood Cherokee Indian and they came to Indian Territory on forced March of Trail of Tears in 1800 from Cherokee, North Carolina. Some time later, they left Indian Territory to go back to Cherokee, North Carolina and that is the last trace of them.

Esther Jane married Orlan Carl Crawford, March 2, 1918 at Viney Grove, Arkansas. They had no children. Orlan died November 17, 1978, Prairie Grove, Arkansas and Esther died July 15, 1985, Prairie Grove, Arkansas. Buried at Prairie Grove Cemetery.

Fred worked on the farm with Luther until September 27, 1922, when he married Ruth Louise Crawford at Prairie Grove, Arkansas, sister of Orlan C. Crawford.

Ruth and Fred were born 1/4 mile apart and one day apart, delivered by the same doctor. She was the daughter of Oscar and Pedie Cowan Crawford.

They set up housekeeping one mile north of Luther's farm in a five-room, frame house, on 80-acre farm very close to Bradley Cave.

On July 19, 1924, I was born. On June 29, 1945 I married James Wesley Richmond at Cane Hill, Arkansas.

We had Virginia Denise, born February 19, 1952, at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. On August 22, 1958, Vickie Ruth was born in Munich, Germany.

James passed away November 7, 1967, at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, buried at Bethesda, close to Morrow, Arkansas.

Virginia Denise married Fred Stanley Hicks, December 20, 1969 in Chapel at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. They have three sons: James Barton, August 27, 1974; Michael Lee, January 10, 1977; Charles Henry, August 5, 1981.

Fred Pasley died May 19, 1983, and Ruth Pasley died March 11, 1985. Both are buried in Prairie Grove Cemetery.

Vickie Ruth married Stanley Streber, February 12, 1983 at Tuttle, Oklahoma. They have one son, Weston Taylor, September 28, 1985.

Also born to Fred and Ruth Pasley was Reta Marie, April 9, 1927, married to Wilford Hughes Thompson, March 8, 1947, Cane Hill, Arkansas. They have two daughters: Charlotte Marie, born October 25, 1957 and Cheryl Lynn, born May 20, 1959. Charlotte married Mark Methvin, January 28, 1978. They have two children: Justin Mark, December 23, 1980 and Carla Marie, January 31, 1984.

Cheryl Lynn married Randy Lynn West, October 28, 1978. They have twin daughters, born August 22, 1982, Natalie Lynn and Lindsay Marie.

Cornia Collins Patrick

They came from old Dominion and settled in Virginia. From there to Logan County, Kentucky after a few years. They sold out and moved on to the rich Arkansas River bottom lands, but had malaria and sent scouts ahead and found the beautiful country that is now Washington County. They were Billingsleys and Shannons.

Joseph Shannon married Polly Billingsley and Samuel Houston married Margaret Billingsley, daughters of James Billingsley.

Isaac Shannon was born in 1799 in Logan County, Kentucky. Records show they were in Washington County in the early 1800s.

According to Miss Clara B. Enos's history of Crawford County he was a land owner and on the tax list. In 1821 he married Jamima Black. To them were born four children.

Margaret Jane, born 1827 died 1897 married Amon Payne. James Houston born 1829, died August, 1864, married Lucinda Eda Edmiston September, 1861.

They located one mile west of Summers and donated five acres for church, school and Ganderville Cemetery.

William H. died January, 1878 buried in Bethesda Cemetery, married Sarah E. Fields Drake, September, 1859. They located in Bush Valley on west side of Jordan creek.

Cornia Patrick

Samuel Houston first child of William Shannon, born September 2, 1862, married Louisa Sparks June 27, 1880.

Myrtle first child of Samuel Shannon and Louisa Sparks, born February 24, 1881, died December 10, 1964, married November 24, 1904, Robert Lewis Collins at Clyde, Arkansas, son of George Washington Collins, son of Francis Collins and Mary Holt Collins. Robert Collins' mother was Susan Elizabeth Cheatham, who came from Windstead, Alabama, "Walker County".

She had two brothers, Thomas H. and George, also two half brothers, Edwin and Marion both killed in Civil War. Robert Collins and Myrtle Shannon Collins had five children.

Robert Collins was killed by lightning April 11, 1920. So times were hard on this family but we made it through, and are all living today, but this story is my story, so I'm second child of this union. I married Herbert Howard Patrick, son of Charlie Lee Patrick and Nancy Mangus Patrick of Wichita Falls, Texas. We have children.

Dorothy May, married Ernest Pennell, they had two children, Patsy Carol and Tommy.

Mary Frances, married George Cabiness of Pasadena, Texas. They had two boys, George Stephen and Patrick Hutson. Second marriage, Bill Bower—no issue.

Robert Howard, married Katherine Merck of Hawaii. They had five daughters and one son. Elizabeth (Beth), Gwendolyn Jo, Robin, Barbara, Patterson and Mariann.

Martha, married John Brock, had two daughters and one son, Marweta, Johnna and John Christian.

Michael Lee married Sharon Eversoll, two children, Dana Rene, and Vance.

So this is the way I came to Washington County. I feel we were the trail blazers and am very proud to be an Arkansan.

Jesse Marion Patterson

I'm not from Washington County, but my grandfather Patterson was. Jesse Marion Patterson was born December, 1883 in Washington County, Arkansas. A fact I recently discovered as I was stumbling thru Grandpa Pat's family history.

I think we all yearn to know the family of our past, for it seems quite clear, this knowledge of family roots builds the threshold from which we view the world as it is, and the future as it should be.

In 1881 when Great Grandpa William "Bill" Patterson came to Washington County, it was not on the edge of the Wild Frontier, it was the Wild frontier, and here it was "Bill" found Narcisse Melrose Batterton, and soon persuaded her to be his bride. His obvious Cherokee blood aroused the dispair and disdain of the Battertons. Yet, they were married and in 1883 she gave birth to Jesse Marion Patterson, and in 1886 Walter Patterson was born. It was also the year Bill Patterson would abandon Narcisse, never to return.

The Pattersons were a proud people of fine reputation, Narcisse had left a slight blemish on the name, but later her sister would drop a bigger emotional bomb by marrying a well known outlaw Harry Tracy. Probably the Battertons were forgetting the lessons of life they had chiseled in granite, in becoming respected community leaders they had amply demonstrated, strong will, determination, and stamina to achieve and overachieve, so now I see the Batterton girls were no different, except by judgment factors.

A few long months after "Bill" had left her, Narcisse met and married Jarret Trammel, whose farm just east of Wyman gave her the security and dignity lost with "Bill" Patterson. It was there the two Patterson boys were endowed with two half-brothers, and two half-sisters, Thomas, Ella, Mary, and John. Tho they had the advantage of age and size over their siblings, Jesse felt he was carrying the entire burden of chores and a change was in order. Jesse was now 12, sensing he had reached the age of omnipotent manhood, arriving home one day approached Jarret and pronounced "Somebody else is going to do chores (meaning Walter, Thomas and Ella) around here, I ain't your work horse." Jarret was in no mood for foolishness and a harsh reprimand began an emotional battle, sharp accusations flew like spears, each pierced the target, and ego, compelled retaliation. Jarret drew back from Jesse's clinched fists, and picked up a nearby hay fork, attempting to end the conflict, told Jesse, "Boy, I just soon punch three holes in your belly as look at you." Jesse ran for the safety of the house, and as he entered the back door, remembered the varmint gun kept over the door jamb, as he was coming down with the gun he heard the loud thump of Jarret running up on the back porch, cocking the gun as fast as he could he was able to get off a shot squarely at the charging Jarret Trammel, knocking him backward spinning and screaming in agony to the ground. Jesse froze in terror for a moment, panic and fear renewed his energy as he ran in leaps and bounds for the back lot where the horse he had ridden to school was feeding, taking no time for saddle and bridle, Jesse grabbed the mane of horse, opened the back gate and headed for the only refuge he knew, Uncle Jonny Rattling Gourd in the Indian Nation, he barely heard Narcisse crying "Jesse come back, Jesse. . ." Jesse had mistakenly assumed he had killed Jarret Trammel, who lived quite a few years after that minus an arm.

Narcisse born December 1857 in Washington County area is buried near Wyman, her heart must have ached for the plight of her oldest son, whom she would never see again, I was unable to find her in the 1910 census so she must have died about then.

Jesse arrived the next day at Uncle Jonny Rattling Gourd's after a couple of hair-raising, maturing experiences with a small party of Creek Indians. He would spend 3 years there learning Indian Medicine. Then at 15 take on the world, working Rodeos, riding race horses, learning the Blacksmith trade, welding a friendship with a trick shot artist, Clifford Welles, later on crossing the Continental Divide in search of Alaskan Gold, on the way discovered a field of rubies in the heart of Hostile Indian land, still later, would watch helplessly as Clifford was tricked into disarming himself in a conflict of Honor, to be stabbed to death with a hidden dagger, by a vaquero of no honor, who would die at the end of Jesse's rope a few hours later.

Disillusioned, lonesome for his family, Jesse returned to his Arkansas, giving wide berth to Washington County, found many of his family then living near Hot Springs, and it was there he met and married Ada Weaver, Choctaw daughter of Richard and Emily Weaver, who would share his stop and go rollercoaster life.

Jesse Marion Patterson died in a highway crash, while driving home alone on a hot summer afternoon, near his Lake Bridgeport, Texas home in 1970. Still a strong and healthy iron man with a gusto for living. His death was significant for his life ended the way fate had dealt it to him, in bursts of heart-stopping events.

Robert C. Patton

Robert C. Patton was a Private, Seventh Class, Second Company-Sixth Battalion, Cumberland County Militia, under Captain Robert McCoy Command and was discharged March 28, 1778. Robert C. Patton married, raised ten children, and moved from Pennsylvania to Kentucky by wagon train. Robert Sharp Patton, son of Robert C. Patton, was born August 31, 1833. Robert Sharp Patton married Mary L. Ward Patton (born October 7, 1842) on March 5, 1865 and moved to Goodman, Missouri where they had three children, Robert Walter Patton, Cora Patton and Sanders Patton.

Robert Walter Patton was born August 22, 1865 in Newton County, Missouri and lived there in his early years where he met and married Frances Serena Horton on December 18, 1887. Robert Walter Patton and Frances Horton Patton moved to Johnson Mill, Arkansas in 1892 by wagon with one other couple. Robert W. Patton farmed in the Johnson Mill area for several years before moving to Lone Cedar, a small community consisting of a small church, school house and a few homes, between Elm Springs and Cave Springs. Before moving to Lone Cedar, Robert and Frances had four children: Pearl C. Patton Banks-1888; Myrtle S. Patton Wright-1891; Clay Robert Patton -1892; Nora Belle Patton Griggs -1896. After moving to Lone Cedar, four more children were born: John Louis Patton-1899; Horace LeRoy Patton -1901; Ina M. Patton Stout -1904 and Bernice H. Patton Sharp -1906.

Robert Walter Patton at this time was a practicing veterinarian, mixing his own tonics and medicines, working with cattle, sheep and horses. There was never a time that he was without several jacks and horses for stud purposes.

He moved from Lone Cedar to a large farm north of Elm Springs in Washington County, known as the Strain farm. Robert Walter Patton died at home on May 15, 1944 and his lovely wife, Frances died at her daughter Nora Belle Griggs' home in Upland, California, September 14, 1954. Both are buried in Elm Springs Cemetery.— (see Chelsey T. Griggs)

Ammon Payne

Ammon Payne was the son of Hiram Payne, who moved his family to Arkansas from Tennessee well before the Civil War and settled on Mountain Fork Creek near Natural Dam where he spent the rest of his life and is believed to have been buried in a local cemetery when he died at the age of 116 years. We do not know if Hiram Payne had other children. Ammon Payne married Mary Jane Shannon and they lived on a farm, later to be known as the Rob Kidd farm, three miles south of Lincoln in Washington County. The house was on a knoll above a fertile, well watered valley. They were slave owners and prospered until the Civil War.

Eight children were born to them: Tom, who married an Indian girl whose first name was Georgia and last name unknown; Bob, who never married; Will who married Elizabeth Colburn; Kate, who married Wilson Smith; Mary, who married George Scott; James, who married Mary Catherine Dobbs; Mattie, who married Taylor Howard; and Jemima, who married Charles Hase.

The children of Tom Payne were Dock and Charlie. From this branch of the family later came Andy Payne who was nationally known as the famous coast to coast Bunion Derby winner (footraces similar to modern marathons). Later he was the Treasurer of the State of Oklahoma for many years. Will and Elizabeth had one girl who died young. Will died fairly young but Elizabeth "Aunt Lizzie" died at Siloam Springs at an age of over one hundred years. Mattie and Taylor Howard had one son, Luther (Lute), who lives in the Morrow area and operated sawmills and grain threshing machines. He married Etta Edmiston and their children were Edgar, Edna, twins Lawrence and Leonard, and Ethel.

Jemima and Charles Hase had five children: Tom and Lon, neither of which married; Hattie who married a Gibson; Ammon who died young; and Annie, who married a Dodson. Mary and George Scott (who will be mentioned later) had children: Will, Chrissie, who married Tom Lefors; Henry, who married a girl whose last name was Tigret; Tom, who never married; and Newt, who married an Allen.

James and Mary Payne's children were: Minnie, who married Wilson Moore and had a daughter, Iva, who married Hilary Gibson (who along with Fred Summers were prominent business men in Summers and Lincoln) and their children were Ruth and Genevieve; Elsie, who married Fred Summers and had children Jack and Eva Jane; Ione, who married Chester Nichols; and Murray, wife unknown. Etta, who married Billy Padgett; had children Kate and Dee; Ora, died at 16 and was buried at Fletcher, Oklahoma; Annie married Bill Gibson and had one son, Fred. William Cody (W. C.) Payne married Minnie Roller and they had sons Clyde and Elmer. After Minnie died he married Ruth Holt Green with whom he lived until his death at age 93; Clyde married Corene Swift and had children Howard, Geneva and Richard. James' other daughter, Della, married Jim Walker. After he died she married Marion Spear, and their three sons were Alva, Lester and Troy. James' widow was living with the Spear family on April 4, 1928 when a tornado struck and killed her along with Marion Spear and his son Troy Spear. Alva Spear grew up to become one of the pioneer farmer's cooperative managers in the area. James' son, Emmett, married Kate Little and their children were Mary, Harold and Mildred.

Ammon Payne was a member of the Home Guard of Southern Sympathizers during the Civil War and was killed by hanging in Bush Valley along with four other local men in what was supposed to be a Pin Indian Raid. It seems to have been the general opinion that it was done by bushwhackers made up as Indians. Bushwhackers were outlaws who took advantage of the absence of most men during the war. James Payne was eight years old when he drove a wagon under his father's body to cut it down and haul it home. Ammon was buried in Bethesda Cemetery by his widow and other women. At the time of the attack, Ammon was riding along with George Scott, who was mounted on a very fast horse. Ammon urged him to ride on ahead and escape. The fast horse saved Scott's life and he later returned to marry Payne's daughter, Mary.

James Payne told later about how he and neighbor boys would dash into the camp of Northern soldiers to kick over their cooking pots and then flee. The soldiers would not shoot them because they were children, but they really cursed them.

Lousie Stracener Payne

When about four years old, I and my four sisters, Sylvia, Irene, Susan, and Gertrude, went with our parents, Jesse and Addie Lee (Moreland) Stracener to live in Union Star, Washington County, Arkansas.

I attended Hazel Valley and Union Star schools. I left Union Star about 1939, to live with my sister, Sylvia and her family in Missouri.

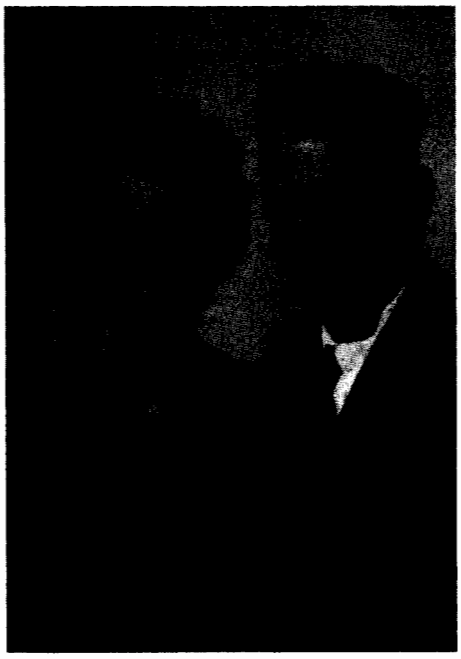
When I was grown I went to Chicago, Illinois and worked as a waitress. I enjoyed working with the public. In those days you gave service with a smile and the customer was always right.

In 1947, I went to California with a girl friend to work, where I met Robert Payne.

We were married October 31, 1947. We lived in Fortuna, California until Bob retired from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

Bob and I have always been active in community activities. Bob served on the school board seven years, and worked with 4-H. I was a Blue Bird and Camp Fire leader for nine years. I was active in Parent Teacher Association and was presented with a Honorary Life Membership in P. T. A., for community service. I went through the chairs of Rebekah I. O. O. F., and was District Deputy President of District #30. I am also a member of D. A. R., F. O. E., W. O. W., and Family History Society of Arizona.

I enjoy gardening, photography, crafts, sewing, tatting, knitting, crocheting and genealogy.



Robert R. Payne and wife, Louise Stracener Payne 1947.

We have one daughter Judith Anne. She graduated from Humboldt State University of California in 1975, with a B. S. in Business Administration. She is presently Administrative Assistant of a city. Judith was born August 27, 1948 and married Roy O. Schulz, December 29, 1968. He was born March 6, 1948.

I am a homemaker. I did not work away from home. We had a twenty-four hour foster home license, and cared for ten children in our home. We had from one to three foster children at one time. One girl, Linda, lived with us nine years. We loved all the children and they were family members as long as they lived with us. We still consider Linda our daughter. She is three years younger than Judith and they are like sisters. Linda is married, and has a daughter, Stacey.

Robert's parents were Reverend Flournoy Payne and Doctor Mabel (Turner) Payne. Rev. Payne was a minister of the Christian Church in Rifle, Colorado. Rev. Payne died five months before Robert was born. He left a twenty-six year old widow, Mabel, with a son of one year, Philip Flournoy Payne. Young Philip died a year later.

Doctor Payne's mother, Jane (Creighton) Turner, Mrs. Philip Turner, was also a widow. So, the women decided they would make a home together in Denver, Colorado. Grandmother Jane would take care of the home and the boys. Doctor Payne would work to support the family.

Dr. Payne was more fortunate than most widows, because she had a profession. She had graduated from S. S. Still College of Osteopathy. Dr. Payne opened up an office to support her family. She was one of the first women to become an Osteopath Doctor. At first, all of her patients were women, but eventually some of the husbands came to her for treatment. Dr. Payne continued her practice for fifty years, and never remarried.

My roots are well established in Washington County, Arkansas. Our ancestors, Mills, Massey, and Karnes were there prior to 1840. I would like to live there now as I think the area is beautiful. We retired to Glendale, Arizona for Bob's health, where we now reside.

I had some very hard years "growing up". I think it was good for me. I believe I am a better citizen, enjoy my family, home, community and country more, due to the hardships, I learned to cope with in my younger years.

Juana Maria Paz

Juana Maria Paz was born in New York City on July 12, 1953, to Juan Gonzalez and Candida Paz, both born in Puerto Rico. Mary Ann Gonzalez Paz was born to Juana in Brevard County, Florida, August 23, 1975. Juana and Mary Ann moved to Los Angeles County, California in the summer of 1976, lived there a year, then spent two years traveling between different communes on the West Coast.

They moved to Ponca, Arkansas, in September 1979 and spent the winter at a mountain cabin owned by friends who had gone south. They lived on a ridge along the Buffalo River with no electricity or running water, ate canned and dried foods, used a wood stove and hauled drinking water up the mountain. One winter day the stove pipe fell down and flames burst into the room while a rat dashed across the floor. The fire was doused with water, the stove pipe reassembled—then mother and four-year-old gathered a few possessions and began the two-mile walk out and down the mountain to the nearest neighbors. They got a ride to Fayetteville and never went back.

Juana applied for and received from Washington County Aid to Families with Dependent Children ($133.00/mo.), food stamps ($104/mo.), and Medicaid cards for each of them in 1979. She also applied for rental assistance from the Fayetteville Housing Authority and with HUD's help rented an old, unremodeled wood frame house on South Street. The family's portion of the rent was $21.00. HUD paid the rest. (When A. F. D. C. was reduced to $100/mo. in the early 1980s, the family was left with $20.00 a week for all other expenses.)

Mary Ann attended Jefferson Elementary School in Kindergarden and first grade. Juana attended the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville during the same period, but stopped when she found the experience unrewarding and child-care became too difficult. In 1982 the family moved to a basement apartment on Lafayette Street, also with rental assistance (family's portion of rent $36). By this time A. F. D. C. had increased to $158/mo., and Mary Ann attended Washington Elementary School across the street from second to sixth grade.

Juana had always read avidly and kept a journal. When the family settled in on South Street, she began writing for publication. Her book The La Luz Journal, a personal account of communal living, was self-published in 1980, with 200 xeroxed copies. By 1987 she had been published 130 times in alternative and feminist publications, including Fayetteville's Grapevine. Mary Ann studied ballet at the Fayetteville Dance Center on South Street from 1985 to 1987. On April 18, 1986, she performed in a live concert at the Continuing Education Center on the Fayetteville Square, entitled "An Arkansas Attitude."

In 1980 and 1981 Juana studied drama at University of Arkansas and worked as an announcer/producer at KUAF student radio station. She was a board member of the Ozark Natural Foods Co-op in 1981 and 1982, a producer/moderator at Fayetteville Open Channel in 1983, and announcer at KEZA radio in 1984/85. In 1985 she began reading textbooks on tape for visually-impaired university students. She did food service work at a short-lived fast food restaurant on Dickson Street named Nearly Famous in winter 1986/87. In summer 1986 she offered "Make Clothes by Hand" workshops to demonstrate her technique of making clothes with no machine or pattern. Response was mixed, but she kept making and trading clothes—for dance lessons, typing, cotton socks, etc.

On August 4, 1987, Juana was denied food stamps by Washington County after writing the words, "Limited to income and eligibility-related info ONLY," on her application after, "My signature above authorizes the Department. . .to obtain information from other. . .sources to confirm. . .my statements."

In fall 1987 when this account was written Mary Ann was preparing for junior high, and Juana was waiting tables at the D-Lux, a 50-year-old restaurant on Dickson Street—still writing, sewing, reading on tape and researching an article on local poverty programs as her next project.

Mary Ann, the most perfect child any parent could ever have, celebrated her 12th birthday on August 23, 1987.

John Iverson Pearson

John Iverson Pearson 1903, was the son of Thomas Jefferson Pearson 1877, born in Clarksville, Arkansas and Nora Emma Mckee 1882, from Strickler. They were married July 23, 1899 at Strickler and lived with Tom's parents, John Westley 1830 and Nancy Elizabeth (Howard) Pearson 1847, for awhile. John W. died in 1900 and Nancy E. in 1929 and are buried in the Fall Creek Cemetery.

Tom and Nora's children born in Washington County were Ester May 1901, John Iverson 1903. Other children were Martha Elizabeth 1909, Lola 1917, Bernice 1920 and James Hubert 1911. They later moved to California.

John Iverson joined the Navy in 1920 at 17 and was a career Naval Officer. At this time he gave an address of DeQueen, Arkansas.

He purchased 80 acres in Bethel Grove Community in 1937. He married Virgie Elizabeth Beeks 1916, on April 4, 1938. John was recalled to active duty in 1940 during World War II. He served 30 years in the Navy and received several medals. He retired Chief Quartermaster p. a. in 1950.

John and Virgie had three children; Thomas Howard 1939, Erma Lee 1943-1945, and Betty Jo 1948. They were members of Little Elm Baptist Church. After John's retirement, he farmed until his death in 1957. Virgie stayed with the farm and ran it until her death in 1987.

John, Erma Lee and Virgie are buried in Rose Cemetery.

John Peerson

John Peerson was born in Gibson County, Indiana May 7, 1814, son of William Peerson/Pierson/Person, born North Carolina, who was married to Martha (Patsy) Strickland, born Kentucky of North Carolina 1793.

He came to Washington County, Arkansas Territory in 1831 from Fulton County, Illinois with a Baptist group led by Elder Stephen Strickland, that included his parents and families of Combes, Rizley, Ingram, Miller, Shary, Holcomb, Skeltons and other prominent early pioneers. He settled about two miles south of Fayetteville and, in January, 1833, married Sarah (Sallie) Miller, born July 4, 1817, Gibson County, Indiana, daughter of John and Mary (Polly) Roberts, both born Kentucky in 1790s.

John and Sallie Peerson had eleven children as follows: 1. Arminda, born 1834, married to Chism Petross, died 1914, buried Springdale, Arkansas, Bluff Cemetery. 2. Martha J., born 1837, married Sidney Privette, died 1880, buried Newtonia, Missouri. 3. Mary J., born 1839, married William R. Dye, died 1898, Eureka Springs, Arkansas, buried Springdale, Arkansas. 4. Amanda E., born 1841 married William E. Mayes, died 1921, Muskogee, Oklahoma, buried Springdale, Arkansas. 5. William Carroll, born 1844, married S. J.?, died 1920, Westville, Oklahoma. 6. James Harva, born 1846 married Mary Campbell, died 1923?. 7. Jones Norman, born 1849, married Mary Lichlyghter, died 1892 Johnson, Arkansas, buried Springdale, Arkansas. 8. Andrew Jackson, born 1852, one year old, died 1853. 9. Van Washington, born 1855, married Mariah Fitzgerald, died 1927, Springdale, Arkansas, buried Bluff Cemetery. 10. John Joseph, born 1857, married Mary Lou Smith, died 1934, Bokoshe, Oklahoma. 11. Charles Washington, born 1859 married Josie Crider, died 1942, Springdale, Arkansas, buried Bluff Cemetery.

John Peerson became a member of the Primitive Baptist Church in 1832 and was baptized in West Fork of White River. Very early, he moved to his new homesite between Fayetteville and Springdale just north of Clear Creek, present site of Springdale Country Club. He was a deacon in old Shiloh Primitive Baptist Church for sixty-eight years and otherwise active in building that church along with his brother-in-law, Peter Van Winkle, and son-in-law, Chism Petross.

During the Civil War he was a Union man, but when the hearse bearing Confederate General Ben McCullough's body, who was killed at the Battle of Pea Ridge, he is said to have ridden on the hearse for several miles from Fayetteville, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Jo Miller, a Confederate soldier from McCullough County, Texas, who was closely affiliated with the General.

Following the war, he served in the Arkansas State Legislature one term. He had service in Seminole Wars 1837. His wife died 1889 and is buried in Bluff Cemetery, Springdale, Arkansas. He remarried in 1890 to a widow, Musteen, and married a third time to Alphurnia McClelland. He died September 10, 1891, buried Bluff Cemetery in Springdale, Arkansas.

John Peerson

Pension records published in the Flashback show that John Peerson applied for pension or bounty for service in the Blackhawk and Seminole wars. I also believe his father served in 1812 and made claim in Arkansas. My grandmother was born in 1841 in the old Peerson home place which is the Springdale Country Club now. Flashback also shows John Peerson as Justice of Peace and that many marriages were performed by my grandmother's brother, Jones Norman Peerson.

John was the son of William Peerson and Martha Landers Peerson. Sarah Miller was the daughter of John Miller and Polly Robert Miller. John and Sarah can be found on the 1850, 1860, & 1870 Clear Creek Washington County, Arkansas census. Then in 1880 they show up on the Springdale, Arkansas census. John married 2nd Ann G. Musteen Fitzgerald who died 1891 and 3rd Mrs. Alphurium McCellan Fitzgerald. John and Sarah are both buried at Bluff Cemetery. Amanda and William are both buried at Bluff Cemetery. Armita and Chism are both buried at Bluff Cemetery. Jones Norman and Mary Jane are both buried at Bluff Cemetery. Charlie and Josephine are both buried at Bluff Cemetery. Jones Norman was a merchant. John, John Joseph, Van, James, were all farmers. William E. Mayes was a wagon freight hauler. Chism ran a lumber mill. John and Polly Miller are both buried in Bluff Cemetery near John and Sarah. John, Sarah, and Amanda Peerson joined Primitive Baptist Church in 1860.

John Peerson was b. 2 May 1814 in Indiana, d. 30 September 1893 in Arkansas, m. 23 January 1833 West Fork, Arkansas. Sarah A. Miller Peerson was b. 4 July 1817 in Illinois d. 21 October 1889 in Arkansas.

Their children were: Arminta C Peerson Petross b. 1834, d. 1914, m. Chism Petross; Jane Peerson Privette b. 1836, m. William Sidney Privette in 1855; Mary M. Peerson Dye b. 1838, m. W. R. Dye; Amanda E. Peerson Mayes b. 8 July 1841, d. 20 September 1921 in Arkansas, m. William E. Mayes 1869; William Carol Peerson b. 1843 Arkansas, m. Hannah Dixon Peerson 1869; Jones Norman Peerson b. 2 June 1847 in Arkansas, d. 12 September 1892, m. Mary Jane Lichlyter Peerson 1863; James Harve Peerson b. 1846 in Arkansas, m. Mary E. Campbell Peerson 1889; Andrew Jackson Peerson b.?, d. by 1860 (Found in Bible record); Van Washington Peerson b. 1855, m Mariah Elizabeth Fitzgerald Peerson 23 March 1876; John Joseph Peerson b. 1857 in Arkansas, m. Marzanita Lichlyter Peerson; Charlie W Peerson b. 19 August 1859 in Arkansas, d. 6 December 1942, m. Josephine Crider Peerson.

Jim Pennington

Jim Pennington was born in Pennington's Gap, Virginia on April 18th, 1894. This is a small mountain town that has a main street most uniquely like Emma Avenue in Springdale. Jim was four years old when his parents were inspired to move west during the historical "Westward" move and homesteading was so appealing. The father, Andrew Jackson Pennington, had gone on ahead and had homesteaded land near Kingston, Arkansas because it so resembled the mountains of Virginia. He sent for his invalid wife and eight children, Jim being the youngest. As they rode the train, little Jim was almost dropped through the open toilet seat as the train sped along. After settling on the farm in a log house with rock fences around, the entire family farmed and worked at many odd jobs.

Jim Pennington about 1950.

When Jim was a young man, now married to Rachel Viola McCurley, they moved to Springdale. The year was 1923 and they had a young son and daughter by this time. Jim and Viola bought nine city lots in the south part of town known as Caudle Addition. Their location was on Crutcher Street near Fink Street leading east. They built a small house and planted maple trees in which some of the trees are still living today.

Jim began working for Jim Barrack in a bakery-grocery store located on the corner of Caudle Avenue and Turner Streets. This building is still in use today. Jim often delivered groceries to homes by horse and hack.

In 1926 Jim sold his place in Caudle Addition and bought a house and lot on the corner of Cleveland and Allen Streets. It was here that he and Viola raised their five children. They had three sons and two daughters. Their names are: Joe, Vernon, Dan, Jewell and Verdia Mae.

Soon after this move the depression years set in. These times were hard for everyone. Jim was a hard worker, though, and he always seemed to have a job. Each year he would raise a big garden and Viola would can foods for winter. Jim always had plenty of potatoes and turnips and he would bury them under hay and soil in the middle of the garden to keep them from freezing. Jim and Viola would pare and slice apples and dry them in trays placed on top of the house. Throughout his life Jim worked as a night watchman at Welches Plant, he worked at the Ice Plant and he worked at the Springdale Bakery for Jim Baker. He would get up at three o'clock each morning to go get the dough set to rise so the fresh bread would be ready at eight o'clock each morning.

Each day he would bring home three loaves of bread which helped so much during the hard days of the depression. Viola would work certain days in homes for the Bates, a Springdale school teacher, and for the Hankins, a Minister. She often took pay in used clothes which the children could wear. Jim and Viola were proud and honest and they taught these virtues to their children.

When the great Nazarene revival came to town, it was as though they had been waiting for this church. They helped to build the present Nazarene church and their names are on the charter list which was put into a stone the day the church was dedicated and was placed on the front corner of the church to this very day.

Later in life Jim worked as a carpenter and built many houses that people live in at present. He took the custodial job in his retirement years at the First National Bank and was employed there when he died in 1957. Viola lived on for 18 years after Jim's death. After being widowed over three years she married Mr. Lenard Collins and lived with him for over seven years. After his death, she lived on for another six years. Today Jim and Viola rest side by side in the Bluff Cemetery.

Joe, the oldest son, married Verna Lane and they have three daughters and one son. Joe raised his family in the Tacoma, Washington area and owned and operated a grocery store most of his life.

Jewell, the oldest daughter, married Virgil Cordes and they have two children. Their two children are Ted Cordes and Carolyn Darlene Cordes Ballenger. Jewell is the only child of Jim and Viola's that has remained living in Springdale. Virgil drove a truck for Jones Truck Lines for years then he and Ted went into business together. At first they owned the Toyota Dealership, then they sold it and are at present owners and operators of Precision Auto Parts and Marine. Jewell went on to college after the her two children were in school and she graduated from the University of Arkansas. She then taught school for twenty years in the Springdale School System, teaching mainly at the Westwood School. Ted married Beverly Ward and she is presently teaching in the Springdale School System. Darlene married Rev. Lindell Ballenger and together built the Faith Assembly of God Church on Highway 68 west.

Vernon, the second son, lived in Wichita, Kansas for years. He and his wife, Jessie Mae Tucker of Lowell, have five children. Vernon drove a truck for Santa Fe until he moved to Moore, Oklahoma where he became a policeman. He was a security guard at the Children's Hospital in Oklahoma City until his retirement where they presently reside in Moore.

Verdia Mae married Charles Overton of Greenwood, Arkansas. They have six children, two daughters and four sons. He is a carpenter and she works at the school in Greenwood.

Dan married a girl while serving in the Army in Germany. Dan was a Service Career man and served in the Army until his recent retirement in Sierra Vista, Arizona where he now resides. They have one daughter, Ina, who is married and lives in Tucson.

George Pense

George Daniel Pense married Josephine Cartwright in 1881. They raised their children in Winfrey Valley of Crawford County, Arkansas. Their children included John William b. 1883; Rufus b. 1886; Lee b. 1887 died young; Margaret (Vernie) b. 1889; and Joseph b. 1893.

Vernie took very sick with tuberculosis and her mother Phenie nursed and cared for her and her two sons. After a long illness it finally consumed her and she died an agonizing death.

A year later Joseph fell ill with tuberculosis and Phenie once again tended another of her children through the terrible illness. Years later Phenie too contracted the dread disease and passed away.

The main source of income for these people was the timber that abounds in the Boston Mountains. John farmed and ran his saw mill in Winfrey. Large gardens provided fresh vegetables in the summer. They canned and laid back what they could to provide winter meals. Trapping and hunting provided meat for their tables.

Though the depression had not yet hit national proportions its effect was already being felt by those living in the little valley of Winfrey. Try as they might it became nearly impossible for John and Rufus to provide for their large families. It soon became apparent they would have to leave their valley home.

Rufus and his wife Rose Reed had eight children. Rosa, Annie Jewel, Berniece, George Daniel, Lela Alberta, Hazel, Sam and Billy. When Annie was not yet nine in the year of 1923 Rufus packed up his family for the move from Winfrey. Though few people owned any type of vehicle, Ike Long owned a pick-up truck. He came to Winfrey to move Rufus and his family to Viney Grove, near where he lived. They loaded the back of the truck and covered their belongings with a tarp.

The children rode in the back with their belongings. It rained during the entire move. It was late evening by the time they reached Ike's home, too late for them to continue on to their new place. They dug out their bedding to spend the night at Ike's, only to discover the tarp had leaked like a sieve. They slept under their damp quilts and the kids took colds. Annie ended up with a severe case of tonsillitis.

Rufus continued to farm and would often hire out to other farmers. Though he was still without an automobile he worked on the Washington County Courthouse in Fayetteville, walking the distance from Viney Grove daily.

In the spring of 1928 John made his move to Savoy, Washington County. He continued to travel to Crawford County, where he cut and hauled logs to other sawmills. Just prior to his death John rented a small place in Prairie View.

Prairie View, a descriptive name, is a slightly elevated, wooded hillside with a southward view of a large prairie with the Illinois River meandering its way through. It is even today, a small farming community located approximately four miles south of highway 16. Its small community building served as both a place of worship and a school house. Out back is a cemetery which can still be found among the overgrowth. The building, left empty for many years, fell to its ruin in 1985.

John was on his way to Fayetteville with a load of timber when he was struck with a acute attack of appendicitis. He spent the night at the house of a preacher in Fayetteville. He returned home the next morning, two days later he was very sick and a neighbor, Ed Littrell, took him to the City Hospital in Fayetteville. They prepared to operate but he died on the operating table October 29, 1928.

Though John died before he was able to move his family to the rented farm, Nancy moved her family and continued to provide for them. Farming the land she raised chickens and sold the eggs.

George Daniel lived with one family member or another until his death in 1932.

There were eight children born to John and Nancy. Dewey, George Rual, Dillard, Willard, Millard, Leona, Allie and Pearl.

Francis Elliot Perkins

Francis Elliot "Frank" Perkins, an early fruit grower in Springdale, was born in 1870 in Pennsylvania, the son of Nelson and Martha (Black) Perkins. Frank was a self-made man, having had only a grade school education, he took correspondence courses all the time his children were growing up. He married Elizabeth L. Quigley, born July 23, 1872 in Butler County, Pennsylvania from an Irish family. Her father, David Quigley is buried in Rose Hill Cemetery, Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Frank worked most of his life for the Kanawah Oil Company, owned by the Jennings Brothers of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Wherever a new field was discovered, he was sent there and as a result, his family lived in seven states, including Tulsa, Oklahoma and Beeville, Texas before his final move to Springdale. It was about 1928 when the Perkins family purchased and moved to a large acreage on Highway 68, east of Springdale, having been introduced to Arkansas by his son-in-law, "Scotty" Taylor of nearby Fayetteville, Arkansas. Frank had forty-five acres of grapes and one hundred acres of apple orchards. Their sturdy two-story home sat on one foot square oak logs, and cooking was done in a separate building behind the big house. (The farm and home are now owned by the J. D. Hash family). Besides becoming the center of operation for the fruit farm, the large home sheltered not only the family, but some Oklahoma friends, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shaw, who helped manage it all, and a cook, Ethel Roundtree, as well as frequent company from out of town.

The Perkins had two daughters, Lillan Perkins born April 24, 1895, in Ohio and Margaret born July 11, 1896 in Sisterville, West Virginia. In 1916, Margaret married Homer H. "Scotty" Taylor and had two sons, Thomas Taylor and Robert. Margaret died March 21, 1979 and is buried at Evergreen Cemetery in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Lillian married in 1919 to Lester Barry Holt and had four children; Richard "Dick" in 1922, Patricia in 1923, (she married Bill Buffington and died 1968), John Lester "Jack" Holt in 1929 and Gene in 1930. By 1932, Lillian moved from Seminole, Oklahoma with her four young children to raise and educate alone, into her parents large home in Springdale, Arkansas. The children attended the nearby Fishback School and Springdale High School. When the children were grown, the farm was sold and Lillian and her parents bought and moved to the Alvin Hotel in Springdale. Lillian operated the hotel for a number of years, while caring for her parents and Aunt Ethel, through their declining years. The Alvin Hotel was located where the Independence Savings and Loan now stands, on the corner of Meadow and Holcomb Streets. Lillian's mother, Elizabeth L. (Quigley) Perkins died April 22, 1951, her father, Francis Elliot "Frank" Perkins died June 10, 1952. Both are buried at the Rose Hill Cemetery, Tulsa, Oklahoma.

In 1986, Lillian Holt is the eldest member of the First United Methodist Church in Springdale, of which she has been a very active member for these many years and is still attending her Sunday School Class and the church service every Sunday.

Arminta Pearson Petross

Arminta C. Pearson, b. 1843/d. 1914, married Chism Petross, b. 1828 Tennessee/d. 1896.

B. Carl (B. Carl Petross) b. 1855/d.1900, married Mattie Pruner 2 May 1886; their children, Lula J. (b. 1887 Arkansas/d. 1909), Joe Bill (b.1889/d. 1903), Dale, born Arkansas, Claude born in Indian Territory.

Lafayette Dallas (b. December 1859/d. 1937) married Ida Lura Irvin(b. 1863/d. 15 February 1949). Their children; Irma (b.1892 in Arkansas/d. 1942) married Roger Decatur Sanders (b. 1892/d. 1946) and Lafayette Dallas, Jr. (b. April 1894 in Arkansas).

Lee S. born in 1861; Olley S. died in 1869; John died in 1872; Minta died in 1872; Laura born in 1865 in Texas; Callie born in 1869 in Arkansas; and Myrtle born in 1875 in Arkansas.

Chism and B. Carl were both lumber mill operators. Mattie Pruner was born 1870/ died 1901. Lafayette Dallas was a teacher. Lee was a teamster. Olley, John, Minta were all buried at Holcomb Cemetery. All the rest listed with a date of death were buried at Bluff Cemetery. All the children except Laura were born in Arkansas, city of Springdale. 1900 Washington County census shows Lula, Joe Bill, Dale, and Claude living with "Mattie", widow. L. D. and Ida with children, Irma and Junior living in separate households. Family is also found on 1880 Springdale census. Of the 3 girls Laura, Callie and Myrtle, one married Joe Frankling and one married a Mr. Stump but I don't know which one married whom. Mrs. Stump died in 1895. One of the Petross boys married Nettie Haxton, but I don't know which one. Laura joined the Primitive Baptist Church, Springdale, in 1875. Arminta, Chism, and an Agnes Petross joined the Church in 1862. Agnes died October 10, 1869.

Mary Jane (Kendrick) Phelan

My grandmother was Mary Jane Kendrick and she was born in Springdale, Arkansas (Washington County) January 1834. Her parents were Eliza Ann Hines and John Kendrick. Mary Jane married Abijah Fowler Phelan 22 of January 1854. Abijah Phelan was born in Monroe County, Madisonville, Tennessee about 1830. They were parents of twelve children. My mother was the twelfth. Eliza Jane Jamima, John Wesley, Martha Alice, Melissa Ellen, DeLaney Sherman, LuElsa Melinda, three I am not sure of where they come by number. They are Mary, Emery Monroe, Nettie Emily, Henry Clinton Willie Lenore and Bonnie Van Dora.

Grandpa Abijah Fowler Phelan and Grandma Mary Jane Kendrick - Springdale, Arkansas. Uncle Henry Clinton Phelan, Mother by grandma Bonnie Phelan West b. 1881, Aunt Willie Senore Phelan Bennet by grandpa. About 1895/96.

Abijah Phelan filed on Hewitt Springs land, Washington County, Arkansas, 1838.

I am not sure when the family moved to Benton County near Rogers. Eliza Ann Hines is allegedly a descendent of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins. Grandma was very proud of being a "cousin" to Priscilla Mullins.

Abijah Phelan's grandfather, Thomas Phelan is one of the seventeen Revolutionary Soldiers buried in Arkansas. He was in Washington County, Arkansas in 1837. He died August 28, 1838. He may have been buried in Combs Cemetery (now removed) or Black Oak near Fayetteville. Abijah Phelan died April 17, 1895 and Mary Jane died April 6, 1924. Both are buried in the Pleasant Grove Cemetery. The stone had been knocked down in 1970.

These are the brothers and sisters of my grandmother, Mary Jane (Kendrick) Phelan. Obediah born in Alabama and married Mary Ann Baker. James born in Illinois. Wife??, my grandmother Mary Jane Kendrick married Abijah Fowler Phelan, Eliza married Josiah Phelan. Martha married William Graham, LeRoy married Abigail Phelan and Benjamin married Sally Phillips.

Obediah lived in the White River Hills. Mother remembered the wonderful spring on his land.

I see where James did marry a Mary?

The Kendrick men were very handsome. I have pictures of several.

John Phelan married Prudy Skelton, Thomas Phelan married Sarah Skelton. There were four girls, I believe in Missouri. Elizabeth married Washington Cook, Mary married Jabe Brown, Sarah married Gabe Loving and Nettie married Hirum Crocker. Jesse a medical doctor married Lavina, Isaac Ivan married Elizabeth Cooke and J. Larkin married Margaret Phelan.

My mother and several cousins said Uncle Larkin served as a medical doctor at the Battle of Pea Ridge. Some say they never heard of his service. I wonder if his service might have been limited to the war.

The four girls and Jesse Phelan made Missouri their home and the others in Arkansas.

Thomas Phelan

Thomas Phelan (28 October 1752-28 August 1838) and Mary were married 6 June 1774. In 1776 he served in the Revolutionary War under Colonel Thomas Hawkley, having enlisted in Ewchland Township, Chester County, Pennsylvania where he resided. He was a blacksmith and a Quaker. In 1777, they, with sons Evans (13 June 1775-) and Jeremiah (2 March 1777-about 1868), migrated to Columbia County, Georgia where five children were born: Elizabeth (14 June 1779-), Mary (29 November 1787-), Affinity (about 1788; married 5 March 1812, John McDonald), Ann (7 May 1789-18 June 1789) and Thomas (about 1790; married Jemima Fowler). Mary died 14 December 1830.

Richard Edward Phelan (about 1817, Ohio).

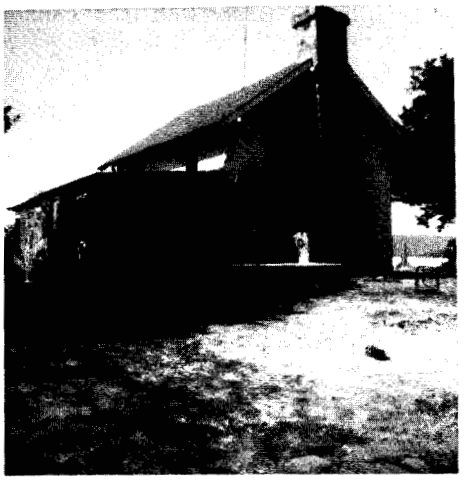
Jeremiah L. Phelan married, had four children in Georgia before moving to Preble County, Ohio, where seven children were born. They left Ohio in 1823, living for a time in Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri before reaching Arkansas in 1833. Jeremiah L. and eldest son, Mercer (wife Margaret), settled in Franklin County, and Jesse Evans (Diana), Sarah (Aaron Packer), Richard Edward (16 October 1801-11 April 1862), Margaret (15 October 1805-26 February 1874; married Jeremiah Sutton 6 April 1827, Jeremiah (about 1813-November 1863; wife Frances) and Mary (18 February 1822-16 August 1906; married William Cassady) all settled in Prairie Township in Washington County. Many descendants of these people, as well as those of Thomas and Jemima (Fowler) Phelan still live in the county, and many will be found in Combs Cemetery, Old Union Cemetery in Cincinnati, Baptist Ford and others.

Richard Edward Phelan married Hannah Sutton, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Sutton. Benjamin died in 1814 in Preble County, Ohio. Richard and Hannah had fourteen children, the first three in Indiana, one in Illinois, one in Missouri and the last nine in the house they built on Dead Horse Mountain Road, Fayetteville. Hannah died there in 1874. She was born in Ohio 1 March 1806. Their descendants include:

Jonathan (4 October 1824-7 August 1877) married Mary Susan Jones 25 August 1870. Children: Esther, Benjamin and Amanda, born in Cincinnati, and Ruth, in Indian Territory, where Jonathan died at Stringtown on the way to Texas.

Hannah (Sutton) Phelan (about 1874, Fayetteville).

Thomas and Emily Phelan (about 1890) children: Tomma, Rosa, Jerry May, Bessie.



Richard and Hannah Phelan home (1962).

Abijah and Hannah (Rogers) Phelan and baby Martha (1872, Fayetteville).

Evans (29 September 1826-2 January 1892) went to California, married Sarah Derrick and had six children.

Elizabeth (26 October 1829-11 May 1909; married (1) 5 July 1846 Milas Privett (2) 8 May 1854 Rev. Thomas Brinson, (3) 1 August 1870 Garner Newman). Children: John and Eliza Anna Privett (Francis Williford), and William (Nannie Bond and Caroline Walden), Mary (Alexander Price), Sarah (John Land), Richard and Jeremiah Brinson.

Thomas Phelan (27 October 1830-17 April 1905) married 27 November 1856, Emily Ann (8 November 1841-29 December 1916), daughter of Jeremiah and Eunice (Beasley) Barnes. Children: Margaret; Jonathan Lewis (24 January 1860-10 June 1913, married 23 October 1881, Laura Jane Robbins, daughter of John Robbins), Emily Ann (Hugh May), Mary Jane, Delania, Tandy, Dora (Robert Cabe), Tomma, Jerry May (Elizabeth Whitten, Joday Wood and Cora Vredenberg), Rosa (Mans McGuire) and Bessie (William Rushton). Child under two, Jonathan Lewis and wife Laura Jane (5 October 1865- 28 October 1937) parented Maggie (Lowery McCustion), Quinton Theodore (Lula Dell Roberson), Leonard (Annie Anglin), James Ezra, Lou Emma (John Dock Thurman), Anna "Dollie" (Charles Hopkins), Edward (Rose Davy), Robert (Myrtle Samons) and Curtis Loyd (25 March 1900-25 July 1974; married 27 October 1918, Oca Eloise Roberson, daughter of John Abner and Elvia Elender (Owen) Roberson. She was born 17 July 1897 and died 12 September 1959. Their children are: Hershel Gale, John Curtis (tail-gunner, WWII, died over Germany), Jerrald Bain, William Dewayne, Lola June and Carl Dean. Carl Dean and (1) Peggy Sue Harrison married and had one daughter, Terri Lynn Phelan who lives in Fayetteville.

Jeremiah S. (18 December 1832-1862) married 18 October 1855, Mary J. Ryan. They had Mary Elizabeth (John Phelep Call), Oleymier Frances "Fanny" (Edward Henno), and John J. (Celia Henson). Jeremiah S. was shot in General Hindman's Confederate camp on Flat Rock Creek near Van Buren.

Cyrene (5 June 1835-22 March 1931), first child born in Fayetteville, married John Matters 6 August 1857. They moved in Missouri after their shoe store on Fayetteville Square burned during the Civil War. They had seven children. Cyrene could remember sitting on her grandfather's lap not long before he died. She said her father told about crossing the Mississippi River at St. Louis on a pontoon bridge on the move to Arkansas.

Maud Hannah Phelan (1891, Fayetteville).

Maud and Martha Phelan (about 1897, Fayetteville).

Young (20 February 1836-14 February 1924) married Celia Russell 6 March 1854. They had Nancy, Jane, Fannie, and Etta. Young, a hunter, moved to California and became a bear hunter for that state.

Zimri (25 March 1839-1861) was hung, along with nine others, on East Mountain during a political frenzy in the Civil War times. He was in Cincinnati visiting his brother Thomas when the Army took him.

Richard (21 May 1841, Enos (18 December 1843) and an unnamed child (8 January 1845) died young.

Margaret Hannah (13 March 1846-3 April 1886) married 12 December 1861 Jesse T. Mhoon. Her children were James, LaFayette, Ida, William, Edwin, David, Mary and Rena.

Twins, Abigail (died young) and Abijah Taylor (19 August 1848-6 March 1901) were the last of Richard and Hannah's children. Abijah lived his entire life in the old home, with the exception of the years during the War spent in Neutral Land, Kansas where he was taken by his brother Thomas after his two brothers had been killed. He married 18 March 1869, Hannah Catherine Rogers (15 November 1852-25 April 1884), daughter of Levi Richman and Martha Jane (Holt) Rogers. Levi was a son of Levi and Clarissa Rogers; Martha, the daughter of John and Hannah (Stevenson) Holt, all residents of Prairie Township. The young married couple cared for the old Mother who died there, as did they. Their children were:

Martha Catherine (9 January 1872-8 January 1943; married Fremont Brickey). Children: Roy, Etta and Abner. Lovada Elizabeth (28 August 1874-14 March 1956); married William Allred and James Ralph). Children born in Arkansas: William and Maude. Four children in California. William Richard Phelan (22 November 1877-9 September 1915), unmarried, died in California. Both he and his brother Thomas Levi were blind. Thomas Levi (6 November 1879-24 December 1943; married Kate Mench). Children Thomas, Willie, Hattie and Clariece. Maud Hannah (6 March 1881-21 September 1960; married 27 September 1903 John Q. Moore). They had six children born in California. The last of Abijah and Hannah's children were twins, born and died in April 1884.

Children by Abijah's second married (2 December 1880, Sarah Zinnamon) were Lida (John Craft) and Bertha (John Mathie Moore).

Eighth and ninth generations are still residing in the county.

John Wesley Philips

Captain John Wesley Philips, a Confederate officer, left Hawkins County, Tennessee following the Civil War, because he thought it no longer safe to live there when the Union sympathizers returned to power. His wife Luvenia (Huffmaster) remained in Rogersville, Tennessee with their children: Christopher (Kit), age 10, Margaret (Maggie), age 8, Eliza (Lide), age 4 and Joseph (Joe), age 2.

Lavenia W. Philips and grandchildren, Helen Philips Knott and Wesley Philips (children of Isaac Hugh Philips)

Traveling first to Texas and then north into Arkansas, John found a new home site in Washington County. He immediately sent for his family who traveled by river barge and stage coach to Fayetteville where John met them bringing them to their new home in a wagon.

In 1866, John purchased property now located on the north side of Emma Avenue extending from Thompson Street east to Shiloh Street. Near the west edge of the property, he built a twenty foot square one-room house on a foundation of native sandstone. Sometime later an addition made this house quite spacious. Three sons were born here. Isaac Hugh, James Richard (Jim Dick) and John Lee who died in infancy. I loved this home in which I spent many hours as a child.

Dressed in her church attire, a black dress with white yoke and cuffs and a black bonnet; Luvenia was said to look like Queen Victoria. An accomplished pianist, she had also been educated at a female seminary. Luvenia had a beautiful flower garden. Since there were no florists then, she furnished flowers for many funerals. She always carried a pocket full of hard candy which the grandchildren enjoyed.

Although I have been told many stories about them, both John and Luvenia died before I was old enough to remember them. However, I do recall attending my grandmother's funeral when I was four years old. It disturbed me that my father cried as I sat on his lap at the service. Grandmother's black casket was carrried in a black hearse pulled by beautiful black horses to Bluff Cemetery for burial. Relatives and friends followed in horse drawn vehicles.

John is reported to have been a very friendly man. He began a Subscription School soon after he arrived in Springdale. A community leader, he was active in organizing the Western Arkansas Fruit Growers and Shippers Co-operative Association in 1888. John operated a produce house and general store along with at least two of his sons, Joe and Hugh.

John owned an apple orchard raising many bushels of fine apples. Using some of these apples, the family made apple butter outside in a twenty gallon brass kettle over a wood fire. Stirred with a longhandled wooden paddle; apples with sugar and spices were cooked for hours until the right consistency was reached to jell and can.

Joe married Matilda Cook of the Lowell Community. When the territory of New Mexico opened for settlement, Joe with his wife and two daughters, Marguerite and Marie, migrated with a group from Benton County to New Mexico where he homesteaded property and lived out his life.

Kit was involved in a lumber and hardware business before becoming Deputy Sheriff of Washington County under Sheriff Rollins in 1900. He was elected Sheriff in 1904 and served four years. Then he returned to the hardware business at Fayetteville. He was a stockholder and Director of the Arkansas National Bank. He married Mattie Jamison. Their children were Claudia, Guy, Nora, and Bessie.

Jim Dick never married. A veteran of the Spanish American War, he was a linotyper at the Springdale News for many years when it was owned and published by John P. Stafford. His nieces and nephews remember him for making holidays special.

Hugh remained with his father in business and continued it after his father's death. As Springdale grew and developed, John surveyed his property into town lots and sold them. Then he continued to sell real estate for other people. He found property for George Washington Julian in 1903 when Mr. Julian arrived in Springdale with his family from Green County, Missouri. During this transaction Hugh Philips met Grace Julian. They became sweethearts and married in 1904. They are my parents. Their children were Wesley, Helen, Frances and Mildred.

After John and Luvenia died their two daughters, Miss Mag and Miss Lide, with Jim Dick continued to live in the old home until 1922 when they sold it to Henry Dampf for commercial use.

These ladies owned a carpet loom and did custom weaving. They also kept both a vegetable and flower garden, especially loving their flowers. Guests were taken on a tour of the flower garden and given a bouquet. These ladies prided themselves on getting any new plant that they saw or read about. They could call each plant by both its botanical and common name.

Miss Mag taught the Ladies Bible Class at the First Baptist Church for many years. Her mother was a charter member of the Presbyterian Church. The grandchildren were exposed to both churches often on the same day. Once when granddaughter Claudia was quizzed with the Catechism Class of the Presbyterian Church she was quite nervous. But she gave a sigh of relief when asked, "Who was the first man and woman?" In a loud voice she answered "John and Luvenia".

Kit Philips

Christopher Columbus "Kit" Philips was born on October 16, 1855 in Hawkins County, Tennessee, the son of John Wesley and Lavinia Walker Huffmaster Philips. Soon after the War between the states, his father moved the family to Washington County, Arkansas. Kit spent his boyhood at the Philips homestead on the north side of Emma Avenue between Thompson and Shiloh Streets. Obtaining what education he could at the time, he attended a subscription school taught by his father. One warm day, the older boys cut school to go swimming. Schoolmaster Philips knew where to look for his pupils, and approached just in time to hear one of them say "I wish Ole Man Philips could see us now " He roared that he could see them just fine as he lined them up for a whipping with his cane.

After the family moved to Arkansas, Kit watched some of the construction of "Old Main" on the University of Arkansas campus. The building stones were quarried out east of town and put on large wagons which were drawn to town by oxen.

At the age of eighteen, Kit began his career in business. He started as a merchant clerk in Springdale and, subsequently, became the proprietor of a lumber and hardware company. In 1900, he began a second career, in law enforcement, as deputy sheriff in Fayetteville. He was then elected to the post of Sheriff of Washington County, which office he held until 1908.

Upon his retirement as Sheriff, Kit again went into business, purchasing a hardware and implement business, which he ran with the help of his son-in-law, Frederick McLauren Brookes. The business, the Philips-Brookes Hardware Company, was one of the town's largest concerns. Kit's grandchildren remember being awed at the size of the store and the amount of merchandise stocked on the shelves. The store had mahogany fixtures, shelved all the way up to a high ceilng, and rolling ladders to give access to the top. Some of the grandchildren remember how thrilling it was to go for a wild ride all the length of the store on the ladder.

Kit was also a charter member, shareholder and director of the Arkansas National Bank of Fayetteville.

On December 27, 1877, Kit married Miss Martha Esther "Mattie" Jameson. Mattie was born September 17, 1856 in Webster County, Missouri. Her father, Jehu Reece Jameson, died when she was three years old. When she was a young girl, her mother, Nancy Hanby (Waller) Jameson, was remarried to Judge A. J. Hale. When Mattie, her sisters, Mary Margaret and Rebecca Eleanor, their mother and stepfather came to Arkansas in 1866, they traveled in a covered wagon. They camped in College Street in Fayetteville, near a big spring, until they could build a house.

Mattie had beautiful gray-green eyes and never "bobbed" her hair. She wore it puffed out in front and back with a knot in the middle of her head. She was a well-built woman, not slender or stout, but well-proportioned. She wore beautiful clothes. In the summer, there was no air conditioning, but her grandchildren remember that she always looked fresh. She would wear linen dresses in pale colors, orchid and blue were her favorites. In the middle of the hot Arkansas afternoons, she would make a pitcher of lemonade and sit out on the big porch. Neighbors would stop by for a glass of lemonade and a visit.

Kit's grandchildren remember him as being a fun-loving person who always had a joke to tell. He told his jokes as if one of his close friends were involved in the story. When Kit got his first car, he drove it from Fayetteville to Springdale to show his family. Not many folks had cars in those days so a drive with Kit was quite exciting. Kit's niece remembers her first drive with him. They drove down Emma Avenue, which at that time was not paved. They didn't travel fast, but she remembers being scared because he took his hands off of the steering wheel. Before he got the car, he drove a big horse hitched to a buggy. For a hitching post, he used a big oak tree that stood right in the middle of the street by his house.

Kit was tall, well over six feet. He was bald on top and had a lovely ring of silver hair from ear to ear. He had dark brown eyes and a dark black full mustache. Kit had many friends, and as far as anyone remembers, he never said anything bad about anyone. He loved to fish and spent many happy hours enjoying this hobby.

Kit and Mattie had four children, Claudia Jameson, born October 25, 1878, Guy Clark, born January 9, 1882, Nora Vaughn, born November 15, 1884, and Bess Agnes, born December 3, 1892. Claudia married Frederick McLauren Brookes on October 13, 1903. Fred Brookes later went into business with Kit. Guy married August Rothwell Keeney on April 8, 1908. Nora married Edward T. Dewitt on May 5, 1907. Bess married Noah Carnahan Adams on June 5, 1917.

Claudia and Fred Brookes had seven children. Martha Elizabeth married (1) Joseph Kelley Rea and (2) Chester W. Bartlett. Nora Pauline married Ernest Don Walls. Frederick Philips Brookes married Nancy Opal Green. Virginia Jameson married (1) George Washington Hulme and (2) Arthur Wilford Gragg. McLauren Kit died unmarried. Willis Philips married Lois Mae Bernard. Claudie Bess married Largus Bryce Hughes.

Claudia Bess and Largus Bryce Hughes had three daughters. Sharman Elizabeth married Steven Loren Barghols and has two children, Lauren Elizabeth and John Hughes. Patricia Louise married James Richard Foster and has one child, Eva Leigh. Linda Lee married Alan John Lincoln and has two children, Adam James and Alexis Louise.

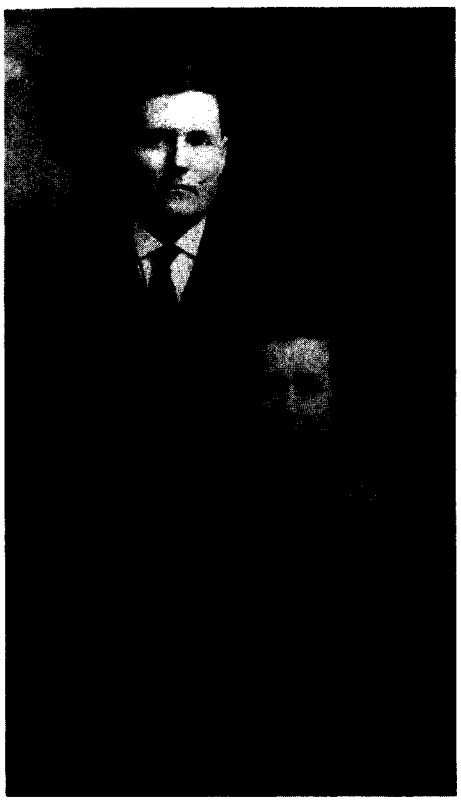
Nelson R. Graham was born January 28, 1805 near Lexington, Kentucky and his family moved to Arkansas near Woolsey. From there, his father, William Graham, moved near Monte Ne on White River. Nelson married Louisa Landers, (she was born January 13, 1812, daughter of Peter Landers) their first five children were born there. In 1840, they moved to a farm near Accident School. Here seven more children were born. Nelson R. Graham was killed February 1, 1863 near the big spring on old Ben Phillips farm near the Phillips Cemetery and was the first person buried in that cemetery. He was shot by Union soldiers. The killing was witnessed by his ten year old son, Elias. They were hauling a barrel of water from the spring. His wife, Louisa, died December 26, 1894.

Their daughter, Lucinda, born March 29, 1834 married William C. Phillips. They had two children, Cole Phillips and Debbie Phillips Wharton.

Cole Phillips was born October 13, 1875. He married Nettie Margaret Graham on October 21, 1908. She was born January 17, 1883, daughter of John Carter and Annis Goodman Graham. Nettie was the sixth of seven sisters. In his early years, Cole Phillips was a horse trader and trainer, making frequent trips, by horseback, to Oklahoma and doing business with the Indians. A prosperous farmer, having farmed in this area, he suffered great loss during the depression. An intelligent and well-read man, he took active part in local politics and education, serving on school



Nettie Margaret Graham and Cole Phillips.

He received the European-African-Middle Eastern Service Medal with four Bronze Stars. He flew in battles and campaigns of: Northern France Campaign, Ardennes Campaign, Rhineland Campaign, and Central Europe Campaign. He entered in July 8, 1943 and was honorably discharged as Technical Sergeant October 20, 1945. Married Patsy Jo Taldo on June 6, 1949. She was born March 18, 1929, daughter of Joseph T. and Dora Sbanotto Taldo of Tontitown, Arkansas. They have two sons, Joseph C. and Patrick D. Phillips. Dwight Cole Phillips died February 7, 1987.

Joseph Cole Phillips was born September 15, 1950. A 1968 graduate of Springdale High School, he served as president of Student Council in senior year. A 1975 graduate of University of Arkansas, Fayetteville with BSBA with high honors and served as Treasurer (1970) and President (1971) of Kappa Sigma Fraternity. After graduating from Harvard University, Boston, Massachusetts, with MBA he was employed as CPA for three years in San Francisco, California, and seven years in Silicon Valley in a high technology company. He enlisted in United States Navy 1972 serving two years of active duty in Vietnam War and four years active reserve. Petty Office Phillips was awarded the Vietnam Service Medal and Combat Action Ribbon. Honorable discharge 1977. He and his wife, Rita, currently reside in Richmond, Virginia where both are employed.

Patrick Dwight Phillips was born May 26, 1954. He received his education at Springdale High School and University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Arkansas. A Springdale business man and proprietor of Westwood Drive-In, Springdale, he is carrying on family business started by his parents. He is also proprietor of Huntsville Street Station in Springdale. He is married to Mary Alice Franco and they have two daughters: Megan Diana Phillips born June 13, 1983 and Stephanie Jo Phillips born January 9, 1987.

Annis Goodman Graham, born December 25, 1849, came to Arkansas in 1858 with her parents, Jesse and Margaret Couch Goodman. Annis was nine years old and the oldest of eleven children. The Goodmans, with two other families, Hewitts and Hartleys, left Hawkins County, Tennessee two years earlier and went to Anderson, Indiana. From there, they came to Arkansas, bringing livestock and farm equipment. They camped three weeks in Friendship Church, which was then a log building with fireplaces at both ends. They bought a farm at the southwest corner of 68 Highway and Old Wire Road. After the Civil War, Goodman bought Fitzgerald Station and built the front part of the house that is still there. Until recent times, the cave where he penned his hogs on the mountain was known as Hog Hole.

Megan Phillips, age 4 and Stephanie, six months.

Annis Goodman married John Carter Graham January 7, 1869. (John Carter Graham was born December 29, 1839, was the fourth of fourteen children of Levi and Nancy Graham. John's father, Levi, was born in Green County, Kentucky in 1806 and came to Arkansas as a young man. He married Nancy Graham, also of Green County, Kentucky, a cousin and granddaughter of Peter Graham, one of very first settlers of northwest Arkansas). John C. and Annis Graham had seven daughters: Hester Caldonia Dobkins born November 10, 1869, died May 21, 1953, Martha Belle Anderson born June 22, 1872, died November 8, 1959, Amanda Jane Wilson born December 30, 1874 died 1964. In 1879, John C. Graham built a new house for his family at the north end of Becker Lane where the road bends east. The lumber was hauled from Van Winkler Mill. The two-story, six room house with two porches and a cellar cost $90.00 for all labor and material. An identical house built the same year was recently moved from northeast corner of airport and is still occupied by Carl Scott. Carl Scott bought the house and property from Nettie Phillips on or about March 17, 1956. She was the sixth daughter of John C. and Annis Graham. John C. Graham died May 5, 1887. His death was due to injuries he received in the Civil War. A bullet had never been removed from his body and gangrene had set in. Annis Goodman reared the seven daughters. She died February 19, 1920. Nettie Margaret Graham married Cole Phillips October 21, 1908.

John H. Phillips

This branch of the Phillips family was not one of the founding families of Washington County; nor was it one of the larger ones. However, in the town of West Fork, the name has long stood for the hardware business.

The children of John H. and Nettie Gambill Phillips, taken about 1907, Edra, Gussie (standing) and William.

John H. Phillips came to Arkansas and settled in Washington County as a young man. Born in Bedford County, Tennessee in 1858, he was accompanied to Arkansas by one half-brother, Will, who settled near Benton, south of Little Rock. Apparently, these two were the only ones of a large family to ever leave Tennessee.

John settled in the town of Elm Springs and in 1893 married Miss Nettie Gambill. To this union were born four children, two boys and two girls. One boy died in infancy. Neither of the two daughters, Gussie and Edra, was ever married. So all the progeny of this family was through the one son, William E.

William attended schools in Elm Springs and Springdale and took some courses at the Fayetteville Business College. As a youth, he went to work for William Hewitt at the Elm Springs Hardware. In 1922 he married a young lady from the community of Mount Comfort, whom he had met at an inter-community Sunday afternoon baseball game. Mary Emma Smith had, a few years before this, moved from Collin County, Texas with her family. She attended University High School in Fayetteville.

A few months after their marriage, they moved to West Fork, where "Bill" went to work for Washington County Hardware and Lumber Company. A few years later when the firm sold and moved to Springdale, the Phillipses established their own business, "Phillips Hardware". This business continues in operation in 1986.

Bill and Mary Phillips were always active in community affairs and especially in the Presbyterian Church. Bill served many years on the School Board and on the City Council, where he filled the offices of both Clerk and Mayor.

Though this family was not blessed with any sons, the two daughters, Emma Ruth and Wildene, grew up actively helping out in the hardware store. It was truly a "family affair". The first few years were spent in rented buildings, then in 1938 a rock building was erected on Main Street. One souvenir of this building project Bill carried the rest of his life was a short finger, the first joint of which was clipped off in a trailer hitch. Through the 30s and early 40s different enterprises were incorporated into the hardware business for a time. At one time, not only were caskets sold, but a hearse was purchased and W. E. Phillips was a "funeral director". At another time, for a few years, cream was bought, tested and sold to Jerpe Dairy Products of a Fayetteville. Farmers carried their buckets or hauled their 5 or 10 gallon cans of cream from many miles for a little spending money. Saturday was the big day for cream buying, so this necessitated a trip to Fayetteville on Saturday night for the Phillips family, especially in hot weather.

After the girls married and went on to raise their families, Bill and Mary Emma continued on in the business until Bill's death in 1973. A few months later the business was purchased by Wildene and her husband, Isaac Caudle.

After Bill and Mary Emma had established their home in West Fork, John and Nettie and their daughters had moved from Elm Springs to be near their son and his family. All four of them lived out their days in West Fork. This entire family is now buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery. With Edra's death in 1985, this family passed from this world, leaving no descendants bearing the name Phillips.

Bill and Mary Emma's oldest grandson, son of Emma Ruth and Ed Jones was given the Christian name "Philip". They also had one daughter, Linda.

Wildene and Isaac Caudle were parents of one daughter, Katharine and one son, Daniel.

Mary Emma's parents, Lee Van and Elizabeth Smith had also spent their last days in West Fork, also as active members of the Presbyterian Church. Lee Smith and Bill Phillips served as elders together; and Bill lived to serve with his son-in-law, Isaac Caudle. When Katharine (Mrs. Leon) Mitchell was ordained as one of the first female elders in the West Fork Church, she, therefore, was a fourth-generation elder.

Though, this Phillips family actually spanned only a little over 100 years in the history of Washington County, their descendants do live on, though they are named Jones, Caudle and Mitchell.

James H. Phipps

James H. Phipps, born January 3, 1869, married Cora Jane Kelly, born March 24, 1876 in Buffalo, Missouri the daughter of Frank and Sarah Jane Kelly. After the death of Frank, his wife made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Phipps.

When the St. Paul branch of the Frisco railroad went east into St. Paul, Arkansas, the timber empire, James Phipps went to St. Paul as a railway agent. Seeing the opportunity in the lumber industry he interested J. M. Williams in his plan to work up raw material into lumber needed by the world. As partners they opened as J. H. Phipps Lumber Company. Soon they saw the need to locate headquarters at Fayetteville and opened in 1898 incorporating, with J. H. Phipps, President; J. M. Williams, Vice President, W. Jerome Reynolds, Sec.-Treas.; S. L. Gill, Plant superindent; Lee Moore, Plant Foreman. They built a plant on West Sixth Street eventully employing 200 men. A check of shipments made by Mr. Phipps for a fifteen year period showed inbound railroad cars 15,000 and outbound railroad cars of finished material 6,164 with a total sales at $5,370,000 and a net profit of over half a million dollars.

In 1920, Jay Fulbright bought controlling interest in the company and Tom Waugh became secretary. In 1924, Mr. Fulbright bought the remaining interest and assumed entire control. Mr. Phipps continued to travel for the company.

In 1907, the Washington County Bank was nationalized, the name changed to Arkansas National Bank with Mr. Phipps serving as an officer of the Bank. The Bank was located on the first floor of Washington Hotel Building. In 1925, the bank moved into its own building. Mr. Phipps was elected Vice President and Director. The J. H. Phipps Lumber Company continued operation and supplied the city with wood and coal for heating the homes and businesses. Mr. Phipps was a 33rd Degree Mason. He and Mrs. Phipps were members of the First Christian Church of Fayetteville. They were the parents of six children. Vida Edith, Harvey G., J. Urval, Doyle, Virginia and Velma. Vida married Arthur Atkins Eason on April 19, 1912. They had three children. Margaret Elizabeth, Arthur Atkins, Jr. and Jim Tom. Vida died January 3, 1920 and the children were reared by grandparents and Mr. and Mrs. U. L. Smelser. Arthur joined Smelser in a hardware store selling John Deere Farm Equipment. After the death of his wife, he left the business and moved to El Dorado, Arkansas to the booming oil fields.

Daughter Margaret, married George H. Liles. They have two children, Vida Mae and Thomas Arthur (Tommy). Vida Mae married James C. Atherton, Jr. They have three sons, James C. (Chris) an oil field worker in Texas, George Robert (Bobby) an employee of an air conditioning firm in Corpus Christi, Texas, and David Allan an employee of a subsidary of Sears in Hondo, Texas. They also have seven grandchildren.

Vida Mae is employed with GMAC in Corpus Christi. Tommy has two children, George Lamar of Rogers, employed with Wal Mart and Mary Margaret of Harrison employed with Levi-Strauss and attends college. Tommy is employed with Southwestern Electric Power Company in Rogers. Tommy's wife Lalah has two sons Steven Dwayne O'Neal of Elm Springs, employed with Tyson's and Gary Lee O'Neal of Fayetteville, a student at the University of Arkansas and a Commissioned Officer of the Arkansas National Guard. Lalah is employed with Master Supply, Inc. of Springdale.

Arthur, Jr. and wife Virginia live in St. Louis, Missouri. He recently retired from Lammert Furniture Co. They have three sons. Scott and wife Barbara have two sons, Ryan and Scott Michael. Tom and Tim Holman are Barbara's sons by a previous marriage. Steve and wife Janet have three children, Marc, Stephanie and Jenna. Alan and wife Joan are raising her two children Amy and Jared.

Jim Tom and wife Betty live Kingman, Arizona. Both recently retired from the University of Redlands, California.

As far as is known, the other children of Mr. and Mrs. Phipps are deceased. The whereabouts of any other grandchildren is not known.

Cora Jane Kelly Phipps passed away in 1931. Mr. Phipps passed away in 1944. Both are buried in Evergreen Cemetery.

James W. Phipps

About 1839, Gilbert Looper, born 1806 in North Carolina and his wife Susannah, born 1816 in Tennessee, and three children who were: William Looper, 1832, Tennessee; James, 1835, Tennessee and Gilbert, 1838 Tennessee, came to Washington County, Arkansas and lived in Clear Creek Township. Their children after they arrived in Arkansas were: Minerva, 1840; Treacy, 1841; Susanna, 1842; Joel, 1844; Robert, 1846; Benjamin, 1848; Simeon, 1852 and Bennet, 1854. Susannah Looper for the most part has been listed as born in Tennessee, but a couple of times I have found behind her name, "Indiana". I believe someone meant that she was Indian, not that she was born in Indiana.

Sometime between 1840 and 1850, James Phipps, 1802, North Carolina and his wife, Sarah, 1812, Kentucky, came to Washington County, Arkansas with six children and lived in Marrs Hill Township. The children were: James Wooden Phipps, 1828, Illinois; Susan, 1834, Illinois, Matilda, 1835, Kentucky; Nathan, 1836, Illinois; Thomas, 1838, Illinois; William, 1840, Illinois. After they came to Arkansas, the children were: David 1851; Joseph, 1853; Nancy, 1855 and Sarah, 1858.

James W. Phipps, 1828 married a girl named Elizabeth Phipps and after one child, John Phipps, 1855, Elizabeth died and James married again to Minerva Super. Minerva also died in February 1858. Soon after Minerva's death, James married her younger sister, Treacy. From this marriage were born: Benjamin, 1859; Joel, 1862; Matilda Jane, 1866 and Nancy A. Phipps, 1868.

James W. Phipps was in Union Army in the Civil War. He died in 1898. Treacy Phipps died in 1925. She was living with her son Joel.

Around 1882, Joel Phipps, 1862, and Margaret Luttrel, 1866, were married. Their children were Sam. L. Phipps, 1883; Eter Phipps, 1885; Treacy Jane Phipps, 1887; John Marion Phipps, 1889; Ollie Elvira Phipps, 1890; Louis El Phipps, 1892; Bennie Irvan, 1894; Earl, 1896; Stella, 1898 and Mamie Edith, 1900. April 23, 1885, Matilda Jane Phipps, 1866, married William Langrell, 1865 in Tennessee. There were five children: Annie "Mallory", Cora "Stewart" "Alloway", Hugh, James and Lily "Thurmon".

About 1876-77, Alonzo Stewart, 1823, Illinois, his third wife, Sarah Butler Stewart, Illinois, and three children came to Washington County, Arkansas. The two eldest children were: Daniel, 1865, Illinois; and Margaret, 1869, Illinois, who were Alonzo and Lucinda's, and older sister of Sarah's. Sarah's children were: Mollie "Hulse", 1875; Alonzo, 1878; Arch William, 1880; Edward and Talbert "Bert", 1883.

Around 1905, Arch William Stewart and Cora Langrell were married. There were two children: Alice "Stevens", 1906; and Lillian "Kincaid", 1908. Arch and Cora were divorced and Cora remarried Alloway and there were two children: Maxine and Leona. Leona and her husband Loyd live in Joplin, Missouri. They have one daughter, Sharon, who was a teacher in Quapaw, Oklahoma. Maxine had one son, James Benze, who the last time I heard was living in Idaho. Lillian "Kincaid" had one son, Billy, and she was killed in an automobile accident near Claremore, Oklahoma in 1945. Alice was married to John Stevens in Detroit, Michigan and they had three children: Jack, Joy "Kincaid" and Stuart. Alice passed away in 1969. Her children live near Rosecommon, Michigan.

Talbert "Bert" Stewart, 1883, married Treacy Jane Phipps, 1887, who was a first cousin to his sister-in-law, Cora Langrell Stewart. There were three children: Charlie Joel, 1909; Johnie Ramon, 1914 and Edith Ward, 1917. Edith and Ben Ward live in Inola, Oklahoma.

Buried in White Oak cemetery are Alonzo and Sarah Stewart, Lowry Stewart, Margaret Stewart, Talbert and Treacy Stewart, Charlie Stewart, Johnie Stewart, Matilda Jane Langrell, in Stoney Point is Ben Phipps, 1859. In Wedington, Joel L. Phipps, 1861.

George Franklin Plumlee

Plumley is an old name in Southwest England. In Somerset Shire the name was mentioned in the fourteenth century. A fairly good record was left in the Parish of Priddy there in the 1500s - 1600s records.

We are concerned with those who lived in Washington County, Arkansas especially George Franklin Plumlee family.

In 1767 living in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia were William and Phoebe (Denton) Plumlee. They later moved to the frontier of North Carolina, then on to Tennessee in about 1800. Our subject is George Franklin Plumlee. "Frank" was their third great grandson. He was born in Jackson County, Tennessee on February 18, 1854, the son of Clinton and Nancy (Pennington) Plumlee. He was married on December 25, 1875 to Mahalia Amanda Grisham. She was born in Cumberland County, Kentucky on June 8, 1854, the daughter of Ellis C. and Anna (Storey) Grisham. George F. Plumlee was first son of Clinton and Nancy Plumlee. Nine (9) more children were born later. In August 1878, all except one daughter who remained in Tennessee sold land and started for Newton County, Arkansas, some with oxen and wagons, others drove horses. The story had been told that Ellis C. Grisham rode along with the wagons on the first day, begging his daughter and family to remain in Tennessee. He camped the first night with them. The following morning he put the saddle on his horse and slowly rode away never to see his daughter again.

This Plumlee wagon train had a difficult time as rains started soon after they started, then cold weather slowed them. They finally arrived near Compton, Arkansas late in November and settled in an area known as Possum Trot. Some twenty-two years later, "Frank and Mandy" Plumlee and seven children moved to near Springdale in the Shady Grove Community. Frank was employed at the Lime Kiln in Johnson for a time. About 1905, they had company from Oklahoma Territory. Jim and Rhoda (Grisham) Franklin. Rhoda was a sister to Mandy Plumlee. The Franklins told of the wonderful territory and raising of cotton, so the Plumlees moved to Lincoln County and settled near Wellston, Oklahoma. Here they were living in 1907 when Oklahoma became a state. By 1910, the Plumlees were again living near Springdale with the exception of the third son, George who was working on the famous "101 Ranch" and daughter Norene who was attending school at Bethany, Oklahoma. Both later returned to Arkansas and their family. George came down with typhoid fever which weakened him the rest of his life. Norene Plumlee later took a teaching course at the University of Arkansas and passed the required test for a teachers license and taught school for several years in Washington County.

Finally, the family was together again living southeast of Springdale near Zion. The older daughter Flora had remained in Newton County where she had married Melvin Grogan. In a few years, they too would move with the rest of the family. Much fun was enjoyed by this family. They liked music and singing. The boys formed a quartet, Norene played a pump organ. At this time, most of the family was working on the "Patton Farm". Later, most became farmers in the area, remaining near Zion for many years.

Children of George F. and Mandy Plumlee are: 1. Flora Plumlee born 1876 in Tennessee, M. Melvin Grogan, both buried in Oakland Cemetery. Children: A. Gertie May Grogan married Martin Allred. B. Effie Pearl Grogan died young. C. Minnie Alice Grogan, married W. C. Bobo. D. Thomas Franklin Grogan, married first: Elsie Shaw, second: Helen Fryl. E. William Homer Grogan never married. F. Joel Ellis Grogan, married first: Theda Baker, second: Dixie Roberts. G. Mattie Viola Grogan married Carl Baker. H. Robert Floyd Grogan died young. I. Freddy Leroy Grogan never married. J. Georgia Norene Grogan, married Paul Sisemore. 2. William Thomas Plumlee born 1878 in Tennessee, married Catherine Horn, daughter of Nicholas J. and Cora Ann (Cardwell) Horn, both buried in Huntington Beach, California. Children: A. Wilbur Franklin Plumlee, married Nora Hrabal. B. Edith Bell Plumlee, married Delavan J. Dickson. C. Florence Cora Plumlee, married Thomas Wyllie. D. William Orville Plumlee, married Dorothy Vincent. E. Maurice Audrey Plumlee, married Ruth Ketter. F. Nicholas Eugene Plumlee, married Margaret Jones. G. Ethel Marie Plumlee, married Willard Crowley. William and Catherine Plumlee moved to California in the late 1920s, most have remained. 3. Henry Ellis Plumlee born 1880 in Arkansas, married Minnie Bell Cooper, both are buried in Zion Cemetery. Children: A. Homer Charles Plumlee, married first: Anna Pearl Miller, second: Fern Leota Vermillion Cannon. B. George Houston Plumlee. C. Ethel Jewell Plumlee, married Tolbert Graham. D. Eula Mosell Plumlee died young. E. Leta Norene Plumlee, married Hubert Smith. F. Thelma May Plumlee, married Lawrence Jennings. G. Rachel Marie Plumlee, married Tommy Williams. H. Mary Ellen Plumlee, married Burton McGee. Henry Ellis Plumlee was a farmer and Baptist Minister. 4. George Kay Polk Plumlee born 1884 in Newton County, Arkansas, married Sarah Ellen Horn born in Washington County, Arkansas, daughter of Nicholas Johnson and Cora Ann (Cardwell) Horn. George and Sarah Horn Plumlee are both buried in Zion Cemetery. Children: A. Kenneth Eugene Plumlee died young. B. Gynith Maxine Plumlee, married Mont Fowler. C. Robert Donald Plumlee, married Margaret Kunec. D. Billy Hugh Plumlee, married Jimmie Gilliland. E. Carroll George Plumlee, married Alice Uhing. George Plumlee was a farmer and raised his family one mile west and a mile north of Zion. His wife, Sarah lived on this farm more than fifty years. Both are buried in Zion Cemetery. 5. Winfield Poynor Plumlee born 1886 in Newton County, Arkansas, married Martha Emma Wilson. They are buried in Oakland Cemetery. Children: A. Edna Lorene Plumlee died young. B. Oliver Marvin Plumlee (twin) married Louise Tetters. C. Anna Mildred Plumlee (twin) married Theodore Weible. D. Helen Irene Plumlee (twin) married first: Houston Kirk, second: John Baxter. E. Harry Dean Plumlee (twin) died young. Winfield Poyner Plumlee was a farmer and Baptist Minister. 6. Oliver Green Plumlee born 1888 in Newton County, Arkansas married Anna Mae Cate, both are buried in Oakland Cemetery. Children: A. Louise Marie Plumlee, married Lymon Houston. 7. Edward David Plumlee born 1890 in Newton County, Arkansas, married Lola Halsey. Children: A. George Richard Plumlee, married Elizabeth Sokal. B. Elsie Norene Plumlee, married Fred Phares. C. Jewell Christine Plumlee, married Wallace Cartter. D. Lula Nadean Plumlee, married Ralph Norton. E. Ollie Mae Plumlee, married Lester Hunt. Ed, Lola and children moved to California in 1930, both buried there, their children live in California. 8. Norene Anabelle Plumlee born 1892 in Newton County, Arkansas married Joe Logan, no children. Norene Plumlee taught school at Zion a number of years, then taught at Hickory Flat. Moved to Tulsa, Oklahoma in 1918 where she married and lived in same house for more than fifty years.

George Franklin and Amanda Plumlee spent the late years in life east of Zion 1/2 mile. They lived in a house that had an upstairs that this writer remembers. They liked to keep a house full of grandchildren. At times, there were six or more from different families. We sure got to know all cousins and were all one big happy family. Their descendants now live from coast to coast although many remain in Washington County, Arkansas. Each year, on the second Sunday in June, we all gather at Zion for a reunion. All Plumlee's from other branches of the family are welcome. Many states and families are represented each year. Old Zion School House had more Plumlees attending than other students in early years. Several generations of Plumlees attended school there.

Orvis Cecil Pollock

Orvis Cecil Pollock and Jesse Dewitt Robertson Pollock were parents of four children; Coburn, Silas, Norma and Mary Jane in 1917 when they lived in Tullahoma, Tennessee, where both had grown up. This was during World War I, and times were hard with a family to feed and the possible threat of being drafted. Orvis Cecil, or O. C. as he was known, packed up the family belongings, his four children and his pregnant wife and taveled by train to Trinidad, Colorado. They crossed the Mississippi River somewhere around St. Louis, Missouri and Norma remembers seeing large ships and barges on the big river below as the train went across the bridge.

By the time they reached Trinidad, winter was coming on. O. C. supported the family there by working in the mines and doing any odd jobs he could find. Their son, Howard was born there on February 3, 1918.

O. C. took a job on a ranch in LaJunta, Colorado, and moved the family there from Trinidad. After a time here, he took a ranch to develop and paid a price to the homesteader for use of the ranch. This was called the "dryland" by the family. This was the beginning of winter in 1918 and there was no house for the family on the ranch. They moved into an old "dug-out" there until a house could be built. Before that could take place though, a large snow storm came and the snow began to leak in on the family. O. C. put on high boots and made tracks through the snow and the family followed him to shelter in the home of the homesteader. The younger children were wrapped in blankets and tow-sacks around their feet. They walked about a mile and found shelter in the home of the owner of the land for a few weeks until a rock house could be built. O. C. and Jessie put out a garden that spring, but the climate was very dry and not much could be grown, so they moved back to Tullahoma, Tennessee.

On February 2, 1920 in Tullahoma, another daughter, Alberta, was born. In the fall of 1920, they again packed up and moved to Flennington, Missouri, a small town near Springfield, Missouri. The older children went to school that fall in Flennington, Missouri. The next year, the family hired a man with a team of horses and a wagon to move them to Springfield. Mary Jane started first grade that fall in Springfield. Odd jobs supported the family of O. C. Pollock in Springfield. There was not much work here either. The family had bought the farm in Flennington and traded it for a house in Springfield, so they owed no money for their home. They owned this home for several years, although they did not live there for very long.

Due to lack of work, they left Springfield and went to Topeka, Kansas, by train and lived there for a short while. They went to work on a ranch in Clearwater, Kansas, during the summer of 1922. They raised wheat, cattle, and worked mules to till the ground. O. C. was never fond of mules and found this work to be hard. He packed up again in the fall of 1922 and moved to Shawnee, Oklahoma. The children started school in Shawnee that year. Then the family felt the urge to go eastward in April of 1923.

O. C. and Jessie bought a team of horses and made a covered wagon. He made the staves and got the canvas for the top. At this time, the family had 6 children. They packed their belongings in the wagon and started toward Arkansas with no destination in mind. They camped along the roadside at night. There were very few cars on the roads at this time and the roads had big ruts where the tires had sunk in the mud. The kids who could keep up with the wagon would get out and walk when they got tired of riding. Mary Jane, who was 7 at the time, got on the brake beam and fell off. Her feet got run over by the wagon tires and Coburn picked her up and put her in the back of the wagon. She was not seriously injured.

As they came through Prairie Grove, they met a man on foot by the name of Eser Ledbetter. He told the Pollock family of his farm near Elkins, and told them they could live there. So they started on their journey toward Elkins. Not knowing where they were going, nor the stranger they had met, they didn't want to show up at his house after dark. So they camped at the Middle Fork Bridge (which at that time was on the main road between Fayetteville and Elkins on what is now the old Stone Bridge road). The next morning, they continued their journey toward the Eser Ledbetter farm.

When they arrived, the renters were not moved out of the house and the Pollock family had to camp in the barnyard for a few days before they could move into the house.

On this farm, they put in crops of corn and oats, but the ground was very low and wet. The crops did better than they had expected. Ruby was born in September of 1923 while living at this place. The next year the family moved across the road to a better house on the John Stokenbury place. There they share-cropped and stayed for one year.

They bought 40 acres of land for $900.00 on top of the mountain west of Elkins from Mr. Duschene, a Frenchman. They paid $100 plus interest each year for 9 years on this farm. They built a barn in the form of a house in which they could live until their house could be built. They cut logs and took them to the sawmill to be made into lumber for the house. They built a barn first as it could be done faster and they could have shelter while building the house. Many, many wagon-loads of rocks were hauled to make the road up the side of the mountain to their mountaintop farm. Rocks were also used to make rock wall fences which kept the hogs and horses in their pens. After the barn was completed, the house was started. Before the house was finished though, Alice was born while the family lived in the barn in January 1925.

The family planted sugar cane for molasses, and raised everything they ate. About the only food purchased was sugar and salt.

They butchered 3 or 4 hogs each winter for food and cured and preserved them in the smokehouse they had built. They planted cabbage, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, all kinds of beans and peas and canned the vegetable for use during the winter. They raised vegetables for sale such as black-eyed peas, peanuts, sweet potatoes, corn, corn meal, made hominy, raised wheat and ground it into flour and made molasses. One year, they sold a train car load to the train car located on the tracks in Elkins. They raised all kinds of fruit such as apples, pear and grapes and made a sweet grape wine to be used for medicinal purposes.

After they moved into the house, Cecil was born in January 1927. The house was not finished yet at this time. Then in December 1928, Calvin, the last was born. His mother and father were 42 years old that year.

Breakfast was usually prepared by Norma, the eldest daughter. She made 6 dozen biscuits and 2 large skillets of gravy for the family's breakfast. Each child helped with the family chores. There was the washing which had to be done in a large kettle outside where a fire was built to boil the clothes. Then, a rub-board to rub the spots which didn't come clean in the boiling water. Each person in the family had not more than 2 or 3 changes of clothes and they had to be worn more than once in between washing. Crops were planted, weeded, cultivated, hoed, picked, hulled and processed by all members of the family who were big enough to work. At the end of the day, they would shell peas until darkness prevented them from seeing the peas. They sold these hand-shelled peas for $3.00 a bushel.

Sugar-cane was planted, hoed and cultivated by hand or a team of mules and when it got ripe, the fodder was cut off, the stalks had to be cut, and the younger children would cut the heads off the stalks. The stalks were then put in a wagon and taken to the molasses mill. Early the next day, a fire was built under the furnace out of wood. The cane stalks were put through a wringer to squeeze the juice out of them. The horse was hitched to the mill to make it run as there was no electricity at this time. The juice from the stalks ran down into a barrell, then into pans where it was then cooked down into molasses.

The family had a milk cow which supplied them with fresh milk, cream and butter. The milking was usually done by Jesse, the mother, and it had to be used in a short time for cooking and drinking as there was no way to keep it refrigerated. She also made cottage cheese from it.

They bought another 80 acres joining the original 40 acres at a later date. This made the Pollock farm a total of 120 acres.

O. C. Pollock and his wife Jesse were the parents of 10 children and later had 38 grandchildren. They were honest, hard working and strongwilled people. They nor any of their children ever used tobacco or alcoholic beverages. Music was an important part of their lives. Each member of the family played some musical instrument and they also enjoyed singing and dancing. Most Sundays were reserved for relaxation except for necessary chores. Although they did not attend church, the Bible was often seen in use in this household. Money was not plentiful, but there was always plenty of food to eat. Meals did not always include a meat dish, but consisted of good wholesome nutritious vegetables which they had grown. Everyone seemed to enjoy a life of good health with no major health problems.

Four of the daughters of O. C. and Jesse Pollock, Mary Jane, Alberta, Ruby and Alice have sung in a gospel quartet from their teen-age years. They continue to do so at this time; however, they ceased their singing while raising their families. They are still known at singing conventions as the "Pollock Sisters Quartet". All these sisters including Norma still reside in the Elkins area. Calvin has made his home in Valley Center, Kansas, and Cecil lives in Duncanville, Texas. Cecil has played the piano for numerous Gospel quartets both professional and non-professional, the most well-known being the Stamps Quartet. He has also taught singing schools and piano at the Stamps School of Music in Dallas, Texas. Calvin enjoys bowling and has been seen in semi-professional bowling tournaments across our country.

James Sylvester Thomas Porter

Armstrong and Nancy Porter, born in Pennsylvania, had two children, Thomas S. T. and Annie Porter.

James S. T. Porter was born in 1841, at Marietta, Ohio. They were of Irish ancestry and living in Jackson County, West Virginia, which was a new state, when he married March 7, 1866. (The war between the states just over and a lot of bitterness still in existence throughout the land). When he married Virginia Frances Harrison, eleventh child of Reverend William H. and Esther Allen Harrison.

Their children; John, James, Elizabeth, Joseph, Rachel, Jeremiah, Josiah, Kity, Carolina, William H., and great grandma, Virginia Frances, by his first wife, Dr. Benjamin Early by his second wife, Elizabeth Rader. Then Jessie B. and Elizabeth by his third wife, Catherine Harris, whom he married February 14, 1869, Mason County, West Virginia. Her parents, Silas and Mary Harris, his, Joseph and Isabella Jeffers Harrison.

James and Virginia lived in West Virginia, where older children, Elizabeth Caroline, Henry, Early, Mazella Belle, born October 16, 1871 in Jackson County, birth is recorded at Ripley. Laurvenie Ellender, born April 3, 1873. Lemuel Franklin, born May 9, 1875, James Fredrick, born 1877 at Laurel Fork and recorded at Ripley courthouse. It was after his birth that James and Virginia moved in a covered wagon pulled by oxen to Montrose, Henry County, Missouri, in time for the 1900 federal census.

Another child was born in May but not named when the census was taken, Ezra Duras, Richard, Katie and Lucy Ann, born December 6, 1885. Next they moved on to western Kansas living near Garden City, where their last child, Thomas Albert Armstrong Porter was born. Great Uncle Tom Porter told me he knew Armstrong was part of his name, but he never used it, when I told him of finding the names Armstrong and Nancy on the marriage records of James and Virginia Harrison Porter, at Ripley, West Virginia. He also said, "Wherever P. C. and Lizzie moved James Porter and family would follow".

It was around 1900 when James and Virginia Porter moved to Washington County, Arkansas. They lived near Wheeler where they died. He, October 5, 1915, and she, July 2, 1916, of stomach cancer while living with her grandson, James Lee Morgan, son of Perry C. and Elizabeth (Lizzie) C. Porter Morgan, after her house burned. They are buried at White Oak Cemetery where their descendants still visit their graves.

William Carroll Poston, Sr.

William C. Poston, Sr. was in Hardeman County, Tennessee as early as January 1825, when he was to give a deposition in a civil suit (Ellage v. Bartley) being tried at Moulton, Lawrence County, Alabama. We have been told that William C. was a descendent of John Poston 1686-1744 of Charles County, Maryland, but we have not verified this. William C. died 12 May 1848 at Sylva (Cincinnati), Arkansas, age 69 and was thus born circa 1778. His wife was Elizabeth, maiden name and place of marriage unknown. On 21 August 1829 a Wm. C. Poston bought 640 acres of land from M. H. Howard in Hardeman County, Tennessee for $1280. This seems to be our William C. We do not how or when he disposed of the land. We find our first record of him in Washington County, Arkansas on 25 March 1836 when he received a Patent from the United States for the SE1/4SE1/4S24T16NR34W, containing 40 acres. I would guess that he was here a few years before 1836. He may have used the water route to Van Buren, Arkansas, (Tennessee-Ohio-Mississippi-Arkansas Rivers) as did many others who came here from the Tennessee-Alabama border. Between 1836 and 1843 William C. bought more land from the United States to extent of about 600 acres all adjoining or near to his first 40 acres. His Tombstone bears the earliest known date of the burials in Old Union Cemetery 12 May 1848. His wife Elizabeth however, lived many more years and 18 July 1852 m. Peter Mankins Sr. of Middle Fork Valley near Sulfur City, southeast of Fayetteville. Peter lived to the age of about 111 years. He is buried in the Reece Cemetery near Sulfur City. We have not found Elizabeth's burial place.

Only two children survived William C., Sr. and Elizabeth. They were Phebe (Pheby, etc.) Poston and William Carroll Poston Jr. We do not know if there were others. Shortly after her marriage to Mankins, Elizabeth sold her interest in her former husband's lands to her children Phebe and William C. Jr. for $233.33-1/2 and probably moved to Mankins' farm by Sulfur City, Arkansas.

Phebe Poston was b. circa 1804 in Kentucky. She married William Barclay and their history is given under that name.

William Carroll Poston, Jr. was born in Kentucky about 1817. He died 22 October 1858, age 41 and is buried at Old Union Cemetery, Cincinnati, Arkansas. He married Bersheba Tilly, believed to be a daughter of John Tilly who had a farm in or near S9&16T15NR32W, Washington County, Arkansas. The large brick farmhouse, Cloverdale Farm, still stands and is owned by Commander John A. Buchanan, a descendant. We believe that Bersheba died in Texas. She is reported to be buried in the Poston-Odle Cemetery, Mosheim, Bosque County, Texas.

William C., Jr. and Bersheba had three children, William Tilly Poston, who m. 5 February 1857 to Mary Elizabeth (or Ann or J.) Odle, daughter of John Odle according to W. C. Poston of Mineral Wells, Texas, 1978. We believe John Odle is the Confederate soldier buried in the Warnie Smith Cemetery near Cincinnati, Arkansas. W. T. and Mary had at least one son (there may have been other children), Joseph S. M. Poston who m. Maggie Bell Jones. This couple had at least two sons, one, first name unknown, who m. Odette _____ in Australia and William Carroll Poston who after his brother's death, m. Odette. Odette had children who may have remained in Australia. I think that she and William Carroll had none. They were in Washington County in 1978, searching for John Odle.

The second child of William C. Jr. and Bersheba Poston was John J. Poston who m. Nancy J. No further information. The third child was Jane Poston who m. on 1 November 1854 Joseph Reeves Parks, Captain C. S. A., son of Walter Davis and Mary Park Parks of Cincinnati, Arkansas. Mrs. Larry Henderson of Denison, Texas has said that Jane and Joseph had three children, Mary B., Martha Jane and Lizzie C. Parks. We have not verified this. We do know on 11 June 1862, at "camp" near Tupelo, Mississippi, Captain Parks was not re-elected Captain of Company "E" 17th Arkansas Infantry (Griffith's). This is the last written record we have of him that we can be sure of. On 18 September 1865 Jane m. Thomas McAdams and by 29 October 1874 she and McAdams and Jane's brothers, Wm. T. and John J. Poston were in Bosque County, Texas (W. T. and wife Mary J.) and McLennan County, Texas (John J. and Nancy and Thomas and Jane McAdams).

On April 1868 James C. C. Patton was administrator of the estate of Joseph R. Parks deceased. We do not know the manner or place of his death. It could have been legally declared by court order. The Parks family only knew that "He went to war, and never returned."

A family history since discovered indicates that Captain Parks was murdered near his home northwest of Cincinnati, Arkansas but that his remains were not found for several years.

Everette William Price

A Kentuckian-born in Paintsville, Johnson County, Kentucky on January 25, 1882, he came to Arkansas in 1888 when his parents, Benjamin Franklin Price and wife, Sarah Huff Price, moved to Elkins and bought a farm just northwest of the McCord Cemetery. There he grew to manhood. On January 1, 1899 he was married to Mary Elizabeth (Lizzie) Boaz of Durham, Arkansas.

Their first venture together was a journey by covered wagon from Elkins to Muskogee, Indian Territory to begin farming with crops of cotton and corn. Lizzie became very ill with malaria and had to return to her family home in Durham while Everette returned to Indian Territory to finish his crops.

One early morning, Everette found his mules were missing. He began tracking the mules through a light snow and trailed them to stock pens in Muskogee where they were about to be shipped out. Indians had stolen the mules. With the aide of officers, he got his mules back but was afraid to live in the Indian Territory afterward.

After Everette harvested and sold his crops, he returned by wagon to Sulphur City to join his wife. Everette learned the Bob Dodd Store was for sale and after some thought, he decided to buy the store. Taking his crop money, he bought the Dodd store in 1907, which was the beginning of a sixty-three year career as a merchant in Sulphur City. Everette was active to his death October 2, 1970 at age 88.

Through the years, Everette built the store into a general merchandise business freighting goods and produce by wagon to and from Fayetteville. He bought or took in trade, chickens, eggs, butter, cream, fruit, cow hides, in winter furs (at 5 cents each) for gutted and dressed rabbits to be hauled by the wagon load to Fayetteville where they were shipped to eastern markets.

Everette was a well-known stock buyer of cattle and hogs which were driven to the railroad pens at Elkins, Winslow and West Fork to be shipped by carload to the St. Louis market.

With the union of Everette William and Elizabeth Price, six children were born: Ottis Price, born March 16, 1900 - died December 31, 1975, married Opal Woods on April 2, 1923; Everette Price, born January 30, 1911, married Margert McKinnon April 12, 1930; Claude Price, born March 5, 1914 - died October 3, 1921; Geneva Price, born July 19, 1916, married Archie Brashears March 15, 1942; Elizabeth Price, stillborn, and Gene Price July 2, 1928, married Phyllis Counts September 2, 1949.

All the surrounding mountain slopes were covered with apple trees, yielding barrels of apples. The Price Apple Dryer dried tons of them and employed about thirty women for peeling and slicing apples while the men did the heavier work. The dryer furnaces were fired with cord wood day and night. Sulphur fumes bleached the fruit which was turned every hour by shovel. The drying process took three (3) days. They were then sacked in burlap bags and apples were ready to be hauled to buyers in Fayetteville who shipped the bags to other cities.

Mr. Price was "civic minded" in a day where the term was unheard of. He was active in the church, education, politics, etc. Anything for community betterment, Mr. Price was ready to serve. He served as school director for years, a deacon in the Baptist Church. A staunch Democrat, he was active in politics and was Justice of the Peace, serving on the quorum court of Washington County and served on many juries both county and federal.

Everette also found time to oversee farming, sheep and cattle. He favored the Black Angus breed after years of range cattle.

The Price home was known throughout the years for its hospitality and well-set table. Mrs. Price never knew how many would be at her dinner table. Everette invited on impulse, drummers (salesmen), customers, preachers, friends, hired hands, or it seemed anyone who happened to be passing through Sulphur at dinner-time. Among simple dishes that Lizzie set on her table were the country ham, cole slaw (she had a special touch with it) and her Banana cake worthy of remembering, always served on a white tablecloth. Surely throughout the years, they offered food and friendliness to an army of people.

Everette William Price was a man blessed with natural abilities, which he made the most of for himself and in sharing with others. Of a quiet turn, he met life as it came, in a calm and placid manner. Lizzie was a true helpmate. Together they saw the rise and fall of Sulphur City. Now they rest in McCord Cemetery and Sulphur City has vanished. When Everette died, Sulphur City died.

Rose Nell Rogers Price

My mother, Rose Nell Rogers Price, lived on Boston Mountain near Lincoln, Arkansas as a young girl. She was the third child of Homer and Fannie Rogers (see Rogers-Sayers). The family had moved there from Rocky Comfort, Missouri, where my mother and her sister, Nada, were born. The younger children, Edmond, Marie and Irvin, were born on the mountain. Mother had many fond memories of those years and related many of them to us. Not long before she passed away, February 28, 1986 at the age of 77, she made a sketch of the old apple dryer that was on what they called "the old place" which joined the Nolan place where they lived. Grandfather had bought both places for the apple orchards and the dryer which would become a large part of their livelihood.

Rosa Rogers and Earl Price in 1925 before they were married.

Mother attended Mountain View School on Rhea route which is still standing today. My sister and I took mother back to see the old school building a few years ago. Mother walked all over the place, recalling events of the past and old classmates and teachers. We heard names like Robert and Pricilla Crawford, Harvey and Goldie Ezell, Allen Lowe, Suzie and Dessie and others that I can't recall now. She mentioned one teacher's name, Kate Moore, that taught in 1922. Mother had a very good eighth grade education. The three R's were definitely taught at Mountain view.

Nada May and Rose Nell Rogers, Summer of 1925 before they were married.

We went up on Boston Mountain as close as we could get to the "old place." This is part of the Ozark National Forest now and not very accessible by auto. Mother pointed to the poplar trees that were standing when she was a girl. She mentioned neighbors' names like Jake Wise, Jim Mayberry, Harvey Ezell, the Crawfords and the Lowes.

The family had left the mountain in 1924 to take up property in Wagoner County, Oklahoma, where they would be living, but going back and forth to take care of and harvest the apples until 1941 when grandfather sold the place on the mountain. All kids were married by that time. Mother met my father, Earl Elsberry Price, in Oklahoma. They eloped in October 1925, first going to Missouri to live and then to Rhea, Arkansas, not far from the mountain where my mother was raised. It was at Rhea that my brother, Chester Amos was born April 6, 1928. My oldest brother, Quinton, had died in infancy. They lived at Rhea and made one crop then returned to Oklahoma where the rest of us were born, Alvin, Juanita (myself), Dale and Karen.

My father was an orphan son of Rufus Price and Mary Bell Gose Igo of Scranton, Kentucky. Father arrived by train in 1914 with no money and no place to go. A kind gentleman took my father home with him where he earned his keep. This was near Coweta, Oklahoma, where he stayed until WWI broke out. He had a hard time getting in the army as he was only 16. Finally, he went to Missouri and joined the Missouri Militia as a way to get on into the army. He served with honor in the 13th Infantry, Company H, and was wounded in action somewhere in Europe. We have the copy of his Award for Bravery which was signed by Woodrow Wilson, President. After the war, Dad returned to Coweta where he met Mother. Mother and Father worked hard all their lives. They farmed, owned two grocery stores and a sale barn. Father was well-known for his livestock trading. Mother always worked by his side, but was a perfectionist in homemaking. She left behind many beautiful works of crocheting and quilting.

Father died in 1954 in an auto accident. Although Mother was only 46, she never looked at another man. Her saying was, "I had the best man that ever lived. Why would I want anyone else." She lived for her children. We survive her except for the pretty little red headed, blue-eyed boy that was born at Rhea, Arkansas. He preceded mother in death September 25, 1983, of a heart attack.

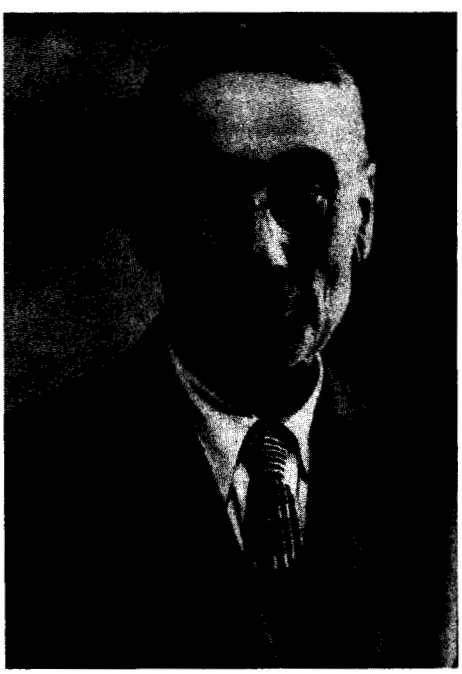
James Carrollton Putnam

James Carrollton Putnam moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas with his family in August, 1939. The family consisted of Mr. Putnam, age 71; his wife Eva A. (Hooper) Putnam, age 46; a son, William Truman Putnam, age 15; and a daughter, Helen Adeline Putnam, age 14.

James Carrollton Putnam, William T. Putnam, Helen Putnam Blackwell, Eva Adeline Hooper Putnam



James Carrollton Putnam, founder of the VFW

Putnam was interested in the Fayetteville area because of the services offered by the University of Arkansas, the Veterans Administration Medical Center, and the National Cemetery. The family had operated the Evergreen Dairy farm south of West Plains, Howell County, Missouri since 1921. Realizing that Bill had graduated from high school, and due to his own advanced age, Putnam decided to sell the 182 acre farm and move near a university to further educate his children. Knowing Bill was interested in law, he visited Fayetteville to "size up the situation". Putnam found the University of Arkansas, School of Law, was then rated #2 in the nation among universities. He checked out the V. A. Hospital and was told about the good patient care. He also checked out the National Cemetery and decided Fayetteville was the place to retire with his family. Telling his family that Fayetteville is a thriving community and the citizens are friendly, the farm was sold, and the Putnam family moved to the "Land of Opportunity". They settled on a 40 acre farm five miles west of Fayetteville in the White Rock Community. As World War II progressed, tires became more difficult to buy and gas was rationed. So, the family moved to town and the family car was later sold.

James C. Putnam was of the sixth generation of General Israel Putnam who served in the French and Indian Wars and in the Revolution under General George Washington. Putnam was a direct descendant of John Putnam from Abbots Aston, Buckinghamshire, England who died at Danvers, Massachusetts in 1662.

James C. Putnam's great-grandfather, Jessie, was in the War of 1812. his grandfather, Riley Putnam, was a fifer in the Mexican War, and with his son, William Riley, the father of James, served all through the Civil War.

James C. Putnam was born at Mount Ayr, Iowa, April 23, 1868. The Putnam family later migrated to Smith Center, Kansas, where Jim received his early education. On January 2, 1889, Putnam enlisted in the Army and was discharged April 1, 1892 at Fort Robinson, Nebraska. He participated in three Indian uprisings, served as a scout with Buffalo Bill in the "Bad Lands" of the Dakotas under then 2nd Lieutenant John J. Pershing; was in campaigns against the Utes in 1889, the Sioux Indian Campaign and Zuni's in 1889-90; and was wounded in the right leg from gunshot on the White River December 27, 1890. Putnam and General John Pershing became close friends.

Putnam furthered his education in Missouri, studied law in Nebraska; participated in a land rush in Oklahoma during 1893, homesteaded in Grant County, Oklahoma and served as Deputy Sheriff of that county in 1894.

On September 7, 1895, he re-enlisted at Buffalo, New York, and entered the Spanish American War in the 17th Infantry. He received a gunshot wound during the battle of El Caney near Santiago De Cuba, transferred to the Hospital Corps and was discharged August 31, 1898 at Columbus, Ohio.

Probably the most outstanding activity in Putnam's life historically was during 1899. He founded and served as first President of the American Veterans of Foreign Service. This organization was the first segment of what is known today as the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. (See related story in organization section). He was known and honored throughout his life at National and Department (State) conventions as the Founder and First Commander-in-Chief. He was a popular speaker on veterans affairs at VFW meetings across the country and enjoyed lecturing on that subject at numerous other events.

Among his many varied and interesting occupations, Putnam worked for the Fire Department at Columbus, Ohio. He worked for the railroad industry throughout the Midwest, Ohio, Florida and the Panama Canal Zone. He was legislative agent and organizer of the A. F. of L. From 1914 to 1921, Putnam helped construct the Panama Canal.

On February 22, 1918, Putnam married Eva Adeline Hooper at Cristobal, Canal Zone. During 1921, they moved to West Plains, Missouri and established a farming operation consisting of Holstein dairy cattle and fruit and truck farming. He helped build a small community church, was a member of the School Board of Evergreen district, helped organize the Missouri Farmers Association in Howell County, and served three terms as Howell County Representative in the Missouri Legislature. He served on the following committees: Pensions, Fish Game and Forestry, Labor and Roads and Highways.

Putnam joined the Masonic Lodge at Smith Center, Kansas July 16, 1892. He affiliated with Washington Lodge #1 at Fayetteville and was a member of the Baldwin Commandry #4 and Far West Chapter #1. Putnam enjoyed many years of Masonry in Arkansas and served as a lecturer. In August, 1950, he became a member of University City Chapter #495, Order of the Eastern Star of Arkansas.

Putnam was a patriot who enjoyed history. He was quick to come to the aid of a neighbor. He promoted safety in the community, and became involved in numerous activities. He had a husky voice and seldom needed a microphone. During many of the Memorial Day programs at the National Cemetery, he gave the ODE TO THE FLAG.

Mr. Putnam expired at the V. A. Hospital in Fayetteville on October 11, 1956. He rests today in our National Cemetery under the evergreen tree which seems to have been planted with him in mind.

His son, Bill, pursued a military career and retired after 32 years as an office in the U. S. Army. He became a Mason in 1944. He is currently active as President of a Regional Duplicate Bridge District and owns a bicycle shop in Monterey, California. Bill has two children, James W. and Ramona Putnam of Monterey, California.

His daughter, Helen Putnam Blackwell, still resides in Fayetteville. She retired after thirty-six years of government service. She is active at district and local levels of the Order of the Eastern Star. She is a member of several Veterans auxiliaries, working on the local, district and state levels of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Helen has a daughter, Vicki Blackwell Norvell of Farmington.

Jacob Pyeatt

The Pyeatts (then known as "Piat" and subsequently in America changed by various family branches to "Piatt", "Pyeatt" and Pyeatte") originally came from France where they were engaged in the manufacture of silk and the operation of vineyards. Our particular branch of the Pyeatt family originally settled in Guilford Courthouse, Guilford County, North Carolina. They were French Huguenots and came to America around 1685, at the time of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes which had granted Huguenots religious freedom.

The first authentic record of this branch of the Pyeatt family we have is of Jacob Pyeatt, who married Jean Paul (both were born around 1700) in 1723. Their children were: Jacob (born 1725); John (born June 26, 1735); Rebecca (born January 1, 1737); Peter (born February 1740); Mary (birth date unknown), another daughter (born February 8, 1745, who may have died in infancy); Martha (born April 18, 1747).

Of these children John Pyeatt (who it is believed was killed in the Revolutionary War at Camden, South Carolina in 1780) married Jane Blair and had four children: Jacob (1760-1844); James (1768-1837); Peter (dates unknown); Martha (dates unknown).

Of these children, Jacob Pyeatt was apprenticed to a bellmaker to learn the craft of making stock-bells. When he was approximately 18, it appears that he enlisted with Colonel George Rogers Clark who made a drive for recruits through that section of the country at the beginning of the Revolutionary War. (There is a record of his service with Clark's Illinois Regiment in the War Department. Also a payroll of Colonel Clark, now in the possession of the State Registrar, DAR, Van Buren, Arkansas list the name of Jacob Pyeatt.)

Jacob Pyeatt married Margaret Finley (1760-1822) in 1790. Their children were: John (1792-1823); Peter (1793-1856); Katherine 1795-?); Mary (1798-1877); Andrew (1800-?); Jane (1802-1832); Jacob (1804-?). Some time prior to 1809 Jacob and Jane Pyeatt or their parents had moved from South Carolina to an area near the Gasper River Presbyterian Church in Logan County, Kentucky. From there, the Pyeatts together with members of the Carnahan family and others floated down the Tennessee, Ohio and Mississippi rivers, ultimately landing at the mouth of White River, Arkansas on May 15, 1811. The emigrants settled at Crystal Hill, about 12 miles north of Little Rock.

Jacob's son John married Martha Carnahan in 1815. Their children were: Finis Ewing (1816-1857) and Paulina (1822-?). Finis Ewing Pyeatt married Elizabeth Maxwell (1820-1894) in 1836. Their children were: John Cuningham (1837-1888); William H. (1839-?); Jacob Preston (1841-1910).

Although the date the Pyeatts settled in Washington County has not been exactly determined, John Cuningham Pyeatt, married in 1867 to Julia Ann West (1845-1933), were residents of the county and his parents and possibly grandparents may also have been residents. For the most part their descendants who remained in this area lived all or a part of their lives in the Prairie Grove, Viney Grove and Fayetteville areas of the County. The children of John and Julia Ann were: Elizabeth A. (Betty) (1868-1959); Robert Ewing (1870-?); John Samuel (1874-1946); Audley (1876-1877); Martha Ann (Matty) (1878-1957); Emmet (1883-?); Wallace (1886-?).

Elizabeth A. Pyeatt was married to John Herman Zellner (1868-1953) on October 28, 1891. They had one child: Julia (1893-1985).

Julia Zellner was married to Mack Franklin Thompson (1888-1969) on September 16, 1920. Their children were: Herman Franklin (1923-) and Betty Ann (Bann) (1925-1982).

Herman Franklin Thompson (1923-) was married to Beverley Bradford Schweppe (1927-1964) on August 2, 1952. They had two children: Pamela Poynter (1956-) and Mark Franklin (1961-). After the death of Beverley, H. Franklin married Patricia Fee Brew (1936-) on June 20, 1981.

Pamela P. Thompson married Terrence Fowler in January 1981. They had one child: Sean Franklin (1983-).

Bann Thompson was married to John Slayton Allison (1921-) on January 20, 1951. They had one child: Julanne Slayton (1952-).

Julanne Slayton Allison was married to Robert Wayne Perrow on September 4, 1976. Their children are: Andrew Slayton (1978-); Allison Elizabeth (1980-); Elizabeth Ann (1984-); John Samuel (1986-).

Martha Ann (Matty) was married to Dorse N. McCormick on November 26, 1902. Their children were: Robert Samuel (1903-1917); Hayden Dorse (1908-?); Kenneth Pyeatt (1919-).

James Pyeatt

In 1811, James Pyeatt 1768-1834 and his wife Catherine Finley 1756 -, settled at Chrystal Hill. They came with other settlers from the area of Logan County, Kentucky.

In 1813, Reverend John Carnahan preached the first protestant (Presbyterian) sermon in Arkansas territory in their home.

James and Catherine Pyeatt's son, Andrew Finley Pyeatt 1801-, married Martha Carnahan 1792 -, daughter of Reverend John Carnahan and Jannette (Jane) Billingsley 1770-1832.

In March, 1827, John Carnahan, Andrew Pyeatt and their families came with the first group of settlers to Cane Hill. Reverend John Carnahan organized the first Sunday School in Arkansas in 1828. He was a Revolutionary War soldier and is buried in the first cemetery above the group of springs at Cane Hill that was Lincoln's source of water before the lake was built. Jane is buried in Bethlehem Cemetery near Morrow.

Andrew and Martha Pyeatt had two children: John Henry 1829 -, and Jamima 1832 -.

Jamima Pyeatt 1832 - married Francis M. Woodruff 1827. Francis was the son of William R. Woodruff 1786-1853 and Matilda Ferguson 1789-1863. They came to Washington County in 1830 and settled at Farmington where they helped to establish the Ebenezer Baptist Church. They are buried at Elm Springs.

Francis and Jemima Woodruff lived at Rhea across the road from the mill. The tall chimney of the mill was moved to the Prairie Grove Battlefield Park. At least some of their children were born at Rhea. Children: Sally Elizabeth 1862-1930, Millie, Maud, Eving, John, Ben, Mamie and Frank. Francis and Jemima moved to Texas.

Sally Elizabeth Woodruff 1862-1930 married Leonidus Crawford 1850-1919. They were married in Texas in 1880. Leonidus and his brothers had a ranch with 1,000 herd of cattle branded E. W. T. Leonidus left the Texas ranch with his brothers and brought his bride back to Arkansas. They built their house on part of his fathers farm and planted an orchard. Their children grew up on this farm and it is still in the Crawford family. "Onn" was extensively engaged in stock dealings. He had a ranch at Indian Springs near Broken Arrow, Oklahoma and often drove herds of cattle or horses from the ranch to the farm at Rhea. Their children: Francis Robert 1881-1959, Clifford Pyeatt 1884-1960, Clyde Woodruff 1887-, Oscar Henry 1889, Mamie Eliza 1892-1941, Ina Elizabeth 1894-, Sally Vivian 1896-, Cellia Darkas 1899, Geneva 1902, Jim Tilley 1905-1981.

Leonidus "Onn" Crawford was the son of Robert Donald Crawford 1818-1891 and Eliza Henderson 1826-1871.

Robert Crawford came to Arkansas with his parents, James Crawford 1772-1854 and Nancy Sawyer 1771-1854. They came with their family and settled in the Viney Grove-Rhea area in 1830. James and Nancy Crawford are buried at Prairie Grove.

Seated: Christine Pridemore Carte, Ray F. Carte 2nd Row: Eva, Sue, Judy 3rd Row: Gary, Raylene and Don

Eliza Henderson was the daughter of William 1778 and Martha Henderson 1782. The Hendersons were from Virginia and lived at Rhea.

Mamie Eliza Crawford 1892-1941 married Felix Jackson Pridemore 1888-1972. They were married in 1913 and made their home in the Belview Community near Lincoln.

They were pioneers in the broiler industry. The baby chicks were hatched in a battery of Bell City incubators. The eggs were turned by hand once a day. They kept a flock of 800 laying hens. There was an orchard, a vineyard and a large strawberry patch. They were very active in community affairs. Children: Dana Lois 1913, Cellia Christine 1918, Wilma Geneva 1920, Howard Leon 1926-1980. They are buried at Prairie Grove.

Felix was the son of George Washington Pridemore 1852-1933, and Virginia Angelina "Jenny" Jones 1861-1915.

George Pridemore came to Washington County sometime before 1878 for that was the year he married "Jenny" Jones. In 1885, he bought the farm in the Belview Community. This farm is still in the family and belongs to a great-grandson.

George was a prosperous farmer and they were known for their hospitality. He had an orchard and a dryer and they raised sweet potatoes. He always gave good measure, shaken down and running over. He said he "didn't aim to go to hell with a bushel of potatoes around his neck". George and Jenny are buried at Lincoln. Their children: Felix Jackson 1888-1972, Gertie 1880-1904, John Dallas 1882-1953, Viola Golda 1902-1983.

Virginia "Jenny" Jones was the daughter of William Jones 1820-1886 and Grizzey Riddle - 1877. They came from Jackson County, Alabama around 1846 and lived in the Sugar Hill Community. He had a wooden leg. They are buried at White Rock Cemetery near Dutch Mills. Children: Mathew 1842, John 1846, Felix 1847, Eliza Jane 1849, Francis "Fanny", Thomas 1855-1948, Rachel 1858, Virginia "Jenny" 1861-1915, Joanna 1864.

Grizzey Riddle was the daughter of Mathew Riddle and Rhoda Cooper. The Riddles came with the Joneses and settled west of Summers.

Christine Pridemore married Ray Carte. Their family is recorded in the Ray Carte story.

William D. Quinton

William D. Quinton and wife Sarah Adams migrated west from Kentucky in the early 1880s. Their oldest son, John was born in Kentucky in 1823. They then migrated to Illinois where a second son, William Jackson Quinton was born in approximately 1828. William D. Quinton and family and the Reverend John Holcombe family came to Springdale, Arkansas in 1829 from Spoon River Association in Illinois.

The Reverend, Mr. Holcombe settled southwest of West Fork while in 1840 William D. Quinton acquired by patent from President John Tyler the 80 acre tract which was the foundation for the city of Springdale. In 1841 William D. Quinton donated land for a church, 6 rods x 20 rods, to be administered by the trustees who were William Easley, Elizah Lee and Freeborn Graham. On October 7, 1843 William D. Quinton and Sarah sold the 80 acres tract in Springdale to John Holcomb. The Quinton Family moved to the West Fork area where they spent the rest of their lives.

William D. Quinton and his wife Sarah had a total of six children. John, William J., Jefferson, Eliza, Alfred and Marinda. John married a woman named Alabama (maiden name unknown), William J. married Elizabeth Musgrove in 1869, Jefferson married Cynthia Yoes of West Fork who died in 1869, he then married Carolina Bishop who died in 1879. Eliza married a Yoes, Alfred married Martha (Matt) Caldwell in 1862, and Marinda married Wilson Graham.

Three of William D. Quinton's sons, Alfred, Jefferson and William J. served as Union Soldiers in the First Arkansas Calvary during the Civil War. While serving in the First Arkansas Calvery William J. was injured in the battle of Fayetteville and later contracted smallpox from which he died on January 9, 1865. William J. and his wife Elizabeth had 6 children. Edward, Nancy, Sarah Jane, James, Elizabeth and Mary Marinda. In 1868 his wife Elizabeth and the children moved to Springfield, Illinois to live with friends or relatives. Apparently one child, Elizabeth, died while in Illinois for she returned to Arkansas a few years later with 5 children to homestead 80 acres in south Washington County south of Strickler on the Old Wire Road. She applied for and received a widows pension for 5 children of $8.00 per month.

Edward married Martha Swift, Nancy married a Wickwire, Sarah Jane married a Cochran. James married Emma Pierson and Mary Marinda married a Boyd. James and Emma had 6 children, 4 sons Henry, Jesse, Willie, Riley and 2 daughters Minnie (Hodge) and Elizabeth (Neal).

The Quinton family were primarily farmers and timber cutters. Jesse Quinton born February 8, 1884 son of James and Emma, Grandson of William J. and Elizabeth had a farm south of Strickler where he and his wife Evie (Wilson) had 7 sons and one daughter. Jesse had a blacksmith shop on his farm where he made caskets, wagon repairs, general blacksmith work and shoeing horses. He died July 31, 1981 at the age of 97.

Jesse's eldest son Otis Henry followed in his father's footsteps becoming a blacksmith and raising cattle on the same land his father had owned. Otis and his wife Anna (Sharp) had 2 sons Bobby Lee and Raymond "Dale". Both sons became poultry and cattle farmers. Bob and wife Margaret (Benton) had 2 children Roger and Carolyn Quinton Farrell. Dale and his wife Berniece (Ware) also had 2 children Rhonda Quinton Hayes and Daryl Ray Quinton. Dale and his son Daryl and his wife Connie and grandson Clay still reside in the Strickler area. Bob's son Roger and his family live south of Prairie Grove.

Isach D. Rader

We are grandchildren of Isach D. Rader who was born in Caney Branch, Green County, Tennessee November 26, 1846. He came to Springdale, Arkansas in 1866. He bought a farm located at the end of West Emma Avenue. It is now West End Street. He built a house on this farm, but the house burned down around the year 1884. He then rebuilt the house by moving a two-room church building on the property. He kept adding to these two rooms, making a six room two-story house. This house was demolished when they built the housing tracts on the end of West Emma Avenue.

In the late 1800s he built and lived in a smaller house just north of the large house. This old house is still there, just north of Sisco Street on West End Street. He donated the land on the northwest end of this place for the Lutheran Cemetery where he and his wife are buried. He was a charter member of the Lutheran Church. He was co-owner and operator of the Kennan and Rader Jewelers, Opticians, Diamonds and Watches Store in Springdale in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Ranies Rader was a Lutheran minister in the early history of the Lutheran Church. He was our grandfather's cousin. He also had a broom making shop on West Emma Avenue in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Our mother, Dora Rader, was born on this place March 10, 1882. She married John Neff July 30, 1912. He had four children by a former marriage, Edith, Walter, Dorcie and Floyd Neff. My father owned and lived on a farm north of Cross Roads School House. There is now a power substation on this place. It is located on the Gutensohn Road north of West Huntsville Street.

In 1918 he bought a 156 acre farm on which he built a six room house and a barn. They were built from lumber cut and sawed from trees on this farm. This place is now owned by the City of Springdale and is the city disposal plant. The dwelling house is still there. The south part of this farm is in Washington County and the north part, which is the disposal plant, is in Benton County.

My father, John Neff, passed away October 29, 1939. My mother, Dora Neff, passed away March 26, 1946. They are both buried in the Lutheran Cemetery.

In 1935 I married Joe McClure. We lived on this farm until 1947. In 1951 we came to Riverside, California where I still reside. We have one son, John L. McClure, two grandsons, Jeff and Jay McClure, who all live in Riverside, California.

My brother Byron Neff married Cleo Stamps in 1938. They came to Woodlake, California in 1944. They have four children: Beverly Howerton, Sam Neff, Glenda Homer, and Randy Neff. They have eight grandchildren.

I vacation in Springdale about every two years and enjoy it very much. It will always be home to me.

Mary Alice Rader

Mary Alice Rader, "Mayme", the seventh child of Elbert Joseph Rader and his wife Nancy Mary Beal Rader, was born May 30, 1885 at Sons Chapel, Washington County, Arkansas.

E. J. Rader, born April 16, 1831 in Knox County, Tennessee married Nancy Mary Beal November 4, 1867. She was born in Vincennes, Indiana on April 6, 1850. E. J. had previously been married to Mary C. Stansberry, and they had a daughter, Laura Rader, later Laura Rader Bridenthal. Nancy Mary and E. J. were the parents of eight other children besides Mary Alice, all born in Washington County, Arkansas: Charles J. Rader, born and died November 22, 1868; Lula Belle Rader Moore, born September 21, 1870, died May 23, 1908; Mattie Irene Rader Cardwell, born November 18, 1872; Walter Lonzo Rader, born June 1, 1875; Andrew Columbus Rader, born April 30, 1877; Nettie Angeline Rader, born May 30, 1880, died October 1881; Gertrude E. Rader Riggs, born August 30, 1890; Anne Helen Rader Hurst, born April 30, 1892, died October 18, 1962. Andrew, Mattie and Gertrude are buried in California; Walter in Colorado, probably Grand Junction; Lula, Helen and Mary Alice in Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville, near their parents; Charles and Nettie in Sons Chapel Cemetery.

In 1886, when Mary Alice was a year old, E. J. bought a 125 acre farm near the Butterfield Stage Route to Fayetteville, and moved from Sons Chapel into the brick house which had been built on the farm in 1848 by Benjamin Murrell Routh. The stage route passed about 150 feet east of the house, which had always been known as The Brick, having been built by slaves from bricks dug, molded and fired there on the farm. This house is still standing, and was used as one of the locations in the filming of the television movie, "The Blue and the Gray". Later, E. J. and Nancy Mary owned and operated the Rader Hotel, a well-known Fayetteville landmark located a block north of the square on North East Street. Elbert Joseph Rader died November 27, 1912, and Nancy Mary Beal Rader died September 25, 1918.

Nancy Mary Beal Rader

Mayme Rader Rogers in 1905.

Mary Alice Rader went to school in Fayetteville and attended the University of Arkansas. She was tall, with dark hair and blue eyes, and a 17-inch waist when she married George Spencer Rogers on December 12, 1905. (See Rogers, William A.) George and Mary Alice (Mayme) were the parents of six children, all born in Fayetteville: William Rader Rogers, born December 7, 1906; Louis James Rogers, born October 20, 1908, died October 23, 1977; Peggy Maye Rogers, born January 9, 1912; Andrew Spencer Rogers, born August 25, 1915, died October 22, 1978; George Spencer Rogers, Jr., born May 21, 1918, and Melba Louise Rogers, born March 16, 1920.

George and Mayme built a house on Mt. Sequoyah and moved there in 1915, remaining in that spot until their deaths. The road that George built to their house is now Vinson Street in Fayetteville, and their son George, Jr., is presently living in a house he built on the site of the original house. At the time George and Mayme built their house, there were only two other houses nearby, both log houses and both still occupied in 1987. One of them belonged to the Charles Wesley Hite family. Beside the road to Mayme's house, a pear tree grows which has been producing fruit since the family first moved to Mt. Sequoyah.

George Spencer Rogers died November 2, 1952 and Mary Alice Rogers, "Mayme", died July 6, 1960.

Rev. Samuel H. Rainey

Samuel Rainey was born May 6, 1886 in Central Falls, Rhode Island, the eldest of seven children of Scots-Irish parents. He attended public school in Rhode Island and then enrolled in Schulykill Seminary, later to become Albright College, in Reading, Pennsylvania. He married Frances Harriet Chamberlin on June 26, 1912. In 1914 he was ordained to the priesthood of the Episcopal Church in Steelton, Pennsylvania, Diocese of Harrisburg. After holding pastorates in Huntingdon and New Brighton, Pennsylvania, he moved to Calvert, Texas in 1920. In 1923 he accepted a call to Marlin, Texas and in 1926 he came to El Dorado, Arkansas. September 1, 1928 he came to St. Paul's Church, Fayetteville. Two children were born to this marriage, Frances Carolyn in 1915, and Richard Hoyt in 1917.

When Mr. Rainey accepted the call to St. Paul's, Fayetteville, he also was pastor to Episcopal students at the University, and served at St. James Church, Eureka Springs.

When the Helen Dunlap School for Mountain Girls was closed at Winslow, he looked after the property for the Diocese of Arkansas and prepared it for conferences for young people of the province during the summer.

Frances Chamberlin Rainey returned to Fayetteville in 1944 and was House Mother at the Kappa Kappa Gamma House from fall semester 1945 until her death in June 1947. She is buried in Evergreen Cemetery in Fayetteville.

Frances Carolyn Rainey married George Vernon Harris June 26, 1939. They had four children, George Vernon, Jr. born in 1941, Frances Carolyn born 1945, Samuel King born 1948, and Susan Catherine born 1951.

George V. Harris, Jr. married Judy Wilson of Batesville and they had one daughter, Donna Carolyn. George, Jr. died in 1973 and is buried in Batesville. In 1978 Donna died and is buried in Batesville.

Frances married George R. Philip in 1964. Of that union five children survive: George R. IV, born in 1965, Michael Richard born in 1966, Martin Rainey born in 1969, Carolyn Rebecca born in 1972, and Samuel Rainey Thomas in 1976. One daughter, Sarah Emily Robin died at birth, 1978.

Samuel King Harris married first Demaris Hart. They were divorced and he later married Catherine Faulkner. They had two sons, Kevin King Harris born in 1982, and Kelly Rainey Harris born in 1984.

Susan Catherine married William Gary Burson in 1973. They had three sons, William Harris born in 1975, Gerald Thomas born in 1977, and Matthew Neill born in 1981.

Richard Hoyt Rainey married Etta Faye Warren of Eastland, Texas in 1942. Children of that marriage are Janet Faye born in 1943, Samuel Hardy born in 1948, and Mary Elizabeth born in 1954. Jan married Dewayne Robertson and has three children: Denesa born 1962, Robby Wayne born 1964, and Matthew born 1972. After a divorce from Dewayne, Jan married Artie Kirkwood.

When Samuel Rainey came to Fayetteville, Highway 71 had not been built. It was a twelve hour trip by car from El Dorado over mostly gravel roads. South of Mountainburg, the road went down the east side of the hill by means of many hair-pin turns. None of this was paved and the trip was very dusty in dry weather.

The rectory was located at 119 East Lafayette, now the Safeway parking lot. It was a comfortable two story house built in the very early 1920s. Here the University young people met every Sunday evening.

In 1940, Mr. Rainey accepted a call to St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Orange, Texas, where he died in 1943. He was buried in Calvert, Texas.

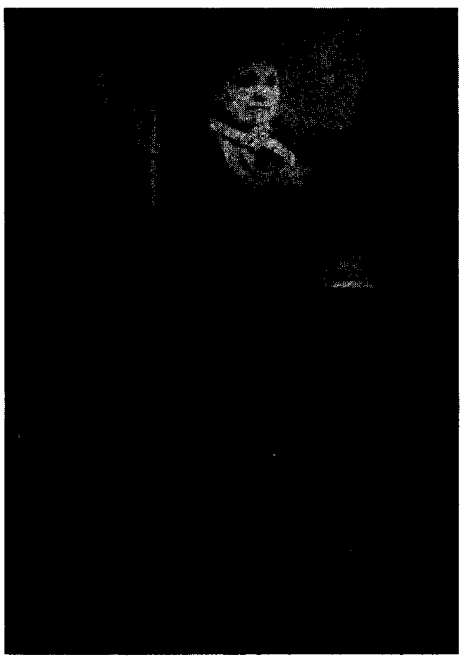
John Berry Rainwater

John Berry Rainwater was born July 18, 1820 in North Carolina and was thought to be a descendant of Governor John White of the Berrys of the Lost Colony of early settlers on Roanoke Island, North Carolina, 1857. He was the son of Mary Rainwater and John Berry, and it is said he took his mother's maiden name for his last name, an old English custom. He lived in Sevierville, Tennessee in 1840, and married Mary "Polly" Gordon Keifer, who was born 21 February 1820 at Greenville, Tennessee, daughter of Jacob and Susan (Welty) Keifer. John and Polly moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas in 1846.



Sarah (Rainwater) Chryst, daughter of John Berry Rainwater.

Before the Civil War, John had a lumber yard in Fayetteville, and a 900 acre farm north of town (known in more recent years as the Joe Steele farm). Lumber customers sometimes lacked cash and would pay with crops or livestock which he took to his farm. He would occasionally butcher a fat calf or hog and sell those to a meat shop in town. His family then lived in an antebellum home on College Avenue, and ran the farm with the help of slaves, which was customary for that period of time. Two of the five slaves pictured in the local area, titled The Old South, at one time belonged to this family.

During the Civil War, John Berry Rainwater went to Dallas, Texas, taking his slaves and those of some of his neighbors, the Stearns, Applebys, Freyschlags, and Bill Ann Vernon. While there he had a heat stroke. His wife Polly set out to join him, taking the children and a colored nursemaid. They went in a covered wagon pulled by mules, with a cow tied on behind for fresh milk, food for themselves and livestock, and a tar bucket to grease the wagon wheels. In Oklahoma, they camped for the night beside a spring, where the grazing was good, and prepared supper. A band of Indians came along and ate the food, while the terrified women and children wondered what would happen next. The Indians begged Polly to give little Sarah with long braided hair, to them and the mother bravely told them no. The Indians did not molest them, and left. But Polly was afraid they might return in the night and take Sarah, so they quickly hitched up the mules and drove all night. Although the children had no supper and cried when they stirred in the night, it was not until they came to a house, that the mother felt it was safe to eat and sleep.

A Texas doctor advised John to go to a higher altitude, so after the war, they returned to Fayetteville, and some of the former slaves chose to come along. Their home and lumberyard was destroyed in the war, so they lived on their farm. John Berry Rainwater built the first school for black children in Washington or Madison County, on his farm. The cost was $1.00 a month if they had it, and if not, they could attend anyway. As John's children married, he gave each one a hundred acres, hoping they would live nearby. John became a mule buyer to Kansas City and St. Louis, Missouri and shipped carloads of them north. When the University of Arkansas was established at Fayetteville, John had the contract to haul all the limestone for Old Main, including the four columns at the entrance, from a Madison County quarry. Shod oxen teams were used to haul it to a hard surfaced road, where a sixteen mule team, lead by a lead mule, took over for the long haul to Fayetteville. People from miles around gathered to watch the procession arrive in town.

Little Sarah grew up, and taught English and History at that University. Sarah's daughter, Mary Bradford, maintains an interest in the University, and has donated a number of Rainwater family articles to its museum. Mr. Rainwater was Washington County Treasurer in 1848, a State Representative in 1880, Chief Justice 1867-1868, and helped organize the first Masonic Lodge in Arkansas, Far West Chapter #1, at Fayetteville, with Archibald Yell. He became a member of the First Christian Church at Fayetteville, in August of 1850, under Reverend Robert Graham.

Children of John and Polly Rainwater were: William Lafayette Rainwater born May 8, 1842 in Tennessee and married Margaret Lee; Nancy Smith born 16 January 1848 in Arkansas and married Harold Porter Jankins and lived in the Zion community; Sarah Jane "Sallie" born 22 December 1849 and married James Henry Chryst, an architect; Harve Sterman Rainwater born January 25, 1852 and married Nancy Hewett; Melvina Bell 1853-1861; Kate Stermen born February 29, 1856 and married Frank White; Paralee born 18 March 1858 and married John Calvin George; Tempa 1860-1961; Susan Clementine born June 27, 1862 and married Lynn Cline; and Minnie born June 10, 1863 who married first John Arnold and second Charlie Swartz.

David Rakes

The Rakes family is rather large and it is unknown to this writer which Rakes were the first to live in this county. We do, however, have information on one Rakes, a resident of Lincoln, formerly of Prairie Grove, Benton County, Illinois and North Carolina. This particular Rakes is named after forebears, to wit, his paternal grandmother, whose maiden name (Matney) was given to him as a middle name, and for many another Rakes and Raikes of generations preceeding whose first names were David.

David Matney Rakes came to Washington County in a small, American made station wagon not his own. His first home was in a house, extant still, on Thurman Street in Prairie Grove, belonging to John B. Snapp, a retired lawyer (Yale '46 or so) known to many Washington Countians. From the grove on the prairie, Rakes moved to the hill on which the town of Lincoln is situated. He claims to have an excellent view from the southward facing patio door in his living room, said room being a part of a building once used to process poultry. This building, incidentally, is widely known among the Lincolnites even though it seem to have fallen into some disrespect in the recent past, which is, I am sure, no fault of the subject of this brief and inconclusive personal history.

Mr. Rakes, during his residency in Washington County, has been variously employed as a farm hand, a house painter, a carpenter, a groundskeeper, a chauffeur and, to quote, "what not."

By: David Rakes

David Newton Ralston

The Ralston family came to Washington County, Arkansas in the fall of 1908. David Newton Ralston and his wife, Laura McBroom Ralston had married and started their family in Cannon County, Tennessee. With one daughter and three sons, they left Tennessee and went to western Oklahoma when Kiowa County was opened to homesteading in 1901. Having "proven" their homestead and sold it for a good price, they went to northwest Arkansas. Mr. Ralston chose to purchase land near Prairie Grove because of the evident prosperity. "People were selling corn in Prairie Grove while elsewhere, people were buying it."

He bought over 100 acres on the west side of Prairie Grove from a man named Shackleford. The land included the little mountain called Wolf Mountain. They rented a house in Prairie Grove. The rent was $5.00 per month for the house and $2.00 for the barn. It was there that they celebrated Thanksgiving and Christmas in 1908.

Another daughter had been born in Kiowa County, Oklahoma. One by one, the children had measles that winter: Mary Inez (born 1891), Hal Clinton (born 1892), Alec David (born 1896), Gilbert Hugh (born 1898) and Marguerite (born 1903).

In January, 1909, they traded the south part of the farm land, the part south of the railroad track, to a Mr. Talbot for a house on the south outskirts of Prairie Grove. Mr. Ralston was a carpenter and built a number of houses and barns in and around Prairie Grove.

When the children entered school there, Alec was in the fourth grade and his teacher was Lucy Carl.

Mary, who was the oldest, did not attend school in Prairie Grove. She went to work for the newspaper which was then owned by Mr. Hildebrand. In July, 1909, Mary became ill with appendicitis and died on July 7, following surgery.

When school started in the fall of 1909, the three boys attended in the big, white school building. Alec's teacher was Dorothea Campbell.

Marguerite entered second grade in the fall of 1910, in the tall school building by the Presbyterian Church. In that school year, Hal, Alec and Gilbert were in school in the big, white school building. Alec's teacher was Alma Sanders who taught her class the little poem: "Five things observe with care, of whom you speak, to whom you speak, and how and when and where."

That was the last year classes were held in the big, white school building. In the summer of 1911, D. N. Ralston and others tore down that building and used the material to build the Presbyterian Manse. There was a large bell in a steeple above the second floor. One day, the bell fell without warning. It was so heavy that it broke through all the floors all the way to the ground. It had been hung on a natural log with the bark still on it and worms had eaten the log. No one was under it at the time, although it was hung directly above the main entrance of the school where many people were passing as they worked on the demolition.

Mr. Ralston set out apple trees on Wolf Mountain and also planted corn on some of the farm there. In 1912, he traded this property to Gar Henson for a house and 30 acres north of Viney Grove. On September 13, 1912, Robert Enoch was born there.

The school at Viney Grove went through the ninth grade only. The 1915 graduating class from the Viney Grove school consisted of four girls and two boys: Lillian Blackburn, Willie Hill, Lola Porter, Grace Pyeatt, Milton Barnett and Alec Ralston.

In 1916, the ninth grade graduation at Viney Grove school was held on March 17. It was an unusually warm spring day, the jonquils were in bloom and all the girls wore white dresses. There were seven members of the graduating class, five girls and two boys: Pearl Carnahan, Madge Pyeatt, Marguerite Ralston, Eva West, Alta Woodruff, Dewey Bates and Paul Shafer. That evening a class party was held at the Willie Porter home.

In 1917, the United States entered the first World War. Alec volunteered for the army and was called to report in Fayetteville on June 1, 1917. Their army training began on the campus of the University of Arkansas. They were housed in the girls' dormitory, but the mattresses were removed from the beds while the soldiers were there. They were issued one blanket which they used on the bare springs of the beds.

In 1918, Hal was drafted into the army and was wounded in France on October 4, 1918. While Hal and Alec were in the army, the family moved to Gentry in 1919.

J. C. "Jim" Randolph

James "Jim" Clinton Randolph, born in Benton County, Arkansas, was the son of John F. Randolph and Matilda M. England, both of whom were born in Tennessee. John was a farmer of 600 acres, a carpenter, Justice of the Peace, and head of the school board of Norwood School. Matilda, who was one-fourth Cherokee Indian, completed her education at the University of Arkansas. She taught school for a short time. Matilda's parents were Edward England and Elizabeth Rutherford Owens, both of Tennessee birth. John's parents were William Franklin and Pernetter Fisher Randolph, both of Tennessee.

John and Matilda's children are: 1. Ollie Lee, born May 22, 1876, married Eva Poulson; 2. Lena, born October 27, 1878, married Venie Powell, died June 22, 1955; 3. Wilbern Dee, born June 24, 1880, married Marilda Ryals, died February 12, 1926; 4. Johnnie, born June 4, 1882, married 1st George Smith, married 2nd Rye Reid, died 1917; 5. Sarah Elizabeth, born December 13, 1884, married William Cole Carter, died June 28, 1924; 6. James Clinton, born November 4, 1886, married Dora Clyde Roberson, died March 1961; 7. Walter, born February 27, 1889, married Kate Dunlap, died 1950; 8. Pearl, born June 1, 1891, married 1st Paul Jahns, married 2nd Ernest Powell, died January 1950; 9. Orphia Loena, born December 25, 1893, married Jesse Franklin Gerhard, died March 4, 1927.

After John's death, Matilda married J. H. Anderson.

Jim married Dora Clyde Roberson of Washington County, Illinois Township. She was the daughter of Jerry and Ursula Pamela Christian Roberson. They were married on October 27, 1907.

Jim and Clyde had nine children. All of the children are still living except John Glenn, who was killed in a car accident in 1964. The children are: 1. Alma Leona, born December 13, 1908, married Roy Baer. Children: Norman, Doyle, Max and Iva. 2. Erma Elois, born May 5, 1910, married Harold Baer. They have one child, John Randolph. 3. J. Estle, born December 17, 1911, married Lucille Smythe. Children: Clint, Clifford Dale and Lois Marie. 4. Clarice Ruth, born December 21, 1913, married Virgil Fusselman. Children: Ruth and Velma. 5. James Russell, born September 10, 1915, married Bertha Juanita Jones. Children: Russena, Sherry, Faren, James and Janice. 6. John Glenn, born February 26, 1918, married Jaunita McConnell. Children: Glenita and John L. 7. Retha Inez, born January 4, 1921, married Thomas Christopher. Children: Tommy Clyde and Renee. 8. Winnie Fern, born March 6, 1923, married Ervin Brown. Children: Jannette, Cleo Genieve and Rhonda. 9. Bonnie Mae, born May 19, 1925, married 1st Emery Brown, 2nd Clifton O'Neal. Children: Bonnie Louise, Clifton Eugene and Janice Ann.

Jim Randolph worked at many jobs in his lifetime. He worked for Dave Smith, at one time he was a road overseer. He worked on a threshing crew. He had a shoe repair shop. At one time Cincinnati had a pool hall; he was the owner of that. I've been told he made some of the best sorghum in the county too. For several years he was the janitor of the Cincinnati school. The fifty years Jim and Clyde were married, they lived in Washington County and Illinois Township.

John Rankin

John Rankin and wife, Narcissus Temple Rankin moved from Crawford County to Washington County about 1906. John attended University of Arkansas and taught school for twenty years. County records show that he taught at the Howe School for five months and received $159.00. He spent several years carrying the mail on Rural Routes. One day when it was raining he took his son, Clyde along and let him wade the swollen creek and deliver the mail. Someone reported this to the Postal Service and he lost his job. He served as "Justice of the Peace" for forty years, and helped many people settle their minor differences. He also married many local couples. John and Narcissus had 5 children.

Clyde Rankin, the eldest son attended John Brown University in Siloam Springs and University of Arkansas and taught in Rural and City Schools for several years. Later, he went into Postal Service at Springdale and worked there for thirty-eight years. He married Agnes Clingingsmith in 1920. They had four children. Their daughter, Bonnie graduated from University of Arkansas with a Bachelor of Science Degree. She received her Masters Degree from Yale Institute of Nursing. She was Supervisor of Nurseries at Barnes Medical in St. Louis. She also worked in Public Health Service in New York City, and Springdale Hospital. Warren Rankin graduated from University of Arkansas with a Civil Engineering Degree. He served in The Armed Forces, then went to work for Frisco Railroad where he worked for twenty years. He married Lucille Jackson. Their daughter, Nancy born in 1954, married William Parrish and their son Justin is 2 years old. Warren and Lucille's son Scott was born in 1962. M. Murlyn Rankin attended Coyne Electrical School in Kansas City and became a Licensed Electrician. He served in the U. S. Air Force. He passed away in 1985. Paul Rankin finished High School in Springdale then entered the U. S. Air Force. He was a Reconnaissance Pilot with the rank of Major and retired after twenty years service. He and his wife, Mary (Hall) Rankin have two sons. Paul Andrew born in 1965 and Peter Alex born 1969.

Wilbur Rankin attended school in Siloam Springs. He was a farmer. He was active in church and community affairs. He married Margaret Ruppel, a School Teacher. They had one son, Maurice. Maurice became a Radio and T. V. Engineer. He married Mary Case in 1962. They have two children, Raymond born in 1964 and Nancy born in 1966. Maurice lives in Maryland and works for a U. S. Government Facility in Washington, D. C.

Edna L. Rankin attended University of Arkansas and taught in Rural and City Schools. After her marriage in 1929 to Loyd Luginbuel, a Funeral Director she became a Mortician and Funeral Director in 1934 in Arkansas and Oklahoma. Edna now (1986) holds the title of "Oldest Lady Funeral Director" in Arkansas. They have two children, Janice Sue and Loyd Wayne. Janice has taught Music in Little Rock Schools for twenty-five years. She married William Hibbard an Architect. Their daughter, Keri Ann Hawley also teaches in Little Rock Schools. Their son, William Robert is working toward his Masters Degree in Texas. Loyd Wayne Luginbuel is owner and operator of the Luginbuel Funeral Homes in Prairie Grove and Lincoln. He married Sharon Morris June 14, 1963, their children, Stacy born September 21, 1968 and Amy born December 2, 1970.

Gladys Rankin graduated from Springdale High School, completed her Nurses Training in Sparks School of Nursing in Ft. Smith. She went into government nursing and was stationed in Memphis, Tennessee. She transferred to Fayetteville when the Veterans Hospital opened there. She recalls that a man by the name of George Washington was sitting on the steps of the hospital when it opened waiting to be the first patient. She worked there thirty-eight years.

Frances Rankin completed High School in Springdale, attended University of Arkansas. She taught in Washington County Schools for several years. In 1961, she went to work for The Space and Information Division of North American Rockwell. This was the "Apollo Program" the first vehicle to land on the moon. She married Garland Cannon in 1936. Garland was Superintendent of construction over a large number of schools in L. A. County in Los Angeles, California. They have one son, Dean G. Cannon, owner and president of Cannon Express. He married Rose Marie Finizza on January 14, 1961. Their daughter, Annette Marie married Ronnie Battershell November 1, 1980. They have two daughters, Jennifer age 4 and Melanie age 3. Dean and Rose's son, Bryan lives in Springdale.

John Rankin homesteaded 160 acres of land in the Harmon Community and kept the farm going with the help of the family until his death in 1948.

Mark E. Rawlings

I was born at Sodorus, Illinois on October 7, 1909, and my family moved to Washington County, Arkansas the following year.

My father was Mark E. Rawlings. He homesteaded near Weddington, Arkansas. On December 28, 1908, he married Lona Eads. A Justice of the Peace by the name of Webb performed the ceremony. He and my mother had seven children: Althea Rose, Jasper Lee Roy, Charles A., Oliver T., Glen H., Virginia Emily and Ruth Lucille.

My grandfather (my father's father) was supposed to have had a store near Savoy. It was between two gaps in the mountain. People often referred to it as Rawlings Gap. He had Jack and Stallion bred horses.

My mother lived until 1986. She was taken back to Rose Cemetery and buried there. Her grandmother had donated land for that cemetery, and both her mother and father were buried there as well as several brothers and sisters. One sister was Dolly Slaughter.

Two of my brothers were born at Homestead: Jasper Lee Roy and Charles. They are both dead now.

I don't know much else to tell except that my Grandpa Eads was a Confederate soldier in the Civil War and drew a pension.

None of my mother's people could read and write. I taught my mother how to sign her name. After we moved to Illinois, I went to school. We returned to Illinois in 1917.

John Henry Ray

John Henry Ray was born March 20, 1880, in the Cross Rhodes District of Washington County, Arkansas to James David and Sarah McCord Ray. John was one of their seven children. James McCord and family came from Ireland and England in the late 1700s or early 1800s and settled in the North Carolina area. The James David Ray family settled in northern Tennessee about the same time. Both families later moved to Washington County in Arkansas and settled on farms near Sulphur City, Arkansas.

At that time there was a post office and store in the "big" city of Sulphur. There was also Sulphur Springs near by; so therefore the city was named Sulphur City.

In time James David Ray and Sara McCord were married. Mr. McCord gave land for the McCord Cemetery south of Elkins, Arkansas. The cemetery is still in use today and is a very beautiful cemetery on a hill. Mr. McCord's house was south of the cemetery and was built in 1889. The house is still in use today. James David and Sarah lived with the McCords for a short while after they were married in 1874. Later Mr. Ray bought land near Elkins, Arkansas in 1884 and built a frame house for his bride and later seven children. That house was well constructed from the native timbers from the saw mill at Sulphur City and hauled by team and wagon. This house is still standing today. Kerosene lamps were used (no electricty yet), well water, out door "privies" and wood burning stoves. The wood for heating was cut off the farm. This house has been modernized with electricty, gas, water and indoor bath facilities. In the early days the Ray family baths were taken in a no. 2 wash tub, also used for laundry. John helped his father with the farming until 1900, then John went to the "big" state of Texas to seek his fortune and hopefully an easier life than farming. John also enjoyed a cowboys life while in Texas. John also met a very pretty Indian maiden in the Texas Indian Territory. However, they did not marry.

In 1901 John became homesick for his native Arkansas so he came back to his father's home. John was still a farmer at heart and loved the soil. John rode horse-back "over the mountain" a "courtin Mary Haskin. In those days the ladies wore long full skirts with a bustle under the skirt, long hair sometimes braided or piled high in a bun on top of the head. Mary Haskin and her family were Yankees from Avery, Illinois and they had moved to the Sulphur City area. In 1903 John and Mary were married at Sulphur City, Arkansas by J. A. Stone. They moved into a log house across the road from John's father's home. On May 24, 1905 a baby boy was born to John and Mary. John and Mary's little boy, Virgil, had his old pal "Shep" dog for a playmate.

In 1905 James David Ray lost two of his children in the typhoid epidemic.

In 1917 John and Mary moved to a farm near Sunset, Arkansas. (It is known as Health today.) However the old timers still know it as Sunset. It is a beautiful place high in the Boston Mountain Range with a beautiful view. One could see a lovely sunset at eventide; hence the name Sunset. Supplies were brought from Fayetteville, hopefully for a month, by team and wagon. The trip for supplies was a long day's journey.

On October 24, 1918 a beautiful, but spirited, auburn haired baby girl was born to John and Mary, whom they name Clara. By that time Virgil was 14 years old.

In 1919 John and Mary moved to Fayetteville where John became a carpenter. John built many houses in Fayetteville; three are still standing today. John had given up farming temporarily.

In 1927 John's father died, his mother had died earlier. So John had the urge to go back to the old farm home, but his Yankee wife Mary refused to go with him. So John was very sad and tried farming alone. Finally John had to sell the farm to another family and he came back to Fayetteville and resumed carpentry. John stayed in carpentry until the late 1950s when he went into real estate. It was known as the J. H. Ray Realty located in the old Eason building on the northwest corner of the square. (The building which is now supposed to be in the remodeling stage.) John sold real estate until his death March 31, 1962.

Robert Leonard Ray

Joseph Henry Ray was born in North Carolina on March 1, 1770 and was reared in South Carolina. His father was believed to have been Samuel Ray, Scotch-Irish. Mary Fouts and Joseph H. married in Kentucky, 1794. They had eleven children: Phoebe, Leonard Fouts, David L., William H., Rachel, Anna, Manning, Stephen Bird, Moses Patrick, Benjamin F. and Elijah. Joseph H. and Mary died in Barbour County, Alabama.

Moses Patrick, ninth child of Joseph H., was born on December 22, 1815 in Cumberland County, Tennessee. Moses came to Washington County from Coosa County, Alabama in 1836. Apparently, many of his friends in Tennessee and Alabama had moved to Washington County previously and he followed by horseback. The Froshours had arrived previously by riverboat in 1832. Ruth Ann Froshour and Moses married at Evansville on September 19, 1841. They had eleven children: Infant, Joseph H., Mary Jane, Martha Ann, Chalysta Ward, Reubama Isabel, Albert Manning, Sarah Elizabeth, Jefferson Davis, Rachel Ada and Elijah Bird. Moses and Ruth lived all of their married lives in the Lead Hill Community and were buried in Lead Hill Cemetery in Boone County, Arkansas.

Jefferson Davis, ninth child of Moses, was born on May 8, 1861 in Boone County. He married Amanda Jane Yandell August 30, 1883 and to this union were born eight children. After her death, he married Ettie McGrew Ackison. They had no children. He and his third wife, Nellie Maude Dunagan Christian, (a widow with one child, Herbert Chester Christian) were married March 23, 1921 in Stilwell, Oklahoma. Nellie was a lifelong resident of Washington County, born February 26, 1893 and was raised between Evansville and Cane Hill. Two children were born to this union; Robert Leonard and Clara Mildred. Jefferson D. had homesteaded land in Eagle County, Colorado prior to this marriage. When Robert was seven years old, the family moved back to Washington County and purchased a farm east of Evansville. It was located near the Freshour place. Jefferson died March 24, 1955 and was buried in Colorado. Nellie died June 29, 1972 and was buried in Hutchison County, Texas, near Clara Mildred's residence, Borger.

Robert Leonard was born December 9, 1921 in Wolcott, Colorado. After returning to Washington County in 1928, he attended school at Vineyard and Evansville. His mother, sister and he moved to Collin County, Texas in 1938. Upon completion of high school, he moved to Fort Worth, Texas to attend college. He entered the U. S. Army, 96th Infantry Division, October 10, 1942. After discharge from the service in 1946, he returned to Washington County. Myrtle Louise Green and he were married March 22, 1946 at Borger, Texas. They had been corresponding since 1944. One son, Robert Lynn, was born in Borger June 3, 1947. When Lynn was one, the family returned to Washington County near Fayetteville. The Ray's welcomed the birth of their second son, Jerry Duane, January 3, 1949 in Fayetteville. As a Mechanical Engineer for the U. S. Government, the Rays moved to many locations. He specialized in missile construction. After transferring to the Department of Interior-U. S. Bureau of Reclamation, he obtained his Master Degree in General Engineering. Upon his retirement in 1977, the Rays moved back to Washington County on land which was a part of the original Milton H. Cox home place, two miles south of Cane Hill. This property was adjoining the A. E. and Bertha Mae Cox Green farm. They moved to Lincoln in 1982 and still reside there at this writing.

Robert Lynn resides in California near San Francisco with April, his wife, and three children. Jerry Duane resides in Prairie Grove with Shirley, his wife, and one son.

Clair June Raysor

Clair June Raysor, born in Ft. Worth, Texas, January 1, 1921, and wife Frances Ernestine Raysor (formerly Apperson), born May 10, 1923, in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, moved to Arkansas in 1978, arriving July 4, to live near her sister, Lillie M. Hudler.

The Raysors were married May 14, 1943, in Duncan, Oklahoma where they lived for a short time, moving from there to Texas where they lived first in Dallas, then Beeville and from 1947 to 1978, in Corpus Christi. They moved into a double-wide mobile home on an acre of land deeded to them by Bob and Lillie Hudler. They have two sons, Owen Mitchell, born December 31, 1944, in Duncan, Oklahoma, and Teddy Lee, born August 19, 1946, in Dallas.

Their son Ted was married to Anita De La Fuentes in 1967. They had three children, Mark born March 6, 1969, in Dallas, Ted Jr. born in Dallas January 12, 1971, and Pamela born October 13, 1967, in Corpus Christi, and one grandson, Matthew Lee (son of Pamela) born June 3, 1986, in Dallas. Ted is divorced and now lives with his parents.

Owen was married to Linda Vanderslice in 1963 and had one son, David Troy, who died at the age of 5 weeks and is buried in Iowa; and one daughter, Hyla Eiran, born in Corpus Christi, now living in Missouri. Owen and Linda were divorced in 1972. Owen married Susan Carew in May, 1972. Owen has been in the army since 1964. He served a year in Germany and a year in Viet Nam and following marriage to Susan, was stationed in Colorado one year and in Germany for five years, then at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C. for two years. They now live in Iberia, Missouri where Owen is stationed at Fort Leonard Wood. He is a Warrant Officer and one of the few certified bio-medical equipment technicians in the service. Susan also works at Fort Leonard Wood as a dental hygienist. They have two daughters, Kristine Amanda Jeanette, born May 5, 1980, and Susan Michelle, born September 5, 1982, both in Maryland. One daughter was stillborn while they lived in Germany and is buried in Virginia. In 1979 Owen and Susan bought Bob and Lillie Hudler's first house and 12 acres of land which included the old rock road and joins the land his parents own. Owen retired from the army in November 1986, and their future plans include possibly building a home on an additional 20 acres of land bought from Hattie Mae and Ford Watkins which joins that which they originally bought from the Hudlers.

Clair was formerly employed at the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi as an airplane mechanic. Frances worked at a Peerless Cleaners substation near her home in Corpus Christi. Both are now retired. Frances' mother, Ida Lee Apperson, born February 4, 1896, in Tyro, Arkansas, and brother, Jim L. Apperson, born September 25, 1928, in Dallas, a retired biology teacher, live in mobile homes on each side of her home. Her sister, Lillie Hudler, lives across the road. A brother, Beryl, an invalid who lived with Ida Lee, died in January 1985, and is buried in Springdale. Ida Lee moved to the area in November 1980, to be near her daughters, and Jim arrived in August 1982.

When the Raysors first moved to the Round Mountain area near Elkins, the only water available was from a 185 foot deep well on the Hudler property which contained black sulphur water, and a well about 35 feet deep by 5 feet in diameter, hand-dug by Bob Hudler in 1986. In dry weather this hand-dug well could not contain enough water to supply the houses so water from the sulphur well had to be used. All members of the family were happy to see good water arrive in the fall of 1982 from the Mount Olive Rural Water Association.

Jane Fitzgerald Reddick

The last will and testament of William Reddick, dated 28 January 1852, named as heirs his children Benjamin, John, Julia Reddick, Polly Ford, Lydia Ford, Samuel, and Joseph. His executors were Benjamin and son-in-law William L. Ford. Witnesses were A. B. Greenwood and Singleton Langston.

Black's History of Benton County indicates William Reddick was a prominent citizen and politician in the Sugar Creek settlement. It is believed that he built the Elkhorn Tavern, located in what is now a part of Pea Ridge National Military Park. In 1840 he was Postmaster at Elkhorn, and in 1842 the Twelve Corners Baptist Church was established there. William's son, John, married Jane Fitzgerald, daughter of John Fitzgerald.

Jane, born 1813 Alabama, married 1836 John, born 1812 Indiana. Their children were William R. who married Emeliza Tice, Ellanda "Nellie" who married George "Wash" Glasscock, Mary "Polly" who married 1st John Clifton and 2nd Richard J. Cox, and Elizabeth "Lizzie" who married Thomas Jefferson Perry. John died while Lizzie was still small. Jane then married a doctor (name unknown) who didn't return from the Civil War. William R. had three daughters who married men by the name of Cline and one who married a Campbell plus two other children, Otia and James. Polly had two daughters by Mr. Cox named Rinda who married George Edwards and Jennie who married E. E. Hopper. Nellie had four daughters and two sons. Caldonia married William Isaac Scott, Eliza married Jasper Taylor, Ludilia married A. W. "Jack" Conduff, Jennie May married William M. Lynch, James T. married Nancy (last name unknown) and John M.

Lizzie told about her family's springhouse that kept foods cool, and the water that went on to a tank for livestock. During the Civil War they took up floorboards and hid salt from robbers. Bushwhackers forced Jane to cook food for them and then taste it before they ate it. Before the Battle of Pea Ridge, which was fought on Jane's farm, they were told to move out of their house. They went to the Elkhorn Tavern where Polly lived. After the battle Lizzie went with Jane and gave coffee to the wounded soldiers.

On 28 March 1869, Lizzie married T. J. Perry in Benton County, Arkansas. T. J. was born in Carroll County, Indiana, 5 October 1845. He was a Civil War veteran. T. J.'s father Thornton William Perry was born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. While quite small his parents died and he was reared by friends named Jennings. He almost lost his life when slave boys threw him into the river and beat his hands when he tried to get out. They were jealous because he was given an education. T. J.'s mother was Cynthia Anne Pratt, whose father was Robert Pratt, born in Wales.

After Lizzie and T. J.'s marriage, they moved to south Missouri, then to various places in Kansas. Jane wrote to them from Cronell, Benton County, Arkansas, with the news regarding additions and changes in the family saying that times were hard in Benton County and the corn crops just tolerable good. These letters were written in September 1880 and are family keepsakes. In 1885 Lizzie and T. J. made their last move to Livingston County, Missouri, in a covered wagon. Here they reared their ten children: Etta, William T., John C., Elmer, Jennie A., Emma, Oliver, Addie, Ida, and McConnell. Lizzie attended over 200 births and was called to help in all kinds of sickness as was T. J. T. J. died 18 July 1924, and Elizabeth died 30 May 1932. They are buried in Blue Mound Cemetery 11 miles south of Chillicothe, Missouri.

Albert Doyle Reed

This is the story of the youngest son of Robert Bennett Reed and Annie Cowan Reed. The story of the Robert Bennett Reed family is being submitted by Richard Reed, son of Roger and Olivia Reed.

Albert Doyle Reed was 19 years old on June 1, 1920, when he became the first "Village Deliveryman" and began to deliver the mail to Springdale residents. For 29 years and 10 months he delivered the mail, rain or shine, cold or hot. Then he was transferred into the office and served as clerk until his retirement on March 31, 1957. During his 36 years and 10 months of service with the government post office, he walked approximately 150,000 miles, and there were very few days that he was not on his route. In fact he turned back 1,428 hours of sick leave to the government that he did not use. During the 20s, 30s, and 40s Doyle was a familiar figure as he whistled his way up and down Emma Avenue, Johnson Street, Maple Street, Allen Street and Shilo Street. He was a rather small man; always neat in his dark blue uniform with his brown leather mail sack on his back. One of the many children who ran to meet the mailman on Emma Avenue was little Don Tyson, and he sometimes expressed his displeasure when the Tyson Family did not receive any mail. Doyle Reed was an honest and truthful man and expected the same from other people. He had no use for people who did not keep their word. He was highly regarded by all Springdale citizens and many asked his advice on business and personal matters. Doyle was also a hunter of note; and many will remember him as a gunsmith, who repaired, traded and collected guns.

On November 11, 1922, Doyle married brown-eyed, raven haired Lovena Stout of Elm Springs. They had met at Springdale High School where they both were graduated. This union produced three children: Jimmie Louise born in 1923, Wayne Winiford in 1926, and Dovie Doyle in 1930. Doyle was a strict disciplinarian, expecting the same high standards of his children that he had set for himself. He was of the "old school" where the Father's word was law. He accepted no excuses and was especially strict with his two daughters. Any young men who came to call on the Reed girls knew about the many guns Mr. Reed had as a hobby. The girls bemoaned their situation as they were sure it cost them many a prospective beau.

Jimmie Louise attended Draughons Business College in Tulsa, Oklahoma, after graduating from Springdale High School in 1941, she found herself working at Spartan Aircraft Corp in Tulsa typing Purchase Orders for aircraft parts for the war effort. In the meantime she married Alvie Webb Boatright, whom she had met in high school. Two sons were born to this marriage: Rodney Lee Boatright in 1949 and Zane Reed Boatright in 1956. Alvie boatright became a career military man and retired from the USAF in August 1982, the third highest ranking Chief Master Sergeant in the Air Force and highest ranking in the Military Airlift Command. He capped off 34 years in the military, serving in three wars. He began his career in 1943 in the Army Air Corps and during World War II he flew fifty-six bombing missions aboard a B-24 as a flight engineer in the Pacific. Alvie and Jimmie lived in nine states and Europe during their Air Force Career and now live in Fayetteville, North Carolina. Their son, Lt. Col. Rod Boatright, and Air Force Academy graduate, is currently stationed in Stuttgart, Germany. Zane Boatright is a mechanical engineer working at Tinker AFB, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

On May 10, 1952, tragedy struck the Doyle Reed Family. Wayne Winiford Reed died from wounds suffered in action on the front line in Korea. He had served in the 101st Airbourne as an enlisted man in the occupation of Japan. Then after his graduation from the University of Arkansas in February, 1951, where one month earlier he had received his commission as second lieutenant in the Regular Army, he was assigned to the 82nd Airbourne. However, he had been placed in the 25th Infantry Division before he was wounded. He died on Mother's day and his body was returned home to Springdale on the Fourth of July, 1952. Doyle and Lovena were never the same after the death of their only son. They went about their lives as usual, but their spirit was broken and her smile and his whistle were never the same.

Dovie Doyle Reed attended nurses training at St. John's

School of Nursing in Tulsa, Oklahoma. She married Peter Eugene Poulos, an oil and gas equipment engineer, of that city and they are the parents of four children: Marc Wayne Poulos, who now lives in Springdale, Dana Lorraine Poulos of Tulsa and the twins, Pamla and Paula Poulos of Tulsa. Dovie is now a Physician's assistant working at Tulsa.

Time passes and times change. One day in the late 70s a young lady approached Doyle Reed in the Northwest Arkansas mall and asked, "Aren't you Doyle Reed?" He answered, "I used to be." He died on July 2, 1985 at the age of 84. There were other dedicated mailmen to walk the streets of Springdale, but Albert Doyle Reed was the first.

Charles F. Reed

In May 1977, Charles Francis Reed, his wife Linda Lucylle, their three youngest children, George Weldon, William Edward, and Frances Elizabeth, with their German shepherd, Caesar, got in their Volkswagen Squareback in Culver City, California, and headed for Springdale, Arkansas. They were following a rented 40-foot tractor-trailer rig driven by #4 son, Scott Francis in which was packed all their belongings and four cats in special cages. They arrived at the home of Linda's parents, Mr. & Mrs. Weldon Johnston, on South Oak Grove Road in Washington County, near Springdale, 36 hours later.

Charlie Reed was born in Salem, Massachusetts, 8 June 1921, and saw action in World War II as a Scout Sgt. in the 104th Cavalry in northern France and central Europe. In 1957 he moved to Culver City with his first wife, Shirley Louise Miller, and four sons: Charles Skinner, Dennis Raymond, Timothy, and Scott Francis, and lived there for 20 years, working as a high-rise building inspector in Los Angeles and Beverly Hills. Linda was also in construction, working in a laboratory where construction materials were tested. She had two sons. Charlie and Linda met and married in April 1970, and in July 1971, Frances Elizabeth was born. Charles adopted Linda's two sons for a total of seven Reed children, although the four older boys were grown and no longer lived at home.

Tired of living on what they called a "concrete scab", tired of the bumper-to-bumper traffic on the freeways, and tired of the fast pace of living in a great metropolis, they longed for the country. After looking at land in northern California and Oregon they decided, after visiting Linda's folks in Arkansas, that Arkansas would be a nice place in which to enjoy retirement.

In July of 1977 the Reeds bought 3 acres northwest of Springdale and began building a house. They performed all the carpenter work and most of the other work themselves. The children attended Springdale schools. George married Angela Robin Hitte in 1979. William graduated from Springdale High School with honors in 1982 and later joined the Army as an air traffic controller. Frances, at this writing, is still in school.

Charles Reed came from old New England stock. His mother was Lizzie Skinner (1897-1986). Lizzie's father was Charles Emery Skinner (1862-1944). Charles Emery's father, James N. Skinner (1839-1922), fought in the Union Army in the battle for Port Hudson, Louisiana (1863), during the War of the Rebellion.

James' wife, Ada Comstock, was a direct descendant of Roger Williams (1601/3-1683), founder of Rhode Island. James's father, Richard (1795-1883), was in the War of 1812 and was the son of Richard Skinner (1761-1802) who, as a sailor in our navy during the Revolutionary War, was captured by the British on 12 February 1779, imprisoned in the Old Mill Prison in England from which he escaped. Richard was the husband of Eleanor Glover, niece of Gen. John Glover who rowed Gen. Washington across the Delaware on Christmas Eve, 1776, for the surprise attack on Trenton, New Jersey.

Richard's father was Capt. Richard Skinner (1735-1780) who married Dorothy Wendell (1733-1822). Dorothy's father was Col. John Wendell (1703-1762), whose ancestor Annette Jans, was one of the first settlers of New Amsterdam. Oliver Wendell Holmes and Wendell Phillips also share these same Wendell roots.

Dorothy Wendell's mother was Elizabeth Quincy, sister of the celebrated Dorothy Q. of Oliver Wendell Holmes's poem. The Josiah Quincys of Boston and President John Quincy Adams came from this same Quincy family. Elizabeth Quincy's great grandfather was Maj. Daniel Gookin (1612-1687) who, with John Eliot, was known for educating the American Indians and defending them during the King Phillips' War.

The Comstocks, Gookins, Quincys, Skinners, Wendells, and Williamses, were all in this country in the early 1600s.

Elizabeth McGarrah Reed

Elizabeth McGarrah's life began in the part wilderness, part civilized settlement, that was Fayetteville, March 9, 1843. Third child of William McGarrah and wife Sarah Elizabeth Wolfe McGarrah, whose home was near the big spring. (McGarrah's Spring)

Elizabeth had a pleasant childhood. Enjoyed advantages of her father's well-provided for home. Remembers seeing many wild animals. The big spring brought many wild creatures to drink from its gushing waters. Once chased home by an Elk while walking a Fayetteville "street", then a mere road. And there was the time she and slave Caroline were picking blackberries in a thicket near the big spring. They heard unusual thrashing about in the thicket, but each thought the other was doing the thrashing until a big black bear came crashing out of the thicket and fled. Elizabeth and Caroline dropped berry buckets and ran shrieking to the house. . .frightened as the bear.

The McGarrah home was a slave household, but Elizabeth and sister Sarah, worked. Were taught homemaking. . .learned to make use of what was available.

Elizabeth grew up, attended Fayetteville Female Seminary. . .studied subjects considered suitable for young ladies - was gifted in painting. Became involved in the social life the town afforded. Met A. W. Reed, of West Fork, 18 years her senior. Was attracted to him. They courted under the gathering cloud of a civil war. They were married January 15, 1861, in the McGarrah home. . .went to live in West Fork country.

William provided well for Elizabeth's new home. Furnishings and two slaves. Caroline, trained in housework, and who helped raise Elizabeth. . .and Jeff, a young man in his prime, skilled in furniture making. William had required Jeff to work for him from "sun to sunset" but permitted him to make simple furniture for townspeople on his own time (darkness) and keep his earnings. The law did not allow negroes on the street after dark. To go about his trade, Jeff must carry a permit from his master. He would come to Elizabeth and she would write this permit for him to carry; Mr. Constable: Please let "nigger" Jeff pass and re-pass this nite (date) William McGarrah. When Elizabeth married, Jeff wanted to give her a wedding present. He made a simple Walnut lamp table, which she used the rest of her life.

Jeff was not to serve his mistress long. He became very sick, was put on a horse he could only ride with effort. Elizabeth mounted her horse (side-saddle) and they began the long cold ride to Fayetteville to a doctor. As they rode along they heard the roar of the terrible battle of Prairie Grove. So sad for Elizabeth, brother Mathew fighting for the Confederacy, her husband's brother Robert Reed, a bugler for the Union Army (both survived the battle). Jeff was not to survive. . .the Doctor said Jeff had "cramp colic", prescribed "powders" and sent them home. Years later, Elizabeth felt sure Jeff died of appendicitis.

After slaves were freed, Caroline chose to live the rest of her life in Elizabeth's home. (John Morris, Elizabeth's grandson, remembers Caroline's funeral in the Reed home.)

The Reed's suffered a near tragic Bushwhacker raid. A. W. Reed was sitting on his porch when Bushwhackers rode into the yard. Their Captain (one of the most feared bushwhackers of the county) ordered Reed shot. A member of the gang who knew the Reed family well, begged that he be spared. The Captain yielded. . .ordered food. Elizabeth and Caroline hastened to fry meat and make cornpone. Elizabeth started for the garden for green onions, a bushwhacker rode beside her. She pulled onions at gunpoint. The men did not wait for the food to cook. Rode away in haste, juggling hot, half cooked food in their hands. Alex almost lost his life, and the memory never faded from Elizabeth's mind. Years later tho, the bushwhacker Captain's daughter was often a guest of Elizabeth's daughters in the Reed home.

In January 1866, A. W. Reed selected a large tract of land with a good house, one-half mile north of Boone's Grove (later Elkins valley) Maguire's store was a few miles east across the river. The tract cost $1,800.00, considered high for the time, but paid with McGarrah inheritance. The move from West Fork to Boone's Grove was made. The war was over. . .there was hope of happier days.

Ten children were born to Elizabeth and Alec, five sons and five daughters. . .two daughters and a son dying when very young. Little Julia died on Christmas eve in 1877. Alex died of a heart attack April 18, 1894. Elizabeth was a widow forty years, but the Reed home continued to be a haven of hospitality. . .single sons Bob and Jerd farmed, and daughter Augie shared the homemaking. These three gave wonderful loving care to their mother in her declining years. Her birthday observations were very special occasions for relatives and friends. Elizabeth quietly expired January 3, 1934. Her funeral service held in her home. She is buried in McGarrah Cemetery.

John David Reed

John David Reed (August 10, 1819 - October 12, 1866) and Sarah Ann Russell (May 11, 1821 - February 3, 1875) were married October 21, 1851 in DeKalb County, Alabama. Soon after the marriage, they moved to Washington County, Arkansas with a wagon train of several Alabama families. As the wagon train reached Johnson County, the family groups divided with some staying in this area, some going to Texas, and some going to northwest Arkansas. John and Sarah were in the group going to Springdale as John's brother, Lewis and family were already in Washington County.

Before moving to Arkansas, John's slaves were given their freedom, either by their own purchase or by manumitting. Taking the Reed name, some of the former slaves came to Arkansas with John and Sarah. Tradition says they intermarried with Indians and lived in Indian Territory.

Sarah Ann Russell was the daughter of John (born about 1796, Tennessee) and Nancy Russell (born about 1795, South Carolina). The Russells lived in Tennessee before settling near Collinsville, Alabama. They were the parents of Sarah Ann, Thomas T., Mary, Charles A., Nancy and Lydia Caroline.

James (born October 5, 1787, North Carolina) and Nancy Reed (born 1789, Georgia) were the parents of John David Reed. Between 1816 - 1819, they left Tennessee to settle at Reed's Hill, DeKalb County, Alabama. James died there in 1840. By 1859, Nancy moved to Washington County, Arkansas.

The children of James and Nancy Reed were: Margaret 1811-1874 married Pleasant Stafford. By 1856, this family was in Washington County. Elizabeth, born 1816, Tennessee, married (1) Jonathon Morton (2) William Ford, In 1860, they were in Washington County. Lewis 1822-1863, Alabama, married Nancy Coffman. Amy, born August 15, 1824, Alabama, married Erasmus Powell Reed, May 7, 1843. Amy resided at Reed's Hill most of her life. James, born 1828, Alabama, last known record of James in November 1847, when his mother was named as his guardian. Isaac, born 1830 Alabama, married Rebecca Ann Rogers July 30, 1850. Isaac was licensed to the ministry in 1854 by the Line Creek Baptist Church of Christ, DeKalb County, Alabama. In 1859 or 1860, he moved to Benton County, Arkansas. He was the first minister of the Ozark Baptist Church of Christ in Ozark, Arkansas. From there, he moved to Springdale. By 1877, he and his family were in Grayson County, Texas. Nancy, born 1831, Alabama, married George Reed July 15, 1852. John David was the third child and oldest son of James and Nancy Reed. In 1853, John purchased his homeplace from Joe Holcomb. The Old Missouri Road and the Old Wire Road crossed this place, dividing the home lot from the barn lot. Early fences were bois d'arc trees. Walnut, pecan and apple trees were soon planted. During the Civil War, John's position was determined by his stand on slavery, his sympathy with the South on property rights, and his opposition to the cessation of states.

To evade conscription by either army, John fled to Texas. Before leaving, he took six team of oxen to Fayetteville and sold them for $5.00 each, a total of $60.00. The gold pieces were put in a bull sac wallet and hidden in the barn. The next morning, it was evident rats had found the sac. Some of the money was found. Around 1895-1900, a $10.00 gold piece was found at the edge of the field. This piece is still in the family as a keepsake.

A Federal scouting party, armed with axes and weapons, came into the Reed home demanding all the food supplies. The sorghum barrel was in the corner of the horse lot covered with brush and stalks; dried fruit was in the feed; hams, bacons, and other foods were in other hide-a-way places. When Sarah refused to reveal the storage locations, the officer vowed to cut down the house. The overhead joist in the home bore the cuts left by the axes. When the soldiers came, the children hid in the wheat and corn fields.

John lived only a short time after his return. Two years after his death, Sarah married James "Jimmy" Meek. John, Sarah and Jimmy were members of the Friendship Baptist Church and are buried in the Friendship Cemetery.

John and Sarah's children are: Nancy, July 25, 1852 - December 1932, married James Bench; Olive, November 5, 1853 - August 31, 1881; Lewis Jarvis, December 22, 1856 - January 21, 1912, married Elizabeth Rebecca Kelcher February 18, 1883; Albert M., February 7, 1860 - October 30, 1939; Levi Baxter, January 4, 1862 - April 9, 1937, married Theodocia Owenby; Robert Bennett, December 20, 1864 - May 25, 1922, married Anna Cowan.

Lewis Jarvis Reed

A wagon train formed in 1852 in DeKalb, Alabama, with the destination of northwest Arkansas. There were families named Reed, Meek, Russell and Edwards. One significant common factor was agreement on slavery issue—the families freed or otherwise released their slaves before heading west.

Among the young adults on the train were John David Reed and Sarah A. Russell; he was 27 and she was 25. They were married in Alabama in 1851. Lewis Jarvis Reed was one of their children. Others were Nannie Reed, Olive Reed, Lee B. Reed, Elizabeth Rebecca Reed daughter of David and Elizabeth Beal Keicher.

Reed Family

Albert M. Reed and Robert M. Reed. John David died when L. J. was only 10 years old. L. J.'s mother, Sarah A. Russell Reed, remarried some time later to Jimmy Meek, who had also been on that wagon train.

Sarah Reed Meek is credited with suggesting Springdale as the name for the community which was known as Shiloh. The town needed to be changed from Shiloh, because the Postal Department said there was another Shiloh, elsewhere in the state. Jimmy Meek was on the City Council when the change was to be made—he came home one night and mentioned the situation to Sarah. She came up with "Spring-in-the-Dale" which became "Springdale."

Years later, a young attorney in Anderson, Indiana, becamed concerned about what he considered the shameful actions of the carpetbaggers following the Civil War. He decided to move his family to northwest Arkansas in hopes he could make some contribution to improving the plight of people during the reconstruction days. His name was David Keicher; married to Elizabeth Beal Keicher. They had a daughter, Elizabeth Rebecca Keicher. Shortly after their arrival in Springdale, Elizabeth was chatting with friends in a local hotel. Comments were made about adjusting to the new surroundings. She said, "First thing I know you'll have me marrying one of these bowlegged Arkansawyers." Little did she know how prophetic this would prove to be— she and Lewis Jarvis Reed were married February 18, 1883.

L. J. built up a herd of Jersey dairy cows and established the first commercial dairy with home delivery service in Springdale. His customers would come out with jars or other containers and receive milk from two large cans equipped with spigots at the bottom. The cans were sterilized each night, ready for the next day. Cream and butter were also available. Jersey Dale was the name of this popular enterprise.

Four sons and four daughters were born into this family. Their names are given at the close of this article. Ruth, the youngest, was only 12 years old when L. J. died at the age of 55. Lizzie survived as his widow for 36 years. Older children and later grandchildren assisted Grandmother Reed through those years. In spite of limited eyesight in later years she managed well, kept her own house, and was admired for her keen sense of humor. Her opinions and approval were sought after by relatives, especially grandchildren who were courting with prospects for marriage. A Sunday dinner with the prospective in-law as guest would be followed with her considered opinion a week or so later. A pot of hot Bliss coffee was always handy and there were many sessions of Ken Miller with the KVOO news part of the routine. Another common necessity was sending a youngster to Stobaugh's Store, corner of East Emma and now Highway 265. A quarter would buy a gallon of kerosene and a loaf of bread with two or three cents for a stop at the candy corner for the delighted grandson or granddaughter.

The Reeds take pride in their involvement in public schools as parents and teachers. L. J. taught one year prior to his marriage. Grandmother fixed school lunches for over 50 years, including those for grandchildren sharing her home. Kate, Ollie, Lydia, Fred, Joe and Ruth taught in one or two room schools in the area as well as in Springdale. Kate and John's daughter, Marie, each taught more than 40 years.

This prolific family now is scattered from coast to coast with grandchildren and great-grandchildren galore. There are those on university faculties, public schools, church staffs, merchants, computer management.and parents of future generations. Memories of L. J. and Elizabeth Rebecca are still fresh and sources of pride. If only we of present families could command the respect and admiration earned by these pioneer Arkansawyers.

Descendents of Lewis Jarvis Reed and Elizabeth Rebecca Keicher Reed are listed: Kate Reed Finley (1884-1966) married Walter Finley; son Jarvis Finley and daughter Fanny Finley. Ollie Reed Beaver (1886-1981) married William J. Beaver. John David Reed (1889-1973) married Georgia Randall Reed; son Jack Reed, daughter Marie Reed. Second wife Ardeth Reed; son Vincent Reed. Fred Edwards Reed (1891-1972) married Grace Neill Reed; two sons, Jarvis Neill Reed and Thomas Jackson Reed. Married second wife, Lula Caldwell Reed; children John Edwards Reed, Robert Caldwell Reed, Iris Reed, James David Reed, Raymond Henry Reed, Freda Reed, Rachel Reed and Fred E. Reed Junior. Charles Benton Reed (1893-) married Myrl Ramsey Reed; children Rebecca Reed, Dorsett Reed, Ada Lee Reed, and Betty Lou Reed. Lydia Reed Kimbrough (1896-) married Wilson W. Kimbrough; Elizabeth Henrietta Kimbrough, Wilson Whitaker Kimbrough Junior and James Reed Kimbrough. Jarvis Joe Reed (1898-1964) married Jo Beverly Clements; children Beverly Jo Reed and Joe Bradford Reed. Ruth Reed Simonds (1901-) married Ira Simonds; children Ruth Marie Simonds, John Lewis Simonds, Laurence Howard Simonds, Edith Carolyn Simonds and Charles Marion Simonds.

Robert Bennet Reed

With his father away in Texas with the Southern Army, Robert Bennet Reed, later known as Bob, was born in the basement of the home of a Dr. Putman in Fayetteville, Arkansas on December 20, 1864. His parents, John David and Sarah Ann Russel Reed, had come to Washington County from DeKalb County, Alabama shortly after their marriage on October 21st, 1851. Their children, all prominent citizens of the Springdale area were active in the Baptist Church and held various positions of leadership through the years, are listed in order of birth: Nancy Minerva, Margaret Olive, Lewis Jarvis, Albert Martin, Levi Baxter, and our subject Robert Bennet. Little is known of the early years of Bob except that his father died when he was two years of age. His mother later married Jimmy Meek, a Shiloh city councilman, and it was he that took her suggestion of Spring-in-the-dale, when the city of Shiloh changed its name to Springdale. The 1880 census list his sister Nancy Minerva as head of household which suggest that his mother and step-father had both died sometime prior. Just after turning twenty-three, he married the youngest daughter of Benton County pioneer family John Gillespie and Elvira Hubbard Cowan. Martha Anna Cowan and Bob Reed began to share their lives December 22, 1887, and did so until he died after a short illness on May 25, 1922. They settled on a small farm north of Springdale and raised a family of four. Frank Russel was born July 1, 1889, Willie on May 5th 1891, Roger John on January 6, 1895 and Albert Doyle on March 11, 1901. In addition to farming Bob taught school some and served as church clerk of the Springdale First Baptist Church. He received an appointment as rural letter carrier on December 15, 1904 and carried mail by horse and buggy on a 23 mile route, until his death. His starting salary in 1904 was $684.00 per year. Bob lived to see one son married and one grandson born. Frank married Bertha Phillips on October 20, 1912 and settled into a successful career of farming and raising cattle. Just six weeks after their marriage Frank lost his sight in one eye due to an accident involving a whip used to drive cattle. Their son Dale Christian was born February 18, 1917 and at the age of twenty-one married a local school teacher, Maxine Trout on Christmas 1938. He entered the army late in the war and was scheduled to be part of the invading force to hit the shores of Japan, but the Atomic Bomb ended the war and he served with the occupation forces. Dale returned home in '46, attended the Ditman-Mitchell School for auctioneers and followed a dual career of farmer-auctioneer until his retirement. He owned and operated the auction barn in Springdale for a number of years and cried sales throughout the three state area of Arkansas-Oklahoma-Missouri. Dale and Maxine have one daughter, Daline, born August 30, 1953 the wife of Gary Smith, a career Air Force Officer. They have one daughter Angeline Marie, born October 25, 1977.

Willie Reed did not marry until long after her father's death. She married George Pond in 1934. They made their home with her mother throughout their married life. Willie lost both her mother and husband in late 1956. She sold the old homestead and moved into town and worked as a practical nurse and companion. At 96 she lives in a rest home and outlived all her brothers.

Roger worked for a time in the west where he loved to hunt in the high Colorado mountains. He entered the army in 1917 and rose quickly to the rank of sergeant. He sailed to France and participated in the Meuse-Argonne Offensive of November 8-11, 1918 and received a minor wound in that action. After the war he worked for a time in the Dakotas until his father's death. (See the Roger Reed Family Story for continuation).

Doyle attended school in the city, riding into town with his father and was the only one to graduate from high school. His brothers and sister had all attended the country school not far from home. (See the Doyle Reed Family Story for continuation).

Roger John Reed

Roger Reed and Olivia Barr had known of each other for several years from attending various youth functions in and around Lowell. After the war was over and having worked away from home for several years, both Roger and Olivia returned to their respective homes from out of state and began a courtship and after six months were married November 6, 1923. They had planned on having a large family and on December 21, 1926, their first born Harry Henderson was born. Roger took a job on a large farm in Kansas and while there, their second son Robert Bruce came on January 23, 1928. Returning to Springdale, the growing family settled on the south west side of town just off West Maple Street. On his share of the family homestead north of town, Roger built several chicken houses and begin to raise chickens, numbering in the thousands. At the same time he won the bid rights to carry the mail between the Springdale Post Office and the railway depot. Just after Louis Leon was born June 17, 1930, Harry Henderson took sick and after a very short illness, died. During the next several years, Richard Clinton was born on November 6, 1932, Roger Vernon was born April 20, 1935 and Harry came on July 28, 1937.

The five Reed boys as they appeared in August 1939 when they lived on the southern edge of Springdale. L to R are Richard, Louis, Harry, Bruce and Vernon.

The five Reed boys as they appeared August 19, 1979 at the funeral of their father, Roger John Reed. L to R are Harry, Vernon, Richard, Louis and Bruce.

Roger's contribution to the national defense after we entered the war was in construction. He sold his chicken farm to the Tyson family, and as he left to work on military construction in neighboring states, the family moved to Missouri, first to a small farm in Marionville and then at war's end to a larger farm north of Monett. Roger continued to work on large government construction projects in the west and spent several years in Alaska, retiring eventually in Washington where he lived a number of years.

As the boys finished school, they entered the military, served their time and married and started their own families. Bruce married Sue Ellen Matthews of Monett in 1953 and they raised a family of five boys: Douglas Bruce, a radiologist; Paul Wayne, a mining engineer, married Jill Allen in 1980 and they have two children; Jeffrey Matthew and Lindsay Michelle. John Charles is following a career in computer science; Philip Andrew is in social work; and James Robert also in computer science. Bruce taught electronics in the Springfield vocational school system for a number of years and is now a state employment counselor.

Louis Leon spent two tours in the Army, most of which was in Germany. Louis never married. He now spends time writing on the west coast.

Richard, the only one to make the military a career, spent twenty years in the Air Force. He served in remote areas of Morocco, Alaska and Labrador in addition to west coast assignments, most of which were with the Strategic Air Command as a Management Analyst. Richard married Susan Paxson of Spokane, Washington in 1964, and they have two daughters: Patricia Jean, a musician, teacher, and Minister of Music with a Baptist church; and Anita Leslie, a beauty consultant and musician. Since his retirement Richard spent a few years with an insurance firm but has returned to government service with the Post Office.

Vernon knew from an early age that he would be an architect. He attended the University of Arkansas, served as Cadet Colonel in the ROTC program and won the Outstanding ROTC Cadet award. Assigned to Vandenberg AFB, California, after its activation as a missile flight test center, he supervised construction of base housing and support facilities. He is active in the AIA (American Institute of Architects), serving in various positions. Past President of the Missouri Council of Architects, President of the Kansas City Chapter, AIA and on various national committees. Vernon married Darlene Adams of Monett in 1959, and they have three sons: Roger Adams, an architect following in his dads footsteps; Alan Christopher, who has his own lawn care business; and David Oliver, in computer science.

Harry, youngest son of Roger and Olivia, has been a Junior High School teacher since finishing school at South East Missouri State. He met Mary Hightower at a church convention and they were married June 11, 1966. They have two daughters, Melanie Loraine, the youngest, and Miriam Kathleen, married to Shane Pierson. They have one son Brandon Tyler.

Olivia sold the Monett farm after the older boys had left home and moved with Harry to Springfield, Missouri, where she bought and managed rental property.

Roger returned to Springfield and spent his last years at home. He died August 17, 1979, at the age of 84, survived by his wife Olivia, five sons, eight grandsons, four granddaughters, his younger brother, Doyle, and sister Willie. He is buried in Bluff Cemetery, Springdale.

When asked recently, what the happiest moments in her life were, Olivia replied "When I had babies, I loved my babies".

Thomas Boyd Reed

Sometimes we have all been victims of the old saying "It's a small world". The Thomas Boyd Reed family have been such prey to this old saying. Thomas was born in Shelby County, Illinois, on 12/23/1840, but it was not in Illinois that his lust for adventure was contained. He steadily advanced toward the central section of Missouri, where he met and married Martha Emeline Montgomery. They were married in Tuscumbia, Missouri, on 8/17/1873. Martha was an Arkansas girl having been born at War Eagle, Arkansas, on 9/15/1842. The following is an account of Thomas and Martha's life and how because it is a small world future generations of Thomas and Martha returned to the hills and people of Arkansas and Washington County.

Martha had traveled with her family to Missouri where she met and married Thomas B. Reed. Thomas had come to Arkansas as a Union soldier in the Civil War after joining the Union Army at Fort Lincoln at Carthage, Missouri, as a private in Company I, 5th Kansas Calvary. Thomas was wounded in the abdomen and taken prisoner on April 25, 1864, in a battle that was to prove devastating to the Union Army and a glorious victory for the Confederates at Marks Mills, Arkansas. Marks Mills located near Pine Bluff, Arkansas, was the scene of battle that lost the North about 240 wagons and nearly 1500 men. They were in route to pickup supplies for the Union Army, when they were stopped from completing their mission. Several men were killed and others were wounded or taken prisoner. Thomas was taken to a house belonging to a Confederate soldier and later transferred to Pine Bluff to be held until paroled on 12/31/1864. He returned to his family in central Missouri after the war and this is when he met and married Martha.

They raised several children, one of which was Walter Lucas Reed, better known to his friends and family as Slivers. He got this nickname from the fact that he was fairly tall and slender in stature. Walter and his wife, Nora Alma had a son by the name of Charley F. Reed. Charley is a cousin by marriage to Tommy Salverson. Tommy and his sisters were part of the children that came to Arkansas on the famous orphan trains. Charley married Ruby Lee Harrington and they had seven children, four boys: Jim, Charles, Roger, and Thomas and three girls: Arlene, Peggy and Donna. The oldest of these being Jim. Jim and his wife and five children: Carolyn, Jim, Jr., Vicki, Timothy, and Cyndie moved to Springdale when his company transferred him to the Arkansas territory.

Several years later Jim's younger sister, Donna moved to Arkansas. Donna married a local boy from Springdale, Michael W. Byrd. They have two children: Michael II and Aaron. Jim and Donna have lived in and around Springdale area for some 20-odd years and have raised their families in Washington County. Their children have married local people and are raising their families in this area. Jim and Donna's father and mother came to Arkansas for a few years before their deaths. Their father, Charley Reed, helped to build the lakes and roads at Bella Vista that exist today. As you can see it is a small world. The Reed's have come back to Arkansas and Washington County and love every inch of it.

William Penn Reed

William Penn and Eudora Greathouse raised seven children near the turn of this century at a Greathouse Springs farm. Born at Elm Springs on January 20, 1852, Penn was the son of Lewis Reed whose ancestors are traced to a North Carolina Revolutionary War soldier.

L. Fred Reed, Joe Reed, Mrs. Dora (Penn) Reed, Lelia Reed, hired hand, John Wickware just after 1906.

Dora was born in 1852 prior to the outbreak of the Civil War and recalls the Federals camping out on Clear Creek and killing the favorite milk cow. In Fayetteville, when the first train pulled into town in the 1880s, Dora recalled an older man yelling, "Look out, boys, she's gonna turn," and the crowd dispersed.

Although the Reeds had been staunch members of Baptist churches, Penn became a member of the little country Methodist church at Grandview, probably because he married into a family of strong Methodists. He was not a talkative church man, but rather a silent member. He was an elder and the one to see that the circuit rider got his pay. Anyone in need always knew that Penn and Dora were friends to whom they could go quietly for help. In that day when a doctor was a far distance by horse and buggy and an undertaker was unheard of, Penn and Dora were always at hand to care for the sick, dig a grave or furnish conveyance to haul the remains to the graveyard.

Penn and Dora had seven children, as well as raising her son by an earlier marriage. They included Margaret (1886-1982), Lewis (1888-1945), Alex (1889-1898), Kate (1892-1973), Fred Penn (1896-1930), Joseph Summers (1899-1980), and Lelia (1901-1957).

Penn liked nothing better than to sit in front of the huge fireplace on winter evenings and read aloud to Dora and the children such books as The Last of the Mohicans, David Copperfield, or Christmas Carol.

Penn and Dora worked hard and saved. They trained their children well and placed their faith in God. With a crude loom Dora made carpets for eight and one-half cents per yard. The children milked cows and carried the butter to Fayetteville where it was exchanged for groceries. Many times the sweet pure country butter had greater value than the groceries needed at just that time, so the merchant gave them "due bills" which could be traded at a later date for dress goods, beans, flours, sugar, and salt.

A telephone line was built from Elm Springs to Fayetteville with John Wasson as construction contractor. Penn sold poles for 25 cents each. By comparison, a person planted corn all day for 25 cents in those days.

Penn and Dora finally reached a point financially where it began to look as though in a few years they could begin to take life easier. But Penn was stricken with a kidney ailment and died within a week on May 20, 1906 at the age of fifty-four.

At the death of Penn Reed, Dora Greathouse was left with six children ranging from nineteen to five years of age. How she managed to raise and educate them is another great story. She continued to work hard all her life and lived eight days past her 100th birthday.

Of their seven children, three have descendents still living in Washington County. Only those individuals are mentioned here. A more complete 105-page history of the Reed Family is available through Tammi Reed Ledbetter (1030 Eva, Fayetteville, Arkansas).

Robert Lewis and Wanda Reed's daughter, Alice, lives near Greathouse Springs with her husband, John Watts. Four children were born to this marriage: John, Vicky, Jim, and Richard.

Fred Penn's widow, Frankie, resides in Fayetteville, as does their second child, John Penn. He and his wife, Frances, have two children, Randy and Tammi.

Two of the four children of Joseph Summers and his wife, Winnie May, live just west of the old Reed home at Greathouse Springs and they continue to farm the area. JoBelle married Kenneth Carnes and they have two daughters, Clydia and Lana, the former still living in Springdale with her husband, Carl Combs.

Jim Franklin Reed and his wife, Juanita, have five children, Lou, Joe, Becky, Kathi and Edna Mae. Joe, Becky and Kathi all live in the Greathouse Springs area.

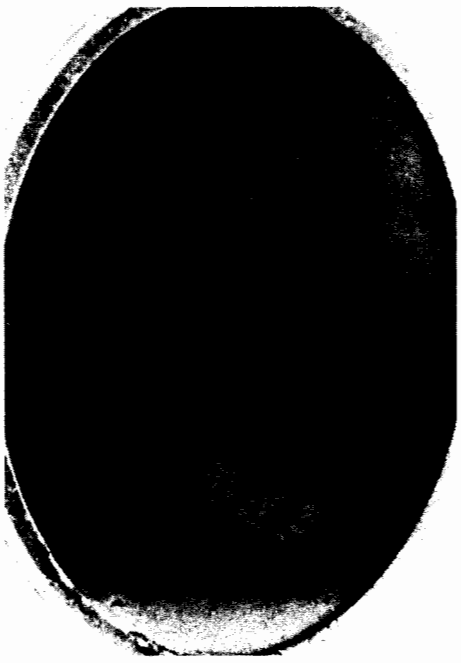
Simon Reeder

Simon Reeder was born 1640, died 1685, in St. Mary's County, Maryland. He was a freeholder of St. Clements Manor in St. Mary's. In his will dated April 6, 1685 and proved June 17, 1685 (Book 4-P-147), he left his oldest son, John, a cow named "Gentle" and her issue. He left his second son, Benjamin, his plantation (St. Clements Manor) and land on Hayward Branch. To his third son, Richard, he left land which ran to Blue Stone Cross on which John Tennison lived. And since both Benjamin and Richard were under age 20, he made his wife, Virtue Vowler, (or Vowles) Reeder the Executrix.

The issue of Simon and Virtue were: John, b. 1664, d. 5/12/1777 in Virginia. He married Mary Hayden (b. 1666, d. 1720, daughter of Francis Hayden and Thomasine Butler; Benjamin married Elizabeth Attaway; Richard b. 1667 d. 1717, married Elizabeth _____. Their children were Mary (married Robert Bridges), David (not proved), and Bridges (not proved). Some researchers believe that Virtue was not the only wife of Simon Reeder, and/or not the mother to all the children.



Dorcas Blair Reeder, wife of Noah Reeder

Simon and Virtue Reeder's first child, John, married Mary Hayden, producing several children, one of which was a son they named Simon. Simon II was born circa 1710 - 15. He died between May 25 and August 1, 1797, in Newbury, South Carolina. An inventory exists of his estate, but a will was never found. Certainly there was a shift of this family from Maryland where it started after leaving England. (There is a story that six Reeder brothers came to the colonies together, splitting off to settle in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and South Carolina.)

The following names were shown to have very royal land grants in South Carolina: John, Benjamin, Joshua, Simon and Jesse Reeder. There is a land grant deed which was issued to Simon Reeder on April 29, 1768, through his Excellency, C. B. (L. M. S.) Montagu, Governour in Council for "George the Third, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith," and so forth. This deed provides 250 acres in the province of South Carolina.

This Simon Reeder, son of John and Mary Hayden Reeder, married a woman named Anastasia Dunbar (born 1724, died August 9, 1802). She was the daughter of William and Jean Dunbar. (William was the son of John and Ann Dunbar (John born 1665, died 1709) who had come from England in 1650). Near the present town of Grisby, Virginia, Simon and Anastasia Reeder lived during the years from 1757 to 1765. Records show him doing business with Glassford and Henderson at their Calchester business in Calchester (colonial Virginia) on the Potomac River a few miles from Mount Vernon. The actual place of residence of Simon and Anastasia was also mentioned as Fairfax, Virginia. Business records show tobacco growers or traders in other wares to have a mark, and Simon used SR on all of his. He and Anastasia were listed on the membership rolls of the Bush River Baptist Church, Newberry, South Carolina.

One of the many children born to Simon and Anastsia Reeder was Micajah, the sixth. Born in 1758 in Loudoun County, Virginia, Micajah married Judith Rowland (or LaBlonde), were on the rolls of the Bush Baptist Church, and their children were Noah, Elijah, Daniel, Elizabeth. Elizabeth, born 1800, married Jacob Chandler (born 1795) in Newberry County, South Carolina, in her parents' home because of her young age. According to Christine Gamble, Elizabeth's great-granddaugter, Elizabeth and Jacob Chandler moved to Washington County, Arkansas, near Evansville, and she bore eleven children before dying at age 36.

Along with his daughter Elizabeth and his son Noah, Micajah Reeder travelled the frontier trail to Washington County, Arkansas. Revolutionary War records reveal that Micajah applied for a pension, having joined up twice and being drafted once. He died in 1836 before receiving any money. He is buried at the Vineyard Cemetery, near Evansville, Arkansas.

Noah Reeder, born 1798 - died 1846, had evidently come to Arkansas quite early, since his marriage records to Dorcus G. (Blair) Reeder reveals a date of 1818 in Upper Louisiana Territory (later to become Washington County). They resided near Cincinnati, a small present-day community. (Dorcus' parents were Elizabeth Black and William Hiram Blair of Carras County, North Carolina). A story about Dorcus in her last days goes as follows: After the death of Noah, Dorcus travelled to Bosque County, Texas, with her son Alvin in 1846. There she became listed on the rolls of the Old Rock Church on March 17, 1865 (Cumberland Presbyterian). One day while riding to church in her favorite style of being seated in a rocking chair in the back of a spring wagon, she was reading a little book entitled "Mute Christians Under the Smarting Rod," by Reverend Thomas Brooks, London, England 1669, reprinted 1842. Unfortunately, the wagon hit a big bump, and Dorcus was thrown from her rocking chair. The shock from the fall killed her. She was laid to rest in the Olde Cemetery, close to Mills Valley, Texas. The headstone is inscribed: "Dorcus G. wife of Noah Reeder. Born June 1, 1802, died June 23, 1887."

Dorcus and Noah Reeder had eleven children, all born near Cincinnati. Minverva b. 1/1/1819, married Thomas R. West (b. 1858, son of Nathan R. West), d. 10/3/1886 in Kansas; Elvira b. 1821, married Calvin Cole; Anna Eliza died young; Lucinda Elizabeth b. 7/25/1825, married John Odle, Tennessee, d. 10/25/1890 Meridian, Texas; Noah Webster b. 2/27/1827, married Mary Ann West later remarried to Sarah West, Curiton West, d. 4/15/1896 Amarillo, Texas; Emily (see West Family section); Malinda Jane, b. 1833, unmarried as of 1850 census; Albert Green b. 2/4/1834, married Nancy Caroline West, d. 12/7/1908 at Foss, Oklahoma; Alvin Young b. 1/17/1836, married Flora L. McDonald, d. 3/8/1913 at Clifton, Texas; Hiram McCager (probably a derivative of "Micajah") b. 1838; and Tabitha Arkansas b. 1840.

An amusing little story about the 9th child, Alvin, who was the one who took his mother to Texas: "Alvin was a wealthy farmer in Mills Valley, Bosque County, Texas, and was sort of a ladies man. One day when he arrived home, he found his wife had taken all of their furniture to the front yard and set it on fire." (Story related by Virgin Talbot 1980s). Many Reeders reside in Washington County. Most of them are no doubt descendants of this original Reeder family. The particular family which wrote this history section, however, descends from the sixth child mentioned above, Emily. Her marriage to Pleasant Renshaw will be recorded in the West Family section.

Phebe Remy

John Remy, Jr. married Margaret (Peggy) Hitchcock, September 15, 1816 in Floyd County, Kentucky. They came to Arkansas in the early 1840s with other Floyd County residents. John and Margaret are buried in Madison County, Arkansas.

They had ten children, all born in Kentucky: William H., born 1817, married Sally Turner, had 4 children; Phebe, born 1819, married William H. H. Nott, had 7 children: Temperence, born 1821, married Eleazer Pelphrey, had one son, Milton; James M., born 1825, married Elizabeth Reed, had 4 children: Martha Ann, born 1827, married Aaron Peters; Minerva Mary Jane, born 1830, married Alfred Combs; John, born, married Charity Hutchens; Henry, born 1837, married Leodicea Hutchens Gilstrap; Margaret, married Mr. Booth; and Elizabeth, married Mr. McClure.

Milton, the son of Temperence (Tempie) and Eleazer Pelphrey was killed in the Battle of Pea Ridge in the Civil War. Elea brought his son's body home by wagon and he was buried in their yard. A short time later, Elea was killed (murdered).

Milton's body was taken up and father and son are buried at Brentwood Cemetery. William D. Shores made Elea's coffin and he and Watt Mankins loaded the two coffins on Watt's wagon pulled by a yoke of oxen for the trip to the cemetery.

Phebe married William Henry Harrison Nott in Floyd County, Kentucky, but they came to Washington County with their families and raised their children there. Their oldest son, John Arbuth Allen Nott united four Washington County pioneer families when he married 15 year old Sarah Ellen Fine. (See also Fine, Mankins and Nott).

Issac Pete Rhine

Issac P. Rhine (German) moved his young wife, Mary Elizabeth (Conley) Rhine to Washington County sometime before 1890. They were granted a land patent for 119 acres in the Prairie View Community. Their children born in Carroll County, Arkansas were: Rena 1879; married David Wells, Adam Burton 1880; married Elizabeth Plymouth, Isaac W. 1885; married J. Bell, Mary Telitha 1886; married James J. Bowling and Lillie Isibell was born in Washington County in 1890. She married Tiff Thomas Beeks. These children married Washington County residents and raised their families here, except Isaac who moved to Westville, Oklahoma. The Rhine family is buried in the cemetery behind the old Prairie View School.

Descendants of the Rhine and Beeks families have lived within a ten-mile radius of Washington County for the past one hundred-seventeen years.

Edward Rice

Edward (Mutt) Rice, second son of Abraham and Mary (Knudson) Rice, was born in 1869 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Abraham came from Kentucky to Arkansas. Abe was a large man, weighing 300 pounds and 6 feet 6 inches tall. A mule kicked him in the stomach while he was trading horses in Neosho, Missouri. He died as a result of his injuries.

Ed Rice on the porch of Charley's house in Spring Hill, Texas, 1950.

Widowed, Mary and her three children: Absalom (b. 1862),

Ed and Ella (b. 1873) went to live with her mother, Cynthia Knudson, in Prairie Township, Washington County, Arkansas in the late 1870s. As a young boy Ed picked apples to earn money close by his home on Round Mountain.

On September 19, 1894, Ed married Mary Bertha Lirley (b. 1878) in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Mary's parents were Chestley Clayton and? (Craball) Lirley. Ed and Mary lived in Fayetteville for twelve years. They were the parents of six children: Mattie (b. 1895), Charles Loyd (b. 1898), Chesley Clayton (b. 1900), Cecil Lee (b. 1903), Beulah Lecreta (b. 1906) and Lola Zelda (b. 1910). In 1909, Ed and Mary moved to the new state of Oklahoma and settled in the community of Boudnot - just east of Tahlequah. A stone spring-house was built over Boudnot Springs and most of the local folk stored their mill and butter there. Ed worked as a "mule skinner", meaning that he drove mules to help build roads. Their children attended Needmore School which was near the Illinois River. The school was used as the Baptist church on Sunday.

Charles Loyd Rice married Elsie Leila Ryals (b. 1902) in Tahlequah, Oklahoma on July 20, 1918. Elsie's parents were James LeFayette and Mary Elizabeth (Spurlock) Ryals of Everton, Boone County, Arkansas. Charley and Elsie lived in Inola, Oklahoma where he worked in the oil fields. Nine children were born to Charley and Elsie: Fred Edgar (b. 1919), Charles Loyd Jr. (b. 1922), Leila Pearl (b. 1924), Donald Eugene (b. 1925), Bonnie Mae (b. 1927), Harold Loyd (b. 1929), Bobby Joe (b. 1931), Doris Jane (b. 1933) and Carmon Clariece (b. 1936).

Charley and his family followed the work of oil drilling. They moved in a covered wagon to a farm in Haskell at Christmas time in 1922. Then in 1923 they moved to Seminole where they raised and sold cotton. The Great Depression affected the Rice family in 1929 when an oil well overflowed, ran under their house and caused the house and all their possessions to be destroyed. Fortunately, Elsie was able to get everyone out of the house before it burned to the ground. Charley quit his job with the oil company and moved his family to Oklahoma City where he got a job building a highway.

In 1932 Charley hitchhiked to East Texas to work drilling oil wells. His wife and children moved in with Ed and Mary Rice on a farm near Wewoka, Oklahoma. A few months later when Charley had built a one-room house in Spring Hill, Texas, the family arrived and set up housekeeping. As time went by five rooms were added to the house and a water well drilled. The children attended the four-room elementary school nearby. They later rode a bus to Longview, about 10 miles, for high school classes.

Ed and Mary Rice moved to Spring Hill in 1935. Ed was blind due to an accident years earlier and cataracts. Mary died on February 18, 1939 from complications following surgery. She is buried in Cumberland Cemetery in Spring Hill.

On February 2, 1946, Donald Eugene Rice married Emma Jean Jamison (b. 1927), daughter of Willis Ezra and Grace Marie (Burnett) Jamison of Tahlequah, Oklahoma. This wedding was performed by Reverend Thomas of Elmyra Chapel Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Spring Hill, while Don was on furlough from the Army. After returning from overseas duty in the Phillipines, Don and Emma moved to the family farm in Big Sandy, Texas. Ed Rice lived with them for a short time then moved in with Charley and Elsie. Ed died March 24, 1950 while visiting his son Cecil in Wewoka, Oklahoma. He is buried in Spring Hill.

Don and Emma are the parents of: Dorothy Ann (b. 1947), Margie Marie (b. 1948), Larry Gene (1949) and Thomas Ray (b. 1950). All four children graduated from Spring Hill Public School.

Don worked as a machinist and later as quality control inspector for an aerospace corporation. Emma worked in food service and health care. Don and Emma divorced December 1, 1970.

Their daughter, Dorothy, married Kenneth Ashley Holloway (b. 1945) in April 1966. Ken is the son of Edgar Burtram and Virginia Marsha (Calvin) Holloway of Columbiana, Ohio. Ken and Dorothy met at Pine Crest Bible Church when Ken went to Longview, Texas to attend LeTourneau College.

In 1970 they moved to Irving, Texas where Ken worked as an engineer in the aerospace industry. They now live in Forest Hill, Maryland with their children: Kenneth Ashley Jr. (b. December 30, 1966), Timothy James (b. December 14, 1969) and Karen Elizabeth (B. November 25, 1978).

Harvey Doke Rich

My grandfather on my mother's side was Mr. Harvey Doke Rich, born September 11, 1844, in Knoxville, Tennessee. He lived in Missouri before moving to Arkansas and married Elizabeth Underwood on June 8, 1872.

Their children were Ada Catherine Rich, who married John Mahan (no record of birth or death) at Russellville, Arkansas; William Harvey Rich, born September 26, 1875, married Annie Vanderpool on June 13, 1905, and died December 22, 1956, in Springdale, Arkansas; Bart Doke Rich, born March 3, 1877 in Bartlett, Missouri, married Sarah Isabelle Wilson and died October 31, 1944.

My mother, Armintie Elizabeth Rich, was born October 29th, 1883 and married David Monroe Easter, who died December 18, 1964 at West Fork, Arkansas.

Harvey Fred Rich was born December 5, 1886 and married Arminda Bean in Swain, Arkansas (died?). Cora Viola Rich was born September 23, 1888, married Joseph Zerring James Jones, who died July 8, 1951. Herman Christoper Rich was born May 25, 1890, in Bunker, Missouri and married Elsie Bean (died?).

Maggie Rich was born December 28, 1892, in Wayton, Arkansas and married Richard Lee Jones (died?). Emma Rich was born July 5, 1895, in Wayton, Arkansas. Mahala Rich was born March 6, 1899, married Robert Meart Hall (died?).

These are the ancestors of my Grandpa and Grandma Rich, who are laid to rest on the old home place in Newton County. The relatives gather each year on Father's Day to decorate the graves, and keep the cemetery up. I was privileged to be there this year for the decoration, along with three of my sons; Richard Earl Easter, who has a construction company there in Springdale; James Monroe Easter, of Springdale; and Norman Gerald Easter of West Fork; and a nephew, Robert Easter, of Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Addison W. Rife

Addison W. (Add) Rife born in Fairdealing, Missouri on January 20, 1880, was one of the four children of Gustavus and Emily Vandover Rife. Add's great grandfather, Jacob was born in Spotsylvania County, Virginia in 1791 and his son, William was the father of Gustavus. Add's mother died when he was about eighteen and Gustavus soon remarried. Because of the upheaval in his home life, Add went to live with his sister Jennie when he was nineteen or twenty. At some point in his development, Add learned to engrave marble and worked on monuments and memorial stones. During this period he also became interested in the art of piano tuning as a result of his tuning the wheel spokes on his bicycle. It is thought that he attended a tuners school in Chicago. About 1904, Add came to Fayetteville and associated himself with Guisingers Music House which provided a base from which to launch his career as a piano technician. He moved into a room at the Oriental Hotel once known as The Mountain House and much later as The Mountain Inn.

Clara Baker was one of eight daughters of Henry L. and Annie Jones Baker. She was born October 17, 1890, in Huntsville, Arkansas where her father was County Judge several times and when not in office was a builder and a topnotch stone mason. When Washington County started to build a new court house in about 1903, they called for Henry Bakers's expertise with stone. He moved his family from Huntsville into a large two story house located just to the east of the Oriental Hotel. Here, with the help of several of her daughters, Mrs. Baker served delicious meals to the public. Clara Baker, besides working at "The Baker House", obtained a job in the County Court House then located in the center of the Square. With her first pay she purchased a new cooking range for her mother. It took all of her money, but that didn't matter to Clara, for there was not a selfish bone in her body. After a few years the Bakers took over management of the Oriental Hotel and the entire family lived there. Each daughter had assigned chores to fulfil daily. It was here that Clara met Add Rife who had lived at the Oriental for some time. They were married on Christmas Eve 1910 and moved to a house that Add had purchased, located on South Church Street. Two years later, a daughter, Anna Lou, was born on November 14, 1912. They lived on Church Street until Anna Lou entered Jefferson School then they moved to a house on Center Street (now the location of the main fire station). About 1925 they purchased a house on Dickson Street (the Public Library now occupies this space) and Anna Lou transferred to Washington School.

On September 10, 1933, Anna Lou became the bride of William C. Thompson and they immediately left for Texas for a period of approximately forty-five years. After about ten years they presented Clara and Add two grandsons in quick succession.

During 1953 Clara and Add built a new home on Highway 45 East and moved in just before Christmas. Unfortunately, in June 1954 Add suffered a fatal heart attack and died on August 8th. Shortly after Clara was widowed, she came to Texas to live near her daughter and family. After a brief illness Clara died on March 19, 1973 in San Antonio. She was eighty three years of age. She was laid to rest next to Add in Fairview Cemetery in Fayetteville.

At one time Clara served as Deputy Circuit Clerk of Washington County and her father, Henry Baker was County Judge about 1928. Clara was a member of the first all woman jury in the county.

When Add tuned a piano for the first time, he inscribed his name and the date inside the piano case. His name can be found in most of the older pianos in northwest Arkansas, northeast Oklahoma and southwest Missouri. In the early 1900s, Add attended a picnic at Osage Mills near the big spring. Into the limestone bluff adjacent, he carved an open Bible about normal sized. While the carving has suffered the ravages of time it is still recognizable.

James Jackson Roberts

One family group of Roberts migrating to Washington County are direct descendants of William Roberts, born February 7, 1770 in North Carolina, married in Tennessee about the year 1798 to Miss Nellie Murray, they moved to Blairsville, Georgia about 1810.

From this union 10 children were born. Of these, five and their families moved to Washington County; so all the Roberts descending from these five families up to and including present day relatives would number approximately two thousand, making it impossible to write a brief history of the Roberts in Washington County.

One interesting group could be called the Roberts of Sonora, Arkansas which are traced back to James Jackson Roberts, one of the ten children of William Roberts. James Jackson Roberts was born January 8, 1816. He was united in marriage January 4, 1840 to Miss Cynthia Stockton in Sevier County, Tennessee. She was born July 31, 1818. They moved to Arkansas in the year 1842 locating near Sonora, which at the time was known as Union, Arkansas.

James J. Roberts purchased public lands, homesteaded, and bought from private parties, three 40 acre parcels of farm land approximately one half mile south of Sonora. Near the center of this land a large spring gushed forth cold and delicious water at about 500 gallons per minute, starting a spring branch that flowed to White River approximately three miles to the east. Present day maps of this area identify this stream as the Roberts Creek. Near the spring James J. Roberts built a log house where he lived and raised his family.

Shelt Stone built the first school house on what is now known as the Carrol Farm. This was a makeshift structure erected about 1850, made of logs and having a dirt floor. About 1857 Joseph Head, Bill Johnson, John Davis, James J. Roberts and others joined forces to build a better building nearby on forty acres of Government land that was not considered enough value to homestead, but only a few school sessions were held in it until a local man homesteaded the land and moved into the building. This created some stir but nothing could be done about it. About 1860 James J. Roberts donated land, neighbors rallied to his support and had a good log building was completed near the Roberts spring, and served as a school, church and community building.

James J. Roberts died April 3, 1871. Cynthia died December 23, 1897, they were buried in the Friendship Cemetery.

One of James J. Roberts eleven children was Thomas M. Roberts who lived most of his life on his father's farm. He was born October 20, 1842 in Tennessee. He married Cynthia Sneed, who was born in Georgia, December 10, 1849.

Thomas Martin Roberts served during the Civil War in the Confederate army and was in the battles of Elkhorn Tavern at Pea Ridge and Prairie Grove along with other minor engagements. Thomas Martin was ordained as an Elder, December 10, 1901 in the Church of Christ at Union, Washington County, Arkansas.

About this time Newton Stone had returned from a trip to California and was so pleased with a village there called Sonora that he presented this name to the Government and it was adopted for the Post Office, thus Union, Arkansas became the village of Sonora, Arkansas.

To the Thomas Martin Roberts and Cynthia Sneed Roberts union were born five children as follows; Alice A., James Harrison, Samuel Allen, Lee Eben and Roy E. All of these children married and left the farm to live and work in other communities except for Lee who lived on the farm and raised two daughters, Velma and Eva, following their mother's death, when they were young.

Cynthia Roberts died at her home in Sonora, Arkansas, July 28, 1894. Thomas M. Roberts died at his home in Sonora, September 13, 1927. They were buried in Friendship Cemetery. He has a military grave stone. When Thomas Roberts died the farm was divided among his living heirs. Daughter Alice Roberts Boyd and husband Willis; son of James Roberts and wife, Emma, built homes on their part of the farm and spent their remaining years living in the community of Sonora, Arkansas.

Jesse Roberts

Jesse Roberts (October 8, 1850 - October 10, 1932), born near Baldwin, Arkansas, was the son of Wiley Roberts and Rena Ann Tharp Roberts (daughter of Lewis and Judy (Vernon) Tharp. Jesse was married in Washington County, on September 7, 1873 to Mary Jane Mays (February 25, 1854 - January 10, 1891). Mary Jane was the daughter of John and Ellenor Jane (Biffle) Mays, formerly of Hickman County, Tennessee. Jesse and Mary Jane (Molly) settled near Wyman, Arkansas, where their children were born.

Sara Ellenor (June 17, 1874 - April 24, 1950) never married. "Miss Ella", as she was known, taught in subscription schools in Arkansas. Later, she taught in Indian Territory and Stilwell, Oklahoma and vicinity.

Annas Augusta (March 13, 1876 - November 7, 1963) also was a school teacher. She married Oscar Goss, a farmer, and had one daughter, Jennie (Johnson).

Green Leland (January 17, 1878 - November 10, 1957) married Jennie Lee Thatch (September 18, 1880 - January 16, 1976).

Mary Elizabeth (April 10, 1882 - March 18, 1901) never married.

John Francis (October 20, 1884 - February 10, 1963) married Dora McAtee. They had one daughter, Pauline (Steele). He was founder of Roberts Funeral Homes in Westville and Stilwell, Oklahoma.

George Angress (September 24, 1886 - November 26, 1918), farmer, married Susan Panter. They had three children, Ervil, Velma and Angie Irene.

One child, and twins, apparently not named, are buried in Kings Cemetery, Washington County.

After the death of Mary Jane, Jesse married Elizabeth Sexton, who became a devoted stepmother and later grandmother. Their daughter, Irene Lydia (August 10, 1894 - December 31, 1962) never married. She taught in Stilwell High School and was an Oklahoma Farm-Home Extension Agent until her retirement when she moved to Phoenix, Arizona.

Mary Jane's talents influenced greatly the education of her children. Her son, Green, was noted for his penmanship, which he taught. In early 1902, Jesse moved with all of his family, except Green, to Stilwell, Oklahoma, then Indian Territory. Green remained in Washington County and married Jennie Lee Thatch on February 18, 1903. They had seven children: Cecil Andrew (June 1, 1904 - December 12, 1986) married Gladys Woods. They had two daughters, Anginette (Noland) and Jill Anita. Wilma Isah (March 14, 1906) married Clarence Eugene Garrison. They had two sons, Dale Lee and Dwayne, who died in infancy, and a daughter, Mary Lee Phillips. Jesse Hazel (April 5, 1908 - May 4, 1972) married Harold E. McComb. Vivian (February 20, 1910) married Erick Matthews. Their two daughters are Madge Kathrine (Spears) and Hazel Wilma (Barnes). Elra Francis (September 5, 1912 - October 9, 1918) died of influenza. Madge Mays (August 4, 1916) married Henry Philip Scharber in Tulsa, Oklahoma. James Thatch (April 7, 1919) married Nancy Deason. Their children are: James Neumie, Rodkey Dale, Panalee (Reeves) and Mark Leland.

Jennie Lee Thatch was the daughter of William Henderson and Saluda Joseph Ann (McCarty) Thatch. (See Thatch history.) The wedding ceremony of Green and Jennie was performed in the Thatch home in the Sons Chapel Community by Elder O. D. Slaughter. Green was a farmer, and it was a long time until gardens produced foods. Jennie's Aunt Elizabeth Thatch had taught her how to hunt wild greens to eat in later winter. Their home was near Wyman on the White River, so they caught fish to eat and sell. Most fish were caught with the aid of a cane pole and a very special mule which Green rode bareback and bridleless into relatively deep water of the river. The mule seemed as interested in the catch as its rider. As soon as Green lifted a fish out of the water, the mule headed for the bank where Jennie took the fish and baited the hook. The mule then, without urging, turned back into the water for another catch.

Father of the bride, William Henderson Thatch, had given them a brood sow for a wedding present. Green was teaching Jennie how to shoot a rifle. She shot into the woods, missing the target. The brood sow came staggering out of the woods, fatally wounded. The loss of such a valuable animal was a real blow to the newlyweds. However, they dressed the sow and ate her.

In November, 1904, they moved to Going Snake District, Indian Territory, near Stilwell, Oklahoma, where they lived long and happy lives, rearing their children by the Golden Rule.

George Robinson

The Robinson and Taylor families came to Arkansas from Clay and Laurel Counties, Kentucky in the 1880s. Joseph William Robinson married Nancy Jane Taylor, daughter of Henry Grant Speedwell Taylor in Kentucky. Their first two children, Thomas Speed and Lizzie, were born in Kentucky. Other children were born in and near St. Paul, Arkansas: Belle, Mary, John, James Leroy and George.

The Robinson family then moved to Washington County near Goshen, where other children Marie, Ida and Fred were born.

William David Taylor, brother of Nancy Jane Robinson, also moved to near Springdale.

James Leroy (Lee) Robinson married Dorcas Thomas in Madison County in 1911 and lived a short time in Washington County, moving to Watts, Oklahoma along with his father and brothers, where they set up a sawmill. In fact, wherever they lived the sawmill was their work.

Lee and Dorcas had two children, Crystal Viola in 1913 and Eunice in 1915. Dorcas and Eunice passed away in 1915. Lee brought his only daughter back to Washington County near Springdale, to his sister Belle who married Sam Porter. Belle cared for Crystal while Lee was in the Service.

After Service, Lee returned to Fayetteville and married Pearl Fritts. He was employed by the Electric Company, living on Gregg Street next door to the Power Plant. Lee was accidently killed while repairing a power line at 6:00 p. m. on March 2, 1921. His daughter Crystal was raised by her Aunt Belle to age 17, when she married Forrest Woodward and moved to Oklahoma. They had two children, Kenneth Leroy and Carla June.

Kenneth married Karyn Martens in Kansas in 1962. They had five children, Kenita, Kurt, Leroy, Kara Lynn and Kimberly Lee (twins). Kenneth Woodward now resides in Tulsa, Oklahoma and is an Indian artist and sign designer.

Carla Smith married Douglas Smith and had one child, Terry Leroy. Carla Smith Brown resides in Bentonville and does framing, matting of pictures and painting, and interior decorating.

Crystal Robinson Woodward came back to Fayetteville in 1955, working at the University of Arkansas until retirement. Crystal and Douglas Hartley were married in 1964 and still reside in Fayetteville.

Going back to the other children of Joseph and Nancy Robinson: Thomas married Gertrude Ledford and had two children, Jack and Ruby. Both have lived in Washington County. Thomas and wife Gertrude lived in Washington County until their deaths. Lizzie married William Plummer; they had no children. Harve married Mamie Thompson of Springdale. They had four children, Alice, Bonnie, Lorraine and William Joseph (deceased). Their daughters live in Tulsa, Oklahoma. John married Delia Lacy, children Andrew, Cleo, Forrest, Irene and Adonna Ann. Mary married Nathan Lacy, children Edward and Roy, both deceased. George married Sally Ketcher, three children Mabel, Juanita, Walter (deceased). Marie married John Weir, children Leon, Howard, Bill, Duane, Adelaide and Anna May. Ida married Frank Yates, children Harris B., Marguerite, A. J., Mary, Frankie and Robert. Fred, the youngest, never married. He died while in the Navy.

Nancy Jane Taylor Robinson, daughter of Henry Grant Speedwell Taylor and Eleanor Yadan, was half Cherokee Indian and Dutch. Eleanor Yadan, her mother, was traced back to the 16th century in Europe. Nancy Jane Robinson died 1918 in Watts, Oklahoma.

All of the children of Joseph and Nancy Robinson are deceased except George, who resides in Stillwell, Oklahoma at age 96.

All of their children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren have resided in Washington County at one time or another.

David A. Rodgers

David Ausborn Rodgers, third child of William Francis and Mary Ellen Reed Rodgers, was born May 25, 1881 and died September 20, 1967. He married Minnie Myrtle Roller, born July 2, 1883, died February 8, 1962. He settled in Lincoln, Washington County, Arkansas where he was a farmer. Their first home was a farm near Dutch Mills where they lived two years. They spent one year in Westville, Oklahoma farming before building their home east of Lincoln. They spent the rest of their lives at the family homestead where they farmed, grew and sold apples, and raised their five children. He started what is now the largest apple orchard in Arkansas. The Rodgers' Orchards. "Aud" was one of the organizers of the First Presbyterian Church in Lincoln. His son Forrest, has taken over the orchards and has increased the acreage to over 300 acres. The old Rodgers' home still stands on the Rodgers' farm and is occupied by one of David Ausborn's and Minnie's granddaughters and her husband and family.

Children of David Ausborn and Minnie Myrtle Roller Rodgers: 1. Delpha Luellen, born January 30, 1903, died February 18, 1978, married Blucher Jackson Basden, born January 15, 1904 (?). Delpha was the librarian and English teacher at Lincoln High School for many years. She graduated from Lincoln High School and the University of Arkansas. B. J., her husband, was president and chairman of the board of the Bank of Lincoln. She was talented in many areas, writing, sewing, and being a good wife and mother. Delpha was my (JTB) mother-in-law and I am indebted to her for teaching me the art of good cooking and sewing, and for the patience she exhibited toward me, a young bride, while I was learning. She taught me much and was a good example for me to try to emulate. Issue: 1. Jack Rodgers Basden, born May 28, 1929, married Suzanne Hough; (2) Gene Blucher Basden, born March 15, 1931, married Jo Treece. 2. Lloyd Ray, born August 11, 1904, died September 16, 1985, married Opal Mae Daniel, born July 16, 1905, died March 7, 1986.

Lloyd spent his life in Lincoln as an apple farmer, operated a chicken hatchery, and as a rural mail carrier for the U. S. Postal Service. His wife, Opal, was secretary to the superintendent of Lincoln Consolidated Schools for many years. Issue: (1) Verna Lou, born January 15, 1929, married Homer Snodgrass, Jr., issue: (a) Larry Lawson Snodgrass. 3. William Ercel, born March 10, 1907, died August 5, 1972 married Nora Cannon, born February 5, 1908, died December 22, 1975. Ercel spent his life in Lincoln where he was an apple farmer and a chicken grower. Nora taught grade school in Lincoln, Cincinnati, and Prairie Grove. Issue: (1) Ercelyn, born December 26, 1936, married Dennis Reed, born February 21, 1933, issue: Russell Warren Reed, born February 3, 1965. 4. Verna Lillian Rodgers, born January 12, 1909, died July 17, 1928. 5. Forrest Ausborn, born January 15, 1916, married Jonnie Bell Glidewell, born April 14, 1917.

Forrest has spent his life in Lincoln where he now owns and operates the largest apple orchard in Arkansas. He has been an asset to the community and has served it well. His wife, Jonnie Bell, has been his helpmate, wife, and a good mother to their daughters. They have included in their business " Apple Town" which is famous throughout the south for its fine apples, apple dumplings, and cider. The idea for this side business came about because of the many who would stop by the orchard wanting to buy apples. Apple Town has been written up in Southern Living magazine many times. Apple Town consists of a restaurant and a cider saloon. It is built on the original farm of David Ausborn Rodgers and the original home has been modernized. It is occupied by the Pam and Richard Watson family, Pam being the daughter of Forrest and Jonnie Bell.

Issue: (1) Loretta Gayle, born May 3, 1939, married Ronnie Allen; issue: a. Rhonda Kay, born February 21, 1959; (b) Jonathon Forrest Allen, born October 13, 1966. William Rodgers

The first Rodgers to settle in Washington County were the William and Jane Robinson Rodgers family, both born in North Carolina in 1796. These Rodgers migrated ca 1820 to Lincoln County, Tennessee, then to Missouri finally settling on Fly Creek near Clyde and Cane Hill in 1834. They homesteaded 40 acres on December 16, 1834, and another 40 acres on December 7, 1935. Other acreages were added until their homestead contained 300 acres by 1854. The Rodgers Cemetery lies north of the original site of the home. It is now known as the Cox Cemetery, as the north section of the farm was sold to Robert J. Cox in 1878.

William L., the eldest son of William and Jane Robinson Rodgers, lived on the old homestead of William and Jane caring for his aging parents. During the Civil War he moved his family and Jane, his mother, to Fayetteville. He rented a home on Dickson Street where they lived for several years, following the carpenter trade after his service in the Northern Army as a teamster. Around 1890 he moved back to Clyde on the old homestead where he died sometime after 1906. He left the home place to Pauline "Pline" his unmarried youngest sister, for as long as she lived there. On December 24, 1908 a daughter, June, and husband Oscar Dold bought the property, then sold it to Grover Glidewell in 1909. Glidewell held it until his death in 1955.

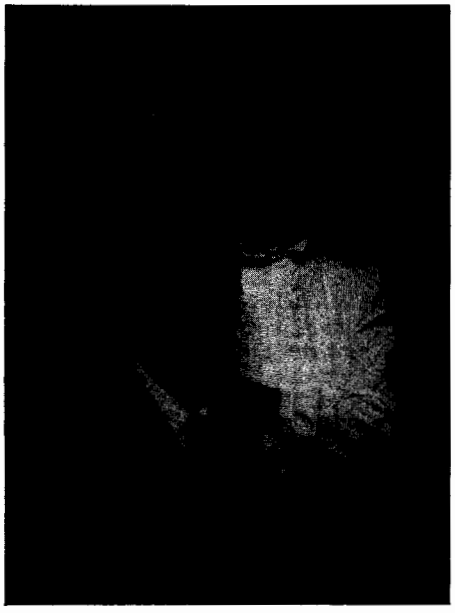
Louisa Vuilleme Roehl

Louisa Vuilleme Roehl was born in Berne, Switzerland, January 26, 1871. Her father was French-Swiss and her mother was German-Swiss. Her mother's maiden name was Moritz. Louisa was a weak, sickly child and her family feared she would not live to grow up. Her principal food was goat milk, and her health slowly improved. Her mother died when she was five years old. She had a sister, Marie, who was ten years older. Her father was an educated man, and he was determined that the girls should have a good education. They both graduated from a three year college and were both fluent in both French and German.



William & Marie Roehl

After the death of her father, Louisa taught school a year. Her sister had gone to Canada sometime before. She felt so alone and decided to go to America herself. As she left her home in Switzerland, she knew she would never see her homeland again, but what she didn't know was that her granddaughter would some day visit Berne. That granddaughter, Virginia, now lives in Portland, Oregon. After sailing from France to New York, Louisa married. Her husband died leaving her with a small son, Walter, who was born in 1897. After sometime, a lady friend and Louisa moved to Litchfield, Minnesota. While there, she married a widower, William Roehl who had two grown sons, Alex and Emil. He was twenty-two years older than she was. He had come to Minnesota from Germany many years before. They had a son,

The tallest person on the left as you face the picture is William Roehl. The lady in the center is Louisa Roehl and the other man is Walter Roehl. These are brothers and their mother.

Charles, born in 1900 in Litchfield. The winters were so severe the family decided to move farther south. They moved to Guthrie, Oklahoma Territory in 1903.

Louisa had migraine headaches and the wind and sandstorms caused her to have the headache constantly. They had another son named William, for his father, January 12, in 1905. When little William was two months old, the family moved to a small place (30 acres) about three miles from Elkins in Washington County, Arkansas. Louisa was so happy She loved the hills and the trees. They reminded her of her native Switzerland. She never ceased to love this part of northwest Arkansas, as long as she lived.

The family had lots of hardships and worked hard for a living. Louisa had learned English shortly after coming to New York. If she didn't know how to spell a word or its meaning, she used her dictionary. She had a nice handwriting in English, French, and German. She corresponded with her husband's niece, Marie Roehl Dimling for several years. The niece lived in Germany. Mr. Roehl was experienced in cabinet making and upholstering, but there wasn't much demand for that kind of work in Arkansas, at that time. He had a lap desk that opened out on the lap for writing. It had a drawer for pens, a covered inkwell, and shakers filled with gold colored sand to sprinkle on when signing a document, etc. A granddaughter in Portland now has that desk. He also had a camel top trunk. These two items were brought from Germany when he came to America many years ago.

After coming to Arkansas in March, 1905, someone sold the Roehls a cow that jumped every fence she came to. Louisa said that she knew that the nursery rhyme about the cow jumping over the moon was fantasy, but she believed that cow would have attempted to do that very thing, if she wanted to.

Mr. Roehl died of pneumonia in 1921, and Louisa Vuilleme Roehl died in 1952. They are laid to rest in McCord Cemetery, near Durham, Arkansas. Louisa's sons, Walter and Charles, served in the United States Navy. Walter had two sons, Walter, Jr. and Joseph. Walter Roehl, Sr. died in 1964, and Charles Roehl died in 1930.

William Roehl, the youngest son, married and he and his wife, Marie, now live in Fayetteville, Arkansas. They recently observed their 60th wedding anniversary. They have three daughters, Virginia of Portland, Oregon, Ruth of Fayetteville, Arkansas and Joyce of Hutchinson, Kansas. They have four granddaughters and one grandson.

Edmond Rogers

Lowell Edmond Rogers, born July 16, 1913 in Washington County, Arkansas, as the son of Homer Rogers and wife, Fannie May Sayers Rogers, lived on the mountain between Lincoln and Wedington Gap, where his parents owned two fruit farms. He attended Mountain View Rural School, and Coweta Oklahoma High School. He played basketball and was active in sports. He was a loyal member of the Baptist Church.

Edmond Rogers and wife Oma Berryhill Rogers. Picture taken January 3, 1958 in Houston, Texas.

As a small child, he would pull himself up beside his father's wooden toolbox, and drive nails around the edges. When he was older, he could draft a design and build most anything. He built sleds, wagons and continued working on wood. When the parents were in Oklahoma, and the children were in Arkansas, he redesigned mother's oblong table, making a square one with 4x4 timber legs, and painted it apple green. He used the end pieces to make an end table with a shelf below, using the 2x2 inch table legs. (I have that table). Mother was delighted with the table, though not all of the family could be seated at the same time.

Mother, Dad and family moved to Wagoner County, Oklahoma in 1924. A few years later, Edmond, Irvin and I spent one winter on the HOME PLACE in Arkansas. Irvin attended school at Edmond and I cut firewood. Mother and Dad were gathering a pecan crop in Oklahoma.

Edmond married Oma Irene Berryhill, daughter of David C. Berryhill and Bessie Pearl Barns Berryhill, granddaughter of John Barnes of Arkansas on December 31, 1935 in Coweta, Oklahoma. Parents of: David Leon born in 1937 in Oregon, Janice May born in 1939 in Oregon and Lowell Irvin born in 1948 in Houston, Texas.

Edmond and Oma tried farming on the HOME PLACE in Arkansas in 1936, while visiting with old family friend, Jim Mayberry. His wife Annie had died February 2, 1936, leaving him with children Henry, Olive and Jimmy who had married recently. His older son, Frank and family were living in Oregon. They decided to sell out, buy a truck and all seven of them went to St. Helens, Oregon.

Edmond worked at Pope and Talbot Lumber Company, St. Helens, driving a lumber carrier and loading ships on the Columbia River. He was transferred to Los Angeles, California where he loaded ships for overseas until he was inducted in the Army in World War Two. He served in Japan 1945-46, Company B, Engineers Construction Battalion, a construction foreman. After the war, the family lived in Houston, Texas. His first contract was building forty small houses. One of the last houses built had seven bedrooms with baths. He had six carpenters that had been with him for several years when he died, one of which was his brother Irvin. Edmond drowned August 25, 1956 in West Bay in Galveston, Texas. He was buried in Brookside Memorial Park Cemetery, in Houston, Texas.

David Rogers is a builder in Houston. He married Faye Waldrop. Their children are: Mark Edmond, David Gregg and Mary Angela.

Janice May Rogers, a secretary in Houston Bank, married Seaborn Leslie Hamilton. Their children are: Steven Leslie, Tammy Lynn and Michael David.

Lowell Rogers, a computer engineer for AT&T Communications Company, married Linda Carol Lee. Their children are: Anna Marie and Jonathan Lee. Edmond's wife Oma lives in Conroe, Texas. Her hobby is designing, quilting, crocheting, and ceramics.

Because Edmond was too proud to wear glasses, he only wore them when he needed to read blueprints, etc. As he was helping to cook breakfast at church, he began to dish up a bowl of apricots. He thought they were the eggs ready to be cooked.

George Spencer Rogers

George Spencer Rogers, the only child of William A. Rogers and Mollie Barnett Rogers was born in Temple, Texas, on October 12, 1877. (See Rogers, William A. and Rogers, Spencer Gillim). When George was about four years old, his father died, and he and his mother moved back to Farmington, Arkansas to be near relatives.

George and Mayme's House on Mt. Sequoyah. Built in 1915.

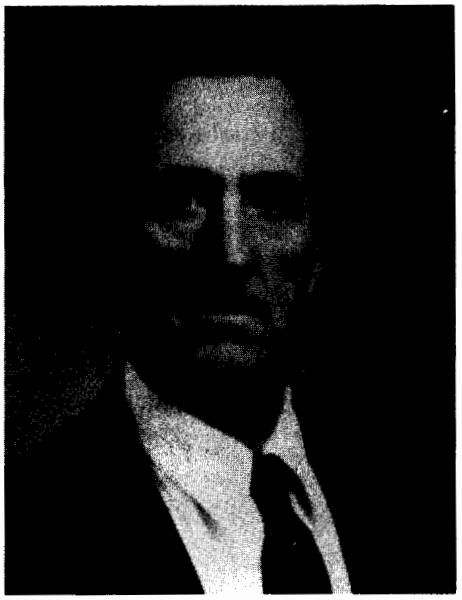
George was educated in the Farmington schools and at the University of Arkansas. He took his first post office job on December 24, 1903 and served as money order clerk and Superintendent of the University Station before retiring in 1941.

On December 12, 1905, George Spencer Rogers and Mary Alice Rader, "Mayme", were married in Fayetteville. (See Rader, Mary Alice). They built a house on Mt. Sequoyah and moved into it in 1915, remaining there until their deaths.

George and Mayme were the parents of six children: William Rader Rogers, Louis James Rogers, Peggy Maye Rogers, Andrew Spencer Rogers, George Spencer Rogers, Jr. and Melba Louise Rogers.

Their first child, William Rader, was born December 7, 1906, in Fayetteville, at the Rader Hotel, which was owned by his grandparents, Elbert Joseph Rader and his wife Nancy Mary Beal Rader. (See Rogers, William Rader).

Louis James Rogers was born in Fayetteville on October 20, 1908. He married Sadie Marie Cate on September 28, 1936 in Rogers, Arkansas. She was born January 6, 1914, the daughter of David Obe Cate and Hazel Mae Dowell Cate. The four children of Louis and Marie are: Louis James Rogers, Jr. "Jimmy", born January 9, 1938 in Fayetteville; Nancy Ann Rogers, born March



George Spencer Rogers ca 1941?

Nancy, now married to John Thomas Haire, has a son, Ronald Elbert Hunt, born June 22, 1965 in Fort Smith. Georgia Faye married James Richard Stewart July 26, 1967, and their children are Deena Marie Stewart, born January 10, 1970, St. Louis, Missouri, and James Richard Stewart, Jr., born April 17, 1971, also in St. Louis, Missouri. Betty Jane married Charles Odis Butler May 31, 1969. They are divorced, and their children are Amy Michelle Butler, born June 4, 1971, Fort Smith, Arkansas, Ann Marie Butler, born August 14, 1974, Fort Smith, Arkansas and Amanda Faye Butler, born December 16, 1977, Fort Smith. Louis James Rogers died October 23, 1977 and is buried in the Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville. His widow, Marie Cate Rogers, lived in Tulsa until her death July 22, 1987.

Peggy Maye Rogers was born January 9, 1912. She received her education at the University of Arkansas, and on October 15, 1932, married Lawrence Otis Mayes in Cassville, Missouri. Lawrence was born in Washington County, Arkansas, July 3, 1910, the son of Joseph Oscar Mayes and Florence Owen Mayes. Peggy and Lawrence have lived in Tacoma, Washington since the early 1940s. He is a retired butcher, a woodworker, and a builder of boats; she is an artist and retired art professor. They have two sons: Phillip Roger Mayes, born October 14, 1937 in Fayetteville; and Michael Gordon Mayes born October 12, 1940, in Fort Smith. Phillip married Judith Ann Lang on August 4, 1962 in Tacoma, and they have two daughters: Leslie Ann Mayes, born June 9, 1963 in Olympia, Washington; and Cheryl Lynn Mayes, born February 27, 1968, in Kansas City, Missouri. On February 25, 1967, Michael married Susan Jean Lundahl, born February 17, 1945, in Tacoma, the daughter of Earl A. Lundahl and Mary Helen Ginther Lundahl. Susan and Mike have three sons, all born in Tacoma: Jason Micheal Mayes, born October 20, 1967; twins, Christopher Andrew Mayes and Spencer Alan Mayes, born August 20, 1970.

Andrew Spencer Rogers, fourth child of George and Mayme, was born August 25, 1915. Andrew, also called "Andy", or "Horseshoe", married Vivia Estelle McCraw on December 24, 1944. She was born in Rush Springs, Oklahoma, May 4, 1922, the daughter of Robert Harry McCraw and Mattie Jewel Slusher McCraw. Their five children, all born in Fayetteville, are: Gordon Andrew Rogers, born December 24, 1945; Raymond R. Rogers, born April 23, 1948; Ronald Gene Rogers, born April 10, 1950; Reaford Spencer Rogers, born March 7, 1952; and Vicki Suzanne Rogers, born June 24, 1954. Gordon owns Hyde Heating and Cooling Co. in Wichita, Kansas, and he and Sandy have a daughter, Andrea Michelle Rogers, born June 24, 1980. Raymond and his wife are divorced, and he lives in Joplin, Missouri, with his son Brad Raymond Rogers, born March 29, 1973. Raymond is a salesman with Salad Master Stainless Steel. Ronald is a dentist in Hot Springs, Arkansas, and is married to Joyce Marie Hess. Reaford is an optometrist in Denton, Texas. Suzanne is divorced from Dr. Ira Klimberg, and is a surgeon in Gainseville, Florida. Andy, who was a Metalsmith First Class in the U. S. Navy Seabees during World War II, continued as a metalsmith after his discharge. He also did intricate wood carving when just a youngster. Andy and his brother Nat hunted together all their lives, and were hunting deer in Franklin County, Arkansas, when Andy suffered a fatal heart attack October 22, 1978. He is buried in the National Cemetery in Fayetteville.

George Spencer Rogers, Jr., "Nat", was born May 21, 1918. He and Nell Louise Kimball, daughter of Joseph Edward Kimball and Nell Irene Stearns Kimball, were married September 12, 1938 in Springdale, Arkansas. She was born November 23, 1918 in Fort Smith. Nat served with the U. S. Armed Forces in Africa, Sicily, and Italy during World War II. Following his discharge, Nat and Louise returned to Fayetteville to raise their family. Both are now retired from the post office, and live on Mt. Sequoyah on the home site where Nat was born. They refinish and sell antiques. Their children are: Joyce Marie Rogers, born June 16, 1946, died June 6, 1986, and George Spencer Rogers III, born September 11, 1947. George III is divorced and lives in Fayetteville with his two children, Angela Deanne Rogers, born June 1, 1969, and Christopher George Rogers, born March 10, 1972.

Melba Louise Rogers, sixth child of George and Mayme, was born March 16, 1920. Melba is a gifted singer and has participated in many musical activities throughout her life. She was a music major at the University of Arkansas, and was also a Razorback Beauty. She married Charles Tipton Soule on September 19, 1942, while he was a Lieutenant in the U. S. Air Force. He was the son of Earl Garfield Soule and Lillian Huntley Tipton Soule, and was born June 6, 1919 in Fayetteville. Melba and Charlie have two daughters: Katherine Suzanne Soule, "Kitty", born in Lubbock, Texas, July 15, 1944; and Carol Lillian Soule, born October 4, 1946 in Fayetteville. Kitty married Jerry Brock Paulding December 21, 1962, and their children are: Laura Lynn Paulding, born in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma February 18, 1967; and Patrick Ryan Paulding, born in Houston, Texas March 17, 1975. Carol and Robert Joseph Bell were married September 20, 1975. Their daughter, Melanie Katherine Bell, was born in Redwood City, California, July 24, 1980. Melba and Charlie are retired and living in Bella Vista, Arkansas.

George Spencer Rogers died November 2, 1952, and Mayme Rader Rogers died July 6, 1960. They are buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville.

Homer his wife and two daughters moved to Washington County, bought eighty-five acres of land 5 February 1912, Section 17, Township 16, Range 32 called the Old Place, it had an old log house and log building apple drier. They rented the Rhidenour farm and a farm near Lincoln, all three were apple farms. They harvested and dried the fruit, sold enough to buy another fruit farm. March 1917 sixty acres, Section 18, Township 16, Range 32. This was the Rogers Home Place until sold to the Government 1941, at present a part of Ozark National Forestry.

The Mountain View School House and cemetery are about all of places left that remain. Our mail box was on Rhea Rural Route, in front of Senator Ben Greathouse home, when we would go down the mountain to the mail box. "Uncle Ben" or one of his sons would invite the children on Saturday night to listen to "Grand Ole Opra" on their radio. Harley and Charley would treat the children with candy.

Many wonderful memories of living in Arkansas picking strawberries in the spring for Mr. Burnett, on those flint rock hills, at present Lake Wedington, Dad was row boss, Mother worked in the berry shed, and all children picked berries. January 1924 the family moved to Wagoner County, Oklahoma, rented farm land, raised cattle, grain, cotton and hay.

Nada died 1945; Mother Fanny died 1957; Nada's husband Lod died 1969; Dad Homer died 1970; and Rosa died 1986; all five are buried in Elwood Cemetery, Wagoner, Oklahoma. Earl E. Price died 1954, buried Fort Gibson National Cemetery.

Irvin Rogers

Irvin Rogers, born March 7, 1922, Washington County, Arkansas, son of Homer Edman Rogers and wife Fanny May Sayers Rogers, at the age of one year, nine months, moved to Wagoner, Oklahoma with his father and sister Marie in a 1918 Model T. Ford. His mother and sister Rosa drove the two teams and wagons, Sister Nada led the cow, driven by brother Edmond.

Irvin and Juanita Rogers

The family often returned to their farms in Arkansas, to spend the summers, enjoy the cool weather and fresh fruits. It was always the "HOME PLACE". This had been a fruit grafting farm, an apple tree had been grafted on a persimmon root, the apples were beautiful, in the fall they would shrivel like a persimmon and taste awful. Another tree of peaches had extra large fruit, but wouldn't ripen until November. Mother, Edmond, Irvin and I spent the summer in Arkansas. Mother returned to Oklahoma to help Dad gather the corn and pecan crops. She developed a bone fellon on her thumb and had to stay near the doctor that winter. Edmond and I sent Irvin to Mountain View School. By him attending this year, all five of the Rogers children attended this school.

That winter Edmond and I built a new fence around the cow shed, taking care of the cow and chickens, cut several ricks of wood and enjoyed the fireplace in the evenings.

Mother and Irvin were walking down a trail on the west side of the mountain. She was carrying a basket of ten dozen eggs, when she slipped and fell, set the basket down and never broke an egg. I still have that basket.

Mother sold eggs and did most all the shopping at the Will and Nora Deese, General Merchandise Store at Wedington. Today, the old store and most all of the dwelling buildings are gone.

Irvin Rogers

When Edmond and I didn't want to be bothered with our little brother, we would tell him, "to beat it". That meant go away. He loved to go with Edmond hunting. Edmond climbed a persimmon tree after a possum. He told Irvin when he dropped the possum, "You'd better beat it." He did, as fast as his little legs would carry him.

Dad had eighty acres of hay meadows in Oklahoma. Irvin would help with the bailing, then they would haul it to Arkansas in the fall and bring back fruit. The farms in Arkansas were sold in 1941 to the Government, at present part of the Ozark National Forestry.

At the age of seventeen, with Mother's consent, Irvin Laroy Rogers and Juanita Faye Hammock, age 16, with her father's consent were married August 4, 1939 in Wagoner, Oklahoma. They then went to St. Helens, Oregon where Edmond and family were living. He worked at the Fir-Tex Company. About 1942, they moved to Wichita, Kansas. He worked at Boeing Aircraft until he received notice for draft registration.

They moved back to Wagoner, Oklahoma where he worked a short time at the Powder Plant at Pryor, then joined the Navy, serving on ship U. S. S. Glynn, in the Asiatic Pacific area. January 19, 1945 to April 6, 1946, he was awarded the Victoria and American Campaign Medals.

In 1947, they moved to Houston, Texas. He entered the building business with his brother until Edmond died, then Irvin and family moved back to Wagoner, Oklahoma. He built a house for a niece and did carpenter work.

He sold out again and went to Jewett, Texas and bought a farm. He was the first man to be employed by Nucor Steel Company working more than nine years before he died September 12, 1982. He was buried in Brookside Memorial Park, in Houston by his brother Edmond. Irvin's wife now has the farm.

Their two children were Roy, born in 1940 in Portland, Oregon and Susie, born in 1950 in Houston, Texas. Harold Laroy Rogers married Mary Dill, and they had a daughter named Stefanie Ann. With his second wife, Wendy Propes, he had two children, Tanis Renee and Jeffrey Laroy. Bonita Sue Rogers married Jesse Laverne Sims, their children are Jesse Laroy and Yvelle Daniella "Dannie", all of Magnolia, Texas.

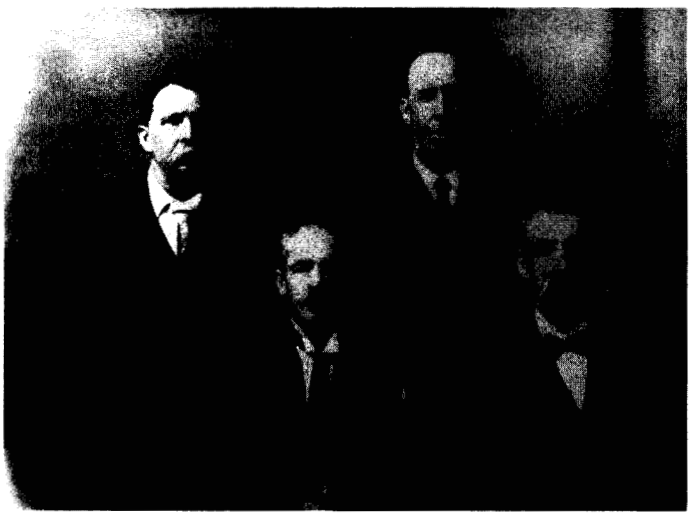
Spencer Gillin Rogers

Spencer Gillin Rogers, born June 26, 1829 in Franklin County, Tennessee, the son of James Larkin Rogers, born 1802 in North Carolina, and Hannah Smith Rogers, born 1806 in Pennsylvania, was the first of his line to arrive in Washington County, Arkansas in 1854. He brought with him his first wife Lucy Adaline Hill, born December 5, 1829 in Franklin County, whom he married July 13, 1849, and also their three children, all born in Tennessee: Thomas Franklin, born August 8, 1850, William A., born October 7, 1851, and Cullom (Dock), born February 23, 1853. There also came with Spencer Gillin Rogers the family legend, oft repeated from generation to generation, that he was descended from Larkin Rogers, the Revolutionary Patriot, born February 11, 1766, who in turn was descended from Thomas Rogers, a signer of the Mayflower Pact, who arrived on these shores on the Mayflower.



1. Virgil Ann (Bud) Rogers 2. Columbus Rogers 3. Andrew Rogers 4. Franklin Rogers

On Spencer Gillin's arrival in Washington County he patented land on the south end of Kessler Mountain where he built a home; now, however, only a slight depression in the ground, where his root-cellar once existed, indicates his habitation there. During their early years here their home was blessed in quick succession by the arrival of five more boys and at last, a girl. They were John W., born February 10, 1855; James Polard, born February 2, 1857; Virgil Ann, born November 10, 1858; Jacob Andrew, born March 20, 1860; and twins, Columbus and Mary Elizabeth, born November 16, 1861. As the family grew and their needs increased, they moved down from the top of Kessler Mountain onto the southern and southeastern foothills and not far away from another early settler, John Rieff, who came from Virginia in 1837, established a home, a church, Rieff's Chapel, and gave an acre of land for Rieff's Cemetery where he and his wife, Hannah Ross, lie buried. Here, too, are buried many of Spencer Gillin Rogers' descendants.

Nevertheless, during this harsh and cruelly difficult time for Lucy Adaline Rogers, and while she was pregnant with the twins, Spencer Gillin answered the call to serve the Confederacy during the War Between the States, he went back to Ridgeville, Tennessee, where he enlisted on July 24, 1861 to serve with the Tennessee Infantry, Company D. Newman's 23rd Battalion.

In 1870, at the age of 41, Lucy Adaline (Hill) Rogers died and was buried in the Rieff Cemetery in an unmarked grave. Shortly thereafter, her sons and one daughter began their own journeys into life at a further western frontier, going primarily to Texas and California. At this point in time, however, very little is known about those descendants remaining in Washington County, who are descended from two of the eight boys: William A. Rogers and Virgil Ann Rogers.

On August 4, 1863, Spencer Gillin Rogers married a second wife, Harriette Young, by whom he had a daughter, Icey, in 1874. About the year 1880, Spencer Gillin, then 51 years of age, again following the call of a western frontier, took his wife and child and moved to Casa Verdugo, California. There he seems to have prospered. Shortly after their arrival, a second daughter, Grace Lee, was born. On July 29, 1917 Spencer Gillin Rogers died. He was buried in the Forest Lawn Cemetery in Glendale, California, just to the right of the main gate. By this time, Icey had married John H. Swaggart, and Grace Lee, E. J. Stanton.

Of all of Spencer Gillin Rogers' eight sons, the descendants of only two remained in Washington County; those of William A. and Virgil Ann. William A., born October 7, 1851, in Tennessee, married a local girl, Mollie Barnett, in 1876, and they moved near Temple, Texas, where he died in 1881, leaving his widow and one child, George Spencer Rogers, born October 12, 1877. Mollie returned to Farmington, Washington County, with her child, and there she married J. H. Sidwell in 1885. Thus it was that the only descendant of William A. Rogers, George Spencer lived and prospered in Washington County. (See the article in this book by granddaughter, Patricia Rogers Doan, concerning George Spencer Rogers and his descendants).

Only Virgil Ann Rogers was living at home in Washington County with his father, stepmother and half-sister Icey, in 1880 when Spencer Gillin moved to California; however, Virgil Ann, himself, married December 23, 1880 to Lucinda Sherry of West Fork, b. July 10, 1859. After bearing him three children, Oscar Lee - December 10, 1881, Ora M. - March 21, 1885, and Clem - November 29, 1886, Lucinda died February 18, 1897 and was buried in Rieff Cemetery. Only Oscar Lee remained in Arkansas. On January 19, 1903, he married Eleanor de Roulhac, whose forbears, being French aristocrats, came to the United States in 1793 to escape the French Revolutionists. Eleanor's father, Joseph Psalmet Gregoire de Roulhac, came to Arkansas from Kentucky at the turn of the century, settling west of Greenland near the Virgil Ann Rogers family. They had two sons: Spencer Virgil - September 17. 1906, and Richard de Roulhac - November 20, 1912. On July 22, 1921, Spencer married Geneace Stinnett, of Logan County, Arkansas. Their two children were: Dixie Lee - February 3, 1933, now Mrs. George Rigg of Columbia, Missouri, and Maurice - March 23, 1943, a graduate of the University of Arkansas and an attorney of Little Rock, Arkansas. Spencer V. Rogers, an Army Veteran, died August 5, 1949. Oscar Lee Rogers, father of Spencer and Richard, died October 18, 1918. Richard de Roulhac Rogers married Lucille Alexandra Long of Neosho, Missouri December 25, 1938. They were both graduates of the University, he becoming an accounting clerk in the Fayetteville Post Office and she an English Teacher. They had no issue. Richard, a Navy Veteran, died April 19, 1977.

Virgil Ann Rogers had the following children by a second wife, Lily B. Ketron: Gilbert - February 8, 1902, deceased; Mildred - June 25, 1903, deceased; Herschel - July 1, 1907, Lila - February 23, 1910 and Cain - July 5, 1912. Herschel and Cain live on the family farm.

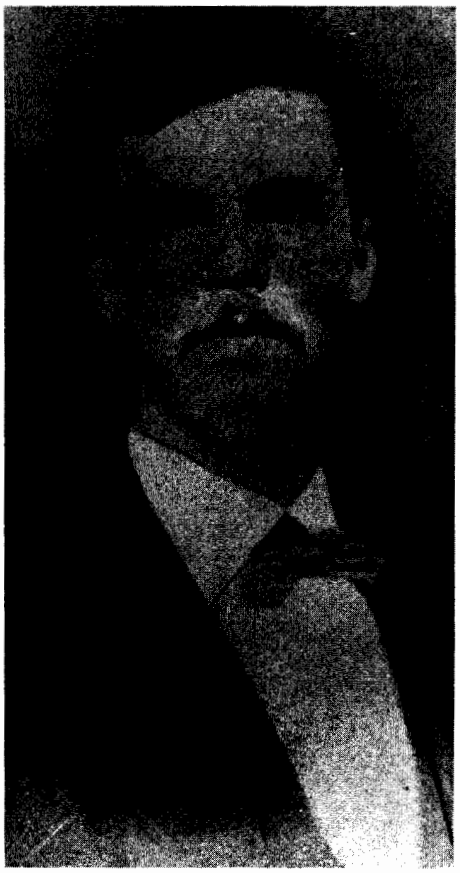
William A. Rogers

William A. Rogers came to Washington County, Arkansas with his family some time between 1854 and 1855. He was born 7 October 1851 in Franklin County, Tennessee, the second son of Spencer Gillim Rogers and his first wife Lucy Adaline Hill. His older brother, J. Thomas Franklin Rogers, was also born in Tennessee on 8 August 1850, as was a younger brother J. Cullum Rogers, born 23 February 1853.



William A. Rogers

The family settled on a farm on the south end of Keller Mountain which lies southwest of Fayetteville and west of Greenland. (See Spencer Gillin Rogers)

On 12 October 1876, in Washington County, William A. Rogers was married to Mary Barnett, also called Mollie, who was born 17 September 1858 in Breathitt County, Kentucky. Their only child, George Spencer Rogers, was born in Temple, Texas on 12 October 1877. When George was about four years old, his father died, probably of a ruptured appendix, while doing construction work on the railroad near Temple.

Mollie Barnett Rogers and her son George moved back to Farmington, Arkansas, where they had relatives. Later she married a Farmington blacksmith, John H. Sidwell. Mr. Sidwell also operated a general store and the post office located in the building which still stands (1987) on the southwest corner of Bois d'arc and Main Street in Farmington.

When Mollie died on 9 December 1924, she was survived by her son George S. Rogers, and five children of her second marriage: Jess L. Sidwell of Fayetteville; Bess Sidwell Bockhold of Winfred, Kansas; Robbie Sidwell Rogers of Tulsa; Helen Sidwell Wilson of Farmington; and May Sidwell Newsom.

William A. Rogers is buried at Temple, Texas. His mother, Lucy, is buried in an unmarked grave in Rieff's Chapel Cemetery located on the side of Kessler Mountain. Mollie Barnett Rogers Sidwell is buried in the Farmington Cemetery.

William Rader Rogers

William Rader Rogers, first child of George Spencer Rogers and Mary Alice Rader Rogers, "Mayme", was born December 7, 1906, in Fayetteville, Arkansas, at the Rader Hotel, owned by his grandparents, Elbert Joseph Rader and Nancy Mary Beal Rader. (see related histories) Bill, as he was called, attended Washington Grammar School and Fayetteville High School. He played football in high school, with only eleven on the team, no offensive or defensive strings, and one helmet to pass around.

Olga White and Bill Rogers - 1925

For entertainment, the boys held contests to see who would be first to go swimming in the White River in the spring, sometimes breaking the ice to be first, and they staged gun fights in the woods on the way home from school. They kept bowls and a jar of sugar in a cave in Shelton's Bluff, so when they swiped strawberries, they could eat them in style. He chiseled his name in the bluff, and if the developers haven't destroyed it, it's probably still there. When a blonde, blue-eyed girl name Olga transferred to Fayetteville High School from McAlester, Oklahoma, he was the black-haired boy in khakis who stood up and said, "Let's give three cheers for the new blondie, boys!"

After graduation from high school in 1924, Bill went to the University of Arkansas for a year before having to find full-time work. He started working at the post office in December, 1925, promising himself that someday he would get his college degree. He kept that promise, and graduated from the University in 1965 with a degree in business - after 35 years in the Postal Service, and 38 years in the National Guard and Army Reserve, including seven years extended active duty in the World War II period, retiring as a Colonel.

On October 9, 1927, William Rader Rogers and Olga Agatha White were married in Siloam Springs, Arkansas. (See White, James Curtis). Another couple went with them as witnesses, and were also married at the same time. Bill loaned them the money for the license and other expenses, and is still waiting to be repaid.

Olga Rogers with Patricia and Janis - 1940

Bill and Olga moved into a new little brick house on Lafayette Street where their first child, Patricia Nan Rogers, was born October 27, 1930. The depression years came and they lost their little house, and moved into a yellow brick house at 108 North East Street, in the same block where the Rader Hotel had been. On October 21, 1936, their second child, Mary Janis Rogers was born. In January 1941, Bill was called to active duty, and the family moved to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, where William Weston Rogers was born June 7, 1941, six months before Pearl Harbor Day. After World War II, the family moved back to Fayetteville, and built a house at 500 Vinson Street, on the little road built by George Spencer Rogers when he built his house up there in 1915. This remained the family home until it was sold in 1986.

Patricia started and finished school in Fayetteville, attending numerous grade schools and four high schools in the interim. In May 1951, she graduated from the University of Arkansas with majors in Spanish and Library Science. Patricia Nan Rogers and John Cannon Doan were married in the Methodist Church on April 2, 1950. John Cannon was born July 16, 1924 in Memphis, Tennessee, the son of Henry Cannon Doan and Mary Catherine Rauch Doan. Having served in the 14th Air Force in World War II in the China-Burma-India Theatre, he was attending the University of Arkansas on the GI Bill when he and Patricia met on a fraternity hayride. After living two years in Prairie Grove, the couple moved to Okmulgee, Oklahoma, where Henry Cannon Doan had purchased a Buick dealership. Patricia Rogers Doan and John Cannon Doan are the parents of three children: William Curtis Doan, born in the old City Hospital in Fayetteville, April 13, 1952; Sarah Cannon Doan, born September 2, 1955; and Mary Virginia Doan, born August 2, 1960 - both in Okmulgee. Curtis graduated from Kemper Military Academy in 1970. Unmarried, he lives in Okmulgee where he rebuilds player pianos and tunes pianos. Sarah Cannon Doan earned a Bachelor of Architecture Degree from the University of Arkansas in 1979. She married Christopher Paul Baker of Charleston, Arkansas, on August 19, 1978. On February 10, 1981, they had a little girl, Leigh Renee Baker. Sarah and Chris are divorced, and she and Leigh live in Tulsa, where she is a freelance architectural delineator. Mary Virginia Doan graduated from Okmulgee High School in 1978, and attended the University of Arkansas for two years, majoring in music, before marrying Hugh Lee Gaston III on September 25, 1982. Mary and Lee are the parents of two sons, both born in Tulsa: Hugh Lee Gaston IV, born October 19, 1983; and John Rader Gaston, born January 16, 1986. Patricia and John Cannon still live in Okmulgee, where she has been the head librarian at the Okmulgee Public Library since 1967. John commutes to Tulsa where he has been affiliated with A. G. Edwards and Sons as a stockbroker since 1969.

Mary Janis Rogers attended Fayetteville Schools and the University of Arkansas. On June 7, 1957, she married Wylie James Parker. Wylie was born in Chicago, Illinois on November 23, 1935, the son of Paul Gwin Parker and Sylvia Camozzi Parker. The Parker family had bought a large farm near Lead Hill, Arkansas, and Wylie was studying Veterinary Science at the University when he and Janis met. Wylie and Janis are the parents of three children: Gregg Weston Parker, born July 17, 1958; Melanie Gwin Parker, born June 28, 1962; and Brooke Heather Parker, born June 19, 1962. Melanie married Charlie Cash, a Navy pilot, in 1982, and they live wherever the Navy says. The rest of the family live in Fayetteville, where Wylie works for Merrill Lynch, and Janis works for A. G. Edwards and Company.

William Weston Rogers began his education in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, finished high school at Kemper Military Academy, Boonville, Missouri, and graduated from the University of Arkansas with a degree in Business Administration. He married Gloria Rogene Mangum (Beidleman) on December 24, 1964 in Okmulgee. Gloria, or Dodie, as she is generally called, is the daughter of Raymond Dixon Mangum and Gloria McMaster Mangum. However, she was raised by her stepfather Henry M. Beidleman in the Beidleman family home just two doors from the Doans in Okmulgee. Weston and Dodie are the parents of three daughters: Lelie Denise Rogers, born April 2, 1967; Tracie Suzanne Rogers, born July 26, 1969; Emily Jeanette Rogers, born August 23, 1970; and a son, William Andrew Rogers, born May 13, 1983. They also live in Fayetteville, where Weston, retired from the Navy reserve, is affiliated with A. G. Edwards Company.

Olga White Rogers died January 8, 1984 in Fayetteville. Bill Rogers still trades guns now and then, and frequently takes Winnebago trips, but he moved off of Mt. Sequoyah in August 1986 after seventy-one years, and now lives in Bella Vista, Arkansas.

Nancy Anna Roland

Leaner (Jones) Weber, born May 27, 1864, Alabama, daughter of Thomas, born in Georgia and Nancy Anna Jones, born in North Carolina, married circa 1885 to? Weber, born in Arkansas; children: last five born at Dutch Mills, Washington County, Arkansas: Almonyine (Allie), born November, 1886 in Alabama; Nancy Anna, known as Annie, born May 9, 1888, died May 8, 1968 Bakersfield, Calfornia; Martain, born December, 1891; Henry, born March, 1893; John, born June 3, 1895; Minnie, born April, 1899. It is understood that the Weber/Webber family came from Germany settling at Dutch Mills, Washington County, Arkansas, in the mid-nineteenth century. It is assumed that Leaner and her husband married and lived in Alabama about 2 years. Leaner was a widow by 1900 and living at Dutch Mills near her in-laws. It is believed she lived with her second child, Annie, at the time of her death as she is buried at Molly Field Cemetery, Cherokee County, Oklahoma.

Annie Weber married about 1906-1907 in Stilwell, Oklahoma, to Robert Cleveland Roland, born 1884, son of Jason/James and Caldona Elizabeth Roland, died 1961 in Stilwell, Oklahoma; four children: Kepthel Elizabeth, born October 3, 1908, married Fred Ray, 1 son - Michael; Robert James (Bud), born February 17, 1912, married Florence (Floss) Snodgrass, four children - Sarah Lou, Nolda, Nancy and Robert Cleveland; Clarence Leon, born September 14, 1913 in Fort Smith, Arkansas, died February 7, 1973 in Fresno, California, interred at Arvin, California, two sons; and Inez Elouise, born June 30, 1918, married first to William (Bill) Swearington, five children - Judy, Ramona, Paula, Billy and Douglas, married second to Richard Bustamante, no issue. Caldona Elizabeth Roland, married second to Matthew Clay; four children - Bill Barnet, Jim, Ellvie and Jeff. Robert Cleveland Roland never took the name Clay.

Clarence Leon Roland married September 4, 1934 in Stilwell, Oklahoma, to Audra Bell Hobbs, born September 28, 1917 in Scraper, Oklahoma, daughter of Moses Swimmer and Malinda Jane (Janie Turner) Hobbs; 2 sons, Bobby Ancil, born August 7, 1935 in Scraper, Oklahoma and Philip Leon, born September 9, 1946 in Tahlequah, Oklahoma, married January 27, 1968 in California, to Teri Prosser, born September 23, 1946 in California, 2 children - Courtney Renee, born November 13, 1976 in Hayward, California and Matthew Grant, born November 18, 1978 in Fresno, California.

Bobby Ancil Roland was delivered at home by his maternal grandmother, Janie (Turner) Hobbs, with his father, Clarence Leon Roland, assisting. The doctor slept through the delivery on a nearby chair. Bob grew up on a farm and when his family moved to Arvin, California, they continued to work on the farms. In 1954, when Bob entered the United States Air Force, he was known as Bob and would answer only to that name. He served 23 years moving about the United States, Japan, Thailand and Vietnam where he earned the Bronze Star among many other medals. Bob married October 2, 1955 at 5 p. m. in Syracuse, New York to Myrna Sybil Katzen, born September 21, 1935 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, daughter of Morris (born September 22, 1903 in Pennsylvania, died June 6, 1964 in Pennsylvania) and Freda Edith (Lyon) Katzen (born August 28, 1908 in Pennsylvania); three children: Rachel Melinda, born March 22, 1959 at Yuma, Arizona, died in a car accident June 6, 1978 west of Barstow, California, buried at Woodlawn Cemetery, Las Vegas, Nevada, no issue; Louise Gail, born October 3, 1960 Tampa, Florida; and David Andrew, October 8, 1963 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Louise Gail Roland, married April 27, 1980 in Las Vegas, Nevada, to Ronald Wyatt Chedester, born March 10, 1958 at St. Petersburg, Florida, 2 children were born at Gorgas United States Army Hospital, Republic of Panama (Canal Zone) - Melinda Raye, born September 2, 1982, and Justin Arlin, born September 26, 1984. Ron is the son of John Darwin (Perch) and Arlene Martha (Webb) Chidester.

There is a continued yearning for the Washington County, Arkansas, and Cherokee County, Oklahoma, areas as there are family members returning on visits and a few migrated back to be with relatives still living in the areas. There are many memories that have been passed down to the grandchildren and the desire to be part of their ancestors' heritage.

Phillip Rose

As the story goes, unconfirmed as it may be, there was a family of nobility named Rose which was exiled from England to Holland in the 1600s. Some of these Roses immigrated to the American colonies in the 1700s, and from this lineage came a certain Phillip Rose b. 1780 in Pennsylvania, d. 1855 Ohio. Phillip married a woman named Ruth Talkington, born 1785, died 1875 Ohio. Ruth's mother was a white woman, but her father was said to have been the chief of the Miami Indian Tribe.

Ruth and Phillip moved to the fringes of civilization, which at that time was the frontier area of Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, at Laurel Hill. Later, Phillip's work as a traveling minister led him to the open lands in Ohio, where in 1808 he claimed a place for his own. Ruth and Phillip's nine children were said to have had no playmates other than Indian children during their early years, and they lived in peace with their native American neighbors. Their oldest daughter, Sarah (born 8/4/1804), married Abraham Lacy Rose in Franklin County, Ohio, on May 13, 1821. Abraham Rose's family apparently is no relation to the Phillip Rose family.

Abraham Lacy Rose served in the War of 1812, as evidenced by the old War Invalid Files (#175559 in the National Archives). He received land bounty for his service, and his discharge papers show he was age 21, 5'3" tall, of light complexion with dark hair and hazel eyes. He was the son of Cornelius and Sara. An older ancestor of Abraham, Aaron Rose, took part in the Revolutionary and French Wars. He also served as an aide to Washington, who was at that time a colonel under General Braddock during the French and Indian War of 1755. Braddock met his defeat at Fort Duquesne, now known as Pittsburgh, and the survivors were brought to safety by Colonel Washington.

Sarah and Abraham Rose (b. 11/17/1794) Seneca Falls, New York, d. 7/8/1870 Marion County, Ohio) had ten children. The seventh child, Ezekial (b. 11/4/1835 Noble County, Indiana, d. 8/28/1900 Minter, Texas) married Rachel Stubbs (b. 4/1/1838 Belmont, Ohio, d. 6/12/1902 Minter, Texas). (Rachael's parents were Mary Rice and Iddo Stubbs).

Rachael and Ezekial Rose had nine children, the fifth one a daughter named Linna May. She is known to have been born May 25, 1866, in Marion County, Iowa, but by the time she reached late adolescense, the family had moved to southern Washington County, Arkansas, probably following the work which was available from the advancement of the railroad. There is an old Rose homestead still inhabited by a Rose descendant out east of Winslow, near the Sunset community, but I did not research this part of the family. Many Roses live in Washington County at this time.

The background of the Pitts family has not been researched any farther back than around 1800. It is known that Levi Pitts, (b. 1813 in Tennessee, d. 1865), was listed in the 1840 census at Clarksville, Arkansas, and was a wagon maker by trade. His background in Tennessee is undetermined, however, since there were many Levi Pittses shown in Tennessee during that time period. Levi had married Elizabeth MacDonald (b. 1816 Tennessee, d. 1884, buried at Brentwood Cemetery, near Winslow) and had several children. Their son Charles, b. 4/15/1857 in Johnson County, Arkansas, came to the Winslow area to work on the railroad, using his team and wagons to haul rock and earth from the excavation site of the Winslow Railroad Tunnel. He came with his new wife and his recently widowed mother. After arriving in Washington County, his wife gave birth to a daughter, then both the wife and child died. They are also buried at the Brentwood Cemetery, near the grave of his mother. After these deaths, Charles MacDonald Pitts met and later married Linna May Rose, on June 20, 1884. The Rose family was living in the town of West Fork at that time. Charles and Linna May lived near Winslow for a time, then moved to Madison County, then to Texas, then back to Odell (near Morrow) in Washington County. Their nine children remained largely in Washington County, where the sons took up their father's combined trades of carpentry, blacksmithing and stonemasonry. Pieces of their building work still stands in and around the Morrow area of southern-western Washington County.

This history, as traced through other sections in this volume under the name of Reeder and West, merges and culminates in the next section Pitts, in the marriage of Nora Eleanor West to Charles William Pitts. These were the paternal grandparents of the author, G. Denele Campbell, maiden name Pitts.

Allen Gregg Ross

Henry Ross, born in Ireland, came to America in 1750 at age six. He grew up in Guilford County, North Carolina. He married a Miss Mitchell, and they had three sons, Allen born in 1779; James in 1781 and George in 1783; and a daughter Hannah in 1784, who married John Rieff, and they settled in Washington County, Arkansas as pioneers. In the Revolutionary War, Henry was guarding prisoners, when the Battle of Guilford Courthouse was fought.

Allen and his brothers, and their brother-in-law John Rieff, served under General Jackson, in the Indian Creek Wars, in 1813. Allen married three times and had eleven children. His last son was to his marriage to Margaret Taylor, Fountain Pittman Ross. He was born in 1836, in Wilson County, Tennessee; where they had acquired property and moved in the 1830s.

Fountain served in the Confederate States Army 1861-1864; and the Union Army late in 1864 until the end of the conflict. He met his wife, Louisa, from Georgia, probably while serving in the Army. Their first son was John Kelly, born in 1869 in Tennessee, they then moved to Washington County, Arkansas. Another son, George was born in 1871 and two girls followed Margaret in 1875 and Susan in 1877. Louisa died some time in the 1880s and must be buried in the Sharpe Cemetery, south of Prairie Grove. Fountain married Margaret McLothlin and Allen Gregg was born on April 24, 1889.

Allen Gregg (known as Gregg), probably attended New Sulphur School but quit when his father died in 1902, and is buried in Sharpe Cemetery. He went to work and helped support his mother, and she lived with him until her death in 1927; she is buried in Prairie Grove Cemetery. He worked at Southern Mercantile Store, in Prairie Grove, and was allowed to also do trading in livestock on his own. He had several trading partners over the years, and they traded in cattle, horses and hogs.

In 1912, he eloped with Ailsie Deane Simpson, daughter of John and Cora Wilson Simpson, of the Illinois Chapel Community. Deane was born January 18, 1898, and she and Gregg married in December 18, 1912. A friend of Gregg's, Joe King helped Deane out the window, and they eloped to Vinita, Oklahoma; she had written 16 on a piece of paper and placed in her shoe, so when she was asked if she was over 16, she said she was. They made their home in Prairie Grove, and two sons were born, Clyde Allen on September 9, 1914 and John Fount on April 8, 1917.

Needing more acreage for his trading business, Gregg along with his partner, Bert Pyeatt, purchased 120 acres at Farmington; besides trading in livestock, they branched out into farming, raising grain, hay and strawberries. Gregg built a home on the property, Deane developed cancer and was ill for quite some time and passed away on June 15, 1919, and was buried in Prairie Grove Cemetery. Bert sold out his partnership to Herman Zellner, owner of Southern Mercantile Store. After the death of Deane, Gregg sold his partnership to Mr. Zellner, also.

In 1921, Gregg married for the second time, Maude Annette Cannon, of the Mount Comfort Community, Maude was born March 19, 1896, to William and Fayre Maude Cannon. While still living at Farmington, twin daughters were born on January 13, 1922, Maxine Margaret and Mary Sevarine.

Another move was made, when Gregg purchased the Simpson farm of 140 acres, 100 acres on Illinois River and 40 acres on Stevenson Mountain. He continued in the livestock business and raised corn, oats, hay and strawberries. Butchering and peddling meat in Prairie Grove and vicinity. Clearing the mountain forty, he made railroad ties, and cutting and selling stove wood, which was the job of the two older boys.

Willa Annette was born on December 10, 1923 — Gregg Eugene on March 14, 1925, served in the CCCs at Devil's Den, U. S. Marine Corps in World War II, after the war joined the Army then the Air Force; he died in October 26, 1964 and is buried at Prairie Grove. Henry Everrett was born on September 27, 1926, he served in the Army during the Korean conflict. Leroy was born September 12, 1929. There followed four girls; Geraldene born July 5, 1931 — Fayre Jane on December 7, 1932 — Marjorie Sue, on December 15, 1934, the same day that her oldest brother, Clyde and Melba Deane White, who lived between Illinois Chapel and Prairie Grove, got married. Fount left home and went to California, early in 1935, and joined the CCCs. On August 5, 1936 Virginia Darene arrived and completed the Ross household.

In 1937, times were rough, Gregg decided to make another move, and traded his farm at Illinois Chapel, for a farm in Evansville. He raised tomatoes, beans, hay and continued to do some trading. He served on the schoolboard, and was responsible for the construction of a new school building.

World War II was on, and Gregg decided to join Clyde, Fount, Maxine, Henry and Eugene and headed west to do his part in the war effort, working in the shipyard, building Liberty Ships. After a year he came back to Evansville, and sold the farm, and the fall of 1944 moved the family to Richmond, California. After the end of the war, they moved temporarily to Campbell, before purchasing a dairy at Watsonville, where they milked cows until 1952 when the dairy was sold. He retired to Marysville on a small farm and traded in a small way until his death in 1957 from cancer; he is buried in Sierra View Cemetery, in Marysville. In 1969, his wife Maude Annette joined him, and is buried beside him.

In 1987, there are eleven of Gregg's children still living, thirty-five grandchildren and several great and a few great- great grandchildren. Two of Gregg's children are residents of Washington County; Clyde lives in Prairie Grove and Fay Phillips lives in Lincoln.

Irvin Rothrock

Irvin R. Rothrock was 37 years old in 1909 when a chronically itching foot led him to northwest Arkansas. Although established and successful, he decided to change careers and move from Baltimore to an apple farm near Springdale. After several years working as an industrial chemist for Armour Company and becoming chief of his division, a Saturday Evening Post article about apple farming in Arkansas attracted his fancy. He travelled by train to Fayetteville, met with realtors, agreed to purchase a former dairy farm, took soil samples back to his laboratory in Maryland. These were analyzed. He then formulated a special fertilizer to assist in apple production and shipped two rail carloads of the concoction to Johnson Switch.

I.R.ROTHROCK

Candidate for COUNTY and PROBATE

JUDGE

Democratic Primary August 11th, 1936

In asking the Democratic voters of Washington Coun y for their support in my candidacy for the position of County and Probate Judge, I pledge my every effort to an honest administration of affairs connected with the welfare of the people as a whole. My actions and attitude will at all times be free from discrimination and political prejudices.

I realize that strict economy in disbursing county funds is the only means of placing and keeping the county on a sound financial basis.

We cannot afford to deny ourselves the advantages for which government itself exists. We desire better governmental facilities as a matter of e. l created by progress. Many other services for which you pay are worth while and shou d be continued. This can be accomplished only by demanding that we get full value in ervice for each dollar spent for that purpose.

His background provided questionable preparation fo such a move. He was raised on a small wheat farm near Lawrence, Kansas. While supporting himself with part-time work and playing varsity football, he graduated from University of Kansas with a Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts in chemistry. He then held positions as an industrial chemist in Burside, Louisiana, Chicago and Baltimore. Before moving, his most intimate association with an apple tree was in the Saturday Evening Post article.

After shipping the fertilizer he next dispatched his wife Anna, (formerly Michael Anna Thomas of Pennsylvania) his thirteen-year-old son, Thomas and his wife's sister, Jeannette to Johnson Switch. They arrived in April and hired a buggy to take them to the farm approximately 2.5 miles northwest of Johnson. Irvin wisely stayed in Baltimore to complete his contract with Armour while the women and lad, with the assistance of hired help, made preparations for raising the first crop of apples.

I. R. or "Judge" Rothrock did move to Arkansas in July 1909 where he died fifty years later at age 86. He was a failed pig farmer, had lost several shirts in the food processing business, but was very good at growing apples and grapes. He also was an important political figure serving four years in the State Legislature and eight years as Washington County Judge. Among other honors he was named as Master Farmer of Arkansas. And, he was for many years chairman of the Arkansas State Plant Board and president of a Farmers Mutual Insurance Company. Being of frugal pioneer stock Irvin R. took to his grave the answer to the mystery of the "R" in his signature. The family often speculated that he invented the "R" because "I. R. Rothrock" looked much better on political posters and produce trucks than "I. Rothrock" or "I. B. Rothrock" which he had used earlier.

Anyway, the Judge's son and only child, Thomas, adopted Arkansas as a permanent home. He volunteered for the Army the day war was declared in 1917, saw a lot of bloody combat in France and returned to the United States to complete a Horticulture degree from Kansas A & M in 1922. In 1924 he married Ola Jane Stephenson, former school teacher whose family had lived for generations in Stone County. Ola, however, had left Timbo, graduated from the University of Arkansas with a major in English and taught in Arkansas, Kansas, North Dakota and New Mexico. She met Thomas during a camping trip after returning to the U. of A. to complete a graduate degree. Instead, she had children: 1926, Irvin Andrew; 1928, Thomas Stephenson; 1933, Richard Ricord. And, in 1935 she and Tom built a house which has now been designated as "2601 South Oak Grove Road, Springdale" and which is still owned by the family.

In 1949 both Ola, 55, and Michael Anna, 80, died. Both had lead most active lives in community and church affairs. The loss of their influences and contributions was felt by the surrounding neighborhoods for a number of years.

In 1951 Thomas married a former high school sweetheart (Class of 1922), Velma (Hedges) Smith. In 1952 the eldest son, Irvin, married Juanita Light. They, in turn, had three sons: 1957, I. A. Junior (Rocky); 1959, James Thomas (Kimo); 1961, William Richard. This union eventually dissolved and Irvin married Anne Burke in 1976. They had two children: 1977, Thomas E. Burke (Teb) and 1979, Michelanne.

Meanwhile, the brothers were similarly occupied. Thomas S. (Steve) married Eleanor Griffin in 1954. Two children resulted, Martha Lea, 1960 and Andrew McCrea, 1962. Richard married Janice Jurgens in 1960. Michael Thomas was born in 1966 and Megan Hadley in 1972.

Only one of Thomas and Ola's (the Judge's great) grandchildren, Kimo, has contracted a state of matrimony. He and Kimberly Barr were married in 1986 and live in Florida.

Several years before he died in 1975, Thomas retired from fruit growing and sold most of his property. Like his father, he was very successful in growing apples and grapes. He had been instrumental in introducing the Fredonia grape to the region and had held several offices in State Horticultural organizations. Always interested in literature and writing while farming to support the family, he had authored books for teenagers such as Soldier, This is War, based on his experiences in World War I and serialized in The Open Roads for Boys and Abilene or Bust, a tale of the first cross-country cattle drive. After retirement he became an active and enthusiastic amateur historian, contributing many articles to Flashback and The Arkansas State Historial Quarterly. He also published books on local history. Two of his subjects were the early times of the Arkansas Gazette and a history of the University of Arkansas's Old Main. The latter was printed as a special issue of the Arkansas State Historial Quarterly.

Tom and Ola's sons occasionally use the family home on South Oak Grove Road although none of them legally reside in Washington County. Irvin manages and practices in a psychiatric clinic in Fairbanks, Alaska. Steve, following his grandfather's early interests, is a research chemist for Monsanto in Saint Louis. And, Richard is a university professor in northern California. The brothers return to Arkansas quite frequently, though. They visit Velma who still lives in Johnson. They and their children regard the hills of Washington County as home for the family.

John Henry Wood Ruble

Peter Ruble I was born in Bavaria, Germany and arrived in the USA September 11, 1738. He "took up" 140 + acres in Cordorus Township, York County Pennsylvania. He died in April 1773 having fathered 4 sons: Christian, Mathias and Peter II, a blacksmith (1744-1838), who married Catherine Wirt (1744-1834)—daughter of Anna and Henry Wirt who also immigrated from Oberdort Germany in 1739. Fourth son Abraham, frail and disabled, died young. Around 1798 the Rubles (sometimes spelled Rubel) and Wirts, all moved to Washington County, Tennessee to a farm on Cherokee Creek (except married daughter Barbara). Peter II and Catherine had 11 children and these offspring had from 7 to 13 children each- except Susan and Magdalena who died young. Fourth child Henry (1776-1858) married Barbara Hunter (1798-1858) and they had 12 children, 2 of whom were preachers—one being #5 John Henry Ruble (1808-1836) whose namesake nephew John Henry Wood Ruble (1858-1939) was also a Methodist Minister.

Jacob Oliver Ross Ruble (1826-1905), married Melvina Scott (1830-). Both were born in Tennessee and died at Bellefont, Arkansas in Boone County having migrated there around 1853. They had 8 children-(5 sons). On February 18, 1862, "Ross" Ruble was mustered into the 27th Arkansas Infantry Regiment at age 36. He was elected Captain of Regiment "C" one month later. After the war a camp of Confederate Vets at Bellefont, was named "Ross Ruble Camp".

Ross's fifth son Rev. John Henry Wood Ruble (1858-1939) married Dortha Ann Harris (1857-1929) daughter of Regina Howard and William Harris when both were 18-January 13, 1876 at Bellefont, Arkansas and like their parents before them are buried in the Bellefont Cemetery. Dortha Ann and "Uncle John" (as he was lovingly known by his congregations all over northwest Arkansas) had 12 children-9 daughters and 3 sons. Only one son lived beyond childhood (John) Hughey Ruble (1/9/1858-1/10/1874) who (when J. H. Ruble was Methodist Minister at Pea Ridge) married (1/15/1921) Reba Ricketts -daughter of Ezra Elden Ricketts and Lydia Ruth Harris of Pea Ridge. They had 2 daughters Dortha Jo Ruble (Mrs. William Imler) of Fayetteville whose son Danny has 3 children and lives in Cleveland, Ohio and Ruth Elden Yates (Mrs. William Yates) who retired to Bentonville from San Antonio, Texas in 1983. John Hughey and Reba divorced in 1927 and Hughey moved to California where he was in the 1933 San Franciso earthquake. He was a movie stuntman and later lived in Apple Valley and then Victorville where he ranched and trained horses till his death in 1974.

Rev. Ruble's son Roy Burns lived 1 year and Ernest Merrill only reached 4. Florence Melinda (Mills), Mary Ida (Holmes), Minnie Carlee (Griggs), Nola Anthem (Albright), Laura Melvina (Koen), Virgie Amelia (Hastings), Willie Myrtle who married Dr. Onus York at 16 and went by wagon train to Canada never to return to the states. They had 3 children and she died at 21 years of age. Alma Artelia (Davis), Millie Mae (Helstern) and John Hughey Ruble.

When Rev. J. H. Ruble was sent as "circuit riding preacher" to Elm Springs, Washington County around 1910, Ernest Dexter Helstern was layleader of the Methodist Church and had 2 children, Nolan (12/29/1892-9/12/1985) and Idena. Most of the 12 Ruble children were grown and gone from home by that time, but Mae (one of the 2 youngest) was still at home and quickly became a lifelong friend of Idena who introduced her to her brother boarding in Springdale, Arkansas and going to school. Nolan graduated as valedictorian and attended Kansas City Western Dental College and returned to open his office in Elm Springs and Rogers (both in Arkansas). On September 26, 1917, he married his childhood sweetheart (the preacher's daughter, Mae) and moved to Springdale, Arkansas (after serving in the World War I army) where daughter Mary Anna was born (3/23/1924). In 1931, they moved to Fayetteville.

After the death of Dortha Ann in Keebler, Arkansas in 1929, Rev. John Henry Ruble moved in with his youngest daughter, Mae Helstern and her family. He died there 1/27/1934.

Rev J. H. Ruble served as pastor to Lead Hill, Tucks Chapel, Brightwater, Oakley Chapel, Cane Hill, Lincoln, Keebler, Pea Ridge among other country churches. Upon his death The Arkansas Methodist publication eulogized him as "one of God's nobleman and no man in the North Arkansas Conference was more highly respected and appreciated. . .His personal life was beautiful in devotion, victorious in its faith and genuine in its consecration."

Mary Anna Helstern graduated from Fayetteville High School and attended the University of Arkansas (getting a Fine Arts Degree) where she met Robert L. Jones (3/3/1924) son of Elsie Faye Oliver and Charles Robinson Jones of Neosho, Missouri. World War II sent Robert to the Air Force where he was a pilot in the South Pacific. On 3/4/1945, when Lt. Jones was home on leave they married. Bob got his degree in Business Administration. In 1951, they moved to Spokane, Washington where Bob worked for an oil company and daughter Melissa Lee was born 9/22/1952. In 1956 the Jones family moved to Mountain Home, Arkansas where daughter Lauriel Ann was born 9/30/1956. June of 1958 they moved to Cherokee Village, Arkansas where Robert went into Real Estate. Transferred to Bella Vista, Arkansas, the Jones opened their own Real Estate company in Bentonville, Arkansas in 1968.

Mae Ruble Helstern died suddenly 3/15/1969 after a very brief illness. Melissa Jones graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1974 and married 9/3/1974 Attorney Larry Garrett-(son of Hugh and Velma Garrett of Hope, Arkansas). They have a daughter Heather Brooke Garrett (born 6/12/1977) and all live in Bella Vista, Arkansas.

Nolan Helstern died 9/12/1985 having lived out his years in Fayetteville. He spent over 50 years as a dentist.

On 9/14/1985, Lauriel Ann Jones married James Ray Howard, son of Betty and Ray Howard, Jr., of Chesterfield, Missouri. Lauriel had attended the University of Arkansas and then got a Fashion Design Degree and worked in Dallas, Texas and Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Having returned to Bentonville in a new job, Lauriel met Jim Howard who had been transferred to Rogers, Arkansas from St. Louis, Missouri. They presently live in Stillwater, Oklahoma.

In 1987 there are none of the children of John Henry and Dortha Ann Ruble still living but numerous grandchildren and even great-great grandchildren live through-out the south.

This is a true and accurate account of the Ruble family history to the best of my knowledge and research.

George Ruben McGinnis and his parents came to Arkansas before the turn of the century on a wagon train that had originally been headed for Colorado. When the wagon train reached Arkansas, different families left the train in the northwest part of the state. It seemed that the land in this area was much more appealing than the longer journey to Colorado. The McGinnis families settled in Tontitown, Springdale and Huntsville.

George Ruben helped haul freight from the train depot in Springdale to Huntsville. He met Mittie Belle Sharp at a local cafe in Springdale where she was a waitress. They later married and moved to Huntsville. The youngest of their eleven children was Johnny George McGinnis, born November 15, 1915 in Huntsville. He went to school in a one room school house with, among others, Orville Faubus (later to become governor for the State of Arkansas) through the eighth grade, which was then the extent of primary and secondary education.

Johnny worked around Huntsville for a few years, sometimes catching a ride with the mail courier to the Springdale area to visit and help his brothers and sisters that lived there. He met Elsie Alyne Fritts when they were going to school together; she also lived local to Huntsville. They were married on January 17, 1936.

Elsie Alyne was born September 12, 1913 to Elijah Boone and Laura Fritts in Huntsville. Elijah Boone's family came to America from Austria. The original spelling of the family name was Fritz, and their history can be found in the Springdale Public Library because members of the current generation chronicled the family from Austria to America through Elijah Boone Fritts in a book titled The Fritts (Fritz) Family Volume I, 1979.

Johnny, Elsie and their children moved to Springdale in March of 1937. The reason for the move was that Johnny had gotten a job with George's Produce driving a truck for Charlie George. Having developed a liking for Springdale, Johnny later took a job working for Joe Robinson at Robinson's Produce to stay in the area. Tiring of driving as a profession, Johnny trained as a diesel mechanic and again changed employers. He went to work for John Tyson, then the president of Tyson's Pride, and later retired from Cawood Produce. He remained a resident of Springdale until his death, December 26, 1981.

Two weeks before moving to Springdale, Johnny and Elsie's third child, Shirley Jean, was born (March 1, 1937). She went to school at Washington Elementary located on Emma Avenue. Her first grade teacher was Miss Helen Woods. Shirley married Herschel Ray Rush in 1953 and their son, Johnny Allen, was born November 1, 1954 at the Springdale Memorial Hospital. They divorced soon after John's birth. Shirley remained a resident of Washington County until she married Wesley Gale Sauerbry in 1968 and moved to Pea Ridge, Arkansas where they still live.

Johnny Allen (John) first attended school at Central Elementary in the fall of 1960, attending Robert E. Lee Elementary from the second grade through the sixth. He later attended Central and Southwest Junior High Schools. The former, when it was located on Emma Avenue across from the high school in Springdale. He was a student at Southwest Junior High the year it first opened.

"I can remember going through those doors for the first time, the excitement of entering a place that was built for me (and a few hundred other kids); everything was brand new."

One of the first things he did was get involved in a money raising program to buy a stuffed cougar for the school mascot. "We all happily made and/or sold ceramic ashtrays with the figure of a snarling cougar on them." That mascot is still in the school lobby today.

John went on to high school at Pea Ridge High School and graduated in 1972. He then moved back to Springdale. In 1975, he met Deborah Joane Files at, what was then the local teenage hangout, the Sonic on Highway 68 West.

D. J. (which she picked up in high school due to a science class that had too many Debbies and it stuck) was born in Ontario, California on November 8, 1956. Her parents were George Jackson Files and Retha Mae Allen. She visited the Springdale area every summer since 1968. After her mother passed away in 1973, she stayed here and graduated from Springdale High School at mid-semester. She went on to college at Oklahoma City Southwestern College in Oklahoma. She moved back to Springdale in 1975 and attended the University of Arkansas. On July 23, 1976 John and D. J. were married in Fayetteville, Arkansas and made their home in Springdale.

John worked at a couple of different construction type companies until going to work for McClinton Brothers in May of 1978. He started out driving a haul truck at the West Fork pit and has now moved on to being a computer scale operator at the West Fork operation.

D. J. works for the First United Methodist Church of Springdale as a Secretary. On March 18, 1987, their daughter, Arin Elise was born at the Springdale Memorial Hospital.

James Herman Rusher

The James Rusher family are relative newcomers to Washington County. They moved here to the Viney Grove Community in late 1957 from Rockford, Illinois. Both parents were employed there at National Lock Company.

James Herman Rusher was born in Clarksville, Arkansas in 1919, the son of Roger (b. 1884) and Myrtel Carroll Rusher (b. 1893). He married Pauline Freeman (b. 1924) on May 22, 1943 in Russellville. She was also from Clarksville, the daughter of Emmit Dee Freeman (b. 1905) and Edith May Russell (b. 1905). They have two daughters, both born in Clarksville, Linda Gail born in 1944 and Anna Karen born in 1946.

The Rushers discovered Washington County while passing thru from Rogers to Clarksville while visiting relatives. They first milked cows, brought from Illinois, on a rented farm. They sold the Holstein cows and purchased a beef farm nearby. They later built broiler houses.

Both girls went to school at Prairie Grove and church at Viney Grove.

After retirement Jim and Pauline moved first to Evansville and then to Sulphur City. Jim has a team of Belgian draft horses which he does farm work with and enjoys pulling the stagecoach and driving his restored wagon in parades. Pauline enjoys working in the garden and with her flowers.

Anna married Gary Kruse and they have one daughter Karen Lynn, born 1963.

Linda married Thomas Howard Pearson (b. 1939), shortly after her graduation from Prairie Grove High School in 1962. They were married May 24 in Miami, Oklahoma. They have three children: Randy Lee, b. 1963; Paula Gail, b. 1967; and John David, b. 1968. They lived first in the Pearson rent house in Bethel Grove, then in Viney Grove, then bought a farm in Prairie View where they live today.

The three Pearson children graduated from Prairie Grove schools where they attended from kindergarten. Randy attended Vo-Tech in Okmulgee, Oklahoma for two semesters and now lives in Elkins, Arkansas. Paula is a junior at the University of Arkansas in Agriculture Education. David plans a tour in the Army. All three have been active in 4-H receiving State Teen Star Awards and being named State 4-H Recordbook winners. Paula was also a National Recordbook winner in sheep and received the American Farmer Degree in FFA.

The entire family is proud of its agricultural heritage and has worked long hours on their farm with Linda being left in charge while Thomas held a full time job also. They now own 255 acres in the same community that Thomas' ancestors have lived for the past 117 years. The farm joins both his grandfather Tiff Beeks' and his father John Pearson's home place across the Illinois River in Bethel Grove.

J. Thomas Rutherford

J. Thomas Rutherford born June 16, 1869 near West Fork descended from Robert Rutherford of Essex County, Virginia, who came from Scotland in 1621. J. Thomas married Mary Elizabeth Ross September 1, 1897. She was born August 8, 1874 Gainsville, Missouri. Their first home was that of a log cabin between West Fork and Greenland. Soon after the birth of James Adolph on June 19, 1898, their first child, they bought a farm west of Greenland. They grew apple, peach and cherry trees. They raised strawberries, melons, corn, wheat and oats. Though the family worked hard it often became necessary to hire pickers at harvest time, to whom they paid a penny per quart for strawberries. Fruit pickers were paid no more than a dollar a day.

The produce was sent to Kansas City and St. Louis by train and often did not bring enough to pay freight. Times were hard but they were hard workers and determined to manage. They continued with their small farm, buying fertilizer from the Kansas City stockyard, paying only the cost of shipment. The old manure spreader used by J. Thomas during those years is now 75 years old and is in possession of their youngest child, Vol Tom, who was born October 24, 1914.

Throughout the course of their marriage they bought other farms. One was south of Greenland, the other north of Greenland where the airport is located today.

When the menfolk were working, they were often miles from home. Elizabeth would cook up hot meals and take them to the men in her wagon. She would hold a pot of hot coffee in one hand and the reins in the other. The thrashers were well fed, for Elizabeth loved to cook. The hired thrashers liked working for the Rutherfords because she brought plenty of good food, which was shared.

J. Thomas owned an interest in the West Fork Bank. When it went bankrupt they lost all they had in the bank. During the time they owned the flour mill in Elkins they often received, for payment, part of the cornmeal or flour which they ground.

J. Thomas died August 28, 1938. He was buried the day of their 59th anniversary. Elizabeth died April 2, 1970. They are both buried in Baptist Ford, Greenland.

There were three other children born between Adolph and Vol. James Adolph married Nina Leslie Williams, they have three children, William Thomas, Helen and Jack.

Maude Mozell born April 19, 1908, married Lloyd Glover. She died May 9, 1978, buried Bayfield, Colorado. Mary Jane born February 16, 1910 married Jim Burns Trewhitt.

Vol attended school in Greenland. In 1931 he went to Colorado and was employed as a bridge carpenter for Denver, Rio Grande and Western Railroad. He went to Wyoming and leased a coal mine. He then went to work for Chrysler Corp. in Detroit, Michigan until 1941. At this time war broke out and he went into the service. He did active duty in Casablanca, North Africa, Sicily and Italy. He was awarded two battle stars. At the end of the war he was sent to St. Louis and discharged. He returned home and married Ada Marine Pense November 20, 1946.

They purchased a dairy, poultry and beef farm near Cane Hill, Arkansas. Vol was employed as a truck driver and shop foreman for Washington County. He was director of Ozarks Electric Co-Op for 33 years, a director for Arkansas State Elective. He served as President on both boards.

He and Ada, active in church and community affairs, both serve as deacons for the Cane Hill Presbyterian Church. She taught Sunday School for 30 years and is president of the church circle. Ada was employed with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Farm Service Co-Op, and John J. Carrol Co. She served on the board of directors for Washington County Welfare and Farmers Administrative. She serves as secretary of Cane Hill College Restoration Assoc.

They have one child, Donald Ray born September 1, 1947. He married Wanda Carte June 1, 1968, they have three children, Joseph Ray born May 14, 1972, twin girls Carla Kay and Darla Faye born July 6, 1974.

Jacob Rutherford

The Rutherford family probably came from England, an idea passed down in family history. In 1850, Jacob Rutherford, Ohio, married Mary Gumner of Illinois. One of their children was Wilson Oliver Rutherford (b. 1858 Illinois, d. 1916). Wilson married Rachael Manda Stowers and one of their children was Oscar Jefferson Rutherford, who later became an inventor and was recognized as a great creative genius, at one time being offered a management position over the engineering department at the new "Maxwell" factory, an automobile plant owned by Walter Chrysler.

He married Myrtle Carter (b. 1886 Iowa Points, Kansas, d. 1918) and they had Floyd, Walter and Opal Izella Irene Pauline Rutherford (b. 1909). Unfortunately, in the great influenza epidemic of 1918, his young wife died, and he was left with three small children to raise. He began travelling, wandering, and finally left Opal at the Sacred Heart Academy, taking his two sons on his travels.

Opal began working as a telephone operator after she finished at Sacred Heart (Helena). She met John Carl Campbell, who had graduated from high school and had begun work on the railway express in that area. They married in 1930 and travelled to Fayetteville on one of the last passenger runs of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad. John began work for his brother Everett Campbell at Campbell's Supermarket, earning $16 per week. Later John owned his own grocery, which still stands at 275 East Huntsville Street. John and Opal raised six children in Fayetteville.

Marcia b. 1931. Married Phil Steward, had Medina 1957, Scott 1959 and Felicia 1961. Family raised in Oklahoma.

Elaine b. 1933. Married Rodney Penell Smith, had Melissa Elaine 1954 and Rodney Penell III 1957. Family raised in Florida.

Lynda b. 1939. Married Ted Kaufman, had Keith Carl 1959, Brian 1961 and Christopher Lynn 1963. Ted took these children after their divorce. Lynda remarried Paul Nowlin and they had Paul David 1967, John Samuel 1969 and Jennifer 1971. They have changed their family name to Campbell, now residing in Chicago, Illinois.

Michael Jon Campbell b. 1943, d. January 31, 1987, buried Mineral Springs Cemetery near West Fork, Arkansas. Left his wife Cheryl Haentschke with their infant son Michael Jon Campbell II, born 1984.

Steve Carl b. 1945. Married Denele Pitts (see PITTS, CLARK) and had Deste Gem 1975, Jebediah Carl 1977 and Kadie Laine 1980, now residing in West Fork, Arkansas area.

Malcolm Rutherford "Ford" b. 1947. Married Penny Marshall and had Heather Elaine 1969. Remarried in 1985 to Madeleine Marchy of Chur, Switzerland and lives in Florida.

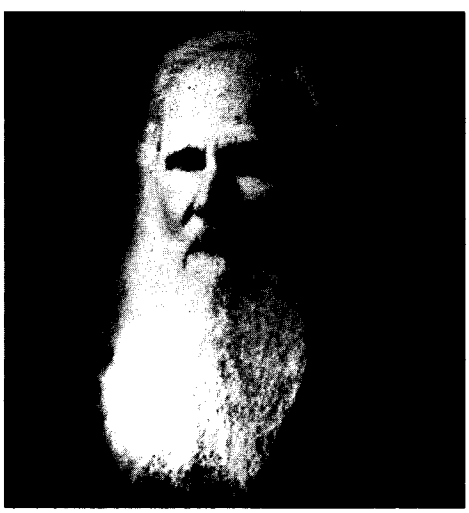
Joseph Robinson Rutherford

Joseph Robinson Rutherford was born February 24, 1826 in McMinn County, carved from the Hiwassee Purchase, now east Tennessee. Son of John M. and Alice (Young) Rutherford. John M. born in North Carolina and when a young man came to east Tennessee where he passed the remainder of his days. His death occured about 1855, Alice died around 1860.



Col. Joseph Robinson Rutherford

Joseph was reared in the vicinity of his birth. About the age of 21 went to Mexico and regularly enlisted in a company of U. S. troops. Fought in the years of 1846-1848 when treaty was signed. Pension #B 14 U. S. Infantry. After this eventful struggle he returned to his native state and attended school for some time. In 1850 married Louisia Eveline Pearce. His livelihood was farming which consisted of 200 acres.

Much migration was taking place and Joseph was no exception so October 1, 1850 he and Higdon, a brother-in-law, left for Missouri in search of land. In Ray County, Missouri, Joseph was commissioned to teach a subscription school but in the spring returned to McMinn County and the following year moved to Washington County where he and Wesley Pearce bought land at Sylvia. Wesley, a brother of Eveline and Alfred another brother, were selling Seth Thomas clocks. They had a contract with Seth Thomas in Plymouth Hollow, Maryland for Missouri and Arkansas, which was profitable.

Joseph with the help of slaves cleared land to farm using oxen as beasts of labor. Their first purchase was 80 acres for $450.00. Wesley also bought land in 1853 from Albert G. Rice estate of 481-1/2 acres. Land purchases of Joseph's: March 1, 1866 bought 290-1/2 acres for $800.00. March 22, 1861-sold land to W. H. Reah of Washington County 160 acres for consideration of $25.00. sold to the town of Bentonville lots #90: 90:94:95 for $1,250.00 where the third Court House was built.

There were four children born to this union: Alfred P., farmer: Lewis, farmer: Lenora, wife of Henry Wheeler Wright and Mary, wife of Joseph England. The mother of these children died in 1860, and October 2, 1862 Joseph Rutherford married Miss Tennessee P. Snodgrass, who was born in Tennessee and reared in Benton County, Arkansas. Four children were the fruits of this union, Elizabeth, wife of J. W. Hunton: William McIlroy, farmer: Simmie, wife of Zachary Thomas and Fannie A., wife of J. P. Farley. During the Civil War he was connected with the Federal Service. He commanded the militia in Phagan's attack on Fayetteville, and there suggested to General Harrison the idea of organizing those Federal inclinations, yet at home, into companies for mutual protection and for raising crops. Col. Rutherford was then permitted to raise the first company A-Arkansas Home Guard Militia. It was located at Rhea's Mill, in Washington County, where stockades were and crops raised, which saved northwest Arkansas from probable starvation during the years 1863-65. Headquarters house was the militia home. From this location he was permitted to buy rations from the Government for general provisions of the citizens. He was instructed on the work of investigating and reporting the actual conditions of the people and the necessary purchases to meet the emergencies. He received the surrender of several Confederate Companies under the instructions of Gen. Larue Harrison, at Union Valley.

After the war he sold goods and was postmaster at Cincinnati, Arkansas. The following year he returned to the farm located on Norwood Prairie, Benton County and was elected Circuit Clerk (1868-1872). The remainder of his life was spent on the farm at Trident, Arkansas and served as postmaster in his home. He died September 7, 1904 and is buried in the Norwood Cemetery located on the south side of the County line in Washington County.

Source of much of this material was taken from Goodspeed 1889 or film in Early History, Department of Mullins Library, University of Arkansas, donated by Bernice M. Freeze, a great grandaughter who is submitting this information. Lenora and Henry Wheeler Wright are my grandparents. They spent most of their life on Norwood Prairie where he was a most successful farmer and civic leader.

Four children were born to this union-Maurice, Ethel Barbara (October 5, 1888) Viola Pearl and Artie. All born on Norwood Prairie earlier called Strawberry Plains. Ethel Barbara at age 18 married William D. Brown age 25, and are the parents of Bernice M. Freeze.

Mary Elizabeth Rutherford

James Ross and his brother Tom were born in Scotland. They came to America with their parents when they were very young. Their parents worked for J & P Coats making thread in Scotland. After their move, J & P Coats erected a factory here. Mrs. Ross filled the first spool of thread ever filled in America. A member of the Ross family had beautiful long hair. Her hair caught in the machinery while filling spools, scalping her and killing her.

James married Gelinda J. Walker, a sister of John, Henry and Harriet Walker. James and Gelinda had five children, Bill, James R., Mary Elizabeth and Tom, whose twin was unnamed as he was born dead. Gelinda also died at this time in November 1876, on the Little North Fork between Hammond and Goober near Gainesville, Missouri. After a time James married a Mary. They had two sons, Renzy and Randolph. She was a wonderful mother to all the children and they all loved her. In search of better land they loaded their two wagons and headed west, James driving one team and Mary driving the other. They arrived in Oklahoma and had problems with the Indians.

The weather was so bad they decided to head toward Arkansas. Times were not good and the roads were bad. After entering Arkansas a great tragedy fell upon them. As they were going down a steep hill near Siloam Springs, Arkansas Mary fell off the wagon, the wheel ran over her killing her. The children witnessed their mother's death. What a horrible sight it must have been for them. She is buried near Siloam Springs near where she was killed.

With Bill and James taking over Mary's team and wagon James and the children journeyed on to Washington County and settled near Fayetteville. Elizabeth being the only girl, though very young, took on the job of caring for the home and younger children. She was so smal! she had to stand on a box to cook for her father and brothers. She tried making bread, but it wouldn't rise like it should. She asked a colored lady, who lived near by, what she had done wrong. The colored lady asked how she made it. Elizabeth told her she was certain she added enough soda. The colored lady said, "Lord have Mercy honey chile, you don't put sodie in light bread." She taught her how to make bread and did a good job, because Elizabeth could make bread better than anyone. She took much pride in her baking.

When Elizabeth was old enough for school, she was very excited. She started school but soon saw she could not attend school, cook, keep house and care for the younger children. She gave up school, which she dearly loved but not more than her father and brothers.

One time a wealthy family wanted to adopt Elizabeth. They could have given her an education and all the nice things a girl loves. She could have had an easier life. Her father agreed to this adoption for he knew how much it would mean to her. After a few days to think it over she immediately told them no. Asked why, she cried and said there would be no one to cook for her father and brothers. She continued to care for her father and brothers until she met and married J. Thomas Rutherford September 1, 1897.

Elizabeth, a good hard working Christian, was smart, witty beautiful and the best mother-in-law a girl could ask for. It would take a book to record all the bad, funny and good things that happened to her and her family. She told me many true stories. She was like a mother to her brothers, they often told her she was the only mother they could remember. She often said she raised two families.

I wouldn't take a million dollars for the memories I have of her. Hardly a day goes by that I don't see or do something that reminds me of her. She taught me almost as much as my own mother did. She was truly a wonderful person. I pray that I'm half as good a mother-in-law as she was.

Carrie Salverson

Carrie Salverson, born August 19, 1904 and her two brothers Charley, born December 7, 1898 and Thomas T., born January 5, 1903 came from New York to northwest Arkansas on an Orphan Train in 1912.

Carrie Littrell, Thomas T. Salverson, Lillian Heim, Charley Salverson on Lillian's first visit to Arkansas to be reunited with her brothers and sister after being separated as children in New York. Photo taken about 1926.

John, Belle and Tom Rollins in front of their house in Wheeler, Arkansas, about 1918. This is where Carrie Salverson was raised.

Their father Charles Salverson, was a ship carpenter from Norway. Their mother Matilda Johnson, from Finland. After their father's death in 1909, their mother put them into a Brooklyn school and home for destitute children with intentions of getting them back when her health improved. After her death in 1911, the children were transferred over to the Childrens Aid Society and sent west on an Orphan Train on January 30, 1912. Their sister Lillian, born April 1, 1900, remained in Brooklyn with an aunt, Henrietta Christensen. Lillian died November 3, 1964 in New York. She married Harry Heim. The Storey family from Aurora, Arkansas took Carrie and Charley. After about six months, Mr. Story took ill. When the next group of orphans came to Springdale they took them back to be replaced. Carrie and Charley, along with the other orphans were lined up around the walls in a big building so the people could view and pick which ones they wanted. Mr and Mrs. J. P. Moore from Springdale wanted Charley, but Carrie was hanging onto him and crying so hard, they took her also. Not wanting Carrie, after a couple of months they had Mr. P. C. Morgan to take her away while her brother Charley was gone from the house. Mr. Morgan worked for the Childrens Aid Society and was responsible for finding homes for the orphans. He came to get Carrie in a buggy and took her to Fayetteville with him where he had to be in court the next day. They stayed in the Mt. Inn Hotel and merchants from around there watched her and gave her gifts while he was in court.

Carrie finally ended up in a good home with John and Belle Rollins in the Wheeler Community, when Mr. Morgan and Carrie were on their way to his orphanage in the White Oak Community. It started raining, so he stopped at the Rollins' house to leave Carrie for the night. When he returned for her, the Rollins family asked to keep her because they had always wanted a daughter of their own. They had three sons, Ruben, Orville, and Tom.

Carrie's first year in Wheeler School (Sycamore) was in 1913. You can see the school from the old Rollins place. Some of the teachers boarded with the Rollins thru the years.

Carrie's brother, Thomas, was first taken in by Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Collins from Lowell. Thomas was beaten and sent to bed many nights without supper. They moved to Elk City, Oklahoma. One day they sent Thomas to a neighbors to spend the night and moved off and left him. Mrs. Collins had put a note in his pocket telling them who to contact in Arkansas. Mr. Morgan arranged for him to return by train. He stayed with the Rollins for awhile and was very happy to be with his sister Carrie. Walter Lee and Cora Bell Bruner from Robinson were friends of the Rollins family and they took Thomas and raised him in a very good home. They had three children, Maxine, Mervine, and Buck. Thomas first married Gertrude Brough. They had two children, Thomas James born July 11, 1927 and Douglas, born April 18, 1929. Second marriage, Roxidene Reed.

Charley grew to manhood with the Moores in Springdale and married Zelma Kendrick. They had one child, Charles Augusta, born January 11, 1922. Charles Salverson died June 4, 1973. Buried in Fairview Cemetery.

Carrie married Samuel Ray Littrell. They had three children, Virginia Lee, born May 19, 1924, Lilly May, born September 9, 1925, and Samuel Ray Jr., born February 20, 1944. Carrie and Ray met in church at Wheeler one night when Ray and his two brothers, Fred and Clarence came to sing. Carrie played the organ. Ray would ride his horse over to court Carrie and when they went to church at night, Belle Rollins would walk behind them with a lantern. They married, July 15, 1923 in Wheeler while sitting in the car in front of the J. P.'s house (John Hulse). They did not want to look suspicious by going inside since they thought at the time, Carrie was a year younger than she really was. They knew Mrs. Rollins would not give her consent before Carrie was eighteen.

Samuel Ray Littrell, born March 21, 1902. Died December 25, 1973. Carrie died April 17, 1982 and is buried beside Ray in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery. She was married to Clinton Alexander at the time of death.

Carrie and Ray's son, Samuel Ray Littrell Jr., died December 12, 1985 and is buried in Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

John Daniel Savage

John Daniel Savage was born April 6, 1851 at Chapel Hill, Missouri, near Kansas City, the son of Dave Savage and his wife, an Adams.

When John Daniel was 10, a Civil War skirmish took place behind their field, and he listened to it, a story he often told his grandchildren.

After the war, the Savage family moved to Washington County, Arkansas, settling on the old John Wesley Carroll place about five miles east of Springdale near what now is the Beaver Lake Bridge on Highway 410.

John Daniel married Margaret Joyce, daughter of Alexander Joyce. They became the parents of five children: Henry, Calvin, Thomas, Mabel and Melissa. Margaret died when Melissa was a baby.

Following Margaret's death, John Daniel married Elizabeth Keller. After her death, he married Margaret Roles. Lou Cloer Carroll became his fourth wife, and Adeline Wister his fifth. Adeline outlived John Daniel.

Known as a prosperous farmer, John Daniel in May, 1893 had purchased 120 acres in the Pilgrim Rest Community. Here he raised small grain, operated orchards and dealt in livestock. It is said that he cleared the land with a chopping axe, and that he fenced the fields with split rails.

He served as a justice of the peace for years. Although John Daniel did not use tobacco, two of his wives did. One smoked a clay pipe.

The children of John Daniel and Margaret (Joyce) Savage and their families were as follows: Henry Savage married Nancy Garrison. They went to Oklahoma for a time, but returned to Washington County. Their children were: Florence Savage, who married Lloyd Gammon; Mae Savage, who married Jess Hamilton; Martin Savage, who married Olive Cook; and Grace Savage, who died at age 16.

Calvin Savage married Lucy Morris. They stayed in the Fayetteville-Springdale area. Their children were: Clarence Savage, who married Ruth Phillips, and Lillian Savage; who married Berry Vaughan.

Thomas Savage married Myrtle Holmesley, and remained in the Springdale area. They had three children: Ivan Savage, who lives near Pea Ridge; Wynema Savage, who married Ed Smith and who lives near Pea Ridge; and Burrell Savage, who married Ruth Davis. Burrell was killed during World War II in North Africa in 1944.

Mabel Savage and her husband, the Rev. John Johnson, moved to Oklahoma. Their children were: John Daniel Johnson, Alta Johnson (Witt), Calvin Johnson, Mary Johnson (Meredith), Bill Johnson, Homer Johnson, Bonnie Johnson (Sheperd), Esther Johnson (Mitchell) and Corrine Johnson (Rogozinski). Most of this family are buried at Molly Field Cemetery near Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

Melissa Savage married the Rev. George Been, and they had two daughters: Irena Been (Wright), now of Springdale, and Ila Been (Guest).

John Daniel Savage died July 16, 1939, and was buried at Joyce Cemetery beside his first wife, Margaret Joyce Savage. Her family had donated the land for the cemetery. Two of John Daniel's other wives are buried nearby.

The Savage name, so far as John Daniel's line is concerned, seems destined to die out with the grandchildren now living. Most of the grandchildren now are deceased. Ivan, who is still living, did not marry. Two sons of Martin Savage, Kenneth and Carl, live near Wichita, Kansas. One of them had a son to carry on the Savage name, but he was killed in a car accident.

John Daniel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Savage, were buried at Rock Springs Cemetery near Eureka Springs. There may be other descendants of theirs through their children other than John Daniel Savage.

Martin C. Scheele

In 1935, Martin C. Scheele bought a small acreage off the Old Wire Road, north of Springdale. The Scheele family lived in Lincoln, Nebraska where Martin was in the plumbing and heating business. Ill health forced him to look at an alternate style of living. Martin and Katherine Scheele were devout Lutherans and since Salem was the only Lutheran Church in the area, they chose to locate nearby. More land was needed, so in 1937 they bought a farm in the Spring Valley vicinity and began to look for a buyer for the Lincoln business. After the sale was completed, they left their Nebraska home on a cold January morning in 1940 with the temperature hovering at -20 degrees. They slowly made their way behind the snow plow through drifts piled high on each side of the road in a 1936 Terraplane. Their son, Elmer, who was attending the University of Nebraska law school, and daughter Lillian, who was working for a pilot training school, remained in Lincoln.

Lois, 16 years old and a junior in high school and Elaine, 10 years old and a sixth grader, attempted to keep warm by huddling under a blanket. It had been an especially cold winter, even for Nebraska. They arrived in Springdale after an over night stay in Joplin, Missouri and the 30 degrees above zero weather seemed almost tropical. They moved into a house Mr. Scheele had rented from the Claypool family on Maple Street. The girls became active in their respective schools and the family joined Salem Lutheran Church, where everyone soon had a job. Rev. William H. Ludwig was pastor and was instrumental in making the family feel at home. During the years they were members of Salem, Mr. Scheele served as president of the congregation at various times and also choir director. Mrs. Scheele was a member of the Ladies Aid. She joined the other women as they quilted in the Sunday School room of the old white church building located at the intersection of Johnson Street and Highway 71.

Lois was busy with high school activities and served as narrator for the 1941 graduating class pageant. This unique commencement program was presented by the entire senior class with Miss Fay Harding serving as sponsor. Arnold Berner was also a member of this class and along with his family attended Salem Lutheran Church. Lois and Arnold began keeping company about this time.

Mr. Scheele commuted to the farm daily. A young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Everette Morris, lived in the old pre-Civil War farm house and helped with the farming. When World War II began in December of 1941, gasoline and tires were rationed and the daily trip could no longer be made. He accepted an offer to buy from a neighbor and in turn bought the 20 acre Exum place two miles south of Springdale. The dirt road on which the farm was located proved to be impassable in rainy weather and is today Turner Street.

Martin started tearing down the old house and began building what he called the "garage apartment". Because of wartime shortages of building supplies, this small building remained home until 1945 when the "big house" was partially finished.

The oldest daughter, Lillian, married Air Force Lieutenant Donald James Eshelman in 1942 and lived with her parents while her husband was being sent from air base to air base. Their first child Donald James Eshelman, Jr. was born at the old City Hospital in Fayetteville on January 19, 1945.

Elaine was growing up during these years and remembers walking to town most of the time because of gasoline rationing. She tells of the junior and senior high school students meeting in the gym to listen to Franklin Delano Roosevelt ask Congress to delcare war on Japan the day after Pearl Harbor. Many of the eligible boy students enlisted before graduating from Springdale High. Football games were played only during the day so lights did not have to be used. She helped register Washington County citizens applying for ration cards and remembers the close cooperation and feeling of unity among people of all ages. Movies were about the only recreation available to teenagers of the war years. However, parties held at the homes and school functions were enjoyed by the young people. On September 8, 1944, her 15th birthday, she began dating Charles Jones, a young man in the same class at school.

Lois left home to attend St. John's College, Winfield, Kansas in September of 1941. In July of 1944 she and Arnold Berner were married in Long Beach, California. Arnold was a lieutenant in the Naval Air Force. He saw active duty in the Pacific on Air Craft Carrier Cabot. He was featured in an Ernie Pyle column on the rescue of a downed navy pilot in a Japanese bay. When the war ended both Lillian, and Lois returned to their family home with their husbands. Lil and Don moved into the "garage apartment" and Lois and Arnold stayed with Martin and Katherine in the now finished "big house". The Berner's first child, Steven Thomas Berner, was born on March 7, 1946. The Eshelmans soon found a home on Mount Sequoyah in Fayetteville and moved in time for Carol Marie Eshelman to be born on October 28, 1946. Don was one of the first pilots for Skyway Airlines and took part in the innovative program of delivering baby chicks by plane. They left Arkansas for Prophetstown, Illinois in 1947.

The Berners moved into the garage apartment next while Arnold attented the University of Arkansas. Here, Dennis Wayne Berner was born on October 15, 1948. After graduating from the School of Agriculture in January 1949, Arnold became Assistant County Agent in Sebastian County. The family moved to Fort Smith at this time.

After attending St. Johns College in Winfield, Kansas and teaching for a year in La Porte, Indiana, Elaine married Charles Jones, June 12, 1949 at Salem Lutheran Church with Reverend William Ludwig officiating. In the fall of 1949, Elaine started the kindergarten that continues to this day at Salem Lutheran Church. Charles and Elaine moved into a well used "garage apartment" while Charles attended the university of Arkansas, majoring in physics. Their first son, Kenneth Edward Jones, was born on April 10, 1951. Charles graduated in June of that same year and they moved to San Diego, California where Charles was employed as an engineer with Convair Aircraft.

Mr. Scheele built two more houses on his land, but because of Katherine's health, he sold the property in 1952 and moved to Russellville, to be near the Berner family. Charlene Jane Berner was born in February of that same year. Arnold was now County Agent of Pope County.

Mr. and Mrs. Scheele returned to Springdale in 1962 where Mr. Scheele built his last house on Cheatham Street. Mrs. Scheele died in April 1967 at Springdale Community Hospital. Mr. Scheele remained in Springdale until 1972 when he moved to Little Rock. He died in October of 1972. He and Mrs. Scheele are buried in the Fairview Cemetery, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Elmer Scheele, who remained in Lincoln, married Hazel McChesney in 1938. Their marriage was blessed with three children: Roy Martin Scheele, born in January of 1942; Thomas Scheele born in March of 1947 and Katherine Scheele, who was born in August of 1953. Elmer was Prosecuting Attorney of Lancaster County, Nebraska from 1955 to 1960. In that year, he was elected Judge of the District Court of Lancaster County and served in that capacity until his death on November 11, 1972, having survived his father by only one month.

Don and Lillian Eshelman had two more children after leaving Fayetteville. A boy, David Harry Eshelman, was born on April 25, 1948 and a girl, Holly Marie Eshelman, whose birth date is September 28, 1950. Both were born in Prophetstown, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Eshelman have now retired in Arkansas and live in Kingston. Their daughter, Holly, and her daughter Elaine, now reside in Fayetteville.

Arnold and Lois and family moved to Little Rock in 1961 where he became Assistant Vice President of the Arkansas Farm Bureau. He was named executive Vice President in 1971 and remained in that position until his retirement in 1982. Steve, Dennis and Charlene are all graduates of the University of Arkansas.

The subsequent history of Elaine and Charles Jones is to be found in the Elmo E. Jones family history.

Charlie "Frank" Scott

Charlie "Frank" Scott and his four brothers and sister, moved from Crane, Texas to Johnson, Arkansas with their parents in 1935. His father, John Winfield Scott was born in Sugar Grove, Arkansas, August 28, 1889. His mother, Rachel Cecile Phillips, was born in Texanna, Indian Territory, September 22, 1897.

John, related to the famous General Winfield Scott who helped remove the Cherokees, on the "Trail of Tears", and Rachel, a Cherokee, married in Moyers, Oklahoma where Frank was born. They farmed and raised a few head of cattle before moving to Texas, where Laura was born. By this time, John was working the oil fields. John Martin, Sequoyah, Earlie and Tom were also born in Texas before the family moved to Johnson, where Bob was born.

Charlie "Frank" Scott, Laura Belle Coonce, Earlie Winfield and Thomas Phillip Scott - 1985

Frank Scott and Willie - 1947

After moving to Arkansas, John W. and his family farmed and raised chickens. He built some of the first commercial chicken houses in that area.

Rachel Cecile Scott died July 16. 1961 and is buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery. John Winfield Scott died April 5, 1963 and is buried in Donna, Texas.

Charlie "Frank" Scott, born April 22, 1917 is the oldest of John and Rachel's seven children. One of the reasons they moved to Arkansas was so Frank could go to school at the University. Eventually, the family moved to Fayetteville where Frank met and married Virginia Lea Littrell, daughter of Ray and Carrie.

Frank was in the Navy when their first child Charlotte Elaine was born January 19, 1943, and worked for Campbell 66 Express when their second child, Nancy Alice was born April 17, 1948. When Charlotte was about four years old, Frank bought a shetland pony, "Willie", and little red wagon to take her and her friends for rides around town.

After driving a taxi for a while, Frank began driving a truck, eventually for Willis Shaw Frozen Express. He retired in 1982, the last ten years spent in the garage where he relined brake shoes and rebuilding various components used in the preventative maintenance program. Frank now resides in Springdale and is very well thought of by his family and many friends.

Laura Belle Scott, born February 11, 1921 moved away in 1944 when she joined the Army. She married Harold Edwin Coonce and lived in Tulsa, Oklahoma where she was a beautician for several years. In 1959, they moved to Johnson for a short while, then to Springdale where eventually they had their own uniform business, H&L Sales. Laura died April 23, 1987 and is buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

John Martin Scott, born May 10, 1923 had also joined the Army. He married Margaret Ellen Maxwell, and they had four children, John Windfield, Elida Karen, Margaret Elizabeth and Juretta Lynn. John and his family moved from Donna, Texas to Springdale in 1970. He was a truck driver for many years and after retiring, unsuccessfully ran for Mayor in 1976. John Martin died July 8, 1982 and is buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

Sequoyah Scott, born February 9, 1929, made a career out of the Navy and didn't move back to Arkansas. He married Natty in the Philippines and they had two children, John and Stanley. He now lives in San Diego, California.

Earlie Winfield Scott, born July 25, 1931, also made a career of the Navy. He first married Derry Kay Isaac, and they had one child, Randall Paul. His second marriage was to Audrie Jeanne Mills, and they were the parents of two children, Billy and Wayne. After retiring from the Navy, they moved to Fayetteville, in the late 60s. Audrie died in March 1976 and is buried in the National Cemetery. Earlie now lives in Coronado, California.

Thomas Phillip Scott, born March 13, 1934, returned to Arkansas when he got out of the Army. He married Mary Louise Eden, and they are the parents of two children, Dianne Lynn and Dana Lee. They make Springdale their home, and are the owners and operators of Louise's House of Beauty.

Robert Raymond Scott, born March 5, 1938, moved from Texas back to Springdale with his parents in 1956, after his dad retired from the oil fields. Bob and Donna Houser - Drummond, had two children, Lori Ann and Robert Raymond. Bob started driving a truck after his discharge from the Air Force. He was killed in a trucking accident on April 29, 1966 and is buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

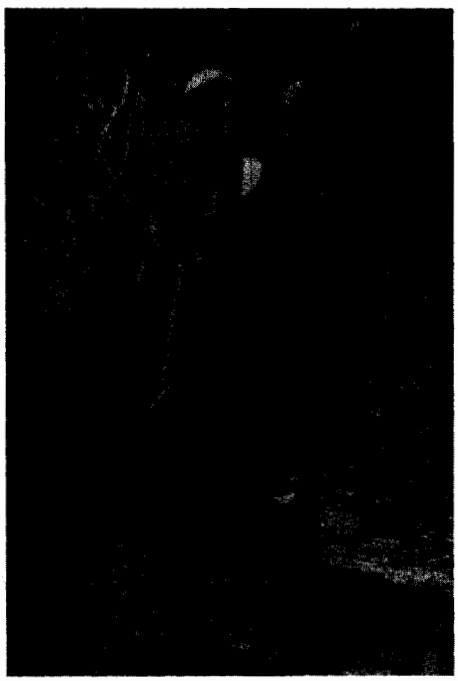
Floy Scroggins

When someone mentions the name Floy Scroggins, people immediately think of "The First Lady of Beaver Lake", "The Outdoor Sport", a lady on the radio every day telling where the fish were biting, and who was catching them, or remember her columns in the newspapers. She was the first woman to host a fishing show, and the first to have an outdoors column. But she was much more than just an avid fisherman.



Floy Scroggins holding two live diamondback rattlesnakes at a rattlesnake round-up in Okeene, Oklahoma.

Born December 12, 1918, she was the youngest of seven children born to Ben and Bertha (Carter) Todd. Being raised on a farm, her outdoor sports began young. In the winter she hunted with her father, and for fun she and her brothers and sisters would ride their sled down the steep hill behind their house. If it snowed, great. If it didn't, they'd carry buckets full of water up the hill and pour it in the ruts, and ride down on the ice that formed. Sometimes they stopped before going into the creek at the bottom, and sometimes they didn't.

Floy first married at the age of 16, and lived ten years in the desert in California. She had a daughter, Juanita Ballenger, born in 1936. After her divorce, Floy and her daughter came back to Springdale to live. She married H. W. "Bill" Scroggins in 1945. They adopted a son, Tim in 1947. Bill died in 1966. His love of the outdoors, and Floy's love for adventure made a combination that led to her becoming "The Outdoor Sport".

Some of her adventures included a wild-boar hunt, and going to the rattlesnake round-up in Okeene, Oklahoma. She told Bill she was going for a picture story. And a story she brought back. Bill's first account of the results was when he read her story in the paper, along with a picture of her holding a large, live diamondback rattler by the tail, with tongs holding the head. "Mother, you never cease to amaze me," Bill told her.

Floy's love of adventure also led to her work in free-lance photography and writing. She remembers one night when she got a call to go to Beaver Lake. A car had been reported to be in the water at the bottom of a high cliff, and it was uncertain if anyone was still in it. To get a view she leaned over the bluff for her pictures, holding on to a small cedar tree. When she went back the next morning and viewed the scene in daylight and saw the little cedar was only in about two inches of dirt, she shivered to think of that dangerous position the night before.

Another time, she went to Rogers at night to take pictures of a plane crash. Over rocks, and through barb-wire fences, she got her pictures. On the way out of the field she met the electric company men coming to cut off the electricity. There were live wires all over the ground. That time she was more than a little frightened.

Floy's life was made up of more than just fun and adventure. God also gave her a wonderful sense of humor, a kind heart, and a love of people. One Christmas, she and her husband Bill gave up their Christmas and used all the money to help children in the area who wouldn't have had any Christmas. Many may remember when they got a pair of new shoes and some candy from some strangers who cared.

Floy also had a love of music. She learned to play the piano and the organ at the age of 4, sitting on her older sisters' laps, who peddled the old pump organ. Her short legs would not reach the pedals. She doesn't read music, but has a gift of playing by ear. And she does play beautifully. She was also born dancing. It was a beautiful sight to watch her and Bill waltz, fox-trot, and all the modern dances, and some of the older ones like the charleston.

She was also quite an animal trainer. A newspaper reporter came from Tulsa to do a story on her dog "Babe", a German Shepherd that she had trained. Oh, she could shake hands and speak on command, and voice bye-bye when you were leaving, and even help carry groceries from the neighborhood store. But how many dogs do you know of who can bring you your shoes, in the color you ask for? Or how about taking the newspaper, magazines and food to a specific neighbor? She also helped with outside chores like pulling up vines, and carrying limbs to the brushpile, and even picking up trash thrown into the yard and taking it to the garbage can. Teach a cat to do that.

Floy Scroggins has lived her life doing things that most of us only dream of. When we talked about dying, and what lies beyond, she told me, "Most people are afraid, but not me. I just see it as another adventure, to see what's on the other side." But for this life her motto is — "Make the most of every day of your life. Live it, learn from it, and share it."

Henry Wilford Scroggins, Sr.

Henry Wilford Scroggins, Sr. was born December 13, 1870, at Rosebud in White County, Arkansas, was the son of Robert J. Scroggin (s), born 1824 in Lawrence County, Mississipi and Elizabeth Caroline Sublett who was born August 10, 1835. They were married August 11, 1861, in Conway County, Arkansas. Elizabeth was the daughter of Thomas S. Sublett and Mary Moorehead of Woodford County, Kentucky. She was the descendant of Abraham Soblet, a French Huguenot who immigrated to this country from England in 1700. Her grandfather, Lewis Sublett, was a militiaman under the command of Major-General Marquis de Lafayette during the American Revolutionary War.

Brothers: Henry Wilford Scroggins (age 16) and Lafayette Carlton Scroggins (age 17 or 18) in 1887.

Henry Wilford was orphaned at the age of five. His young adult years were spent farming in East Texas, where he met Olena Josephine Bramlett, who was born September 4, 1885, in Pontotoc County, Mississippi, the daughter of John Franklin Bramlett and Agnes Robinson. They were married at Ravenna, Texas on November 4, 1900.

In January 1908 Will Scroggins moved his young family by covered wagon to Lubbock, Texas. They arrived late in the evening in the midst of a "blue norther". He was a prominent citizen of this small but rapidly growing community and became a successful farmer. However, tiring of the endless sandstorms and the resultant crop damage, after 15 years he sought greener pastures. On a "scouting trip" to Arkansas early in 1923 where he found apple trees and strawberries growing abundantly. After viewing White River with its beautiful bluffs and inviting swimming holes he thought he had found the promised land. Before leaving Springdale he rented a house on Spring Street, which is still standing, and engaged Dr. J. E. Martin to become the family physician in preparation for moving his family to Arkansas. His oldest son drove Mrs. Scroggins and the other children to Springdale in a new Model T touring car. They arrived September 23, 1923. Will Scroggins and his next oldest son stayed in west Texas that fall to harvest the crop; they then shipped a carload of horses by rail to a farm he had purchased in Mountainburg, Arkansas and rode the train to join their family in Springdale. Later he brought H. W., Jr's beloved horse, Bill Wheeler, to Springdale from Mountainburg by truck.

While still in Texas Mr. Scroggins wrote his wife, "I want you to take the children on a picnic every Sunday—and pick up walnuts—and drive around and view the beautiful countryside".

On February 4, 1924, the family moved into a house he had built one mile east of Sonora just west of White River bridge. Two and one-half years later the house was sold to Scott Page and it is still known to this day as "The Page Place". The family returned to Springdale where he began hauling apples and other produce to southern Arkansas. While on one of those trips he suffered a heart attack and died a few days later on April 23, 1931. Mr. Scroggins, a Master Mason, is buried at Friendship Cemetery.

Mrs. Scroggins and family continued to reside in Springdale where the younger children were educated in Springdale schools. She died June 9, 1973, in Rogers, Arkansas at age 87 and is buried at Friendship Cemetery. She and her husband were the parents of eight children.

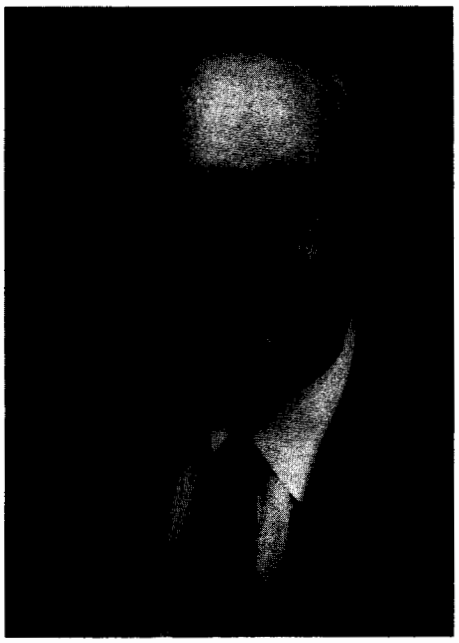
Lee Seamster

As a fairly young man Lee Seamster left a promising law practice in Bentonville in 1922 and moved to Fayetteville. He wanted very much for his three children to have an opportunity to get a college education, a choice that he did not have. And all of his and Mrs. Seamster's three children; son, Bernal and daughters Margaret and Louise did later graduate from the University of Arkansas.

Lee Seamster was the eighth child of the Martin and Nancy Cole Seamster, a family having moved from Missouri to Benton County in 1871. He is a descendant of the first known Seamster family to come from England to America in 1690. One of the ancestors of John William Seamster, a grandson of one of the early Seamsters, is on record as having fought in the American Revolutionary War.



Judge Lee Seamster

The Lee Seamster family is truly one of the Pioneer families of northwest Arkansas. He was born on a farm in Benton County in 1888 and attended rural schools there. At age 17 he was granted a license to teach in the county schools. When he reached his majority he received an appointment as rural mail carrier on Route One in Benton County. Carrying mail in those days was by horse and buggy.

Lee Seamster and Fannie Louise Presley, daughter of J. C. and Margaret Kelton Presley were married in 1909 in Bentonville.

Having a penchant for the law but unable to afford university training, he studied law with local attorneys at night and while carrying mail. He served as clerk in the law office of Judge W. D. Mauck and gained admission to the Arkansas Bar in 1917.

In Bentonville he served for two years as assistant prosecuting attorney and a term in 1919-1921 as Benton County representative in the Arkansas Legislature. After moving to Fayetteville he was appointed chancellor for the newly created 13th district and served in that capacity for 20 years, 1925-1942 and 1949-1950. During these years he heard over 16,000 cases. Of these, 141 were appealed, 108 confirmed and 33 reversed.

Lee Seamster served two terms as Washington County representative in the state legislature. In 1955 he was appointed by Governor Orval Faubus as Chief Justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court, serving the two-year unexpired term of Justice Griffin Smith. Lee died in Fayetteville in 1960.

Mrs. Lee Seamster, who died in 1978, was for many years active in the Methodist church, the United Daughters of the Confederacy and in garden clubs. She served for a number of years on the Prairie Grove Battlefield Park Commission.

Bernal Seamster, after university graduation, had law practice in Fayetteville where he was active in many community affairs. He served as a Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy in World War II and later practiced law in New York City and Litle Rock. He died in 1960.

Louise Seamster Chenery, graduate of the University of Arkansas, did graduate studies at the University of Oklahoma. She lived with her family in a number of foreign contries. She died in 1971.

Margaret Seamster Schwieger, was president of Pi Beta Phi sorority chapter at the University of Arkansas, and served as chairman of United Methodist Woman's groups in Shreveport, Louisiana, and Fayetteville, and as P. E. O. chapter president in Fayetteville.

Lee and Fannie Seamster had nine grandchildren: Jane Schwieger Dolan, William Lee Schwieger, Teresa Chenery Seamster, and John, Mary, Joan, Tom and Ann Seamster, and Hollis Chenery.

Russell Seay

The brick and other masonry work of many present-day buildings of Washington County was done by Russell Seay. Examples include the University of Arkansas Band Building in Fayetteville and Salem Lutheran Church in Springdale.

Russell and Gwendolyn Allen were married in 1946 in Springdale and still reside there. Her parents were H. R. (Bob) and Nella (Lynn) Allen, who moved their family from Cave Springs to Springdale in 1926, when Gwendolyn was four.

When the Seays married, Gwen was an employee of the First National Bank of Springdale. Russell had just returned from 44 months in the Pacific Theater of War during World War II. Gwen devoted her life to homemaking after their marriage.

They are the parents of four children: Allen Russell Seay, Laura Lynn Seay, Tommy Lowell Seay and Leslie Layne Seay.

Allen Seay and his wife, Cecilia Altice Meiser (Adams), and their children, Jamey Adams and Ashley Seay, reside at Grand Prairie, Texas.

Laura Seay (Chitwood) and her husband, Carol Dean Chitwood, and Laura's daughter by a previous marriage, Courtney Taheri, live at Viburnum, Missouri.

Tommy Seay and his wife, Donna Dickinson (Salamack) and children, Autumn Salamack and Amery Seay, reside at Winslow, Arkansas.

Leslie Seay (Wetherbee) and her husband, Lowell Wetherbee, and children, Lynn-Seay Wetherbee, Ross Wetherbee and Sadie Ellen Wetherbee, live at Rogers, Arkansas.

Russell is a descendant of pioneer Washington County families. His great-great-grandparents, Obediah and Sallie (Rice) Seay, came to Cane Hill about 1829. Their son, Rufus Rice Seay, married Jane (Jennie) Kimbrough, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Austell) Kimbrough.

Joseph Austell Seay, a son of Rufus and Jennie, married Emma Little, daughter of Ambrose H. and Sarah (Graham) Little. Russell's father, Jarva Seay, was a son of Austell and Emma Seay. Jarva married Nora White, daughter of Hugh L. and Mary (Edmiston) White.

Jarva and Nora were married while sitting in their buggy at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. Polk Crozier, of Dutch Mills. Rev. Crozier was a well-known Presbyterian preacher of the late 1800s.

Other direct ancestors of Russell Seay, who were early settlers of Washington County included: James Little and his second wife, Elizabeth Franklin, and her father, John Franklin; Jackson Graham and Elizabeth Drake (Graham); James Drake and Margaret Fields (Drake); William Harvey White and Martha Sexton (White); Catherine Huffstettler (White), whose husband died in Tennessee before the family emigrated to Arkansas; the Rev. Jacob Sexton and Dartha Scott (Sexton); Harvey Henderson Edmiston and Lucinda Gray (Edmiston); and Sanford Foley Gray and Elizabeth Brooks Ormes (Gray). The Jacob Sextons and the James Drakes emigrated together to Washington County, Arkansas from Gallatin County, Illinois in the 1820s.

Russell and Gwen, together with her sister, Billie Jines, published in 1986 a book entitled Seay and Allied Lines of Western Washington County, Arkansas. A limited edition, the book was nearly out of print by the time this story was being prepared.

Russell F. Self

A traveling salesman, Erasmus Self, worked from St. Louis, Missouri, for the J. R. Bissel Dry Goods Company. In 1948, at age sixty he came to Springdale and met Mrs. Myrtle Meyers, widowed owner and operator of Meyers 5 & 10 Cent Store. They were married later that year. Erasmus and Myrtle lived in a house on the east side of South Main Street across from the Southern Hotel. Erasmus, who never learned to drive a car, needed to live near the store so he could walk to work. During his career as a traveling salesman, he would hire a chauffeur to drive him from town to town. The Selfs also owned the house next door on the corner of Main and Grove Avenue. These houses have long ago been torn down and the land is now vacant. The Arts Center of the Ozarks Theater is on the site of the Southern Hotel.

Erasmus, father of five grown children, had followed to Springdale his daughter, Margaret Josephine "Louise", her husband, Warren Schelley Camp and their daughter, Sarah Margaret. They opened Camp's, a clothing store, in 1947, and for a while, owned Springdale Department Store. "Louise" died in 1958. Schelley remarried and continued Camp's Men's Store until his death. His widow remarried and kept the store until a few years ago when it went out of business. This store was in the building next to the variety store on Emma. Sarah Margaret married Darrell Wallace of Springdale. They moved with their three children to Hope, Arkansas, where Sarah Margaret stayed after Darrell's death in 1984.

In September 1949, Erasmus' son, Russell F. Self, moved his wife, Virginia Johnson Self and six-year-old son Russell F. Self, Jr., to a home on West Huntsville Avenue near the city limits on West End Street. Russell, a World War II Navy veteran, served in the South Pacific. He had been a salesman in Tyler, Texas, from 1946-1949. He joined his father and step-mother in the variety store. After Myrtle's death and his father's failing health, Russell bought the store from his father and changed the name to Self's Variety Store. Erasmus died in 1963.

In the spring of 1953, Russell moved his family to a new house in a new neighborhood in the west part of Springdale on Rogers Avenue. June 25, 1953, another son, Mark Nelson Self, was born to Russell and Virginia. At one time during the Fifties, there were at least thirty children living on Rogers Avenue

In 1954, another daughter of Erasmus, Jessie, and her husband Richard Stewart Edwards and their four children moved from Kansas to Huntsville so they could live closer to her family in Springdale. The Edwards owned a clothing store in Huntsville for twelve years. Jessie now lives in North Little Rock, Arkansas.

In 1963, Virginia's sister, Evelyne and her husband, W. G. Russell, a retired army colonel, and their two children came to Springdale where "Dub" worked at the Post Office for many years. After her husband and son died, Evelyne moved to Searcy, Arkansas to be near her daughter, Georgeanne McIlveene and family.

Another of Virginia's sisters, Johanna, and her husband Vic Boske came from Ohio in 1968. They were joined here by their only child, Kay, her husband Bob Hall and son Brian in 1978. Kay and her family still live here. Vic died in 1984.

In 1964, Russell again moved his family — this time out in the country south of Springdale near Lake Fayetteville and the Country Club.

The Self family participated in many community and school endeavors and was active in the First Methodist Church. The variety store was closed in the late sixties because of changing shopping habits and the decline of downtown. Russell went to work for a retail store, and Virginia for a printing firm, both in Fayetteville. After Virginia's death in 1973 Russell returned to Tyler, Texas, where he died in 1977.

Russell, Jr. served in the U. S. Navy from 1966-1970 spending eighteen months on the U. S. S. Ranger and one year in Vietnam. He returned to Springdale and bought the family home on Black Oak where he now lives with his wife, Mary Elnor Umbaugh, whom he married November 20, 1976. Russell is a seventeen-year employee of Jones Truck Lines where he is a supervisor.

Mark also lives in Springdale with his wife, the former Clara Hunton from Lincoln, Arkansas whom he married December 10, 1978. Their daughter, Renee was born Decmeber 20, 1981. His daughter, Candice Britt Self, born September 16, 1972, lives with her mother, the former Judy Cox, in Rogers, Arkansas. Mark worked for several years in radio becoming a favorite local sports announcer. He is now a salesman for Yarnell's Ice Cream Company of Searcy, Arkansas.

Leonard Fred Senger

L. F. Senger came to Arkansas (Washington County) from western Kansas in September 1936. He moved to Arkansas because of his health. He needed the clean air. He was a farmer by trade so the dust was too much for him there. He bought a farm in the Zion community southeast of Springdale. He got with this 160 acres, one horse, one cow and some chickens. In three days time he was on the road back to Kansas to get his family. He brought with him a wife (Jessie M. Brown Senger), one son Frank Senger, three daughters, Bell, Vida and Vera. Frank left to go into the service. Bell Senger Markley left and settled in Denver, Colorado. Vida Senger Boettcher left and settled in Arlington, Washington. Vera Senger Tripp stayed in Arkansas. She attended Zion school for 8 years, and 4 years in Springdale High, never was she absent or tardy. Their family was one of the first to get electric. They also worked on the roads. When he went to town people just stood by the road and he just picked them up in his old truck. He hauled all his own feed for the cows and pigs. The family milked cows and separated the milk and sent the cream to Kansas City by train. The whole family worked hard.

When he went back to Kansas to look after his farm up there, he would take a load of Arkansas fruit with him. He even took a Jersey cow to Kansas for a friend that wanted the rich milk. In 1946 he moved in to Springdale where he passed away in May 3, 1951. Jessie lived in Springdale until her passing March 12, 1975. They had 14 children, raised 13 to be adults and were all full sisters and brothers.

The beginning of this story is in Colby, Kansas history book.

Jacob Sexton

Reverend Jacob Sexton was one of the earliest settlers in Washington County, Arkansas, and played an important role in its development. He was born in Virginia in 1785, but by 1812 he was living in Shawneetown, Illinois. He married Dartha Scott who was born January 21, 1783 in Virginia. She had brothers Joseph and Nimrod Scott who also lived in Shawneetown and moved to Washington and Crawford Counties, Arkansas.

Jacob was a prominent Methodist Protestant leader, an ordained minister and a circuit rider in northwest Arkansas. He was a community leader and one of the first trustees of the Cane Hill Collegiate Institute. (See brass plaque in Cane Hill). Jacob performed many marriages, including those of most of his children and grandchildren.

Jacob and Dartha had at least three sons and three daughters, possibly more: Joseph Sexton, born between 1800-1810; died between 1837-1840. Joseph is not proven as a son of Jacob, but he probably was. He received grants for 160 acres in Cane Hill Township, Washington County, Arkansas in 1837. On April 27, 1840 Jacob Sexton was made administrator of Joseph's estate and sold his land.

Jacob, Jr., born between 1807-1815, probably in Gallatin County, Illinois. He went to California in search of gold and died near Sacramento on October 30, 1850. He married Eliza Ellen Reed before 1836 and they had at least six children: William Henry, John, Milton, Sarah Jane (?), Margaret Anne (?) and Thomas Jefferson Sexton.

Mary Jane, born circa 1815, Gallatin County, Illinois; died ante 1856, Washington County; married Samuel Cox, a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher. Children: Milton Henry, Martha Ann, Robert Jackson, Mariah Elizabeth, Eliza Jane and Mary Frances Cox. After Mary Jane's death, Samuel married Martha (Crozier) Carmack.

Martha, born circa 1819, Gallatin County, Illinois, died in 1896, Washington County, Arkansas; married William Harvey White; both lived in Washington County until their deaths. William H. was killed during the Civil War by bushwhackers of Union soldiers. Children: Mary A., William Henry, Jacob, Robert, James, Dorothy Jane, Cordelia, Sarah Elizabeth, Martha Ellen, Hugh Lawson, Neally, George Franklin and Charles Lee White.

Ann Sexton (Martha Ann?), born September 17, 1822; died January 21, 1905 at Farmington, Washington County. She married William Jefferson Tollett on March 8, 1842/3. Children: Louisa Fatima, Dorothy Jean, Mary Matilda/Margaret, Henry, Temperance Laura, Thomas Pollard, Harriet Elizabeth, Emily Brown and William Tollett. William H., born circa 1829, Washington County, Arkansas; married Mary A. Children: Douglas, William, Luther, Luthera, Jacob O., Minnie, Marian/Marvin Sexton and child born in 1800. William H. was appointed postmaster of Sexton, Arkansas in 1884.

Dartha (Scott) Sexton died on December 31, 1862 and Jacob married Mrs. Amanda Moore sometime before 1870. Jacob was also a farmer and owned land on Jordan Creek, Dutch Mills Township. He was active until his death, as attested by the Fayetteville Democrat in their column entitled "The Old Folks List" in June 1870: "Reverend Jacob Sexton, 88 years old, 41 years in the county; has traveled as an itinerant Methodist preacher over forty years in Arkansas. He is yet stout and hearty, frequently rides thirty miles a day on horseback and preaches at night."

Jacob died on August 16, 1875, at the age of almost 90. He was buried in Bethesda Cemetery alongside Dartha and Amanda.

Joseph Shannon

Joseph Shannon is said to have been among the first settlers of Washington County. A will in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania for Thomas Shannon whose wife's name was Eigness (Agnes), proved April 27, 1737, names children John, Samuel, Thomas, Jr., Margaret and Ann. The son Samuel migrated to Virginia and lived at Poplar Hill, now in Giles County. About 1784 Samuel and Jean (Reid) Shannon went to what is now Davidson County, Tennessee, where their son Joseph married Mary Billingsley on November 24, 1792. Joseph and Mary later went to Kentucky where their son Alexander is said to have been born near Bowling Green. They later moved to Arkansas and are on the 1830 census living in Cane Hill Township of Washington County.

History tells us that a Hugh Shannon was living in Washington County in 1829 and had been on a Crawford County Tax List in 1821. This writer is of the opinion that this was the same Hugh who later helped to found Neosho, Missouri. Benjamin F. Greer, in writing about his family, states that Hugh was his great grandfather but other records seem to point to Joseph as his great grandfather. Benjamin F. Greer's mother was Mary Elizabeth Shannon, daughter of Alexander. History tells us that Granville B. Shannon was the son of Joseph and since my parents, John and Nina Shannon, always told me that Granville B. and Alexander were brothers, this story assumes that Joseph was the father of Alexander. Either way, the lineage goes back to the Thomas of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, for Hugh was descended from that Thomas also.

Joseph (d.1831) and Mary (d.1833) had three children we know of: Alexander, Granville B. who married Unity Williams and Lavenia who married first Alexander Buchanan and married second a Mr. Oliver.

Alexander Shannon (1813-1890) married first Perniza Oliver (1817-1850). They are both buried in the Dunagan Cemetery near Evansville, Arkansas. Their children: Margaret married first Elbert S. Williams and second Wiley B. Bailey; Caroline F. married George W. Rodgers; Thomas Jefferson married first Cynthia C. Denton, second Amanda V. Goodrich, and third Zoe M. Howerton; Martha J. married a McKinney; Mary Elizabeth married James W. Greer; William Malachi married first Lannie E. Carruthers and second Susan P. Garrett, daughter of James William and Elizabeth (Nail) Garrett. Alexander Shannon married second Sara (Crutchfield) Dunagan and they had Lowry B. and J. H.

William Malachi 'Mack' Shannon was born June 11, 1849 in Washington County, and died 1929. By his first wife Lannie Elizabeth Carruthers (1855-1886) whom he married on November 19, 1871, he had James Leland, Walter A., Maudie May and Martha Leona who died an infant. By his second wife Susan P. Garrett, whom he married on April 10, 1887, he had: two died as infants; Charles Benjamin, died 1912 after sucking straw onto his lungs while wrestling with a cousin; John Wilkins; Myra, last heard from around 1945; Mary Oda, died 1920; and McVandee 'Van', died 1966. Around 1920, William Malachi sold his farm and accepted a check as payment. Before he could get to the bank to cash the check the bank closed its doors and thus he lost everything he had worked a lifetime to accumulate.

John Wilkins Shannon (born 1889) married Nina Ann Hughes, daughter of Thomas Jefferson and Annie Eliza (Pumphrey) Hughes, on December 8, 1914 at the home of W. B. McAtee, M. G. Mrs. McAtee insisted that it was bad luck if they stood crosswise the boards in the floor. There was a rug on the floor and they could not tell which way the boards were laid but she soon straightened them out and the ceremony proceeded. John and Nina lived in Washington County for a while and then moved to Adair County, Oklahoma. They moved back to Washington County where he served as postmaster at Dutch Mills around 1915. They later moved back to Oklahoma. He was killed in a train wreck on the Kansas City Southern Railway in Polk County, Arkansas, in 1942. Nina still lives (October 1986) at Stilwell, Oklahoma, age 96. They always enjoyed going back to Washington County where their roots were.

William Sharp

William Sharp born about 1813 in Tennessee, son of Nehemiah Sharp and Milly Clayton, died March 8, 1862, probably in Washington County, Arkansas. Although no marker was recorded, he is probably buried in the old Brush Creek Cemetery near Mayfield, Arkansas. This cemetery has been called Clark and Bunky Bogger Cemetery. He married Minerva Mayfield February 20, 1839 in Maury County, Tennessee. She was born November 22, 1814, died September 28, 1870, buried old Brush Creek Cemetery, daughter of Samuel Mayfield and Zuridice Rhoades. Just after their marriage, the young couple headed for Washington County, Arkansas to join other relatives. William and Minerva had at least eight children, all born in Washington County, most likely. They were: James, born about 1841 went to California in 1867; Levi, born about 1843; William, Jr., born about 1845; Mary Louisa, born April 24, 1848, died September 6, 1925, wife of Samuel Henderson Vaughan; Thomas D., born about 1849, died by 1889; George Washington, born about 1855; Francis Marion, born about 1857; and Martha J., born about 1860. Levi Sharp's wife was Bedie H., born about 1848, Arkansas. Levi and Bedie had at least three children: Elenor, born about 1869, Arkansas; George W., born about 1878, Texas; and Mary F., born about 1880, probably in Madison County, Arkansas. Mary Louise Sharp is buried in the Vaughn Cemetery, Madison County, Arkansas beside her husband, Samuel Henderson Vaughan, born March 31, 1846 in Arkansas, died September 14, 1909, son of Isaac K. Vaughan. Samuel and Mary Vaughan had at least three children: Emily, born March 17, 1868, died March 6, 1940, buried Buckeye Cemetery, Madison County, Arkansas; married Charles H. Bragg; Lizzie, born about 1872, Arkansas, married Jim Wilson; and Isaac T. born 1877, Arkansas, died 1949, buried Vaughn Cemetery. Emily and Charles Bragg had at least C. Homer, born 1896, died 1963, buried Buckeye Cemetery, married Myrtle Jones; Howard; Henderson; and Hattie, wife of Hayden Tisdale. Lizzie Vaughan Wilson had at least Cantz Wilson. Isaac T. Vaughan married Cora M. Evans, was born in 1880, died 1954, buried beside her husband. Their two children were: Elsie, wife of Odis Vaughn and Curtis "Buck", born August 1, 1911, died February 12, 1965, buried Vaughn Cemetery. Buck married first, Bonnie Morris, and second, Ruby Holt. Thomas D. Sharp married Nancy Winfred Dutton, October 18, 1872, Washington County, Arkansas. Nancy must have died before 1880. They had at least two children: Nora E., born about 1874, Arkansas; I'm told lived in Eureka Springs and Minerva Elizabeth, born May 28, 1875, Goshen, died January 12, 1943, Saint Louis, Missouri. Minerva married a Widener and had one daughter, wife of Major David Flournoy.

William David Sharp

William David Sharp and Francis M. Sharp arrived in Washington County, Arkansas from Missouri in the 1830s, the exact date is unknown. Their family consisted of seven children, five who were born in Tennessee were: Hannah, Andrew J., Isaac D., Mary and William. Richard Alexander was born in Dade County, Missouri, and Steve Talkington was born in Arkansas. This family lived on, or near, the Richard Alexander (Dick) Sharp farm southeast of Prairie Grove. His family was grown and well dispersed in the southwest during the Civil War. William left Arkansas and moved to Texas, and died in 1865. The members of his family that remained in the Washington County area were: Richard Alexander (Dick), Andrew J., Hannah Sharp Brown and Steven Talkington Sharp. Richard Alexander (Dick) Sharp bought his farm from S. E. Rogers, March 30, 1870. Thayer Ewing Shelton

Thayer Ewing Shelton was born in Lowell, Arkansas, the youngest son of Hugh Kingston and Susan (Walker) Shelton. His maternal grandparents, Martin Kidder and Ann (VanWinkle) Walker, had by this time moved from Washington County to Benton County, but his paternal grandparents, Thompson Ewing and Delila Ann (Davenport) Shelton, were still living in Fayetteville.

May 1981; top row: Alice Anne McRae (later Collier), Beth Lewis, R. G. Lewis, Susan McRae, E. W. McRae, Lynne Kanary, R. J. Kanary. Bottom row: Alice K. Shelton, Thayer Ewing Shelton & Frances W. McRae.

Thayer attended Fayetteville public schools and went several years to his Aunt Mary Shelton's private school. However, he said that Prof. Bates was the teacher who taught him how to study.

As a young voter, Thayer went to cast his first vote for his uncle, John Tillman, who was running for Congress. On the Courthouse steps, Uncle John introduced himself to his nephew and asked him to vote for him. Feeling that any man who did not recognize his own kin, did not deserve his vote, the young voter deliberately changed his vote.

As a young man, he bought Sunrise Farm adjacent to his parents' Sunset Farm in Son's Chapel Community and stocked it with dairy cattle. He married, in 1922, Alice Kinney, daughter of James and Elizabeth Ann (Watkins) Kinney of Kansas City. Soon after that, he moved to Missouri and thence to Texas, where he continued his education and experience in the building trade, becoming an Architect.

He completed his studies and started practicing Architecture in Tulsa, Oklahoma where a daughter, Susan Elizabeth was born. Living in Texas and Alabama for several years, the family returned to Son's Chapel in 1936. Thayer opened an office at 211 First National Bank Building where he practiced for 50 years.

T. E. Shelton received his Arkansas Archtecture License #36 when Arkansas passed the licensing law. Designing and supervising many homes, courthouses, fire stations, hospitals, the Fayetteville Boy's Club, Washington County Jail and Municipal Building, he remodeled the First National Bank several times. That included once jacking it up and building a basement and vault underneath. He said that E. E. Shelton (president of the bank) might want his (T. E.'s) office space if he did not find more room for the bank.

About 1950, he became interested in schools and designed and patented the Maximumlite School Buildings. With associate architects in other states, Shelton designed and built schools in over 35 states and Canada. Some local examples of this school are: Root Elementary and Woodland Junior High School in Fayetteville. T. Ewing Shelton served one term as national vice-president of the American Registered Architects. He died in Fayetteville, January 30, 1982.

The Shelton Addition on Highway 45 was developed from acreage T. E. and Alice Shelton bought when they returned to Fayetteville.

The only child of Thayer Ewing and Alice (Kinney) Shelton is Susan Elizabeth, who attended Son's Chapel, Washington County Grade School, Fayetteville High and University of Arkansas. She married Edward Walton McRae, son of Edward Ash and Frances (Wynn) McRae. They lived two years in the Hugh Shelton home "Sunset Farm" then moved to New Mexico, Oklahoma and finally to Wichita Falls, Texas. They have three daughters. Elizaton married Robert Glen Lewis, son of Francis and Josephine (Grimsley) Lewis and live in Washington, D. C. Susan Lynnette married Robert John Kanary, son of Ray and Arletta Kanary and lives in Oklahoma City. Bob is a Methodist Minister and they have two children; Jonathan Michael, born March 9, 1984 and Sarah Elizabeth, born April 19, 1987. Alice Anne married Clifton Edward Collier, son of C. E. Collier and Barbara (Brixey) Collier Wylie and lives in Grand Prairie, Texas.

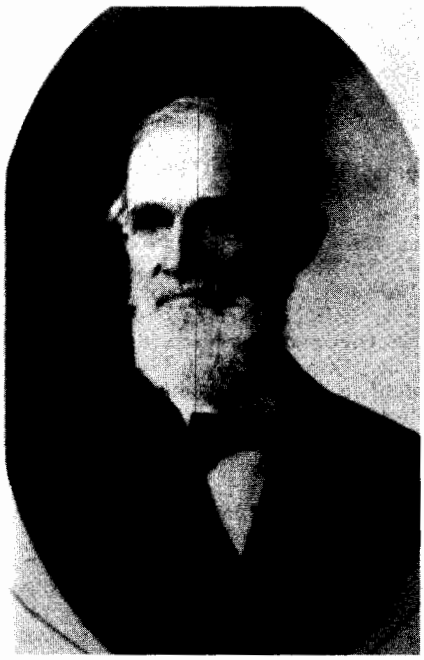
Thompson Ewing Shelton

At the age of 19, Hugh Shelton made the trip on horseback from Logan County, Kentucky, to Washington County, Arkansas. He had been sent by his father, Thompson Ewing Shelton, to find a place for the family to live. Washington County had the required sandy soil and climate for growing T. E.'s prize winning peaches.

Frances Shelton (Shuford), Mary Shelton, Beatrice Shelton (Ragland)

Hugh found and rented a large house at 940 Rebecca Street, Fayetteville, wrote to Kentucky and the Sheltons started the long

Hugh, Bennet, Austin and Tom Shelton



Thompson Ewing Shelton

trip in a covered wagon pulled by oxen. (Hugh always said that oxen were the best work animals he ever used). Thompson, his wife, Delila, and the children: Mary, Nancy, James, Bea, Dora, Ben, Fanny, Austin and Tom probably arrived that fall - 1878.

Byron, the oldest son, had already married Mary Elizabeth McQuown in Kentucky and did not move to Arkansas with the family. He was an insurance agent in St. Louis, Missouri and died in 1898 in Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Mary opened a school in Fayetteville and taught children from many of Fayetteville's families. Her school was located in the old Shelton home on East Dickson, now a parking lot for the City Library. Mary lived there until she died in 1935.

Nancy died young, soon after the family moved to Arkansas (buried in Evergreen Cemetery). Hugh Kingston helped his father on the farm until he married in 1886 to Susan Walker, a daughter of Martin Kidder and Ann (VanWinkle) Walker of Lowell. Except for a short time in West Plains, Missouri, they lived in and aruond Fayetteville. In 1915, they moved to Son's Chapel where Susan died (Son's Chapel Cemetery). Hugh moved to Jacksonville, Florida in 1954 at the age of 94. He lived there in a Christian Church home until he died in 1957. He always loved to farm, but also was a salesman for many of the stores in Fayetteville.

Delila Ann (Davenport) Shelton

James William married (1) Ida and moved to Henrietta, Oklahoma. He had several children there and moved later with his second wife, Vibella to Wichita Falls, Texas, then to Tulsa, Oklahoma. He had a wood-working shop and was in the building trade.

Bonnie Beatrice (Bea) married N. M. Ragland, a widower, and raised several of his children. Reverend Ragland was a minister of the First Christian Church and preached there for 22 years. Mrs. Ragland also ran a boarding house next door to her parents home on East Dickson. This house was torn down to make room for the City Library. Bea outlived Mr. Ragland many years.

Dora Lynn died at the age of 18 and is buried in the Evergreen Cemetery, Fayetteville with most of the rest of the family.

Laurence Bennet (Ben) joined the Santa Fe Rail Line as a conductor and moved to Missouri.

Frances Elizabeth (Fanny) married Eugene Wallace Shuford, a salesman. They had one son, Cecil Eugene. The Shuford home was directly across the street from the Ragland home. They both died in Denton, Texas, where they had moved to be with their son.

John Austin married Eva Reese, went into the grain, feed, seed and flower business with his younger brother, Tom. They later sold to the Adams family who developed the business into "Adams Flowers", then "Ray's". Austin a salesman for Northrup King Seed Company, retired and died in San Antonio, Texas. He had no children.

Christened "Little Thomas", Tom changed his name in the family Bible to Laurence Thomas Shelton. He married Ada Grisham. They had no children. After he and Austin sold their business in Fayetteville, Tom and Ada moved to Jacksonville, Florida, where he opened a similar business. They were both active in the Christian Church and both Board Members of the Christian Church Retirement Home there. One week after attending his brother, Hugh's funeral, Tom contracted pneumonia and died.

Second Generation in Washington County: Hugh and Susie had four children: 1. Agness Dean, who married Zenas Lytton Reagan, son of Hugh and Bell (Agee) Reagan, Postmaster in Fayetteville. Dean and Lytton had three daughters; Agness

Lytton, Mary Sue and Betty Lynn. They moved to Rogers in 1917 where Lytton was in the wholesale grocery business. All three daughters became teachers. Agness Lytton taught at Agness Scott College in Atlanta, Georgia, and the University of Texas. Mary Sue and Betty Lynn teach at Rogers High School, Rogers, Arkansas.

2. Earl Deaver, who attended Tennessee Military School in Memphis, married Eva Worthing and moved to Los Angeles, California. Their two daughters are Selma Sylvia and Virginia Dean Kendrick.

3. Martin Lynn also attended the Tennessee Military School and when the "Great War" began, wanted to join the army engineers. His mother convinced him to wait, but when the United States became involved, Lynn joined as a medic. He was the first man killed in battle from Washington County, so, therefore, the American Legion Post was named the Lynn Shelton Post until such time as Bob Tucker, from the same Son's Chapel neighborhood was killed in World War II. The name was then changed to "Shelton-Tucker Post".

4. Thayer Ewing was the youngest son of this family. (See "Thayer Ewing Shelton Family").

The only child born to Frances and Gene Shuford was Cecil Eugene. He received his degree from the University of Arkansas, taught there for several years but moved to Denton, Texas, where he retired as head of the Journalism Department of North Texas State. He was a well-known poet with several books published. He also was the President of the Texas Poetry Society. Married to Catherine Brooks, they had three children: Betty Grace, Dan and Tom.

William Andrew Shepherd

William Andrew Shepherd was born on February 15, 1862, at Danville, Illinois. He was the son of Eli Shepherd and Sarah Elizabeth Cage. William (Will) grew up in Danville and in July, 1888, he met Margaret Permelia Donaldson who lived in the nearby community of Hope. It was a whirl-wind courtship and they married almost immediately.

They made their home in Danville and Will became a coal miner. Owning his own mine, he would leave long before sun-up and not return until very late at night. Margaret (Maggie) was busy raising a family as their first child, Carl was born in the spring of 1889. He was followed 2 years later by Donald Drexal and then came daughters Urcel and Pearl and another son Merrill Frances, always known as "Sky" born in 1905. By this time Will had ended his career as a miner and bought a small grocery store. The family owned and operated "Shepherd's Grocery" for many years.

Then suddenly in April, 1914, the stork made a surprise visit to the Shepherd home when a new baby arrived. After so many years a new baby was quite an upheaval in the household. So much in fact that they couldn't agree on a name. Each brother, sister, neighbor, etc. put the names of their choice in a hat and two were drawn out- Mildred Dora Shepherd. Mildred Dora would later name her daughters Wanda Dora and Mildred Jean although she always disliked "Dora" intensely.

In 1920 Will Shepherd packed up his family and moved to Black Oak in Washington County, Arkansas. Traveling by train the family arrived in Fayetteville where the box car of furniture was transferred to a wagon for its long trip to Black Oak.

Will bought a house next to the Black Oak School and Mildred attended her first year of school there. Her teacher was Mr. C. E. Denny. During these years the older daughter, Urcel, passed away and was buried in the Black Oak Cemetery. Carl and Don died in Illinois and were buried there.

Will sold the property in Black Oak and moved to the Mineral Springs Community. The family entertained a lot in the early years. At one of their many parties, daughter Pearl met Tolbert Malone. They married and had a baby girl, Tolberta, born May 4, 1923. Weighing in at a mighty 1 1/2 pounds she was kept alive in the warming oven and by the determination that was to see her through a bout of polio a few years later. Pearl never regained her health and she died on March 11, 1926. Her brother "Sky" died 10 years later on September 2, 1936.

In September 1930, Tolbert married Pearl's younger sister, Mildred Dora. They had 4 children — Veronica born November 6, 1931, and died November 19, 1931, Wanda Dora born March 1, 1933, Mildred Jean born September 11, 1934, and Tolbert, Jr. born December 14, 1948.

Will and Maggie Shepherd, my grandparents, made their home with Tolbert and Mildred. Will helped to establish the first Washington County Literary Society. He and Maggie lived long active lives always interested in all the community activities until their deaths in 1944 and 1957. They are buried in the Mineral Springs Cemetery beside their daughter Pearl and granddaughters, Veronica and Tolberta who passed away on March 27, 1986.

Rev. William Sherrod

Reverend William Sherrod was born 1 April 1788 at Northampton, North Carolina. The parents of Will, his brother Rev. Arthur Sherrod (also of Arkansas), and sister Mary, who married Henry Sawrey and lived in Bond County, Illinois, presently are unknown. Will Sherrod enlisted 1813 at Franklin, Tennessee for the War of 1812, and was discharged in 1815. On 14 October 1816 in Maury County, Tennessee, he married Charlotte Miller, born 30 November 1791 at Halifax County, Virginia. She was the daughter of Frederick and Mary (Carter) Miller, and granddaughter of George and Frances (Neale) Carter of Virginia, and Johann Frederick and Anna Maria (Arnd) Mueller, both from Germany.

About 1832 or 1833 Will and Charlotte Sherrod moved their family to Washington County, Arkansas where he farmed on Richland Creek, and served as a pioneer Methodist preacher. The couple raised their dozen children and endured the costly hardships of the Civil War, yet both lived to be over ninety years of age. Their marriage of almost 65 years ended with his death on 6 January 1881. His monument has the earliest marked birth date at the Goshen Cemetery, this county. Charlotte rejoined him on 11 August 1883. An article on their family is in the November 1984 Flashback. Their children were: (1) Mary Ann "Polly" born 2 March 1818 and married James Conway McCuistion, (2) Elizabeth born 26 April 1819 and married D. A. Ragsdale, (3)

Martha born 18 May 1820 and married Judge Levi Best Sanders/Saunders (their only son, Charles Burton "Buck" Saunders established the Saunders Museum at Berryville, Arkansas, (4) Sterling B. "Brown" Sherrod born 29 January 1822, and married Margaret Lankford, (5) James T. Sherrod born 26 February 1823, and married Catherine Douglas Hale Karnes, (6) Emily born 13 October 1824 and married Philemon Williams (he died in Civil War and she moved her family to Ellis County, Texas), (7) Charlotte born 31 March 1826 and married Moses Williams, who also died in Civil War, (8) William V. Sherrod born 8 April 1828 and thought married to Mary "Polly" Phillips, daughter of James Phillips, (9) Nancy born 29 January 1830 and married John Alexander Neill, (10) Alva E. Sherrod born 16 January 1832, nothing further known, (11) John F. Sherrod born 1 July 1833 and married Frances Jane "Frankie" Ford (John died in Civil War and she later married Jasper N. Robinson), and (12) Arthur Wesley Sherrod born 8 October 1835 who married Amanda A. Cannon.

Green W. Sherry

Green W. Sherry was born in Kentucky September 24, 1818. When, as a child, his parents moved to the territory of Indiana. As a young man, he moved to the state of Illinois where he married Miss Delilah Ingram, July 20, 1834. In the fall of this same year, this young couple came to the territory of Arkansas. They settled on top of the Boston Mountain south east of Strickler.

Green W. Sherry Albert W. Sherry's home, located four miles east of Springdale, Arkansas on Highway 68. Albert Sherry built this house about 1905 and raised his family there.

In 1836, the year Arkansas became a state, Green W. Sherry went to Fort Smith and joined the Arkansas Volunteers, a detachment that was sent to Fort Gibson to quell disturbances caused by the removal of Cherokees and other tribes from the Carolinas and Georgia.

In 1860, Green W. Sherry homesteaded eight acres west of West Fork. From this location, members of the family at home listened to the battle of Prairie Grove in which two sons were engaged.

Most of the present day, Washington County Sherry's are traced back to Green W. Sherry through his son, John Calvin Sherry, who was born April 15, 1837 and married Miss Susan White. They lived many years in Fayetteville and Rogers, where he was a minister in the First Christian Church. As a young man, John C. Sherry fought in the Civil War.

John C. Sherry's son, Albert Wallace Sherry, was born August 12, 1865. Albert W. Sherry lived his last twenty-six years on a farm four miles east of Springdale, where he built a large, two-story home. His major crop was apples and Concord grapes. Through proper pruning and fertilization, he developed three wire rows of grapes that produced a much larger crop than the standard two wire row.

Albert Sherry was married to Miss Sarah Fowler, June 16, 1889. Their children were Thomas Jefferson, John Richard, Artie Wesley and Raymond Ellis. Sarah passed away December, 1897.

On May 14, 1899, Albert Sherry married Miss Pearl Tillman. Their children are Hugh Ozell, Otho Lee, Oakley Kell, Wilson Carrel, Earl Allen, Eunice, Lois, Clayton and Lola.

Hugh Sherry was Mayor Springdale six years and was Washington County Treasurer many years. Hugh and his wife Myrtle had one son, Winford Sherry. Earl Sherry was in the retail grocery business in Springdale and is a retired Baptist Minister. Earl and his wife, Lena, had one son, Max Sherry and one daughter, Mrs. Phyliss Cooper. Carrel Sherry lived east of Springdale where he grew Concord grapes. Carrel and his wife, Beatrice, had one son, Joe Sherry. Carrel played the violin and, as a young man, he often invited his friends to bring their instruments and join him for music at his parents home. Eunice Sherry Huntley (Mrs. Arthur Huntley) lived most of her life east of Springdale at the home where she grew up. Eunice taught school in Washington County for twenty years. Oakley Sherry lived near Springdale, where he grew Concord grapes and other fruits. Oakley and his wife, Lucy had one son, Bill Sherry. Otho Sherry went to Lake Shores, Michigan as a young man where he retired after many years with Park Davis Pharmaceutical Company. Otho and his wife, Martha had two daughters, Virginia and Joan. Clayton Sherry moved to Wichita, Kansas where he was in sales and insurance. Clayton and his wife, Beulah, had two sons, Charles and Rodney and one daughter, Mrs. Judy Erwin. Lois Sherry Mooneyham returned to Springdale with her husband, Arvin Mooneyham, when he retired from Mobil Oil Company. Lois was a voucher examiner twenty-two years at the Pacific Missile Range and Defense Contract Administration, Los Angeles, California. Lola Sherry Roberts and her husband, Paul Roberts, live at Torrance, California, where Lola retired from the Torrance School System. Lola and Paul have two sons, Jerry Roberts and Kenneth Roberts, attorney.

Former Mayor, County Treasurer Dies at 84

Hugh O. Sherry, 84, former mayor of Springdale and Washington County treasurer, died June 10 in an Oklahoma City nursing home.

Sherry began his career in local politics when he became a member of the Springdale City Council on Jan. 2, 1945, a position he held until September 1952. He served as mayor from 1954-60 and took office as country treasurer in 1961. He served as treasurer for seven consecutive two-year terms, retiring in 1974. The only time Sherry had opposition was in 1960 when he was first elected to the treasurer's office.

Sherry was born Feb. 29, 1900, in Springdale, the son of A.W. and Pearl Tillman Sherry.

He was a member of the Highland Hills Baptist Church of Oklahoma City and of Lions Clubs in both Springdale and Oklahoma City.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Neill Sherry of the home and to whom he was married May 15, 1921, in Springdale; one son, Winford Sherry of Oklahoma City; two brothers, Earl Sherry of Springdale and Otho Sherry of Detroit, Mich.; two sisters, Lois Mooneyham of Springdale and Lola Roberts of Torrence, Calif.; two grandchildren, three great-grandchildren.

Services will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Sisco Chapel, with the Rev. Jack Schoeppey officiating. Burial will be in Friendship Cemetery.

This Sherry history has been made possible through many years of research by Mrs. Mildred Walker, who presently lives in Waco, Texas. Mildred is the daughter of Loyd Gholson and the great-granddaughter of John C. Sherry. Loyd's father, Robert Gholson, was in the restaurant business in Fayetteville, Arkansas for many years.

Jonathan Sherwood

Jonathan Sherwood settled in what was then Washington County, one of the very early settlers. One of his daughters, Sarah Sherwood married Jonas Anderson. Some material I have states they were the third couple to be married in Washington County. I have not tried to verify this. Anyway it was up where Madison County is now, but at that time Washington County extended up there. They were married in 1828. In later years she said it was before there was any place known as Fayetteville, and the Indians were here. She and Jonas had a cabin on the Illinois River. Jonas died when their son, George Marion Anderson (my father) was only 5 month old, and Sarah and her family moved to a farm near Brashears near St. Paul, Arkansas in 1950. She bought this farm and lived there the rest of her life. She fell from a horse at age 79 and broke her hip, was invalid for 13 years before she died at age 92. Her son, George Marion, lived on the farm over 60 years and all his 12 children were born there, I being the 10th. He was a teamster during the Civil War and was with the Union Army at the Battle of Prairie Grove. The nine children of his first family are all deceased, but the three of his second marriage are living. They are: myself (Dora Mae Heckman), Howard Anderson of Prairie Grove, and Jesse M. Anderson of Fayetteville. Jesse's daughter Patricia Waldren also lived here and her son, Lynn Waldren. Another daughter of Jesse, Mary Lee Weisz, lives in California. There are a number of descendants of George Marion Anderson and his first wife, Rhoda Prater Anderson, living in the area: Georgia Ann Yates and her family, Clyde Combs of Elkins, the family of the late Jessie Spurlock, Bessie Collura and Ruby Lewis of Springdale, the family of the late Hoyt Combs and the late Claude Combs. The family of Mrs. Lynn Turner of Texas, but formerly of St. Paul, Arkansas, were the 7th generation of the Sherwood-Anderson family to live in that area. None are living up there now, all having moved away and some in the Fayetteville, Arkansas area.

Sarah Sherwood Anderson and Jonas were friends of the Wm. McIlroys, Wm. being the founder of the McIlroy Bank. My grandmother, Sarah, would bring my father as a little boy here to visit the McIlroys and he played on the grounds where Old Main now stands. She would stay a month at a time on these visits. How this friendship came about, I do not know, except that the McIlroys lived near the Andersons before they moved to Fayetteville in 1850, but since that is the date of my grandmother's purchase of the farm near St. Paul, and moved there, they must have known each other before that, perhaps in Tennessee where the Sherwoods lived before coming West.

My father, George Marion Anderson, had some brothers and sisters. One sister was Jane O'Bar of Charleston, Arkansas who died at age 92, and the other was Martha Bennett of Mena, Arkansas. I believe she was 84. Mrs. Roger Widder of Fayetteville is a descendant of Martha. Holly Harshman of Mena is also a descendant of Martha.

Jonathan Sherwood eventually moved to Texas and some of George Marion Anderson's brothers also went to Texas. One, William Anderson, was elected constable for Hillburn Township, Madison County Oct. 13, 1874. By this time Madison County had taken up part of what was earlier Washington County.

When I was 6 years old my father left the farm and moved into the town of St. Paul so we three children could attend school there. In 1919 he moved to Fayetteville so we could attend the Fayetteville schools. I finished Fayetteville High, the Fayetteville Business College, and the University of Arkansas, getting my degree in 1932. My brother Jesse M. Anderson worked for the Southwestern Electric Company for over 40 years and my other brother, Howard Anderson was one of the early chicken growers in this area.

My father's second wife, my mother, was Josephine Hinkle Anderson. George Marion Anderson died 1932 and Josephine in 1935. Both buried at Brashears Cemetery near St. Paul, Arkansas.

I was married to John Howard Heckman Aug. 8, 1943 in Arlington, Virginia. Lived there 27 years. We came back to Fayetteville September 1970. Mr Heckman died May 21, 1983.

Henry Benson (Ben) Shreve

The first Shreve on record is too far back in antiquity to be known. Among the first was Lawrence Shreve of Rugby, England, a great-grandfather of Ben eleven times removed. Lawrence Shreve, the founder of the famous school for boys in Rugby, England, later moved to London where he became a successful merchant and was granted a Coat of Arms by Queen Elizabeth I in 1559. The family moved to Plymouth, Massachusetts in about 1600 and later to Rhode Island, which became the home of the family for the next 100 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Shreve, Milia, Delores, Thurza, Henry, Hyler.

In 1814, Ben's great-grandfather, Wilson Shreve and wife, Barbara Mock, moved to Washington County, Arkansas, settling on a farm one and one-half miles north of Farmington. It was here on September 10, 1869, Henry Benson (Ben) Shreve was born in a log cabin to his parents, William Franklin Shreve and Millia Brown Shreve. Ben attended the local school and Arkansas Industrial College (now the University of Arkansas). He graduated in 1892 in a class of eight with a degree in Civil Engineering. He stayed on for another year and received a degree in Electrical Engineering. While there, a group of boys put a white mule in the museum on the top floor of Old Main. He did not say he was a part of it, but I feel he must have been.

After graduation, Ben went to work on a steam boat, Ouachita, in New Orleans. The boat operated on the Red and Mississippi Rivers. In the early days of steam boat operations, it was not unknown for the boat to spring a leak and sink before the crew was aware of it. Ben developed and installed an alarm system that would ring a bell on the upper deck, when the water reached two inches deep in the hole, without telling the captain or crew. When the first alarm rang, the captain and crew began searching for the problem to find out what it meant. Later, Ben explained to the captain what he had done. Much to his surprise, the captain then instructed Ben to obtain the necessary supplies and install a bell in his cabin. The crew thought it wonderful to sit up on deck and tell how much water there was below. On that trip, the boat was loaded with 17,000 stoves, 7,000 sacks of cotton seed, 300 bales of cotton and 400 barrels of sugar. Ben purchased a barrel of sugar at the cost of $9.00 and shipped it by railroad to his parents in Arkansas.

In the early 1900s Ben went to work for Lorain Steel Company in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, manufacturers of railroad supplies. While there, he picked up a glass pitcher shaped like an ear of corn and an elephant paper weight from the Johnstown flood of 1904. They had finished a large order for the underground electric railway being built in London, England. The J. B. White Company of New York had the contract for building the underground railway and requested the steel company to recommend a man capable of overseeing the installation. Ben was recommended and went to London to serve as installation engineer for the Metropolitan Steel Car Company of London, England. While in London, he contracted tuberculosis and was advised to go to a different climate.

He moved back to the states and settled in Denver, Colorado. There he went to work for the Rio Grande—Colorado—Southern Railroad as construction engineer. While there, he worked on the Moffett Tunnel for several years. While in Denver, he met and married Francis G. Moore on September 6, 1906. To them, five children were born: Hyler, Henry, Thurza, Mildred, and Millia Deloris Shreve (Millia died as a baby).

Returning to Arkansas in about 1907, they settled on the old homestead north of Farmington. He started work for Felker Railroad connecting Rogers, Fayetteville, and Siloam Springs as construction engineer. Also, he served as construction engineer for Phipps-Fulbright Railroad from Fayetteville to St. Paul, that was later known as Combs and Cass Eastern Railroad.

In the early 1920s, Ben started work as locating engineer for the Arkansas Highway Department with offices in Fort Smith. He served as locating engineer on Highway 71 from Fayetteville to Waldron, Highway 68 from Springdale to the Oklahoma line, and Highway 62 from the Highway 71 intersection to the Oklahoma line, and many others in north and south Arkansas before retiring in 1932 to his farm. That same year, the State Park Department asked him to serve as locating and construction engineer for what is now Devil's Den State Park near Winslow, Arkansas. Built primarily by young Civilian Conservation Corp. (CCC boys) that took about eight years.

In September, 1954, the Washington County Historical Society bestowed upon him the honor of Distinguished Citizen at the home of his son Henry Shreve, Jr. Dad died June 10, 1958 at the age of 89.

The children of Ben and Francis Shreve are: Hyler Shreve- Born November 20, 1908. Married Dorothea Atkinson, one daughter, Peggy Shreve. Henry B. Shreve, Jr.- Born December 19, 1913. Married Pauline Smith, four children, Barbara Ann Shreve (Skaggs), Henry Benson Shreve, II, James Edward Shreve, Connie Ruth Shreve (Cone). Thurza Virginia Shreve - born January 3, 1915. Married Curtis McChristian, three children, J. C. McChristian, William Earl McChristian, Virginia Jo McChristian (McCutcheon). Millia Deloris Shreve - Born February 14, 1921. Died July 2, 1921. Mildred Brown Shreve - Born January 15, 1922, married Paul Blew who was killed in the Korean War.

Ralph Shreve

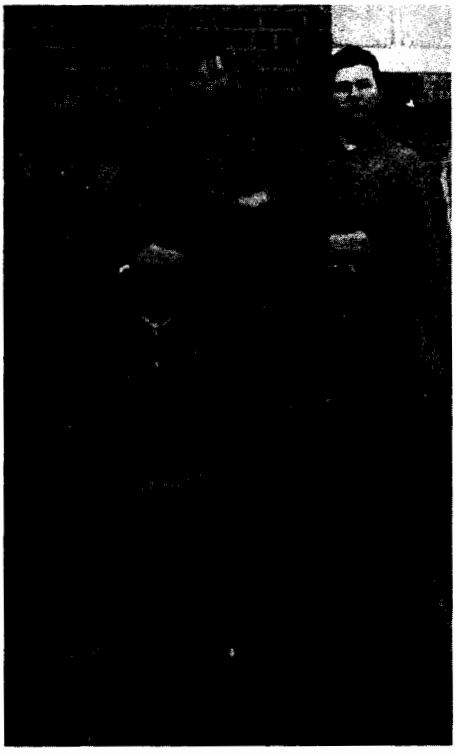
Wilson Shreve and his wife, Barbara Mock Shreve, moved their family to Washington County, Arkansas from Kentucky in 1853. They settled on a farm one mile north of Farmington on what came to be known as Goose Creek because of the large numbers of geese Barbara raised. One section of the home on this property was built in 1830 out of poles instead of logs. Wilson was told by the county assessor that this house was the oldest in the county that had been continuously occupied. Nine children were born to them. The eight who survived are listed in their birth order: Mary Ann, William Franklin, George Chesterfield, Samuel Pinkney, Susan Angeline, Virginia Quintelia, Lafayette Cicero and Carmania Bell.

Ralph Shreve - 1899

Wilson served as Washington County Assessor from 1868 until 1872.

William Franklin, the oldest son, took Millia Brown as his bride in 1867 and moved her onto a homestead on the family's land. Three sons were born to them: Alfred Walter, Henry Benson and Hugh Wilson.

In 1870, William Franklin built an addition onto his home. Sometime later, he decided to build a new house. He gathered clay for bricks and went to Wesley for walnut boards and shingles. Before William Franklin could start construction, Wilson decided he was too old to farm and sold out to William



1. Omen Lyons 2. Hugh E. White 3. J. Abe Allen 4. Toy Lee Cassat 5. Ralph Shreve

Franklin. The bricks were later used in a chimney and the barn got a new walnut shingled roof.

William Franklin farmed the land for his living. His main crops were grain, red clover and cattle. He also grew tobacco and was said to be one of the last tobacco growers in the area.

All three of William Franklin boys enrolled in the Arkansas Industrial University (later to become the University of Arkansas). Walter (Alfred Walter) worked as secretary to the University's President for $18 a month in order to pay the tuition for his brothers and himself. He and Henry Benson graduated with degrees in civil engineering in 1891 and then they took a year of electrical engineering courses in 1892.

Walter married Nancy Catherine Robertson on November 11, 1894 and moved her into his father's home. One son, Ralph, was born to them on August 25, 1895. Within a year, Walter and Nancy started making plans for their own home. A sawmill was set up in an oak grove west of William Franklin's home to produce the lumber for the new house. In 1897, they moved 18 month old Ralph into his new home - the home in which he was to live for 85 years until his death.

Walter and five other businessmen organized and ran the Alba Line Company which failed in a few years and went bankrupt. Walter was so opposed to walking away from his creditors that he took all the indebtedness on himself and worked to pay it off. He was the only one of these six men who died owning his own home and not in poverty.

For awhile, Walter grew ninety acres of apples as well as grain and strawberries.

Walter was an active member of the community. He served two terms as county assessor (1910-1914), was county surveyor for over forty years, served several terms on the tax equalization board and was principal and teacher at Farmington school for several terms. He was a member of the Farmington Masonic Lodge #291, a Royal Arch Mason and a Knights Templar.

Nancy Shreve proved herself to be a capable manager by running the farm's business while Walter was surveying. In 1939, Walter died as a result of a heart attack he had while out on a survey.

As a young teen, Ralph moved into Fayetteville to attend high school. He lived in a boarding house through the week and returned to his home on the weekends. He graduated as Valedictorian of his class at the age of 15. He stayed on to attend the University of Arkansas for two years before going to the University of Chicago to obtain a doctor's degree in Naturopathy.

On September 3, 1919, Ralph married Janie Belle Wilson, a registered Cherokee, and moved her into his childhood home. They had five children: Mary Waurika, Nancy Catherine, William Franklin, Joan and Ralph Walter.

Early in the 1920s, Ralph got interested in botany and horticulture. This hobby led him to discover an unknown wild iris which was named, Iris Shreveii, in his honor. He turned his farm into a nursery and did landscaping for many prominent Fayetteville families. The children's help was enlisted to wrap and package the cut flowers that were shipped to the florists in the area cities.

After his father's death in 1939, Ralph took up surveying. He was elected Washington County Surveyor in 1954 and served five consecutive terms until his retirement in 1964.

Because of his years of community involvement, Ralph received the Washington County Distinguished Citizens Award.

Walter, Henry Benson and Ralph Shreve combined to give 125 years of surveying service to Washington County, Arkansas.

Balis Shumate

The Shumates were among the earlier families to settle in northwestern Arkansas. Today, there are many of their descendants and kindred living in Washington County.

The family was originally French Huguenot and came to Virginia before 1720.

The earliest Shumate of our branch, of whom we have positive records, was Balis Shumate, born about 1786 in Virginia.

He married Mary (Polly) Turner who apparently died before 1830 because record shows on October 13, 1833, he married Mary Hendrickson who came to Arkansas with him. He was considered to be a wealthy man as the 1850 census shows his real estate to be worth $3,000.00. Also, he brought negro slaves with him.

His adopted daughter, Mildred married John Kennan and from this line of the family came our county school supervisor J. R. Keenan who served us for several years.

Balis had a son William born November 21, 1813, in Kentucky. He married Sarah Ball April 7, 1832.

In 1837, several families migrated together in a rather large colony from Harlan County, Kentucky to Madison County, Arkansas where they settled in the Richland township.

William and Sarah were among them, but after 12 years, they moved to a farm of several hundred acres on the White River in Washington County. He died at the age of 63 and is buried in the Shumate Cemetery near Durham beside his wife, Sarah who was about 90 when she passed away.

They had eight children, one of whom was my great-grandfather, Bayless Shumate who was born sometime between 1883 and 1835. The family said he was 95 when he died December 18, 1827.

At the age of 19, he married Nancy Homesley, they had three children before she died in about 1859.

My grandfather was one of the three, William Franklin Shumate, born January 16, 1858. He married Emma Brown Tollett January 28, 1878. She was born December 14, 1861.

They lived all their life together on a farm in the Walnut Grove Valley which was homesteaded by Emma's grandfather, Henry Clay Tollett. To this family, twelve children were born: Henry Thomas who married Victoria Dees, Lillie Mae who married Charles Henry West, William Bayless who died at the age of 3 sometime in 1885, Sarah Elizabeth who married Obadiah Johnston, Andrew Franklin who married Vorgie Rybloom, Lucy Maude who married Charles Edward Morrison, Etta Jane who married W. T. (Bill) Neal, Julia Maxine who married Colombus Wesley Slater, James Montgomery who married Lydia Rebecca Terpening, John Bryan who married Versa Carter, Mary Louise who married Emmett Green and my mother Fannie married George Duey Wood. My grandfather owned and farmed several acres with the help of my cousin Buster Johnston who made his home there until he married and moved to Colorado.

Uncle Tom and his sons lived close-by and all worked together.

Aunt Julia and Uncle Wes lived on a farm joining Grandpa and I can remember when they got the first electricity in the community. It was a Delco battery-operated system. I remember when grandpa got his first car, it had what was called side curtains instead of glass windows. One of the most looked forward to days was when the threshing machine came. My uncle (Gum) J. M. owned it. All the neighbors would help each other as they moved from farm to farm. They would bring their team and wagons to haul the cut wheat from the field.

My dad George Wood nearly always worked the sacks that caught the grain as it came down the big pipe. One job I hated was taking the jugs of water to the field to the men who pitched the bundles onto the wagons. Sometimes, if you were lucky, you could ride an empty wagon from the thresher to the field. The main thing was dinner. All the ladies came, bringing food or to help cook. Tables were set up on a screened porch, and no cafeteria of today could make hot rolls or cherry pie like them.

In later days, Grandpa rented out a large part of the farm to Stark Brothers Nursery. They had it as long as they were active in Farmington.

Today, the old house is almost gone which brings sadness every time I drive by, for this was also my home until I married.

Mary Green, who resides in Coffeyville, Kansas is the only living child of this family, at present.

My father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George Wood are both passed away. One sister, Mrs. Mary Belle Easter and my husband, Huse Bilbrey who worked for Ozarks Electric for 28 years have passed away.

We had one child, a son Larry who is a CPA and is the finance controller of the Fayetteville Public School System.

After my grandfather's mother Nancy (Homesley) Shumate died, my great-grandfather Bayless renewed his acquaintance with Elizabeth Cole, a young widow who was about 20 years old. It is told that they were married on horseback in the middle of the road where they met the minister.

He served three years in the Civil War in the 34th Arkansas Cavalry CSA, under Colonel Brooks and Lt. Col. Stirman. While he was gone, bushwhackers burned his house and Elizabeth would never have anything to do with the people who wronged her, but he didn't hold grudges.

He was a charter member of Sylva Lodge #282 at Maguires store, chartered January 1873.

He was a staunch Democrat.

He and his second wife Elizabeth had six children: James Harlan who married Cora Ratliff, John Bayless who married Nora Ratliff a twin sister to Cora, Clarissa Ann who married James Benton, Edith Jane who married William Ambrose Janes, Ida Bell who married Charles (Buck) Ratliff a cousin to Nora and Cora Ratliff, Benjamin Mark Shumate youngest son of Bayless and Elizabeth married Mary A. Ratliff, a sister to Charles (Buck) Ratliff.

They lived on the old Shumate farm near Durham owned by his father and grandfather since 1812.

William Shumate

William Shumate (1813-1877) was the first of the Shumates to come to Washington County. He was born in Harlan County, Kentucky, son of Balis Shumate and Mary (Polly) Turner. He married Sarah Ball in Harlan County on 7 April 1832. William Shumate was appointed Constable in Harlan County in 1834. About 1837, a large caravan of people moved from Kentucky County to Madison County, Arkansas. In this group were Bennett and Nancy (Bailey) Ball, their children and grandchildren. These included William and Sarah (Ball) Shumate and their two young sons.

About 1847, William Shumate bought land in Washington County and his family settled in the county. They lived near Maguire's Store until he sold that land in 1859 to Ewin Benbrook. They moved to a farm of several hundred acres on White River near the county line. Their home was on the east side of Shumate Branch.

William's father, Balis Shumate (born 1787 in Fauquier County, Virginia), was an early settler and a Justice of Peace in Harlan County, Kentucky. His first wife, Mary Turner, drowned in 1827. In 1833, Balis married (2) Mary, the widow of Thomas Hendrickson. In 1840 they sold their land in Kentucky and moved to Madison County, Arkansas, bringing negro slaves with him. They lived on Lollar's Creek and he traded in real estate. In 1857, Balis bought land and moved into Washington County, where he continued to buy and sell real estate. In his old age, he lived with his grandson, Bennett Shumate, on his farm near Harris, Arkansas. By agreement, Bennett was to have the land in exchange for caring for Balis in his old age. Balis died in June 1873, age about eighty-six. He is buried in one of two unmarked graves on that farm.

William Shumate died January 12, 1877 from pneumonia when he was sixty-three years old. He was driving cattle overland from his home near Durham to the home of his son at Farmington. The weather was bitterly cold; he became ill and died at the home of his daughter, Nancy Cooper, near Harris. His widow, Sarah, lived with their son, Mark Shumate, near Farmington, until she died in 1901 at age near ninety. William and Sarah are buried in Shumate Cemetery near Durham.

William and Sarah (Ball) Shumate had eight children, all of whom resided and raised large families in Washington County. Their children included:

(1) Bayless Shumate (1834-1927) married (1) Nancy Homesley. They had 3 children. After Nancy's death, Bayless married (2) Elizabeth Cole in 1860. They had eight children. Bayless served in the Confederate Army 1862-1865. They lived and died at the Shumate home place near Durham. He had a school house built on his land near the Shumate Cemetery, where the little cemetery chapel now stands. It was used both as chapel and subscription school for his own and neighbor children. Bayless and his second wife each lived to be well over 90 years old. They are buried in Shumate Cemetery.

(2) Bennett Shumate (1836-1884) married (1) Elizabeth Ballard in 1860; they had one son. Bennett married (2) Charity Van Hoose in 1868; they had six children. He served in the Confederate Army 1862-1865. Bennett was a charter member of Sylva Lodge No. 282 at Maguire's Store, which was chartered 7 January 1873.

(3) William Shumate (1839-1864) married, c1863, Martha Elizabeth White. They had one daughter before he was killed in June 1864 in Civil War, fighting near Wesley, Arkansas, where he is buried.

(4) James Shumate (1840-c1862) died of measles while serving in Confederate Army.

(5) Ann Shumate (1843-1920) married John F. Ballard. They lived at Elkins and are buried in Shumate Cemetery.

(6) Clarissa Shumate (1847-1932) married Andrew Jackson Ballard.

(7) Nancy Jane Shumate (1850-1934) married Samuel D. Cooper. They lived near Farmington and are buried in Shumate Cemetery.

(8) Mark Shumate (1856-1921) never married. He lived near Farmington.

George B. Simkins

Alice Ann Willis moved to Fayetteville in 1941 at the age of two when her father, R. W. Willis, came to be the band director. Alice Ann attended Washington Elementary School, the Junior High School on School Street, and Fayetteville Senior High School on Stone Street. She attended the University of Arkansas, graduating with a degree in Business Administration in 1961.

Having grown up in a band oriented family, Alice Ann played the piano, organ, and saxophone. She played saxophone in the bands her father taught starting in grade school and continuing through the high school level. She was also a member of the University of Arkansas Band for one semester.

While attending the University of Arkansas, Alice Ann began working for the newly formed First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Fayetteville. This was to become a full time job when she graduated in 1961. At the University of Arkansas she met George Simkins. They both granduated at the same time and married a week later on June 8, 1961.

Alice Ann started at First Federal as a teller in a three-person office and it has now grown to 50 employees and six branch offices. First Federal built and is now occupying the First Place Building in downtown Fayetteville. After starting as a teller, she has worked in all departments and is now a vice president.

Alice Ann has continued her music by playing the organ for the Christian Science Church for 25 years. She is also active in community and civic affairs. She is a member of the Altrusa Club of Fayetteville and has held several offices in the club, including president for two years. Having been a member of the Central United Methodist Church of Fayetteville most of her life, she has served on the music committee, finance committee, and the Administrative Board.

George B. Simkins was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, the son of George Harold Simkins and Katherine Bird Simkins. He moved with his parents to Benton County, Arkansas, in 1937. He attended several schools in Benton County and graduated from Rogers High School. Upon completion of high school he began work for Wendt-Sonis Corporation when this firm first moved to Rogers in 1955. He attended Arkansas Tech and the University of Arkansas, graduating from the University of Arkansas in 1961 with a degree in Agricultural Engineering. During those years he took time out for a stint in the United States Army.

Before graduation from the U of A, he started working for Ozarks Electric Cooperative Corporation, a job which continued after graduation and has continued for almost 27 years. He is presently the manager of the Member Services Department.

George is active in the Central United Methodist Church and the Fayetteville Lions Club, having served as club president in 1980.

George and Alice Ann have two sons, Paul Curtis and Alan Bruce. Paul was born February 28, 1964, in Fayetteville. He inherited his grandfather's love for bands. He played saxophone in junior and senior high school and served as drum major in the 9th, 11th and 12th grades. At the University of Arkansas, he was drum major of the Razorback Band for two years and was selected to "Who's Who Among University Students."

Paul received his degree in Business Administration from the University of Arkansas in 1986 and is currently working for the account firm of Frost and Company in Little Rock.

Alan was born in Fayetteville, May 21, 1968. He is also musically inclined and played percussion instruments in junior and senior high schools. Alan's hobbies include cycling, skiing, and other sports. He is a member of Phi Kappa Tau Faternity at the University of Arkansas and is pursuing a degree in Electrical Engineering.

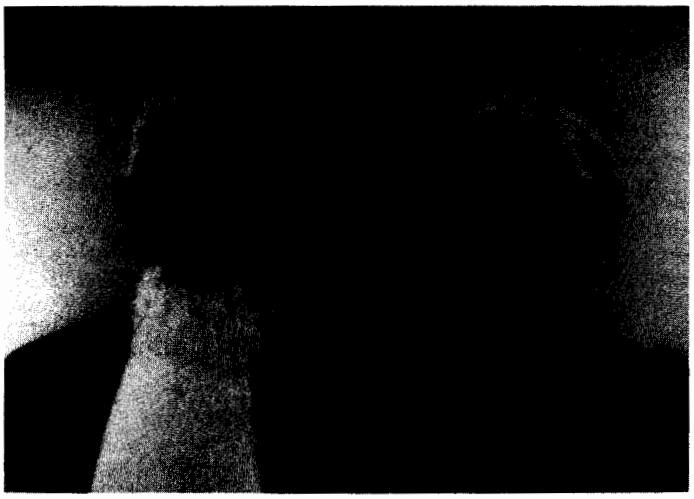
Charles Austin Simmons

Charles Austin Simmons (3/9/1831-6/20/1909) was born in Tennessee. He was the youngest of three sons of Isaiah Simmons (-1836) and Susan Long (1801-1896) Susan was from Virginia. They were married in Scottsville, Allen County, Kentucky. Isaiah Simmons is buried in a field now Olive Branch Cemetery, near Como, Henry County, Tennessee near the county line of Weakley, County, Tennessee. Susan is buried in Olive Branch Cemetery. We know of two other sons of Isaiah and Susan - Britton Long Simmons (1821) (wife, Frances Caroline) and James (1825, wife, Amanda).



Charles Austin Simmons, DOB 3-9-1831, married 1852, Tennessee, Patience Maynard Simmons. Both buried Harrell Cemetery, Cincinnati, Washington County, Arkansas.

Charles Austin Simmons married Patience Maynard (8/3/1831) of Virginia around 1852. They lived around Dresden, Tennessee and came to Cincinnati, Arkansas in 1870. Four boys and one girl and their families made the original wagon trip to Arkansas. There were Simmons, Harts, Harrells, and many other pioneer families that made up the wagon train.

Charles Austin Simmons and Patience Maynard Simmons are both buried in the Harrell Cemetery with one stone marking their graves "C. A. Simmons" on one side and P. M. Simmons on the other side.

William Riley Simons

William Riley Simons, who came to Springdale with his family in 1903, had been in the Civil War when he was 18 years old. Born in 1845 near Mountain Home, Arkansas, he later went to Illinois where he volunteered for the Union Army. Only in the war a year, he was discharged at Centralia, Illinois in 1864.

Will settled in Dent County, Missouri where he was married and widowed twice. The second wife, formerly Mary Ann Sprague, died in childbirth with his fourth son, who later died at six months. Will married a third time to Minnette Sprague, who was a cousin of Mary Ann. They moved to Mountain Grove, Missouri, where eight of their nine children were born, two dying in infancy. Will heard of the fine produce being grown in the Springdale area and brought his family there in 1903, where he opened a small produce store. But his health was poor and he died in 1908. Left with a large family and no means of support, Minnette took in washing and obtained a small Civil War pension.

The oldest daughter, Emily, married Albert Smith and lived in central Arkansas, later in Rogers. The oldest son, Earl, married Pearl Hull of Rogers, Arkansas and raised two sons, James and Harold. Earl worked many years at the Famous Hardware in Springdale. Another son, Bill, married Edith Watts and had two daughters, Betty and Carol. He worked 43 years at the Springdale Post Office. Eva married Guy Miles. They had four children and lived in Fayetteville, later moving to Fort Smith. Elizabeth worked for the telephone company as an operator in its early days before dial telephone. She was forced to give up her job because of bad health. Mamie didn't marry and stayed home to take care of her mother whose health was failing. Eunice worked for the Famous Hardware and later the Veterans Hospital in Fayetteville.

Minnette died in 1954 at age 89. Dates of deaths of the others are as follows: Elizabeth, 1962; Emily, 1962; Edith, Bill's wife, in 1971; Pearl, Earl's wife, in 1972; Mamie, 1982; Eva, 1982; Bill, 1982; Eunice, 1984; and Earl at 98 years, deceased in 1985.

Hugh Simpson

Our Simpson ancestors, according to family elders, came from near Edinburgh, Scotland, and were members of the Frazer clan. Two brothers, Hugh and John, sailed as immigrants from their homeland in the mid-1700s. They arrived on the South Carolina coast, probably at Charleston, and continued inland to York District (County) where other Scottish people had settled.

Hugh and John married and had children. They died fighting in the Revolutionary War and are believed to be buried in the York District. We now lose a generation or two and continue with another Hugh and John, direct descendants of the Simpsons mentioned above.

In the spring of 1826, Hugh and John Simpson and their families joined a wagon train and moved north through Cumblerland Gap into Kentucky and on to the Tennessee River in southwestern Kentucky. Here they sold their wagons and livestock. Two large rafts were fashioned and shelters built on them. The families, with their farming implements and other belongings, were moved aboard and began drifting and poling their way downstream, first to the Ohio River and then to the Mississippi. At night they would tie up at the shore and post a watch for safety.

Continuing southward they came to the mouth of the White River. At this point they abandoned their rafts and purchased transportation on a stern-wheeler moving up the White River, across the "cutoff" into the Arkansas River, and on to Phillips Landing now known as Van Buren. Here they bought wagons and livestock and headed northward. John stopped in what is now Franklin County and a little later Hugh continued on to take land between Evansville and Vineyard in what became Washington County, Arkansas. The Simpsons were among the first half dozen or so families to settle in the county.

Hugh Simpson (1787-?), our great great grandfather, and his wife Jane Morris (1795-?), had seven children, one of them being our great grandfather George Simpson (1827-1908).

George Simpson married (1850) Mary Ann Edmiston (1828-1895) and they had thirteen children, one of them being our grandfather John Simpson (Prairie Grove) married Jane Marrs (1855-1887) and they had four children: Aubrey (1879-1880), Mary Elizabeth (1881-1949) and the twins Amy (1885-1969) and Alma (1885-1966). Alma was my mother and I was an only child. Amy had no children.

Amy married Austin Hall (1884-192?) in 1905. Later, in San Francisco, she married Tom Kelly (1887-1960) in 1924.

Aunt "Bess" married (1903) Ward W. Webb (1878-1973) and they had two boys and two girls: Rue (1904-1961), Bert F. (1906), Edith Elizabeth (1910-1977) and Billie Faye (1927). Alma and my dad Robert Eber Fallin (1882-1955), got married in 1906, and in 1907 moved to San Francisco where I was born (1907). We moved back to Fayetteville in 1910 and on to Petrolia, Texas (1916). My beloved parents divorced in 1926. Mother did not remarry.

Mother died in McAllen, Texas, and three years later Aunt Amy died there. They are buried together in our family plot. My dad is buried in the family plot in Fayetteville.

I met my wife Jean (Netherlin) Randall (1908) in New Mexico where I was working on a seismic crew in 1934. Later that year we were married in Lubbock, Texas. She had two daughters by a previous marriage. Our daughters are Patricia (1927) who married Baskell L. Gray (1917) in 1947. They have four sons and one daughter, seven grandsons and two granddaughters. Jacqueline (1929) married Fred Al De La Houssaye (1926) in 1947 and they have two sons and one grandson.

Our son Joseph A. Fallin III was born in McAllen, Texas, December 9, 1945. He is a geologist working in Austin, Texas for the state. He is not married.

Most of the early information came from three sources, some of verbatim: Clara Ethel (1883-1971), Prof. George W. Bond (1891-1974) and Justin Benton Simpson (1907-1984). I did not have the pleasure of knowing personally any of these fine people but had considerable correspondence with the last two. Cousin Justin (Red), born in Dallas, Texas and I graduated in the same high school class May 28, 1924, but did not know each other.

Our "Home Place," on the mountain, south of Highway 16, from Wedington Gap, where memories of my childhood linger still.

Earnest Fulbright with buckets and Homer Rogers, Cousins and the old Log House at the "old place" near Lincoln, Arkansas about 1930.

I, Agnes Marie Rogers, born 23 November 1916, Lincoln, Arkansas. Sixth child of Homer E. Rogers and wife Fanny May Sayers Rogers. My parents and sisters Nada and Rosa came to Washington County 1912 and bought a farm, our "Old Place," it had an old log house, a log building apple drier, and apple orchard, Dad sold enough fruit to buy a second farm in 1917, the old place had a good spring of water, tall poplar trees, gooseberry patch, I can't remember ever living here, but do remember the apple drying in the fall.

Molasses making in the fall was another job my parents worked at very much, Dad's cousin Earnest Fulbright and wife Minnie, Nada and Rosa also helped.

My first school was Mountain View, at age 5 yrs. Nada, me with her mother was helping Dad. I am told we had a man teacher that year, all I can remember is sitting with Nada, looking around a tall desk down the aisle from the seat in the back of the room, after a few days Mother kept me at home, the teacher sent her word for me to return and finish that year.

Nada and Rosa sang at a funeral of a neighbor lady, the funeral was held at the Mountain View Cemetery, Edmond my brother was sitting with his class, I began to cry, Nada came to comfort me, my first funeral to attend.

March 6, 1987, my husband and I were at the cemetery. We found many of my friends there. The school house was painted white as I had remembered it.

I have picture taken beside the school house, August 22, 1922, Rosa, Edmond and I and friends, Zula Anderson, Goldie and Earnest Ezell, Robert and Percilla Crawford, Kate Alexander teacher.

When Jake Wise came to go bee hunting with Dad, I would get all the needles I could find for him to thread, I was too young to "fred" a needle. Mother and Rosa taught me to sew on Mother's 1854 model Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine, I made my first dress when I was nine years old. Sewing became my occupation. At that time we just looked at a dress in the Sears catalogue and made one of that pattern. I was in high school before I used a "store bought pattern", I have attended schools on special sewing machines, classes in Drapery and Upholstering, I loved to do Custom Draperies and Bedspreads.

I went to St. Helens, Oregon, 1941, to live with my brother Edmond and wife Oma Rogers, I met Edward C. Sittler, we were married in Reno, honeymooned at Sun Valley, returned to Portland, we both were working in the Kaiser Shipyard, I was in the Templet Bay and he a welder. Before our first son was born we moved to a wheat ranch, at Dayton, Washington, where our son Edward Carl Jr. was born 25 June 1943.

Ed entered World War II 25 July 1944, served in 25 Division, 161 Infantry, in southern Phillipines, Luzon and Japan until 12 February 1946. I worked at the Naval Ammunition Depot, Hastings, Nebraska, Ft. Hood Texas Laundry over German prisoners of War, to be near my husband and the Powder Plant at Pryor, Oklahoma, lived with my parents until Ed came home. Mother took care of our son.

Two weeks after he came home, he went to work for DX Oil Company in Tulsa, where he worked for forty years before retiring.

Our son; Charles Allen, was born in Tulsa, 10 June 1947.

I organized the Red Fork Extension Homemakers in 1953; serving on Tulsa State Fair Board 12 yrs.; Homemaker of Tulsa County 1980; member of D A R; C. A. R. Sponsor; Member of, The Descendants of the Colonial Clergy, Huguenots and community organizations.

Ed is Secretary of Red Fork Lions Club; Treasurer of Lions 3-M District; American Legion; I. O. O. F.; Sun Oil Company Retiree and Twenty year Clubs.

Our sons; Edward Carl Jr. Teacher Central High School; married Pattie Ruth Gay, parents of Edward Carl III, and Martina Gay Sittler.

Charles Allen owner of Sittler Aviation, Jones Airport, Jenks, Oklahoma, married Kathy Yvone Steele, parents of Jennifer Kaye and Jeffrey Charles Sittler.

William Skelton

The name Skelton originated in England about ten centuries ago. The name is documented in England about 1066 A. D. The first immigrant to North America was Reverend Samuel Skelton. He arrived in Salem, Massachusetts in 1629. Our great, great, great-grandfather, William Skelton, born 1745, died 1825 and wife Sarah are documented by land purchases through South Carolina into Georgia, back to Warren County, Kentucky and died in Warrick County, Indiana. They had eleven children. Their ninth child, Ralph, born 1787, died 1862 is our great, great-grandfather. Born in Union County, South Carolina, he was married to Fanny Latham in Knox County, Indiana in 1810. He was drafted into the war of 1812. His Captain, Joseph Montgomery, was instrumental in getting Ralph an eighty acre land grant in Section 29, Township 16, Range 30 in Washington County, Arkansas. He and Fanny had three children, Jonathan L., born 1818, died 1862, married Martha Mary Sharp in 1840. Martha Jane, born 1822, died 1863, married Abraham C. Males in 1840, remarried to Milford Calvert. Permelia, born 1825, died 1904, married Timothy Steels in 1845. Fanny died after Permelia's birth. Ralph remarried Cassana Conner in 1925. They had eleven children, William M., born 1828, died??, married Catherine Lewis in 1850. Martha Angeline, born 1830, died 1894, married Jonathan Osburn in 1848, remarried Jesse H. Hobbs. Sarah, born 1831, died 1901, married Thomas Phelam in 1849. Robert, born 1834, died 1882. Robert is our great-grandfather, he married Julia Ann Winkle in 1859. Their courtship is narrated in another story titled Julia Winkle "Granny" Skelton. Prudence, born 1836, died??, married John W. Phelan in 1858. Alfred D., born 1838, died 1914, married Mary Ann "Polly" Hollwell in 1859. Mary A., born 1843, died??, married John W. Brashears in 1864. Phoebe, born 1842, died??, married Andrew Jackson Winkle. Jacob, born 1845, died??, married Ellander Elizabeth Brewer in 1865. Elizabeth Jane born 1849, died 1920, married Eli "Uncle Judge" Reed??. Catherine born 1852, died??, married Edmond Winkle in 1870.

Since I only have the records of my direct ancestors, I will continue with my great-grandfather Roberts family. Jonathan Robert, born 1860, died 1937 is our grandfather. He married Perlina Jane Stufflebeam in 1880. Martha Elizabeth, born 1862, died 1933, married James Lawson Dockery in 1881. Lucinda C., born 1865, died??, married Wesley J. Williams. Alfred S., born 1868, died 1923, married Damie Reed in 1886. William Allen, born 1871, died 1943, married Nanny Allison in 1893, she died in 1896. He remarried Edith Myrtle Garrison in 1905. Henry, born 1873, died??, married Addie Carter in 1895. Nelson, born 1873, died 1952, married Rose Ratliff in 1899. Nancy Lavina, born 1880, died??, married William Nickell in??. Cassana, born 1881, died??, married Harve Lemaster in??, remarried John Mallott in??. My grandparents are Jonathan Robert "Buddy" and Perlina, they had ten children. James Robert, born 1881, died 1957, married Cida Myrtle Shackleford in 1902. Rebecca Elizabeth, born 1882, died 1962, married William Franklin Fields in 1908, remarried Tom Richardson. George Sherman, born 1884, died 1886. My father, Henry Eli, born 1887, died 1986, married Priscilla Fay Anderson in 1910. (Note: Captain Joseph Montgomery, who aided Grandfather Ralph Skelton in getting the land grant in Washington County, is a great uncle to Priscilla Fay and her sister, Lottie Frances, from northern Missouri.) John Harrison, born 1890, died 1976, married Mary Ellen Schader in 1910. William Harmon married Lottie Frances Anderson in 1912, remarried Effie Brooks in 1968. Julia Bernetta, born 1893, still living, married Calvin Stout in 1912, remarried Claud Fritts in??. Lula Bell, born 1895, died 1975, married Elmer Stout in 1913. Walter Dewey, born 1897, died 1985, married Nellie Stout in 1917. Nelia, born 1900, died 1901. Alta Leona, born 1902, died 198?, married Ottis Sutton in 1920. Our parents, Henry Eli and Priscilla Fay have one hundred thirty-three living descendants, twelve children, forty-eight grandchildren, seventy-one great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandsons. Robert Donald, born 1911, married Katherine Sigler in 1934, they have seven children and seventeen grandchildren. Mary Delia, born 1913, married John Paul Stephens in 1936, they have one daughter, two grandchildren and one great-grandson. Lelia Blanche, born 1915, married Algen Lee Roy Wolfenbarger in 1945, we have three children, seven grandchildren, one great-grandson. Odie Keith, born 1917, married Lena Lea Jones in 1941, they have one daughter and two granddaughters. Arthur Harlan, born 1918, married Madelyn Grace "Peggy" Akers in 1944, they have one daughter and two granddaughters. Leonard Quentin, born 1921, married Alice Marie Wilson in 1943, they have four children and twelve grandchildren. Naomi Helen, born 1923, married Carl Albert Bradley 1946, they have five children and ten grandchildren. Betty Louise, born 1926, married General Foy Gillespie in 1946. They have two children and four grandchildren. Rose Mary, born in 1929, married Ovner Roe Wagner in 1947, they have four children and four grandchildren. Deleo Lawrence, born 1931, married Kathryn Williamson in 1957, they have three children and one grandson. Eli Pierson, born 1933, married Betty Jane Emery in 1954, they have three sons and three grandchildren. Pierson remarried Billie Ann Cruikshank in 1970, they have five children. Henry Dwain, born 1937, married Betty Lou Anderson in 1954, they have three children and seven grandchildren.

Our book, Ralph Skelton of Washington County, Arkansas, compiled by O. B. Eakin, was released in November, 1986. We have nine generations of our family in this book. I hope others can take the information compiled in this article and bring their heritage up to date. It is an exciting experience to know who your ancestors were.

John A. Skillern

The first Skillern family to settle in Washington County Arkansas was the family of Audley Anderson Skillern, moving here from the Sequatchie Valley, Tennessee in 1846. Audley Anderson Skillern was born April 2, 1818 near Pikesville, Bledsoe County, Tennessee and died in Washington County, Arkansas January 6, 1880, age 62, and was buried in the Oxford Cemetery. The reason for his burial there was that the Oxfords and Skillerns got their land grants mixed up and the Skillerns settled on the land granted to the Oxfords. One of the Skillern family died the first winter in Arkansas and was buried on the farm. When the Skillerns and the Oxfords discovered the mix-up in grants, they exchanged places and the Oxfords dedicated an area around the Skillern grave as a cemetery.

Audley Anderson Skillern married Elizabeth Emaline Vernon, February 17, 1842. They had twelve children and only their third, Martha Jane who married Luke Kantz, their ninth, James Dean who married Julia Francis (Fannie) Lichlyter, and their twelfth, John Audley who married Lena Florene Hudelson will be mentioned herein. Martha was born July 5, 1846 in Tennessee died May 23, 1887 in Arkansas. She was the mother of Mary Kantz who married Chauncey Ambrose Jr.; Martha Vernon Kantz who married George W. Powell, Fredrick (Fred) Kantz who never married and girls Willie and Nellie who also never married.

James Dean Skillern was born May 9, 1861 and died June 20, 1935. James and Fannie were married in 1889 in Springdale. They had six children: Ray Audley, born 1891; Lee Byrain, born 1893; John Calvin, born 1895; Jesse William, born 1896; Charles Bernie, born 1898; and Nellie born 1901. James and Fannie were divorced and four of the children went with their mother. John and Charlie stayed with their father and grew up on the Skillern farm cared for by their father's sisters.

In 1920, John married Ruth Fuller of Fayetteville. They had two daughters; Martha Ann, born 1927 and Mary John, born 1930. Both still live in Fayetteville. Martha Ann married Jackie Randall Audrain in 1951. They have three children. The eldest is Scott Randall, born 1953, who married Carren Collins in 1978. Their children are Scott Randall Jr., born 1981 and Bradley, born 1983. Their second son, John Kay, born 1955, is single. Their daughter, Jacki Renee, born 1958, is married to Danny McWhorter and has a daughter, Kristi Renee, born 1979.

Mary John married Lewis Dee Jones in 1955. Their four children are: Diana, born 1959, Rebecca, born 1961, Gregory, born 1962 and Carolyn, born 1967. Diana was married to Johnnie Barker and has a son, Matthew Lee, born 1979. Rebecca married Powell Dodge of Washington, D. C. in June, 1986 and Greg married Brenda Ramsey of Prairie Grove in December, 1986. Carolyn is single. John died in 1948 and is buried at Fairview Cemetery. Ruth still lives in Fayetteville.

Charlie married Florence Karsten in 1921. They had two sons, Clarence Merle, born 1922 and Charles Gordon, born 1924. Merle married Mary Ellen Westbrook in 1942. They live in Raymond, Maine. Their children are Karen Ann, born 1943; David Merle, born 1952 and Nancy Ellen, born 1958. Gordon married Marilyn Nixon in 1951. They live in Springvale, New York. Their children, are Charles Gordon Jr., born 1953; Mary Ellison, born 1956 and Shannon Ann, born 1963.

Charlie died in 1953 and is buried in Fayetteville.

John Audley Skillern was born November 8, 1969 in Arkansas and died February 2, 1939. His youngest son, James Riley Skillern still owns the old Skillern home northeast of Fayetteville off the Old Wire Road.

John Audley Skillern and Lena Florene Hudelson were married February 28, 1906 by the Reverend Phillip Cone Fletcher, a Methodist Minister of Fayetteville. Lena Florene Hudelson was born October 28, 1881 and died January 25, 1952. She was the daughter of William Armstead Hudelson and Alice Amanda Steele Hudelson. Alice Amanda's father was commissioned Captain in the twenty-third Georgia Regiment during the Civil War.

William and Alice Hudelson lived in the two-story brick house on a farm adjoining the Skillern farm, coming to Arkansas from Texas and Oklahoma. They had two children, Lena and Elza. John and Lena Skillern had four children: John Audley Jr., born October 6, 1909 and died December 1983, married Daisy Milsap. They had three children, John, Kenneth and Mary Lynn. Their second was William Vernon (Bill) Skillern, born July 4, 1914 and married Margaret Fletcher (known as Markeet) in April 1935. Bill and Markeet have one son, William Franklin Skillern, nicknamed Jigger by his father Bill. Jigger married Nancy Ann Davis and they have a son named Fletcher Davis Skillern, born November 9, 1983. They live in Carlsbad, New Mexico.

John and Lena's third child is Alice Virginia Skillern, (known as Virginia and nicknamed Ginger) who was born July 20, 1917 and married Donald A. Fletcher, August 5, 1939. They have three children: Susan Elizabeth, born November 20, 1940. Martin Edward, born February 17, 1947 and Michael Don, born March 7, 1948. More about Susan, Martin and Mike is in the Fletcher history. The fourth child of John and Lena is James Riley Skillern, born April 16, 1920, who married Beverly J. Dunker. They have two daughters of their own, and two adopted daughters from Korea. Their own daughter, Laura Lee married Russell Morrison. Cheryl Lynn (Cherrie) is single. Missy was adopted as a tiny baby from Korea and Robin was nearing six years old when Riley started adoption though the final adoption of Robin was by Beverly's mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Aelmore. Robin is married to Ricky Luper.

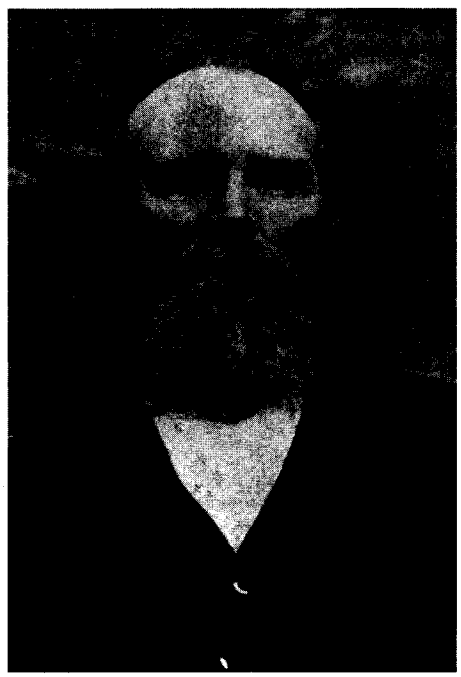
Dr. Owen David Slaughter

Even today, a hundred years since he rode his horse with his saddlebags full of medicine, the people of the Habberton area six miles east of Fayetteville speak of "the old doctor" who lived on the east slope of what is now known as Slaughter Mountain.



Owen David Slaughter

Sterling Hartwell Slaughter

It was in 1866 after the War Between States that the Owen David Slaughter family moved from Pulaski County, Arkansas, to a farm east of Fayetteville in the (White River Valley). Owen David had married Lucinda Ann Williams in 1849 in Mississippi. Both had been born in 1828 in North Carolina. He was a farmer, a doctor, the first postmaster of Aquilla (Habberton), and an ordained Baptist minister who was pastor of the (Friendship Baptist Church) east of Springdale, and the (Mount Vernon Baptist Church at Habberton). In 1877 he donated the land where the present Mount Vernon Church and Cemetery are located. He and Lucy, two of their sons, and his parents are buried there.

In 1880, Owen David, a physician and half owner of Slaughter and Searcy (wholesale grocers), was living in the present day Searcy House in Springdale with his family and elderly parents, Daniel McDaniel and Sarah Slaughter. Daniel M. was born in 1788 in Richmond County, North Carolina, and Sarah in 1793 in North Carolina. They were the parents of fourteen children, Owen David, John Thomas, Pleasant M., Veronica, Esther, Sarah, Priscilla, Rachel, Lijina, Hannah, Martha, Rebecca, Mary Ann and Elizabeth Jane.

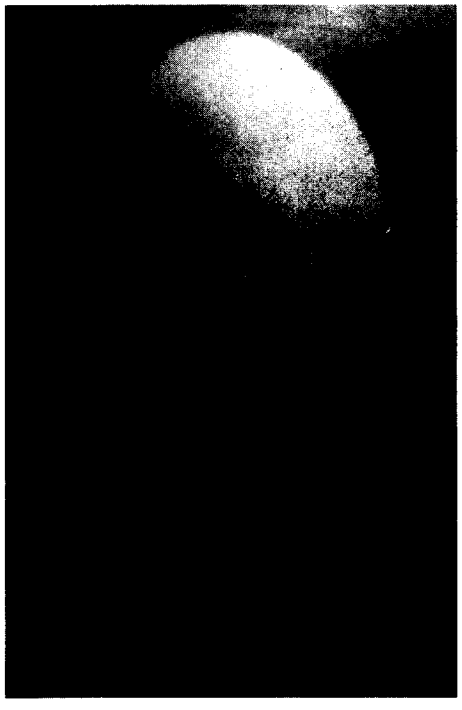
Lucinda Ann (Williams) Slaughter

Daniel's father and grandfather were both named Owen and are buried in the Slaughter Cemetery on Mountain Creek, Richmond County, North Carolina.

Prior to 1900, Owen David and Lucy moved back to the Habberton area. They had nine children: Timothy (married Elizabeth Henson); Haywood S. (married Elizabeth Stevens); Sterling Hartwell "Hart" married (1) Idella "Ida" Elizabeth Ownby, (2) Ann Bennett; Madison "Mac" (married Nettie Gilliland); Aquilla (married James Jefferson Johnson); William "Willie" (married Sally Sanders); and Allada (married Joseph Carr). Two sons, Simeon and Charles, died young.

Frances Slaughter Smith - 1922.



Judge John Lionel "Lona" Slaughter

Only Haywood and Hart continued to live in Washington County. Haywood stayed on the family farm. Hart and Ida lived in Goshen where Hart owned the general store and was postmaster from 1882 to 1888. By 1900 Hart had extensive land holdings in the Goshen area among which was a farm of Arkansas Black Apple Orchards from Slaughter Mountain to the White River. His family eventually moved to Springdale where he was part owner of the Springdale Telephone Company the Fayetteville ice plant, vice-president of the First National Bank when it was organized, and a Mason. He and Ida had seven children, John Lional "Lona" (married Ada Bevers); Theron Hartwell, M. D. (married Hazel Sandoz); Porter Otto (married Mamie Sherrad); Dessa (married Edgar Browne); Zoe (married John Hamilton); Bernice "Bunce" (married L. Willoughby, and Allen Erwin); and Ora (died young).

Lona, also a Mason, married Ada Estelle Bevers, daughter of Madison County Judge Joseph D. Bevers and Ada Ann Isabelle Vaughan. Lona continued in the Goshen Store until he moved to Springdale in 1912. In 1921 the family moved to Fayetteville and he was elected County Judge from 1929 to 1933. He and Ada had two daughters, Vera (Mrs. Robert Paul Cummings) and Frances (Mrs. William Carl Smith). Frances has a daughter, Ada Lee, (Mrs. William E. Shook) who presently lives in Springdale.

Frances C. P. M. Sloan

Frances "Fannie" Parks was the 13th child of John P. A. & Mary Ann Parks. She was born in Washington County on Christmas Eve 1852, the same year the Parks family came from Tennessee.

As a small child at (Parks Place) south of (Hogeye), her constant companion was the slave, Adeline. Though only 2 years older, Adeline was assigned to look after Fannie. They had many escapades, including slipping down to the slave cabins after dark to listen from their hiding place to ghost stories being told around the bon-fire.

When the war came, her father and the men slaves enlisted in the Confederate Army. John P. A. divided his fortune between himself and his head slave, John, who was Adeline's father. The idea being that if one of them was killed or captured at least half the money would be saved. After the war both returned with the money intact even though John could have fled with the money he carried.

While the men were gone, some Yankees preparing for the Battle of Pea Ridge camped in the valley below the "Big House" at Parks Place. The women and children were promised they would not be harmed. But the Yankees did confiscate many things, including the hand woven carpet, which they used for horse blankets.

One day the General appeared and told Mrs. Parks to gather up everything of value, including jewelry. She complied, but when she handed over her jewelry, she asked if she could keep one small box which held a gift from her husband on their wedding day. He said, "no", and took the box from her. Whereupon, Fannie ran into the room, kicked the General, and said, "give that back to my mother!" Surprised, he looked down at her, smiled, and returned the box. Patting Fannie on the head, he said, "I have a little girl at home just about your age", and left. Upon her death, Mrs. Parks left the gold and coral brooch and earrings to Fannie, who in turn divided them between her two daughters, who left them to their daughters.

When Fannie was in her early 20s she married "Colonel" Morrow, and they moved into a house between Parks Place and Hogeye. Her father John P. A. gave her a dowry of $2,000, as he had his other children. They had one child, Sam. E., born in 1878. When Sam was only two his father died.

In 1885 Fannie married George Washington Sloan, and they moved to Fayetteville. Their children were Elizabeth Edna "Bess", born 1887, Ethel Helen, born 1890, and Van Ray, born 1894. A blue and white coverlet was woven at Parks Place for each of Fannie's four children. They raised the sheep for the wool and grew flax and indigo dye on the plantation.

As was customary for the day, Fannie was an accomplished seamtress and did beautiful hand work, including tatting. Several examples of her handwork as well as one of the hand woven coverlets are still in the family.

Fannie died in Fayetteville in 1922 and is buried in (Evergreen Cemetery), along with her son Van Ray. She is remembered with much respect and love by her namesake Frances Vinson Davis. Frances says, "My grandmother still talks to me" through the many "saws" which her grandmother taught her. She relates an incident when she was about 10 years old. Fannie said, "Frances, have you done everything you planned to do today?" The little girl answered, "yes", as she thought would gain the much sought approval. When her grandmother responded "then you didn't plan enough." The truth came clear: that 100% is never enough, one must strive to do better. For more details of Fannie's family see Sam E. Morrow

Caroline Smart

Caroline Louise Bedel Smart was born in 1901 in Carnegie, Pennsylvania. Her father, Fritz Bedel, arrived home from work on that fateful day and found his wife dead. The stress of labor had been too much for the 45-year-old woman. After she had given birth prematurely to a baby girl, she had died, all alone.

Caroline Smart - 86 years old

The grieving father was standing at his wife's graveside with the little bundle in his arms, crying "What am I going to do?", when there suddenly appeared a woman the Bedels had known slightly. Her husband had recently died, and the railroad had bought her property. There she was, all packed up with nowhere to go. When she saw Mr. Bedel with the tiny baby, Caroline, she offered to help him.

Caroline feels to this day that it was the divine hand of God that sent her stepmother there, to take care of her.

Caroline Bedel went from the first grade through the eighth without ever being late or absent. She has a framed certificate on her wall declaring this outstanding feat.

She recalls how her beloved teacher, Mr. Kinder, rescued her from a five-foot snow drift. Her little red cap had snagged on a fence post as she crawled through, and it had let him know she was there.

Her stepmother was very good to her and was a main influence on her outlook on life. She would say, "Karlena, you can do wrong things and fool me, but you can never fool Gott in Himmel, (pointing up toward heaven), he sees everything you do, don't ever forget that."

Caroline speaks fluent German because her father spoke to her only in German.

After her stepmother died, the 20-year-old Caroline left home on horseback to seek her fortune. She joined the old Selles-Floto Circus as a trick rider for a couple of years. Then she met Herbert Smart. He had been discharged from the Navy after World War I and was working on a rock crusher. Caroline rode past him on her horse and saw him trying to twirl a lariat with a piece of clothesline. He quickly lost his heart to the "Cowgirl" that taught him how to use correct rope.

The couple worked as ranch hands near Hemet, California, and they were happy there where Caroline could be with horses and cows to her heart's content. One of her favorite stories is of the time she was fixing a fence, when a charming man, who was riding by on horseback, stopped to help her and then identified himself as Clark Gable. It took her several days to get over that excitement.

Herbert and Caroline bought a small housetrailer and started on the long trip to Pennsylvania and home. For some unknown reason, "Herbie" had started drinking after seven years of a happy marriage. As they traveled, his health became so bad because of his alcoholism, she was forced to put him in the Veteran's Hospital in Fayetteville, Arkansas. They never made it to Pennsylvania. "Herbie" died in 1943. With the small Veteran's insurance she received, she bought 40 acres and a house west of Greenland on what is now 265 Highway. She named the place "Cedarbrook Farm" and started a herd of cows by buying young calves at the sale barn for fifty cents to $1.50. She is now 86 years old and still takes care of her cows. They are all the family she has, except for a cat named "No-No".

She has had such a colorful life, has managed to stay away from doctors and hospitals and never takes a pill of any kind. She enjoys her radio, and especially Paul Harvey.

Caroline Smart is one of a kind - an original. It would take a long time to tell all of the stories of her life. Everyone who knows her, loves her, and her sense of humor. We will always remember her slap on the back and hearty "How're ya doin'?"

Urey Ledley Smelser

Urey Ledley Smelser, affectionately known as Captain Smelser or Led, was born in Ripley County, Missouri, into a large family. Many years earlier the spelling of the family name was changed from Schmeltzer. In his teens he left home and headed west to Texas where he remained for several years. He lived there at a time in the late 1870s and early 1880s when there were 'wild and woolly cow towns and sleepy trading villages'. He told many interesting stories about working as a cowboy on the open range. Led came to Little Rock, Arkansas, where he was Warden of the State Penitentiary and came to Washington County in charge of the convicts who helped build the railroad running from Fayetteville through Prairie Grove into Oklahoma. You can be sure he had many interesting experiences there too. He always slept with his gun beside him but he was liked and respected by the prisoners. Many year later he still received letters from former prisoners telling him this.

On September 4, 1900 he was married to Miss Evelyn Eason of Fayetteville. Evelyn had moved with her parents, John Thomas Eason and Elizabeth Bourdon Eason, and her brothers and sisters from Coldwater, Mississippi, to Fayetteville when she was a young girl. After attending the University of Arkansas she taught music. She was an active member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Led and Evelyn owned a farm west of Prairie Grove where they made life-long friends. Evelyn (Evie) loved horses and enjoyed riding in horse shows. Later they moved to Fayetteville and built a home next to the old Eason home on Gregg Street. He was Deputy Marshal before starting the Smelser Flour and Feed Mill on Center Street near the town square and after a number of years of successful operation he took two of his brothers-in-law, Herman and Tom Eason as his partners and the name of the business was changed to Smelser and Eason Flour and Feed Mill. The business involved sales and deliveries throughout Washington County of feeds, grains, crop seeds, hay and corn meal that was ground in the mill. After selling the Mill to his partners he then started the Fayetteville Hardware Company on the Fayetteville square which he operated successfully for a number of years before his brother-in-law, Arthur Eason, joined him in the business as his partner. The business was a full line hardware selling everything from nuts and bolts to farm plows, farm wagons, cultivators, stoves and mill supplies. After several years Arthur Eason bought the entire business in 1918.

Led and Evelyn never had any children of their own but they cared for three orphan children who were always devoted to their foster parents. One became a minister. They raised Arthur, Jr. and Margaret Eason after their mother passed away when they were very small children. No real parents could have been more devoted and caring. They were members of the United Methodist Church for most of their lives.

Led retired from business and spent his remaining years managing his various rental properties and enjoying his home and family and his garden and flowers. He passed away in 1945 and Evelyn in 1950 and both are buried in Evergreen Cemetery in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Francis Marion Smiley

Francis Marion Smiley, known as "Frank" was born 18 August 1825 in Bedford County, Tennessee. He was 2nd born of seven children of James B. and Jane (McCluiar) Smiley who died in Washington County in 1846 and 1843 respectively. James B. Smiley was son of Hugh and Dorcas (Barnett) Smiley.

Frank Smiley 1st married Tabitha Holcomb 30 July 1846. She was a daughter of the well known Primitive Baptist preacher John Holcomb and wife Dorothy (Wilbanks) of Washington County. Children born to Frank and Tabitha were: (1) Margaret J., born 1847 and died 1848. (2) Reuben Smiley, born 1849. (3) John Howard Smiley, born 1831. He married Lauraney Davis (?) and reared five children in Limestone County, Texas.

Frank Smiley's 1st wife Tabitha died 1851 (Holcomb Cemetery) and the children were reared by their grandparents John and Dorothy Holcomb. Frank then married Mrs. Sarah Ann (Norman) Reed on 28 February 1853 in Washington County. She was born in 1831 Bedford County, Tennessee, a daughter of Reuben and Cynthia (McFarland) Norman. Reuben and Cynthia died in Washington County 1865 and 1887 respectively. (Both are buried in Elm Springs Cemetery.) Children born to Frank and Sarah were: (1) William Frank Smiley, born 1853. He married Martha Clever and reared five children in Limestone County, Texas. (2) James B. Smiley, born 1855. (3) Henry N. Smiley, born 1857. He married Ann Adams. (4) Dorothy Elizabeth Smiley, born 1859. She married Joseph Knox Biggs and reared nine children in Limestone County, Texas. (5) Martha Tennessee Smiley, born 1860. She never married and both she and her sister Dorothy are buried in Faulkenberry Cemetery near Groesbeck, Texas. (6) Hugh Marion Smiley, born 1862. He married in Limestone County, Texas to Allie Scott (Bass). She being a daughter of Johnny M. Bass and Elizabeth J. Sloan of Dallas County, Arkansas. Elizabeth was a granddaughter of Collin McKinney for whom Collin County, Texas was named. Hugh and Allie Smiley reared seven children in Limestone County, Texas, one of whom is Bertha Smiley who married James Ezra Owens (parents of submitter).

Frank Smiley (subject of this sketch) had a grist mill in Washington County and one day he was out in the fields when bushwhackers got after him. This was during the Civil War. He ran so hard getting away from them that he came down with pneumonia and died 30 June 1861. His wife Sarah was with child at the time and the child, Hugh Marion Smiley was born July 1862. Frank was buried in the Holcomb Cemetery. Sarah appeared as a widow on the 1870 census of Washington County with her six children. Both Sarah and Frank had been members of the Shiloh Primitive Baptist Church as was Frank's parents also. These church records listed his father James B. Smiley's death as 26 March 1846.

As a widow Sarah Smiley moved to Limestone County, Texas about 1871, appearing there on the 1880 census as Sarah Holcomb as she had married 1879 to Elihu Holcomb in Texas. Sarah sold her land in Washington County, Arkansas in 1877 (East half of SE qtr. of Section 27 in Twp. 18 North of Range 30 West containing 80 acres) for 480.00 and 1 note for 70.00 to be paid in 1 year, and 1 note due in two years for 145.00 all at 10% interest.

Sold to James C. Pharr. Sarah and Elihu Holcomb were divorced in 1888. Sarah died 3 October 1899 and is buried in Big Hill Cemetery near Groesbeck, Texas.

A. N. Smith

This story is told in A. N. Smith's own words.

I was born December 28, 1861, Benton County, Arkansas, 1-1/2 miles west of Shiloh which later became known as Springdale.

My first school was in a little house across the road from an old grist mill which was just below the big springs on my father's property. The school teacher was Martha McCall. Three months of a year was a school term. Later I went to a school about 3 miles north of where I lived or about 2 or 3 miles west of Lowell. This was Goad Springs. My teacher was Mr. P. Davis. Later I went to Spring Creek, 3 miles west of my home. Some of the scholars were B. Sharp and his sister, Laura Chumbly, Alex, Jim and Ambrose Downum, Frank King and his sister. When a school house was built 2 or 3 hundred yards from my home, some of the teachers were Doc White, Mr. Lemmons and 1 or 2 more. Then the school house was moved to the northeast corner of my father's land. There one of my teachers was Bill Holcomb. Some of the pupils were Smith, Ford, Looney, Lewis, Fennimore, Nail, Phillips. After that I went to a 10 months high school in Springdale for 2 terms. The teacher was P. Smith who taught before at Goad Springs. Some of the students were Jeff Banks, Tom Fitch, Bill Bradford, Fate Beasley, who is my wife's uncle, Ed and A. P. Goodman.

On the 22nd of February 1883, I married Sarah E. Beasley, who was attending school on the northeast corner of my father's property. She lived about 3/4 mile from our house. After we were married we moved to a farm 2-1/2 miles northwest of my homeplace and farmed for 10 years. During the wintertime I taught a subscription school at Bethel, for about $20.00 a month. My wife and I joined the Bethel Methodist Church.

In 1890 I took a covered wagon drawn by 2 mules and made a trip to Indian Territory, going as far west as Oklahoma City. Warren Blankenship, Matt Fleming, and Jabez Banks went with me. We were gone 30 days and I caught the "western fever".

After we moved to Springdale I worked for $20.00 a month in a produce house, until it burned. Then I worked for $1.00 a day now and then at odd jobs until I got a job with the telephone company. When they purchased the Fayetteville Company I was sent there as manager, where I stayed for 1 year but I still had the "western fever".

In 1901 Fred Beasley, Bob Chunning, and I came to Indian Territory to a small town called Elam where there was a store of drygoods and hardware, a grocery, and another shop or two. This was a few miles southeast of Tulsa. The railroad had been surveyed to come through 3 or 4 miles north of Elam. I intended to buy some land from an Indian but he made the remark that a town was going to be built on the railroad, so I changed my mind about buying at that time.

Returning to Fayetteville I worked as a carpenter, erecting depots, section houses, stockyards and the like for a railroad company, sometimes going as far west as Westville, Indian Territory. Finally I moved back to Springdale and bought a grocery store, staying there for 8 months before selling in 1902.

My "western fever" was still high and I came to Broken Arrow, Indian Territory. The stores at Elam had been moved to this location on the proposed railroad line about 6 months before. Two hundred people had settled here and the sounds of building could be heard all over the place. I went to work as a carpenter.

Shortly afterward, I bought a grocery store and sent for my family. They arrived by train at Catoosa. I met them with a surrey and team which had been hired from a local livery stable. We lived in the back of the store until my present home was finished.

When the railroad was completed through here and Indian Territory became the state of Oklahoma (1907), our section became a thriving farming community.

After 3 years of grocery business I sold out and went to work managing a store for H. H. Walters. I stayed with him for 3-1/2 years then built my own store and ran it for 8 years; after which I sold the stock and rented the building. I rested for awhile, then worked again at the carpenter trade.

When the Building and Loan Association was established in Broken Arrow, I was the vice president for 12 years. In the meantime I took considerable interest in local politics, being a staunch Republican, and was on the town council for several years.

A trip had been taken to California in 1915 to visit relatives and see the World's Fair, and in 1922 we traveled by car to see the Yellowstone National Park.

My wife died in 1942 and I have been living here at our old home with my youngest daughter keeping house for me. In my 90s I am enjoying a quiet and restful life, spending much of the time reading (without aid of glasses) the newspapers or watching the programs on television.

Ackland E. Smith

Among those who contributed substantially to the Round Mountain community were Ackland Eason and Minnie Mae (Miller) Smith. Ackland was born 24 August 1872, in Marion County, Illinois, the son of Wm. C. and Sarah E. (Powers) Smith. He died 13 April 1958. Minnie Mae, born 12 November 1877, in Saline County, Kansas, was the daughter of Peter C. and Elizabeth (Le Fevre) Miller, died 20 February 1956. Ackland and Minnie are buried in the Round Mountain Cemetery. The Ackland Smiths were always ready and willing to do their share of community work. Besides farming on their own property, which was located on the east side of Round Mountain, they rented river-bottom land along White River. Most of the rented land they had used is now covered by Lake Sequoyah. Ackland and Minnie raised four children; 1-William Clyde Smith, born 24 February 1898, died 30 October 1920. Clyde was doing timber work in the Round Mountain area when he was fatally injured from a falling tree. He was engaged and was to marry in three months when he died.

Ackland Eason Smith and wife Minnie Mae (Miller) Smith.

2-Eva May Smith, born 23 June 1902, died 6 November 1951. Married 1st Dessa King. They had one daughter, Helen Louise, born 24 December 1923, married 1st to Denny Schafer. Helen and Denny have two sons, twins, Randall Dean and Richard Lee, born 21 May 1952. Helen Louise married 2nd Thomas J. Sandvig and presently lives in Lynnwood, Washington, where they own and operate an Arts and Craft business. Eva May King married 2nd to Fred Kozenek. Fred died 14 August 1986.

3-Lynn C. Smith, born 3 September 1904, married Virginia Beaver, 3 February 1935. Virginia was born 4 April 1912, Pierce City, Lawrence County, Missouri. Virginia was a prominent music teacher until her death, 14 January 1986. Lynn was with the Ford Motor Company, dealership in Fayetteville for over fifty years. Lynn and Virginia have two daughters; (1) Virginia Jane, born 6 April 1941, Kansas City, Wyandotte County, Kansas. She is an accomplished violinist and currently with the Kansas City Symphony orchestra. Janie married 1st to Jerry Eldred and they have a daughter, Shelly Lynne, born 6 December 1962. Janie married 2nd to W. Dean Rader. (2) Francis Lynne, born 17 September 1948, Wichita, Sedgwick County, Kansas. Francis, also an accomplished musician, is presently with St. Vincent Hospital in Little Rock working for a masters degree in nursing.

4-Agnes Pauline Smith, born 29 September 1912, married Hubert Danner, 3 November 1928. Hubert was born 13 November 1903. He became ill in 1965, from what was later diagnosed as Paralysis Agitaus (Parkinson disease), and was immobilized for several years before his death, 5 January 1979. Hubert's illness brought about many hardships to the family but, with much faith and fortitude, Pauline and children were able to overcome the many problems associated with this kind of trauma. Pauline worked many years for the J. C. Penney Company, and is retired from there. Pauline and Hubert have two children; (1) William Eugene, born 16 March 1930, married Betty Ann Mooney, 2 March 1951, Houston, Texas. Bill and Betty have three children; (a) Timothy Eugene, born 30 April 1958, Hilo, Hawaii, married Kelly Erin Thompson, 24 March 1979, in Cleveland, Oklahoma. They have a son, Patrick Eugene, 6 October 1984, Tulsa, Oklahoma. (b) Cheryl Ann, born 27 February 1962, Hilo, Hawaii, married Larry James Thompson, 29 November 1986, Fayetteville, Arkansas. (c) Stephen Layne, born 2 July 1964, Carthage, Texas, married Hong Ti Pham, 17 January 1987, Siloam Springs. Arkansas. William Eugene Danner is pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church in Springdale, Arkansas. (2) Eva Patricia, born 1 March 1933, married 1st John Elliott, 1952, Fayetteville, Arkansas. They have a daughter Karen Jo, born 13 March 1954, Jacksonville, Texas. Eva Patricia married 2nd Farrel E. Young, Jr., 1961, Oklahoma. They have a daughter Brenda Gayle, born 15 March 1963, Springdale, Arkansas. Brenda Gayle married Jack M. Dinnan, 16 May 1981, Kalamazoo, Michigan. Farrel E. Young, Jr., died 9 March 1969, Kalamazoo, Michigan. Eva Patricia married 3rd Wheeler Glen Bowman, 16 May 1969, Portage, Michigan. Karen Jo Elliott and Brenda Gayle Young were adopted by Wheeler Glen Bowman, 2 March 1972.

John Washington Smith

John Washington Smith was born in Dade County, Missouri, January 28, 1854. He died January 18, 1943, in Plainview, Texas. He married Miss Martha Halbert (Mattie) Crawford the 18th of November, 1877, in Washington County, Arkansas. She was the daughter of Andrew Alexander Crawford and his second wife, Rachel Tinnin. (See A. A. Crawford's family). Smith's parents were John W. and Phoebe (Moore) Smith, who were married 5th October, 1838 in Meigs County, Tennessee. Other children were David, who was a Federal soldier during the Civil War and later a preacher; James William, also a Federal soldier during the war and later U. S. Deputy Marshall under Judge Parker, in Sebastian County, Arkansas. Nancy Jane, who married Bolin Cox, Rebecca Sufinna who married John Chapman, Isaac, who was too young to join the service but disappeared during the conflict and Henry Clay, who married 1st. Virginia Turner and 2nd Belle Helms.

John and Mattie lived in Washington County until after the birth of their first child, Clyde. They later lived in Dallas, Collin and Wilbarger Counties, Texas. They homesteaded a place in Wilbarger County on Paradise Creek. Then in 1891 they moved to Floyd County, Texas and he worked for Colonel Charles Goodnight. When the "F" Ranch was broken up they patented several sections of land under the Caprock in the northeast corner of the county and 2 sections in Motley County. He later traded one of these for a fine blooded stallion. Mattie had been reared in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and did her best to bring Christianity to the area. Church services were held in the home and visiting ministers were always welcomed and given a place to stay. The first protracted meeting in the area was held under a stand of huge hackberry trees on what was later named Smith Creek in the pasture southwest of their home. Mattie died January 16, 1899 bearing twins. One of the twins died the same day and was buried in her arms. The surviving twin, Mattie, weighing three pounds was lovingly cared for by a neighbor lady, Mrs. Welch, who nursed Mattie along with her own infant child. John became worried that Mrs. Welch would become too attached to his baby and bought her home in about a month. With the aid of 16 year old Neomia the baby grew strong and healthy.

John, Mattie, and several of their children are buried in the Smith Family Cemetery on ranch land he willed the county for a community cemetery. He became a prominent rancher and stockman. He was well known for the purebred horses and mules he raised and sold. He bought and shipped cotton, cattle, horses and mules and planted the first cotton in the area. He donated land for a cotton gin, store, school and contributed to the building of a local church. He was a 32nd degree Mason and honorary lifetime member of the lodge in Floydada, Texas.

Leonard Anderson Smith

Squire Augustus Washington Smith, Sr. was born in Davidson County, North Carolina November 17, 1824. He had eight known brothers and sisters. His father, Leonard was born in 1784 and died in 1847. His mother, Susannah (1788-1844) was of Dutch descent and the daughter of Ruben and Mary Holmes. The family moved to Tipton County, Tennessee in 1830, where Leonard built a small home on 1000 acres of land. Half of this land was passed on to Augustus when he married Mary Elizabeth Yarbro on October 2, 1845. He built a big two-story home on the land. They had nine children: Henrietta - July 19, 1846, John W. - March 13, 1849 (died in infancy), Franklin Lafayette - May 11, 1850, Winfield Edgar - January 10, 1853, Augustus Washington, Jr. - February 22, 1856, Nancy A. - July 29, 1858, Leonard Anderson - January 29, 1861, Mary E. - August 1, 1863 (died in infancy) and Robert E. Lee - May 25, 1865. Augustus Sr. founded the town of Brighton, Tennessee in 1873. Most of his children remained in the Brighton area, but Franklin Lafayette went to Clarksdale, Mississippi. Nancy moved to Paragould, Arkansas and Leonard Anderson went to Springdale, Arkansas.

Before moving to Springdale, Leonard was active in the business and church life of Brighton. He was a postmaster, cashier of a bank, and a teacher and principal of the school in the 1880s. He married Claudia Bell Smith - December 29, 1873, who was one of his students, on April 6, 1891. She was the daughter of Richard Pembroke and Annie Laurie Smith. She and her sisters, Callye, Cora and Clara, and her brother, Roger were all born in Brighton, Tennessee.

Leonard and Claudia had three children; Daisy Dell - born January 7, 1893, Leonard Aubrey - June 3, 1894 and Embry Lee (Jim) - January 15, 1897. In 1911, Leonard and Claudia moved their family to Springdale, Arkansas because they wanted the cool mountain air of the Ozarks. The family lived in Springdale in a two-story white frame house at the Y intersection of Old Wire Road, Mill Street and Lowell Road, which still stands at 1003 Old Wire Road. Later, Leonard built a large two-story frame house at 620 Mill Street, and on either side he built two bungalows (614 and 626) for his married children. All these houses still stand. Daisy had married Autrey Clyde DeWese - November 2, 1890 of Brighton Tennessee, and they moved with the family to Springdale. Leonard Aubrey went to St. Louis University School of Dentistry. After he graduated, he rejoined the family and established a dental practice in Springdale in 1918. He served as a Lieutenant in the Dental Corps during World War I. He married Florine Bradley - January 14, 1897 in Russellville, Arkansas, when she came to Springdale as the Home Economics teacher in the high school. Embry Lee served in the infantry in Europe in World War I. He married Delana Belle Thompson - December 14, 1901. The families all lived together on Mill Street in the three houses. They raised their own food with vegetable gardens, fruit trees and grapes and they kept cows and chickens. Claudia kept the lawns beautiful with the flowers she grew. Jim, Autrey and Aubrey all played baseball on the Springdale team.

After moving to Springdale, Leonard Anderson Smith continued his efforts in the interests of his hometown, serving as Mayor for two terms, as city recorder for two terms, and at the time of his death, he was a Justice of the Peace of Springdale Township. For many years, he was in the insurance business, being the senior member of the firm of Smith and Banks Insurance Agency, which was at the time one of the largest in Northwest Arkansas. He retired when his health failed, only to return to the agency when E. L. Pierce became owner. He died at the office in the arms of Mr. Pierce on February 1, 1937. He had been a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church for more than sixty years. For several years after moving to Springdale, he had taught a Sunday School class at the First Methodist Church. Claudia died suddenly of a heart attack October 28, 1941. Fearing frost, she died in her flower garden cutting flowers to share with her family and friends. She also was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Both she and her husband are buried in Bluff Cemetery in Springdale.

Autrey DeWese worked for both Joyce's and Coger Drug Stores while Daisy worked as a buyer and clerk for the Cash Dry Goods Company. Her niece and nephew still remember the wonderful toys she brought them from her buying trips to the markets in St. Louis. Daisy and Autrey later bought Penrod's Cafe and operated it for many years. It was a popular hang-out for the young people, and many of the boys who grew up in Springdale worked there in the 1930s and 1940s. Many families dined at Penrod's because the food Daisy and the cook, Mrs. Crumpacker prepared was so delicious. Daisy and Autrey were both members of the Springdale Presbyterian Church. Their son, Robert Larry, was born March 17, 1912. he was valedictorian of the 1930 class of Springdale High. He attended the University of Arkansas where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. He married Myra Lucille Fergus of Elm Springs on March 3, 1934. Larry worked until his retirement for Steele Canning Company as President of Sales. During that time, he also served as President of the Ozark Canners Association. He was a member of the local Kiwanis Club. Larry and Myra had Myra Diane - August 26, 1941 and twin girls, Jean Lynn and Janet Lee - November 4, 1955. Diane married Robert Gene Shaw, son of Willis Shaw of Elm Springs on December 27, 1961. They had a daughter, Sherri Diane, who married Jeff Dillard November 3, 1967, and a son, Bryan Robert - March 3, 1970. Daisy and Autrey sold Penrod's and lived in a house on the corner of Allen Street and Maple Drive that still stands. They returned to Brighton, Tennessee, where they both died; Daisy on March 14, 1963 and Autrey on October 3, 1970. Larry died June 16, 1982. All of the family are buried in Bluff Cemetery.

Leonard Aubrey Smith and Florine Bradley were married March 10, 1920. He had his dental practice until ill health forced his retirement in 1957. He was a charter member and president of the Springdale Rotary Club. He was a member of the American Legion, which he also served as Commander, and he was active in many other civic affairs. He was an avid hunter and fisherman and in his later years, he loved rose culture and gardening. Florine was a teacher in the Springdale School System for many years, first as a Home Economics teacher, then a second grade teacher at Washington School where she was instrumental in starting the hot lunch program in the public schools. She transferred to Central Elementary when the family moved to 813 West Emma Avenue, a house no longer at that location. They built the house at 202 Maple Avenue, where they both resided until their deaths. Both were members of the Springdale Presbyterian Church. Aubrey died on August 2, 1957 in a Houston, Texas hospital after surgery for an aorta aneurism. Florine died on February 7, 1983. Both are buried in Bluff Cemetery. They had one daughter, Reba Gayle, born October 22, 1921. She attended Springdale schools and graduated from the University of Arkansas. She married Franklin Kennedy Deaver, son of Mary and Frank Deaver on October 7, 1945. He had been a submariner in World War II and came back to manage the Pioneer Lumber Company, a local family business. It later merged with Clark-Deaver Hardware to become the Pioneer Company. They built the building on Emma Avenue now owned and operated by the First State Bank. When it was sold in 1955, Kennedy returned to the University of Arkansas as a college professor. He later was head of the Mechanical Engineering Department, and retired in 1984. Kennedy and Gayle had a son, Franklin Kennedy Deaver Jr., born July 16, 1947, and a daughter, Suzanne Denise, born June 17, 1950. Ken married Sherrill Lynn Green, daughter of Richard and Louise Green of Natchez, Mississippi on June 4, 1968 and they now reside in Billings, Montana. Denise married David Leigh Ballenger, son of Kenneth and Inez Ballenger of Fayetteville, Arkansas on May 21, 1972. They have a daughter, Brynn Elizabeth, born April 3, 1977, and a son, Michael David, born August 29, 1980. At present, they live in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Embry Lee married Delana Belle Thompson on December 14, 1921. He was foreman at the Stroud and Speas Vinegar Factory in Springdale, and Delana had a Beauty Shop, first in a home on Spring Street, then on the balcony of Applegate's Drug Store. They had a son, Alan Dean born October 5, 1923. He served in the U. S. Air Corps as a technical sergeant in the 390th Bombing Squadron, as did his wife, Allene Ada Atkins born April 5, 1924. They were married in England before returning to the United States. They then moved to Whittier, California where Alan Dean worked for Edison Electric Company and later for Rose Hill Cemetery Association, first as an accountant and now as Chief Financial Officer. They had a son, Gill Dean - April 16, 1945, a daughter, Marla Sue - January 26, 1950, then another daughter, Trudi Lee - March 8, 1952. Marla married Mark Baker Muir, Trudi married Richard Espinoza, and they have a son, Lee Wilcox - July 9, 1969.

After he and Delana were divorced, Embry Lee later married Marie Gillette in 1943, and moved to Whittier, California where he worked at Consolidated Vultee Corporation, an aircraft assembly plant. He later worked for an oil well pump company until he retired because of ill health. He died in Whittier February 6, 1974. Marie then moved to Fort Worth, Texas to be near her own son, Major Gillette. She died there August 24, 1985. Both are buried in Bluff Cemetery. Allene Smith died August 29, 1984 and is buried in Rose Hill Cemetery in California.

Leortice Smith

Leortice and Betty Jean Newton Smith moved to Fayetteville, in September 1968. Leortice is the son of Mathrone (deceased) and Queen Ester Smith of Moro, Arkansas. Leortice was born in Helena, April 2, 1943 but lived in Moro, which is located in Lee County. Leortice has one sister, Vivan Smith Jackson, who lives in Pine Bluff, Arkansas. Betty was born in Bradley County in Johnsville, Arkansas on November 24, 1945, to John (deceased) and Irene Trotter Newton. Betty had eighteen sisters and brothers, half-sisters and brothers, because her father (John) was married three times, and Betty's mother (Irene), was the third wife. Sisters by the third wife include: Dot, Treadie and Johnnie, the brothers are: Burlon, Ernest and Kenneth Ray.

Leortice Smith, Jr. - age 19, Betty J. Newton Smith, Leortice Smith, Sr., Trebus Andre' Smith - age 13.

Leortice and Betty met in October 1964 at A. M. & N. College in Pine Bluff, where they were both students. Leortice was majoring in agriculture, and Betty was majoring in history. Even though Leortice was drafted into the army in 1966, during the Vietnam War, he did not go to Vietnam, probably because he was an only son. While on leave from Fort Polk, Louisiana, Leortice and Betty decided to get married. They eloped on January 27, 1967 and later joked about how inexpensive it was to do so, it cost them about $18.00.

The Smith's have two sons: Leortice, Jr. and Trebus Andre' Smith. Leortice, Jr. was born on October 22, 1967 in Pine Bluff, Arkansas in Jefferson County Hospital. Trebus was born January 29, 1974 in Washington Regional Hospital in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Both boys weighed eight pounds.

Leortice and Betty came to Fayetteville in September, 1968 by bus after Leortice got out of the army (Fort Lewis, Washington). It was a most miserable trip for Leortice because he suffered car sickness. Finally, they made it to Fayetteville, and rented a house on Center Street for $48.00 a month.

Betty graduated from A. M. & N. College in 1968 and had received a B. S. degree in history, and traveled to Fayetteville to work on a M. A. degree, which she received in 1970.

After living in Fayetteville, the Smiths bought their first car, a 1962 Corvair, for $400 in November, 1968. The first house bought by the Smiths was located on 1016 Wood, which cost about $9500. In 1980, the Smith's built a new house, which was completed and moved into on June 27, 1981.

A humorous thing about Trebus happened when he was about four years old. While visiting the Northwest Arkansas Mall, Christmas shopping, we lost Trebus for about thirty minutes. We looked and looked for him and was about to give up, then decided to check the car for a second time, we found him in the car - sleeping. We were really angry and scared, but so very glad to find him. We also lost Trebus in Washington, D. C. in the Air and Space Museum.

One humorous thing about Leortice happened when he was about 3 years old. I guess he had been watching me (Betty) cook chicken, because one day, while we were in another room, Leortice Jr. sneaked upon a table, opened the syrups and black pepper and put it all over his face and clothes. He was a syrupy mess!

Presently, Leortice, Jr. is a 19-year-old freshman, majoring in Engineering at Howard University at Washington, D. C. Leortice plays the drum in the Howard Band, while Trebus is in Beginning Band in seventh grade at Ramay Junior High School, where he plays the same drum that Leortice started out with.

In December 1986, Trebus wrote a book in his English class, which was entitled "Space Pork", which originated from stories that he heard from his father about hog farming in Moro, Arkansas.

Leortice was the first black to be appointed as a mail handler at the Fayetteville Post Office. He is presently a postal clerk, and has worked at the Post Office since 1968. Betty was the first black teacher hired at Fayetteville High School, where she still works as a social studies teacher.

This is submitted as a memorial to our son: Leortice, Jr. and Trebus Smith, and to our parents: John and Irene Newton and Mathrone and Queen E. Smith.

Pallas Trocleve Smith

Pallas T. Smith was born in 1829, the son of Daniel, born 1807, and Amy Neal Smith, born 1813, both born in Tennessee. Amy's parents were Pallas Neal and Sarah Moore Neal, daughter of Edward Moore and Amy Ashley Moore.

Pallas T. Smith was married to Christiana Lamberson in Tennessee and among their children were Amy Caledonia Smith and J. M. Smith. I do not know the names of any other children. Pallas and Christiana were still in Tennessee in 1864, for on 19 October that year at Liberty, Tennessee a son, J. M. Smith was born. Amy Caledonia Smith was born 1858 in Tennessee.

Pallas and Christiana came to Washington County from Texas. They lived near Cincinnati on the farm first owned by George Gibson Sr. in Illinois Township. Pallas was known locally as "Buckskin" Smith. Where he got this nickname we do not know but I have heard the following "tall tale" that Mr. Smith told after listening to several other men bragging on their ox teams. It seems that Mr. Smith had an extremely powerful team of oxen. While plowing in "new ground" one day his plow struck a large stump and his team stopped. Mr. Smith grabbed the plow handles, whoopped to his team and they split the stump and yanked the plow and Pallas through it, but stopped again. On looking to see why they stopped the second time he found the stump had "snapped shut" catching the seat of his buckskin "britches". He then said: "I spit on my hands, grabbed the plow handles, whoopped to my team, and _____ they pulled the stump up!" That, as the saying is "broke up the camp meeting."

Mr J. M. (Tip) Smith was married 2 July 1893 to Mary Helen Shannon daughter of J. T. and Artimisia Barker Shannon. The Shannons are said to have come from the Shannon River Valley in Ireland. Their only child Lena Elsie Smith married Fred Roy son of William R. and Minnie Little Roy, all of Summers, Arkansas. Lena and Fred moved to California in the 1930s. Their children Wayne Roy and Helen Roy Lichti live in Long Beach.

Amy Caledonia Smith married William Harvey Parks, son of Walter D. and Mary Park Parks. They moved to Texas and a descendant is Mrs. Larry Henderson of Denison, Texas who gave me much of this information. I am also indebted to Mrs. Lena Roy of Long Beach, California for the Smith and Shannon information. Pallas T. and Christiana Lamberson Smith are buried at Old Union Cemetery, Cincinnati, Arkansas.

No tombstones were ever erected as they did not believe in such monuments and asked that it not be done.

Thomas Smith

Thomas Smith, one of Washington County's earliest settlers, arrived about spring 1830 from Rutherford County, Tennessee. The first survey plat of Richland Township (16N28W), drawn in early 1832, shows as "Smith's Improvements" a house, mill and other buildings on the south side of Richland Creek near the intersection of Sections 20, 21, 28 and 29. A two room brick building, said to be his house, still stands, in disrepair, behind a modern house on Route 74 just east of the intersection at Tuttle. A family cemetery, since plowed over, once existed nearby.

Thomas Smith was born on June 17, 1785 in North Carolina, possibly in Rowan County, perhaps the son of Obadiah Smith. He migrated in his boyhood to Tennessee, probably settling with his family in Rutherford County about 1805-10. It is believed that Thomas first married about 1805, but the identity of his first wife is uncertain. It is probable she died in Washington County about 1840. Only one other marriage is known, about 1842 to Ann, the much younger widow of Nathan W. There were no children from this marriage, although Thomas did accept guardianship of Ann's two young daughters. It can be speculated this was a marriage of convenience for both. Thomas' children, listed below, were grown by then. 1. Sarah Jane, born about 1806, married David Wilson about 1826, and died before 1850. Many descendants of her seven children remained in the county. 2. Sophia (Sophronia) was born in 1808 in Tennessee, probably in Rutherford County, where she married James Monroe in 1825. She died in 1835 and is buried in the Boone Family Cemetery in Greenland, beside her husband who was murdered in 1856 by slaves, an incident well documented in county records. One son, Benjamin died in the Battle of Prairie Grove, and another, Lafayette, was a prominent lawyer in Fayetteville, where he died in 1900. 3. Wilson R. was born about 1810. Documentary proof he was Thomas' son has not been found, but other information supports this conclusion. Wilson married Temperance J., possibly a cousin, in Rutherford County in 1829. He subsequently acquired land near Thomas in Washington County. He died in Bastrop County, Texas in 1849, leaving three sons and five daughters. 4. Rebecca, born about 1812-1818, died in 1843 in Mulberry, Arkansas. She was married to Richard H., and they had one daughter, Nancy who was still in Washington County in 1880, the widow of T. H. 5. Evaline A., was born about 1814, died in 1893, the only child to survive their father. She married James Middleton, son of another early settler, Solomon, and brother-in-law to Thomas Smith's second wife Ann, the widow of Nathan. Of their four daughters, only one, Nannie, wife of James A., remained in Fayetteville, where she died in 1926. 6. Nancy, born about 1812-1818, died about 1845. She married Aaron. Mary, one of their three daughters, married William R., the son of another early settler, William D. and his wife Mary Jane. 7. Mary N., born about 1820, died about 1863. She was married to LeRoy B., another son of William D. They had no children. 8. Andrew Jackson, born in 1821, died in October 1864 from wounds received in the Battle of Fayetteville. Andrew married Mary Jane and they had eight children. Andrew is buried in the small cemetery in Tuttle.

Thomas Smith died August 3, 1870 and is buried next to Ann, who died in 1866, in the Tuttle Cemetery. During his life it is evident he had known great prosperity; the records of Washington County show many gifts of land and slaves to his children and grandchildren. By the time of his death, however, most of it was gone.

William C. Smith

One of the early settler of Round Mountain community, Richland Township, was William C. Smith who came to this county from Marion County, Illinois in 1873. He settled on property he had purchased from Elizabeth and Peter Jhrig in section 14, township 16, range 29 west, which is located next to the Round Mountain Cemetery. William C. Smith was born December 15, 1821, in Lincoln County, Kentucky, the second child of Robert D. and Catherine Eastham Smith. He was the grandson of William Calmes and Hannah Davis Smith, both Virginians and among the early settlers of Kentucky arriving there in 1781. William C. Smith, our subject, was a Civil War veteran. He served with the One Hundredth Eleventh Illinois Infantry. William C. Smith married Lodeska H. Jones in Clay County, Illinois around 1845. They resided on a small farm there and raised a family. Their children were: Harriett Ann, b. October 9, 1846, married her cousin, William E. Smith; Robert Samuel b. November 2, 1852, married Mary A. Dawson; John C. b. November 15, 1855, married Orpha Ellen Chidester; Rachel Adeline, b. March 5, 1858, married Netter Stroud; Nancy Jane, b. June 21, 1860, married Isaac Jasper Salsbury. His wife Lodeska, died in 1869, at the age of 44 and is buried in the Smith Cemetery, Omega township, Marion County, Illinois.

Dudley Porter and Grace E. Vail Smith ca. 1918-1920.

William C. Smith married the second time to Sarah Elizabeth Powers, June 9, 1869, in Marion County, Illinois. Their children were: Perry Oscar, b. May 10, 1870, married Mary Elsie Miller; Ackland Eason, b. August 24, 1872, married Minnie May Miller; Lizzie Rossella, b. October 17, 1875, married William T. Ferguson. Life was not all that easy on Round Mountain and the surrounding community. The mortality rate was high among small children and it was not long before William C. had established a small family cemetery on his property which was very common in those days. In June 1884, William C. donated a half acre of his land to bring about a community cemetery. He moved the remains from the family plot to what is now the Round Mountain Cemetery. The cemetery organization later purchased a half acre and in October 1966, Dudley Porter Smith donated two acres on the east side of the cemetery.

Tragedy hit the William C. Smith family again when his second wife, Sarah Elizabeth, died December 26, 1876. She was born February 21, 1848 in Connecticut. It is said that she died during childbirth.

William C. married the third time to Anna Eliza Smith. Anna Eliza had previously been married to a Thomas Smith (no relation to Wm. C.) and there were two children from this marriage, George B. and Martha E. It is said that George, after marriage, moved to Oklahoma. What happened to Martha is unknown. William C. and Anna Eliza, (her maiden name was McGee) had four children: Delbert, b. November 18, 1878, married Fannie Couch; Laura Alice, b. February 7, 1881, married William Thomas Johnson; Edgar, b. January 5, 1884, married Mollie Colcleasure. Walter Lee, b. February 2, 1886, married Clascie Davenport. They have many descendants living in this county.

On the 12th of November, 1904, Perry Oscar was shot and killed at the home of Jasper Salsbury. Oscar Smith was a constable for the township and was living about two miles away from where the accident occurred. He has been called to the Salsbury home to try and quell an argument between Mr. Salsbury and two Madison County men (brothers) over a small debt. Shortly after Oscar Smith arrived, the argument heated up and one of the brothers pulled his gun and shot Oscar in the chest. He died just moments afterward. Netter Salsbury, who was fifteen years old at the time, was bringing a wagon load of corn to the barn when he saw Oscar come out of the house holding his chest and fell dead at the corner of the house. The two brothers hurriedly left the scene on their horse and wagon and drove several miles east where officers found the wagon abandoned.

This tragic accident left the widow Mary Elsie with three small sons, Dudley Porter Smith, b. November 20, 1893, d. March 29, 1978; Arley Franklin Smith, b. February 20, 1895, d. February 4, 1944, unmarried; Errie Clavel Smith, b December 1, 1897, d. November 8, 1961, Long Beach, California.

William Claiborne Smith

In 1858 there came to the Farmington area from Collin County, Texas, the William Claiborne Smith family. William C. purchased the Pettigrew farm southwest of town and the mill north of Farmington that later became known as the Pegram Mill. The father was known in Farmington as "the man who always rode a gaited horse" and until the early 1900s, his children owned beautiful horses they purchased from relatives in Tennessee. The night of April 11, 1865, William C. was robbed and murdered on his way home from the mill leaving a young wife and eleven children.

William Claiborne Smith was born in Tennessee in 1816 and in 1841 in Greene County, Tennessee, he married Elizabeth "Bettie" Bible who was descended from the Scotch trader Ludovick Grant and his Cherokee wife, Elizabeth Coody. They had five children all born in Tennessee: Charles Wilson who married Elizabeth Allen moved to Texas; Margaret Ann who married James Patton, moved to Mineral Wells, Texas, and had three sons, William, John, and Tobe; James Monroe who fought in the Civil War and died at home in 1866; Moses Elbert "Eb" who married (1) Lucy Allen and (2) Minnie Lee Blackburn of War Eagle and had six children, Lucy Belle, Lena, Hugh Dinsmore, May (Mrs. Bill Armstrong), William Carl who married Frances Slaughter, and Frank Harold who married Dorothy Latimer; and George Franklin who married Serena Gilliland and moved to Colorado, then New Mexico where he and his sons delivered the first mail in the area.

In 1853 the family left Tennessee for Texas where Bettie, the mother, died. In January 1855, William Claiborne Smith married Catherine Hunter on her 18th birthday. Catherine was born in Greene County, Tennessee, the daughter of John and Cormena Kinzer Hunter. She and William C. had six children: John Preston Smith who married Mary Belle Engels and had six children, Gladys (Mrs. Peter Bragg), Beulah, Isabella, Hunter Engels, Catherine(Mrs. Wainwright Martin), and John Preston, Jr. who married Frances Grey; William Claiborne, Jr. "Bill" who married Harriet Thomas Benton and had three children, Mabel, Ray and Hazel; Mary Alice (Mrs. William M. Gaskill) who moved to Shawnee, Oklahoma, and had two children, Lettie Alice and William Edward; Susan Isabel (Mrs. Alexander Morrison) who moved to Valley, Washington, and had a daughter, Maud; Bettie who married William H. "Will" Morton and had five children, James, Julia, Lena, Winifred, and William Claiborne; and Catherine "Kate" who married R. M. "Mack" Morton (brother of Will) and had four children, Grace, Routh, Russell and Mamie.

Soon after the father, William Claiborne, was murdered, the young widow, Catherine married Abraham Allen by whom she had four children: Robert Edward Lee (father of the late Lyle Allen), Sarah Elizabeth, Martha Jane and William Benjamin.

"Eb" was the only one of the "first" family of children to continue to live in Farmington where he owned a large farm and the general store. In 1887 he married Minnie Lee Blackburn, daughter of William Jasper and Missouri Ellen Gideon Blackburn. Minnie's father had been a school teacher and farmer who served in the Arkansas House of Representatives. He and his five brothers, sons of Sylvanus Walker and Katherine Brewer Blackburn, had all fought for the South in the Civil War. Sylvanus had moved to War Eagle with his parents, Josiah and Rachel Bryant Blackburn in 1831. Josiah was the son of Ambrose Blackburn, a Revolutionary War soldier, whose grave was the first grave in Tennessee to be decorated by the Sons of the American Revolution.

After "Eb" died, in 1905, Minnie moved to Fayetteville where four of her children graduated from the University of Arkansas and Lena, the fifth one, became a registered nurse. Both Carl and Frank were engineers and both served in army in World War II, Frank at Rock Island, Illinois, and Carl in Europe where he was honored with the Victoria Cross by England and the Croix de Guerre by France. After the war, Frank became a professor of engineering at the University of Michigan and Carl returned to Fayetteville where he was City Engineer, a director of the Fayetteville Building and Loan, and Commanding Officer of the 142nd F. A. Bn. Arkansas National Guard from 1946 to July 1952. Prior to the war he had been project engineer at Devil's Den and Lake Wedington.

John Preston's family moved to Fayetteville where he had a clothing store on the square. After their retirement, his two daughters, Beulah and Isabella, lived in the old Engels home in Farmington until their deaths.

William Claiborne, Jr. "Bill" and Harriet moved to Oklahoma where he was a U. S. Marshall for Judge Parker. He was the Marshall who brought in Cherokee Bill and Henry Starr. En route to Fort Smith from Colorado, he and Henry spent the night in Farmington with Bill's mother, Catherine, and Henry gave them his horse (a paint) and saddle as "he wouldn't be using them for awhile". Bill is buried in Muskogee, Oklahoma. His grandson, J. R. DeWitt, is an attorney in Madison, Wisconsin.

Bettie's husband, Will Morton, was a banker in Fayetteville and owned a farm at Hogeye.

Kate and Mack Morton had a large farm and canning factory at Farmington. Their daughter, Mamie, married Clyde Carnes and they had a dairy west of Farmington and a canning factory.

Smith descendants still living in the area are Grace Morton Barnett who is 100 years old and her daughter, Katherine Couch, of Tulsa; Morton Carnes and William Claiborne "Bill" Morton of Fayetteville, Kenneth Carnes and Ada Lee Smith Shook of Springdale, and Catherine Martin of Conway.

Otis Smitherman

Otis Smitherman was born March 18, 1864 in Pike County, Illinois. His parents were William Jasper Smitherman, born October 10, 1840 in Morgan County, Illinois and Louise Emma Lester, born December 10, 1845 in Pike County, Illinois. They are both buried in Bluff Cemetery, Springdale, Arkansas: William Jasper in 1929 and Louise Emma in 1922. They had moved to a small farm south of Springdale around 1906 after a fire had destroyed the Smitherman Mill near Milton, Illinois.

The SMITHERMAN surname can be found in Barbados as early as 1635, but the progenitor of Otis's line, Samuel Smitherman (born circa 1720), came to America in 1744 on the ship Justitia from London, England. Samuel settled in Fairfax County, Virginia where he and his wife, Sarah purchased property bordering on Mount Vernon, the estate of George Washington.

Thomas Smitherman, the next in Otis's line, married and settled in Randolph County, North Carolina. His son, John Smitherman, migrated to Rutherford County, Tennessee and purchased property near Stone's River Civil War battleground.

The great-grandfather of Otis, Jesse Smitherman (born 1798 in North Carolina) moved the family from Tennessee to Morgan County, Illinois. The family Bible of Littleton Jefferson Smitherman, Otis's grandfather, describes the move in this manner: "The family loaded the household goods on a two-wheeled cart pulled by a horse, while they all walked beside the cart." This took place when Littleton was about nine years old. He recorded in the Bible that the family returned to Tennessee in 1831 after staying in Illinois for three years. However, around 1834, Jesse Smitherman again moved the family to Illinois and this time he settled in Greene County, where he remained until his death in 1852. Littleton Jefferson Smitherman, born January 7, 1819, married Miss Miriam Brown and they settled in Pike County, Illinois near the town of Milton. There, he and his son, William Jasper, farmed over 300 acres and raised cattle and sheep. Later, William Jasper purchased a large mill near Milton where both of his sons learned the milling trade.

Otis married Jon Belle Greathouse, the daughter of Martin Luther Greathouse and Sarah Jane Watson. They lived in Milton, Illinois for awhile; then Otis began taking milling jobs in Kansas, Missouri and finally in Union City, Tennessee. When his mother died in 1922, Otis moved the family to his father's farm south of Springdale. This small farm had three crops: apples, grapes, and tomatoes, which provided the only cash income for the family. Later, Otis purchased additional land and added strawberries for another cash crop. The family survived the depression in good shape, as did most of the other small farmers surrounding Springdale.

Otis died January 22, 1939, and Jon Belle died August 25, 1957; both are buried in Bluff Cemetery. They had three children: (1). Marie Smitherman married Cleveland Charles Leeman. A. Cleveland Wayne Leeman married Berta Hoffman. a. Susan Eileen Leeman, b. Neil Albert Leeman, c. Richard Cleveland Leeman, d. Scott Doolin Leeman, e. Bruce Leeman. 2. Juanita Smitherman married Dixie Dupree Deaver, a prominent civic leader, a banker and an authority on Springdale history. 3. Harold Edison Smitherman married Dola D. Dyes. A. William Martin Smitherman married Gertrude Phillips. B. Mary Frances Deaver (adopted by Juanita and Dupree Deaver) married Earl Cranston Reid. a. Cranston Dupree Reid married Karen Miller. (1) Christopher Dupree Reid.

After the death of Cranston Reid, Mary Frances married Jack Edward Page. C. Arthur Jackson Smitherman married Analou Johnson. (1) Jack Dennis Smitherman. 2. Mary Dyan

Smitherman married Dean Williams. a. Brandon Tyler Williams, b. David Aaron Williams. D. Bob Smitherman married Helen Earlene Baker. (1) Robert Earl Smitherman. (2) Carolyn Earlene Smitherman married Hobart Richardson, a. Gerald Vincent married Glenda Rose Allison, b. Lisa Michelle. After the death of Helen, Bob married Ann Louise Youngblood. E. Bettye Smitherman married Harry Franklin Mohney. (1) Michael Alan Mohney married Jackie Elizabeth Hayes, a. Erin Elizabeth Mohney, b. Lauren Kaye Mohney. (2) Gregory Franklyn Mohney married Jill Marie Graves, a. Nathan Milan, b. Lisa Marie Mohney (3). Debra Kay Mohney.

William James Snodgrass

My great-grandfather William James Snodgrass, who was born 10 June 1828 in White County, Tennessee, was a descendant of immigrants who came to Virginia in the early 1700s. He was the oldest child of Thomas Jefferson Snodgrass, who was born 8 January 1801 in Washington County, Virginia, and Margaret Brown Duff, who was born there on 28 July 1805.

William James Snodgrass married Winifred (Winnie) Norton Bradley 28 December 1853 in Sparta, Tennessee. They and their first nine children left Sparta in 1872 and traveled overland in two wagons to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where their wagons and horses were loaded on a flatboat and floated down the Tennessee River to where it meets the Ohio River at Paducah, Kentucky. They continued on the Ohio River until it emptied into the Mississippi and then floated down the Mississippi to where it meets the Arkansas River. At this point they changed to a steamboat to go up the Arkansas River. They traveled as far as Cabin Creek, Arkansas, where cousins of Winnie Bradley Snodgrass lived. Cabin Creek is near Clarksville in Johnson County. They farmed there until daughter Martha Alice died of malaria in 1873. Then they moved to near Summers, Arkansas, where Winnie's cousins Becky and Mint Elms lived.

William James Snodgrass traded one of the wagons and a team of horses for eighty acres of good farm land with a four-room log house sealed inside with weatherboard and outside with siding. My mother, Bessie Louise Snodgrass Cheatham, wrote a note in a A History of the Summers Community by Zella Cann and Eugene Gibson: "Grandfather Snodgrass bought the Robert Medearis place in 1875." After the death of his parents, Thomas Lafayette bought this farm from his brothers and sisters. Information left by Homer Lawson Snodgrass, Sr. states: "My brothers and I helped Dad clear twenty acres where we planted an apple orchard. This was in addition to the apple orchard planted by Grandfather Snodgrass."

William James died 11 May 1882 at age fifty-four. He was the second person to be buried in the Lincoln Cemetery. His wife, Winnie Norton Bradley, was the daughter of John Phillip Bradley, born 1806 in Rutherford County, North Carolina, and Nancy Johnson, born 1811 in Tennessee. Winnie was born in Sparta 20 January 1836, died 11 February 1908 and is buried in the Lincoln Cemetery. They had twelve children, the last three born after they settled near Summers: Mary Frances 8 August 1856 - 3 January 1941; Margaret Jane 8 January 1858 - 29 February 1920; John Phillip 29 November 1861 - 31 March 1938; Thomas Lafayette 4 January 1863 - 21 April 1942; Martha Alice 1 June 1865 - 1873; William James 18 November 1866 - 29 August 1950; George Washington 3 March 1868 - 24 February 1933; Florence Amanda 15 December 1869 - 26 October 1959; Winnie Lou 29 July 1872 - 19 July 1943; Elnora 9 August 1875 - 1 April 1936; Emma D. 1 January 1878 - 16 November 1961; Anna Augusta 20 November 1879 - 9 December 1946.

Thomas Lafayette, the fourth child of William James and Winnie, was born 4 January 1863 and married John Dee Nunley 27 August 1885. Dee was born 3 March 1864 at McKinney, Texas, to John Alexander Nunley, born 1823 in Tennessee, and Leannah Rich, born 1828. She had this unusual name became her mother died shortly after her birth and asked that the baby be named for her husband. Dee was reared by her grandmother Rebecca Rich, who lived near Lincoln.

Thomas Lafayette and Dee had thirteen children: William Henry 28 September 1886 - 9 November 1938; Mary Leanna (May) 2 December 1887 - 25 March 1979; Bessie Louise 10 July 1890 - 28 June 1963; Her twin (unnamed) died at birth; Winnie Ray 3 July 1892 - 22 October 1977; Samuel Denver 13 February 1894 - 27 May 1976; Homer Lawson 18 January 1896 - 25 December 1938; Claude Miller 16 February 1898 - 4 February 1987; Florence Pearl 7 February 1900 - 8 August 1987; Charles Thomas 20 February 1902 - 20 April 1904; Elsie Nora 4 April 1905; Bruce Berry 25 June 1908; and Anna Muriel 16 November 1910.

Thomas Lafayette died 21 April 1942. John Dee, his wife, died 10 November 1926. Both are buried in the Lincoln Cemetery.

My mother, Bessie Louise Snodgrass, married George Marcus Cheatham 3 December 1914. They had four children. For a list of my siblings see my paternal line under Thomas Jefferson Cheatham.

Bessie Louise Snodgrass died 28 June 1963, and George Marcus Cheatham died 18 January 1972. They are buried south of Lodi, California, in the Cherokee Cemetery, as are Bessie's brother Claude Miller Snodgrass and sister Florence Pearl Snodgrass Collins Johnston.

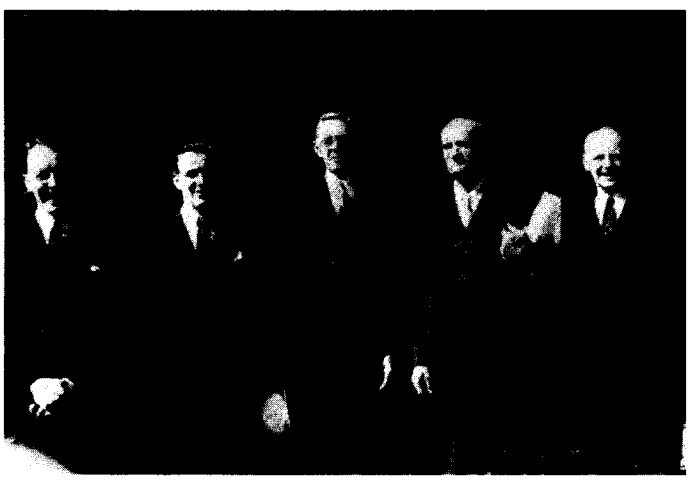
Michael Son

Michael Son was born in Virginia in 1776 and is listed as 73 years of age in the U. S. Census of 1850 living in Washington County, Arkansas. His wife was Nancy A. Kennedy, daughter of George Kennedy, born in South Carolina in 1790. Nancy Kennedy and Michael Son married September 5, 1812. (The stone that marks her grave in the Son's Chapel Cemetery shows date of birth as August 4, 1801; however, she stated that she was 60 years of age in the Census of 1850.)



Rev. J. P. McConnell, Rev. F. E. Zendt, Rev. W. G. Hall, Mr. W. C. Stutheit, Rev. J. W. Workman. Invocation was given by Rev. J. W. Butler.

Copies of letters between direct descendants of Son families indicate that Michael Son descended from Michael Son, Sr.; although records in Washington County do not show any entries as Michael Son, Jr., it does seem likely that Michael Son of Washington County, Arkansas descended from Michael Son, Sr., of Augusta County, Virginia.

Michael Son, Sr., Revolutionary War Soldier, Continental Army 1775-83; Augusta County, Virginia. Wife's name was Elizabeth _____.

"At a court held for Augusta County, May 15, 1781, present: Alexander McClenachan, William McPheeters, James Troller, Jr., Joseph Bill and Alexander Robertson, " ordered: That Elizabeth

Son's Chapel still standing on Highway 45 between Fayetteville and Hindsville.

Son, wife of Michael Son, a soldier of the Continental Army, be allowed the sum of six hundred pounds for her and her children's subsistence for the ensuing year." Recorded in the Augusta County Clerk's Office, Staunton, Virginia in Order Book 17, page 329.

Children of Michael Son, Sr. and Elizabeth Son are believed to be: Michael Son, Jr., born in Virginia 1776; Abraham, born in Virginia 1777; and Thomas Franklin born in Virginia (date unknown).

Michael Son, Jr. was married before his marriage to Nancy Kennedy September 15, 1812. His children were: John F. Son born Virginia September 10, 1797; James born Kentucky 1801; Abraham F. born Kentucky March 8, 1809; Lucinda born Missouri January 17, 1827.

John F. Son settled near Barnett, Morgan County, Missouri. He was a Baptist minister and organized and built his first church known as Hopewell Memorial Church, where he served his entire life and is buried in Hopewell Cemetery.

James, Abraham and Lucinda moved with Michael Son into the northwest Arkansas area which at that time was the "Territory of Arkansas."

The original plat books and abstract of the plat records of Washington County, Arkansas show Michael Son with 40 acres in Section 10, Township 16, North, Range 31 West and dated September 11, 1834. James Son (thought to be his son) was living nearby in Section 11, Township 16 North Range 31 West; with 80 acres also dated September 11, 1834.

Abraham F. Son was listed in the Tax Records of Carroll County, Arkansas in 1834, 1835, 1836, 1837, 1838, and 1840 and is thought to be a son of Michael Son, and is listed owning land in both Carroll County as well in Section 11, Township 16, North, Range 31 West in Washington County in 1841. He apparently moved on into Washington County in the late 1840s and was taxed along with Michael and James Son after 1851.

Michael Son had one daughter, Lucinda, still living at home in the 1850 census. She was 22 years of age and was born in Missouri in 1828.

The 1850 Census shows James Son as being 49 years of age and born in Kentucky. His wife Marget, age 37, was born in Missouri. They had 7 children living in the household all shown as being born in Arkansas. Michael, the oldest son was 19 years of age; so this could mean that the Son families were in Arkansas in 1831.

Their route of migration appears to have been from Augusta County, Virginia into Caldwell County, Kentucky and on into Missouri and into this area of northwest Arkansas. One of the early land records show that the land transaction was in the Territory of Arkansas.

The Arkansas Tax List of Washington County for 1836 shows: Son, James—160 acres, 2 horses, 4 cattle, poll tax 25 cents, total tax $2.60. Son, Michael—3 horses, 1 cattle, poll tax 25 cents, total tax $1.16-1/4.

The location of the 40 acres listed for Michael Son in Section 10 in 1834, is some 4 miles west of the present day University at Fayetteville. He sold some of his 40 acres in 1840 and described the part he sold as that "along the creek and next to the Methodist Camp Grounds." James Son owned 205 acres, one mile east of him in Section 11. Abraham F. Son bought two 40 acre tracts of land also in Section 11 in 1841.

Records show that Choctaw Certificate #315B for 160 acres of the Indian Lands in Arkansas, were in the original tract issued to Ah-to-Chubbee, under Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek August 23, 1842, by the Secretary of War by Act of Congress. An adjoining tract of land to the east shows deed issued to Ah-to-Lubbee and Ela-ok-Chubbee noted as "Choctaw man and wife." Relationship is not known but likely from the same clan. Upon his death, this land was deposited in the General Land Office at Fayetteville.

A patent for 40 acres of this tract in Section 33, Township 17 North, Range 29, West; was issued to Michael Son and his wife Nancy in 1848 and stated they had "settled on the land in 1847." This 40 acre tract is some 5 miles northeast of Fayetteville on Highway 45, and is indentified as Son's Chapel Community and some 8 or 9 miles east of the tract of land Michael Son settled in 1834.

Michael Son is listed on the Production of Agriculture Census in Prairie Township of Washington County, Arkansas during the year ending June 1, 1850, and enumerated the 10th day of December 1850 shown owning 30 acres of improved and 10 acres unimproved land, value shown as $316.00. Value of farming implements $15.00, 1 horse, 2 milch cows, 1 other cattle, 20 swine, value of livestock $56.00; 60 bushels of wheat, 300 bushels of Indian corn, 200 bushels of oats, 30 pounds of wool, 10 bushels of Irish potatoes, 30 bushels of sweet potatoes, value of orchard products $15.00, 50 pounds of butter, value of homemade manufactures $40.00 and value of animals slaughtered $40.00.

James Son, is enumerated on the same page of the Census with assets more than double shown for Michael and is also shown having 12 working oxen, 25 sheep, 45 pounds of cheese, 2 tons of hay, 2 bushels of other grass seeds and 80 pounds of beeswax and honey. Livestock was at the time of the Census and produce was for the year ending June 1, 1850.

On the 9th day of March of 1852, Michael Son and his wife Nancy Son, for the sum of $2.00, conveyed 2 acres and 117 poles, to the "Trustees" for a Methodist Church. The property to be used by the Trustees and their successors for the "benefit of said church forever." This deed was filed on the 25th day of June 1852 "Reserving this for school, church and sundry purposes, for the benefit of the said church forever."

The original log church building was located on land on the east side of Son's Chapel Cemetery which is among the oldest cemeteries in the county.

Lucinda Son married Pleasant Vernon May 2, 1852. Michael Son deeded 40 acres to Pleasant Vernon and Lucinda Vernon December 28, 1853. Recorded in Deed Book 1, page 93.

Abraham Son bought property, one mile west, from David Walker, October 18, 1855 as shown in the Land Records Book J, page 170. The following year he bought land adjacent to that from Thomas A. Henson November 22, 1856, Book K, page 98.

James Son continued to live on his original property and bequeathed all his real property to his heirs, except for one half acre, which he gave to the neighborhood for a "Burying Ground" stating "that it was where my son and daughter are buried." This will is dated October 22, 1879, Will Book "A-B" page 159 — 1882.

H. H. Alexander bought three tracts of land including the former Son acreage on August 2, 1867. In 1885 he deeded the parcel north adjoining the Son's Chapel Cemetery for another church and school building. He and his wife, Martha Jane Alexander, for the sum of one dollar deeded to the directors of School District No. 4; a parcel of land for use in building a school and stipulated it be expressly understood that the Methodist Church south have use of the house to be built on the above described land for church service on the first Saturday and Sunday of each month, the Primitive Baptist Church shall occupy the house on the second Saturday and Sunday of each month. That the Methodist Church shall have the privilege of using the building for church services on the 4th Saturday and Sunday and if the house is not at any time occupied by any of the denominations mentioned it shall be opened and free to any other church denomination or religious society. That when any of the above provisions or stipulations are not carried out or in any manner violated, the above described premises are to revert back to the grantors, their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns. This Deed is recorded in Book O-2, page 545, and dated 5 October 1885.

Another Deed appears in Deed Book T-2, page 199 to the Directors of School District No. 4 and stipulates that it was being made in part to correct their earlier deed and stipulated that the "Christian Church shall occupy said house on the 3rd Saturday and Sunday preceding each month." This Deed is dated 28 July 1887.

A tract of the original Michael Son land was owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Porter who purchased it in 1932. Mr. and Mrs. Porter gave Son's Chapel Community land adjoining north on which to build a new church and community house, and which is now known as the Son's Chapel Memorial Church. This church and cemetery being separated by Highway 45, running east and west from Hindsville to Fayetteville.

As requested by Michael and Nancy Son, in their deed dated 9th March 1852; and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Alexander in their deeds of 1885 and 1887, the "Trustees of the church today still assume the burden of responsibility as stipulated, in the donation of their property some 135 years ago; and Inter-Denominational services are held each Sunday.

Michael Son appeared repeatedly among the records of Washington County since the original of 1834. He appears on the Tax Record of 1854 paying $.18-3/4 State Tax; $.18-3/4 County Tax. He last appears on the 1855 Tax List, at the age of 79 years, paying $.21-1/4 State Tax sand $.21-1/4 County Tax. The date of death of Nancy Son appears on her grave marker in the Son's Chapel Cemetery as 8/7/1872, having lived to the age of 84 years.

The grave marker of the grave of Michael Son is in the Hopewell Cemetery, east of Versailles, Morgan County, Missouri. It is standing next to the grave of John F. Son. Having lived one month longer than his wife Nancy. This grave marker reads: "Michael Son, born 1776, died September 1872, aged 96 years."

These were hardy pioneers whose hopes and aspirations had been so vital in the early migration and development of our country, our state and in their case, the Son's Chapel Community.

Stephen Marion Southern

Stephen Marion Southern was born in Lee County, Virginia in April 1814. He first married Mary Lambet in Jonesville, Lee County, Virginia and they had two children, James Newton and Adah Jane. After Mary's death he married Polly Lambert in Claiborne County, Tennessee, and they lived there and had two children Cornelius and Frances "Katie". After losing his second wife Stephen remained single for years and traveled to Illinois where he met Sarah Ann Hudson Barnes, also a widow with 4 children by her marriages to John Barnes. The children were Joseph W. Barnes, John Barnes, Mary Ellen and Martha Ann. Stephen and Sarah Ann were married on 7 August 1862 in Logan County, Illinois.

Their first children were born there and are Stephen McClelland b. 15 May 1863, William S. b. 29 December 1864, Albert and Alberta, twins born 12 September 1867. Cornelius went into the Civil War and was discharged at Ft. Gibson and may have seen what he liked in Arkansas as the family came after the 1870 Census year to Winslow area of Washington County, Arkansas. The last daughter, Viola C. was born in May 1874 the only child to be born in Arkansas of their family. All the children grew up and married in Washington County.

Stephen McClelland married Nancy Moore on May 18, 1883 and had the following children: William, Sarah Ann, Martin, Floyd, Nancy, Anna and Roy G. Stephen and Nancy are buried in Blackburn Cemetery. William married Ida Moore on September 10, 1885 a sister of Nancy Moore who married his brother. They are also buried at Blackburn Cemetery. They had the following family: Susie, Zada, Maggie, Lula, Dessie, Atha, James Dewey, Claude, Fannie and Flora. All married people of Washington County and raised their families here. Albert never married and his mother, Sarah Ann lived with him after Stephen Marion died in 1904 at the age of 90. Sarah Ann was also able to live to the ripe age of 90 and died in 1914 on April 8. Stephen, Sarah Ann, son Cornelius, daughter Alberta, daughter Viola are all buried at Oak Grove as is Albert Southern.

Alberta married William K. Sutton and had the following children: Frances, Jane, James, Ola, Ollie, John, William and Earl.

From a copy of Viola Southern Davis' Bible I have the marriages of her sisters and brothers, half sisters and half brothers. James N. Southern married G. Spangler; Cornelius married Ruth Epply; Adah Jane Southern married Jacob Unger 18 April, 1850; Frances "Katies" married M. Musgrove 27th December 1874. All but the oldest son came to Washington County, Arkansas with the family. The four Barnes children all married in Washington County, Arkansas. Joe Barnes used to run a store in Winslow. It was very interesting to visit as his hobby was stuffed animals and birds and I can remember he did a very good job on them.

Stephen and Sarah Ann after their early years of hardship of losing their loved ones finally found happiness and a good family to end out their long life and now have many descendants left in Washington County that have carried on the family line.

Viola Southern, the youngest daughter and native of Washington County married John Nathan Davis, also a native of Washington County on 17th February 1895 and they lived their life in the Blackburn community and had two daughters, Sylvia May who married John Byrum and Beulah Pearl who married Clifton Mannon.

William Sparks

William Sparks was born about 1806, Greenup County, Kentucky to William John and Mary Jane (Green) Sparks. He married first, Emaline Hyde and they had several children. About 1842, the family moved to Buchanon County, Missouri. Shortly thereafter, Emaline died. William re-married on 15 December 1845 to Sarah Ann (Emerick) Rector. She was born in December of 1822 and married first to Nelson Rector. She divorced him for desertion. A son, B. F. was born about 1847 and a daughter Frances was born about 1849. About 1853, the family moved to Texas where William took land by pre-emption. Three daughters and one son were born in Texas. Minerva (?) born 1854; Columbus, born 18 September 1856; Sarah A. born 1860 and Lulla born 1862. Family legend says they left to come north to join a wagon train bound for the Willamette Valley in Oregon. However, 1870 census records show they were in Fort Smith, Arkansas in June of that year. It is thought that William may have been ill and died shortly after. About 1875, Sarah Ann married John E. Stonestreet and the family settled in the Canehill area of Washington County, Arkansas. Nothing is remembered about B. F. or Minerva. However, all the other children married in Washington County. Frances married 24 December 1879 to William P. Smith of Dutch Mills. They owned a grist mill. Sarah Ann married 22 August 1880 to John Glenn of Lincoln. Lulla married 27 June 1880 to Samuel Shannon of Clyde. All lived, raised their families and died within a few miles of each other. Columbus married 12 September 1875 to Mary born 2 June 1857 in Canehill to William and Lydia (Newman-Elms) Bower. They lived near Canehill until 1898 when they moved to Indian Territory, Oklahoma. They came back to visit kin, traveling by covered wagon and camping out overnight on the way. No one remembers when Sarah Ann and John Stonestreet died, only that they lived the later years with Lulla & Samuel Shannon. Both are buried on a hill on the Shannon homeplace. Two small native stones, a pink rosebush and a few clumps of iris mark their resting place.

John Lafayette (Fay) Stafford

John Lafayette Stafford, second child of John P. and Lena C. Stafford was born September 3, 1891, at 414 Holcomb Street in Springdale, Arkansas. He joined his brother, Guy C., born two years previously. The family continued to grow with the subsequent births of Edward Raymond in 1897 and Cessna Marie in 1900.

John Lafayette, or "Fay", as he was affectionately called, helped in the office of The Springdale News which was founded by his father in 1887. A conscientious worker around the office, he also delivered papers on horseback.

Tragedy struck the young family in 1902 when their mother, Lena, died in childbirth. Known for her lively sense of humor and quick wit, these attributes would manifest themselves in the lives of her children.

Two years later, a lovely and petite schoolteacher named Myrtle Murphy became their new mother in January 1904. Several months after the wedding, Mr. Stafford and his bride boarded a Frisco train and accompanied by Guy and Fay, took a belated honeymoon to the World's Fair in St. Louis.

Searching for the perfect memento for Cessna and Raymond who remained in Springdale, Fay decided upon a large box of candy. Surely the confection was worthy of a World's Fair. But alas, cradling his treasure on the long train ride home, he was dismayed to find upon arrival all that remained of his gift was a tablespoon of pink syrup.

Life was good in Springdale for children. Fay was delighted to serve as mascot for a local baseball team which won the Northwest Arkansas Championship in 1904. His love of sports thus began early and continued for the remainder of his life.

In 1908, a sister, Marion, was born. She was to be followed in later years by Mary Elizabeth and Ellis. The expanding family and expanding news business provided a fertile field for many happy occasions and no small amount of pranks.

Graduating in 1909 from Springdale High School on Johnson Street, Fay was employed full-time by his father at The Springdale News as printer. In July of that year, Mr. Stafford purchased the first Junior Linotype sold in the state. Competition for the privilege of operating the machine became very keen. The following is a direct quote from the Golden Anniversary Edition of The Springdale News of April 29, 1937, from an article written by Guy Stafford: "Fay had been chosen to be the operator-a selection that proved perfect although it almost broke the heart of Guy, who so wanted to get his hands on the machine. Prior to leaving the office to take up his work in banking Fay became one of the most efficient operators and was considered by the manufacturers to be the best in the South. Several times he demonstrated the operation of the type-setter at gatherings of publishers".

After his day's work at the news office, Fay played on local baseball teams or playing the clarinet, often joined his buddies in the band directed by "Frank Barr". Though he liked his job at The Springdale News, at the urging, of Dr. C. G. Dodson, Fay joined The First National Bank. The year was approximately 1914 and the bank was then located at the southeast corner of Emma and Holcomb.

Joining other Springdale residents, Fay enlisted in the army on July 1, 1918. As a member of the A. E. F., he sailed to France on October 28, 1918. Happily the Armistice was signed and he arrived from France December 20, 1918. Honorably discharged at Camp Pike, Arkansas, on January 16, 1919, Fay returned to his bank job which, as promised, awaited him upon his return.

With memories of war vivid in his mind, he journeyed to St. Louis where on May 8, 1919, he attended a caucus with other veterans. Out of these meetings, the participants organized the American Legion. Those who attended this gathering comprised the Society of Founders of the American Legion. This experience led him to later become a charter member of the local Clarence E. Beeley Post Number 139.

Settling into the pleasant routine of small town life, it was about this time Fay began to take notice of a young lady who was working at the post office. Miles Laverna Harper, a former teacher and the daughter of Mrs. A. A. Backus, had moved to Springdale from Green Forest, Arkansas, in 1915.

Fay's interest increased when Miles left the post office and was employed at the Style Shop, conveniently located two doors east of the First National Bank. After work at the bank, Fay developed the habit of dropping by the Style Shop, ostensibly to visit the owner, Mr. Umbaugh.

Winning a local contest in the spring of 1922, Miles was selected over two other contestants to represent Springdale at the festivities marking the opening of the Million Dollar Free Bridge at Fort Smith, linking Arkansas to Oklahoma by interstate highway.

Miles had a sweetheart in St. Louis. She had also taken the important step of traveling by train to visit him and his mother. Fay soon learned of this event. At the gentle urging of his mother, he shed his conservative posture, sprang into action and won Miles' favor. They were married at the Methodist parsonage on December 25, 1923.

Soon after their marriage, the newlyweds began construction of a house at 201 Allen Street, next to the Stafford family home on Holcomb. This was to be their home for their entire married life. It was also the birthplace of a son, John Miles, born August 31, 1927.

In October of 1927, Fay joined with other sports enthusiasts and became a charter member of the Springdale Country Club. He and his brother, Raymond, urged their father to join them in learning the game of golf.

June 7, 1929, saw the arrival of the first daughter, Fay Marie. She, too, was born at 201 Allen Street.

On October 7, 1931, Fay, now a cashier, and another employee were at work during the quiet noon hour when three men entered the bank. Their goal of armed robbery was apparent and they went about their business with precision. By his strong denial that any other monies were there, Fay was able to preserve the bonds and gold. The robbers' loot consisted of almost entirely of silver coins. Unaware what was taking place, Miles kept ringing the telephone at the bank with a request for Fay to bring some tomatoes home for lunch.

Observing the obvious Indian ancestry of two of the men, Fay immediately telephoned the sheriff at Tahlequah, Oklahoma, with a description. The sheriff, familiar with the trio, met them with a posse when they arrived in his state.

On June 7, 1933, the fourth birthday of Fay Marie, a second daughter, Mary Eleanor, was born at the Fayetteville City Hospital.

Always active in civic service, Fay was elected to the Springdale School Board in 1935. He served in this capacity for fourteen years. It was also in 1935 that it became apparent that a new Methodist Church building was finally coming to fruition. Already a member of the Board of Stewards (Administrative Board), Fay was selected as chairman of the building committee. On Palm Sunday March 21, 1937, the first service was held in the beautiful church on the northwest corner of Johnson and Main.

Still pursuing his love of golf, Fay brought home the championship trophy from the Arkansas Bankers Association tournament in Hot Springs in the early nineteen forties. It was at this time that his energies also were directed to the serious business of helping the war effort on the home front.

Pie suppers and cake walks were held to raise money for savings and bonds. Fay thoroughly enjoyed attending these gatherings, especially in the small rural communities such as Zion, Sonora and Fishback.

Through the years Fay served on various committees of the Chamber of Commerce and maintained his membership in Lodge No. 312. He was a member of the Kiwanis Club, Washington County Bankers Association.

Asked why he absolutely loved his job, he replied, "It gives you an opportunity to help so many people". Rising from teller to the Board of Directors, he was once offered an attractive position in a larger town. Graciously declining, he preferred to remain in his beloved Springdale.

His life came to a close at Springdale Memorial Hospital on February 11, 1953. Descendants include: John Miles Stafford, Fay Marie Johnson, Mary Eleanor Truitt, John Edward Stafford, Lorin Leigh Cross, Mary Diane Christie, Larry Stafford Truitt, Robin Kay Joseph, Kelly Harper Truitt, Joy Elizabeth Stafford, and Natalie Elizabeth Christie.

Bill Stamper

Bill and Lou Stamper moved to Springdale, Arkansas, May 1, 1965 from New Hampton, Iowa, where he had represented the MFA Insurance Companies as District Manager. The family moved to Springdale to become an agent for that company. The company has since changed its name to Shelter Insurance Company.

Stamper was born 10 March 1923 in Macon County, Missouri, of E. N. and Cleo Richardson Stamper, of Macon County, Missouri, and whose parents were natives of Kentucky. Stamper's ancestors were in Middlesex, Virginia, prior to 1650 and his Richardson ancestors were also in Virginia before 1750.

Stamper also numbers among his ancestors, Holbrooks, Field, James, Morgan, Wright, Sebastian, and English, all of whom were active in the American Revolution. His grandfather, Jesse Holbrook Stamper, ran away and joined the Confederates when he was 14. He was taken prisoner before he could 'kill a Yankee' and taken to Fort Smith to be sent to the Federal Pen in Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas. They discovered his age and sent him home instead. He was embarrassed about that to the day he died at age 89. Stamper's maternal grandfather, John B. Richardson, prior to the Civil War had gone to the Pike's Peak Gold Rush. He came home and joined the Missouri Guards and was in the battles from Lexington, Missouri, down to Pea Ridge where he was wounded in March of 1862. He was sent home by Federal Troops on bond to not rejoin the fight. He went to the northwest and again engaged in gold prospecting. He came back to Missouri and engaged in farming and raising livestock.

Stamper served during WW II in the Submarine service making 7 combat war patrols. The first was to Casablanca where his submarine was the 'beacon' for the landings November 1942.

The rest of the war was spent in the Pacific and patrols were made from Pearl Harbor to the Japanese Empire and from Midway to the Philippines then to Australia and from there back to the Philippine area. Stamper's submarine, on which he served as an Elecric Torpedoman, was the USS Gunnel.

They picked up several fliers and delivered supplies and ammo to the Philippine patriots in addition to their regular duties of hunting for ships to sink.

Stamper served as managing editor of three newspapers; The Madison Missouri Times, The Clarence Missouri Courier; and the Elsberry Missouri Democrat before getting into the insurance business.

Lou Jeter Stamperwas born and raised in Monroe City, Missouri, the daughter of E. S. Jeter and Marie Heskett. The Jeter family came to Virginia in the early 1700s. They were French Hugenots and had gone to England to escape persecution. Jetersville in Amelia County, Virginia, is named for her grandfather Tilmon Jeter. Marie Heskett was the daughter of Henry Heskett and Mary Corbitt. The Corbitts were Irish emmigrants and railroad people.

Lou Jeter and Bill Stamper met on a train in August 1943 and in November 1943 they were married in Oakland, California, just before Stamper sailed for the Empire of Japan. Their only child, C. Richard, was born 7 March 1947. He and his wife, Connie J. Blaylock Stamper live in Springdale and have three children, Stephanie 16, Richard C. 8,, and Matthew G. 6.

Rich graduated from New Hampton High School in New Hampton, Iowa. He then attended one semester at Ellsworth Junior College before transferring to Arkansas Tech where he majored in math. There he met and married Miss Connie Blaylock.

Jesse Newton Stansell

Jesse was born January 7, 1883, near Kingston, Arkansas, the third child of John Robert and Gemima Bolinger Stansell. Oliver was the oldest, then followed Anne, Laura, Mollie, who died at age 16 months, Clemmie and Asberry. The next death in the family was Jesse's dad, John, about 1900 then Clemmie passed away in 1913 at age 15.

John and Baby Mollie were buried in the Bolinger Cemetery near Loy, Arkansas. Jess and Nancy Bolinger were married February 7, 1904, at the home of her parents, the H. H. Bolingers of Wharton, Arkansas. They moved to Lanson, Arkansas, a post office on Reeves Mountain in Newton County where they lived with his mother and helped care for her and the two small children. It was a promise he'd made to his dad and kept until she married Francis M. Reeves September 27, 1905. He was 58 and she was 44. She and Grandfather Stansell were wed February 15, 1877, by Noah B. Dotson, J. P. He was 25 and she was 16.

Jess and Nancy moved to Wharton and then to Pettigrew, from there to Tahlihina, Oklahoma for five years. They returned to Arkansas about 1915, and located in the Upper Wharton community where Jess set up a blacksmith shop and where Thad Yingst opened a country grocery store and Denton Bolinger operated a grist mill. In 1918 they bought a farm and raised their family.

In the middle fifties they moved to Hindsville, Arkansas for the rest of their lives. Their family, Lee, wife, Artie Jones, Mildred, married Don Jenkins, girls Patricia, Shari, spouse Kipton Blue sons Benjamin and Adam.

(4) Loys, wife, Lucy Yingst, son, Norman, wife, Dianne Derose, children, Michael, wife, Vicky, son, Jacob, Michelle, Mark, Megan and Matthew. Ralene, spouse, David Crawford, Daniel and Amanda.

(5) Cread, wife, Pauline Baxter, son, Forrest, Jr., wife, Fay Young, sons, Forest, III, died February 11, 1988, Shelby, Carol, spouse, Lester Joynor, Cody and Lesley. Johnny, wife Erma Douthit, daughter, Tracy. Harvey, wife, Donna Hatcher, son, Bryne.

(6) Leonard, wife Euna Vanderpool, Linda, spouse, Jack Canion, daughter, Deborah. Olen, wife, Phyllis Cunningham, son, Matthew, Larry, single, Edward, single. Brenda, spouse, Robert Edens, Shalya and Travis.

(7) Dee, wife, Vivian Miller, Mary Jo, spouse, Steve Frazier.

The Stansells came from Germany in 1710. Some settled in the Mohawk Valley in New York, while others drifted south to the Carolinas, Georgia and Kentucky. My line migrated from Georgia to Arkansas about the middle of the 18th century. Great grandfather, a son and others moved to Oregon—some to Idaho and some to California.

No doubt most of them made the trip westward in covered wagons. One child became ill and died on the journey. Of course, they stopped and buried the dead and went on their weary way. I'm sure it would really be sad if we could only know half of the early hardships, sorrows, and heartaches that were endured by our early pioneers in getting settled in this new land of ours. We can thank God that he was merciful to them and gave them strength and determination to press onward till our great country was settled from ocean to ocean and north to south. Long live our appreciation, thankfulness and memories of these heroic forefathers who gave us "This land of the free and the Home of the Brave."

Our immediate family has scattered to several different states: Missouri, Oklahoma, Iowa, Idaho, Arizona, Texas, Kansas, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and many are still in Arkansas.

I moved to Washington County in 1964 and hope to finish my life here. I'm now four score years of age and trying for a few more. So long.

Nancy Stansell

Nancy Palestine Stansell was born February 25, 1883 at Jarea, Arkansas. This was a small place located near the Howard Bolinger farm in Madison county, so I've been told. She was the daughter of Henry Harvey and Polly Ann Parker. Bolinger, fifth of fifteen children, born to her parents. After her mother, Polly Ann, raised her family. She became a midwife and administered to many sick people in her community.

Nancy was married to J. N. Stansell February 7, 1904 and to this union were born seven children, six boys and one girl. The children were: Lee, Gladys, Oren, Loys, Cread, Leonard and Dee.

She was a kind, patient, hardworking wife and mother who loved her family and did many worthwhile things for them and for her neighbors. She, like her mother, was helpful and efficient in caring for sick people.

About 1925, she began to practice midwifery and was licensed in 1935. She delivered a lot of babies in the community of Upper Wharton, where she lived. She also went many places to help with the sick, especially children, for doctors were not very plentiful then.

Nancy used many home remedies like herb teas. She used fever week and mullin tea for fevers and catnip tea to cure hives on infants. She concocted an emulsion of skunk oil, turpentine, castor oil, etc. to apply to the throat, chest and shoulders for relief from colds and influenza. This was before we knew of Vicks Vaporub or Bengay.

Other home remedies were often used: One drop of turpentine on a teaspoon of sugar for worms, fried onion poultice on the chest for pneumonia, a teaspoon of breast milk warmed by blowing tobacco smoke on it to be poured into the ears for ear infection, sorghum molasses and baking soda were used on burns. This one really did work, for it was used on one of the children who was burned by hot water.

Neighbors would come after Nancy at all hours of the day or night to help with seriously ill relatives. Sometimes they would bring a horse or mule for her to ride, but many times she walked. Few people owned cars then.

We never knew that night whether or not mother would be back by breakfast or whether she'd still be at her patient's side.

She was very cautious when on confinement cases. If everything didn't work normally, she insisted they get a doctor, but she would stay until the baby was delivered.

Often, she was called to go when a death occurred in the neighborhood to "lay out" the body. That was to bathe, comb the hair, dress them, preferably in a gown and see that the eyes were closed properly. They were laid on a bed or firm support to keep the body straight until a casket (coffin) could be prepared. There were no funeral homes or undertakers at that time.

We had many visitors at our house. She dearly loved children and usually won them over to love her. Many times, I remember when we didn't eat a meal without extra people to eat with us for a week or more at a time. Dad's blacksmith shop was nearby and customers were invited to eat with us, and many did. Some of us children often had playfellows, too. Quite often, aunts and uncles would drop in with their families to spend a day or night. We were always happy to see "company comin' up the road"

Nancy cooked tons of food on a wood cook stove. She made biscuits in a big dishpan and didn't cut them with a biscuit cutter by "fisted them out"; they were oversized, but delicious.

She made fruit cobblers in a three or four quart sauce pan and baked them slowly for a long time in a very slow oven. This was her secret. They were bubbly, juicy and finger-licking good. Her son-in-law, Roy Vanhook said she made the best biscuits and cobblers that he had ever eaten, and his mother was a wonderful cook. Nancy had a lot of practice in cooking.

She also liked to knit and sew. She knitted stockings for the children to wear to school - sometimes from yarn thread that she had carded, then spun and twisted on her spinning wheel. Sometimes she made them of cotten twine, dyed them probably with walnut hulls or bark (boiled to get the color). She did a lot of sewing. She made shirts and overalls for the boys and shirts for her husband, Jess, all her own clothes and her daughter's plus a lot of cutting and sewing for other relatives and neighbors. She enjoyed piecing quilts and completed many, many quilts in her lifetime.

People didn't get to enjoy many conveniences back then. Mother never owned a washing machine, refrigerator or had electricity until after all of her family had grown up and were married.

We kept our milk and butter in the spring. Dad constructed a cement box to put the dairy products in. Here, the clear, cool water ran out of the bluff on the hillside and through the cement box which kept the milk fairly cool and fresh. I can almost see my mother as she donned her bonnet and hurried to the spring to get milk and butter at the last minute before the meal was served.

The Lord was kind to Jess and Nancy. They celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on February 7, 1954 and their 60th in 1964. They had been married almost 67 years when he was called away January 12, 1971 at age 89 years and five days. Nancy left us September 30, 1973 at the age of 90 years, seven months and five days.

Gone but not forgotten, their works shall follow them.

George Harlin Starr

George Harlin Star was born in east Tennessee in the vicinity of what is now Etowah and Benton, Tennessee. This was on May 4, 1800. He was the son of Caleb Starr and Nancy Harlin. Thus he was a great-grand-son of Nancy Ward who was a woman chief of the Cherokees.

He was first married to Nell Carr and from this union one child, Jane was born October 30, 1830. His second wife was Nancy Bell, daughter of John Bell and Charlotte Adair. This marriage was in Tennessee prior to the removal of the Cherokees to the west. Nancy Bell was also a sister to John Adair Bell who was a signer of the Cherokee Emigration Treaty of 1835. Also she was a sister of Sarah Bell who was the wife of Stand Watie a Confederate General of the Civil War. Stand Watie was the last general to lay down his arms after the close of the Civil War. A note of tragic is the fact that Stand Watie and Sarah Bell have no living descendants today, their children having died in their youth.

George Harlin with his family and his father's (Caleb) family moved westward in 1838 prior to the compulsory removal in 1839. It is thought that most of their journey was by steamship rather than overland with wagons as was common in the forced removal. Trouble had already begun in the east so together with other members of the family already with the Western Cherokees were reasons for removal. The Western Cherokees or Arkansas Cherokees had made a settlement as early as 1809. These early settlements were around Dardanelle, Arkansas. George Harlin Starr settled in what is now the Oak Grove Community. His sister Ruth Starr Bean had been in this area for several years and was known as being a member of the Western Cherokee Group. There was a government among them similar to the Eastern Cherokees however instead of one Chief there were three. By the treaty of 1817 this band was made secure by title and government protection. They were the conservative, hunter element of the tribe, and it was their purpose to restore the old Indian life in the western wilderness, from which their brethren in the east were drifting away.

His son Ezekial Starr was elected Senator from Flint District in August, 1883: and elected Treasurer of the Cherokee Nation on December 23, 1891. He made the Strip Payment of over seven million dollars to the Cherokee nation: and one of the proud heritages of the family is the fact that no one ever accused him of appropriating a dollar of this or any other fund placed in his trust.

George Harlin Starr was born May 4, 1800, died September 28, 1879 and is buried in the Starr Cemetery located on the Joe Starr farm south of Stilwell.

Information regarding dates of birth and deaths and names of children are listed as follows:

Nancy Bell Starr b. July 14, 1814, d. September 14, 1864.

Their children were: 1. Jane Starr (Mother: Nellie Carr) b. October 30, 1830, d. January 4, 1854, m. George Howard; 2. William K. Starr b. March 9, 1835, d. September 9, 1958, not married; 3. James Starr

James Starr, eldest son of John and Hannah Osborn Starr, was born November 14, 1814 in Indiana. James married Belinda Clem, daughter of Michael and Jane Clem from Ohio, on February 16, 1838 in Warren County, Indiana. The family moved to Bourbon County, Kansas where James and son John served in the 6th Kansas Calvary. During the Civil War, James visited Washington County. On April 20th, 1870 he purchased 256 acres of land from Lewis Cheatham which were situated in Cane Hill Township, just east of what is now the city of Lincoln. The area became known as Starr Hill for several years. As the community grew, James was instrumental in the formation of a voting precinct. A new township was officially established on July 30, 1884 named Starr Hill in his honor. James was a farmer and carpenter. After Belinda died in 1894, he married Maria Frazier. He and Belinda had four children: Jane, John, Hannah and William.

Jane (born February 14, 1839) married Joseph Liburn Carter in 1861 at Bourbon County, Kansas and moved to Washington County with her father in 1870. They owned and operated the first store in the community. After Starr Hill Township was founded, a post office was established in their store. Liburn Carter has been given credit for submitting the name Lincoln for the new post office and it became official on January 13, 1885. Jane and Liburn had seven children: John; James, who married Mae Rauch and Willie Rhea; Hannah, who married John Murphy; Nancy, who married Sam Martin; Eva, who married George Burns. Many of their descendants still live in the Lincoln area.

John (born August 14, 1841) married Susan Hobson and Margaret Jones. John was a prominent carpenter in Eureka Springs and Lincoln. He helped in the construction of many homes and businesses. He had seven children: Adah, died young; Beatrice, who married Seely Kinne; David, who married Pearl Boyle; Mary, who married George Miller; John Waren, who married Minnie Slater; Burton, who married Estell Holt; Theodore, who married Eva Morris.

Hannah (born August 9, 1843) married L. J. Symonds and James Gifford. She had no children, but was remembered for her tender nursing care.

William (born October 8, 1848) married Martha Thompson and Sarah Henson. William was a well-known apple grower in Lincoln and also participated in the building of Lincoln. He and Martha had four children: James, Samuel, Ivah, and Ollie.

James married Lodelia Craven and is the grandfather of this writer. He moved to California where many descendants reside.

Samuel married Catherine Brown and was a well-known carpenter and businessman in Lincoln. His daughter, Ilene Starr Bain, lives in Iola, Kansas and has this memory. "The church that Dad, Grandpa Starr and Uncle John worked on was called the North Methodist Church. There was another church in the south part of town called the South Methodist. There were two churches mostly because of politics. Most of the North Methodist people were Republicans and the South Methodist people were Deomcrats. The Civil War was still on the minds of some people. Attending church was a big part of our lives and I can remember Grandpa Starr and Waldo's Grandfather Bain always sitting in the north east corner of the church which was called the "AMEN CORNER". All of the old men sat in that corner, at least I thought they were old. They probably weren't much past fifty-five years of age. The women would all sit together and the young people would get as far back to the back of the church as possible. Grandma Martha Starr was said to have been a good 'shouting Methodist' but I don't remember her."

Ivah married "Judge" Eugene King. He was an early postmaster, Justice of the Peace, Notary Public and merchant of Lincoln. They owned one of the first automobiles in Lincoln. Their home on North Street in Lincoln was the finest in the area and was believed to have had the first hot and cold running water.

Ollie married Louis Heyne. They lived for a time in Lincoln and Gentry before moving to Craig, Colorado.

Many contributions and achievements of James Starr and his family have been recorded in the history of Lincoln. Today, the name Starr is remembered by Starr Street in Lincoln and the township is still known as Starr Hill.

Information for this family history was obtained from the genealogy compiled by: Earl D. Starr; Barbara Light Starr; Gayle Starr Mooney, 1986.

John Bell Steele

A poet, a scholar, a statesman, a military hero, a devout Christian family man, a gallant handsome man — John Bell Steele.

Guy Cooper Steele - 1874, Age 5

Mary Van Winkle and John Bell (Capt Jack) Steele - Circa 1868

John Bell Steele, the youngest of four sons, was born December 6, 1838 in Bedford County, Tennessee (North of Shelbyville in the Fall Creek "Flat Woods" area) to Carlos and Catherine Cooper Steele. His brothers were Volney Franklin Steele, born 1831, James Cooper Steele, born 1834 - died 1836 and Baylie Payton, born 1836. John Steele (sometimes called Jack) left the family farm when he was thirteen to apprentice and attend school in the turner and machinist trade until age 21. He came to Benton County about 1859 and worked in the turner trade with Peter Van Winkle in the Van Winkle Mills until the Civil War. He enlisted October 9, 1861 in Fayetteville and served in the 1st Regiment of the Arkansas Calvary as an officer throughout the war. He was wounded and captured at least twice. Family legend is that he was in a prison camp in Ohio when he escaped and swam to freedom across Lake Hudson. During the war Jack kept a diary consisting of a journal of some of his military travels as well as romantic poetry he wrote about the war and to his love, Mary Van Winkle. During the war, he worked with Peter Van Winkle who helped with provisions for the Southern troops. Later, when the area went to the Federal troops and his mills were destroyed, Van Winkle took his family to De Kalb, Texas. Lt. Steele made visits to Mary (affectionately called Mollie) and after the war, settled in Springdale. They were married there January 28, 1868 and had three sons: Guy Cooper Steele, born November 29, 1868, Richard St. Clair Steele, born 1870, and Harry Lee Steele, born 1872. All were educated at Rogers Academy. Guy was in the second graduation class and became a teacher at the academy. all three sons were good students and went on to lead exemplary lives - a credit to their parents and good home life. During their early married years, John Bell Steele had a mercantile store in Springdale. That building is exhibited as part of the Shiloh Museum today. Around 1874, he moved the mercantile business to War Eagle. When his father-in-law, Peter Van Winkle built the grand Van Winkle Hotel in Fayetteville, John Bell became its proprietor and ran the hotel for its first three years. In 1882, he moved to Rogers and had an influential role in the young town. He was Mayor for three terms, Justice of the Peace and held office with several major businesses, Rogers Canning and Packing Company, Wholesale and Retail Lumber business, and at the time of his death in 1903, manager of the Rogers Milling Company. The stately two-story home still stands at 303 Arkansas and Poplar in Rogers. He was a member of the Congregational church, a staunch Democrat and a Mason.

In 1891, Guy, the oldest son married a classmate at the Academy, Lucy May Beckwith from St. Louis, Missouri. She was a sister of Flora Beckwith Scroggs, wife of Dr. J. W. Scroggs, headmaster at the Academy. Guy taught one year at the academy and was teller in H. L. Stroud's bank, later a partner in the Ellis and Parks Mercantile. He had a home at 216 Poplar only a block from his father's home. Six of their eight children were born there - Rosemond (stillborn), Eugene, Jeanne, Verna, Milan and John. After Eugene (age 7) died of typhoid in 1901 and Captain Jack died suddenly in 1903, his partnership in the store soured after the death of Mr. Parks. Guy and Lutie decided to go to Indian Territory and with his brother, Dick purchased farmland from the Indians. Their two youngest children, Flora and Ophelia were born in the lovely farm home he built for them there. He and Dick built a church, store and school in the Whiteagle Community of what became Oklahoma. He farmed there from 1904/5 until 1928 when he sold his farm, moved to Oklahoma City and later moved to Fort Worth. He died at the age of 88 in 1956.

Richard (Dick) was a Government Indian Agent in Missouri and Oklahoma. He married Jennie Koons from Missouri, also a classmate at Rogers Academy. He was a merchant, investor in the Success Oil Company in Galveston and Spindletop, Texas, later a lumberman in DeQueen, Arkansas. He and Jennie had two sons, Richard, Jr., and Harold, and one daughter, Marion. Jennie was an accomplished musician having studied at the Boston Music Conservatory and Richard had a beautiful baritone voice. Marion published a book of her parents letters and their memories through the years. Richard died in DeQueen circa 1935.

Harry, the youngest son, joined the army in 1895 and became an officer in 1898. He climbed to the rank of Major General in the U. S. Coast Artillery after serving several years in China, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington, D. C. He married Nina Lundeen, daughter of Colonel Lundeen. They had two sons and two daughters, Lee, John C., Ruth and Lundeen Van Winkle Steele. When Harry retired in 1936, he was head of the Coast Artillery for the United States. He died in Washington, D. C. in 1938 and is buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

A quote from his obituary describes 'Captn Jack' — "As a soldier, Captain Jack Steele was a typical southern cavalier, and exponent of southern chivalry. Of tall, sysmetrical, handsome physique, a dead shot with pistol and rifle, and a splendid, graceful, dashing horseman - a rough rider absolutely without fear, scorning to take any unfair advantage of a foe and with all, honorable, frank and generous, he was the ideal of his men who enthusiastically followed him into the most deadly dangers."

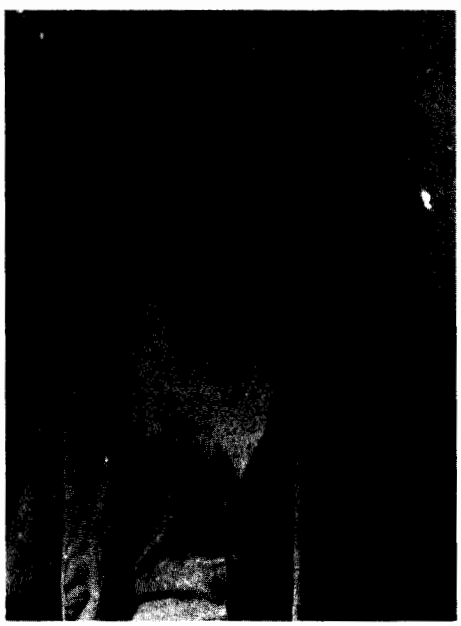
Marion Dekalb Steele

Marion Dekalb Steele was born 1824 in Bedford County, Tennessee of plantation owners, Price Coldwell Steele, (1800-1842) and Elizabeth Bogart Cooper (1804-1842) of Dutch and Irish descendants. At age 19, Marion studied medicine at Louisville Medical College. He started his medical practice in 1847 in Lawrence County, Arkansas where he married Frances S. Poer two years later. Then they purchased property at Powhatan, Arkansas. While there, their 3 children were born: John Price, Elizabeth Rebecca, and William V.



Marion Dekalb Steele, M. D. Elm Springs, Arkansas.

Dr. Steele was admitted as a minister in 1856 to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and his first appointment was the Benton County Circuit where they made their home at Pea Ridge, Arkansas. Because of Fannie's health, a year later they started to move west, but on reaching Elm Springs, there was a cholera epidemic, and the people begged him to stop and doctor them. They remained there, and Fannie died two years later (1816).

Mary Elizabeth Johnson was born in Maury County, Tennessee. She moved to Fort Smith with family, and then to Elm Springs after her schooling. In March 1859 she was married to Benjamin J. Deaver a miller, by Reverend Steele. Benjamin died six months later; a son, Benjamin was born January 1860.

Dona Steele's 95th Birthday - Dona in the middle; then left to right: Katherine and Cooper Steele and Delford and Dorothy Fine. (This is Cooper and Dorothy's mother.)

Marion D. Steele and Mary E. Deaver were married in November 1861. Besides a minister, he was still a doctor, and served in the Confederate Military. Both the Confederate and Union armies were camped in Elm Springs at different times. The Union Army made the Steele place their headquarters; using the dresser drawers for horse troughs, and amusing themselves by making pictures and initials on the plaster ceilings with torches.

Mary, once took clothes and food to Dr. Steele in Fayetteville. Afraid the house would burn while she was gone, she wore all the clothes she could, and pinned others to her petticoats. She walked all the way, holding baby Jim on the ox cart. The home was still standing when she returned.

There were nine children born to them: Thomas Dekalb, James (Jim) Cooper, Joseph Albert, Mary Iva, Sarah Frances, Hattie Selima, Ada, Marion Franklin and David Arthur, born July 9, 1880.

Marion continued his ministry and medical practice, compounding his prescriptions he found effective, and others from his brother John, in Tennessee, who was also a doctor. His medicine was sold all over Benton and Washington Counties.

Church services were held in the backyard until the church burned during the Civil War was re-built.

In 1874, he discontinued his medical practice and had a general store. His sons, Jim and Albert later continued this business.

Marion wore a beard all his adult life, and washed it every morning in the spring. He died in 1898, at age 74.

David A. and LaDona Brown were married December 1908. (Her history found in this book under Jefferson L. Brown.) Six children were born to them: Herbert Brown, Cooper Arthur, Elmer Eugene, Hattie Belle, Charles Dale and Dorothy Maurine the youngest, who is writing this history.

David farmed the old homestead, renting additional land, his mother living with them until her death March 1922.

During the depression, this family struggled, as everyone did; picking strawberries, beans and grapes for wages, and worked in the canning factory as they grew old enough. Also, at home with picking, canning, butchering hogs, beef; fishing, hunting and trapping. The large springhouse kept the milk and butter cold, and the adjoining shed was where the laundry was done (except in winter) since the spring was plentiful, and the black pot kept boiling for the clothes. Careful watch for snakes was necessary as they like the spring coolness.

Dorothy, the only one now living in Arkansas, stopped her secretary position at Hargis and Drake Canning Company in Elm Springs, during World War II because of eye problems, and worked at Fayetteville City Hospital, as a nurses' aide. It is the only hospital in this area, and is always crowded. No air-conditioning and few fans. Every minute was busy, and lulls were used fixing supplies for the sterilizer. All patients were given bed baths. So many babies were born (as many as six between 7 - 11 am) that dresser drawers were used for extra cribs.

William Delford Fine and Dorothy Maurine Steele were married September 1, 1945. Delford served in the Army Air Corps during the war. He is the son of Nealie and Hazel Fine (whose history is also in this book).

Cooper, son of David Steele, in 1946 tore down the old Steele home, built 1851, to build a new home for his parents. David died before it was finished. Dona lived until 1976, age 96.

Joe Steele, son of Jim and Anna Steele was the most well-known businessman in the depression; starting and building up to the Steele Canning Company. He was one of the first millionaires in Springdale. He died in 1976.

Delford and Dorothy Fine were parents of one son, Philip Alan, born March 22, 1951. He was a talented musician, winning first in Piano Talent Competition. While returning from a TV studio in Tulsa, Oklahoma where he had taped a piano medley for a church service, he was killed in an accident January 30, 1971. He was attending Oral Roberts University.

Dorothy retired from her business career in 1968. Delford retired in 1985, after 43-1/2 years with Southwestern Power Company in Fayetteville. They reside there doing church work, choir singing, barbershop singing, arts and crafts, visiting in nursing homes; keeping busy.

The other marriages of David and Dona's children are: Herbert married Daisy Larsen in Detroit, Michigan. Their children: Shirley, Patricia and Richard.

Cooper married Katherine Davis in east Liverpool, Ohio. Their children: David and Michael. David lives in Florida and Michael in Alaska.

Hattie married John Beal. They moved to California. Their children: Brian, Gerald, and Ronald. Dale married Enia Winn and they moved to California. Their children: Dale, Dorothy and Johnny.

Elmer died in 1941. He never married.

The only Steele descendants living in Washington County, are: Sue and Harry Preece, Kathryn Brown, Irene Watson, Twila Kendrick, Philip Steele, Louise and Erwin Baird, Marjorie Brooks, Glenda Stevens, Harry, Louise and John Smith and Dorothy Fine.

William Riley Stephens

William Riley Stephens was born in Kentucky in 1829. He was in Washington County, Arkansas by 1850. William Riley married 18-year-old Rachael Mankins 9 September 1851 in Washington County. It is not known if they knew each other before they settled here. Rachael was the daughter of Walter Mankins and Mary Polly Lowe. Rachael was born in 1831 Vermillion County, Illinois. Her parents were originally from Kentucky. Her grandfather was Peter Mankins, who lived to be 111 years old.

William Riley worked in the timber. He is listed on the census as a woodcutter. William Riley and Rachael had 8 children. (1) Sarah, born 1852. (2) Mary, born 1854. (3) Isaac or Ike as he was to be called, born 1856, married 8 April 1886, Lavina Jane Long, daughter of John Wesley Long and Mary Henson. Isaac died 10 April 1927 and is buried in Rose Cemetery. (4) Nancy Jane, born 5 April 1858, married Sylvester Preston Masterson in Madison County, Arkansas. Nancy died 30 June 1938 at Sallisaw, Oklahoma, and is buried in the Akins Cemetery at Akins, Oklahoma. (5) Matilda, born 1860. (6) Price, born 1862. (7) Solomon, born 1864. (8) John, born 1869.

It is not known what happened to William Riley Stephens. His great-grandchildren can't remember ever seeing him. They do remember Rachael. They said she would come to visit them when they lived in Trace Branch Community. She would wear a blanket thrown around her shoulders, Indian fashion, and she would dig for gold on the hill side near Trace Branch.

Rachael was 97 years old when she died in 1928 at the home of her daughter, Matilda, in New Castle, Oklahoma.

Isaac Stevens

Isaac Stevens was born in 1856, the son of William Riley Stephens and Rachael Mankins. For some reason Isaac spelled his name Stevens and not Stephens.

Isaac was married twice. His first wife, Mandy died of T. B. (tuberculosis). He then married Lavina Jane Long, daughter of John Wesley Long and Mary Henson. Lavina was born 29 September 1861 in Hazel Valley, Washington County, Arkansas. Lavina Jane had red hair.

Isaac and Lavina lived in Bidville, also around Prairie Grove and on Trace Branch. They also lived in Madison County for a while, around Crosses.

Isaac and Lavina were the parents of four children. They were: (1) Joe, born 4 May 1887, m. first Julie Carter 26 November 1908, she died; m. second Lily Rankin 3 March 1920. Joe died 18 May 1956 at Broken Arrow, Oklahoma. (2) Dess, born 18 February 1889, m. Flora Shaw October 1909 in Washington County, Arkansas. Dess and Flora resided in Colorado. (3) Lela, born 24 June 1891 at Crosses Creek in Madison County, Arkansas, m. Paul Emerson Swonger 19 September 1909 at Sulphur City, Arkansas. Lela died 27 August 1985, at the age of 94, in the home of her daughter, Mildred Camp in the Piney Community near Stilwell, Oklahoma. She is buried in Reese Cemetery near Sulphur City, Washington County, Arkansas. (4) Charles Richard, born 26 January 1894, m. Ellen Humphry 16 February 1915 in Sequoyah County, Oklahoma.

Isaac was 71 years old when he died April 10, 1927, in Washington County, Arkansas, and is buried in Rose Cemetery.

Lavina Jane lived with daughter Lela at Trace Branch and was 85 years old when she died 6 June 1946. She is buried in White House Cemetery.

Rachel (Mankins) Stevens

The lineage of Rachel (Mankins) Stevens goes back to a Swedish immigrant, John Anderson, whose nickname was Stahlkofta or Steelcoat (Stallcop), born about 1627 at Strangnas, Sweden. He came to Fort Christina (New Sweden and now Delaware) in 1641. He sailed from Gothenburg May 3, 1641, aboard the Charitas, married Christinia Johnson about 1656, daughter of Carl Johnson who arrived at Fort Christinia on the Mercurius in 1656. She was probably of Finnish descent since the passengers on the Mercurius were Finns. The Stallcops were prominent in Delaware history for more than a century before migrating to other areas. From the second to the sixth generation they were active in the affairs of Ole Swede's Church. The church built in 1698, is still being used today and many dates of births, marriages and deaths of the Stallcops are in the records of the church at Wilmington, Delaware. By the end of the sixteenth century, and John Anderson's death, he had taken his nickname, Stahlkofta, as his new name and all his children were known as Stallcop. The ancestors of Rachel moved to Orange County, North Carolina by 1760. She was of the eighth generation.

Rachel Mankins born in 1832 in Vermillion County, Illinois, daughter of Walter born 1806 in Orange County, North Carolina, and Mary (Polly) Lowe, an orphan, born in 1809, Kentucky. Walter, son of Peter Mankins (1770-1881) and Rachel Brackin, born about 1776, died before 1832. Rachel Mankins married June 10, 1851, to William Riley Stevens born in 1829 in Kentucky. To this union eight or nine children were born: Sarah, 1852; Mary, 1854; Isaac, 1856; Nancy Jane, 1858; Matilda, 1860; Price, 1862; Solomon, 1864; John, 1869, and probably Rebecca born about 1871. Riley farmed and had a saw mill. In 1860 they were living at Boon's Grove and in 1870 they were at McGuire's Station in Washington County, Arkansas.

Nancy Jane Stevens born April 5, 1858, married January 11, 1875, in Madison County to Sylvester Preston Masterson, born November 4, 1842, in Randolph County, Indiana, son of Smith G. Masterson and Margaret Reed. In 1880 Sylvester and Nancy were in Franklin County, Arkansas, had two children and Nancy's sister Matilda was with them. Children of Sylvester and Nancy were Lillie (1875-1968) married Gerald Burrow; William Riley (1877-1958) married Margaret L. Cottrell; Mary Mittie (1881-1947) married Stonewall J. Johnston; James Wesley (1883-1963) married Minnie Ethel Taylor; Albert (1886-1971) married Maudie Ethel Reeder; Julia Ann (1888-1950) married Charles Richard Fullbright; Willie Dessie (1890-1954) married May Higgins; Emma Etta (1892-1965) married Grover Humphrey; and Beulan Franklin (1894-1971) married (1) Lena Effie Woods and (2) Ola (Walters) Fine. Between 1883 and 1886 Sylvester moved to Sequoyah District, Indian Territory. He died December 27, 1895, leaving Nancy with six minor children to rear. She applied for and received a Civil War pension amounting to $20. She farmed, raised chickens and cows to feed her family.

Exactly when or where William Riley Stevens died is not known, but by this time Rachel was living with her children and grandchildren. Isaac was in Arkansas and the family remembers Granny, as she was called, going up on the mountain, digging for gold. Needless to say she never found any. She loved to fish and would put a piece of bread and meat in her pocket, take one of the grandchildren or great-grandchildren, go to the creek and stay all day. The family insisted she take someone with her as she would doze off as she fished and they were afraid she would go to sleep and fall into the water. At mealtime, if she wasn't given something to do in preparing the meal, she wouldn't eat, saying, "I didn't yearn't it", meaning she didn't earn anything. She was a very independent lady. Once she wanted to go visit Aunt Becky Slover at Norman, Oklahoma, and while the family was picking cotton out of sight of the house, she slipped out behind the house and had picked enough cotton to gin out a bale, more than enough to pay her train fare to Norman. She had the measles when she was very old and almost died. She was given a small amount of whiskey for medication. When told about this, she was very upset and said they should have let her die. She died June 22, 1922, at New Castle, McClain County, Oklahoma.

Mary Mittie Masterson born August 14, 1881, married February 10, 1897, Stonewall Jackson Johnston, one-half Cherokee Indian, born September 18, 1875, Sequoyah District, Indian Territory, son of Albert Main Johnston and Mary Blair. Out of eleven children, only five lived to be grown: Mary Jane (1897-living) married Claud Thomas Hall; Thomas Walter (John) (1899-1970) married Versia Baldridge; twins, Augustus and Gertrude (1901-lived just a few months); Lizzie Cordelia (1902-1929) married William Penn Vickery (history elsewhere in this book); Flora Lee (1903-1964) married Joseph Homer Williams; Carrie Lucille (1906-living) married Fred Thomas Archer; Stonewall Jackson, Jr. (1907-1910); Ruby Adeline (1908-1909); Sallie Clementine (1911-lived one month); and Susie Naomi (1914-1918).

The descendants of William Riley and Rachel (Mankins) Stevens are numerous, live throughout the United States and have followed many professions. William and Rachel would be very proud of them.

George W. Stewart

George Washington Stewart was born November 8, 1877 in Durham, Arkansas. His father, Thomas was a farmer and a Civil War veteran. He is buried in the National Cemetery. His mother, Nancy Sara (Pool) was a homemaker and is buried in New Bethlehem, Texas.

Lydia Mae (Collins) Stewart was born in Durham on May 1, 1880. Her father, William S. Collins was born March 24, 1844 and was a farmer. Her mother, Martha Emaline (Sis) Clark was born March 2, 1846 in Crossroads.

George and Lydia Collins Stewart - taken in Durham, Arkansas in 1897. They were married August 19, 1896 in Durham by W. M. Ratliff.

Leonard J. "Buster" Stewart in front of home in Durham.

George and Lydia Stewart were married August 19, 1896 in Durham by W. M. Ratliff, Justice of Peace. My father worked in a sawmill in Durham and lost his left thumb and three fingers while working there. A team of mules spooked by the train ran away and while watching them, he let his hand travel down with the log into the saw.

Their first child, Nellie Olive was born January 11, 1898 and died August 21, 1899 in McKinney, Texas. They moved back to Arkansas and on October 7, 1899 Maude Pearl was born at my grandfather Stewart's home. On September 5, 1901 Myrtle Edith was born in Durham. Thomas Nolan was born May 5, 1904 at Thompson Switch. William Carl was born on November 4, 1906 at Durham.

The family moved to Wichita Falls, Texas and on February 1, 1909 Lillie Alma was born. They moved back to Thompson Switch and worked for his uncle, J. K. Pool. On January 28, 1911 Clara Bernice was born. My father always drove mules and while delivering a load of logs at Thompson, Mr. Clyde Robbins made a bet with my dad that he could not load one of his mules in the double wagon box. After much work and many tries, my dad made the mule jump in the wagon box and stand there for awhile. He won the bet.

My family moved to Combs Chapel where George Raymond was born on January 6, 1913. They moved to the John Skillern farm northeast of Fayetteville and January 17, 1915, Lydia was born and died at birth. James Walker was born February 25, 1916. On April 9, 1919, I was born and was named John Leonard. My name was changed later when the draft board made a mistake on my entrance cards. My birth certificate now reads Leonard J.

My parents moved back to Durham where my sister Mary Emaline was born on May 1, 1921. We then moved west of Fayetteville to the Swaggerty farm, now PAM ANGUS. Then we moved to Braden east of Fayetteville and later to a farm at Cincinnatti near the Oklahoma border. We moved back to the Hunt Place on South College. My brother Raymond started before daylight and lead our three cows to Fayetteville. My dad went to Farmington and helped the last part of the way. While in Fayetteville, my dad worked for the City Water Department.

In February, 1929, my family moved to a farm south of Durham. We lived there until 1931 when my sister Clara and my parents bought twenty acres of land from Ben Pool, and we built a four room frame home.

The Terra Studios, home of the Blue Birds of Happiness and Rita's Terrans, is built on the south ten acres. The north ten acres is now owned by John and Susan Murray. The land was owned in the early 1800s by my great-grandparents, John and Mollie Collins. Later, my grandparents bought the land and my mother and her brother and sisters were born there.

We went to school at Durham and one summer, in order to earn spending money, my nephew, Howard Shumate and I cut the wood and hauled it to the school. We received seventy-five cents per cord and worked all summer hauling the wood in our spare time during the evenings when the teams were available to us.

When I was in about the sixth grade, I decided I wanted to quit school and work. My dad said ok, and the next morning he gave me an ax and together we started cleaning a small field near the road. We stopped a short while for dinner and when the kids came home from school, I thought I would go play but Dad said "no". If you don't go to school, you must learn to work." So the next morning I got up early and asked Mom to pack my lunch and I went off to school.

In 1935 I joined the Civilian Conservation Corps and went to Camp Locke near Bidville. In 1936, Mr. J. E. Bunch came to camp and asked me to return to high school in Elkins. I returned to school and played basketball and completed my high school education. With Mr. Bunch's help, I returned to the C. C. C. Camp at Devil's Den and remained there until my marriage to Julianne Woods in November 1940. While in the C. C. C., we received thirty dollars per month. I sent twenty-five dollars home to my parents for their support and kept five dollars for spending money. I entered the Army in the first draft from Washington County. My father developed a severe heart condition and on October 30, 1944, he died. I had gone to France and since the invasion had just taken place, it was thirty-one days before I learned of my father's death.

My mother traded our home for a house west of Durham and lived there for a short while with my sister, Mary Willis and her daughter, Sharon. Mary's husband was in Italy with the 142nd Guard Unit. She sold the house and for awhile lived in Springdale with my sister, Edith Springston. After a short while, she moved back to an apartment in Durham in the home of Kern and Annie White. Annie and my mother were cousins, and since my mother was a diabetic, it was necessary for her to be where she had help. She went to Cabot, Arkansas to visit with my sister, Mary and her family and later she gave up her apartment and went to live with my brother and his wife, Raymond and Hilda. In 1947, she became ill with pneumonia and my wife and son, Michael and I came home from Fitzsimmons Army Hospital where I was stationed. She died on January 13, 1947. My parents and brothers, William Carl, Thomas Nolan, James Walker and two sisters, Edith and Mary are all buried at McCord Cemetery. The original Stewart property west of Durham was purchased in 1969 by our two sons, Michael E. and John L. They built their homes and live there with their families.

In 1943, my wife and I bought 99.8 acres adjoining my grandfather Stewart's land. When I retired from the Army in 1962, we returned to Durham and built our home on the land where Dr. George Carter's office and home had been after the Civil War. The old log house still stands.

Our son Ozzie J. lives in Tulsa and our daughter, Patricia Ann Hester lives in Fayetteville. Michael E. and John L. live here in Durham.

Herman Stokenbury

Herman (Harmon) Stokenbury was born November 18, 1826 in Hanover, Germany. Both Herman (on memorial stone at Stokenbury Cemetery at Elkins) and Harmon (signature signed in memory of book of Mr. Morris) are found. At the age of 18, he left his family and home and came to America. After a long voyage of three months and three days, he landed in New Orleans December 25, 1845. He then took a steamer to Ft. Smith, Arkansas. He had no money left after paying his passage for his meals. He could speak no English. After seeing a boat hand sawing wood, he picked up the saw and began sawing. This secured him plenty of food and generous treatment.

Dolph Stokenbury, Mary Catherine holding Earl, Roe and unknown woman. (Picture taken at home presently owned by William Stokenbury).

When he arrived at Ft. Smith, Herman had $1.25 in his purse. He gave a black man one dollar to carry him across Arkansas River to Van Buren. The man looked so big and savage that he did not tarry to receive his change.

A German boy, surrounded by people he could not understand, had but one quarter in his pocket. He pawned his trunk containing his wardrobe and little souveniers from loved ones at home. Herman found Uncle John Canuotson who was down from Washington County in a wagon, gave his small sum of money to come with him to Fayetteville. From there he went to the farm of Judge Robert McKama, ten miles east of Fayetteville, where he found a brother who had preceded him to this country. This location was Hood (changed to Elkins in 1892).

Herman worked the first year for Judge McKama for his board and clothes. His first horse cost him 500 bushels of corn. He worked hard all week and went to Sabbath School on Sunday to learn the English alphabet. He was thoughtful, industrious and saving.

On July 25, about 1850, Herman was married to Miss Jane Pruitt, a granddaughter of Judge McKama. She was an estimable young woman to whom he doubtless owed much of his success in life.

He was a good, quiet, peaceable and substantial citizen. He loved home and peace. During the Civil War he remained home and made a crop each year—being one of the few who were permitted to do so.

Granddaughters, Neva Bassett Jones and Clara Bassett White tell the following about Grandmother Jane: The Union soldiers stole all their food and her riding mare. She rode another horse sidesaddle as she carried baby son, Ute, to St. Paul. She got her mare back from those soldiers and brought her home.

Herman acquired title to several hundred acres of good land. He was kind and generous and loved by both white and black. His honesty was never questioned. He was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and an elder. This church was probably the beginning of the Elkins Community Church. He built the Stokenbury home (still standing across Highway 16 from the cemetery) from brick made on the grounds.

He was badly wounded in a reaping machine accident in the field on June 29, 1883. He was taken to the house of Green Maguire, his son-in-law, where he died on July 3, 1883.

The wife of his youth and seven of nine children born to them survived. Although he left his widow and children well provided for, his sad and untimely death was a serious loss to them and the entire community. He was buried in the graveyard on the farm where he began work when he first came to this country.

Reverend Luther Bell addressed a large crowd assembled to pay last respects. One quote of his: "I don't know whether they use English or German over there, but Herman will learn the alphabet of Heaven and sing music of the skies. . .".

The following children with birthdates, spouses and children lived to marry and have families: Martha, October 7, 1852; Robert Henry, July 19, 1855 married to Lydia Johnson had children Jessie, Herman, Jewell, and Robbie; Rudolphis (Dolph), March 12, 1858 married to Mary Catherine Divelbiss had children Roe, Earl, Mabel and baby boy died; Lisa May Bell, June 25, 1861; Nannie Jane, June 25, 1864 married to Green Maguire had children Minnie Lee, Fergus amd Edmond; Mollie, January 8, 1867 married George Bassett had children Herman, Clara and Neva; John P., September 29, 1869 married Pearl Moore had children Lela, Clyde, Marie, Edith and Ethel; Herman (Ute), August 31, 1873 married Cora Simpson had children Hazel, Hilda, and Glen; Ida J., May 9, 1879.

Most of these families grew up in the Elkins area and were engaged in some type of farming.

Taken from a memorial written by B. F. Campbell: R. D. (Dolph) Stokenbury departed this life February 25, 1920. Three children, two sons and one daughter, survived him. Dolph was a true Christian gentlemen. At the time of his death, he was residing within one mile of the spot where he was born. This writer can safely say that he never met one who seemed to more nearly walk hand in hand with God. Conscience guided his every act. He was a model of mental industry, strictly honest, a model Christian, an honorable gentleman and commanded the respect of all sects and classes of people.

The eldest son of Dolph Stokenbury was Roe D. Stokenbury born March 16, 1898. He married Annie Oakley Buck of Delaney, Arkansas March 12, 1919. To this marriage children born were: Lloyd (died as baby), Grace, January 2, 1921; Charles R., February 4, 1924; Norman L., March 28, 1926; William D., December 31, 1929; Mary Ann, June 30, 1931; and Sonja Dora, January 25, 1937.

Roe spent his entire life as a farmer and became quite a prominent dairyman. He started his Guernsey herd from scratch. His first bull was named Duke. He and Annie not only reared six children of their own, they took care of his brother, Earl, and sister, Mabel, after their parents' early deaths. They also reared a grandson, Johnnie Lee. Roe was the first and only graduate from Elkins High School in the year 1919. He later served many terms on the Elkins School Board, and all six children are graduates of Elkins High School.

Roe departed this life May 30, 1973. This writer feels that the memorial to Roe's father, Dolph, could have been written about her father. Annie Stokenbury departed this life December 13, 1986. She was a very devoted wife and mother.

I write this little bit of history in memoriam of my father (Roe) and mother (Annie) Stokenbury.

Della Stoner

In the Spring of 1934, I was under twenty-years-old and the mother of two small children. Now, I cannot give any names of the native Arkansas people who are in my story. Women were to see and not ask questions in my family.

Oney Bay had a log cabin somewhere behind West Fork. So, he asked Jess Stoner and family, along with Jess's boy, Bert Stoner and family, to come and live with him until we could get a place of our own. The men planted some cane and were told to be sure and put three rows of barbwire around the cane, as it was open range. That means your crops are fenced, and cattle can run loose. However, due to no money, the men had only gotten two rows of barbwire around the cane. When the cane came up, a cow wandered in one night to eat the cane, which caused her to bloat and die. She was found the next morning, so Jess went to the little town of West Fork and asked about the cow, to try and find the owner. After he came back, the neighbor lady who had several children asked Jess to pull the cow out of the cane patch and down to the edge of the woods. Not wanting to make it bad for the lady, he did. Now I don't know who told old Jess he was in trouble for moving the cow, but this caused Jess to hide in the trees in the daytime, and he would only come in to eat at night for some time. He didn't know the natives could find him at any time if they wanted to. They were people who knew how to read the trees like any good hunters.

One day, I went out to my bed which was set up outside with a tent over the top to keep out the dew. What did I see, but a big, black snake going up the bed leg and my child was asleep on it. However, a hoe took care of the snake.

In a day or two from when the cow had died, we had the cane plowed up by the natives. They also plowed up our seed potatoes and strawberry plants that the men had planted on another piece of land that was to be for the Stoner's families. At night was something else. Just at dusk, we had a herd of cattle move in and stay until sunrise. Then there was a whistle, the dogs would bark, and the cattle would leave. This was a test to see if we would kill another cow. We learned this later.

One day, Jess Stoner was about 1/8 mile away fixing the fence, when down our little road came five or six men. One had a ring of rope hanging on his shoulder, one had a single-tree, the other had an innertube he was carrying. They went straight to Jess. Now sitting on the cabin porch was Oney Bay, Jenny Stoner (Jess' wife), and myself (Della Stoner). Jenny wanted to go and see what these fellows wanted. She had a terrible temper which Oney Bay knew would cause Jess harm if Jenny was allowed to go to him. Therefore, we talked her into staying on the porch. Oney is telling us that if Jess gets smart with the men that they would hang him on the spot because he is an outsider. But after a short time, they left. Jess must have said the right thing.

Well, we didn't have much left so we went back to Wichita, Kansas on the old dirt road we now call Highway 71.

During the years, Bert Stoner and family moved back and forth to different parts of Arkansas six times. Some of it good and sometimes, not so good. But I learned to like Arkansas: the rocks, trees and how the streams are so clear, and even to like cornbread. Northern people didn't eat much cornbread back in the older days.

Now, I have lived in Washington County the last sixteen years. I'm also the only living person in this story, Della Stoner.

William Henry Storms

The Storms Family arrived in Washington County in September, 1961 from the Kansas City area. The farm was purchased from the Milton Lockharts. It had formerly been a Starks Nursery apple orchard, a dairy operation and cattle pasture land for Hobert Peterson. Originally, the house that burned down twice was a stagaecoach stop, with the log cabin still standing that was used for the coach riders' slaves. The old community well is still standing on the hillside beside the house where all the pioneer women brought their foodstuffs by wagon to can and preserve and render lard at this source of good water. There have been many arrowheads found on the creek where the Indians camped. William "Bill" Henry Storms, born 9/21/27 in Pleasant Hill, Missouri and Mary Alice McManaway born 7/1/27 in Kansas City, Kansas were married June 14, 1947. They had three sons, Steven Robert, 8/27/48; Michael David, 2/3/51; Patrick Henry, 8/3/53. The family moved to the farm in Washington County after Bill was disabled from a fall while living in San Bruno, California, while working as a sales manager for Prudential Insurance Company. Mary Alice had been a music teacher and professional musician. They bought the farm directly from the Lockharts on the day they looked at it and fell in love with the country. They had been to Hot Springs for Bill to have mineral baths for his disability. The boys graduated from Greenland High School, excelling in academics, sports and all activities. They received scholarships from the University of Arkansas, Patrick played basketball for the Hogs and Steve attended the USMA at West Point. They learned how to build chicken houses, repair machinery, build fences and work cattle from necessity as the father was disabled. They did everything.

Steven married Shirley Rowlett from Bentonville and has two children, Shannon Rey and Robert Andrew. He is a Chemical Engineer for Weyerhauser in their corporate office and resides in Tacoma, Washington.

Michael married Johanna Reis from Greenland and has two sons, David Michael and Darrin Matthew.

Patrick married Penny Michaelis from Gillette, Arizona and has three sons, Jarrod Patrick, Daniel Joseph and Robert Micah. Patrick and Michael and their families live on the Arkhill Springs Farm near Siloam Springs and co-manage their hen laying operation, Holstein dairy and farm. At this writing, Bill and Mary Alice reside at the home place.

Virgil Stout

Virgil Ray Stout, was born November 29, 1919, the son of James (Jim) William Calvin Columbus Stout, born October 17, 1883-died July 4, 1964, and Mary Cordelius Pierce Stout, born February 2, 1887-died October 22, 1976. Married July 31, 1909.

The Stout family at that time lived in a two room house on top of a mountain east of Whitehouse. Virgil's mother had her hands full with four boys. Their names were Everett, Haskell, Cecil and Virgil. Then in 1921, the family was completed with the birth of Martha.

Virgil Ray Stout about 6 years old.

James (Jim) Stout and Mary (Pierce) Stout. Virgil's mother and father.

Mary worked at home caring for the children, she also did washings and quiltings for other people. With the children, countless chores, and the work she took on, she was a very strong woman and a hard worker.

Virgil's father, Jim, worked in timber. He hewed ties with a hroad axe. When the ties were cut, usually eight or nine, they were loaded on a wagon and taken to Durham. If a tie didn't square up, it was culled. A cull tie would only bring a nickel. So great care was taken in cutting them. At that time the railroad ran through Durham on up to Pettigrew.

Money was scarce in those days, people made do with what they had. Everything was used until it was worn out, then used some more. Virgil had no shoes, plenty of patches on his clothes, and meals usually consisted of cornbread and sometimes this was eaten three times a day. Virgil's Uncle Jim and Aunt Mary White had a sorghum mill, so there was always plenty of sorghum. Virgil's mother cooked on a wood stove, they had milk cows, and grew their own food, so they never went hungry.

When Virgil was about six years old, the Stout house, it had three rooms. Grandpa Jeremiah Stout was born March 3, 1847, at Arnett, Arkansas, and he died September 6, 1907. He married in 1866 to Sarah Elizabeth Mustin, born August 18, 1848, in Tennessee, died November 4, 1931. Virgil's recollections of his grandma were of her wrapped in an Indian blanket with her hair in long braids. She smoked a clay pipe after every meal. Sarah E. Mustin Stout was a full blooded Indian, as her mother and father (James Blake Mustin) were also.

Virgil attended a one room school at Whitehouse. Classes were from primary through eighth grade. The school was heated with a pot-belly wood stove. Drinking water was carried from Tatum Springs. This was always great fun as the Springs were located some one and a half miles from the school. Many a boy got out of classwork this way.

At age ten, Virgil's first job was to Claude Davis, he was paid fifty cents a day to chop weeds out of corn.

In 1936 at age seventeen, he rode a Greyhound bus to Mulvane, Kansas to live with his uncle Art and aunt Della Ripple.

Virgil got a job working for a Dutchman named Herschey, who owned a vegetable farm. He was paid five dollars per week plus room and board. Later on he worked the railroad in Kansas and made more than he did on the farm. Virgil went on to Pocatello, Idaho and worked with the Union Pacific Railroad. He remembered hopping a freight train going to Boise, Idaho, then he came back to Pocatello. He drove a 1934 Ford back to Mulvane, Kansas.

When Virgil was twenty, he met Glennis Rosemary Williford at a square dance in Durham, Arkansas. Neither knew at the time they would be husband and wife someday.

At twenty-one, he was drafted into the Army. Virgil spent one year at Camp Joe T. Robinson in Little Rock. Then on to Camp Kilmer, New Jersey. He then shipped out to sea as a medic on a hospital ship platoon. He spent four years in the Army during WWII. Taking troops over, and bringing patients back. Virgil made eleven trips to Europe, and one to the Phillipines.

While home on leave at age twenty-three, Virgil married Glennis Rosemary Williford, age seventeen, on November 7, 1943. The ceremony was performed by John Smith at his house in Elkins. Virgil then went back to the service for one year, returning home at the age of twenty-four. At that time, Virgil and Glennis lived in Durham. They moved on to Mulvane, Kansas, where their first child, Cheryl Kay, was born on April 3, 1947, in Wichita, Kansas. At that time, Virgil worked from Boeing-Aircraft in Wichita. Starting at $1.27-1/2 and hour. Which was good wages for that time. On March 14, 1955, Terry Lee Stout was born in Wichita, Kansas completing the family.

In January of 1966, they moved back to Elkins, Arkansas. Virgil had a job working for Shakespeare in Fayetteville, as a set-up man. Virgil is now retired, living at Route 2, Elkins, the same house they had built in 1966. Virgil and Glennis have a trailer and enjoy camping when they can.

Cheryl Kay Stout married Larry Dean Downing of Elkins, they have four children, Shane Deloin, Shawn Delane, Misty Leann, and Angelia Rose. They live just outside of Elkins.

Terry Lee Stout married Barbara F. Stacks of Fayetteville. They have three children, Donnie James, Jason Randall Ray, and Kristy Lee. They live in the Harris Community just out of Elkins.

The one thing Virgil's grandchildren can count on is Grandpa. He is always there to run errands, fix bicycles, breakup arguments, and he is always ready for a quick trip to the store in Elkins for treats.

John Calvin Stracener

I moved to Washington County, Arkansas the first time in 1931 with my parents and my grandmother Annie and her second husband William Pets Carlisle born December 23, 1861, Des Moines, Iowa. He was a wonderful man, loved by all. He homesteaded 120 A. as a Spanish American War Veteran. We cleared land, planted sugar cane and other crops, which were fenced with split rail fencing. He notched logs near the ends, hand hewed them flat on one side (with a broad axe) for the inside walls of the cabin, assembled them without nails. The cracks were filled with blue clay. The roofing was shake. (see picture)

My grandfather, John Calvin Stracener, born March 18, 1867 Erath County, Texas died December 23, 1920 Cotulla. Married September 8, 1889 Erath County, Texas. Sarah Aletha "Annie" Karnes, born November 14, 1869 Belton, died May 3, 1958 Cotulla. They had seven children (see family picture). He was the son of Harriet (Howard) and William Henry Stracener. She was the great-granddaughter of Matthew Massey and Mary Ann (Mills), also William Knox Karnes 1802-1872 (See histories). (1) William Henry June 16 1890-14 April 1965. John Strickland

In the early 1830s gold was discovered in Cherokee Territory which covered northwest Georgia, northeast Alabama, and southeast Tennessee. By 1838 the pressures exerted by the white neighbors for access to the gold was sufficient to force the Cherokee and other Five Civilized Tribes to migrate to the Oklahoma Indian Territory in the infamous Trail of Tears. Many hundreds died from exposure and malnutrition on the trip because of insufficient supplies. By 1840 Murray County, Georgia had been organized from the former Cherokee lands.

Sometime between 1840 and 1844 John Strickland and his brother William Strickland moved into Murray County. Whether they came for the now depleted gold strike or to farm the fertile Cherokee lands is not known. Both brothers were born in Georgia, John in 1823 and William in 1825. Their parents are unknown. In 1844 John Strickland married Margaret Land, daughter of Joseph and Rebecca Land from South Carolina. The Land family had come down from Giles County, Tennessee after the Indians had been removed. William Strickland married Martha Sanders in 1848 in Murray County.

By June 1850 John Strickland and family had moved to Marshall County, Alabama and were farming near present day Guntersville. They were contacted by the US Government late in 1852 and contracted to escort additional bands of Indians to the Oklahoma Indian Territory. After the trip John Strickland and family settled in Vineyard Township, Washington County, Arkansas near the town of Cane Hill. He had a choice piece of land with running water. Whether he was an Indian Agent at this time is not known. Sixty years later his surviving daughter stated he was hired to "keep an eye on the Indians".

The Strickland family had not owned slaves and their sympathies on this question is not known. Sometime after the outbreak of the Civil War all civil order vanished in northwest Arkansas. It was a no-man's land. A band of Confederate Irregulars known as Pickler's Gang, kidnapped John Strickland from his farm in 1861 or 1862 and took him to Fort Smith. According to his daughter, when he refused to give them his prime land he was tried as a Union spy and shot. He died a day or two later. When word reached his widow, who had just given birth to their tenth child, she sickened and died. Of the ten children ages newborn to fifteen years, only four were to survive the Civil War. When the plight of the orphans became known, their uncle William Land sent a wagon for them to come to safer territory near Fort Smith, now in Union hands. William Land, William Strickland, and William Henry Strickland, second son of John Strickland all joined Company D 1st Regiment of the Arkansas Volunteers (Union) in 1863. They were marched north from Fort Smith in the winter. Exposure and an outbreak of measles decimated the troops. The two older men died back at the Union Hospital in Fort Smith. William Henry Strickland drew a disability pension most of his adult life for his service.

As the war dragged on the families of William and John Strickland and William Land grew increasingly desperate. Finally in 1864 or 1865 they joined a party of seven women and 32 children and marched 10 days overland to Fort Smith. The children were placed in a Union orphanage run by a Reverend Springer. When the war ended he took most of the children back north with him. The four surviving Strickland children remained in Arkansas. Mary Elizabeth Strickland, born October 1, 1850, married Commissary Sgt. Thomas Hall Forsyth and lived at cavalry outposts in Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico until the turn of the century. They raised fifteen children throughout the southwest. William Henry Strickland, born in January 1847, returned briefly to Washington County, but could not reclaim the Strickland farm. He married Rutha Agnes Crabtree and raised twelve children near Cowlington, Oklahoma. John McAfee Strickland, born May 2, 1853, stayed near Fort Smith for a few years. He married Nancy Brown Norton, also orphaned by outlaws during the Civil War. They moved to Comanche County, Texas in 1876 and were among the early settlers of that county. He was a farmer and Baptist preacher. They raised twelve children, many of them active in the ministry in Texas and Oklahoma.

George Strickland, born May 8, 1854, was the youngest surviving child of John and Margaret Land Strickland. He married Rebecca McFarland near Fort Smith, Arkansas. After a few years in Texas, they moved to Gravette, Arkansas in Benton County. Their children were James Henry Strickland and Jackson Bedie Strickland. James Henry was born October 15, 1875 and died March 4, 1949 in Gravette. He never married. Jackson Bedie Strickland was born November 17, 1877 and died September 2, 1945 in Brown County, Texas. He married Alice Isadora Haddon September 13, 1899 and they had nine children. The children scattered all over Texas.

George Strickland, his wife Rebecca, and James Henry Strickland all wanted to be buried on their farm in Gravette, but local regulations prevented this. They are buried together against the north fence of the cemetery, as close to their beloved farm as was possible. Perhaps the inscription on Rebecca's tombstone summarizes the entire Strickland family: "She done the best she could".

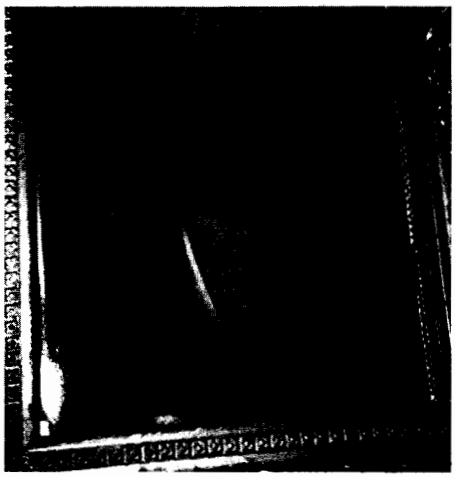
Alfred Douglas Strickler and Martha Rebeka Crawley Strickler (2nd wife).



Benjamin Strickler

Benjamin Strickler

Jacob and Barbara (Slaughter) Strickler were early settlers of Washington County, Arkansas. Benjamin, their son, was born in Sullivan County, Tennessee October 3, 1810. He married Nancy T. Newman February 14, 1837. They settled in south Washington County in a community that became known as Strickler, Arkansas. Their home was located on what became known as " The Old Wire Road." They were members of the Primitive Baptist Church, and he was a mason, a democrat, and one of the successful farmers of the county. His farm was about 640 acres in size. His loss was heavy during the Civil War. His home was burned and he suffered other losses. He and Nancy had five children - Alfred Douglas, Martha Maranda, A. T., Arthulia P., and William Carroll. Benjamin Strickler was appointed postmaster of the Strickler, Arkansas postoffice January 1860. Benjamin died September 23, 1884. Nancy died February 17, 1863. Both are buried in the Fall Creek Cemetery at Strickler, Arkansas. Alfred D. Strickler was born January 11, 1838 at Strickler. He remained with his family until he was twenty-two years of age. He was married November 10, 1859 to Mary S. Morrow, a daughter of John and Maria Morrow who were from Kentucky and among the early settlers of Washington County. They had three children - Dorcas T. born September 20, 1860 and was the wife of James Vorhees. Sallie D. born August 11, 1861, and Walter S. born July 21, 1868. Mary S. Strickler died April 26, 1879 at Strickler and is buried in the Fall Creek Cemetery. Mr. Strickler was married to his second wife July 18, 1880, Martha Rebeka Crawley, a native of the county. She was born July 21, 1855, and was a daughter of William S. Crawley who was one of the old settlers of the county. Mr. Strickler was the father of two children by this last wife - Sarah Nevada, born November 19, 1881, and Mary Tilford, born July 11, 1887. In the spring of 1862 Mr. Strickler enlisted in Company "B" of Brooks Regiment and served until the close of the war. He was in a number of important engagements, and was captured while at Saline, and was kept prisoner at Rock Island, Illinois for ten months. After the cessation of the hostilities he returned to his home in Arkansas and resumed his livestock and farming operation in the county. He and his wife were church members and he was a Democrat. Alfred Douglas Strickler died August 22, 1913 at Strickler. Martha Rebeka Strickler died January 11, 1949 at Prairie Grove - both are buried in the Fall

Creek Cemetery at Strickler. I recall summer visits with Martha to Navada Strickler Sherry's home. Navada's greeting would be "My, my Marthie haint it hot?!" Martha's reply would always be "Hit shore is!" Mary Tilford Strickler was married to Oscar Miles Sharp December 25, 1910. To this union were born Orval Douglas July 16, 1912, Hiram Wayne Sharp, January 16, 1917, Oscar Miles, Jr. May 14, 1919, and Marion James Sharp February 10, 1925. Orval Douglas married Jewel Reif in 1935 - to this union was born Shirley Ann Sharp Lowry. Orval was married to his second wife, Marie, in 1947. To this union was born Norman Sharp. Orval died September 30, 1982 at Liberal, Kansas and is buried in the Sharp Cemetery near Prairie Grove. Hiram Wayne Sharp married Glendora Virginia Powell December 31, 1941 in Jefferson City, Missouri - to this union was born Betty Jo December 27, 1942, and James Donald Sharp January 26, 1945. Betty Jo married James Arthur Ezell July 31, 1964. To this union was born Elizabeth Rene' Ezell May 22, 1969. Marianne Ezell was born April 20, 1972. James Donald Sharp married Dolores Kaye Ostie June 21, 1969. To this union were born: Serenity Kaye November 10, 1972, Kimberly Vale February 8, 1974, Summer Leigh July 12, 1978, Stevenson James November 28, 1980. James Donald (Jim) Sharp, M. D. practiced in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Oscar Miles Sharp, Jr. married Jo Lee West in 1946. To this union was born Jimmy Wayne Sharp December 26, 1948. Oscar Miles, Jr. married his second wife, Marion Bell Bushong, October 10, 1946. Marion James Sharp married Patricia Ann Trout in 1957. To this union were born William Andrew January 14, 1958, and Sandra Jay March 24, 1960. Marion James (Jay) died in an automobile crash in Ft. Nelson, British Columbia January 30, 1970 and is buried in the Sharp Cemetery near Prairie Grove, Arkansas.

William Carl Struebing, Jr.

Bill Struebing was born in Fairbank, Iowa, August 14, 1909. His parents were German. His father was born in Germany. He was the oldest son of William and Augusta Laesch Struebing. He had three half-sisters- Ida, Agnes and Christina, three sisters- Elna, Dorothy and Verna Mae and two brothers- Don and Alden.

William and Lena Louise Goree Struebing on their wedding day, February 19, 1938. They were married by Rev. Ludwig in his home in Springdale.

The family moved to Humboldt, Kansas, where he attended parochial (Lutheran) school. The family moved to Denver, then to the Lower Rio Grande valley in Texas. Bill joined the navy and served six years on the U. S. S. Colorado. He was discharged in 1937 and joined his family who had moved to Springdale.

Bill married Lena Louise Goree February 19th, 1938. Lena was a beautician. She had had an apprentice course for eight months under Crystal Begley Anderson. Later Lena owned and operated Jewel's Beauty Shop for many years. The busiest season was during the strawberry harvest. Clients got dollar permanents which some called "Strawberry Permanents". She sold her beauty shop and became involved in community affairs.

One of the happiest days of Lena's life was when her mother finally consented to let a barber neighbor, Louie Pierce, cut off Lena's braids which she hated. She was about twelve years old at the time.

Lena attended the Springdale schools. She was in the Junior and Senior plays in High School and played on the basketball team. In her senior year the Springdale girls won the tournament.

Bill became a State Trooper. He worked in Springdale and Harrison and then was transferred to Little Rock where he worked until he retired as Major Struebing.

The Struebings moved back to Springdale. Mr. Struebing passed away with lung cancer in 1974. Lena continued to live in the family home. Her yard was a show place. She won many ribbons in horticulture and flower arrangements. She belonged to the Terra Firma Garden Club. She loved antiques and collected them. She belonged to a glass club in Little Rock and an antique club in Springdale. She did volunteer work at the Shiloh Museum.

Lena, too, passed away with lung cancer after a long illness when she was seventy-four. A sister, Mabel Goree Bell and a niece, Vera Lou Goree Fowler, survive her.

Mr. Struebing was a retired navy veteran of World War II. He served in the Pacific Theater on the Destroyer Chevalier which was lost in an engagement off Vella Lavella in the Solomon Islands October 6th, 1943. One of the three United States destroyers which battled nine Japanese warships, the Chevalier was the only one lost, while three enemy ships were sunk. Although the Japanese out-numbered the American craft and they were in Japanese-controlled waters, the accuracy of the American fire apparently confused them, and in short, swift engagement the Japs fired on one of their own ships. Most of the personnel of the Chevalier was saved. Bill was able to swim to safety to another destroyer. The Selfridge and O'Bannon joined the Chevalier in the battle.

Mr. and Mrs. Struebing were members of the First Christian Church of Springdale.

Doctor John G. Sugg

John G. Sugg was born in 1922, in Gentry, Arkansas, the fourth of five children born to Edwin Green and Artincie May Gabriel Sugg. The other children were Grace, Maxine, Edwin, Jr. and Dale. Ed Sugg was the KCS Depot agent in Gentry, so John grew up close to the railroad. He graduated from Gentry High School in 1940, then attended John Brown University. After Pearl Harbor, he attended a three-month machine shop school in Harrison, and then worked in a defense plant in Hartford, Connecticut, until he was drafted into the Navy in 1943. John spent thirty-two months aboard the USS AJAX in the Pacific Theatre as a shipboard bugler, and after discharge in early 1946, attended Illinois College of Optometry in Chicago. He received his Doctor of Optometry Degree in 1949 and started practice in Siloam Springs in January, 1950.

Grace married Joe English and their five children were: Grace M., John Paul, Jo Ann, Nancy, and Jack. Maxine married Dan Ediger with three children: Maxine Marie, Betty Jean and Danny Edwin, who died in 1951, married Charlene Murray.

Ann Wiggans came to Siloam in the spring of 1952 to do her practice teaching, and on a blind date arranged by his brother, Dale, met John. They were married July 22, 1952 and Ann taught Home Economics at the Siloam Springs High School for two years.

A year later, Dale married Betty Bailey, another school teacher. They had two children: Deanna and Eric.

In 1954, John and Ann moved to Fayetteville, where John established his Optometric practice at 15 North Block Street, in one of the buildings Ann's grandfather built in 1908. Ann's parents and the Suggs bought property on Sunset Drive, and John and Ann built a home in 1956, next door to Wiggan's.

Their first child, John, Jr., was born in 1955. John's niece, Jo Ann and her husband, Sheridan Garrison had a son born at WRMC at the same time, and Ed Sugg was a very proud, simultaneous grandfather and great-grandfather. Mary Helen was born in 1957; Edwin Green II, 1960; and Mark Clayton, 1961.

John was active in many Civic and Optometric activities. He was local president and National Director in the U. S. Jaycees. He served in many capacities in organized Optometry, was president of the Arkansas Optometric Association 1956-57, served six years as Director of the Department of Public Information, five years on the Board of Trustees, and was President of the American Optometric Association 1967-68. These activities made possible many interesting travels for John, and often for Ann and the entire family.

Ann found time, while raising four children, to work in many church and civic activities, and with a few other parents in 1965 organized and incorporated a kindergarten, Fayetteville Creative Schools. In 1977, she started selling Real Estate, and became a Licensed Real Estate Broker, her present occupation.

The children attended Leverett Elementary, Ramay Junior High and FHS. All attended the University of Arkansas. Mary was the first to get her degree, a BS in Home Economics, in 1979. She was a fourth generation female graduate of the University (Blakely-Hudgins-Wiggans-Sugg), exactly one hundred years after her great-grandmother Hudgins. In 1981, Mary married Tod Corbett Bassett. Her wedding dress was the same dress that was made for her great-aunt Bess by her great-grandmother Nora Hudgins in 1908.

John, Jr. graduated from Evergreen State College in Olympia, Washington in 1978, and received his degree in Electrical Engineering from UA in 1983. He worked with a group of Consulting Engineers for three years, and is self-employed in the field of Consulting in Electrical Engineering and Computer Technology in Seattle, Washington.

Edwin attended the Air Force Academy upon completion of high school. Resigning after one year at the Academy, he returned to Fayetteville and earned his degree in Mechanical Engineering at UA. He works in the Engineering Department of Baldwin Piano and Organ Company in Fayetteville. He has a son, Phillip Andrew, born in 1985.

Mark attended the University, one semester at John Brown University, and is presently working toward a degree in Building Construction at Northeast Louisiana University in Monroe.

Cyrus Sutherland

Cyrus Arden Sutherland (born January 6, 1920; Rogers, Arkansas) and Martha Clark (Slocum) Sutherland (born October 14, 1927; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania) came to Fayetteville in August 1958 from London, England where they had lived since 1954. Cyrus was an architect (MA, Harvard GSD, 1949) and Martha was an artist (BFA, Carnegie-Mellon University, 1949). Married in Pittsburgh in 1951, Cyrus and Martha went to Europe in 1953 with a 6-month travel plan which expanded to a 5-year residency in France and England when Cyrus got a job with an American firm doing master planning and architecture for US Armed Forces in Europe. Two children were born in London: Celia Solcum (1954) and Ian McSpadden (1956). These years abroad enabled the Sutherlands to explore most of the countries of western Europe and to develop an interest in travel that has continued throughout their lives.

The Sutherlands came to Fayetteville when Cyrus accepted an appointment to join the faculty of the University Department of Architecture. They built their first Fayetteville home on Ozark Street neighboring the families of George Tharel and John Tyler Caldwell, then president of the University. Their third child, Winthrop Wren, was born in 1959. Martha, responding to her interest and talent in all the arts, began graduate study, and in 1965 received an MA in Humanities. Since that time, Martha has been continuously employed by the University, first as staff in the Music and Fine Arts Departments, and since 1977 as Assistant Professor in the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Architecture, teaching courses in calligraphy, graphic fundamentals, and computer graphics. She also gives a lecture series on "Women in Music and Art" in the Humanities program. For many years, Martha played the oboe in the Northwest Arkansas Symphony Orchestra. Her published work includes Lettering for Architech (Van Nostrand Reinhold, 1985), Letter Perfect (Random House, 1988).

Sutherlands' Ozark Street property was purchased by the University during the 1966-67 sabbatical. They then purchased the 10-acre Garvin Shipley estate on Haskell Heights and have lived there since 1968. At the present, daughter Celia (Mrs. Ron Wirth), a vice president of Piper-Jaffery-Hopwood, a brokerage firm in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Ian is working on a PhD in classics at Duke University, and Winthrop is a professional driver for a courier service in Austin, Texas.

During Cyrus' 30 year tenure in architecture, he taught courses in design, ancient architecture history, and problems of historic preservation. In 1986, he received a distinguished award for teaching. He was granted three sabbatical leaves for the study of ancient architecture in the Mediterranean area. Beginning with research periods at the American Academy in Rome, Sutherland made a series of exploration tours of the Roman Empire. In 1966-67 with the entire family and a VW van, he circled the eastern half of the Empire — North Africa, the Middle East, and southern Europe. The exploration of the Empire was completed in 1975 with itineraries through northwest Africa, Spain, France and England. The third sabbatical in 1985 was spent documenting with text and photographs some 130 triumphal and honorary arches of the Roman world.

In addition to his academic obligations with the University, Cyrus became, by the early 1970s deeply involved at local and state level with the preservation of historic buildings. In collective effort with many other Fayetteville citizens, Cyrus made important contributions to the preservation of the Sarah N. Ridge House (230 West Center), the Old Post Office centering Fayetteville Square, the Washington-Willow St Historic District, the Jonas Tebbets House (118 East Dickson Street), and the Mt. Nord Historic District. One of Cyrus' enthusiastic projects was the generation of the annual Washington County Historical Society Ice Cream Social in the early 1970s on the lawn of Headquarters House. For many hears, he served as Master of Ceremonies of this popular event. Since 1971, he has been a member of the Arkansas State Review Board for Historic Preservation (the body responsible for recommending buildings for placement on the National Register of Historic Places). In 1975, he was appointed to the Arkansas Territorial Restoration Commission. He is a founding member of the Historic Preservation Alliance of Arkansas. Professional memberships include the American Institute of Architects, The National Trust for Historic Preservation, Arkansas Historical Association, Washington County Historical Society (past president). A modest architectural practice included 17 residences, church buildings in Rogers and Springdale, libraries in Prairie Grove and Lincoln, and three preservation projects. With colleague H. Gordon Brooks, Cyrus co-produced a 3-part film series entitled Arkansas: Its Architectural Heritage. With Cyrus as on-camera host, the film series described the state architecture from pioneer days to the present.

Glen M. Sutton

Glen Mayfield Sutton, son of William L. and Mattie G. Sutton, born February 21, 1893 in Shelbyville, Tennessee moved with his family to the Steele community in northwest Arkansas around 1899. He met and, subsequently, married Carrie Elizabeth Farish, born March 22, 1895 to James Edward and Emma Dean Mount Farish of the Stony Point community. Glen and Carrie were married November 16, 1919 by Reverend Charles Edwards. The marriage was solemnized in the minister's home and was witnessed by their families.

The couple's first home was in the Steele community, a short distance from Glen's family home. Glen was engaged in farming. Their first child, Glenadene, was born February 19, 1923.

In 1924/25, Carrie's grandfather, Robert Farish, became ill and as was the custom then for younger members of a family to care for the elderly, Carrie and Glen moved to his home to care for him.

Late October, 1926 they moved across the road to the Gene Farish farm. They purchased this farm which was initially homesteaded to George McMurtrey during President Benjamin Harrison's term of office. This would be their family home for the next forty-four years.

On November 3, 1927 their second child and only son, Leland Leroy was born.

While hard times forced many of Sutton's neighbors and relatives to leave Washington and surrounding counties, they stayed on the homeplace, educating their children and contributing leadership to the community. Their third child, Wilma Sue, was born January 21, 1933.

In 1934, Glen was employed by the Washington County Road Department as heavy equipment operator and became an important member of the county's personnel to greatly expand its road system. He was regarded as one of the best road machine operators for the time and worked on every county road in Washington County. He remained at that position until 1957 when he retired, while at the same time, keeping the farm productive with the family's help.

Their fourth and last child, Carol Jewel, was born January 16, 1939.

Glenadene, Leland and Wilma Sue graduated from the 8th grade at Stony Point. Glenadene and Leland graduated from Peabody High School at University of Arkansas. Because the Stony Point School system was consolidated with the Springdale school system, Wilma Sue was transferred from Peabody High to Springdale and graduated there. Carol graduated from Junior High and High School in Springdale.

Glenadene left Stony Point following high school and worked for a time at the Woolworth Dime Store in Fayetteville, Arkansas. In 1944, she went to Washington D. C. to serve in the U. S. government where she met and married Raymond L. Cruger in 1948. Raymond was a system analyst for the Veterans Administration at the time of his death in 1984.

This marriage produced three children: Thomas W., January 18, 1949, Helen Carrie, who lived only five days, was born October 19, 1951 and Carol Sue, September 26, 1953. Glenadene returned to work after the children were grown and is employed for a Recreation Association in charge of a group insurance program.

Thomas served three years in the U. S. Army during Viet Nam conflict, graduated with a BS from University of Colorado and married Jeanne Marie Reina Hawkins in 1983. They have one child, Katherine Marie, born November 17, 1984. Thomas is a high school science teacher in the Arlington School System.

Carol Sue graduated with a BS from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and received her MA from George Washington University. Carol Sue and Doctor Richard Samuel Newmann, OBGYN were married in 1982 and have one son, Gregory Ellis, born July 31, 1986. Both Thomas and Carol Sue and families live in Washington, D. C. area nearby the Arlington, Virginia home of Glenadene.

Leland joined the U. S. Navy in January, 1945 serving eighteen months on the USS Speed. He attended John Brown University, Siloam Springs, Arkansas for one year after which he began a career of twenty-two years in radio broadcasting. When he left broadcasting, he entered the trucking industry in which he is still occupied.

In 1957, Leland married Eunice Jo Ann Fleahman of Martin's Ferry, Ohio. They currently reside in Berlin, Ohio. Glen Creighton was born October 29, 1958 and Curtis Leroy, April 22, 1960. Following receiving a BS from Ohio Northern, Glen accepted employment in electronic engineering field in Los Angeles, California. In 1981, he married the former Holly Ann Troyer of Walnut Creek, Ohio. They are parents of one son, Christopher Lee born February 14, 1987. The family lives in Diamond Bar, California. Curtis Leroy received his Associate Degree from Columbus State University and has been employed in San Diego, California since 1982.

Wilma Sue and Carol Jewel left the area following graduation from highschool to live in Springfield, Missouri and work for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Wilma received her BS from Drury College and continued with SWBT/AT&T systems in the management field to retirement in 1987. Carol retired from Southwestern Bell Telephone in 1986 and is currently employed as a secretary for a new retirement community.

In 1970, Glen and Carrie, both in failing health, were moved to Springfield, Missouri to be cared for by Wilma and Carol. To give up their church, Elm Springs Methodist, where they had been long time members, their friends, neighbors and remaining relatives in the area was the most difficult decision they had to make. In 1972, their home was sold, and for the first time since it was sold by homesteader, George McMurtrey, it was not owned by a Farish. It has been seventeen years since anyone of our Sutton family has lived in northwest Arkansas, but it will always lovingly be referred to as our home. Glen died May 22, 1973 and Carrie died June 23, 1980. They are buried at Elm Springs.

Jeremiah Sutton

Jeremiah Sutton, with his wife and two children, migrated to Arkansas in the early 1830s and homesteaded land in Prairie Township, Washington County, close to White River, West Fork branch. About the same time the Brooks, Wilsons, Collins, Mayes and Carters settled near and around the area. Jeremiah Sutton was born October 9, 1803 in Preble County, Ohio, the son of Elizabeth Sutton and Benjamin Sutton (double first cousins), who were children of two of the well known "Preacher Brothers" of the Baptist Church in early day Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Ohio. At the time of his father's death in 1814, Jeremiah had gone to live with his sister, Sarah, and her husband, Benson Minor in Indiana to "larn" the hatters trade. The rest of his family moved to Johnson County, Indiana about 1822.

Jeremiah Sutton married Margaret Phelan, a Quaker, in 1826 and they lived in Vermillion County, Illinois where their first child, Elizabeth Ann, was born in 1827. A son, Philip David, was born in 1832. Shortly thereafter, the family moved to Arkansas, along with Jeremiah's sister, Hannah, who was married to Richard Phelan. In 1837, Rhoda Jane was born, Hannah Marena in 1840, and Seborn Andrew in 1843.

Elizabeth Ann Sutton married Thomas Ridley in 1841 and had six children, four of whom died young. Elizabeth died June 20, 1864 and is buried with her children in Combs Cemetery, as are many family members. Her father, Jeremiah, had donated the land for the cemetery: the cemetery called Combs because of the nearby Combs School.

Philip David Sutton married Tennessee Sutfield, January 20, 1853 and they had four daughters before they moved to Texas about 1862. Three other children were born in Texas, including two sons, David and Isco. Philip served in Gurley's Regiment (a forerunner of the Texas Rangers) during the Civil War. He was taken prisoner by the Union Army and held until his release in 1865. He died in 1873 in Texas.

Rhoda Jane Sutton married James Collins, October 12, 1859 and had one daughter, Sally Marie. James Collins died at age twenty-two. Rhoda Jane then married Joseph Mayes, a widower, whose first wife had been Sarah Collins, a sister of James. Rhoda and Joseph had two children, Mary Belle (Maimie) and Joseph Oscar. Joseph's father, Samuel Mayes, was an early settler along with the Suttons.

Hannah Marena Sutton married John Cox, October 27, 1859. They had no children. In later years, Hannah lived on the old homeplace and died May 1, 1914.

Seborn Andrew Sutton married Penelope Jane Carter (Nellie), November 22, 1866 and they lived with his mother, Margaret. Jeremiah Sutton had died July 19, 1859, buried in Combs Cemetery. Seborn and Nellie had one daughter, Susan Elizabeth, who died young, and had two sons: Ellis Edward, born 1870 and Samuel David, born 1873. Seborn died at age thirty-one from "cramp colic" in 1873. Penelope Jane Carter Sutton married Samuel Woolsey, a family friend, December 23, 1875 and they had eight children. The Woolsey family later moved to Wyman. Ellis and Dave Sutton inherited land from their father and later more land from their Aunt Hannah Marena.

Dave married Annettie Phelan in 1892 and they had six children. He later moved to Seattle, Washington and married Isabelle Lindsay, 1926.

Ellis Sutton married Mary E. (Polly) January 25, 1895. Polly was one of five daughters of Eliza Catherine Eakin and Thomas Jefferson Lee of Greenland. (See Lee Family). Ellis and Polly lived with Hannah Marena (Rena) Sutton Cox on the old homestead until her death in 1914 and several years therafter. Ellis and Polly had seven children: Roy, 1895, Nora, 1896, Nellie, 1898, Velda, 1902, Seaborn, 1904, Charlie, 1906 and Katheryn, 1909.

Jeremiah Sutton owned over two hundred acres of land on which he grew oats, wheat, corn and hay. He was a strong member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South and donated land for a church and the land for Combs Cemetery. At this time, the eighth generation of the family still resides in the area first homesteaded by Jeremiah Sutton.

W. L. Sutton

But for the fact that Arkansas was a "Free State" during the civil strife of the 1860s and through the reconstruction period, this story might not be told. William Leslie Sutton, born March 22, 1866 to S. J. and Susan Clairborne Sutton, who lived on the "other side" of this civil dispute, himself grew up to be a Civil War protester. It was told that, as a young man on the unpopular side of the freedom dispute, he spent time hiding in the caves in or around Shelbyville, Tennessee where he was born and grew to adulthood. Another, and even more personal event that significantly aided in finalizing the decision to relocate, was a lovely, wasp-waisted, strong willed, statuesque young lady who became his wife. Mattie Gentry Smith, born to George and Mattie E. Rainey Smith November 23, 1865, was a finished young lady from a Tennessee Girls School with what was considered to be a fine education for that time in our history. She was further advantaged by traveling in circles where she met a young lawyer whom she chose to marry. We don't know whether she was equally chosen, we feel sure she was. As the story goes, Mattie's parents did not consider him a suitable mate, and in that day and time, what parents thought mattered. So much so, that in a fit of pique, she married W. L., as he was known, in 1890.

W. L. left school at the end of his third year of "free school". Perhaps he benefited from Mattie's education. We never considered him to be an ignorant man, an impetuous man, no doubt, but certainly more controlled than controlling. However, one year an especially good grape harvest in the mid 1920s provided him with the fuel to throw the traces and bring to reality one of his, if not every man's, fantasies of that era. One day, without fanfare, he drove home this magnificent, maroon Nash Touring car with leather seats and black convertible top. Such a car was just the thing for showing off his good fortune. To say this auto was the conversation piece of his and surrounding communities might be the understatement of the time. To add that this automobile provided a bone of contention in the marriage that lasted longer than the car is not an understatement.

This marriage produced six children; Lorena F., September 25, 1891, Glen M., February 21, 1893, W. Roy, April 26, 1897, Walter J., April 16, 1899, George R., September 7, 1903 and Susan E., October 10, 1905.

The move to Washington County, Steele community in northwest Arkansas came around 1899. W. L. was a farmer and where they settled in Steele is where they remained until a broken hip forced them to sell their farm and move to a smaller place where he died in 1945. She died some years later in 1951 at age 86. Lorena died in 1918, a victim of the influenza epidemic, Roy, at age 2 of pneumonia and Walter as a result of a hunting accident in 1917. George and Susan remained in Steele. George remained on the farm until 1951. He then left the area and lived out his life in the San Joaquin Valley area of California where he died at age 65.

Glen M., the eldest of the remaining Sutton family siblings, married Carrie E. Farish in 1919. She was the daughter of James Edward and Emma Dean Mount Farish born March 22, 1895. Their parents were neighboring farmers and they had known each other from childhood. She attended "free school" in Stony Point and he in Steele. They set up housekeeping in the Steele community where they lived until 1924-25. This marriage produced four children: Glenadene, February 19, 1923, Leland L., November 3, 1927, Wilma S., January 21, 1933 and Carol J., January 16, 1939. They moved to Carrie's grandfather, Robert Farish's home to care for him when he became too infirm to care for himself in 1924-25. During this period, they bought the farm across the road known as Gene Farish farm, where they raised their family and lived until they became too ill and infirm and sold their beloved home on the hill and moved to Springfield, Missouri where they were lovingly tended by their daughters, Wilma and Carol until death, Glen in 1973 and Carrie in 1980.

Glenadene left the Stony Point community after graduating from Peabody High School at University of Arkansas and worked for a time at the Woolworth Dime Store in Fayetteville, Arkansas before going to Washington, D. C. to serve in the U. S. Government where Glenadene met and married Raymond L. Cruger in 1948. This marriage produced three children; Thomas W., January 18, 1949, Helen Carrie, October 19, 1951, who lived only five days and Carol S., September 26, 1953. Raymond was a system analyst for the Veterans Administration at his death in 1984. Thomas and his wife, the former Jeanne Marie Reina Hawkins, who he married in 1983 and their daughter, Katherine Marie born November 17, 1984 and Carol Sue and her husband, Doctor Richard S. Newmann, who she married in 1982 and their son, Gregory Ellis, born July 31, 1986 live in Washington, D. C. area nearby the Arlington, Virginia home of Glenadene.

Leland also left Stony Point following graduation from Peabody High School, University of Arkansas, serving in the U. S. Navy on the USS Speed and a year at John Brown University, Siloam Springs, Arkansas. He began a twenty-two year career in radio broadcasting after which he entered the trucking industry in which he is still occupied. In 1957, he married Eunice Jo Ann Fleahman and they reside in Berlin, Ohio. October 29, 1958, Glen Creighton was born, followed by Curtis Leroy on April 22, 1960. Glen and his wife, the former Holly Ann Troyer, whom he married in 1981 and son, Christopher Lee, born February 14, 1987 live in Diamond Bar, California. Curtis moved to California in 1982 and currently resides in Encinitas.

Wilma S. and Carol J. left the area after graduating from Springdale High School to live in Springfield, Missouri and work for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Wilma received her BS from Drury College and continued with SWBT/AT&T systems in the management field to retirement in 1987. Carol retired from Southwestern Bell Telephone in 1986 and is currently employed as a secretary for a new retirement community.

Susan E., the youngest of the original Washington County Sutton family, married Kirby Collett, a neighboring farmer, in 1940. He was the son of Schuyler Colfax and Effie Katherine Kirby Collett from Indiana. The Collett's moved to Arkansas in 1920 when Kirby was 33 years old and settled on the farm on which he and Susie raised their family. This marriage produced one child; Kay Gentry,, born August 7, 1941. Kay remained on the homeplace until after Kirby died September 5, 1972, followed by Susie's death October 25, 1972. Kay received her BS from the University of Arkansas and later moved to Washington, D. C. where she met and married Oscar E. Goss in 1975. They both served congressmen for some time, but are presently in Little Rock, Arkansas. She is serving as special assistant to Governor Bill Clinton and he on the management team for the Arkansas Educational Television Network. This marriage produced one child; Susan L., August 9, 1976.

We are a small clan and have spread to the four corners and points in between, but we are well rooted in northwest Arkansas and exceedingly proud to be so.

Emer Lewis Swonger

Emer Lewis Swonger was born January 3, 1842 in Richland County, Ohio. The son of John and Sarah Ann Boyd Swonger from Franklin County, Pennsylvania. Emer served in the Civil War, Union side, Company C. 49th Regiment, Ohio Volunteers. Emer's three brothers, James, John, and William and also Father John were in the Civil War on the Union side. Father John died in battle in Murfreesboro, Tennessee. Emer had four sisters, Eliza Jane, Martha E., Sarah E., and Mary Ann. The Mother and the two younger girls lived in Bucyrus, Ohio after the war. Emer was hurt in the war when he was thrown out of a wagon and a box of ammunition fell on his leg.

Emer Lewis Swonger married Melvina Decker, daughter of Aaron and Nancy Y. Bishop Decker of Crawford County, Ohio. They ran off to Detroit, Michigan and were married January 15, 1865. They went back to Crawford County, Ohio and settled down and raised a family of nine children, six boys and three girls. They were (1) Sara Genevia b. December 22, 1865, md. John Clifford d. February 7, 1905 Pratt, Kansas. (2) James B. b. June 18, 1867 md. Nellie Eicheleberger d. August 31, 1928, Sawyer or Pratt, Kansas. (3) Nancy Estella b. January 3, 1869, d. 1881. (4) Arthur Eugene b. September 10, 1870, md. Mable Wells November 30, 1891 Pratt, Kansas, d. November 25, 1935 Pratt, Kansas. (5) Boyd C. b. December 21, 1872, md. Bell Wells, d. December 25, 1929 Castle Rock, Colorado. (6) Clark P. b. April 25, 1875, md. Maude Tillison, d. September 25, 1961, Bucklin, Kansas. (7) Luthur b. February 5, 1877, md. Emma Christinia Knackstedt, d. October 29, 1963, Dodge City, Kansas. (8) Amy Ethel b. December 9, 1878, md. 1st John Robbins and 2nd Antoine Curley, d. May 17, 1961, Brownsville, Nebraska. (9) Earl Garfield b. January 18, 1881, md. Bertha Elizabeth Knackstedt.

The third child, Nancy Estella, died in 1881. I don't know if this was the reason for the Swongers to move to Kansas, but somewhere between 1881 and 1886, they moved all the family to a farm just outside of Pratt, Kansas. Two more children were born while they resided in Kansas. (10) Eva Myrtle b. February 7, 1886, md. William Lewis Fraizer, d. September 11, 1985, Dodge City, Kansas. (11) Paul Emerson b. August 15, 1891, md. Lela Stevens, September 19, 1909, d. April 15, 1986, Piney Community near Stilwell, Oklahoma.

In 1897, when the youngest child, Paul, was six years old, Emer and Melvina packed their covered wagon and headed for Arkansas. The older children stayed in Kansas, as they were married and had homes of their own. Those making the trip with their Mother and Dad were the three youngest children, Paul Emerson, Eva Myrtle, and Earl Garfield. They settled on Trace Branch in Trace Valley Community near Sulphur City, Arkansas in Washington County.

The Swongers were farmers, so naturally they raised as much as they could. They had hogs for their meat, cows for their milk and butter, chickens for eggs and meat. They always had a large garden for their vegetables. They also raised horses.

Earl Garfield didn't stay in Arkansas very long. He went back to Kansas, where the rest of his brothers and sisters lived. Emer and Melvina made trips back to Kansas in the wagon to see their children.

Emer Lewis Swonger passed away March 13, 1911. He is buried in the Reece Cemetery near Sulphur City.

Paul and Eva attended school in Trace Valley. They walked to school. Paul later met and married Lela Stevens, daughter of Isaac and Lavina Jane Long Stevens. They were married September 19, 1909 in a buggy in front of the Sulphur City School, by Doc Head, Justice of the Peace.

After Emer passed away, Melvina lived with son Paul and his wife Lela, till she passed away October 12, 1930. She is buried along side of her husband in the Reece Cemetery.

Paul Emerson Swonger

Paul Emerson Swonger was born August 15, 1891 near Pratt, Kansas. The son of Emer Lewis and Melvina Decker Swonger of Richland and Crawford County, Ohio. When he was six years old, his family moved by covered wagon to Trace Valley near Sulphur City in Washington County, Arkansas. Paul had six brothers and four sisters. Sara Genevia, James, Nancy Estella, Arthur Eugene, Boyd C., Clark P., Luthur, Amy Ethel, Earl Garfield and Eva Myrtle. Only Eva Myrtle, Earl Garfield and Paul accompanied their parents on the journey to Arkansas. Earl Garfield didn't stay long in Arkansas, he went back to Kansas to join his brothers and sisters, most of whom were married and had had homes of their own.

Paul Emerson Swonger married Lela Stevens, daughter of Isaac and Lavina Jane Long Stevens, September 19, 1909. They were married in a buggy in front of Sulphur City school house, by Doc. Head, Justice of the Peace. They lived on the family farm. Paul's dad passed away March 13, 1911. His mother continued to live with them until her death October 13, 1930. They are both buried in the Reece Cemetery near Sulphur City.

Paul and Lela farmed and milked cows, raised hogs and horses. Paul had a sawmill, cut timber, made ties and hauled them by wagon to West Fork. They raised their family of seven children, all born in the old home place on Trace Branch. Their children are: Dovie Leona, born September 27, 1910, married Richards Chambers, lives in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Loyd Marvin, born September 5, 1913, married Goldie Carter. Their children; Boyd Lewis Swonger and Wanda Faye Swonger Cox. Loyd married Letha Faye Clark. Mildred Swonger, born April 27, 1916, married Ervin Philip Camp, January 1, 1934. Their children; William Paul "Billy" Camp, Peggy Sue Camp Fields, Linda Jane Camp Kisner and Kathleen Camp. Rankin Mildred and Ervin live in the Piney Community near Stilwell, Oklahoma.

Emma Swonger, born September 22, 1918, married Lemuel Wilcox. They had one child, Ellen Lavonne Wilcox Thomas. Emma married (2nd) Robert Dowell. They live just outside Fayetteville, Arkansas. Arvil Paul Swonger, born March 24, 1920, married Audrey Stout, March 20, 1938. They have one son, Chester Paul Swonger. Arvil and Audrey live just down the road from the old home place. Mary Bell Swonger, born March 26, 1925, married 1. Ralph Little; 2. Elmer Shannifelt; 3. Walter Conley and 4. Jack Cannon. They live in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Joy Lee Swonger, born September 2, 1927, married (1.) Warren Underhill, they had one son, Gary Von Underhill. Married (2.) Hubert Calvin Burris. They had two children, Henry Paul Burris and Karen Leona Burris Johnson. Hubert passed away, Joy married E. V. Stuts.. They live in Wheeler, Arkansas.

Paul and Lela lived on the home place until about 1956. Paul decided he wanted a bigger farm. They bought a place in Madison County, Arkansas, near Wesley. There they raised hogs and Hereford cattle. Paul did his own feeding of the cattle until he was almost ninety years old. Lela got sick, so they decided to go live with daughter Mildred and her husband, Ervin Camp. They live just across the Arkansas line in Oklahoma. The State line goes right in front of the house, Paul could sit on the porch in Oklahoma and watch the deer play in the field in Arkansas. He spent many hours watching the different animals and birds.

Lela passed away August 27, 1985. Paul passed away April 15, 1986. They are both buried in the Reece Cemetery, beside Paul's dad and mother.

Dora Rose Sbanotto Taldo

Christiano Tessaro, born May 21, 1844, Italy, arrived in Tontitown, Arkansas around 1895-96 with his five children: Antonio, Carla, Elvira, Maria and Piernia. He died March 11, 1928. His wife died in Italy.

Dora Taldo

Joe Taldo

Piernia was born December 7, 1879, Valli Del Pasubio, Italy. She married Antonio Sbanotto, born August 22, 1874. They were the first couple to marry in Tontitown. They had ten children. Two deceased in childhood. The others: Dora Rose Taldo, Theresa Zulpo, Emma Verucchi White, Roy Sbanotto, Mabel Carter, Connie Liotta, Helen Thatcher and Harry Sbanotto. Antonio deceased April 21, 1933, Piernia July 9, 1966.

Dora Rose Sbanotto Taldo was the first child born of a couple married in Tontitown on April 5, 1902. She received her education from nuns at Tontitown School. Later, she worked at City Hospital at Fayetteville. On January 17, 1921 she married Joseph Teofile Taldo, son of John and Maria Taldo. They had eight children: Catherine Rose (Katy) Hovey, November 30, 1921; Raymond Robert, February 21, 1923, deceased September 21, 1976; Freddie Philip, July 31, 1924; Beatrice Marie Mussino, May 1, 1926; Patricia Josephine (Patsy Jo) Phillips, March 18, 1929; Ida Mae Brady, May 31, 1931; Sarah Ann Russell, August 22, 1933; and Joseph Theopholus, Jr. (Joe), July 3, 1936. Besides taking care of the children and farm chores, she and her husband took care of his mother and father until their death. His brother, Richard Dominic (Dick) Taldo, and niece, Mary Natale Drake, lived with them. Another niece, Margaret, stayed there some.

Dora was left a widow on May 7, 1936, with seven children and the eighth born two months later. Joseph died from the flu. Dick helped run the two farms, but since he had only one leg, his farm work was limited. He established a bonded winery, the name he chose was Dixie Pride. He expired in 1951. Later, Dora built chicken houses and grew layers and broilers commercially. Her faith was of utmost importance to her and her family. She assumed leadership and worked tirelessly on church activities. She helped select the Stations of Cross, Altar, and other fixtures that are in the present church, which was opened in 1942, that is St. Joseph Church. She reared the eight children by herself and saw them all married with children of their own. She had 24 grandchildren.

In 1955, she sold one farm to Sarah and Jim Russell and the other to Lenore Brunetti, and moved to Springdale to be near her work. She was baby sitting for the two children of Katy and Charles Hovey. She also did baby sitting for numerous other families and was affectionally known as "Nonie" (grandmother in Italian).

Once a week for twenty years, it was my (Patsy) honor to set her hair, either at her home or where she was working. In 1976, she sold her home to Ronnie Hovey and moved in with Katy and Charles. At this time, Katy started taking her to a professional hair dresser, a luxury she well deserved. She suffered a stroke in May 1980 and expired nine months later, February 22, 1981. A truly independent, hard-working lady, she was loved by all.

John and Maria Taldo came to this country from Valentia, Italy and to Tontitown, Arkansas around the turn of the century 1895-1896. They brought their eight children with them: Joseph Teofile Taldo, Richard Taldo, Benedetta Sabatini, Anna Natale Tomiello, Luigia Brunetti, Amalia Fiori, Pete Taldo and Margaret Zibri. Joseph, Richard, Benedetta, Anna and Luigia married and resided in Tontitown. Pete moved to Little Rock, Arkansas. Amalia married and moved to Maryland. Margaret returned to Italy.

Joseph was born in 1892. He married Dora Rose Sbanotto on January 17, 1921. He received his Certificate of Naturalization October 31, 1925. A hard working man with two farms of orchards, vineyards, strawberries and livestock, he and his wife also took care of his parents until their death. Richard made his home with them and helped with some to the farm work. He lost one leg in a hunting accident about the age of 12, and never married. He expired in 1951. A niece, Mary Natale, lived with them, and her sister, Margaret, lived there periodically. In 1928, he built a large house for his growing family. A two-story home with a full basement. They had eight children.

Joseph expired on May 6, 1936, from the flu, which was an epidemic at that time. He left his wife with seven small children and the eighth to be born two months later on July 3, 1936.

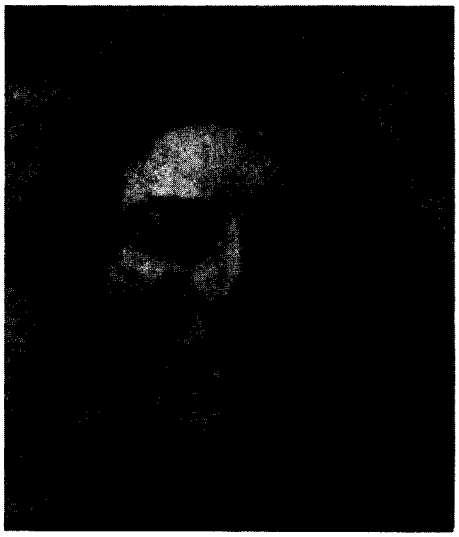
Charles W. Talley

Charles Wellington Talley married Elizabeth Ann Flowers in Morristown, Tennessee, January 11, 1880. He had been married before, and after the death of his first wife he met and fell in love with Miss Flowers. He had four children by his first wife. They were: Jesse, Louella, Della, and Gertrude.

Hazel Talley Fine, Elizabeth Ann Talley (mother), Rettie Talley Nevill. (In front of old log home, built in 1888 and still lived in by Mrs. Rettie Nevill.)



Charles Wellington Talley - Union soldier in Civil War, age 18.

Gertrude married Charlie Smith. Their children: Maude, Horace, Albert, Dorsey (Dutch), Paul and Opal. Charles and Elizabeth raised a large family, too. In addition to the 4 step-children he and Grandma Talley raised 7 children of their own and two more died as infants. Their names were: Mary, Claude, Renner, Myrtle, Cecil, Hazel and Rettie. Her four step-children loved her dearly as she was a kind mother to them and loved them all, too.

Grandpa and Grandma Talley moved with their family about 1885 from Tennessee to Texas. (About where Wichita Falls is now). They lived there about 3 years. Due to Grandma getting a fever there, she wanted to move to Missouri. So when they finally reached Winslow, Arkansas in a covered wagon, Grandpa Charles got to talking to some men there. They encouraged him to homestead 160 acres near the Oak Grove Community, which he did. The old log house which they built in 1888 still stands and is owned and occupied by their youngest daughter, Rettie Nevill, who is now age 84.

Grandpa fought in the Civil War as a Union soldier because he didn't believe in slavery.

Grandma Talley was well known as a good nurse in time of sickness. She would go and sit up with the sick for as long as was necessary in order to help them get well. She was a mid-wife to many of her neighbors, too.

Charles Renner Talley married Lula Pierce. Their children were: Theoadore (Teddy), Edith, Lois, Charles, Everett, Ila Faye, Marion, Oleta and Donald. All are still living except Teddy. And all still live in Washington County with their families, except Lois and Charles.

Hazel Talley married Albert C. (Nealie) Fine in November, 1919. Their children were: Delford, Earlene and Regena. Delford served in the Army Air Corps during WWII. He came home and met and married Dorothy M. Steele in September, 1945. Their only son Philip was killed in an accident in Tulsa, Oklahoma in January 1971. He was attending ORU at the time as a sophomore. Earlene married William E. Carter, December 1948 in West Fork, Arkansas. Their children are: Steven, Carol, Don and Neal. Regena married Al Schnackenberg in August, 1958. Their children are: Linda and Diane.

Nealie and Hazel's home at Low Gap burned in 1944. They moved to Greenland for about a year, then settled in West Fork. They were both active in the Baptist Church there and both worked in Fayetteville for many years. Nealie died on July 9, 1983 after being retired from working at National Cemetery for several years. He had been retired about 16 years. Hazel worked in Fayetteville for several years, too, and retired. She is now 87 years old and in good health.

Other children of Grandpa and Grandma Talley mentioned above and their spouses: Louella married J. T. Stark; Della married C. M. Fox; Mary married W. J. Hilliard; Claude married Dolly Pullum; Cecil married Aldona Parrish; Myrtle married Jess Hays; Rettie married Orba Nevill.

Besides the two daughters of Charles and Elizabeth - Hazel and Rettie, the only other descendents still living in Washington County are: Gertrude's son Dorsey (Dutch) of Springdale, Hazel's children: Delford and Earlene and 2 of her children. Several of Renner's children: Edith, Everett, Donald, Faye, Marion and Oleta and their children. Several of Renner's children are musicians.

Delford Fine, retired in 1985, after being employed 43-1/2 years at Southwestern Electric Power Company. He and Dorothy stay plenty busy around home, doing church work, singing in the church choir, singing in a barber shop chorus, visiting in a nursing home, painting and other craft work. Earlene and Regena also sing in choirs and play the piano.

Henry A. Taylor

This brief history of the Henry A. Sr. family is to show our appreciation for the opportunity we have had to live and raise our family in Washington County, and the joy we still have of being part of Springdale.

It all began on July 12, 1954. My wife, Fern, Hank Jr., age 9, and Doug, age 5, came here from Springfield, Missouri. It was extremely hot and dry. There was a severe drought that year and Shilo Spring was so near dry that the water department constructed an auxiliary pipe line to the Osage River near Cave Springs to fill the only water tower. That was then located on Huntsville Street near the present Water Department Office.

I had been the Sales Manager of the Prudential office in Springfield, Missouri, and was transferring here to open the northwest Arkansas area for the Insurance Company. Although Springdale was small (around 5000 in population) it was selected because of its central location in the north west section of the state. After opening the Prudential office at 106 South Main, agents were hired and trained, and Prudential is still a going business today.

My wife and I had been here a few weeks earlier to locate a place to live. We went to the Chamber of Commerce, a tiny room near the Apollo Theatre, and found that there was not one house in town to rent. So we moved into an empty apartment at the Dogwood Apartments on West Emma Avenue, then went for our first lunch at the A. Q. Chicken House.

Opportunities moved rapidly from year to year. We discovered Joyce's (been here always) Drug Store, and began to get acquainted with the people of Springdale and Tontitown. We bought a home at 1315 Rogers Avenue in September of 1954 and live there still.

At that time, I was also the Commanding Officer of a National Guard Unit in Missouri, and wanted a transfer to a unit in Arkansas. There were no available openings for a Captain in any local units at that time in northwest Arkansas. Springdale did not have a Guard Unit. So with the splendid cooperation of the City Civic Clubs, Business Men, Local and State Governments, Company B, 212th Signal Battalion was activated in June 1955. With the help of these organizations, the Armory Building was constructed and dedicated March 15, 1957. In May 1963, I retired from military life with 23 years service. The Army from 1940 to 1946 during the war years, and the National Guard thereafter.

From that point it was routine family life in the community. The boys in school, Fern working in the office of the Steele Canning Company, and I managing the Prudential office. However, no life is a bed of roses, and there was the suffering of sickness and accidents. The oldest boy lost the sight of one eye in a BB gun accident. The youngest had a car wreck his senior year, and accepted his diploma while on crutches. Hank Jr. graduated at Wentworth Military Academy, attended the University of Arkansas, then married Jo Diane Flummerfelt of Hugoton, Kansas. They have two of our four grandchildren, Stephanie and Trey. Doug graduated at the Spartan School of Aeronautics, and married Dedra Gammil of Fort Smith. They live there and have our other two grandchildren, Nick and Michele.

Fern and I have been retired since 1976. I have had pulmonary surgery and bypass grafts. Fern has excellent health. We travel some, follow the Razorbacks, and attend the First Baptist Church regularly.

Words cannot describe our appreciation to Washington County, and the city of Springdale for the great opportunity they have given our family to grow, prosper, and enjoy the past 34 years.

Hiram Taylor

Hiram Taylor "My Great Grandfather" came to Arkansas from Franklin County, Georgia in 1835 with his family. They settled on government land on " Blackburn Creek", Washington County, Arkansas.

Margaret Chitwood, my Great Grandmother came to Arkansas from Tennessee. Unfortunately, we have no records to show what year she and Hiram Taylor were married.

They became the parents of seven children, 6 girls and my grandfather John Stevens Taylor, youngest and only boy, born February 8, 1847 on their farm on "Blackburn Creek".

During the Civil War Hiram Taylor enlisted in the army May 14, 1862 and was stationed at Fayetteville. Serving less than a year, he was discharged as the result of an injury by a horse. He returned home and died shortly thereafter.

John Steven, a boy of 16 years old at the time of his father's death, was hired as driver of a six mule team for the Union Army. He drove the team across Arkansas River at Van Buren which was solid ice that winter. At age 17, John Steven joined the Union Army on May 14, 1864 and was assigned to the same outfit in which his father served. "First Cavalry Volunteers of Arkansas." While serving with this group stationed at Fayetteville, Wild Bill Hickock who, at the time was a spy for the Union Army, dropped by to visit the troops.

John Steven Taylor was discharged and returned to his boyhood farm on Blackburn Creek where his widowed mother and sisters lived. He found the place robbed clean. There was little left to live on. He took charge and cared for the family as best he could.

During this time my Grandmother Mary Jane Hawkins, a young girl of eighteen who had no home, arranged to stay with my Grandfather's family and work for her board. On March 4, 1868 she and John Steven were married. They became the parents of 8 boys and 3 girls one of which was my father, Hosea Robert Taylor.

William Hiram Taylor, the oldest child of John Steven and Mary Jane Taylor born 1869, was the source of our information on the Taylor family. He lived to be 93 years of age. Died on August 14, 1962 at Van Buren. His wife Mattie lived to be 101 years old. Their home still stands on Fayetteville Street in Van Buren. It has been renovated and is occupied by their youngest daughter.

William Hiram Taylor in 1896 helped organize a company known as Anna Telephone Company which brought rural telephone service to that part of Washington County.

In 1897 William Hiram was justice of the Peace for Porter Township, Arkansas. As J. P. he solemnized marriages, executed deeds and held court for misdemeanor cases and performed many duties which J. P. don't do now.

In 1902 William Hiram and his father John Steven Taylor bought a store and business at Walker Switch, Arkansas. They had a store, post office, timber agency and railroad agency. They handled mail for the trains (Frisco Railroad) and also handled Star route mail, which was carried on horseback, six days a week for Lee Creek, Arkansas.

In 1909 William Hiram, along with his friend A. N. Cole of Fayetteville, bought the only two stores in Schaberg, Arkansas which he operated until 1914, when he accepted the position of chief Deputy Sheriff under Sheriff-elect Jim Branson, and in this position, in addition to his regular duties he took care of the jail and collected taxes in twenty-six townships.

In 1921 he was elected postmaster and received his appointment from President Warren G. Harding. Reappointed again in 1926 by President Calvin Coolidge. In 1935 went into the grocery business which he operated at Van Buren until he retired at 87 years of age.

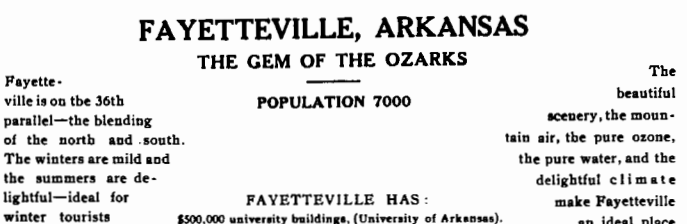
John Thomas Taylor

J. Tom Taylor, early Grocer, City Councilman and Mayor (1914-1917) of Fayetteville, was born near the "Y" (later known as Root Farm) February 3, 1858, the second son of Jeremia Mathias and Nancy Brower Taylor.



FAYETTEVILLE, ARKANSAS

THE GEM OF THE OZARKS

POPULATION 7000

Fayetteville is on the 36th parallel—the blending of the north and south. The winters are mild and the summers are delightful—ideal for winter tourists and a favorite summer resort.

The beautiful scenery, the mountain air, the pure ozone, the pure water, and the delightful climate make Fayetteville an ideal place in which to live.

FAYETTEVILLE HAS:

$500,000 university buildings, (University of Arkansas).
$200,000 water works and sewer system.
$150,000 in church buildings. $110,000 in a county court house.
$100,000 ice and cold storage plant.
$60,000 federal building. $50,000 opera house.
$50,000 in ward school buildings. $40,000 high school building. $30,000 county jail.
And various industries, but for want of space cannot enumerate.
Fayetteville is the land of the Strawberry and the home of the BIG RED APPLE.

COME TO FAYETTEVILLE, A CITY OF REFINEMENT—
50 years an educational center, where vice and intemperance are at their lowest ebb.

By age 25, he had purchased several properties in the Original Town of Fayetteville, building a home in 1886 at 212 North Church Street, where he died October 24, 1945 at age 87.

Before settling down to business and marriage, however, he and a few friends decided to venture west and climb Pike's Peak, leaving Fayetteville in the summer of 1880 on horseback and with a covered wagon. Two of the men with him may have been H. M. Black and James K. Hollowell. They never made it to the Peak, for while camping in a dry creekbed near Pueblo, Colorado, they heard a thunderous roar and saw a wall of water "15 to 20 feet high" coming toward them and barely got their horses to safety, losing the wagon and all cooking and camping equipment. Into September, they gave up fulfilling their dream, and bought a few utensils and blankets in Pueblo and headed back to Arkansas before cold weather set in.

In September 1893, he made the Cherokee Strip opening run, in Indian territory (Oklahoma). Details of this story were published in the Washington County Historical Society Flashback.

Tom Taylor did fulfill his dream of marrying "the prettiest girl I ever laid eyes on" taking as his bride, Nettie C. Lewis, on January 28, 1885. Miss Lewis, daughter of John Francis and Ann Eliza Whitlock Lewis, moved to Springdale with her parents and seven siblings (two more were born in Springdale) circa 1880 from Christian County, Missouri. To this union, Ralph Lewis, Grace, Mack, Homer, Harry "Scotty" and Gus were born.

Ralph Lewis Taylor (born November 12, 1885 - died March 30, 1974) was a bookkeeper, working as a bank cashier in his early years and was Tax Collector of Washington County for a number of years. Married to Gertrude E. Erwin, daughter of Orleana Belle Eidson and James David Erwin of Springdale, September 12, 1916. Ralph and Gertrude Taylor had four children: Annette Taylor Williams (Mrs. Earl N.); Ralph Lewis Taylor Jr., Betty Taylor Walker (Mrs. David L.) and Jerry Erwin Taylor. Annette and Jerry are living in Fayetteville, Ralph Lewis, Jr. in Phoenix, Arizona and Betty lives in Little Rock.

Grace Taylor (born July 31, 1887 - died January 8, 1968) married John Henry Grother, November 27, 1918 and had one child, Mary Ann, now deceased.

Mack Taylor (born 1889 - died 1893) age 4.

H. H. "Scotty" Taylor (born April 27, 1891 - died April 21, 1951). "Scotty" made quite a name for himself, both as Sports Editor of the Tulsa World and after entering the oil business in 1915. He married Margaret Helen Perkins of Tulsa (whose parents, the Francis Perkins, later had a large home and apple orchard east of Springdale). They had two sons, both Geologists, Tommy (Thomas Francis) lives in Houston, Texas and Bobby (Robert Harry) lives in Austin.

Gus Taylor (born December 15, 1899 - died December 6, 1948) spent his working years in newspaper advertising, including his brother "Scotty's" short-lived newspaper, the Fayetteville Daily Leader. Married Kate Alice Brewer and had one child, Willard Keet, living in California.

Our maternal grandmother, Orleana Belle Eidson Erwin, born March 27, 1865, was the youngest of 10 children born to William Harrison Eidson and his wife Susan Begley. Her two oldest brothers, McCoy Eidson and John Duff Eidson were killed at the Battle of Vicksburg, Mississippi during the Civil War; John Duff, age 19, on May 24, 1863 and McCoy, age 21, on June 24, 1863, almost two years before she was born. William Harrison Eidson was an early settler in Washington County and had extensive land holdings in the Zion Community. Re: Goodspeeds History of Northwest Arkansas - Published 1889.

Whitson Burkhead Taylor

Whitson Burkhead Taylor, born circa 1821, brother of J. M. Taylor and Uncle of J. Tom Taylor, owned a livery stable and wagon yard in the area of Center and Church Street (Fayetteville) between 1850 and up to, at least, 1867. During this period, he was also a Constable of Prairie Township. A paper dated October 8, 1861 states he rented the stable and yard for twelve months at $150 per annum to B. F. Engle AA M Fayetteville Post C. S. A., with the provision the contract was void if Fayetteville ceased to be a Post.

He lived on a farm near Prairie Grove for many years and was sworn in as a Deputy Circuit Clerk of Washington County on August 28, 1894 at about 73 years of age. It is unknown to the writer if he had any immediate family. He died in 1906, age 85 at the home of his nephew, J. Tom Taylor, 212 North Church Street, Fayetteville. Burial was in the Confederate Cemetery.

Johnny Earl Taylor, Sr.

Johnny Earl Taylor, Sr. (Jack of all Trades)-born March 8, 1927 in Hobart, Oklahoma. He was in World War II in the Navy. He has three years business college, is a master plumber, a carpenter, a welder, a fiddle player etc. (Dora) Vera Louise Landers born August 7, 1928 in Van Buren, Arkansas. She is a homemaker and gardener. They met in San Jose, California at a night club called Tracy Gardens. They danced to Bob Wells and other famous bands. They were married six months later. I guess you could say he swept her off her feet. They were married September 25, 1948.

Johnny Earl Taylor, Sr. family residence for one year, October 2, 1961 - October 2, 1962 until cement block house was completed.

In the fall of 1961, they moved to northwest Arkansas. They had four children, Sandra Louise born July 19, 1949, Marsha Ann born July 19, 1951, Johnny Earl II (Little John) born December 24, 1954 and Mark Allen born April 22, 1957.

Making the trip in a 54 Buick and an old flat bed 52 Ford, they left Lawton, Oklahoma because the kids stayed sick with allergies from the dust. They had visited Arkansas before and enjoyed the weather and scenery. Mom was raised here in Arkansas so she knew the beauty of the Ozarks. There were cool nights and only ninety degree days, a big change from one hundred twelve degrees in southern Oklahoma.

They purchased thirty-five acres four miles west of Tontitown from W. L. and Jo Baskin for $2,000.00. On October 2, 1961 they moved into a canvas tent. They used a wood burning stove to heat with and cooked with propane. It was one of the coldest winters we've had, nineteen degrees below zero. There was not much sickness during the winter in this tent. My sisters do recall having a stomach virus and a few boils.

They took baths in a wash tub by heating the water. My sister, Sandy, used a small pan to stand inside of and pour the water over her. This was done as a middle of the week bath. In the summer, we drove down the dirt road apiece to the swimming hole called Blue Hole to take a bath and swim. Its water was so cold it would turn your lips blue.

While living in the tent, they had an outhouse. In fact, we didn't have an inside toilet for three years or a shower and tub until about 1972 or 1973. They carried their water from a local creek in cream cans. Dad finally drilled a well, but it went dry. They moved over a few feet, drilled again, and found water they still use today. They now have a second well that can't be pumped dry. When they had to use the phone they went up the dirt road to the Baskin's house. We caught the school bus at their house which was by the highway.

In exactly one year to the day, we moved out of the tent into a 14 feet by 20 feet cement block room. Dad was buying lumber out of the chicken houses and homes that were being torn down when Beaver Lake was going in. He used it to build the kitchen, bedrooms and basement which was a small bedroom for the girls.

In 1965, a trash fire on a windy day burned down a toolshed, a small building with furniture (sugar shack), and the lumber dad had accumulated. Springdale Volunteer Fire Department helped keep the house from going. Luckily, no one was hurt.

While in the block room they had another child, Shery Lynn. I was born at Springdale Memorial Hospital while there was a foot of snow on the ground, on December 22, 1963. I attended Westwood Elementary and Southwest Junior High. We all graduated from Springdale High.

I was a Girl Scout for about two years. My sister, Marsha, was the troop leader. My best three years was when I joined Zion-Oak 4-H club. I was camp counselor one summer. At Share the Fun, I won second place singing competition against nine other competitors. I sang Rocky Top. I also won second place at Hot Springs with Rocky Top. I was in the performing arts troop. We performed all over Arkansas. Our show as called Magic To Do. I went canoeing down the Buffalo River. Took hikes to look at trees because I was in Forestry. In the breads contest, I took first place two years running. We enjoyed many other activities. I wish I had joined at an earlier age.

I play the mandolin and rhythm on the guitar by ear only. I haven't had any music lessons other than my brother, John, showing me some chords. My whole family is musically talented. We get together and play, but not as often as we would like.

My family has firm beliefs in the Lord. We haven't learned it from church, but from our mother and father reading to us from the Bible. They taught us to love the Lord and keep the ten commandents. Saturday is our sabbath from Friday night sundown to Saturday night sundown. Dad always said "Don't take my word for it, go to the Bible and read for yourself".

My Uncle Johnny Clegg researched our family tree on my mom's side and found that our great, great, great great-grandma is Dorothy "Dora" Holcomb Bynum. She was the 12th child of Reverend John and Dorthea Wilbanks Holcomb.

I married Bryan Dale Parsons September 14, 1984 after about a year and seven months of steady dating. We didn't have a wedding ceremony, only a big reception a week later at his grandparents house, Dale and Frances Parsons. I work at the Golden Corral Steak House in Springdale. Bryan works at Lewis Ford in Fayetteville. He also likes dealing in car parts, maybe someday he will have his own junkyard.

On January 1, 1988, the Parsons added another generation to the family. Bryan and I became proud parents when our daughter, Daphne Ann was born at 3:23 a. m. She was the first child born in 1988 in Washington County, Arkansas.

Our beautiful, dark-haired baby girl was delivered after thirty-nine hours of labor and weighed 7 pounds, 10 ounces, and was 21 inches long. Daphne was born at Springdale Memorial Hospital and delivered by Doctor McMullen.

Reverend Thomas Hardister Tennant

Thomas H. Tennant may have been the oldest Methodist preacher who ever lived. He was born October 10, 1771 in Virginia, and died October 13, 1885 in Washington County, Arkansas having reached the advanced age of 114 years 13 days. His grandson, William Henry Tennant (q. v.) said that his grandfather preached 90 years, surely a record of some kind. One of his sons, John Alexander Tennant, and a grandson, Walter Tennant McClure both became Methodist preachers.

John A. Tennant was educated at Cane Hill College, graduating in 1856 or 1859, immediately going to Washington Territory where he worked as a Civil Engineer. He married a daughter of Chief of the Lummi Indian Tribe, and had two sons, both of whom died in their "teens". He was converted in a camp meeting, was licensed to preach, and did so for several years.

Dr. Walter Tennant McClure, the grandson, preached 49 or 50 years in and around Barry County, Missouri.

It was said of Reverend T. H. Tennant that he was a man of great strenght, and a great hunter of deer. It was also said his voice would carry for 7 miles.

T. H. Tennant left Virginia when about seventeen years of age, moving to Kentucky, where he remained for a while. I do not know if he was or was not related to the William Tennant who had the Log College in Logan County, Kentucky.

Later Mr. Tennant moved to Tennessee, where he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was licensed to preach. He was admitted to the Missouri Conference of the Methodist Church in 1818, and appointed to the Arkansas Circuit, which lay on both sides of the Arkansas River from Arkansas Post to Fort Smith. In 1819, he was assigned to the Pecan Point Circuit, which extended from about 50 miles above Memphis on the Mississippi River, to Little Rock, on the Arkansas.

In 1821 he was married to Christine Hacker (also Haek) of Arkansas Post and they had nine children, named elsewhere.

By 1823 Reverend Tennant had located, or become a local preacher, not subject to assignment by the Conference. We suppose that he and Christine lived at Arkansas Post; in any case all was not well, for Christine owned a few slaves. One was very unruly and could not be controlled. Reverend Tennant could not free him, for then he would have to make bond for his good behavior. The only alternative was to sell him, which was done. Now the church had rules about preachers owning slaves, and in this case slaves were supposed to be freed, not sold. Consequently, charges were brought against the Reverend Tennant for selling a slave, and he was expelled from the Conference. He considered himself to have been ill treated, and never asked to be reinstated.

This incident and two similiar ones involving Francis A. Hardin and Bishop James O. Andrew seem to be the key events which led to the division of the Methodist Church into the "North" and "South" divisions, a rift only recently mended.

Following his expulsion from the Conference, Reverend Tennant moved with his family to Washington County, settling a mile or two west of the present town of Morrow, Arkansas, and not far from the Bethlehem camp meeting ground. (The foregoing information agrees with the account written by Dr. Walter Tennant McClure and published in Centennial History of Arkansas Methodism). Examination of the Bethlehem Church Record book (State Archives, under "Religious, Methodist, Microfilm roll No. 9) indicates that Reverend Tennant joined that church on June 11, 1837 when Thomas Gering was pastor, and was expelled in 1838. Reverend Tennant continued to preach as long as he was able, never abandoning his religion.

Christine H. Tennant died in 1840 or 1845 (accounts differ) and later on December 3, 1844 Reverend Tennant married Clarrisa Isabel Whiter Slover, widow of Reverend Calvin Slover, another Methodist preacher. Thomas and Clarrisa had five children, one of whom died in infancy. The remaining four are named elsewhere.

Of these four, the oldest was Addison Clark Tennant who lived at Farmington, Arkansas and is buried there. His wife Mary Ellen Gray, I suspect, was the daughter of Sanford Foley Gray and Elizabeth B. Ormes Gray, but have not confirmed this. Of their eight children, I am certain of only one, Walter H. Tennant, born January 15, 1889, died May 3, 1969, married Beulah E. Shafer, born January 15, 1889, died May 3, 1969. No children.

I believe that Eva Ann Tennant, 1875-1964, was another child of Addison, but am not certain. Of Addison's six other children I have no knowledge.

Thomas Sanford Tennant was the second child of T. H. and Clarrisa. He was married to Talitha (not Tabitha) West, daughter of Reverend Nathan Renshaw West another Methodist preacher and his wife Elizabeth Summers West, who lived some 1-1/2 miles southwest of Summers, Arkansas. Thomas and Talitha lived for a time at Prairie Grove, Arkansas before moving to her father's farm, where they spent the rest of their days.

1. John Alexander Tennant 1876-1960, married Hettie Gertrude Alexander Gibson. (See under his name for children). 2. William Henry Tennant 1878-1960, married Mary Ellen Gibson. (See under his name. No children). 3. Hugh Tennant, married, had three children, Jack, Don and Betty. 4. Fred Tennant 1893-1960, married Dexter Martin, had 3 children. Vernon Tennant, married Nadine Shannon, they had two children, Mike and Steve. Dr. Forrest Tennant, DDS, married Van Evans, had four children, Fred, Jeff, Jason and Justin. Jeff married Susan Rollins. Dana Tennant, married Robert Harnell, no children. 5. Pleasant (Pleas) Tennant, believed to have married and had some children in Stilwell, Oklahoma. Probably buried in Oklahoma City by State Hospital. 6. Mary Lizzie Tennant 1884-1924. 7. Anna Tennant, married Ashley Edmiston, two children, Clifford Edmiston, married Elsie Comstock (children are Alvin Gratis, Jaqueline and Genevieve) and Bryan Edmiston, married Anna Martin, their children are, J. B., Paul and Pauline, who married K. R. Lindley, and lives at Lincoln, Arkansas. 8. T. Lacy Tennant, died 1888 at age 2 years and 1 month. 9. Alice Magnolia Tennant 1889-1904. 10. Child buried at Prairie Grove. 1874-1898 name unknown.

I have no more information about the rest of Reverend T. H. Tennant's family.

He is buried in Bethlehem Cemetery, near Morrow, Arkansas. A bronze tablet commerating Reverend Tennant is in the Central United Methodist Church, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The children of The Reverend Thomas H. Tennant

The following is abstracted from The Arkansas Family Historian, the publication of the Arkansas Geneological Society, Inc., 4200 "A" Street, Little Rock, Arkansas.

Every now and then our Society gets a request for information about the Reverend Thomas H. Tennant, said to have been the oldest Methodist minister who ever lived. We present herewith some names and dates that may be of some interest. This material is from a booklet compiled by Mabel B. McClure in 1934 entitled "The McClures, The Kennedys, The Tennants and The Gays". According to a footnote, the names and dates for this geneology were supplied by J. T. Sallee of Monett, Missouri, from the family Bible of Harriet Tennant Sallee.

Reverend Thomas Hardister Tennant, born in Virginia October 10, 1771, died Washington County, Arkansas, October 13, 1885 at the age of 114. Was a Methodist minister and circuit rider in Tennessee, Southeast Missouri, and Arkansas. Was twice married.

First wife: Christine Hacker, born Arkansas Post November 28, 1800; died Washington County, Arkansas in 1845; was married in 1821 and had nine children:

1. Lina Harriet Tennant (or Sinai, from Bethlehem Church Record), born April 24, 1882, died August 6, 1897; married George Sallee, Exeter, Missouri, 1884; had 4 children. 2. William H. Tennant

Mary Ellen Gibson, born 10 June 1881, and died 21 April 1959, was married 28 January 1924 to William Henry Tennant, he was born 25 July 1878 and died 20 January 1960, the son of Thomas S. Tennant and Talitha West Tennant, and grandson of Rev. Thomas H. Tennant and Clarissa I. White Slover Tennant; they had no children.

My Aunt Ellen Gibson was the oldest of my father's three sisters, and the last to marry. She stayed home and cared for her father and mother as long as they lived, with the help of her brothers and sisters.

Ellen received about the same primary education as her siblings, largely subscription schools during the winter at Island Chapel, Coon Creek, Goosewalk, etc. She wanted to be a teacher however, and arranged to attend more advanced schools at Springdale and Prairie Grove, leading to a teaching certificate. Ellen taught at Summers, Renic, "Dominaker" (Dominique), and Armstrong (Possum Holler) and possibly other schools for many years. Her last school must have been at Summers about 1922 or 23.

After her father's death she and Henry married and spent the next 24 years on her father's farm. In 1935 she and Henry demolished the log house built by John Cole, and used the salvaged lumber to build a more modern house in which I still live.

Uncle Henry was a well traveled man. When the Ozark and Cherokee Central Railroad built through Washington County, Henry and his brother Hugh, got jobs on the surveying crew. They learned to be "instrument men", using the level and transit, and preparing surveyors field notes. Henry followed this profession for many years, working during the summer on United States government Survey Crews in Colorado, and spending winters at home (Summers, Arkansas). Henry never forgot this skill for in 1952 he showed me how to set up a level when I wanted to run some contours above a pond. Hugh became a civil engineer and worked for the Oklahoma Highway Department until he retired. One year Henry signed up with a survey crew that was sent to Honduras, and spent a year surveying in that tropical country.

Henry and Ellen bought their first automobile, an "A" Model Ford roadster, about 1930. For quite a while they had to go through four gates to get to the county road, a situation they finally managed to change.

Uncle Henry farmed with mules mostly. He and my father "swapped work" with their farming for many years, and never had a dispute about anything; a rather remarkable feat in our family. The two often rented Uncle George Burkett's land and so had about 260 acres of tillable land to work.

Henry belonged to the Masonic Lodge (at Prairie Grove, Arkansas, I think) for many years. He also belonged to the Anti-Horsethief Association, I believe.

Having no children, Aunt Ellen and Uncle Henry sort of adopted me and I spent much time at their house, sometimes with one or more of my cousins. Aunt Ellen kept a teapot and often made tea, which was not done in the other households I knew as a boy.

Joseph Allan Terhune

The Terhune family, French Hugenuenots or Protestants, lived in Paris, and fled from religious persecution late in the 1590s. John Terhune, his wife, and two small children, fled to Holland with one valise. The immigrant ancestor in America was Albert Albertse Terhune, born about 1619 in Holland, where he became a ribbon weaver. When the Dutch settlers came to Long Island in 1641/42, he was with them. Many of his descendants lived in New York and New Jersey. In 1808, 3-greats-grandson, named Albert, moved to Kentucky; later generations moved to Missouri, and the northwest; to Arkansas and Texas. One of Albert's sons was John (1800-1873) married 1826, Fleming County, Kentucky to Marjorie McIntire, they had 5 children, one of whom was Joseph M. Terhune (1837-1891, Washington County, Arkansas). He married 1885, to America Huff, born 1837 in Missouri. Their first three children were born in Nodaway County, Missouri. (1). Joseph Allan (see later); (2) Dorinda Ann, born 1858, married 1875, Washington County, to John P. Scott. Their daughter, Olive Mae Scott (1878-1959) married Samuel Judson DeMott, and had one son. (3) Lidda Ellen (1863-1902) never married. (4) Annie Bell, born 1865, Kentucky; married in 1883, Fayetteville, to James Buchanan Strange, born 1865; George Leverett Strange was their first child. His sister, Lena, married Hugh Pyeatt. These three families moved to the Texas Panhandle near Tulia. James B. died there in 1924, and Annie Bell in 1938. Annie's parents, Joseph M. and America Terhune had moved in 1862 from war-troubled Missouri to their former home in Kentucky. About 1868 they returned west and settled in Washington County, Arkansas. Joseph M. fought in the Southern Army and drove a commissary wagon. Later, he became a shoe cobbler because one leg was lame. He died in 1891 and was buried at Mount Comfort Cemetery. His widow, America, married Joe Bowman, who died in 1906, at Dexter, New Mexico. In March 1913, America visited her son, Joseph Allan Terhune in Thorp Spring, Texas and died March 26, after suffering a stroke.

Joseph Allan Terhune, born in Nodaway County, Missouri, July 11, 1856, became a farmer early in life as he took over the farm work at about age nine, because of his father's lameness. On September 28, 1876, he married Sarah Adeline Lewis, born September 5, 1859, Washington County, daughter of Henry Lewis (see sketch). They had 10 children: Milton Augustus (1877, Arkansas - 1908, Texas) never married. Annie Belle (1879, Arkansas - 1930, Texas) married Lewis Terrell Key; one daughter. Leland Stanford (1882, Bell County, Texas - 1907, New Mexico), married 1905, Washington County, Arkansas. Alice Swagerty (1883, Arkansas - 1944, Arkansas). They moved to New Mexico and filed on land near Dexter. About August 1, 1907, Leland was murdered by his cousin, Moses Lewis, who was sentenced to life in the State Prison at Santa Fe. Leland and Alice had a son, Reaves Stanford, in 1906, and after she had returned to Fayetteville, Leland Swagerty Terhune was born in 1908. He died in 1977. Alice taught school many years in Fayetteville, and died in 1944. Myrtle Alma (1884, Arkansas - 1966, Texas) married 1904, G. F. Johnson; stillborn twins. Hubert Lyman (1887, Arkansas - 1959, Texas) married first in 1909, to Theodocia Blair, had two children. A son James Blair (1912, Texas - 1975, West Fork, Arkansas) where his widow, Ava lives as of 1987. Hubert married in 1916, Tulita Green; had one daughter. Joseph Edmond (1890, Sherman, Texas - 1968, Nebraska) married in 1936, Thelma DeGrafferreid; had twin boys, Eddie Lee and Teddy Joe, born in 1945, Perryton, Texas. Ina Mildred (1892, Sherman, Texas - 1983, Kansas) married in 1913 to Thomas Reynolds Stewart; had three sons, Leland Marean, Rollin Reynolds, and James Alan. Pearl Eugenia (1895, Sherman, Texas - 1976, Texas) married 1921 Fred Webb; had 3 children; Edfred, Aneita Faye and Clifford. Susan Jewell (1898, Sherman, Texas - 1985, Texas) married 1917 to Samuel K. Hill; had 5 children: Shelley, Avanell, Darrell, Melton, and a twin stillborn. Glenn Allan (1904, Iowa Park, Texas) married Dorsey I. Woods in 1929; we had 4 children born in Perryton, Texas: Gene Max, lives in Odessa, Texas. Treva June, lives in Houston, Texas. Sylvia Ann, lives in Broken Arrow, Oklahoma and Jack Allan, who lives in Perryton, Texas.

Clark H. Terry

In the southeast corner of Washington County, Arkansas, just south of the Sunset Community on a rolling hill, pine trees line a chain link fence. The name, Terry, is on the gate entrance of a neatly kept cemetery. Inside this serene setting lies Clark H. Terry, born February 26, 1838 and died on March 7, 1913. Family members surround Clark Terry. A short distance down county road #110 on the west side of the road is a modern looking two-story house with a small building out front. This is the home that Clark Terry built after the Civil War and resided in, until his death.

Clark Terry enlisted in the Union Army, A Company, 13th Kansas Infantry at Camp Babcock. He was a sandy-haired man who stood 5'8" tall and had gray eyes and a medium complexion. On December 7, 1862, Clark fought with the A Company, 13th Kansas Infantry at the Battle of Prairie Grove. Coming on the field of battle the 10th, 11th, and 13th Kansas Infantry Regiments, lst Calvary dismounted acting as infantry of the lst division were involved in the conflict upon the field of battle, though their comrades were falling around them. The 11th and 13th Kansas both having a long list of casualties. Clark H. Terry was wounded in this confrontation and taken to the hospital in Fayetteville until Janaury 8, 1864. He then was transferred to New Company B of lst Kansas Volunteer Veteran Mounted Infantry. He mustered out in Little Rock, Arkansas on August 30, 1865.

A story is told about Clark when he was fighting in the Civil War. One night, Clark was picked to stand guard duty. Normally, that wouldn't have bothered him, but the last five nights, each guard had been killed Clark was reminded by his commander to "shoot anything that moves". Clark remembered those words later that night. Clark saw something moving on the side of the hill. He couldn't quite make out what it was until it got a bit closer. Then Clark realized it was an old sow. Clark lowered the barrel of his rifle momentarily, but then the words of his commander came to him again, he raised his rifle and squeezed off a round. The old sow collapsed. When it was fully light, Clark went over to examine the sow. To his amazement, when he got close to her, he noticed that under the sow's hide (with head attached) was a dead Indian with two pearl-handled pistols. This put an end to his unit's guards being killed while on guard duty.

Clark H. Terry settled a quarter section of land in Sunset, Arkansas after the Civil War. It is said that he traded a rifle for the land. He had the Indians in the area first tell him where the water was to be found. He dug a well and it was fed by an underground stream. He built his log cabin on the land. It was two stories tall and he cut firing slits in the oak logs on the second floor so that he could fire out at bushwhackers, but they couldn't fire at him. Soon after Clark had built his homestead, the following allegedly happened. He and his men were away from the homestead one day when some bushwhackers descended on the cabin, stole all the food and some horses. When Clark returned home, shortly thereafter, the women told him of the thefts and Clark went after the marauders with his men. They took a shortcut and soon caught up with the thieves. They were all shot dead on the spot by Clark and his men. Clark shot the leader of the group right through a saddle which the man was carrying on his shoulders since his horse had been killed. After shooting the thieves, Clark returned home with all the recovered property, plus the thieves property.

The building in front of the homestead served as a general store. At the Sunset Post Office, Clark Terry was Postmaster starting May 9, 1899. Clark was also a Master Mason and a Baptist. The minutes of the 43rd annual session of the Washington Association of Regular Baptists held with New Hope Church (located southwest of Prairie Grove) on September 3, 4, 5th, 1880, show Clark Terry listed as a messenger representing the Boston Community Church of Washington County, Arkansas.

Clark Terry's Union uniform and sabre are now on display at the University of Arkansas Museum in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

James Madison Thatch

James Madison Thatch (January 27, 1818 to March 22, 1882) was born in Monroe County, Tennessee. About 1840, he married Eliza Whittle (October 9, 1820 to November 23, 1893), daughter of George Whittle and Nancy Huffaker (daughter of George Huffaker, Revolutionary War soldier, Virginia, and Agatha Lee). They had 10 children: Nancy Elizabeth (Scott), Sara Jane, William Henderson, Zachariah Wall, Martha Ann, Mary Ann (Rodreick), Susan Street (Hale), George McCamey "Dugan", Margaret Minerva (Rose-Gloyd) and Carrie Alice.

James Madison reared his family on a plantation in Catoosa County, Georgia, near Ringold. On clear days they could see Lookout Mountain in Tennessee. They left Georgia on January 27, 1872, and arrived at Fort Smith, Arkansas, by steamboat. From there they crossed the Boston Mountains and settled east of Springdale near War Eagle and Goshen. He was a blacksmith by trade and also farmed.

In May 1895, Zachariah left Fayetteville with a drove of horses to go to Indian Territory. He employed a man named Wilson to assist in driving the stock. Wilson murdered him as he sat at their campfire near Keokuk Falls in the Creek Nation on May 15, 1895. A few weeks later, Wilson was found in possession of Zachariah's team, wagon and camp outfit. Judge Isaac Parker sentenced the murderer to be hanged, and the Supreme Court subsequently upheld his decision. Wilson was the last man executed on the Fort Smith gallows.

James Madison was the son of William Henderson Thatch and Sara Nipper. His grandfather was Thomas, son of John Thach, a planter of Perquimans County, North Carolina. Spelling of the family name was changed some time early in James Madison's life. Family legend persisted that the name was originally Thatch and connected this family with Edward Thatch, pirate. James Madison and Eliza are buried at Friendship Cemetery near Springdale.

Andrew Jackson McCarty and his wife, Susan Pope Abney (daughter of Jacob and Dolly (Kirksey) Abney and great-granddaughter of Isabella (Madison) and Nathaniel Abney, Revolutionary War Captain, South Carolina) were moving with their three daughters from Saluda, Edgefield County, South Carolina, to the home the Thatches were vacating. They arrived a few days early. William Henderson Thatch (August 17, 1846 to May 13, 1934), oldest son of James Madison and Eliza, and Saluda Joseph Ann McCarty (February 25, 1852 to April 29, 1896) fell in love. In less than a week, on January 27, 1872, this happy couple married and were on their way to Arkansas with the other Thatches. Their belongings included family heirlooms and furniture given to them by Saluda's parents. William said to his grandchildren many times, "and for coming early they lost their daughter".

William and Saluda had 14 children, including two sets of twins. Oscar Walker (m. Dixie Hickey), Wayman Emerson (never m.), Effie Estella (m. J. Rudolph Schuler), Angie Bell (m. George W. Craven), Jennie Lee (m. Green Leland Roberts, son of Jesse Roberts and grandson of Wiley Roberts), Minnie Vernie (m. Ed. K. Mummert), James Andrew*, Birdie*, William Henderson, Jr. (m. Maggie VanZant), Anna Pope (m. Charles W. Jaminette), Elra Alva (m. Clara Roberts), Ezra Abney*, Early* and Worley*. *Died young.

William was a farmer. The family home was in Sons Chapel Community. For a time, he was a caretaker of the Washington County home for the poor. The people living there wanted very much to go to church. It was his pleasure to take them in wagons to church in Fayetteville. The members of the church informed him that he must stop bringing people from the "Poor Farm" to their church. To his dying day, he never forgot the agony of telling people who lived at the farm that he could not take them anymore. He also never understood why.

Some 12 years after Saluda died, William and his children, Oscar, Wayman, Effie, William and Elra moved to Ventura and Santa Anna, California. Anna became a nurse and went with her husband in 1911 to the wilds of Canada where he worked for the Canadian National Railways. They died and are buried at Sylvan Lake, Alberta. Although the children remained in California, William returned to the Ozarks to live out his last days. He died at Stilwell, Oklahoma, at the home of his daughter, Jennie Lee Thatch Roberts (see Jesse Roberts history), and is buried in Skelton Cemetery in Fayetteville with his beloved Saluda and some of their children.

Clement Leonidas Thomas

In 1875 William Wallace Thomas (born October 1834) and his wife, Susanna Almena (see Thompson) brought their family to Arkansas from Montpelier, Indiana. Their oldest son Morgan died as a small child before they left Indiana. Their youngest child, Grace born 1882 was killed on the school playground having been hit, accidentally in the head with a ball bat. This happened in northwest Arkansas where they eventually settled. She was killed in 1890. Seven children lived to be adults: Edith Arabell born June 29, 1864 - died January 3, 1929, Millie May born October 8, 1866, Clement Leonidas born August 15, 1869 - died January 8, 1959, Arthur Wellington born September 19, 1872, Daisy D. born September 18, 1874 - died October 12, 1961, Sidney Liretta born January 15, 1877 and Cornell W. born May 4, 1879 - died January 15, 1919.

The family first lived in Judsonia and Conway for a short time before moving by ox team to the Mount Comfort area. They first lived on a farm, then William Wallace moved his family to the old Ozark College Dormitory, a two-story building with twelve rooms, each having an open fireplace. This was located at the present site of the Razorback Golf Course. A few years later, William Wallace bought a farm about a half-mile north on the same road which intersects Highway 112. The farm lay south of 112 and the road bisected the farm. There was a fine flowing spring at the foot of the hill on which the house was built. They named the farm the 'Hillside Dairy Farm'.

Clement Leonidas, the fourth child of William Wallace, was my father. He lived with his parents and attended what we presume was the Salem School. He taught one year at Brush Creek, a one room school located northwest of Tontitown.

At the age of 17, he left home. He wandered around in Indiana and the Dakotas. He worked at various jobs on farms and ranches. While he was in South Dakota, he ran a barber shop for a spell. After visiting in Indiana, the place of his birth, he returned to Arkansas.

In 1877, John Wesley Goree and his wife, Francis Gill Goree moved to Washington County from Van Buren, Arkansas and bought a farm near the Thomas farm. Stella, the oldest of nine children, was born in 1875.

In 1895, C. L. Thomas and Stella Goree were married by Ed Freshlag, I believe, but am not sure. I do know that he was pastor for many years of the Mount Comfort Presbyterian Church around that period of time.

For reasons not known to anyone except Stella's parents, they objected to the marriage. In hopes of discouraging the romance, the Gorees sent their daughter to Weatherford, Texas where her uncle was living and she attended a female seminary there. However, the scheme failed to dampen the young couple's spirits, so when she returned home, they eloped and were married while seated in the buggy in front of the pastor's home.

The Thomas' were the parents of seven children who lived to adulthood: Leone Thomas Myers, Lora Thomas Carver, Rose Marie Giles, Susan Frances Thomas Pool, Byron Debs Thomas, Robert Wayde Thomas and Mary Christine Thomas.

Of the seven, only Byron, Christine and I remain. I am the only one still living in Arkansas. Byron lives in Santee, California and Christine in Mehama, Oregon.

From my earliest memories, we lived on a rocky hillside farm northwest of Fayetteville about seven miles. In a letter to a granddaughter, he stated the family moved every year for about the first twenty-five years of their marriage. I do not recall much of that as I was not born until my parents had been married for eighteen years.

Dad worked at the carpenter trade most of his life. He was well qualified and did some contracting on his own, but also worked for some time for Wages Brothers Lumber and Construction Company of Fayetteville. During this time, Dad boarded in town as travel in those days was by horse and rather slow. Later, he leased the farm and moved the family into town.

Wages Brothers had a contract to build the Chi Omega Sorority House and Dad was fired because he refused to do a piece of work as he had been instructed. As a result, there had to be a change made since work was almost impossible to find. He decided we would pack the necessities into our 1925 Model T Ford and go to California where my two oldest sisters, who had married, were living. The necessities consisted of our clothes, two mattresses, some comforts, a few pots and pans, a limited amount of food, and father's tools.

We left Fayetteville December 27, 1927. We went through Fort Smith, Dallas, Fort Worth, Pecos, Abilene, El Paso, Demming, Lordsburg, Phoenix and Yuma. This proved to be a very trying journey due to the numerous flats, detours, below zero weather and very poor accommodations. Motels at that time had much to be desired, at least for winter travelers.

The detours were due to highway construction and these detours were sand and the car sank into it and required the passengers to get out and push. We were fortunate to have pavement over the sand dunes west of Yuma. We saw the board road that travelers used only a few years earlier. After eight days of trials and tribulations, we reached El Cajon, California, our destination.

Not being able to find steady employment, we headed back to Arkansas in the summer of 1928 by way of Idaho and Colorado. We visited Dad's sister Millie and brother Arthur in Rupert, Idaho and his sister Sidney Liretta in Denver.

After three of four more trips to and from California, we settled in Washington County on our farm and lived there until 1935 when Dad sold the farm and bought a house and ten acres near the present day Salem. My parents were still living there in 1945 when they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. A year later, they sold the ten acres and bought a house and lot in West Fork and lived there until 1959, when my father died. My mother remained there until her death in 1962.

My parents celebrated their sixty-third anniversary in a joint celebration with two other couples from West Fork who had also been married sixty-three years. This was held in West Fork in the First Christian Church where they were members.

Virginia, b. 21 June 1923, Westville, Oklahoma, d. 10 January 1972 Tulsa, Oklahoma, married 13 October 1951, Edgar Harry Berry, b. 17 January 1913. One child, Lucinda Jane Berry, b. 12 April 1963, married 28 November 1981 at Vinita to Joel Lee Browning, divorced about 1983. Married 2nd time and lives in Lawton, Oklahoma 1986.

Aunt Fannie and Uncle Gunter moved to New Mexico not long after they married. The railroad companies had received huge grants of government land on both sides of their tracks out there, and offered very cheap transportation by rail to those who would settle on this land. I have heard that one could load his household goods in one end of a box car, his farm tools, and equipment etc, in the other, and ride in there all the way to New Mexico.

Whether Fannie and Gunter did this or not I do not know. At any rate they got a claim not far from the town of Montoya, New Mexico. We have pictures of them and the "box" house they built, with Uncle Gunter playing his guitar, something I never saw him do. We also have a "picture postcard" showing main street of Montoya, a very wide one, with many saloons and stores on each side; a busy frontier town. In 1950, all that was left was a railroad siding, a sign saying "Montoya", and one artesian well, still flowing.

It proved to be too dry for ordinary farming at Montoya. Fannie, Gunter and son Howard moved back to Arkansas. A house was built on Gunter's fathers farm, and they lived there several years. Later Gunter and his brother, John D. Thomason decided to open a drygoods store in Westville, Oklahoma. John D. had learned something of the mercantile business in New Mexico, where he was clerk in a general store. The store was opened and all moved over to Westville. After operating their store for a number of years, both families moved to Vinita, Oklahoma and established their store, where they continued to be merchants until retirement.

A. J. (John) Thompson

A. J. (John) Thompson was born November 27, 1862 in Rhea County, Tennessee. Because of a nagging stepmother, he ran away from home at age ten. His grandfather married the daughter of a Cherokee chief who was named White Fawn. This would have made John one-quarter Indian, although he never admitted to being more than one-eighth. In his escape, John traveled to Van Buren, Arkansas where he lived during his teen years with a family named Sexton. He was taught the trade of blacksmithing by Mr. Sexton and at the end of his tenure John excelled at the craft. With his newly learned trade, John migrated to northwest Arkansas and in Elm Springs met and married Amanda Ethel Franklin on July 27, 1884. Amanda, the only child of Joshua Franklin and Sarah Ward Collins Franklin (they both had children from previous marriages) was born February 4, 1871. John told his children that Amanda was one-eighth Cherokee but she never admitted it.

For a short time after their marriage, John and Amanda lived in Prairie City, Indian Territory, but after several months they moved to Alma, Arkansas. Here Amanda gave birth to their first child Eva on September 5, 1886, but as a result of pneumonia, Eva died February 1, 1887. After this sad event, the Thompsons moved back to Wheeler in Washington County and on July 3, 1888, Amanda gave birth to their second child, Mack Franklin.

John alternated between his craft as a blacksmith and that of being an exceptionally good traveling salesman known as a "drummer" in those days. Because of these factors and his nomadic nature, John moved his family from village to village and to some more than once and most places in Washington County. Of a total of seven children, none were born in the same place. Having become so widely acquainted and so well liked by the people of this county, John once, around 1918, ran for sheriff. He was narrowly defeated by the incumbent. At one time there was an iron gate across the main entrance walk to the U of A campus, at the corner of Dickson and Arkansas Avenue. This gate was built by John Thompson, but was taken down many years ago.

The third child of the Thompsons, Iris, was born in Farmington October 24, 1889. The fourth child, Isa, was born in Adair, Oklahoma on June 26, 1891, the only Thompson child not a native of Arkansas, although she spent the majority of her life in Benton County. The fifth child, Aldah, was born in Elm Springs on January 21, 1899. After about nine years the sixth child, Jack, was born in Fayetteville January 12, 1908. Three years later while the family lived in Springdale, William, the seventh and last child was born August 18, 1911.

Marriages of the Thompson children were: Mack to Julia Zellner, daughter of J. Herman and Betty Pyeatt Zellner in Prairie Grove in 1920 - 2 children. Iris to Graeme McCormick in Prairie Grove in 1915 - 1 child. Isa to Walter N. Berry (son of Millard Berry, one time County Judge) in Springdale in 1912 - 2 children. Aldah to Ernest Whitelaw in Pine Bluff in 1926 - 1 child. Jack to Eleanor Glass of Fayetteville in 1931 - 2 children. William to Anna Lou Rife (grand-daughter of one time County Judge, H. L. Baker) in Fayetteville in 1933 - 2 children.

Deaths: John Thompson April 6, 1935; Amanda Thompson March 3, 1917; Eva Thompson February 1, 1887; Iris Thompson McCormick May 26, 1947; A. Jack Thompson July 27, 1952; Isa Thompson Berry May 4, 1953; Mack F. Thompson February 24, 1969; Aldah Thompson Whitelaw November 4, 1979.

All of the children attended the University of Arkansas at one time or another, but only Mack received a degree in engineering in 1908 at age nineteen. He spent thirty five years with Texaco before retirement. Iris taught school mostly in Wyoming where she obtained her degree from the University of Wyoming.

Isa and her husband lived on a farm east of Springdale all of their married life.

Aldah was a Civil Service employee in Washington, D. C. for a number of years before retiring in Pine Bluff.

Jack was an engineer for the Naval Engineers Corps and obtained his degree the hard way in night school. He worked on plans for Beaver Lake many years before it became a reality. Jack never lived in Arkansas after high school.

William was an accountant in the oil industry and spent forty five years in Texas before his retirement in 1978. He returned to Fayetteville and presently lives with his wife Anna Lou in Butterfield Trail Village. His two sons obtained degrees at the U of A.

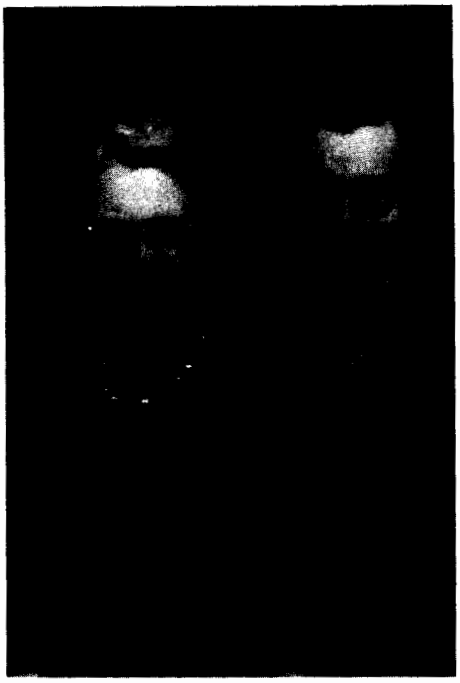
Ernest Rosevelt Thompson

Ernest was born in Pope County, Arkansas, the son of farmers. His father, James Robert, was the youngest of thirteen children, born to Tidings and Mary Thompson of Searcy County, Arkansas. Tidings was a farmer in Wayne County, Tennessee, before moving to Arkansas in the 1850s. He was the Treasurer of Searcy County in 1866-68 and 1876-86. At one time he owned land where the town of Marshall is now located. Tidings was born in North Carolina in 1807, Mary was born in Tennessee around 1816.



Ernest Rosevelt Thompson and Evelyn Jewell Parker Thompson.

James Robert was born in Searcy County, Arkansas on January 26, 1857. He married Martha Drucella Lay, born September 1866, the daughter of William and Louisa Callie (Moore) Lay, in Searcy County, on January 13, 1884. They moved to Pope County, Arkansas, where they rented a 58 acre farm and raised their family.

Ernest Rosevelt (their sixth child) was born February 19, 1904 at Atkins, Arkansas. Ernest inherited his father's love of the land and always enjoyed working the soil. In the 1920s he moved to Okfuskee County, Oklahoma with his family. He fell in love and married Evelyn Jewel, born April 7, 1911, the daughter of James Harve and Laura Bell (Baker) Parker, on August 7, 1936 at Okemah, Oklahoma. During the Depression years they moved several times, trying to find work to support their family. Ernest delivered newspapers, worked in a smelter and he and Evelyn picked cotton. Around 1943 they decided to return to Arkansas and settled at Mountain Top, in Franklin County where Evelyn's family lived. They bought a 40 acre farm with a two room log cabin, to which they later added another room. Ernest's mother taught him to play the guitar. Often, after spending the day plowing the fields with a team of horses, he would sit on the steps and play the guitar and the family would sing hymns. Although Ernest loved farming, a small farm couldn't support their growing family. Evelyn came to Washington County and stayed with her daughter, Pat Little, until she got a job at Swansons. A few months later, early 1951, Ernest moved the family to Washington County. They rented a house in the Parksdale Addition in Fayetteville. Ernest got a job at Swansons also. In 1953 the family moved to Highway 45 East, just past where Dillons grocery store is now located. There they had enough ground to raise a garden and have a few chickens. In 1955 they bought a house on Barton Street in Fayetteville, which had a little more land. Ernest always dreamed of someday owning a big farm.

Ernest worked at Swansons until he had a heart attack in 1959 and was no longer able to work. He died September 27, 1965 in Fayetteville. Evelyn retired from Swansons (Campbell Soup) in 1969. After her retirement, Evelyn spent many hours crocheting and making beautiful quilts, some of which she displayed and sold at quilt fairs. Evelyn died March 12, 1985. They are both buried at Williams Cemetery, Mountain Top, Arkansas, about three miles down the road from the log cabin where they first lived in Arkansas.

Their children are: Patsy Ruth, born April 9, 1930, married Loyd Franklin Little, born June 18, 1923. Their children are; Wanda Jean, born January 11, 1948. She married Jack L. Pardue, born June 28, 1946, they have one daughter, Misty Sue, who was born November 19, 1969. Billy Don, born January 31, 1949, he married Karen Theresa Blackburn born September 9, 1947. Karen was killed in an auto accident on June 11, 1987 at Springdale. They adopted one daughter, Linda Suzanne, born June 16, 1975. Donna Sue, was born September 15, 1952. She married Steve Combs, born March 8, 1952. They have three children; Shelly Dawn, born March 30, 1971, Christy Jean, born January 17, 1975 and Jason, born September 14, 1977. Terry Lee, was born November 20, 1961 and married Brenda Michelle Gabbard. They have one son, Thomas Franklin, born August 16, 1984, and expect their second child in December 1987.

Wilma Joyce, born May 2, 1937, married Fred Gerald Weston, born February 8, 1934. They have three children. Randall Allen, born November 27, 1957. He married Valerie Dawn Hillian, born September 28, 1957, and they have one son, Nathanial Seth, who was born December 5, 1983. Pamela Dawn, was born January 5, 1960. She is single. Douglas Nolan, born May 31, 1962, married Katheryn Lucille Starr, born August 26, 1967, and they have one son, Tyrel Scott, born January 21, 1987.

Laura Alice, born October 2, 1938, married Robert Curtis Wise, Jr., born March 30, 1934. They have three children. Cheryl Lynn, born October 21, 1957, married Lewis Edward Baker and they have one son, James Robert, born September 23, 1976. Cheryl and Ed divorced and she married Duane Allen Dunn, born August 9, 1958. Mary Evelyn, born August 16, 1958. Mary has one daughter, Desiree Marie Pendry, born October 5, 1983. Robert Curtis III, born December 24, 1968, was adopted February 19, 1970.

Dorothy Ann, born November 27, 1941. She died at Mountain Top, Arkansas on April 28, 1949. Robert Ernest, born May 5, 1946, married Kitty Carson, born August 31, 1945. They have two sons, Steven born April 21, 1968 and Matthew born December 21, 1971.

Linda Kay, born May 3, 1948, married Willis C. Barker. Their son Shannon Dean, was born February 28, 1967 and March 4, 1967. They have one daughter, Kimberley Ann, born June 25, 1971.

Jesse Thompson

Jesse Thompson was born in Georgia, California, 1835. Esther Ann Marshall was born 1852 Mercer County, Pennsylvania to Taggart Joseph Marshall of Pennsylvania and Mary Abigail Royce of New York. Jesse's trade as a coal miner took him north where he met and married Esther Marshall.

In 1876, in Albia, Iowa, their first son, Thomas B., was born. In 1878, another son, Joel A., was born on July 22. Soon after, they received word from Nebraska that Esther's father had been killed by a runaway team of horses. By 1880, they had moved to Pawnee County, Nebraska.

Joel learned a trade and became a typesetter and a linotype operator and later was editor of the Ravenna News in Ravenna, Nebraska. He married Alice Bedford, born 1883 to Hezekiah Bedford, born 1855 in Ohio and Augusta Sasse, born 1855 and came to this country from Germany in 1872. While living in Ravenna, Joel and Alice had two children: Walter Joel born 17 August 1903 and Mable, born 1907.

Walter grew up learning his father's trade, but in 1929 he made a trip to northwest Arkansas to visit a friend and decided he had found his place in life. In 1933 Joel and Alice followed him and bought a farm in the Trident Community.

Because of his eyesight, Walter had to give up his trade for another, that of a sawyer. He operated a sawmill on the farm as long as his health would permit. On 10 February 1937, he married Girdia Mae Jarrell, born Cauldwell Parish, Louisiana 7 April 1911 to B. V. Jarrell and Ella Mae Grider. They had seven children. Jack Eugene and Walter Jarrell "Jerry" were born 28 October 1938. On 14 April 1949, Alice Ruthella was born. November 2, 1941, Faye Allene was born and lived to the age of four. Donald Merrell was born 11 December 1944, and Thomas Dean arrived the 12th of June 1950. Another son, George, was born and died 11 April 1949.

Joel died in 1943, and Alice died 11 January 1968. Jack married Joyce Elaine Drain, daughter of Dude and Irene Vanlandingham Drain and have two children, James Leon and Michelle Annette, all of Fayetteville.

Jerry married Wanda Jean England, daughter of John and Ruby Baer England and had three children: David Gene, Danny Gerald and Sheryl Lynae. Two grandchildren are: Wendy Lee and Samantha Nicole, David's children, all of this county.

Ruth married Thomas Dale Reed. Their three children are Teri Lyn who married Dean Long, with one son, Stephan; Susan, who married John Nolin; and Joel John who married Rhonda Chamberlain with a son, Caleb.

Wayne Don has one son, Jason and lives in Washington, D. C. Thomas Dean lives with his son, Michael, in Fayetteville. Girdia still lives on the family farm in Washington County. Walter Joel Thompson died 16 July 1982 and is buried along with his parents and two children in the Wedington Cemetery west of Lake Wedington in Washington County.

Lyell Thompson

In 1958, Lyell, Marcella, and children Andrea, Mark, Susan, Kent, and Kevin Thompson drove to their new home in Fayetteville, Arkansas in their 1951 Chrysler Windsor. Their first home was at 16 West Davidson Street. Lyell Floyd Thompson, born May 10, 1924, had accepted a position with the University of Arkansas as Associate Professor of Agriculture to teach a Beginning Soils class and serve as head of the Soil Testing and Research Laboratories. Marcella Jean Horn Thompson, born February 9, 1925, would continue toward her Bachelor Degree in Zoology. All but the youngest child would enter local elementary schools.

Lyell and Marcella grew up in the countryside surrounding Perry, Oklahoma. In September 1938, both left their one room rural school houses for high school and in the ninth grade, they met. From then on, they were known as sweethearts. While Lyell served in the European Theatre during World War II, Marcella worked for Continental Oil Company in Ponca City. They married within three weeks of his return to the states. Lyell finished his Bachelor's Degree in Agriculture at Oklahoma A and M College in Stillwater, in May 1948. That fall they and baby Andrea moved to Columbus, Ohio where Lyell completed his Ph. D in Agriculture at Ohio State University. Marcella bore three more children. The family moved to Ardmore, Oklahoma in 1953 where Lyell worked for the Noble Foundation and the last child was born. In 1958, two job offers, one in Ethiopia and one in Fayetteville, presented themselves. The one in Fayetteville was chosen, much to the relief of the couple's families.

The family first attended church at the First United Methodist Church on Dickson Street. But in 1959 Lyell and Marcella attended services at the Unitarian Fellowship which met at the University's Student Union. This group of liberal religious congregants offered the family an atmosphere of stimulating religious discussion and intellectual growth. Lyell and Marcella became very active members. Each served on the Board of Directors and on various committees. Marcella was a Sunday School teacher for many years and also served as Religious Education Coordinator. An important issue before the Fellowship during the late 1950s and early 1960s was the racial integration movement, a cause of much concern locally as well as throughout the state of Arkansas and the entire South.

Lyell became very active in the movement to integrate the city owned swimming pool, local restaurants and motels. He joined others including Reverend James Loudermilk, Reverend George Gunn, Rose Dowell, Minerva Hoover Morgan, Guerdon and Dorothy Nichols, Lodene Deffebaugh, Keith Petersen and Gordon and Elaine McNeil. In the early 1960s Lyell was appointed to the Arkansas Advisory Committee of the United States Civil Rights Commission on which he served for 20 years.

Meanwhile Marcella continued her education toward her Master's Degree in Elementary Education. She began teaching in 1961 in a seventh grade self-contained classroom at Springdale. In 1962 she moved to Asbell Elementary in Fayetteville where she taught sixth and fourth grades. She retired in 1985 after becoming known to many as the most important teacher during their school years. Marcella was very active in the Fayetteville Education Association and the Arkansas Education Association.

In the late 1960s, Lyell joined the Board of Directors of the UARK Federal Credit Union. His hard work rebuilt the failing institution and it grew to a sizable and reputable organization. He served as President of its Board from 1967 to 1977. In the 1970s, he also became an active member in the Washington County Democratic Central Committee and in 1980 he ran, and was elected to the Washington County Quorum Court. He served on many committees, including the Personnel, Social Services, Finance and Jail Committees. One of his favorite duties was performing weddings and he encouraged people to write or design their own ceremonies.

Always involved in these activities was Marcella, who typed material for the Credit Union, wrote postcards and walked door to door soliciting votes when Lyell ran for office. In fact, this typified the woman who was known to family and friends as a loving, thoughtful person who gave of herself unceasingly. She began caring for three grandchildren in 1986 when divorce rent a son's home and the father and the children moved to the family's home at 412 Ila Street. Always a dedicated child care-giver, both in the raising of her own five children and the teaching of hundreds of Fayetteville and Springdale children, she continued on as active grandmother to Emily 8, John 6, and Ellen 4. These children were known to talk about how lucky they were to have her as grandmother.

The Thompsons adopted Fayetteville and gave much of themselves to the town. They loved raising their family there and enjoyed the friendly, easy atmosphere.

R. B. Thompson

My family came to Washington County, Arkansas in 1931 from Wright County, Missouri. My father, Robert Bishop Thompson, and my mother, Elizabeth May (Smith) Thompson, along with my maternal grandmother, Evaline (Amber) Smith, and 9 of their 13 children, Charley, Bruce, Hattie, John, George, Beulah, Florence, Virgil and Luther.

Taken June 6, 1987. The 7 surviving Thompson children. L to R: Pittman England and Beulah (Thompson) England, George and Elizabeth Thompson, John Thompson and Hattie (Thompson) Tabor, Lula (Thompson) Headley, Bruce and Nadine Thompson, and Luther and Betty Thompson.

The four older children remained in Missouri, where they had married and settled.

We came to Arkansas in a Model "T" truck, along with all of our belongings.

My father took a job on the Phil Weaver farm in Prairie View community. The older boys were allowed to work there also. Mr. Weaver supplied houses (or shacks) for the workers and their families. Some of the workers lived in tents. The area where we lived was called " Happy Hollow". Many Indians from the neighboring state of Oklahoma also worked on the Weaver farm.

In 1935, my mother passed away leaving my father and ailing grandmother, along with the help of the older children to raise the younger children.

In 1937, my father left the Weaver farm and moved to the Rheas Mill community. The children attended Rheas Mill School. Kenley Johnson, who passed away at Fayetteville in June of 1987 at the age of 85, was my first teacher. He taught grades 1 thru 8 at Rheas Mill, and also owned the grocery store there. He owned a Model "A" pick-up and when the weather was real bad, he would gather up the kids and take them to school.

My grandmother passed away in 1939 and in 1940, my father moved the family to Rock Springs community. Father worked at whatever work he could secure to keep the family fed. The children had to work also to keep food on the table.

When the Second World War broke out, two of the older boys, George and John served in the Army, and the two younger boys, Virgil and Luther served in the Korean War.

My father passed away in 1948. Mother, Grandmother and Father are all buried in Mountain View Cemetery near Lake Wedington.

Four of the children still make their homes in Northwest Arkansas. John lives in the Gem community, George and Luther live in Lincoln and Beulah (England) lives in Summers.

Hattie (Tabor) makes her home in Little Rock, Arkansas. Seven of the children are still living of the original 13.

Growing up in Northwest Arkansas was both happy and sad. We had Saturday night dances at neighbors homes. We swam in the creeks. We walked the long trip into town to see a movie and walked home afterward. Neighbors helped neighbors, we worked in the fields, in the canning factories and wherever we could find work to help out the family. We were far from rich or famous, but we made our roots in that part of the country, and our roots run deep.

Charles "Chuck" Burton Thomsen

Chuck Thomsen was born September 25, 1932, to Fred and Sunbeam Thomsen, Fayetteville. The family left about 1944 and Chuck settled eventually in Houston, Texas, flying around the world several times a year as president of 3D International, a construction firm.

Chuck's grandchildren, Shaun and Cristopher Thomsen, were born in Houston in the early 80s.

Coach "Terrible Tommy" Thomsen

Tommy and Sunny lived in Fayetteville from about 1928 to 1943, where he coached the Razorbacks. Sunny lead the choir at First Christian Church and was the first patroness pledged by the Delta Gamma chapter at the university.

They lived in the house on the corner of Prospect and Mission, formerly the home of the interior decorator, Paul M. "Honey" Heerwagen. It had huge built-in chimes to ring for meals; a sunroom with glass which let in the sun's ultra-violet rays; a grass tennis court with roses rambling up the backdrops; a wisteria arbor which could shelter three cars. Three layers of hand-painted murals covered the dining room: Honey said, "When you tire of the top layer, just take it off." The dog pen entrance had a stone arch, lantern, and wrought-iron gate. A secret room had hidden runaway slaves. In the winter Tommy would carry the urns of flower plants from the gardens to the house's greenhouse. He mowed the three-acre lawn with a hand mower.

Their children were Marnelle and Charles Burton. They left Arkansas when Tommy joined the Army Air Corps. After the war Col. Thomsen founded the Flying Tigers of the 14th Air Force Association. Sunny died in 1978, Tommy in 1986.

Marnelle Ex-Dildy Thomsen

I was born November 14, 1930, to Fred and Sunbeam Thomsen.

On certain afternoons in Fayetteville I attended Mrs. Keller's sort of charm school where we learned tap, ballet, and to pronounce "either" as "eyether" and not "eether".

Our maid was Mrs. Billie (Minnie) Rosengart. When I went to their tiny shack and saw her spreading her toast with pork drippings, it never once occurred to me to pray for them to prosper or share from my plenty. They were jolly and always gave me a birthday gift.

We moved away when Dad joined the Army Air Corps, World War II. But I returned, as do so many, I came to learn, at the University from Professor Thalheimer, that journalism is the search for truth with a capital T. But I didn't find it until almost four decades later.

I was the first "legacy" the Delta Gamma chapter pledged. (A legacy is a relative of a member.) While a pledge, I went to hear a few speeches by people who said the Truth was to feed the hungry; but I attended because it was the only way a pledge could have a date on week nights; she had to attend a campus activity.

Never once did it occur to me that I should have a car. Gay Pratt Markham took me and my laundry on his motorcycle to a wash woman in "Tin Cup," the "valley" behind the court house.

A room mate, Cathy Rising, and I didn't even have or mention, a radio. Little did we guess that Cathy, in 1987, would marry my ex-husband (He is Lt. Col. (USAF ret) Sims Gerald Dildy, Sr. of Texarkana.)

Another room mate surfaced later, too, Rosalie Ruesewald. In 1986 I went to the Benedictine convent in Fort Smith to ponder if I was really supposed to be a missionary. At the first mass, the retreat mistress, as usual, asked for prayers for retreatants by name. Afterwards a nun said to me, "I used to room with a Marnelle Thomsen in Davis Hall at the U of A." Eventually we recognized each other.

Dear Readers, forgive us that Rosalie and I didn't begin praying together back then; maybe a revival would have reigned. Other students did this elsewhere in history. But instead, we left for you more Minnie Rosengarts with no money to buy butter. . .

Sims and I had two children, Sims Gerald Dildy, Jr., and Christine.

My forwarding address for the rest of my life is P. O. Box 1252, Springfield, Missouri, 65801-1251.

Martin Wood Thornberry

Martin W. Thornberry was born November 4, 1805 in Virginia, probably in Scott County, the eldest of the eight known children of Reverend Walter Thornberry, Sr., a Methodist preacher. The first record we have of Martin in Washington County, is in June of 1835, when he was involved in legal matters, and is mentioned in the court record for that year and month. We believe he was the first of his family to arrive in Washington County. We know little of his early activities here, but he was in business at Fayetteville with a Mr. Larramore, possibly in a real estate firm. (This Larramore may have been the Reverend W. T. Larramore, who was one of the organizers of the Cane Hill Presbyterian Church).

On May 25, 1845 Martin married Mary Thomas, and on December 3, 1846, he married Tabitha Weems, daughter of Jones and Bethaney (various spelling) Pogue Weems of Wanda, Newton County, Missouri. We do not know what became of his first wife.

Martin seems to have been an enterprising young man, for before 1850 he had started a thriving mercantile business at Sylva, (later Cincinnati), Arkansas, and was Postmaster of Sylva. This business must have continued for several years. In June 1851, Martin wrote to "Messrs. Henry & Cunningham" inquiring about two kegs of gunpowder he had bought in New Orleans, and were shipped to them by Marshal S. James, but which he had not received. In 1856, Martin paid taxes on about 500 acres of land in Washington County of a value of $1,956.

By 1856, however, disaster had struck Martin. In those times nearly all merchandise brought into Washington County came by riverboat from St. Louis or New Orleans. In any case it came first to Napoleon, Arkansas, a warehouse town near the mouth of the Arkansas River. The two or three years prior to 1856 were very dry on the Arkansas River Watershed, and water became so scant the boat could not ascend the Arkansas River. Martin had large consignments of goods collecting storage in Napoleon, which he could not get, could not sell, and thus could not pay his suppliers. His creditors became so insistent that he was forced into the equivalent of bankruptcy. He then deeded nearly all of his property in trust to his brother Walter T. Thornberry, to be sold, and the money used to pay his creditors. Martin left debts totaling some $24,000. We do not know how much Walter T. was able to pay off.

Martin was a religious man, and on October 31, 1852, at Clear Spring, Cherokee Nation (near Stilwell), was "set apart" as Deacon, by Robert Paine, Bishop, Methodist Episcopal Church South. He remained a local preacher the rest of his life, often preaching, with his brother Walter T., at Thornberry Campground, west of Springdale.

After Martin's business at Sylva failed, he moved with his family, to Wanda, Missouri, near Neosho, where he lived with or near his father-in-law, Jones Weems, and was a farmer and preacher. Martin died November 3 or, 1871, at Wanda, Missouri, and is buried in the Wanda Cemetery. He was listed as a member of Far West Chapter No. 1, Royal Arch Masons, Fayetteville, Arkansas, in 1841. His second wife Tabitha Weems was born December 13, 1828, in Greene County, Tennessee. She died December 21, 1878 at Wanda, and is buried beside her husband. Their children were: Elizabeth (Lizzie), born c. 1858 or 59, Arkansas, died May 3, 1873, Wanda, Missouri, never married. Walter Jones Thornberry born August 26, 1855, Arkansas, died July 24, 1912, Wanda, Missouri, married Nancy Catherine Kenney and had children, Edgar Kenney Thornberry, Sr., who married Nell Kenney, a cousin; Martin Harmon Thornberry, who married Elizabeth Mansbridge Arthur, and Virgil Aiken Thornberry who married Ethyl Gamber. Mary T. Thornberry born October 12, 1861, died January 22, 1884, married November 18, 1879 to Joseph A. Lewis, and Nancy J. Thornberry, born c. 1867, married July 9, 1888, Henry V. Wager, son of Eugene Wager of Wager Mills, Arkansas west of Springdale. Nancy died, probably in Arizona, and is buried there. I do not know what happened to Henry. He was a miner in Arizona.

Martin's descendants living today, children of Edgar Kenny Thornberry, Sr., include Mrs. Bassett Longstreet (Katheryn J. Longstreet) and Edgar Kenny Thornberry, Jr., Joplin, Missouri, Mrs. Jack Rabon (Mary Esther) of Fort Smith, Arkansas, Don Arthur Thornberry, Neosho, Missouri and Walter Joseph Thornberry, Carthage, Missouri. Other descendants include Mrs. Millard Hornor (Georgia Martyne) daughter of Martin W. Thornberry, and Mrs. Curtis (Nancy Elizabeth Douthitt), daughter of Virgil A. Thornberry.

Rev. Walter T. Thornberry

Walter T. Thornberry was born 8 February 1822 in Virginia, probably Scott County, one of the eight or nine children of Rev. Walter Thornberry, Sr. (giv.) and Elizabeth _____. W. T. probably came to Washington County with his parents about 1838-39, but the first record we have found of him is the Census of 1850, when he was at his father's house, and designated "Methodist Clergy." Rev. Thornberry probably received much of his education in Virginia, as he was probably 17 or 18 years of age when he arrived in Washington County.

He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1841, was licensed to exhort in 1842 and licensed to preach in 1845, his presiding elder being John Harrell, on the Fayetteville, Arkansas District. He was admitted on trial into the Arkansas Conference at Van Buren in 1846, Bishop Paine presiding, was ordained deacon by Bishop Capers at Camden, Arkansas in 1851, and elder by Bishop Paine at Clarksville, Arkansas, in 1852. (Bishop Paine also ordained his brother, Martin W., deacon). He "located," (that is, became a local preacher, not subject to assignment by his Bishop or Conference) in 1857, and in 1861, moved to Texas, and entered the Texas Conference. It is said that his mother often informed him of his dedication to God, and he thought that settled his vocation for life. (See Minutes of West Texas Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, San Marcos, 1891).

I do not think Rev. Thornberry was ever much involved in business affairs, except for the disposal of his brother Martin W.'s property after his bankruptcy, at least we have found no record of it.

Rev. Thornberry was a minister in Washington County for many years. He and his brother Martin used to preach at the " Thornbury Campground," a spot in the N1/2S31T18NR31W, about 7 miles west of Springdale, Arkansas. Huge summertime camp meetings were held at this place, which had a large "campshed" and many log cabins in the surrounding woods. (See Benton County Pioneer, BCHS, Volume VIII No. 1, winter 1973, page 24). My grandmother told my father of going by wagon from Cincinnati (Sylva) to Thornsbury to "hear Uncle Walter and Uncle Martin preach." The Campground seems to have been named for the brothers Thornberry, although the land for it was originally given by Jones and Betheney Weems, Martin's father and mother-in-law.

Rev. Thornberry must have been minister at several places in Arkansas, but we have found only a few, beside Thornsbury Campground. They include Warren, Arkansas 1850; Bethlehem (near Morrow, Arkansas) 1846; Elizabeth, Batesville District, 1849; Van Buren, 1851; Clarksville circuit 1852; Mt. Vernon, Helena District, 1853; (Cane Hill) Fayetteville Circuit, 1854; Fayetteville, 1855; Boonsboro Circuit 1856; (This seems to have included the Bethlemen Church).

After his removal to Texas in 1861 Rev. Thornherry served at Blanco 1864-66; Lockhart, 1867; San Antonio, 1868; Gonzales District, 1869-70; San Marcos District 1871-72; Lockhart and Prairie Lea 1873; Sutherland Springs 1874; Gonzales 1875-76; Uvalde District 1878; San Antonio District 1879; Laverna Circuit 1884-85; Moulton Circuit 1886; Fort Davis 1887-88; Benton Circuit 1891.

W. T. Thornberry was married 3 November 1854 to Isabella J. Moore, daughter of William and Patsy Moore Moore (first cousins, descendants of David Moore, Sr., b. 1719, Ireland, d. August 1783, Virginia, and Mary Evans Moore, 1720-1796. David Moore, Sr. was a Revolutionary War soldier.

Walter T. and Isabella were the parents of 6 children: (1) Phoebe E. b. 27 November 1855 m. 20 October 1874 to Ben Avriett, 4 children. (2) Martha J., b. 30 November 1857, d. 29 February 1858. (3) William Moore, b. 29 March 1860, d. 20 April 1918, m. 16 September 1899 Mary L. Jones, b. 26 May 1873. One child, William Homer, b. 9 January 1909, m. Eloise Engle, b. 28 June 1919, 3 children, Molly, David and Kate.

(4) Henriette J. b. 1 June 1860 (probably an error) m. 6 October 1880 to Charles W. Kincheloe, lived at El Paso, 7 children.

(5) Walter T., Jr., b. 19 April 1867 m. Mittie Russell, 1 child Gladys Viola Ray.

(6) Marvin Woods, b. 11 October 1870, d. 1911, m. Agnes Davenport 1881-1940, children; (a) Walter Riley m. Inez Franklin 21 May 1932, 1 child Bonnie Jean. (b) Marvin Woods, Jr.

W. T. Thornberry enlisted in Company "K" Caldwell County, Allen's Regiment, 25th Brigade, CSA, March 22, 1862. He was promoted to Chaplain by appointment 17 June 1862, and was later made Captain.

Rev. Thornberry's third child, William Homer, has been a member of Congress, Representative of the 10th District of Texas. He is a member of the Board of Directors, Colombia Institute for the Deaf, and is a Judge of the United States Court of Appeals.

We have recently learned that Isabella Moore Thornberry is buried at Lockhart, Texas. We have not yet found the burial place of Rev. W. T. Thornberry.

Walter Thornberry

Walter Thornberry, a Methodist clergyman, was born about 1780, in North Carolina. His wife, Elizabeth was born in Pennsylvania about 1786. They were in Virginia, probably in Scott County as early as 1805 when their first child was born. All their children of whom we have found records were born in Virginia.

Reverend Thornberry acquired land in Scott County, Virginia, but in 1826 sold his land on Cove Creek, comprising 25 acres more or less to Robert Owen for $150. This is the latest record we have found for him in Virginia except for the Census of 1830 when he was in Scott County. His whereabouts and activities during the next nine years or so remain a blank. His daughter Mary married May 1830 to David Brickey in Scott County, Virginia.

We next find Walter and David locating about 1839 (although a history of the Bentonville Methodist Church places him in Washington County in 1830) on Lick Branch (west of present day Springdale) near S30 & 31 T18 NR 31 West, in Washington County, Arkansas. This is the first record of Walter in Washington County, Arkansas, however his eldest son Martin Wood Thornberry, was here as early as 1835, according to Washington County Court records for June 1835. (See also History of Benton County, Black, page 20.) Reverend Thornberry seems to have traveled through Tennessee on his way to Arkansas, for a daughter of his, name now lost, married one Middleton Jones, who was born in North Carolina, but was in Perry County, Tennessee in 1830. A son Richard Jones was born around 1838 in Tennessee, but the wife did not long survive for around 1843 Middleton had married her sister, Elizabeth, was in Arkansas and had a daughter, Mary. Richard Jones married Sarah, believed to be a daughter of William Poston of the Sylva Cincinnati Community and had a son thought to have been named Poston Jones. Richard, a Confederate soldier, was reportedly killed at Gettysburg, Civil War. We have found no record of his wife and son.

Reverend Walter Thornberry's children were: Reverend Martin Wood Thornberry, was born November 4, 1805 in Virginia and died November 8, 1871 in Wanda, Missouri. He was married (first) May 25, 1845 to Mary Thomas and second December 3, 1846 to Tabitha Weems, daughter of Jones and Bethena Pogue Weems of Wanda, Missouri. Their children were: Elizabeth, who died May 3, 1873 and never married; Walter Jones Thornberry who married Nancy Catherine Kenney, and died July 24, 1912 in Wanda, Missouri; Mary T. Thornberry who married Jos. A. Lewis and died January 22, 1884, buried at Wanda, Missouri; and Nancy J. Thornberry, who married Henry V. Wager on July 9, 1888. Mary Thornberry married David Brickey in Virginia. Their children were: Sarah Jane, married May 18, 1852 to Riley Collins; Mazie, William; Amanda, John and James. (See Census 1850, Washington County, Clear Creek Township.)

Reverend Walter T. Thornberry was born February 8, 1822 in Virginia and died February 19, 1891. He was married November 3, 1854 to Isabella Moore. Their children: Pheobe E., married Ben H. Avriett; Martha J.; William Moore, born March 29, 1860 and died April 20, 1918, married to Mary L. Jones, one son, William Homer Thornberry, born January 9, 1909 and married Eloise Engle. They had three children: Molly, David, and Kate. Homer was a member of Congress, Representative 10th District of Texas, Board of Directors Columbia Institute for the Deaf, currently Federal Judge. Henrette J., married Charles W. Kencheloe, Walter T., Jr., married Mittie Russell, and Marvin Woods who married Agnes Davenport. Rebecca L. was born March 20, 1825 and died January 8, 1898, married to William Poston Barclay. They had two children: Mary Elizabeth and Eliza Jane. Eliza Ann was born July 26, 1830 and died February 18, 1914, married William Carl Jones (a brother of Middleton Jones). Elizabeth Thornberry was born around 1815 and died April 23, 1872, married Middleton Jones; they had eight children. Amanda was born around 1829 in Virginia; we have no further information. There may have been other children. We do not know what Reverend Walter Thornberry did between about 1826 and 1839. He may have been a Methodist Circuit rider in Virginia. In any case he was active in the church in Arkansas, and assisted in founding the Methodist Church at Bentonville, Arkansas. His two sons Martin Wood and Walter T. both became Methodist preachers, and for many years preached at the Camp Meetings at "Thornsbury" Campground, near their father's home on Lick Branch.

While we do not know how Walter Thornberry, Sr. reached northwest Arkansas, a study of the map indicates that he may have made his way down the Clinch River to the Tennessee, and then traveled by boat down that stream to the Ohio, Mississippi, and up the Arkansas to Frog Bayou, thence overland to Fayetteville. Many other travelers to Arkansas seem to have used this route. This idea is somewhat reinforced by the fact that the Tennessee River forms the west boundary of present-day Perry County, Tennessee, where Middleton Jones was in 1830.

The seven named children of Walter and Elizabeth all came to Arkansas at one time or another. We do not know where Middleton Jones' first wife died. On the 1850 Census, Jane Burgess, with children Martin and Sarah were at Walter's home. It is possible that Jane was another daughter of Walter's.

The Thornberry girls who married Middleton and William Carl Jones and William Poston Barclay all remained near Cincinnati, Arkansas all their lives and their descendants can still be found there. Martin moved to Wanda, Newton County, Missouri and Walter T. moved to Texas in 1861, where he died at Benton, Atascosa County, Texas. David and Mary T. Brickey's descendants can be found in Central Washington County.

Hugh Tinnin

James Tinnin of Scotland, born 1758, died 1844, married Hannah. James is listed in D. A. R. Patriot Index as pensioned and PVT. of North Carolina. He had one son, possibly others of Orange County, North Carolina, Hugh Tinnin, married Isabella Thompson, who was a sister of Laurence Thompson of Scotland. Hugh and Isabella had the following children: 1. Azaria, 2. Hugh, 3. Laurence, 4. Thomas, 5. John 1770-1835; married to Elizabeth Moore, 6. Lemuel, 7. Mary Jane married Richard Harrison, 8. Sarah married Andrew Allen.

John Tinnin married Elizabeth Moore in Nashville, Tennessee. Her mother was from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. They had the following children: 1. Rachel, born 1798, 2. Hugh, born 1800/died December 13, 1869 in Burleson County, Texas, 3. Granville moved to Austin, Texas, 4. Asa was living in Hinds County, Mississippi in 1830 census, 5. John moved to Lampasas, Texas, 6. Brown, born 1805, married Susan Fletcher, stayed in Mississippi, 7. Martha, married John E. Shephard in 1843, 8. Jane married John Carr and moved to Austin, Texas.

Hugh Tinnin, born in 1800, died in Burleson County, Texas. Hugh first married Betsy Rutherford. Their children were: 1. Rachal, born January 15, 1826, died in 1903 or 1904, she married Andrew Alexander Crawford of Washington County, Arkansas (see A. A. Crawford). 2. Elizabeth, born August 17, 1827, 3. Lucy Jane, born August 12, 1828 in Clinton, Mississippi. Lucy married first to Col. William T. Neal, second to Col. J. P. Neal. Her tombstone inscription says she came to Arkansas in 1836. Both William and James Preston Neal were prominent figures in Washington County, Arkansas having come to that county with their mother and stepfather Reverend & Mrs. Andrew Buchanan in 1829. James P. Neal was a noted lawyer. 4. Granville, born in 1829.

Betsy (Rutherford) Tinnin died and Hugh married her sister, Fanny Rutherford. Fanny died in 1846. Their children were: 1. John, born July 7, 1836, 2. Harriet, born July 22, 1839 in Arkansas. She married Richard Barron August 16, 1869 in Washington County, Arkansas. See Joseph Barron And His Descendants by Jack L. Barron. 3. William, born August 13, 1840, 4. Emaline, born 1842, 5. Hugh, born December 12, 1843, died February 21, 1846.

Hugh Tinnin married third to Helen Mary Kirkpatrick. Helen was born in 1825 in Kentucky. She died June 24, 1893, buried in Oak Wood Cemetery in Austin, Texas. Their children were 1. Albert, b. May 8, 1849, d. 1875 2. Mary Melvina, born August 15, 1850, died May 25, 1851, 3. Cleopatra (Miss Clippy), born May 24, 1852, married Henry Roberts, 4. Pinckney, born March 12, 1854, died August 30, 1916, married Effie Littlepage, 5. Susanella, born August 25, 1855, 6. Matison, born February 1, 1857, died February 14, 1931, 7. Eddie, born August 25, 1860, died May 29, 1861.

Matison Tinnin who was born February 1, 1857 married Elizabeth Angeline Willoughby, January 13, 1884. Their children were: 1. Helen Mary, born October 23, 1885, died March 24, 1979, 2. Elmira, born October 28, 1887, died September 2, 1877 married William Lawrence Ilfrey, born December 29, 1897, died May 8, 1977, both are buried in Baytown, Texas. Their children are William Tinnin Ilfrey and Allen Ilfrey BA BS University of Texas. 3. Hugh, born March 30, 1889, died April 12, 1962, married first to Ruth Dawson, their children were: Elizabeth, Mary Jane and Dawson. He married a second time to Mattie Mae Carter, born December 7, 1896, their children were Helen Lou and Dorothy Jean, Ph. D., married Troy L. Joyner.

Hugh Tinnin moved with his family from Mississippi to Washington County, Arkansas in about 1836. His first wife was Betsy Rutherford and when she died he married her sister, Fanny Rutherford. Betsy probably died while the family still lived in Mississippi. Fanny died in Washington County where he found his third wife, Helen Mary Kirkpatrick, whose family had moved from Kentucky to Fayetteville, Arkansas. Letters addressed to him were addressed to Mr. Hugh Tinnin, Esquire, Boonsboro, Arkansas. Federal Census shows his residence in Mountain Township.

John Carr, Tinnin's brother-in-law, persuaded Tinnin to try his lot in Texas. The Tinnins took a route that would avoid the swollen streams and evade Indian attacks as much as possible. In order to finance the trip they stopped off along the way to buy supplies for soldiers quartered at various camps. The family and many of the slaves they brought with them fell ill with malaria fever. This delayed their progress and it took the greater part of 2 years to make the trip.

The Tinnins arrived in Texas in 1850. Hugh bought about 500 acres of fine bottom land south of the Colorado River - land that is completely within the boundaries of Austin. He had about two miles of river frontage. The old crossing where cattle were driven up the Chisholm Trail was on Tinnin land. It was called the Tinnin Ford.

Hugh and Helen Mary made a trip to Burleson County to look after some property they had there. Hugh fell ill, died and had to be buried there. Helen returned to Austin. Later, a son by his first wife, came to Texas to claim his portion of the estate. A general division was made to all the surviving children: thus a very large plantation was broken into many parts. See Women In Early Texas Edited by Evelyn M. Carrington, Ph. D.

This information was developed from boxes of old letters and papers belonging to Hugh Tinnin's family of Austin, Texas. The greatest contributor was Miss Helen Tinnin (Matison's daughter), Dorothy Jean Joyner and Allan Ilfrey. Mattie Mae Tinnin, age 90, of Austin made it possible for me to collect it all.

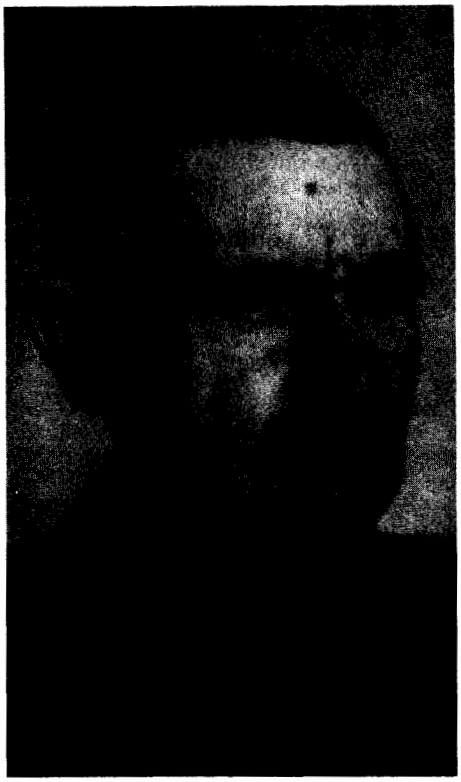
Ben Todd

My mother, Mildred, was raised in Springdale. Her father was Ben F. Todd (b. 1879 Clifty, Arkansas, died 1967 Springdale). He married Bertha Carter (b. 1883 Springdale, d. 1951 Springdale). Bertha's parents were John Wesley Carter (b. 1860 in Indiana, d. 1907 Springdale), and Margarit "Maggie" Hartley (b. 1861 Clear Creek Community and d. Springdale 1929).

Children of Ben & Bertha Todd; Mildred, Floy, Irma, Theron, Pauline, & J. W.

Margarit's parents were Henry G. Hartley (b. 1826 Hawkins County, Tennessee and d. Springdale 1899), and Anna Anderson (b. 1836 Hawkins County, Tennessee and d. Springdale 1866, 10 days after the birth of her last child). Henry G. served in the Civil War on the Confederate side.

My grandfather, Ben Todd, was a farmer. He was soft spoken, and had quite a sense of humor. He said once he didn't mind hoeing corn all day — it was all that turning around at the end of the rows that got him down. I guess he got his sense of humor from his father, George "Coot" Todd. George was married to Narcissus Hinds, the daughter of William and Matilda Hinds. The town of Hindsville, Arkansas was named after them. "Coot" once told of picking peas on Sunday. A lady told him he shouldn't have done that. He said it was okay because no one saw him. The lady said that God could see him. His reply was, "I doubt it, cause it was pretty windy over there." Ben and Bertha (Carter) Todd had 7 children: Theron married Ethel. They live in Holcomb, Kansas. Their children were Paul, Edward, Helen and Benny. Paul married Virginia Erkie. Their children are Lana and Gail Ann. Edward married Betty Hill. Their children are Raubin, Rickey, Kyle and Kelly. Benny married Patricia Huffmaster. Their children are Cassandra, Craig and Benny Ray.



Ben Todd

Bertha Carter Todd

Irma married Bruce Graham. Their children are Kenneth, Todd and Bobby. Kenneth married Esther Bailey. Their children are Gail and Linda. Todd married Helen Bailey (Esther's niece). Their children are Dianne and Johnny. Bobby married Peggy Mayes. They had a son, David. Then he married Lois Andrews. Their children are Richard, Steve and Pam. Bobby and Lois make their home in Pico-Rivera, California.

Pauline Todd married Ray Mullins then Royce Lawson. No children. J. W. married Julie Graham then Jewell Brackett. No children, J. W. and Jewell lived in California.

Truman married Mabel Graham. They lived in California. He was killed in a car wreck at the age of 27. No children.

Mildred (my mother) married John Riley Overton. Their children are Raymond, who died in 1972 at the age of 39, and Shirley. Raymond married Delores Ford and they had a son, Raymond W.. He later married Phyllis DeSart and they have a daughter, Kerrie. I married Carroll Quick and my daughter is Lana Kay.

Floy Todd married Walker Ballenger then H. W. "Bill" Scroggins. Their children are Juanita Tisdale and Tim Scroggins. Juanita married Lynn Tisdale. Their children are Christie and Michael. Tim married Nancy Woods. Their children are Brian, Brad and Bobby.

Mama said she was grown and married before she ever saw her grandpa "Coot". They had no way to go to Clifty, where he lived with his second wife, Meg. Daddy bought a pickup truck, so the Todd clan piled into it and went to visit their grandpa. In the truck was mom and dad and my brother, Raymond; Pauline and her husband Ray; Theron and Ethel and their children Benny, Paul, Helen and Edward; Irma and her husband Bruce and their children Todd and Bobby; and of course Grandpa Ben Todd. I counted about 16 in all. They took their dinner, but when they drove up and started unloading, "Coot's" wife Meg got up from where she was shelling peas on the porch, and went inside and shut the door. Said later that she was "bileing" molasses. I guess I 'd do the same if that many strangers came piling out of a truck at my house.

Ben and Bertha raised their family the best they could in those days. They grew up on a farm, and went to a country school Monitor, and a country church Southern Grove. The work was hard, and I have heard of how the children wore gunny sacks on their feet in the winter and put their shoes on when they got to school or church. But they grew up as a very close family with lots of love to go around.

Elijah Todd

Elijah Smith Todd was born 6 July 1811 in Warren County, Ohio. The eleventh and last child of Owen Todd and Maria Jane Paxton. When he was not yet five years of age, the family moved to Vevay, Switzerland County, Indiana, and less than a year later his father died.

A fair amount is known about this Todd family: From Scotland to Ireland in the 1600s, to America in 1737. First to Pennsylvania, some stayed here, then to Kentucky, and some went in all directions from there. We have their names, dates, spouses, children and grandchildren. All this because one Emilie Todd Helm in the later half of the 1800s took the time and trouble to collect and record their history. We know that Elijah Smith Todd followed his oldest brother, Owen Kentucky Todd, to Arkansas and on 31 May 1832 he married Martha H. Boyd, in Washington County, Arkansas. He may have married before this or there is an error in some date. The oldest child was born 3 October 1830 in Tennessee, so says the 1850 Census. Elijah and Martha had twelve children, all but the first one born in Arkansas. They are as follows: Julia Ann Todd born 3 October 1830, died 13 July 1851, married George Hancock; Nancy J. Todd born 15 March 1833, died 28 January 1847; William S. Todd born 10 January 1835, died 20 September 1835; Martha L. Todd born 6 June 1837, 16 May 1861 married Jacob L. Davis; John Paxton Todd born 17 December 1838, 8 March 1860 married Pernina Jane Davis (2) Emily Morrison; Margaret L. Todd born 9 December 1840, 30 October 1864 married William Bellows; Josephine L. Todd born 31 March 1843, 7 September 1876 married James Kilburn; Mary M. Todd born 27 November 1844, 14 September married John T. Randolph; Sarah D. Todd born 27 November 1844, 18 April 1867 married Kenneth M. Davis; Willis M. Todd born 1 February 1847, 13 October 1867 married Hannah M. Lowery; Ann Eliza Todd born 6 February 1849, died

30 October 1939, married William Burgess; Pernecia Todd born 8 January 1852, died 24 December 1868, married Zachariah Taylor.

Richard Burgess was born in Burke County, North Carolina on 21 March 1782. He married Elizabeth Hall, 2 October 1810 in Burke County, and by 1812 was in Bedford County, Tennessee. They had ten children, all born in Tennessee. In 1839 the family moved to Benton County, Arkansas. Their children are: Sarah Minerva Burgess born 25 September 1812, died 28 August 1889, married Archelous Wilson; Eliza Burgess born 15 December 1813, died 1 March 1896, married Lemial Phillips; William W. Burgess born 27 November 1819, died 9 August 1900, married Melvina F. Rogers 11 February 1842; Mary A. Burgess born 8 December 1821, died 8 January 1893, married William C. Hastings; Elizabeth Ann Burgess born 1823, married Wm. "Buck" Martin Brown 25 December 1844; John William Burgess born 14 September 1826, died 14 September 1856, married Mary Manerva Gass 18 March 1847; Susan Jane Burgess born 1831, married John Brickey, (2) Sterling, (3) McAnally; Elvira Burgess born 1834; Harriet Burgess born 1835, married Thomas M. Brown; Hannah Madeline Burgess born 19 December 1838, died 15 August 1925, married Joseph James Gibson 1854, (2) Joseph Edward Maxfield.

John William Burgess married Mary Manerva Gass, born 11 May 1830 in Lincoln County, Tennessee. She was the daughter of Samuel Gass and Priscilla Williams. Their children are as follows: William Burgess born 27 September 1849, died 6 October 1917, married Ann Eliza Todd 30 October 1867; Samuel Alexander Burgess born 24 April 1851, died 4 August 1864; Nancy Ann Burgess born 15 April 1853, died 3 May 1854; John Burgess born 17 August 1855, died 6 February 1929, married Sarah A. Cavanaugh; Elizabeth Jane Burgess born 13 January 1856, died 29 November 1880. The first child was born in Tennessee. The second may have been born in Arkansas. The other three were born in Wright County, Missouri. Only two of these children lived to marry and have children of their own.

Samuel Gass and Priscilla Williams and family are also found in Wright County, Missouri by 1850. They may have gone by the way of Washington County, Arkansas also.

Elijah Smith Todd and Martha H. Boyd and family moved to Wright County, Missouri sometime between 1852 and before the Civil War.

John William Burgess died in 1856 and Mary Manerva (Gass) Burgess in 1866 remarried to Henry Markley Knabb. By 1881 only sons John and William of the Burgess children were still living and there were two Knabb children, Enoch and Mary Ann.

Elijah Smith Todd died in 1864 in Wright County, Missouri. His daughter Ann Eliza in 1867 married William Burgess. They had six children: Martha Manerva Burgess born 15 September 1868, died 13 July 1965, married William Zenus Cooper 6 September 1891; Nancy Jane Burgess born 17 September 1870, married John B. Taft 17 September 1890, died 11 November 1943; Mary Lucinda Burgess born 18 June 1872, married Gilmore Johnson 14 December 1890, died 20 August 1934; Sarah Margaret Burgess born 2 June 1874, married Charles Thomas Snyder 1 November, died 20 August 1963; Malisa Catharine Burgess born 15 March 1876, married William James Slack 5 June 1895, died 14 March 1922; John Henry Burgess born 15 April 1879, married Ella Cox 15 June 1903, died May 1962.

In early 1888 William Burgess and Ann Eliza Todd, his wife and their six children, also John Burgess and his wife Sarah Cavanaugh and their children went west. They arrived in Columbia County, Washington Territory in February 1888. One more child was born to William and Anna Eliza Burgess at Dayton, Columbia County, Washington State. (statehood on November 1889) This child was: Omar Albert Burgess born 27 January 1890, married Nellie Beason 7 March 1918, died 12 February 1972.

From Columbia County, Washington, both families moved to Waterville, Douglas County, Washington. Here they stayed quite a while and some never left. Most all stayed in the eastern half of the state. Their fourth child, Sarah Margaret Burgess in 1891 married Thomas Snyder. He had arrived in Washington Territory in the summer of 1884 from Anamosa, Jones County, Iowa. Born 5 March 1858, in Wampsville, Madison County, New York. The son of Charles Snyder and Frances Chapman, their first born of six children.

Sarah Margaret and Thomas farmed in Waterville and Thomas was at one time Sheriff of the County, but in 1903 they sold their holdings and moved to the west side of the Cascade Mountains, to King County near the town of Kent. By this time they had three children. Frank born 3 October 1892, Jennie May born 22 October 1894 and Calvin Thomas born 15 August 1900. Sarah Margaret loved the green side of the state. She grew great vegetable gardens and had a yard so big and full of flowers and trees that she could only clean one portion of the yard each year. There was also an unobstructed view of Mount Rainier. Here they farmed, sold milk and worked hard. Thomas died 8 February 1930. Sarah Margaret died 20 August 1963. Son Frank never married and passed away on 24 October 1978. Calvin Thomas married Ruth Margarette Anderson but had no children. Daughter Jennie May married Charles Louis Anderson on 19 August 1919, a returned veteran of World War One. He was the fifth child of Nels Andersen and Margaret Pauline Nelsen, both immigrants from Denmark. Louis was born 22 January 1891 on the family farm at Orillia, King County, Washington.

Jennie and Louis set up house keeping in Orillia and had two children. They bought a small house, and Louis died 9 September 1925. Their children as follows: Charles Nels Anderson born 30 May 1920 and Laura Mae Anderson born 4 May 1923.

Jennie May raised her children with the help of her family and neighbors. In 1934 she remarried. James C. Burgess the son of a prominent Scotch family in the area. James died in 1972 and Jennie lived with her daughter and son-in-law until 1985 when she went into a rest home. She is 92 years old as of this writting.

Charles Nels Anderson married Louise Svengard 14 September 1945. They have two adopted children: Sarah Lynne Anderson born 24 January 1960, now Mrs. Ronald Stuth and one daughter, Kendall Marie born June 14, 1987. And James Todd Anderson born 19 January 1964.

Laura Mae Anderson married Joseph Louis Billy 16 January 1946. Joseph was born in Chicago, Illinois, June 6, 1919 to Czechoslovakian immigrants. They have one daughter - Margaret Rose born 25 January 1955, married to Hal Owen Westerlund. They have one child - Jennifer Wilma Westerlund born 18 April 1983.

LeRoy Todd

Since time has erased the footprints of hardy pioneers, and nothing remains but song and story to tell of the romantic career of those forerunners of civilization, I will attempt to give an interesting pioneer reminiscence related many years ago by my grandfather LeRoy Todd (1836-1912), of "The Great Bear Hunt". LeRoy was born, lived and died in the Clifty area, which was then part of Washington County. Let me state here at the beginning, that I do not know whether the hunters were brave men or just didn't know bears.

"It was in the year 1856, and brother Jim had hired me for the winter to care for some cattle he had on the range. I secured a cabin with my dog and gun as my chosen companions. One night in December, brother Jim made a visit, bringing along his old flintlock rifle thinking, no doubt, of killing a passing deer. A few days before a six or eight inch snow had fallen. After nightfall we heard someone knocking the snow off his feet on the doorstep. Opening the door we saw old friend Jim Harp. "Just up the hollow yonder, I trailed one whopping big bear and three small ones into their den. I stopped them up in their den until I could get some help. Will you go with me in the morning and have some bear meat?" he asked.

This was enough for brother Jim and I. We hauled out our rifles and fired the rusty loads and reloads for bears. We spent a good part of the night in discussing the modus operandi of securing bruin at such a disadvantage. I spent the rest of the night hunting with Boone and Crockett in hidden wilds, and smelled the steak of broiled bear.

"At first morning light we were on our way to the mountain fortress to surprise bruin while he was yet in the stupor of his morning nap. Who will be the hero and enter? After some counseling, brother Jim and Jim Harp ventured, leaning their guns against a sapling for the entrance was so small that it would not permit the taking of guns, for in such close quarters they would have been useless and hindrance to speedy action."

"Harp lighted a pine torch, rolled the stone from the entrance, and with Jim at his heels started on the descent. While I stood, gun in hand, without to be ready for any emergency. I'll confess I felt excited, for I knew that a bear was not inclined to be sociable under such circumstances and more than once I had heard of hunters being torn to bits by such ventures. After waiting a few minutes, I heard a fearful crashing and tearing at the entrance of the cave. To my horror and dismay I discovered brother Jim with every nerve expanded and eyes protruding from their sockets, clawing furiously at the mouth of the cave which was scarcely large enough to admit his exit. Once out, without waiting to gain an erect attitude, he started on all fours at breakneck speed over brush and boulder, pawing the frozen snow in blinding blizzards over his back, down the steep with a cub bear that had pushed out under his coat tail hard at his heels. It was hard to tell which was the most excited, Jim or the cub. Evidently the former for he cried at the top of his voice at every leap, 'Shoot, Shoot, Roy, Shoot', and never once hushed until he arrived at a hickory tree, which he clasped with both hands and feet in a sitting posture, evidently believing he was perched on the top most boughs."

"Jim and the cub had hardly cleared the way, when a huge mama bear popped her head from the hole. I leveled my gun and fired, and was well pleased to see her reel and snap furiously about, and then fell completely barring the entrance. By this time Jim had somewhat recovered from his excitement and was coming up. All had become quiet in the hole, which caused me to remark, Well, they've killed Jim Harp, I guess. To this brother Jim touchingly replied, Oh, yes, Oh, yes. Well if they have I shall not risk my life in that hole. Just then we heard Harp at the mouth of the hole say, Boys, if you will push the bear away, I'll come out. This we immediately did and was pleased to see Jim Harp step once more on top of the surface of the earth unscratched. I could hardly help looking upon him as a second Daniel. Jim said when they entered the den and had proceeded a few feet down, they saw a dark object which they thought to be another hole making off. In order to investigate, he held his torch over and a few coals fell off and immediately seemed a legion of bears sprang to their feet. Jim Todd was in front, so he made his exit with the pack, while Harp in the rear or rather among them, was tossed backwards and forwards to such a degree that it was altogether unpleasant. At one time the bruin had Jim's foot entirely in his mouth, but luckily his shoes were double-soled and filled with tacks, which prevented serious hurt."

"We then peeled the hide from our bear, and found it to be a very large one weighing over 300 pounds. We shouldered it up and proceeded home, feeling proud in more than one respect. We three men then and there resolved to hunt bear in the future on top of the earth."

Mary Clark Todd

Mary was born January 14, 1924, at her parents home at Durham, Arkansas, (Washington County), the fifth of six children of Irma McKee Clark and Elbert Clark. My parents lived on the farm where my father moved to at age four. My paternal grandfather, William Clark purchased the farm and built a new home there when my father was four. My maternal grandmother was Dolly Ann White. They were the parents of six children, my father being the fifth in line. My grandfather died at age 55 from heart dropsy, then my father and mother lived with my paternal grandmother.

I grew up in the depression years. We always had farm animals around our farm. We fed many homeless people that seemed to live on the road from the many vegetables we grew on the farm. These people were always invited to eat from our table and sleep in our home or on our land at night. Our home was the gathering place for parties for both young and old. My mother, Irma was the daughter of Mary Brannon McKee. My maternal grandmother died when my mother was fifteen, and the eldest of seven children. She quit school and helped raise her brothers and sisters.

I attended ten years of school at the Durham School and after the school lost it's accrediation for grades eleven and twelve, I went to Fayetteville to live with my oldest brother and attended the University High School, on the campus of the University of Arkansas. After graduation there in 1942, I went to work for Oberman and Company, a clothing manufacturer. We made all types of men's clothing. By this time we were deep in a war with Germany and Japan. On March 22, 1944 I was married to James Dewey Todd, son of Alice Thomas and James Thomas Todd, at the Washington County Courthouse. James was born and reared near Delaney, Arkansas in Madison County. He graduated from the St. Paul High School in 1941, attended Business College at Chillicothe, Missouri, was for a short time in the CCC Camp at Locke, Arkansas, then moved to Little Rock and worked at the Jacksonville Ordnance Plant until entering the service on June 18, 1943. At the time of our marriage he was serving as a paratrooper in the 17th Airborne Division with the United States Army at Camp Mackall, North Carolina. Shortly thereafter he was transferred to Camp Forrest, Tennessee. At that time I quit my job and moved to Tennessee to be near him. After a few months there, we moved to Camp Chaffee, Arkansas at Fort Smith. While there I worked for Woods Manufacturing Manufacturing on Garrison Avenue. In January 1945, James was shipped to Camp Shanks near New York City for transfer to Europe for overseas combat duty. He landed at Lehavre, France, then moved across France and Germany to Czechoslovakia. He served in the Army of Occupation, was returned to St. Louis, Missouri and discharged on April 16, 1946. We resided for awhile at 18 East Dixon Street, but soon purchased a small home at 835 West North Street. James went to work for the VA Hospital as a Clerk-Typist on May 15, 1946. On February 24, 1947, a son, Terry Juan Todd was born at the City Hospital. On April 1, 1947, James and I took a rural newspaper motor route so I would be able to take my child to work with me in lieu of having a sitter for him. In 1949 we sold our first home and purchased another new home at 455 East Prospect Street where we lived until April 1960 at which time we sold this house and built a new home at 1741 Greenvalley Avenue where we now reside. On December 13, 1954 our second son was born at the Washington Regional Medical Center and named Barry Clark Todd. I continued doing the newspaper route and helped send both boys to the University of Arkansas. Terry received a Bachelor Degree in the College Business Administration in 1972. Barry received a Bachelor degree in Mechanical Engineering in May 1978. After Barry's graduation he was employed by Dowell, a division of the Dow Chemical Corporation and worked in Farmington, New Mexico, Berwick, Louisiana, and Tulsa, Oklahoma. In July 1980 Barry, his Dad and I vacationed together in all the eastern states. Later that year in December Barry became ill and was diagnosed as having Granulocitic Leukemia. After 8 months of chemotherapy and radiation treatment, Barry died on August 18, 1981 and is entomed at the (McCord Cemetery) in a family mausoleum. Our son Terry married Janie Mae Hobson and have a daughter named Jamie Dawn Todd. On March 1, 1985, James retired from the VA Hospital. I am still doing the newspaper route and will be 40 years on April 1, 1987. Our son Terry is employed by J. C. Penny and is a salesman in the Electronics Department.

Owen Todd

Owen Kentucky Todd was born in 1791 in the state of Kentucky, most likely in Fayette County near Lexington. He is the grandson of David Todd and Hannah Owens, who migrated to America from Ireland in the mid 1700s. First settling in Berks County, Pennsylvania, they later moved, in the autumn of 1784, to near Lexington, Kentucky.

David and Hannah were the parents of six children, all born in Pennsylvania. John Todd, the eldest, married Jane Hawkins and settled near Lexington, Kentucky. He died around 1782 in the Battle of Blue Licks with the rank of Colonel, fighting along side Colonel Daniel Boone. Elizabeth Todd married Roger North and remained in Pennsylvania. Robert Todd married his cousin Nancy Ann Todd, daughter of the Rev. John Todd. He also lived near Lexington and fought in many battles, earning the rank of General. Levi Todd married Jane Briggsand lived near Lexington. He also served as General in the military. Levi was the grandfather of Mary Ann Todd, wife of our 16th President, Abraham Lincoln. Owen Todd, the father of our subject, married first Elizabeth Smith, and second to Maria Jane Paxton. He raised a large family and lived in Fayette County, Kentucky and in Claremont and Warren counties, Ohio. He died in Vevay, Indiana in 1817. And Hannah Toddmarried Elijah Smith and died around 1824 in Kentucky.

Our subject married first to Elizabeth Cochran, and second to Sarah Felter. Owen and Sarah came to Arkansas around 1830, possibly to Mississippi County. According to census records, they were living in Missouri around 1840. In 1850, they are back in Arkansas, in Washington County, not far from Owen's brother Elijah Smith Todd. They were the parents of the following children:

Martha Todd was born around 1822 and died at a young age.

Susannah Todd was born around 1824 and died in 1892. She married Isaac Johnson on August 13, 1843 in Barry County, Missouri. Issac died from a shot to the knee in the Civil War and is buried in the Bramhall Cemetery near Grovespring, Missouri. Susannah is buried in the Joyce Cemetery near Springdale, Arkansas. They had the following children: William O.- m. Margaret J. Davis, Nancy J. - m. Thomas Overton, Solomon Isaiah- m. Elizabeth Keller, Eliza J. - m. 1st James Graham, 2nd Wm. Thomas Harris, Zerelda - m. Z. Taylor Ryan, M. M. Delilah- m. Elisha Cloer, John, Sarah Sally - m. J. Allen Reynolds, and Micajah- m. 1st Sarah E. Cloer Johnson, 2nd Emily J. Johnson Graham.

Eliza Todd was born around 1826 and married William E. Clemens.

Zerelda Todd was born around 1828 and married Solomon Johnson on July 20, 1849 in Washington County, Arkansas. Solomon is buried in the Bramhill Cemetery near Grovespring, Missouri. Zerelda is buried in the relocated Turnbo Cemetery near Pontiac, Missouri. They had the following children: John- m. Mary _____, Sarah - m. James M. Buttram, Isabelle- m. David Durbin, William- m. 1st Hannah Durbin, 2nd Minnie Emmerson, Nancy - m. a Huddleston, O. W., Elizabeth- m. Enoch O'Dell, Julia- m. Henry Winters, Samuel- m. 1st Phoebe _____, 2nd Maggie Emmerson, Mollie - m. Thomas R. Kindrick, and Eliza- she may have married a Neasby.

Jane Todd was born around 1830 and married Albert Johnson, brother to Isaac and Solomon.

Maria Todd was born around 1832 and died at a young age.

Owen Warren Todd was born around 1834 and died during the Civil War.

Isabella Todd was born around 1836 and died around 1881. She married Jefferson Hudson in 1860 in Barry County, Missouri.

Victoria Todd was born around 1838 and married Charles Crabtree. They may have lived in Webster County, Missouri.

Elijah Smith Todd was born around 1840 and died during the Civil War.

And William Paxton Todd was born around 1842 and died at a young age.

Owen and Sarah moved to Barry County, Missouri before 1860 and according to Goodspeed's History of Barry County, "Owen Todd, a Union Man, was killed by Federal troops while defending his relatives, whom the troops were trying to arrest. The First Arkansas Cavalry were the actors in this affair, and of this regiment the relatives were members, one of whom was killed. This affair took place in June 1862." Owen Warren Todd and Elijah Smith Todd are probably the relatives mentioned, both are said to have died about this time. Owen, and possibly Sarah, are presumably buried in Barry County, Missouri.

Besides Owen K. Todd, Owen and Maria Todd had the following children: Hannah Todd- m. Mordecai Redd, Maria Jane Todd- m. Channing Madison, Paxton Warren Todd- m. Martha Felter, Robert William Todd - m. Catherine McCully, David Andrew Todd - m. Mary Ogle, John Hawkins Todd, Isabella Ramsey Todd - m. Abraham Dumont, Nancy Smith Todd- m. Simon Gillet, Levi Wesley Todd- m. Demia Butler, Eliza Jane Todd - m. William Peyton Stephens, and Elijah Smith Todd- m. Martha Hardin Boyd, they were the parents of twelve children, some settling in Wright County, Missouri.

Henry Clay Tollett

One hundred fifty-eight years ago this September 1987, one of the pioneers of Washington County arrived with his young family and servants to establish a home.

Henry Clay Tollett, born August 13, 1793, and Eliza Brown, born August 3, 1795, were married soon after the close of the War of 1812, in Montgomery County, Virginia. They were both born in Montgomery County and both were members of prominent families in the Old Dominion State of Virginia. Henry was a soldier in the Black Hawk War and in the War of 1812, where he was promoted to captain.

Immediately following their marriage, Henry and Eliza Tollett, with Eliza's brother and his family, four slaves, and possible others, left Virginia. They crossed over the Blue Ridge Mountains by wagons and teams to Middle Tennessee, on the Tennessee River. Henry Tollett was a carpenter and here, from the timbers of the adjoining forest, he and his group constructed a flat boat. They prepared for the perilous journey that was to take months of hardship and danger, loaded all their belongings on the boat and launched in on the Tennessee River.

They floated down the Tennessee River to the Mississippi River and down the Mississippi to the mouth of Red River. Taking turns, they poled the boat up Red River to the southwestern part of this state. During the day the men worked in shifts and at night the boat was moored to the bank where they made camp.

During this time, Red River, at a point quite a distance above the mouth, was obstructed by what was termed the "raft" - a dam of drift wood extending for ten or twelve miles along the channel of the river. This had accumulated for years and was so dense that traffic through this part of the river was impossible. They were compelled to take a different route through a chain of lakes. To do this, it became necessary to engage an Indian guide.

Finally, after many months, the journey was ended and their destination reached in the southwestern part of the Territory of Arkansas (Hempstead County) in 1819. This was their home for ten years. After the line between the Territory of Arkansas and the Indian Territory was established, they found they were on the Indian side.

They now emigrated to northwest Arkansas and homesteaded 1,000 acres, entered at $1.00 per acre, in the Walnut Grove Valley in September 1829. This land was south of Farmington to one-half mile south of Walnut Grove. One of the very first things they did after constructing a temporary home was to establish a place of worship. Then, in the year of 1835, Henry Tollett built a two-story frame home with material cut and hewn by hand from adjacent forest. The framework of this house is still doing service in the present building.

Centennial excercises were held at the old Tollett homestead on Sunday, September 29, 1929. At that time, it was the Mack Morton Farm.

One of Henry Tollett's activities, and a large source of income, was from a freight team of six mules and a wagon. For many years this team and wagon, in the care of and driven by a trusted slave known as "Uncle Harry", was on the road from Fayetteville to points on the Arkansas River. Supplies were conveyed to business houses in Fayetteville and to adjacent trading posts. Surplus farm products were also hauled to Van Buren, Fort Smith, and other points south.

Henry and Eliza Tollett were the parents of seven children: William Jefferson Tollett - born 1819 - died 1891; Rowland Carroll Tollett - born 1821 - died 1912; Lucidy Catherine Tollett - who died in infancy; Margaret Jane Tollett - born 1825 - died 1901 (Married Rev. James W. J. Barrington); Ferdinand Gallatin Tollett - born 1828 - died 1871; Edward Franklin Tollett - who died in infancy; Harriet Louisa Tollett - born 1833 - died 1905.

All the sons of Henry and Eliza Tollett saw service in the Confederate Army. Ferdinand Tollett was a soldier of the line and wounded in the Battle of Prairie Grove. When the news was brought to his young wife, the shock caused her sudden death.

Henry Tollett died August 13, 1871. Eliza Tollett died November 15, 1885. Refer to the R. M. "Mack" Morton History.

Benjamin Edward Townsend

Benjamin Edward, born February 23, 1861 in Montgomery, Alabama, to James and Sarah B. Andrews Townsend, brought his family to Washington County near Boston around 1880. They were farmers. His wife was Susan Emily Thompson, born January 10, 1862 in Kansas to John and Nancy Floyd Thompson. Their children, Nora Florence Wood, Sarah Jane "Sadie" Smith and Earl Sherman were born there in 1883, 1884, 1886.

Benjamin's father James was born in Alabama and mother Sarah born in Mississippi. She was ten years James senior. In 1900 census for neighboring Lee's Creek, Crawford County, they were living with another son, Joseph Rushing, and family and had been married 46 years.

Reason is unknown but family moved to Missouri by February 1889 where Dollie Anne was born.

In 1900 they were back in Washington County. The next year they moved to Indian Territory, Oklahoma, where Julia Alberta was born in September 1891 near Gore-Vian area. James H. Rushmore Thomas "Tom" arrived in January 1893 and Benjamin Henry in December 1894.

By September 1898 family was back in Washington County where Granville Dewey arrived. They continued to live in Washington County until 1910 when they moved to a farm near Newby, Oklahoma where the children grew up and married.

There are over 800 family members who have a reunion every two years. One year in Bristow, Oklahoma and two years later in California. Last reunion was in California in 1985.

Jarrard Trammel

Jarrard Trammel was born in Tennessee about 1791 to Phillip (born ca. 1756 in Virginia) and Elisabeth Trammel. He married Polly, daughter of George Foster of Howard County, Missouri.

Jarrard was fifth generation from Thomas Trammel born 1649 in England, who came to Virginia 1670-71. Descending generations from Thomas were John ca. 1676-7; Garrard 1702-1786 of Stafford and Fairfax Counties, Virginia; Phillip born 1732 in Virginia, died in Illinois, married Jemima Grymes, daughter of Nicholas Grymes, sons Phillip circa 1756, married Elizabeth and Nicholas 1758-1784 married Francis Maulden. Also, Phillip and Jemima had sons Gerrard and Samson.

Our subject, Jarrard and wife Polly, came to Washington County from Howard County, Missouri about 1836. Their eight children, all born in Missouri were: Nancy Ann, born May 2, 1818 - died February 17, 1900, married John Enyart, born in Kentucky May 9, 1811, children; Selah Ann - 1837. Silas Best - 1839, Mary Eliza - 1840, Thomas Jefferson - 1842, Narcissa - 1845, Analiza Jane - 1848, John Morgan - 1851, Stephen B. - 1854, Sarah Louisa - 1857 and Ebenezar, 1861. Sarah L. married John Jett April 1874, they had six children. Sarah died 1935 and is buried in Brentwood Cemetery: (2) Hannah Narcissia, born November 16, 1822 - died October 20, 1893, married February 1836 to Steven Bess Enyart (brother to John), children Humphrey, 1838, John, 1841, Jerrett, 1842, Silas A., 1845, James S. 1849, Nancy L. - 1852, Mary Jane - 1855, Sarah Ellen - 1858 and Jefferson Davis, 1860. Sarah Ellen Enyart married John F. Fletcher October 8, 1879. (3) Leonard P., 1820-1899 married Nancy Jane Neal, children: George F., Andrew Jackson, Sarah L., Jarred P., Mary H., Henry M., William R., Annaliza J., Leonard P., Rebecca A. and Mabel G. (4) George S., (look under Trammel, Mary Elisabeth). (5) Sanford, lost to the family. (6) Sarah Louisa born 1828-1875, married 1850 to Hosea Maguire, children Mary J., married W. D. Moore; Josie married A. L. Williams; Nancy Louise married Mac Devin and a son, Green. (7) Mary Jane born 1827 married first: Andrew Smith, second to brother-in-law Hosea Maguire after her sister Sarah Louisa had died and her husband Andrew had been killed during the battle of Fayetteville. Mary Jane and Andrew had eight children; Eva married George North; Adaline married John H. Merrick; Sallie, married G. W. Warrenburg; Thomas H. married Lallie Buchanan; Kate married E. G. Sanders, Alice married James D. Williams; Lee H. married Nora C. Sanders and Nanny. (8) Aliza Hayden, born April 21, 1832 - died August 10, 1880 in Baylor County, Texas married Daniel Thales Beya Boone. Their four oldest children were James, Erma, Samuel and Manerva all born between 1850 and 1860.

Jarrard Trammel died before November 1867 when his estate was sold at auction (probate box 44 Washington County, Arkansas).

Though few of Jarrard's descendants now carry the Trammel name in Washington County, hundreds are his direct descendants. To try to name them would be impossible and unfair as with each new generation more names are added.

Mary Elizabeth Trammel

Mary Elizabeth "Mate" (Tuttle) Trammel was born September 6, 1835 near Mount Comfort on her grandfather Solomon Tuttle's farm. Her parents were Nathan Washburn and Analiza (Riddle) Tuttle. She had two sisters; Eliza Caroline (1827-1855) who married Henderson Wilson a school teacher, they had four daughters; Martha Green Whitacor Tuttle born 1833. The Tuttle's came from McNairy County, Tennessee in 1829-30 by ox-wagon.

Mate's father was a Presbyterian Circuit Rider. On August 20, 1838, he received a land grant for fifty acres south of the Mt. Comfort Church. The following year on October 6, 1839, he died leaving his young family in the care of his father, Solomon. Mate was four years old.

Mate's mother, Ann, reveals in a 1840 letter to her own father Benjamin Riddle, Hardeman County, Tennessee that she is still at Solomon's. Also that "little Mary (Mate) has been sick since her father's death." Also a house was being built for her on brother-in-law John Tuttle's land. However, it was near another brother-in-law, James Middleton "Mid" Tuttle; at Tuttle that she soon moved to and married Tom Smith an early pioneer of the community who was twenty-two years her senior. Daughter Caroline married about 1844 and Martha disappeared from any records and presumably died.

On March 3, 1849 Mary Elizabeth, thirteen years old married George Singleton Trammel age twenty-two. "By the harty consent of her parents be present, all of Richland Township." (Washington County marriage records) The following Christmas Day Mate had her first child, Nathan Washburn (1849-1933). During the next twenty-four years these followed: Sarah Analiza "Annie" (1852-1920) m. Joseph Smith; Edward Clinton "Clint" (1854-1915) m. Viola Clark; Jarred Edgar "Ed" (1859-1931) single; Kirby Lee m. Emma Kelly in Arizona; Mary Lou (1868-1934) m. Lee Brown; Hosea Bryon (1870-1923) m. Lizzie Fritts; Elizabeth Henley "Lizzie" (1873-1951) m. William L. Wilson.

Mate's husband "Sing" had fought in the Mexican War and had his horse shot from beneath him. He fought again in the Civil War as Sergeant with his brother-in-law Captain Steve Enyart's Independant Regiment of Arkansas Mounted Volunteers. The close of the war found them in Texas where on August 20, 1865, in Red River County, Sing was sworn in as a citizen of the United States.

While her husband was supporting the Confederacy, Mate was having her own problems at home. Henderson Wilson's young second wife and four daughters (who were Mate's nieces) were living with her late in the war while "Hence" too supported the cause. She herself had five small children. Across a field where her mother and step-father lived the bushwhackers had come demanding money. When refused they burned sixty-six-year-old Tom's feet on his own hearth. He never walked again and died in 1870. Ann died in 1865. Also, after the Battle of Fayetteville Mate accompanied her sister-in-law, Mary Jane (Trammel) Smith, to the battle site and retrieved the body of Andrew Smith, Mary Jane's husband, which they buried in the Tuttle Cemetery. Another soldier's body lay across Andrews' and the women took it too and gave it a proper burial beside Andrew.

Mate had her own close encounters with bushwhackers. Once she put ten-year-old Annie into bed where she had hidden wheat to make the family bread and told her daughter to "be sick". Annie did her best and it worked, bushwhackers were afraid to enter a "sickroom". Mate was not so fortunate when she "stood her ground", tightly grasping her only horse's bridle, they took it anyway. However, sweet revenge came when they demanded food and she baked bread with water in which a young son had washed his feet!

Wesley's Masonic Lodge No. 93 F and A M was named Mate Trammel Lodge. It was instituted November 6, 1867, with seventeen members (Goodspeed History 1889) including her own husband and brother-in-law Daniel T. Boone. When this writer asked descendants of the original members, why Mate's name was chosen, the answer was always, "because of her interest in community and other people."

Sing died June 6, 1882, leaving Mate with three of their children under fifteen years old. In 1887 she applied and obtained a widow's pension for the Mexican War. Her monthly receipt was eight dollars but was increased to twelve dollars on April 12, 1908.

Mate went to live with daughter, Lizzie Wilson at Habberton about 1910. She had a bad heart and spent time each day under a tent made of bedsheets for medication treatment with a vaporizer. On January 23, 1913, she died and is buried beside her husband at Tuttle.

Narcisse Trammel

Narcisse Melrose Trammel lies in a lonely grave nine miles east of Fayetteville. I say lonely though I've never seen it, but I know none of my family has visited her, except a single visit of Grandpa Jesse soon after he knew of her death.

John Batterton was fit to be tied when he first looked at his newborn daughter, on that snowy day in December 1857. In his soft English accent, he gushed, "My Lord, she's beautiful. I thought newborns were supposed to be ugly. My little lady, we will name you after the beautiful flower, Narcissus, because you are the flower of my life."

John Batterton soon forgot his invocation to Narcisse's birth, when a few years later her mother would die, and Batterton took a new wife. Neither the kitchen nor the bedroom can accommodate but one mistress, and insecurity makes it worse, and worse it became for the adolescent Narcisse, feeling the brunt of rejection and outright lies by her step-mother, her tearful appeal to her father was always met with cold reproof.

An eternal vow to leave this home was accommodated one summer afternoon, on a brief trip into Fayetteville, she was attracted to a dark eyed young man atop a wagon with hand painted sign "Horses & Mules". A look from young Narcisse would take any man's mind off business, and Narcisse "looked" at William Henry (just call me "Bill") Patterson, "Whoa," he commanded the two hitched mules, as he leaped off his wagon, the mule pulled behind, ran into the wagon at the sudden stop. The horse trader soon convinced Narcisse of his deep and abiding love, Ole Bill was the son of a Scotchman farmer and his Cherokee squaw over in eastern Alabama, and he looked more like his momma than his poppa. Narcisse having heard all kinds of scary stories about Indians, was quick to ask Bill if he was an escapee from the Indian Nation, and he promptly assured her of his white blood.

They lived in Fayetteville for a while and then moved to Bismark, near Hot Springs, in the community of May.

Bill was a restless horse trader with a yen to travel, looking for new faces and that great opportunity for quick wealth that must be in the next town. He was home for no more than a week at a time for five or six times a year, but enough to account for the birth of daughter, Lou, son Jesse M., son Walter W. and little Ollie Patterson.

Narcisse, distressed that he would leave her without money or food, felt abandoned and Bill's short visits no longer filled the voids in her life. Recalling the loud rebuffs she received when she announced her marriage to Bill Patterson, the hard decision of leaving had to be made.

A relative loaded her, the children and all belongings on a small wagon, and a trip thru the mountains found her back at her Fayetteville, living with a relative while little Lou babysat and helped with the chores around the house. Narcisse found a job housekeeping for a well-to-do family in Fayetteville.

Jarret Trammel owned a small farm just east of Wyman, and in summer would haul produce to town for sale, and in the winter bring a wagonload of firewood to town daily. One of his regular customers was the family that employed our Narcisse. Each Thursday as he would stack the firewood in back, he made sure each armload would take him by the kitchen window where Narcisse was cooking and he would stop and chat. From the woodpile to the kitchen stove a romance developed. Far from driving him away, her mention of the children of a previous marriage challenged Jarret to convince her that any children born of Narcisse could only be angels sent from heaven for him to take care of. The Battertons would approve of this marriage.

Narcisse enjoyed her life with Trammel, and four children were born to them, Thomas, Mary, Ella and John.

Tragedy struck the family in 1897, soon after the birth of John in October. Her oldest son Jesse made Narcisse very proud of his willingness to work hard and help provide for the family. But one day he would come home from school and rebel against his step-father's instructions and in the heat of argument would shoot off Jarret's hand. Weak from childbirth she ran to her husband's side, she cried out for Jesse to help her, but he was gone. Alone in the midst of the shattered fragments of her life, she instinctively barked out commands to her children, "Walter, help me with Jarret. Thomas get on your horse and ride to Fayetteville for the doctor. Mary, see about the baby. Ella honey, bring mother all the clean towels, quick."

About an hour later, Narcisse would be relieved to see the dust from the buggy of not one but two doctors racing to save the life of Jarret Trammel. They were successful, amputation between the elbow and wrist gave Jarret many more years with his family.

However, Narcisse would not share them all with him. Soon after the turn of the century, 15-year-old Thomas and 13-year-old Mary would come down with the measles. Narcisse worked and prayed them through the crisis, only to face the same with Ella and John. Weary and worn from this ordeal Narcisse became a victim of this dreadful disease. Fever, pain, total deafness, leg cramps tormented her, rub downs didn't help. A couple of nights after the onset of the disease, she attempted to sit up, unsuccessful she fell back and with her last breath cried out, "I can't stand it. . .," and left our world for a better one without grief and pain.

Just east of Fayetteville, "Narcisse, flower of my life" lies forever in the arms of Washington County, Arkansas.

James Sherman Treece

Longtime residents of Washington County, the James Sherman Treece family moved to Fayetteville in June, 1919. Mr. Treece was District Sales Manager for the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. His territory was over the agents at Leslie, Harrison, Eureka Springs, Springdale, Fayetteville, and two agencies in Oklahoma. The Treeces came to Fayetteville from Marshall, Searcy County, Arkansas where they had grown up. James Sherman, son of Adam Perry and Sarah Elizabeth Sullivan Treece, was born 5 January 1881, d. 13 December 1959 in Fayetteville. He is buried at Evergreen Cemetery in Fayetteville. He married Hattie Rosella Watts, daughter of Benjamin Arthur and Sarah Dulcenia Melton Watts, and she was born on 9 November 1886 in Marshall. They were married on November 6, 1906. Today Hattie is residing at the Fayetteville City Hospital Geriatric Center and will be 100 years old on November 9 of this year (1986). Before marriage Hattie taught school in Searcy County in the Trace Ridge, Elberta, Witts Springs, and Red Oak schools. Sherman also taught school in the Searcy County Schools. In 1906 Sherman and Hattie homesteaded 86 acres of land in Marshall. In order to homestead land the owners had to "prove up". This meant they had to build a house and live on this land for 5 years. Sherman and Hattie proved up their homestead and then moved to Leslie where Sherman worked for the H. D. Cooperage Company, at that time the largest barrel factory in the world. Around 1916 Sherman began working for Waters - Pierce Oil Company. In 1919 he was promoted to District Sales Manager and was moved to Fayetteville. In 1922 the oil company wanted Sherman to move to Batesville to build up the agencies there. They kept their house in Fayetteville and moved to Batesville. In 1927 they moved back to Fayetteville as the coming depression was hurting Waters - Pierce Oil Company. As things got worse they sold out to Pierce Oil Company. Preceding the depression, businesses did not realize what was happening. Customers who had been good paying customers started buying on credit and the businesses would honor their credit. Then when the panic hit, businesses had to pay their creditors but could not collect from their own. Consequently a lot of businesses went under. This is what happened to Pierce Oil Company. They finally had to let all of their employees go, one of these was James Sherman. In the spring of 1932 Sherman and Hattie bought a farm in the little town of Vaughn, near Bentonville in Benton County. They kept their house in Fayetteville and moved to their farm. The children went to school at Vaughn for awhile but Sherman and Hattie, so aware of the importance of education, moved back to Fayetteville at the start of each school year so that their children could take advantage of the better schools in Fayetteville. During the summers they would live on the farm where they raised dairy cattle, grew and sold Jonathan apples, and grew their vegetables. They sold the farm in 1943 and bought a farm east of Mt. Sequoyah in Fayetteville. They have always lived on West Lafayette Street in Fayetteville.

Despite the hardships fostered upon this family by the depression, Sherman and Hattie were a credit to their community. Sherman had such a good business mind but by the time the depression was finally over he was 60 years old and felt, I'm sure, that it was too late to start over. He felt that he had been dealt a cruel blow. Hattie was and is an inspiration to each of her children. She worked so hard during those depression years caring for 6 young children. As we were growing up we did not have bicycles and pretty clothes — we had encyclopedias and a piano. We never felt poor. Although Sherman and Hattie were not financially wealthy, they had wealth of character and instilled honor, ambition, intergrity and high morals in their children. All but one of the Treece children graduated from the University of Arkansas and all have become useful citizens in their communities.

Charlie Lee Tripp

I was born in St. Louis, Missouri, May 19, 1930. My father C. L. Tripp worked for the railroad. He lost his job in 1932 during the depression.

We moved to Cascade, Missouri that same year. In 1934 we moved to Malden, Missouri where we lived on a farm raising cotton, corn and watermelons.

In the spring of 1943 we left Malden in a homemade house trailer that dad had built. Stopping in Purdy, Missouri for a few weeks to pick strawberries, before moving on down to Springdale. Dad and Sandy returned to Malden to bring back a smaller house trailer. On the way back a wheel came off of the trailer and rolled past them before they could get stopped. The wheel jumped a fence and landed in a pond. Nothing was broken and after putting the wheel back on they came on to Springdale.

The summer of '43 was a new experience for the family. The first job in Springdale was hoeing strawberries. Mom, dad and Sandy did this, while I stayed at home with Bobby and Jerry.

Dad began to pick up a little carpentry work. As fall came Sandy and I went back to Malden to pick cotton. Returning home the latter part of October.

While we were gone Dad added a room to the big trailer. Sandy and I slept in the small trailer. This is the way we spent our first winter in Springdale.

In the first part of '44 Sandy got his first steady job. Pumping gas at a filling station grocery store on East Emma Avenue run by Mr. Sanders. He received $2.00 per day for a 10 to 12 hour day. Every evening at quitting time Mr. Sanders gave Sandy his $2.00 for that days work.

In the spring of '44 Dad got a job at the Migrant Labor Center which was located at the south end of Park Street where Phillips Plaza Housing unit now stands.

We moved into the house that was provided for us. It set just inside the main gate of the camp. It was quite a change from what we had been living in. Here we had electricity and running water. This was something we had done without since leaving St. Louis twelve years before.

Trucks would come from miles around to pick up workers to help in the harvest of strawberries, apples, peaches, beans, tomatoes and grapes. Mother and I would go out with the rest of the workers to help in the harvest.

In the camp the people lived in a 16x16 foot building with a canvas roof and two side curtains one on each side which were made of canvas. If you had a large family you could rent two of these. The floors were of wood.

Early in the spring of '45 before the camp opened we had a wind storm which blew some of the cabins off of their foundations. I began looking to see what could be found under the cabins and found several coins which had fallen thru the cracks in the floor. Almost every cabin that was off of its foundation had from one to five coins under it. I don't remember how much I picked up. It seemed like a lot at the time.

It was about this time that Bob acquired a guitar which he tuned to play Hawaiian style. He took lessons from Mr. Cheece Hannah who lived about a block from us. Bob still plays a Dobro guitar in the Blue Grass Circuit in the Kansas City, Missouri area.

Dad quit this job in 1946 and went into full time carpentry work. He built many houses in Springdale. This was the kind of work he loved best.

In the early '50s Father began to preach. Going over into Madison County for several years. Then into Eastern Oklahoma before his death in 1982. A sign on the back of his pick-up truck said "THERE GOES TRIPP".

Mother worked at the Springdale Hospital for many years. She is still quite active in her church and gets around real good.

The following is the names of the members of our family. Father - Charley Lee Tripp was born January 10, 1901 and died November 24, 1982. Mother - Audie Ella was born October 9, 1901. Golda Lee was born September 23, 1921; died July 24, 1923. Garland D. was born December 29, 1922. Charles Jr. (Sandy) was born May 16, 1928; died March 1, 1959. Carl Ray was born May 19, 1930. Bobby Gene was born July 29, 1934. Jerry Wayne was born May 17, 1940.

George Washington Trippy

My maternal grandfather and grandmother George Washington Trippy and Delilah Ann (Ridenour) Trippy came to Washington County, Arkansas from Davis County, Missouri around the year 1886. Grandfather Trippy was originally from Iowa. He was of Irish and white Dutch descent. He married Grandma Ridenour in 1880 in Mercer Co. Missouri. Their 3 oldest children were born in Missouri. Four children were born after their move to Arkansas. One of these children, the youngest, was my mother "Minnie Francis Trippy" born May 17, 1893.

Grandfather Trippy was a farmer. He settled his family along the White River area. In January 1896 after a bout with pneumonia, Grandfather passed away. Grandmother Trippy married the Reverend Wilson H. Smith Sr. in 1897. I was never able to find out why, but all the children except my mother, the youngest, and the oldest boy, Estie Robert Trippy, 14 years old at that time, were the only ones raised by Grandmother Trippy and her new husband. I never knew where the other children were raised and by whom. But my mother spent many years before she made contact with her sisters again. I don't think she ever made contact with her brothers, other than the oldest one who stayed with the family. In 1946 mother finally made contact with one of her sisters. She was living in Collinsville, Oklahoma and she in turn knew that the other sister was living in Houston, Texas. I don't believe my mother ever got to see the sister in Texas, but I remember as a child the happy times my mother and her other sister spent together on their visits to each other's homes. Since their separation as children, they hadn't seen each other for 49 years. My mother passed away in July 1952 and since that time the other two sisters have passed on.

The brothers that my mother never were able to find are all buried in Freedom Cemetery near Chester, Arkansas. On a visit to this old cemetery a few years ago, I discovered their grave markers, also Grandfather and Grandmother Trippy, and the Rev. Will Smith Sr. (Grandmothers 2nd. husband).

Reverend Smith, my mother's stepfather, married my father and mother in Van Buren, Arkansas on May 8, 1912. My father was Hosea Robert Taylor. They were married 37 years before my fathers death and had 12 children of which I am the youngest.

Grandfather Trippy, from what my mother told me, was a talented musician. He taught his oldest son Estie to play music. He played the fiddle, guitar, banjo, harmonica, jews harp, and mandolin. As a child I can remember Uncle Estie Trippy playing music. Once he made a gadget so he could play the guitar with his toes. He would play the fiddle with his hands and second with his toes on the guitar. He played a tune called Betty Ann which was my name and I always called it my tune. To me and my brothers and sisters he was just called "Unc".

Unc married when he was around 50 years old to a Laura Collins from Bentonville, Arkansas, but had no children. He passed away in 1958 and is beside his father at Freedom Cemetery.

All of George Washington Trippy's children are now gone but not forgotten. I'm sure somewhere the brothers my mother never found have descendents from their family.

Donald Trumbo

When Donald Trumbo of Muskogee, Oklahoma came on the train to Fayetteville to enroll at the University of Arkansas, he had no idea what a momentous trip he was making. Born in Indian Territory in 1903, he had attended the Muskogee public schools, Dwayne Academy in Columbus, Ohio, and Northwestern Academy in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin. His father A. C. Trumbo, a banker and prominent business man, thought a good school in a small town would have advantages and besides his friend N. F. Drake, when he had known when they were both students at Leland Stanford University in California lived in Fayetteville. So Mr. Trumbo accompanied his son on the trip and their first stop was a call on Dr. Drake at his home. Dr. and Mrs. Drake invited them to stay for lunch and they met the two Drake daughters Vera and Doris. The two families enjoyed a lasting friendship from that day on.

Four Trumbo sons, Don, Bass, Howell and Ellis enjoying snow in their own front yard with friend.

Juanita Bass Trumbo - 1925.

Julian Waterman, an economics professor, had a big influence on Donald's life, guiding him and inspiring him to better and better work. One day as they had lunch together in the University cafeteria Dr. Waterman remarked that the plans were going very well and the University would be able to start its Law School in the fall and he would be its first Dean. Donald turned to his friend and said, "Great, let me be your first Law student." Later Donald's four sons all graduated from the University of Arkansas with degrees from the College of Business Administration and one of them, Bass received a Law degree there also.

While still a student Donald had met Juanita Bass, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Bass of New Orleans, when she visited in Fayetteville and about a year and a half later they were married. The young couple liked Fayetteville as a place to live. Donald was taken into the office of Mr. Grabiel, an older and well established lawyer. Donald ran for city attorney and won. He was soon into other areas of interest also, oil and gas exploration and a very exciting land boom in the state of Florida.

So the young couple went to Florida to open an office for a group of investors. A young law professor of Donald's, Claude Pepper, recently out of Harvard Law School, was sold by Donald on the great potential of Florida. He went along and opened a law office in Florida and became one of the state's best known citizens. U. S. Senator first and then a member of the U. S. House of Representatives where he still serves.

Donald and Juanita had a stay in Detroit, Michigan about this time when Donald opened an office for the same investors with whom he was still associated. Then came time to go back to Fayetteville, Arkansas for good, really become a part of the community and the state and raise their family. Donald lived to see his four sons graduate from the University of Arkansas, marry and become established in business. He died in 1965. Except for short times off for military service or special work, all four sons have stayed in Fayetteville. Their professions include; stock broker, attorney, real estate professional, and men's store owner. All share their parent's love for Fayetteville and a feeling of loyalty to the University and the area. Their civic and volunteer work is part of their lives.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church has been a happy church home for this family. Always eager to help, Trumbos have served as ground keepers, acolytes, church school teachers, altar guild workers, choir members, ushers, senior warden and more.

Don (Donald, Jr.), the oldest son of Donald and Juanita Trumbo is a stockbroker, managing an office in the Northwest

Donald Trumbo - 1925.

Arkansas Mall for A. G. Edwards and Company and serving as a vice-president of that company. He and his wife, formerly Jan Blessing of Lincoln, Nebraska have five sons, Trey, Tex, Tyler, Trent and Travis. Trey, an accountant with Arthur Young and Company and his wife Karen have a three year old daughter named Tanner, and they live in Fayetteville. Tex is a graduate student at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville. Tyler and his wife Teena have a young son Ty, Jr. and they live in Kingston, Arkansas where Tyler is the basketball coach and instructor in the high school. Trent is finishing up his college education and working as assistant to the President of the McIlroy Bank, Travis, the youngest, is a Recreation director at a Club in Mexico.

Charles Bass, the next oldest of Donald's sons is a practicing attorney, a member of the law firm Kincaid, Horne, and Trumbo. Their firm bought one of the oldest and most beautiful houses in the area, the Walker-Stone place, and have carefully restored the building and grounds and have their office there. Bass is married to Ruth Ann Pace of Wichita Falls, Texas and the children of the family are; Jay Hamilton, a U of A graduate now living in Dallas, Texas and working for Texas Instruments, Carolyn Bass is married to Dr. Bradford Jones and living in Fayetteville, and Charles Bass, Jr., the youngest, now one year old.

Third son, Arthur Howell, a builder and developer has his own Real Estate Company located in the Trumbo Building on Market Street. Howell also owns the Big Dutchman Equipment Company agency on Highway 71 between Fayetteville and Springdale. Howell's wife was formerly Donna Holley of Fort Smith, Arkansas and the children are Nancy Jane now serving in the navy and Sean, a senior in High School.

Ellis Patterson, the fourth son of Donald and Juanita Trumbo, owns Trumbo's Men's Wear in the Northwest Arkansas Mall, one of the first shops there. An excellent line of clothes and friendly service have kept business good and a recent remodeling job is most attractive. Visiting Razorback Boosters as well as townspeople often stop by the shop and talk over Razorback fortunes. Ellis's wife Nancy is the daughter of the late John Barnhill, the early planner of the remarkable Razorback Athletic Program at the University of Arkansas.

So the first Trumbo came to Fayetteville in 1923. His big family thinks Donald made a good choice.

Henry Lafayette Tuck, Sr.

The Henry Lafayette Tuck, Sr. moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas, in 1914. Corrinna Shive Tuck, a native of Kentucky, was born December 25, 1884, the daughter of G. L. and Icy Breeding Shive. Her husband was born in Macon County, Tennessee, February 7, 1875, son of William Lafayette and Mary Elizabeth Pinkley Tuck, who were both natives of Tennessee and descendants of English and Irish ancestors who settled in America in Colonial days. William Lafayette Tuck was a farmer and a Civil War veteran.

Corrinna and Henry L. Tuck, Sr. were married in Edmonton, Kentucky, on April 4, 1901, and became the parents of seven children, five of whom grew to adulthood. These five were Delpha, who married Dr. Charles Crockett, a Fayetteville dentist; Herman Ashby Tuck, who married Josephine Ellison of Muskogee, Oklahoma; Henry Lafayette Tuck, Jr., who married Dorian DeWan of Denver, Colorado; Jack Shive Tuck, who married Nell Casey of Fayetteville; and Nancy Sue Tuck, who married JRoyston Brown of Fort Smith, Arkansas. Two children, Raymond and Guy, died in infancy.

Henry Lafayette Tuck, Sr. was in the lumber business before coming to Fayetteville. In Fayetteville, he established himself in the gas, oil and automobile business, and was sole owner of the H. L. Tuck Motor Company, distributor of Chrysler. He was a Presbyterian, Republican, a Royal Arch Mason, and a member of the Lions Club and Country Club. He died in 1933. His widow died in 1967. She had been active in the Central Presbyterian Church (now First United Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville), and in the Chi Omega and Sigma Nu Mothers Clubs.

Delpha Tuck Crockett (who died in 1946), had one son, Charles Tuck Crockett, who married Peggy Jacobs of Fort Smith. They live in Dallas, Texas, where he is a manufacturer's representative in the Apparel Mart. The Crocketts have a married son, Scott, who has two sons, Christopher and Brett, of Dallas. Their daughter, Carol, is a land man, buying oil and gas leases in Oklahoma City.

Herman A. Tuck, Sr. and wife, Josephine, were the parents of a son, Herman Tuck, Jr., and a daughter, JoAnne. Herman, Jr. married Irene Mayes of Fayetteville. They have a daughter, Cyndy (Mrs. Bill Ash of Fayetteville, who has a son and daughter), and a son, Herman Tuck, III ("Dubber"), who lives in California. Herman and Josephine's daughter, JoAnne Stanberry, has five children: Sandra Wommack of Dallas; Carin Evans of Little Rock; Scott Stanberry of Aurora, Colorado; Nancy Keen of Springdale; and Stan Stanberry, of Dallas. JoAnne has six grandchildren. She now lives in Bella Vista, Arkansas.

Herman A. Tuck, Sr. retired as Fayetteville Postmaster in 1977. He was a member of the Lions Club and had served on the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce. He died in 1983. Josephine Tuck died 1985.

Henry L. Tuck, Jr. retired in 1970 after 30 years' service with the FBI. He and his wife, Dorian, who live on a farm off Highway 45 in Fayetteville, have a son, Henry L. Tuck, III ("Bookie"), an FBI agent in Little Rock. He and his wife, the former Ginger Hamner of Bradley, Arkansas, are the parents of a daughter, Carey Elizabeth, and a son, Brent. Henry and Dorian also have a daughter, Tessie (Mrs. Bill Gibbs of San Diego, California), who has two sons, Grey and Grant. Her husband, Bill Gibbs, is President and Chairman of the Board of D. H. Technology, a computer company in San Diego.

Jack Tuck was with Tuck Service Company, a family appliance business in Fayetteville, for 18 years until it closed in 1965. He then was associated with Fayetteville Savings and Loan Association (now First Federal of Arkansas) until his retirement in 1985. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club, has served on the Board of the Fayetteville Chamber of Commerce, and as an elder in the First Presbyterian Church. He is an army veteran of World War II. His wife is the former Virginia Nell Casey, also a native of Fayetteville. They have no children. They live in Fayetteville.

Nancy Sue ("Susy") Tuck Brown and husband, Dr. JRoyston Brown, a retired anesthesiologist, live in Texarkana, Texas, where he is President and Chief Executive Officer of Wadley Hospital.

They have two sons, Jeff and Tod. Jeff and his wife, the former Ginger Satterwhite, have four children: Christopher and Parker (twins); Hunter; and Kendall, a daughter. They live in Texarkana. Tod and his wife, the former Patricia Pippin of Texarkana, have one daughter, Danielle. They live in Dallas.

The H. L. Tuck, Sr. family home at 333 North College Avenue, built in 1921, was a stucco and wood shingled house north of Goff-McNair Motor Company, and was one of few residences which stood in later years among commercial buildings. Mrs. H. L. Tuck, Sr. sold the house in 1958, and it became the office of Kincaid and Company Insurance and Real Estate for several years. One of the house's features was three sets of interior French doors with beveled glass. One set was bought by Herman Tuck, Jr. for his daughter, Cyndy Ash, when the house was torn down in 1985.

It has been said that the Tuck family has owned property on College Avenue continuously since 1914, as Herman Tuck, Jr. presently owns and operates Herman's Rib House on North College Avenue (Highway 471), a popular Fayetteville restaurant.

Oliver Tucker

Oliver Newby Tucker was born December 15, 1883 near Shelbyville, Indiana. Mother, Sarah Minnie Peeler Jacobs died from measles in 1888 and was buried with the new baby in Morristown Cemetery.

Margaret Ethel Slagle Tucker, Beulah Faye Tucker, Oliver Newby Tucker, Robert Earl Tucker, Dixie Evelyn Tucker, William Franklin Tucker. Sandhill place in Oklahoma, Peach-tree background Garden beyond picket fence.

Sister Arminda kept house for the family, Father William Long; John, Jesse, Francis, Janie and Oliver.

Oliver attended school in Guymville through sixth grade; but was a self-educated man; artistic ability in art and music. Favorite sports: baseball and horse racing, especially two-wheel cart races.

Moved to Greenfield with family where he became a carpenter. Joined Christian Church.

Ethel Slagle (William Taylor and Margaret Emily May Slagle of Tennessee) went to Greenfield as cook in Johnny Bond's restaurant where Janie was a waitress. Roomed at Tucker's where she met Oliver.

They were married December 15, 1909 in Greenfield Methodist Church because Christian Church minister was water bound out of town. Lived on Main Street in Greenfield where Beulah Faye, 1911 and William Franklin, 1913 were born.

Oliver Newby Tucker - William Franklin - Margaret Ethel - Dixie Evelyn - Beulah Faye - Robert Earl Highland home. Oliver built the barn in the background. Family ready for church.

In 1914, family moved to a farm near Westland. Oliver did not farm - liked to live in country. Ethel "set" an oil incubator to hatch chicks. Incubator was in the summer kitchen, some way a fire started there, destroying the house. Family moved to another farm where Ethel was ill, physical exhaustion, for months. Moved to Burton place where Robert Earl, 1915 was born. Oliver worked in New Castle and Indianapolis.

In 1916, family moved to Indianapolis where Oliver worked in cabinet factory and Beulah started to school.

In 1917, decided to move to Oklahoma where John lived. Shipped furniture by freight; family traveled by train to Fort Towson. Lived with John's family while building a house. Robert called it his "pretty house".

In 1918, a baby girl was born and named. But Oliver said she was his Dixie girl so the name was changed to Dixie Evelyn. Doctor became lost so baby arrived before doctor did.

Oliver tried cotton farming. Registered for draft but war ended before he was called. In 1919, moved to sandhills northwest of Ft. Towson. No school near enough for children to attend. Oliver and Ethel wanted the children to have the education they couldn't get. Instrumental in getting a one-room school for area children to attend. In 1920, moved near Ft. Towson where children attended school. Oliver butchered for John's market.

In 1921, entire family had malaria, decided to leave Oklahoma. Doctor advised going by covered wagon, living in open, not to go by train. In fall of 1921, stored furniture with a cousin, loaded necessities in wagon on which Oliver had built an "overjet".

Stopped at a lumber camp in Kimichi Valley between Whitesboro and Talihina. Lived on bank of Kimichi River in a little dirt floor, shuttered window camp shack. Moved to a larger one when another family moved out. Placed wagon bed by window of shack. Family crawled through window into wagon to sleep; good bed.

Kimichi River would flood. One night, the water came up within a few feet of the shack. Oliver said if it came up any more, they would put the trunk which held their clothing on the "running gears" of wagon and move to higher ground. Oliver used the wagon like that to haul lumber. Ethel taught children that winter.

Ethel cut her big toe while chopping wood, used soot and sugar to stop bleeding. No doctor available, treated self; toe healed. Used creosote on insect bite on Beulah's leg where flesh had decayed. Healed.

In late winter of 1922, resumed journey, arriving in Winslow in March. Camped on Marcus Vest farm, where Oliver and children set strawberries; Ethel helped Mrs. Vest.

In May, moved on west of Fayetteville to pick berries for J. Y. Rice. Planned to move on to Missouri when harvest was over, instead bought thirty-five acres for $1,400.00, put up a roof shelter where family lived, still sleeping in the wagon, until a two room house was finished.

Farmed a little, did carpenter work; first big job Farmington High School in 1924. In 1925, became foreman for Bird Construction Company in Fayetteville. Early 30s began to contract for himself. Two big job were Fayetteville City Hall and Jail.

Developed tuleremia from tick bit died September 15, 1937. Ethel died October 15, 1975. Both are in Highland Cemetery.

Beulah graduated from University High and college with degree in elementary education. Taught in Fayetteville, Morrow, Lincoln and Farmington. Married Oliver Ray Davis in 1935. Two children, Boyce and Owanda.

Franklin finished high school at Farmington, became construction worker, many overseas jobs. Active service in Europe during World War II. Married Roberta Thomas in 1937, had six children. Died in 1984, buried in Fayetteville National Cemetery.

His children: Oliver Thomas Tucker, employed by Arizona Highway Department, married Clair Bullington, one son, Wayne, who has two daughters. Married Mrs. Christine?, one daughter, Sherri.

John David, employee of Telephone Company in Arkansas. Married Velma Lee Lacy, two children, Laura and Ashley.

Scott, many years in Navy, lives in Tennessee.

Sherri, beautician, married James Bonham, one son, Jimmie. Lives in Tennessee.

Margaret Kay and Paul Mark, twins. Kay lives in Tennessee. Mark, career in Army, married Lisa Dowlat. In Germany, 1987. Robert, finished high school at Farmington. Married Helen Gibson in 1937. Farmed, served in Navy. After discharge, did construction work until retirement. Two sons, Darrell Newby and Gerald Wayne.

Darrell, Farmington and University of Arkansas graduate taught in Roswell, New Mexico six years, now in school system in Portland, Oregon. Married Susan Jarrell in 1970. Three children, Tammy, Robert and Ryan.

Gerald, same education, employed by SWEPCO, lives in Texas. Married Phyllis Taylor in 1966. Two adopted children, Dustie and Jeremy.

Dixie, Farmington graduate, married W. H. Morris, Western Gas Company employee, lives in Fayetteville. One son, James William, business college graduate, married Becky Brewer, lives in Texas. Has three daughters, Christy, Charae and Kathryn.

Dixie, Robert and Franklin talented musically. Members of quartet, did radio programs.

Mason Slydell Tuggle and Elsie Williams Tuggle

Stephen and Beverly Harp and children; Justin, Jane and Lacie

Margrette Elsie Williams Tuggle

Margrette Elsie Williams was born May 30, 1891 on a farm near Chismville, Arkansas. She was the first-born of Uriah Williams and Margrette Addaline Mitchell. Her grandmother Faulkner was 1/2 Indian, whose father was an Indian from Oklahoma. Elsie's mother played the organ, served as a midwife and was helpful to the sick and poor. Families in need came to get meat from them and one particular family came quite often. The observation was made that, "You must eat a lot of meat," to which the reply was, "Yes'm we do, we eat gravy". This "saying" became a family joke through the years.

Elsie moved to Springdale with her husband, Mason Tuggle and their 3 children in the year 1926. She did not see the home he built for them until it was practically finished. She was quite disappointed when she found there were no closets except two, both of which opened into the living-dining area.

On December 29, 1927, Madge Beatrice was born. Aunt Cora Beatrice Powell came from Kansas City, Missouri, to be with the family at the time of the birth. Dr. C. P. Sisco was the attending physician. The other three children, Inez, Wanda and Sanford, were sent to visit a neighbor until the baby was born.

The spring of 1928 Mason broke ground to prepare for the planting of strawberries. These were ready for harvesting in the spring of 1929. However, the depression began to hit and the price hit rock bottom if the berries could be sold at all. The berries were picked and put in quart baskets and packed in two layers in a 24 basket crate. Elsie worked in the shed to pack the crates sometimes allowing her two oldest daughters to help. They were paid one to two cents a quart for picking the berries, saving money to buy books for school or perhaps purchase material for a new school dress. The hired pickers were paid at the end of each day. Tickets were given for each quart picked with the name M. S. Tuggle and the number of quarts picked stamped on each. These were made up at the Springdale News office and used year after year until they were too worn. Workers were used from the labor camp in town which was built and maintained for these transcients by the government. Some were good workers and others were not. At this time prices dropped so low that a 24 crate sold for as little as twenty-five cents. Often Dad brought many crates home because there was no market that day and we had to make jam out of them. We got so tired of capping berries.

After Mason turned the ground and fertilized it with manure from the barn, a garden was planted each spring. It was a big garden containing lettuce, radishes, tomatoes, turnips, onions, spinach, swiss chard, lima beans, carrots, okra and corn. Field corn was also grown on the farm for the livestock as well as various hays such as alfalfa, maize, oat and other grasses.

Elsie cared for the garden using a small garden plow and a hoe to clear the weeds and grass. My how we enjoyed the fresh vegetables. Before they were large enough we hunted the fence rows for new shoots of polk greens and wild lettuce. The wild lettuce was cut up and hot bacon grease with vinegar poured over it to wilt it. The polk greens were prepared as spinach with pork grease to flavor. Often we would stir fresh eggs into the mixture. Elsie also grew variety of beautiful flowers, often taking a bouquet to an elderly neighbor friend, Mrs. Jarvis Reed.

Fried chicken with hot biscuits and milk gravy were served for breakfast. Chicken fried steak was also a breakfast meal. We seldom had steak unless our cows gave birth to a male calf. Our cows were of the Jersey-Guernsey mixture. Once in a while our Dad would buy some steak at the store and we would enjoy a breakfast treat. Steak was usually 15 to 20 cents a pound.

Each spring one hundred baby chicks were ordered from the hatchery. These were yellow chicks but developed black and white feathers. The roosters were used as fryers except for one or two. The hens were raised for laying eggs for our use and extras were sold. In later years a large chicken house was built and we raised broilers for the market. Printed feed sacks were used to make attractive dresses for the girls to wear to school and neighbors would gather at one house to make mattresses. Milk and churned butter was also sold.

Elsie Tuggle was a good mother, "looking well to the ways of her household". The oldest child, Inez Taylor, who died January 1, 1986, was a beautician in Springdale. Wanda Train became a school teacher teaching all eight grades in one-room houses in Washington County in the early 1940s. Sanford worked at Burl Cypert's service station, then became a heavy equipment operator. Madge Harp worked many years at Springdale Hospital in the business office and PBX, now doing volunteer work there and is an artist. She also served several years as secretary at Caudle Avenue Baptist Church.

Mason and Elsie Tuggle were devoted parents who brought their children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. All attended regularly the First Baptist Church on Holcomb Street. Elsie Tuggle died May 10, 1970 and was buried alongside her husband in the Friendship Cemetery.

Mason Slidell Tuggle

Mason Slidell Tuggle was born on a farm in a log cabin near Atlanta, Georgia. He was the youngest of eight children born to Sanford and Emily Addaline (Perkle) Tuggle. When he was only a few months old the family left in a wagon for Arkansas. His mother's Bible had a notation on the fly leaf that they arrived in Booneville, Arkansas on March 20, 1884. She wrote, "Mason is one year old today". When Mason was five years old his mother died.

Mason married Margrette Elsie Williams on December 22, 1910. She was from a farm near Chismville, Arkansas and the young couple owned a farm located about a mile from Booneville, Arkansas on the bottom lands of the Petti Jean River. While living there, three children were born to them named Inez, Wanda and Sanford.

The main crop on their farm was cotton. There was a pecan grove near the river. Other crops were raised such as corn. At one time Mason raised garlic with his brother-in-law, Claud Burkholder. The garlic grew large in the rich bottom land soil and many were as large as a saucer. They could imagine at least five cents for each head which was a great deal of money in those days, making a good income for that year in the early 1920s. Floods inundated the bottomland farm and there was great disappointment because the garlic crop was ruined.

Mosquitoes in the Booneville area carried malaria. Because of the malaria health factor, the bottomland flooding and the fact that he had to travel a mile to work each day, Mason decided he wanted to move to a new location where he could live on his farm. He had heard glowing reports of successful farming in northern Arkansas near Springdale. Several friends had already moved to the area such as Mr. Hugh Wilson, Lon Ham and Mr. Greenway.

The home in Booneville and the bottomland sold for about $8000.00. A new 1926 Chevrolet four door sedan was purchased. The household goods were shipped by freight train to Springdale. For a time we lived in a hotel where meals were served by the owner in the dining room to guests each day. Soon a house was rented on a farm west of town near the City Springs. We children had always been used to living in town so we felt we were really living in the wilds in the "next to the last house to nowhere", since we could see only one more house beyond us. Mason began to look for a farm to buy and finally decided on a 40 acre farm about a mile northeast of town on the Old Missouri Road (now an industrial area). After purchasing, he and Hugh Wilson, a carpenter, built a house amid a little grove of trees. The following year, Madge was born.

Crops raised on this farm were strawberries, sweet peppers, tomatoes, green beans, watermelons, cantaloupes, grapes, youngberries, loganberries, raspberries, peanuts, popcorn, pumpkins and corn. Mason Tuggle grew the first loganberries and youngberries in Washington County. He ordered the plants from Knotts' Berry Farm in Buena Park, California. Now this farm is a large amusement park which was built by Walter Knott, a farmer with a roadside stand.

Raising watermelons posed a special problem when they began to ripen. Often, at night, thieves would slip into the field and steal and destroy many of the melons which could very well mean the difference between a profit or a loss from weeks of labor. One night, the moonlit field seemed a perfect time to embark on a plan to foil the would-be watermelon thieves. Mason and his son, Sanford, loaded their shotguns and each lay down in different areas of the field. Soon, three men were making their way through the field and as one began to stoop down to thump Mason's head, he raised up with his gun and you can very well believe the men took flight in a hurry among sprinkles of warning pellets. It was doubtful they ever ventured back.

Mason Tuggle was a good farmer and kept the fields plowed and clear of weeds. He was a member of the Federal Farm Board. During the depression he was always able to pay at least the interest on the $1000.00 loan he owed the Federal Land Bank while many lost their farms. He died November 27, 1949 at the age of 66 years from a massive heart attack.

Two of Mason's children are still living in Springdale. They are Sanford Tuggle and Madge Harp, who is the widow of Marvin Harp. A grandson, Steve Harp, is a well known Springdale businessman operating a thriving insurance agency for Shelter Insurance. A great-grandson, Michael Tuggle, has been preaching since the age of 15 and plans an education to enter the full-time ministry.

John Henry Tulk

Leaving mother, sisters and brothers behind in Kentucky, John Henry Tulk when a young teenager, set out with his father from their Kentucky home to find new farm land in Arkansas. Having found land to his liking in western Arkansas, the father left John Henry to hold his claim while he, the father, returned to Kentucky to get his wife and children. John Henry never heard from his family again. He supposed that they were all killed by Indians. The youth remained in Arkansas while he grew to manhood, then married and established his home in Washington County. John Henry was born about 1790. He married Mary Washburn who was born about 1794. This couple had ten children, all but the youngest living to maturity. The baby was born and died in 1833, the same year the mother died. In that sad year Eliza Jane was only two years old so she, and the other children, grew up without the care of a mother. When Eliza Jane was nine years old, in 1841, her father died. Thereafter, Eliza Jane lived with her sister. Katherine, who, that same year, married James Joseph Harer, a Methodist circuit rider.

One son, William M. married Lucinda Sanders in Washington County 4 April 1847. About 1850 this couple and William's brother, John moved to Texas. They settled in Austin and had a harness shop. In the 1870s they sent a picture of themselves to their sister, Eliza Jane Harer, in Portland, Oregon. Some of their descendants went to live in Bell County, Texas, and other migrated in Muskogee County, Oklahoma. Mary married Jackson McClendon, and went with him to Texas about 1845. Mary's four children were quite young when she died. One son, William lived for a time in the Bay area of California, and traveled north to visit his Aunt Eliza Jane Harer. Martha Ann married the 7th of April 1850 to William Harer (Willis Harrow). They moved west and lived with their large family in Modoc County, California. Elizabeth married a Mr. McCormick, moved to Texas, and was thought to have died young. No contact was ever made with her. Eliza Jane married on 3 February 1850 Evan H. Harer. This couple left Arkansas in 1852 by covered wagon train for the purpose of securing government farm land in Oregon. Evan H. Harer died in 1870 after fighting a forest fire. Eliza Jane continued to make her home on her hilltop farm in Portland, Oregon. She died 11 May 1926, at age ninety-four, her mind continuing to be alert to the last. Sam, the third son, was in Arkansas when Evan H. Harer died, and he offered to help Eliza Jane with her family. He started for Oregon but died on the way. There was another daughter, Emeline, but no record of her life is known.

Pioneer families must have spent much time around the fireplace sharpening their memories by telling personal and family stories. Eliza Jane accurately remembered dates, places and incidents in her life and in the lives of the relatives and acquaintances of her knowledge.

James Middleton Tuttle

James Middleton Tuttle was among the first settlers in Washington County, and his residency there spanned nearly half a century. He was eighteen when he came to Arkansas from Hardeman County, Tennessee, about spring of 1830, with his father Solomon Tuttle and other family members. Most of James' land holdings were in Richland Township (16N28W) near that of another early settler, Thomas Smith, whose daughter Eveline he married about 1840. The crossroads community at Routes 74 and 303 still is known by the Tuttle name.

James M. was born in Giles County, Tennessee in June 1811. His father had gone there from Jackson County, Georgia, about 1807, and the family had remained there until about 1820 when they moved on further westward to Hardeman County. James' mother Mary Patrick Tuttle, the daughter of John Patrick who had also migrated from Jackson County to Giles County.

"Mid", as James was called, was a great traveler. He made frequent journeys to New Orleans on business, visited aunts and uncles and cousins in Missouri, sought and bought land in various outflung places in Texas, and even made a trip "round the horn" to the gold country in California about 1851, probably seeking a bit of "fortune" to offset losses he had sustained earlier in his horse trading enterprises. It is probable that farming alone could not command his total interest and energy. He served as a member of the State Legislature in 1862. His obituary noted that he was the officer in command at the burial of one of Washington County's most illustrious citizens, Colonel Archibald Yell who fell in the Mexican War. During the Civil War years, he remained mostly in Washington County, although he safe-havened his family in eastern Texas, and for his wartime services he was thereafter known as Colonel Tuttle. Whether the title was an actual or honorific one, it is evident his contemporaries thought it was truly earned.

James and Eveline were the parents of four daughters. Apparently resigned to the fact he would have no sons, he saw to it that his daughter was given his first name, and throughout her long life she was always called "Jimmie". His daughters were: 1) Mary Jane (Mollie), born 1843; married in 1864 in Clarksville, Texas to James C. Brown; died in 1925 in Hot Springs, Arkansas, where she is buried. They had five children: Lulu Madeline, Maude Augusta, Howard Middleton, Marie Estelle and Vincent DePaul. 2) Madeleine Evelyn (Med), born 1845; married Judge William E. Wootten in Clarksville; died in 1923 in Hot Springs, buried in Clarksville. They had 10 children: Hinton, Tuttle, Evelyn, William E., Madeleine, Ellen, John T., Middleton Lane, Gilbert Hay, and Nannie S. 3) Nancy Evaline (Nannie), born 1847; married James A. Ferguson in 1868 in Fayetteville; died there in 1921, and buried in Evergreen Cemetery. Their children were: George S., James W., Arthur L., Augusta E., Harry and John Middleton. 4) Irene James (Jimmie Irene), born 1851; married first in 1868 in Fayetteville to William D. Patton, widowed in 1881 when her husband, the Fayetteville marshal, was ambushed and assassinated in the town; moved with her four surviving children to Santa Ana, California where she married a second time in 1887 to Charles A. Preston, and where she died in 1929. By her first husband she had six children: Beulah Irene, Tuttle, James Tuttle, Madeleine, Nannie and Nanine; by her second husband, one daughter, Evelyn A.

James M. Tuttle died at his home in Richland Township on 1 October 1878, and he is buried in the Mount Comfort Cemetery. His wife Eveline died in 1893.

Home built by William Donnel Cunningham in 1840. Bricks were dug and fired on the property. The original pillars were huge pine trees hauled by ox wagon from near Bentonville. The home is still occupied.

Nathan Washburn Tuttle

Nathan Washburn Tuttle, born September 12, 1802 in Georgia, was the oldest son of Soloman and Mary (Patrick) Tuttle, pioneer settlers of the Mt. Comfort community northwest of Fayetteville, in this county. The subject apparently was named after his paternal grandmother, Rebecca Washburn, who married James Tuttle, Jr. Nathan was a circuit riding preacher of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. On February 2, 1826 he married Ann Elizabeth "Annaliza" Riddle, who was born May 7, 1807 at Rowan County, North Carolina daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Slater) Riddle. She was the granddaughter of Stephen Riddle, who established Riddle's Ferry on the Yadkin River in North Carolina in 1777.

Nathan Tuttle's farm, southeast of the Mt. Comfort Cemetery, later became the Washington County Poor Farm. Nathan died at the age of 37 years on October 26, 1839 leaving reportedly three daughters, but as of now, the middle one, Martha Green Whitacor, remains only a name. Annaliza Caroline "Callie" Tuttle, born June 5, 1827 in Tennessee and married Benjamin Henderson "Hence" Wilson, had four daughters before her death in 1855. Mary Elizabeth "Mate" Tuttle, born September 6, 1835 married George Singleton "Sing" Trammell, and they and their eight children lived at Tuttle, Arkansas. Around 1847, the mother, Ann, second married widower Thomas Smith, a prominent farmer and miller of Tuttle, Arkansas. The two room brick home they lived in during the Civil War, where bushwhackers burned Tom's feet in the fireplace, is still standing, just east of Tuttle. No evidence is left now of the one-hundred pioneer cemetery on this farm, behind the house and barn, where her daughter Callie was buried. Tom and Ann Smith's graves are in the Tuttle Cemetery, as are the Trammells.

Solomon Tuttle, b. October 12, 1777, in Virginia; d. January 18, 1854, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Solomon Tuttle

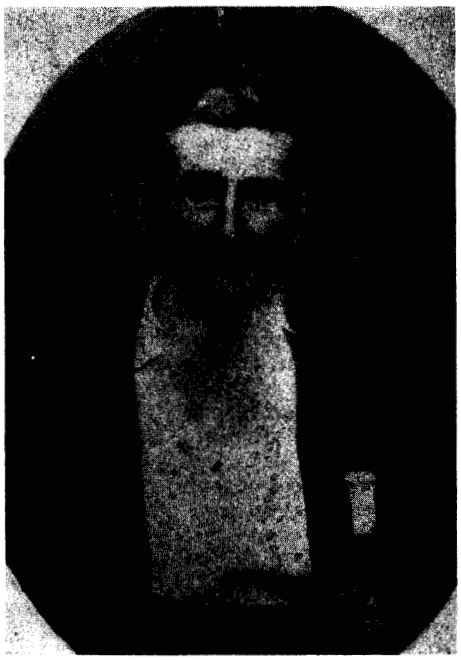
The Tuttles came from Norfolk County, England, in 1637. They were always land owners. They bought and sold at a profit, always moving on to newer country. In 1829, Solomon Tuttle came with his family and his son-in-law, William Donnel Cunningham, to Washington County and settled at Mount Comfort. Cunningham staked off seven acres to be used as a church and his wife, Jane, named it Mt. Comfort from the church she had loved in Tennessee.

Solomon Tuttle was born October 12, 1777, in Virginia, and married Mary Patrick. Their children were Mary Jane Tuttle, born September 27, 1800, in Georgia, died March 27, 1878, at Mt. Comfort, Washington County, Arkansas. She married William Donnel Cunningham, born July 7, 1797, in Virginia, died February 15, 1876, in Washington County, Arkansas. Our record shows seven children, although others may have died young.

Nathan Washburn Tuttle, born September 12, 1802, died October 26, 1839. He married Annaliza Biddle, born May 7, 1807, died 1866. Nathan was a circuit-riding preacher from the Mt. Comfort Church. After his death, his widow married Thomas Smith. Nathan and Annaliza Tuttle had three children.

Rebecca Wily Tuttle, born October 12, 1804, in Tennessee. No further record.

Margaret Mariam Tuttle, born 1806 in Tennessee. She was 22 when the family came to Arkansas. It is believed that she did not come to Arkansas with the family. It is possible that she was married and continued to live in Tennessee.



William Donnel Cunningham, b. July 7, 1797; died February 15, 1876.

Solomon Tuttle Cunningham, b. April 15, 1836; d. August 1917.

James Middleton Tuttle, born June, 1811, in Tennessee, died 1878 in Washington County, Arkansas. He married Evangeline Smith, born 1814, died 1893. They had four children.

John Milton Tuttle, born September 23, 1814, in Tennessee. He grew to manhood in Mt. Comfort, Arkansas, and married a Mary _____. He owned a farm formerly known as the Irish McMannus place, about a mile northeast of Mt. Comfort church and adjoining the former site of Ozark Institute.

Mary Alvira Tuttle, born September 23, 1817, died 1859. She married James Chestnut Pittman, born 1809, died 1847. They had seven children. After his death, she married James West and had three more children.

Martha Almina Tuttle, born September 23, 1817 (twin with Mary Alvira).

Eliza Mariah Tuttle, born August 17, 1818, in Tennessee, died February 21, 1883. She married Rev. Isaac Taylor Nolen on November 21, 1843. He was born September 5, 1813, died 1848. They had two children, one of whom grew to maturity.

William Donnel Cunningham was born July 7, 1797, in Virginia. He died in Fayetteville, Arkansas, February 14, 1876. He was the son of Samuel Cunningham and Jane Donnel, both of Virginia. Samuel Cunningham was actively engaged in selling supplies to the Revolutionary troops. William Donnel Cunningham was married to Mary Jane Tuttle, who was born in Georgia September 27, 1800. She died in Washington County, Arkansas, 1878. Both are buried in the Mt. Comfort Cemetery.

William Donnel Cunningham and Mary Jane Tuttle were the parents of the following children:

Leroy Brown ("Doc") Cunningham, born January 21, 1822, in Tennessee, died 1863. He was a practicing physician with Dr. Charles Deane. He was State Treasurer in 1862. A Confederate bill in the writer's possession bears the name of Leroy Cunningham as State Treasurer. He went to California on the Gold Rush, serving as physician for a wagon train. He was hung by Mountain Federals during the Civil War. He had married Mary N. and had two children. The shock of his death killed his wife. The children, Willie and Lelia Cunningham, were adopted by his brother, Solomon Tuttle Cunningham. Willie died at the age of 17 and is buried in Mt. Comfort Cemetery. Lelia married a Mr. Mayes and lived and died in Texas. Leroy Cunningham was the administrator of Solomon Tuttle's will.

William Riley ("Lee") Cunningham, born April 15, 1824, in Tennessee. Believed to have been killed by Mountain Feds during the War. He married Mary A. Parks, the daughter of Aaron and Nancy Parks. They had three children, Mary Lee Cunningham, born October 4, 1858; William Parks Cunningham, born July 21, 1861; and Gussie Cunningham, born July 21, 1863.

John Milton Cunningham, born January 5, 1832. He lived on the old McMannus farm north of Mt. Comfort. No further record.

Mary Jane Cunningham, born February 13, 1834, married Thomas K. May and moved to Clarksville, Arkansas, where May operated a successful general store for many years. T. K. May was the first postmaster at Low Gap, Arkansas. Children of T. K. May and Mary Jane Cunningham were Lavina Clementine May, William Alfred May, Charles Walter May, Mary Louise May, married a Harden, died in 1960. Names of other children are not known.

Solomon Tuttle Cunningham, born April 15, 1836, died August, 1917, buried Mt. Comfort Cemetery. He married Emily ("Julia") Henbest, born December 27,1843, at Marshall, Illinois. She died November, 1919. Solomon Tuttle Cunningham was a veteran of the Civil War. He served in Co. C, 1st Arkansas Cavalry of the Confederate army. He was wounded at Vicksburg and was an invalid for years after the war ended. He served as a Scout for the army, carried a diary, and his memoirs contain orders carried out during the service. He was superintendent of the Washington County Home (for the poor) for several years.

Children of Solomon Tuttle Cunningham and Emily ("Julia") Henbest are as follows: Fairie Maude Cunningham, born April 4, 1868, died 1941. She married William Roswell Cannon January 1, 1889, by the Rev. Giles H. Henderson in Mt. Comfort Church. William Roswell Cannon was born July 5, 1860, to Bird Joseph Cannon and Sevarine Gociotte, whose parents came from France to New Orleans about 1700. The Cannon family came from Scotland. William R. Cannon attended Cane Hill College. He was a farmer and market gardener, and lived at Mt. Comfort for 45 years. William Roswell Cannon and Fairie Mae Cunningham were the parents of ten children.

Coda Cunningham, born 1873, died 1932; married Bertha Appleby born 1871, died 1950. She was the daughter of John T. Appleby and Myra Stanfield Appleby. John T. Appleby was the son of Hezekiah, a Mt. Comfort pioneer who came from Tennessee.

Cooa Cunningham and Bertha Appleby Cunningham were the parents of Ruth Cunningham, who married (1) Mr. Keltner and (2) James Garriott; and Myra Jane Cunningham, married Berkley Pace. They live in California.

Mattie Mariah Cunningham, born November 2, 1838, died 1887; married John B. Neal of Lowell, Arkansas. No further record except gravestone in Mt. Comfort Cemetery; "Mattie C. Neal, b. 1838; d. 1887."

Margaret Elizabeth Cunningham, born November 30, 1842, in the old brick home at Mt. Comfort, Arkansas. Died 1924, in Los Angeles, California, and is buried there. Married to James Grace in Arkansas. Her two children died, first child, Gertrude, second in infancy. The information in this book about Mt. Comfort and the Cunningham family is due in large measure to Mrs. Grace's faithfulness in collecting and preserving the early letters and other records.

G. W. Umbaugh

G. W. Umbaugh and Mary Ellenor Focht were married November 13, 1870, in Cridersville, Ohio. He was a widower with three young daughters. Very little is known about these children. G. W. served as a Lutheran minister for twenty-five years. Mary E.'s great-grandfather arrived in New York from Germany in time to fight three years in the Revolutionary War. G. W. and Mary E.'s children: Dora (1871) and Loy (1873), were born in Ohio. Clem was born in Indiana in 1875. Seeking a warmer climate for G. W.'s health, the family moved to Leighton, Alabama, where Ada (1887), Lola (1880) and George Ernest (1882) were born.

G. W. and Mary E. probably heard about the growing agricultural area of Springdale from pastor of Salem Lutheran Church, A. Sloan Bartholemew, the son of the pastor who married the couple. In March 1884, Mary E. bought about seven and two-thirds acres located in the southwest part of town. A large Victorian-style house and a barn were built on the northeast corner of the property. An apple orchard was planned for the rest of the land. The approximate homestead was located between the now-existing streets of Meadow and Maple and Shiloh and Maple Drive. At the same time, G. W. bought forty acres some distance south and west of Springdale.

Twins, Manta and Everett, were born in October 1884, but they died before they were six months old. They were the first members of the family to be buried in the Lutheran Cemetery. Ollie Laurel was born in July 1887.

G. W. died in December 1890 at the age of 58, leaving Mary E. alone to manage her family and farms. She sold lots from time to time and mortgaged her property to her brother, who lived out of state, for cash.

Dora married Edgar Masoner from Cane Hill, Arkansas in 1894. Five of their eight children were born in Springdale. This family later moved to Tulsa, Oklahoma where Edgar and Dora died.

Mary E. and Lola remained members of the Lutheran Church. The rest of the children drifted away from the Lutheran faith. Several joined Presbyterian churches. All the children attended as much school as was available. Lola obtained a teaching certificate and taught in the Springdale schools in the early 1900s. She later attended college in Kansas and Chicago. Ollie became the first member of the family to have her name on the senior walk at the University of Arkansas when she graduated in 1907. She later married Abe Collins, a lawyer from Sevier County. They lived the rest of their lives in DeQueen, Arkansas where their daughter and son were born.

Ada married Walter Dodson from Cuba, Missouri, in 1906. For awhile, they lived in Missouri, where their son, Robert was born in 1912. They returned to Springdale and in 1916 built a house on a lot next to Mary E. Walter and Loy owned a grocery store on the north side of Emma Avenue.

Loy had married Myrtle Haxton in 1911. She was the high-spirited daughter of S. N. Haxton, owner of the woolen mill which was located on the creek which ran through town. Myrtle had been courted by Clem, but for some reason, their marriage was called off. Loy and Myrtle had a son, Richard, born in 1915.

Clem was a member of the Springdale Company A of the Arkansas National Guard. The company was given a festive send-off in June 1916 when it left for duty in Mexico to fight Pancho Villa. Although the men did not see much action, they did have many adventures. Clem never married and died as a result of the influenza epidemic in 1919.

A new house in the simpler Prairie style of the time was built in 1910 to replace the family home which had been destroyed by fire. One bitter cold winter day, a boarder had built too big a fire in an upstairs wood stove. The heat set the attic on fire and soon the "biggest house fire Springdale had ever seen" made town news. This fire and several business fires led to the organization of the Volunteer Fire Department in September 1909. George Ernest was a charter member and served twenty years on the department, a respected businessman in the community, who owned the Style Shop on the south side of Emma Avenue for many years, made buying trips to Chicago and bought from fine fashion houses. The store became a favorite of many well-dressed women of the area. It closed in June 1929 when low-top shoes became the rage. G. E. was overstocked with high-topped shoes.

Lola resigned her position as head of the Domestic Science Department of Agricultural State College in Russellville, Arkansas in 1925. She had been at the school about ten years when she came home to take care of her aging mother. She died after a short illness in 1928, leaving G. E. alone to care for Mary E., who died in 1938 at the age of 87.

Loy also died in 1928. Myrtle and Richard continued to live in Springdale.

Robert Dodson graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1933 with a civil engineering degree. He and his parents moved to Shreveport, Louisiana, where Walter and Ada died, and Robert and his wife still live. They have five children.

G. E. became an Arkansas Revenue Agent in the early thirties and collected the newly enacted state sales tax. He began work as a feed salesman for Jeff D. Brown in 1937. It was on a Saturday morning call at Smith's Store in West Fork, Arkansas, that he met a young widow, Zola Emerson Edwards. Her maternal ancestors from Tennessee had settled in that area in 1837. Her father came to West Fork from Georgia as a young boy shortly after the Civil War. G. E. asked Zola if he could call on her sometime. She shyly said, "Yes". Five months later, November 8, 1941, they were married at his sister Ollie's home in DeQueen.

In October 1943, Zola presented G. E. with a daughter, Mary Elnor. Shortly after Mary's birth, G. E. went to work for S. and E. Wholesale Company as a salesman.

In the spring of 1942, Richard Umbaugh married Juanita Shinpaugh of Springdale. Their daughter, Geneva, was born the following January. Richard was serving in the U. S. Army where he saw duty in North Africa, Sicily and Italy. Juanita and Geneva moved to California where Juanita worked in a defense plant.

After the war, Richard and Juanita returned to Springdale. Juanita planned and had built a new home on North Shiloh Street. Their daughter, Joanne, was born in September 1948. Richard established himself as a car salesman and later sold truck parts for a local company. Juanita sold Stanley Home Products and helped her parents with their businesses. Richard died of a sudden heart attack in February 1970. His mother, Myrtle, died the following June at the age of 92. Juanita lives in Springdale where she was a real-estate agent until her retirement in October 1987.

Geneva graduated from the University of Arkansas and married David L. Powers from Poplar Bluff, Missouri the same year. David is a partner in Hailey-Powers-Froning Architects. After receiving her Master of Music degree in Voice, Geneva is now teaching choral music at Springdale Central Junior High. She also serves as choir director of the First United Methodist Church. They became the parents of Travis Lee in March 1978.

Joanne married Gene Allen Franco, whose parents live in Elm Springs, in 1966. Their son, Gene Jr. (Gino) was born in October 1967. Gene graduated from the University of Arkansas in June 1971. Two weeks later, he and another young man were brutally killed during a robbery of the Safeway Grocery Store on the corner of Thompson and Emma. Their murderer was caught, tried and convicted of their deaths and the critical wounding of a third youth. He served the rest of his life in prison. On February 29, 1972, the child Gene did not have time to know about was born. Jon David was named for his paternal grandfather and Uncle David Powers. Joanne and her sons continue to live in Springdale. Gino has become the next generation to attend the University of Arkansas.

G. E. Umbaugh suffered a heart attack in 1947. He immediately retired to save his health and spend as much time as he had with his wife and daughter. At that time, he sold his father's forty acres. A large grape vineyard was on the farm, which today lies on the south side of Sunset Avenue between Gutensohn and Carley Road.

G. E. died October 3, 1949, after his third heart-attack. Zola and Mary continued to live in the family home on Meadow Avenue. Zola took in boarders for a few years so she could stay at home to raise her daughter. She was an active member of the First Christian Church and helped with many school and neighborhood activities. She died in December 1969 after a brief illness.

Mary graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1965 and taught in Springdale for twelve years. November 20, 1976 she married Russell F. Self, Jr., son of Russell and Virginia Self. Mary and Russell have no children to enjoy the big old house that Mary grew up and lived in until her marriage, but they still maintain the property that has now been in the family one-hundred and four years.

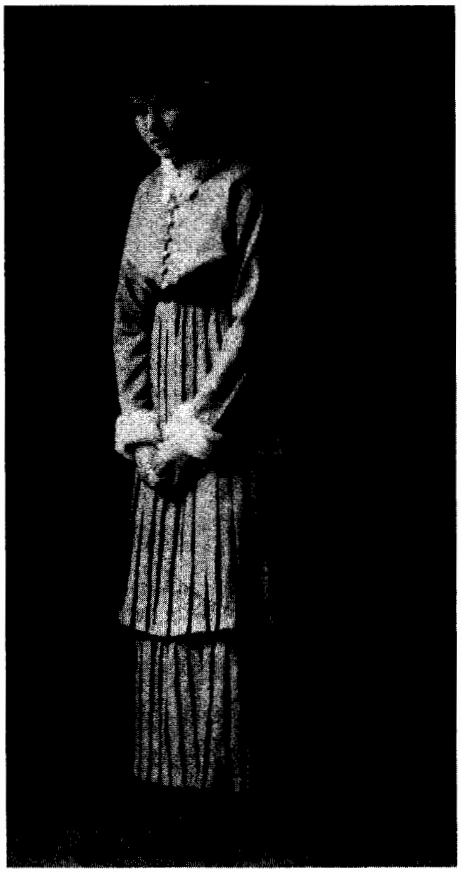
Cora May Upton

"My Grandpa Upton was a Northerner, a Republican, and a Baptist; and my Grandpa Tuck was a Southerner, a Democrat and a Christian", my mother, May often told me.

The Upton Family - Vale, Arkansas about 1910. Joseph Allen and Linnie (Tuck) Upton. Their children (L to R): Cora May Upton, Lelia W. Upton, Charles R. Upton, and J. Elmer Upton.



Cora May Upton (age 18) ca.1914 in Van Buren, Arkansas.

Cora May Upton, first child of Joseph Allen Upton and Belinda Laura Tuck, was born May 17, 1896 in Greenland. Joseph and Linnie had four other children: Lelia, Charles Ralph, Joseph Elmer, and Helen.

May's Grandpa Upton was John Wesley Upton, born in Lawrence County, Arkansas, on an unusual date, February 29, 1828. His father, Joseph Upton, born in North Carolina, died in 1837, leaving four boys and two girls.

May's Grandma Upton was Martha Bowen, born 1830 in Tennessee. Martha's first ancestor in this country was John Bowen from Wales. His wife was Lily McIlhaney (Scotch-Irish). Their eight sons were Revolutionary soldiers. Martha's father, William B. Bowen, and mother, Levica McElhaney, were both born in Tennessee. They migrated to Madison County, Arkansas about 1834. With them, by 1840, were William's parents, Henry and Mary; and Levica's parents, John and Hannah (Bowen) McElhaney; as well as some of the Upton family from Lawrence County.

May Upton's Grandpa Tuck was William David Tuck, born 1848, in Missouri. His father, Richard Tuck, was from Virginia. William was a Confederate Militia Volunteer at a young age.

May's Grandma Tuck was Nancy Caroline Foster, born 1846 in Tennessee. Nancy's parents were Anthony and Lucinda Foster, both born in North Carolina. By wagon train, they migrated from Tennessee to the Osage Valley of Missouri about 1856, but because of the cold and damp, moved on to Benton County, Arkansas by 1860. By 1870, the Fosters and William D. Tuck were in Greenland, of Washington County, where William and Nancy Foster were married in 1871.

William and Nancy Tuck had five children. They were: Belle. Linnie, Nora, Charles David and Robert Coleman Tuck. Belle and Robert died at the age of 18, and Nora at age 16. Linnie married Joseph Allen Upton in 1894, soon after his family moved from Madison County to Greenland. Joseph's father, John Wesley Upton, served three years in the Union Army during the Civil War. In a letter dated May 27, 1865, John expresses his concern about the family in Huntsville, where Jayhawkers passed through robbing and stealing. They had stolen his son, Will's, hat. John W. and Martha Upton had fourteen children: (the first two died in infancy), William B., Peggy Jane, Vicie, Sadie, Betty, Polly, Nan, Sarah Tennessee, John Wesley, Joseph Allen, Martha and Isaiah Tucker Upton.

By the time Cora May Upton was twelve, her family had lived in Greenland, Fayetteville, Pea Ridge, Vale and Strickler. Her father, Joseph, was a salesman for a lumber company. May's grandparents, Upton, died when May was young, but she knew and enjoyed her grandparents, Tuck, who had moved to east Fayetteville. May's two parents, her four grandparents and her great-grandparents, Foster, are all buried at Sons Chapel in Fayetteville.

Cora May Upton met Leslie Jones in Strickler. They went to school together, and had many friends and good times. They married October 16, 1916 and lived in a little house on Fall Creek. Leslie worked three days a week as a rural mail carrier. As a young wife, May cooked on a wood stove, made their clothing on a borrowed sewing machine and did her "washing" down by the creek. She had first to build a fire, to heat water hauled from the creek, then to scrub the clothes. Leslie had two cows, two mules, hogs and chickens. He raised wheat and corn and had it ground at the mill for a portion of the flour. When someone butchered, the meat was shared, as there was no refrigeration. They raised their own vegetables and many fruits were available. With her "egg money", May would buy salt and sugar, fabrics and yarns.

On their third wedding anniversary, Leslie and May Jones and their two small children left for California where jobs were opening up in the oilfields. This was the beginning of a forty year career with Standard Oil Company. Leslie built his own house in La Habra, a town thirty miles east of Los Angeles. Here, three more children were born. The five children are: Mildred Fern (Brewster), James Allen, Claudia Irene (Miller), Leslie, Junior, and Carole May (Reevy). Leslie Jones died in 1982, and Cora May Upton Jones died in 1984. They had ten grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Ida C. VanDeventer

Ida Christobelle VanDeventer spent about three years of her childhood in Washington County, Arkansas. She was born in Lee County, Virginia March 8, 1868. She wrote the following account of her childhood years.

"The family left Virginia in 1868 going west, stopping a while in Prairie County, Arkansas, then to Johnson County, near Clarksville in 1871, and about 1877 to Fayetteville, Washington County, living a while in Fayetteville, then to a country place about three miles out, called " Sunnyside", then to "Edgewood", a large brick residence owned by Professor Leverett, near Mount Comfort Church and school house, where many of my childhood care-free days were spent. In 1880, we left Washington County, Arkansas, going overland to Colorado, with a company of others, including Mr. John Barnett's family, John West, Thomas Taylor and William Gilmore. We had with us a little black pony upon which my sister and I took turns riding across the plains. On one occasion, when I was riding, the pony became frightened by shots fired by the young men of the party, and I dismounted. I was behind the wagons, and the plain stretched far ahead with not even a rock or stump to assist me in mounting again, so I was reduced to the necessity of hiking to camp; into which at the close of the day limped a very tired girl leading her pony, to the surprise in camp, who had not thought worthwhile to stop and investigate my non-appearance before that time. We stopped at Pueblo for the summer. In August, the young people of the party drove to the mountains and climbed Pike's Peak, taking with them a pack mule and camping overnight at timber line. In November, 1880, the VanDeventer family left Colorado, going to Ray County, Missouri, where three of Mrs. VanDeventer's sisters were living, remained in Ray County for some years, going to Howell County in 1895 for a short time.

Ida Christobelle VanDeventer went to Kansas City in 1891 and became a legal stenographer. She worked at this for the rest of her working life. After extensive genealogical research she wrote a book in about 1943 entitled, "VanDeventer Genealogy".

This "VanDeventer Story" was compiled, written and submitted by Vincil C. Bishop, 5 Edgestone Drive, Little Rock, Arkansas 72205. His father: William Kenneth Bishop (1874-1946) was a second cousin of Ida Christobelle VanDeventer. Vincil's great-grandmother was Nancy W. Clark Bishop (1801-1891). Two of her brothers and two of her sisters married VanDeventers in Lee County, Virginia during the 1830s. See "Bishop Section" of this book.

VanDeventer Lineage: Jan Pieterson VanDeventer born in Holland, 1629, emigrated to New Netherlands (New York) 1662 in the ship "Hope". His son: Pieter Jansen VanDeventer, born 1653 in Holland. His son: Isaac VanDeventer baptized 1704 New York, died 1775, Loudoun County, Virginia. His son: Abraham VanDeventer baptized 1753, Huntington County, New Jersey, buried Mulberry Gap, Hancock County, Tennessee. His son: Thomas VanDeventer born 1779, Loudoun County, Virginia, died 1855, buried at Mulberry Gap Baptist Church, Hancock County, Tennessee. His son: William VanDeventer born about 1804-05 Claiborne County, Tennessee, died 1860, Lee County, Virginia, married Martha Clark, born 1812. His son: Houston VanDeventer born 1835 Lee County, Virginia, died 1926, Arlington, Texas, married Elizabeth Ann Barnett in 1861 in Lee County, Virginia, she was born in 1836 in Washington County, Virginia, died 1920 in Kansas City, Missouri. Their daughter: Ida Christobelle VanDeventer, born March 8, 1868, Lee County, Virginia, died probably during the latter 1940s in Kansas City, unmarried.

It is interesting to note that John Larkin VanDeventer, born 1936 lives on the homeplace of his grandfather, James Alexander VanDeventer (1863-1946) near Lone Branch Church, about ten miles southwest of Jonesville, Lee County, Virginia. John also lives about a mile from where his great-great-grandfather, Thomas VanDeventer (1779-1855) located when he came to the area about 1805 from Loudoun County, Virginia.

Pink Henry Van Hoose

The Van Hoose name appears to be associated with the Dutch and Germans. Their coat of arms indicates they were makers of clothing - tailors. It was 1839 when John Van Hoose (b. 1792, d. 1882) and Lydia Lewis Van Hoose (m. 1813) brought their family from Johnson and Floyd Counties, Kentucky and joined their already established friends and relatives. They settled on the Middle Fork of the White River in Eastern Washington County and here begins the story of the Northwest Arkansas Van Hooses.

Much has been written about the influence of this Van Hoose family on the history of Washington County. John and Lydia's Sons; Zachariah, Peter, Pink, James Hayden and George Washington (b. 1834, d. 1909), can be accredited with the major portion of the written history of early Washington County and Fayetteville.

Pink Henry Van Hoose & Jaunita Brown Van Hoose

Van Hoose descendants.

After George served his captaincy in the Confederate Army and his survival as a prisoner (1863) on Johnson's Island, Ohio he returned home to marry Nancy Rowden in 1867. One of George's three children Henry Bracken Van Hoose married Josephine Wilks Toney and on December 26, 1913 in Elkins, a son was born. They named him Pink Henry. Pink grew in defending his name and kids could criticize it only once. Pink attended school in Elkins and Harris before graduating from Fayetteville High School in 1932. After attending Civilian Military Training Camp at Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, Pink returned to his farm.

Pink married Juanita Brown (m. 3/17/34, b. 7/21/16) daughter of Albert W. Brown (b. 1894, d. 1949) and Naomi Fields Brown (b. 1896, d. 1920), later to become the stepdaughter of Leatha McKinney Brown (b. 1909) now Mrs. Tom B. Bell, Fayetteville.

In 1938 Pink and Juanita purchased the Mt. View Apple Farm located on Bear Mountain in the Baldwin Community from heirs of William A. (b. 1850, d. 1937) and Sarah Barham Brown (b. 1851, d. 1937), Juanita's grandparents, who pioneered and settled there in 1880 after their arrival from Tennessee. They continue to reside on and maintain the farm now known to be located on Van Hoose Drive, Fayetteville. Although the apple trees are long gone, Pink's love for the land prompted him to be one of the early supporters of soil and water conservation. He enjoyed growing many kinds of fruits and vegetables on this land which has now been converted to pasture and meadow in order to maintain his small cattle herd.

Due to the depression, Pink was forced to take a "town job" in order to provide for his family and keep the farm going. From 1945 until retirement in 1975 he was an employee of Ward Ice Cream Company in Fayetteville. His work included the manufacture, refrigeration and sales of ice cream. A favorite part of his work was providing a freezer and ice cream to rural stores that had just been "hooked up" to electricity. He still considers all his customers to be among his many friends.

For eighteen years, Juanita was also employed at Ward Ice Cream Company followed by eleven years as a bookkeeper for Washington County Circuit Clerk and Board of Education. She retired in 1983. Pink and Juanita are members of First Christian Church, Fayetteville and have performed various civic duties through the years.

They are the parents of: Donald Albert (b. 5/21/36, d. 5/22/36); Donna Josephine (b. 5/21/36); Jerre Max (b. 7/3/38) and Scott (b. 6/19/40). These children and their families have been a source of great satisfaction and joy to their parents. All three of the children were educated in the Fayetteville Public School System. Pink considers the influence of his children on present-day Washington County history to be a significant as that of the early Van Hoose pioneers.

Donna married Donald Francis Hahn (m. 2/3/57, b. 5/27/37) and they continue to reside on a portion of the family farm in the Fayetteville area. Don is a data processing executive and Donna is a homemaker and sewing instructor. Their children are: Donald Fred (b. 7/12/62) a Staff Sergeant in the USAF; Darin (b. 6/11/65) graduate of American College and employed in processing of microfiche and microfilm; Donita (b. 7/12/67) student at University of Arkansas majoring in Deal Communications and a member of the flag line in the Razorback band. Don, Donna and their children are members of the First Christian Church in Fayetteville.

Jerre married Judy Ann Harp (m. 6/10/63, b. 9/22/43, d. 2/13/87) and they lived in Springdale. Judy attended Baylor University, then graduated from the University of Arkansas College of Education with a B. S. and M. Ed. Before her accidental death in 1987, she was the musician for the First United Methodist Church of Springdale. Jerre graduated from the University of Arkansas and is Senior Vice-President of McGoodwin, Williams and Yates, Inc., Consulting Engineers, Fayetteville. He is active in many civic, cultural and educational endeavors. Their children are: J. Max (b. 4/7/68), student, University of Arkansas College of Engineering; Jill Ann (b. 7/9/69), student, University of Arkansas College of Business; Justin Colby (b. 3/14/79) third grade student at Walker Elementary, Springdale.

Scott married Donna House (m.7/10/74, b. 6/17/43) and they live in Morrilton, Arkansas. Donna is a graduate of the University of Arkansas College of Education and is an English teacher. Scott is a graduate of the University of Arkansas where he majored in Physical Education. He has coached in the Springdale, Fayetteville, Jacksonville and Atkins school systems. Scott and Donna now own and operate "The Chicken Place" frozen food stores in Morrilton and Conway, specializing, in the sale of products produced by Tyson foods of Springdale, Arkansas. Their daughter Kurtsy Lee (b. 5/5/75), is a junior high school student. They are members of the Presbyterian Church and active in civic affairs.

Pink's story would not be complete without making mention of his heritage of courage and pioneer spirit which has seen him through a great number of physical obstacles and his continued dedication to work.

Several Washington County physicians have played a vital part in Pink's life and he can truly call them his friends.

Perhaps the respect and pride for his family name reflects and answer to the age-old question, "What's in a name?". History will be the judge.

Peter Marsalis Van Winkle

Peter Marsalis Van Winkle was a large Dutchman - not only in physical size, but in abilities, accomplishments, influence and character. The first lumber king in northwest Arkansas, he accomplished a successful business career twice - before and after the Civil War.

Peter and Temperance Van Winkle and sons, Calvin, Norman, Thomas Jefferson, Robert Lee and Wallace.

Peter was born February 25, 1814 in New York City. He was the youngest of five children of Helmich Isaac Van Winkle and Antji Von Houlin and grandchild of Jacob Walingen Van Winkle who came to the USA on the ship "King David" in 1634. As a young boy (date unknown) he moved with his family to Illinois. As a young man, he married Francis Wilcox and they had no children. On May 3, 1840 he married Temperance Miller, daughter of John and Mary (Polly) Miller. The Miller family came to Arkansas from Indiana and lived in Washington County. In 1841, Peter bought a farm west of Fayetteville. Always mechanically inclined and creative, he enjoyed making wagons, hacks and plows. He made the first spring wagon used by the gold miners going to California gold mines in 1849. Peter farmed until 1851 when he moved to the timberland in eastern Benton County and set up a sawmill. His first mill was located on the White River near the Van Winkle ferry and was powered by oxen (shod like horses) walking in a circle harnessed to machinery to operate the saws. In 1858, he opened a second mill a few miles away in Little Clifty. It was operated by steam with logs hauled in by special heavy carts pulled by six mule teams. He soon had a shingle, machine, door and window factory and a cabinet shop. Peter acquired a large amount of land in Washington, Benton and Madison Counties and accumulated considerable wealth. By the time the Civil War broke out, Peter and Tempy had nine children. He took his family, including about twenty slaves and moved to De Kalb, Texas. The Northern troops had already entered his home and taken provisions. It is said a Yankee horseman rode into the parlor on his horse and slashed the walls of each side with his saber. One time, his daughter, Mary refused to tell the invading officer where her father and brothers were and shook her hairbrush in his face and ordered them away. Peter buried his gold pieces (approximately $4,000.00) in a metal box on his homeplace feeling it safer there than on the road with him when he went to Texas. After war, he found the box in pieces and only one gold piece nearby. His mills were destroyed and his business gone, but with his grit and perserverance, he borrowed the necessary cash and rebuilt an even better mill. He went to St. Louis and bought machinery. It was shipped by barge down the Mississippi River to the Arkansas and up to Van Buren. The haul over the Boston Mountains of the large boilers and heavy machines in the 1860s was truly a remarkable feat. A man who took part said many years later that "every step was a nightmare. Roads had to be chopped; bridges improvised; camps maintained; food provided for the men and the oxen. The story of that trip should be worthy of a saga". The flywheel for the engine was said to be 24' diameter and weighed five tons and was hauled overland from Rolla, Missouri, nearest railway station. The flywheel was in sections with a hub as large as a locomotive drive wheel. Peter assembled the wheel and secured it with a mixture of salt, vinegar and iron filings so tightly that when it was disassembled during World War I some fifty years later, it was necessary to use dynamite. The wheel was so delicately balanced it would cut at least another log after the power was turned off. Peter soon had added a grist mill as well as the facilities to make everything necessary to build houses except the hardware. Most of the major buildings in Fayetteville and Eureka Springs were made with Van Winkle lumber. In 1880, he built the grand hotel in Fayetteville that bore his name and his son-in-law Captain Jack Steele was its first proprietor. He continued to acquire more and more land - some as foreclosures and back taxes. When he died in 1882 at the age of 68 while walking down the streets of the new town, Rogers, he had a vast estate and was a most respected man. A special railroad car was brought from St. Louis to carry his body to Fayetteville for a Masonic burial in Evergreen Cemetery.

Peter and Temperance had twelve children - seven boys and five girls: Ann born 1841 married Martin K. Walker who came to War Eagle as a tutor for the Van Winkle children; Mary born 1844 married John Bell (Jack) Steele who came to War Eagle as an apprentice turner by 1860 but organized a calvary brigade when the Civil War broke out, courted Mary through the war years and married her after the war in Springdale (see sketch); Calvin born 1845 died in the Civil War; George Washington born 1846 died at age 16; Ellen born 1847 married J. A. C. Blackburn and had three daughters before she died young - one of her daughters was Carrie who married Ed Kruse and lived all her life in the Rogers area. J. A. C. Blackburn bought out the Van Winkle Mills and continued them successfully; Emily born 1849 married J. K. P. Springfield who carried on the lumber business in War Eagle. Norman born 1851 a lumberman in Eureka Springs and Rogers; Lucy born 1856 died during her teens; Jefferson Davis born 1861 married Ada Pape and had four sons, Gordon, Tom, Arthur, and C. P. In 1900, he became state school textbook agent for B. F. Johnson Publishing Company in Ft. Smith. Later, he was a bookstore owner in Dallas, Texas; Robert Lee born 1863 who became Mayor of Oklahoma City; William Wallace born 1865 who lived in New Mexico, Lamesa, Texas and died in Lowell, Arkansas and had a large family; and Peter Jr. who married Elenor and was a minister in Chicago.

Peter built at least three homes - one before the war and a showplace after the war. He is said to have boasted that not one board with a flaw was used in it. It had ten rooms, all 18' square with 10' ceilings. The third home was in Lowell - a lovely two-story home with a turret. Temperance lived there after Peter's death. The first home was burned during the war, the second was taken down when Beaver Lake was built. The Lowell home was destroyed by fire during the 1960s.

Peter was an honored Mason and a member of the Primitive Baptist Church. He is said to have said: "Only a fool wishes - a wise man works for what he wants!"

James "Jim" Vanhook

Vanhooks were coming to Washington County, Arkansas, expecially Springdale, by around the 1950s after many of them having been somewhat flushed out of the Big Clifty Creek area around Beaver Lake by the water that was to come.

James "Jim" Vanhook (1823-1910) left the Somerset, Kentucky area around 1883 with his family headed toward the Ozarks, presumably, by covered wagon. There would have been along: Jim; wife Margaret (1844-1899); son, James "Jim" (1873-1958); son Robert "Bob" (1881-1972); daughter Mary Ellen (1877-1892); and daughter Jennie (1879-1956). These were the parents and young children.

The father, Jim, had been married before to a wife Mary Jane Morgan Vanhook, who had died after they had produced three sons.

It very likely was a sad parting when they left Kentucky. It had probably been home to the family for a long time, and there is little doubt that they were leaving behind many friends and loved ones. To this day, there are many Vanhooks in that area that spell the name one way or another. They must have been looking to a long, slow, and difficult trip with many hardships as they departed their old home. Perhaps they thought they would never see Kentucky again, as indeed, they did not ever.

Vanhooks have gathered in modern times in Somerset, Kentucky from many states for annual reunions.

It is believed that all or most Vanhooks in America have a common Dutch ancestor, Isaac Van Hook or perhaps Isaac Van Hoek, who came early to this country to the Dutch New Amsterdam colony that was to become the English New York.

The spelling of the family name has gone through a few changes and variations down through the years. For example, some spell it in one word and some in two.

There is a city of Hoek in Holland, and there was a city of Van Hook in North Dakota before the waters of a lake displaced it.

One might speculate on what that trip for Jim Vanhook's family was like; what they ate, how they slept, who they saw, how they crossed the Mississippi River and so on, as they traveled from Eastern Kentucky to Southwest Missouri. Probably, they camped and cooked out along the way and crossed the river on a ferry. They might have come across a few gamblers, drifters and outlaws along the way. They might have been in the company of fellow travelers. It is believed that some uncles and older sons of Jim's came that general direction also.

They did arrive in Missouri and lived short times in each of two small communities of that border state that Jesse and Frank James had so recently roamed. Those towns were Rocky Comfort and Southwest City. Two more children, Samuel (1886-1918) and Emma (1884-1981) were born in the latter in the southwest corner of the state.

Soon the family moved to Rogers, Arkansas, buying property in what is now the western part of the city, living there a short time, and then, moving to the rugged hills of the Big Clifty Creek area of Carroll County, Arkansas.

There, Vanhooks flourished for over half a century. There were many of them living there in the confines of this beautiful, narrow, rugged valley with its many large cliffs and limestone formations and cut through by the clear water of Big Clifty Creek.

Sadly, the years there for Margaret Smith Vanhook were not to be many as she passed away in 1899, never seeing the twentieth century.

Her husband, Jim, lived on there until 1910, with son Jim, dying there in 1958 at an old age.

Samuel Vanhook went to California as a young married man and died in the flu epidemic of 1918.

Mary Ellen had her life cut very short as she died at about the age of fifteen, in 1892.

Jennie married Alvin Rambo and Emma married Calvin Evans. Both families were large.

Bob, Jim and many of their descendants lived and worked on big Clifty for many years, doing a lot of timber cutting and livestock raising.

After years of rumors of the coming of Beaver Dam, it became a reality, relocating Vanhooks, some to the Rogers and Springdale areas of Arkansas. Bob was one of those who came to Springdale around 1960, finishing out his years here in Washington County until 1972. His wife, Margaret "Maggie" Clark Vanhook also died here a few years earlier.

There were to be found many descendants and relatives of the brother from Kentucky, Jim and Bob Vanhook, around Springdale, Washington County, Arkansas since about the late 1950s. To this day, in 1987, there are still many here in various occupations and pursuits.

Andrew J. Vanlandingham

Even though Andrew Jackson Vanlandingham has many descendants living in this county today, his stay here was as brief as that of his previous residences. His relocation, four times in three different states during four decades, has made this researcher, a great-great granddaughter, very frustrated at times.

Andrew was born September 3, 1824, the second of two children born to Daniel and Mary Buoy Vanlandingham of Pendleton County, Kentucky. When Andrew was four, his mother was granted a divorce from Daniel.

Andrew married Elizabeth (Eliza) (maiden name believed to be Rollins) sometime before 1846. They lived on a farm in Pendleton County, Kentucky before moving to Missouri around 1853. Andrew and Eliza's children were: Robert R., born 1846, M. E. (Marg) born 1848, Isabelle J. born 1840, George W. born circa 1854, Theophelas Jackson born 1857, Charles Edward born 1849, Francis L. born 1864, and Elonzo N., born 1869.

It is not known why Andrew relocated his family so many times as no documented evidence has been found to verify some of the oral family history that has been passed down. This oral family history tells that Andrew rode with William Quantrill in the guerrilla warfare that existed in Missouri during the Civil War era. Being southern sympathizers in a northern state apparently caused many hardships for this family. Many Missourian families stayed on opposing sides for many years following the close of the Civil War and it is probably because of this that the family is believed to have gotten separated. It is not known what became of some of Andrew's children or of his wife, Eliza, but Andrew came to Washington County, Arkansas sometime before 1882.

In August 1882, he became the first postmaster at Rugby, Arkansas, which was discontinued in July 1883. That post office later re-opened in December 1884; and in December 1886, the name was changed to Staunton. In 1909, the post office was renamed to the present Greenland.

Andrew and Eliza's son, Charles Edward Vanlandingham married Henrietta Viola Malone, born November 5, 1856 in Lacon, Illinois, the daughter of Samuel and Martha Mariah Malone. Shortly after their marriage on March 17, 1887 in Lamar, Barton County, Missouri, Charles and Henrietta moved to northwest Arkansas and homesteaded 160 acres in Southwest Madison County. After their arrival to the area, someone told Charles that there was another Vanlandingham in the vicinity. When Charles went to meet this "tall, handsome man", he was unexpectedly reunited with his father, Andrew. Before Charles' first son was born in 1890, Andrew is believed to have died in the Winslow area, and was brought to the Walnut Grove Cemetery in Crosses for burial. Charles and Viola died in 1940 and are buried next to Andrew and Viola's mother, Martha. Charles and Viola had the following children: Clement Lester Vanlandingham and Clifford Dinsmore Vanlandingham.

Clement Lester Vanlandingham was born September 11, 1890, married Callie Vandora Davenport, daughter of George H. and Nancy Ledford Davenport. They were farmers in Madison County where they resided all of their lives. Lester died in 1947 and Callie died in 1964. They are both buried in the Pinnacle Cemetery, Madison County. They had the following children: Carl Edward Vanlandingham, born 1915, married Wilma Dunaway. They reside in rural Elkins and have one son, Carl Anthony Vanlandingham, of West Fork. Lola Irene Vanlandingham born 1918, married Dewell Don (Dood) Drain and they reside in Fayetteville. Irene and Dood have four children: Joyce Drain Thompson and Glen Drain of Fayetteville, and Leon Drain and Nancy Drain Haflinger of West Fork. Doris Helen Vanlandingham born 1920, resides in Elkins and was married to the late, Russell Smith. Her two sons are Larry of rural Elkins, and Gary, who is enlisted in the U. S. Air Force and currently stationed at Vandenberg Air Force Base, California. John Clifford Vanlandingham born 1923, married the former Geraldine Ledford. They lived in Myrtle Point, Oregon until John's death in 1983. They have two children who reside in Oregon: John Clifford Vanlandingham and Debra Vanlandingham Bushnell. Dewey Leonard Vanlandingham born 1925, never married and presently resides on his parents' homeplace. Nancy Viola Vanlandingham born 1929, married Russell Halton Dyke. Paula Dyke Williford and Sherryl Dyke Barger of Fayetteville and Carlos Dyke of rural Elkins. Edna Lucille Vanlandingham, born 1935, married Bobby Nolen Hankins and later divorced. Edna resides in Elkins and has four children: Roger Hankins of Lowell, Beverly Hankins Mabry and Brenda Hankins Jones of Elkins, and Becky Hankins Ramey of Fayetteville.

Clifford Dinsmore Vanlandingham born March 21, 1893 married Drue Ester Combs, granddaughter of pioneer Hiram Combs of Madison County. Clifford had been an employee of Phillips Petroleum Company for thirty years before his death in 1959 in Kanawa, Oklahoma. They had one son, the late Joe Edd Vanlandingham, formerly of Monte Vallo, Alabama. Drue resides in Fayetteville. Floy Goldie Vanlandingham born December 15, 1894 married twice, first to Oren F. Foster and later to Richard Hankins. Goldie lived in Madison County until her death in 1983. She had no children. Blake Gerald Vanlandingham born April 30, 1897, was a veteran of both World War I and World War II, he was captured by the Japanese at Corregidor in the Phillippine Islands during World War II. Blake was married to Sophia De Vorsoza and had one child, Anita Viola Vanlandingham. After Blake was liberated in early 1945, he was unable to locate his wife and child. He later re-married, to Mrs. Maxine Walker Cole of Fayetteville, and they were residents of Fayetteville until his death in 1970.

Lee Wayne Vansandt

Lee Wayne Vansandt was born June 6, 1913, the only child of Walker and Edna Homesley of the Sonora, Arkansas community on White River, now Beaver Lake, (on the Perry Road). At the age of 3 years, his parents and grand-parents Steve and Nettie Homesley sold the farm and bought another south and west of Spring Valley, Arkansas. Wayne attended grade school at Spring Valley, then his parents moved to Springdale where he attended high school until his senior year. Then his parents bought the Homesley's interest in the farm and they moved back to the Spring Valley community. He then finished high school at Huntsville, Arkansas.

November 19, 1932, he married Beatrice Parsley, daughter of W. W. and Lorena Welch Parsley, of Fayetteville, Arkansas. To this union was born two daughters, Nettie Lorene Vansandt, July 19, 1933 and Edna Ladayne (Tootsie) Vansandt.

Wayne farmed as a partner with his parents. The farm was very diversified, they raised strawberries, one season they picked twenty-five acres, they had eight acres of apples, raised tomatoes and green beans for the canning factory, corn, oats and hay for feed, also, chickens, both broilers and layers for the hatchery, along with a small dairy herd and beef cattle.

In the summer of 1939, his father was severely injured in a run-away team accident, after which he was not able to work. At this time, farm help was getting hard to find, due to World War II. Most of the young, able-bodied men were called to service. This brought about changes in farming. The horses were replaced with tractors and other modern labor and time saving equipment. Due to drought, freezes and the shortage of farm help during the war, the strawberry, tomato, green beans and apples became a thing of the past. Then, poultry became the most profitable thing. They built more chicken houses, as now rural electricity was available to everyone, this made farm life easier, with water pumped into the buildings and homes, barns were equipped with electric milking machines. By now, a milk route to a cheese factory was established. This helped to supplement the farm income. They did away with the field row crops and went to cattle, chickens, hay and pasture; this was the easiest way to make a go of farming at this time.

Wayne's father, Walker, passed away August 23, 1950. His injury had become malignant (cancer of the brain) he had a long illness.

Nettie finished grade school at Pilgrim Rest. She graduated from Huntsville High School in Huntsville, Arkansas in 1951. She went to Fayetteville Business College, and worked for Heekin Can Company until she married Charles Parker Everett, son of Hill and Donna Parker Everett of Huntsville, Arkansas on January 25, 1953. They have two sons: Charles Parker Everett, Jr., born April 22, 1957 at Coronado, California. And Steven Wayne Everett born February 24, 1959 at Huntsville, Arkansas.

Charles "Chuck" Parker Everett, Jr., married Pamela Michelle Landis (born October 31, 1958 in Searcy, Arkansas to James Ruel and Peggy Nell Landis) November 20, 1982 at First Assembly of God in Searcy, Arkansas. They have two daughters, Amber Nicole Everett, born January 8, 1982 at Arkansas General Hospital in Searcy, Arkansas and Megan Brooke Everett, born September 28, 1983 at Arkansas General Hospital, Searcy, Arkansas. Steven Wayne Everett married Lorri Ann Collins, daughter of Clifford and Elenor Collins, July 6, 1979 at the Nazarene Church, Springdale, Arkansas. They have two children. Chad Collins Everett, born January 14, 1980 and a daughter, Kristen Brooke Everett born November 4, 1982.

Edna also finished grade school at Pilgrim Rest and graduated from Huntsville High School in 1955. She enrolled in Saint Edwards School of Nursing at Fort Smith, Arkansas and completed one year. She then enrolled in Fayetteville Business College at Fayetteville, Arkansas. She then worked for Campbell Soup Company, at Fayetteville. She married Lon Smith May 29, 1958, son of Carl and Lucille Wright Smith. They have one son, Timothy Lon Smith, born May 20, 1963 at Springdale, Arkansas. He is unmarried and lives in Dallas, Texas.

In August of 1960, Wayne suffered a stroke, he was sick for two months, but completely recovered and was able to go to Colorado in October on his annual deer hunt. His mother, Edna Homesley and Grandmother Nettie Johnson Homesley passed away in 1963.

As farm help was harder than ever to get, they got out of the dairy and chicken business and only had beef cattle, pasture and hay. The farm is now all in permanent grass. Wayne bought a combine and hay baler, did custom work with them until he was forced to retire, due to his failing health. He spent fifty-seven years on the farm. He sold the farm in August, 1973 and bought a home on Beaver Lake in the Rochelle Riveria Addition. They had seven good years there, and on July 7, 1980, Wayne suffered a massive stroke and passed away. Beatrice still lives on the Lake, passes her time sewing, knitting, fishing and traveling.

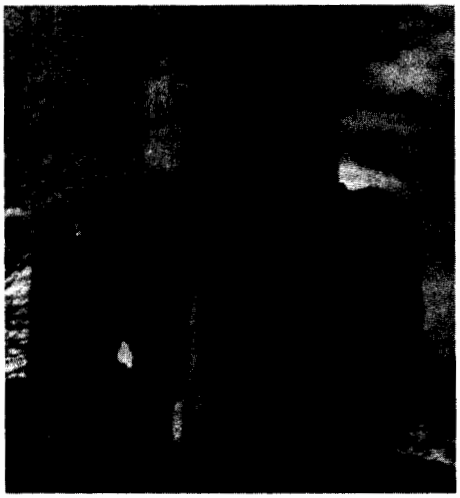
William Patrick Vaughan



Tretower Castle - Southeast Wales, British Isles.

Buck Vaughan - 1986

A saga of William Patrick Vaughan (born early 1750s - died between 1838-40) who immigrated from the Tretower Castle in Southeastern Wales, British Isles, to northeast coast, U. S. A. before the Revolutionary War. He married Fair-A-Bee Lunah, a Cherokee Indian Princess from Tennessee. They lived in Virginia, but left Virginia in 1797, and with a large family all moving as white people, traveled, settled and moved across Kentucky, Tennessee and Old Wayne County, Missouri. Then they floated down the Mississippi River, up the Arkansas River to Bell's Point - now Fort Smith. They blazed the road north across the tall mountains and named them the Boston Mountains after the City of Boston. They settled near the present Evansville in the then Missouri Territory, later to become a part of Washington County, then moved from Evansville to Cane Hill, and were very early settlers there. They then moved to Richland County. Next, they found two sons of William Patrick and "Fereby" Vaughan named Samuel (born about 1776 - died 1852) wife Kate Hands - one of three committeemen who surveyed early Fayetteville, and Daniel (born about 1787 - died 1864), wife Peggy Hands and their families located in the beautiful fertile country, later to be named Vaughan Valley located on the western edge of later Madison County; all long before Arkansas became a state.

Curtis Evans "Buck" and Ruby Holt Vaughan - 1939

James Curtis and Patricia Laird Vaughan - 1968

This saga continues about one son of Daniel Vaughan,

Isaac and Virginia Clark Vaughan

Henderson and Mary Sharp Vaughan

Isaac T. and Cora Evans Vaughan - 1906 or 1907 namely Isaac Vaughan (born 1818 - died 1897) and wife Virginia Clark. One of their sons named Henderson Vaughan (born March 31, 1848 - died September 14, 1909) and wife, Mary Sharp. Their son, Isaac T. Vaughan (born August 7, 1877 - died June 20, 1949) and wife Cora Evans. Isaac T. Vaughan and Miss Cora Evans drives by horse and carriage on a Sunday, to Fayetteville, Arkansas. Here we stop - and NOW READ ON

This article written October 20, 1906 appeared in a Fayetteville paper.

MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE "Shortly after twelve o'clock Sunday night, Reverend Walter Whittle united in marriage Isaac T. Vaughan and Miss Cora M. Evans, both of Whitener. The couple drove here yesterday with the expectation of getting the ceremony performed, and returning home for supper. County Clerk Greer could not issue the license on Sunday, and Mr. Vaughan, being the postmaster at Whitener, was compelled to be back at his store at seven o'clock this morning. So, arrangements were made with the clerk to procure a minister and all met at the courthouse at midnight. The evening passed slowly for the couple and time moved on leaden feet. At the hour of twelve, the parties gathered in the clerk's office, the necessary papers issued and the ceremony performed. The great grandfather of Mr. Vaughan was the first settler in Vaughan Valley and it is from him that the valley takes its name. The grandfather of Miss Evans was the founder of Whitener, and it is from him that the town derives its name. The happy couple are highly respected in their community. A life full of happiness and joy to them." Perhaps you would like to know the sequel to this marriage. Here it is: I. T. and Cora Vaughan had a son - Curtis Evans Vaughan (born August 1, 1911 - died February 12, 1965, buried in Vaughan Cemetery) "Buck", as Curtis was widely known married Ruby Holt. One son was born to them, James Curtis Vaughan (born February 27, 1942). "Jim" married Patricia Laird and they have one son, Buck (born July 24, 1969). Jim, Pat and son Buck, and Ruby - this date February 14, 1987- live and own land in Vaughan Valley, Madison County, Arkansas.

So continues this saga of William Patrick and "Fair-A-Bee" Vaughan.

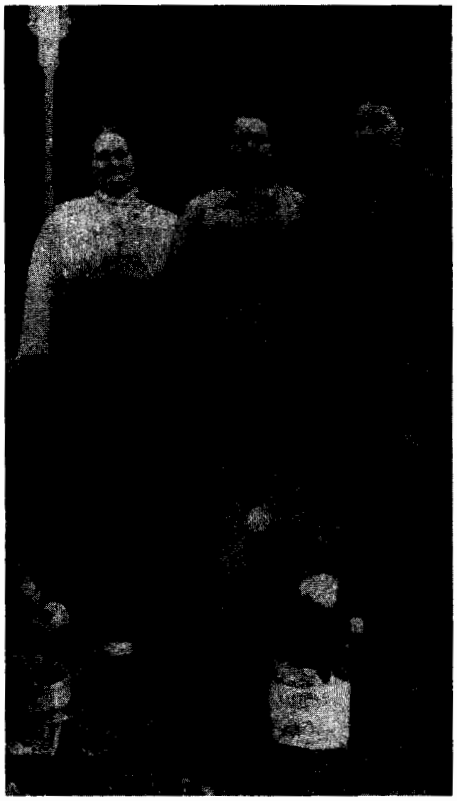
Anna Venable

I am Anna Venable of Route 2, Lincoln near Dutch Mills. After teaching 31 years, I retired in 1969. Except for two, all of the schools at which I taught were in Washington County.

My early education began at White Rock where I attended first through sixth grades. The terms were short because of lack of money, so I started living with my Aunt Susie Robinson of Cincinnati and attended school there through the ninth grade. The tenth year I spent with my Uncle Wilson Kimbrough and family, a teacher himself, at Springdale. My junior and senior years were spent at Lincoln School. The four seniors in 1925 were Marion Joyce, Waldo Bain, Wesley Shannon, and myself.

When I was 18 years old, I returned to White Rock to teach—1925-26. During the summer, I had taken a teachers' exam at the court house and received a teachers' certificate. The day I took the exam, I went to Lincoln in a Model T Ford and rode the train to Fayetteville and returned home the same day.



1-Mollie Luginbuel Choat Barnes, Bert's sister. 2-Mary Watson Luginbuel, Charles' wife. 3-Daisy Kimbrough Luginbuel, Bert's wife. Made at a family get together 1913 by Arthur Jones of Salem who walked carrying his camera.

Store on east side of street in Dutch Mills, Arkansas. Bert Luginbuel is on far left. He was road overseer of Dutch Mills Township. Roads were made by every man of age working, four days a year. Outside steps led to rooms where the Masons held their meetings. A blacksmith building is on far left where George Yates worked. A well was located between the buildings.

Elizabeth Mackey was one that I remember going at the same time. Some of my pupils at White Rock were Oren and Marie Glenn, and Mary Rice. I had gone to school with them four years earlier

I attended summer schools for several years. Later I went to John Brown School at Siloam Springs which was a two-year college where I received a Music and Education Certificate in 1931.

Father's Day, 1984. Ruth Munnerlyn, Mary Ellen Kimmer, Bill Venable and Anna L. Venable.

I continued to attend summer schools at the University of Arkansas.

By then Morrow Schools had been consolidated and I was there for 1-1/2 years—until the school ran out of money. After that I was at Kingston in Madison County for two years. Wherever I went, there was music. I went from classroom to classroom at first. Then I organized a Glee Club and quartets. Morrow had many pupils who could sing, and the High School Glee Club won first place at the county level. Mrs. Denney (my former music teacher) was our accompanist which helped greatly.

While at Kingston, my father, Bert Luginbuel, became quite ill and I needed to be closer home, so I began teaching at Summers where I taught for two years. The canning factory was running in full force and there were lots of children. I had an enrollment of 52 in the first and second grades. It was while I was there that I married Bill Venable of Summers.

At this time Sugar Hill, a one-room school, wanted me to go there. After two years we started our family, and I didn't teach until our younger daughter was six. (We had two daughters—Mary Ellen and Anna Ruth). Because teachers were in demand, Mrs. Finley, superintendent of school in Lincoln, wanted me to teach in a one-room school that was located on our farm. Glendale, was a consolidation of Salem and White Rock.

The Glendale school building was moved to Lincoln as part of the consolidation with Lincoln during 1947-48. I went as a first grade teacher and taught in the high school building until the new grade school building was finished in 1950. I taught first, second, or fourth grades in Lincoln until March 17, 1969, at which time I developed a heart condition that ended my teaching career.

After I went to Lincoln to teach there was not enough money for a music teacher so again I was the one who helped with music activities such as Christmas programs, Graduation Day programs, and others.

Since my retirement, I have tried to do exactly what the doctor ordered and as a result, my health seems to be good. I enjoy being a member of two clubs, doing needle work, crocheting, piecing quilts and quilting. I have many flowers—indoors and outdoors, and I spend a great deal of time working with them. My church work is of great importance to me, and I still play the piano for church occasionally plus help in the church library and with other activities.

Richard B. Venable was born March 5, 1842 near DeQueen, Arkansas. He came to Washington County at Summers after the Civil War. They attended the Methodist Church.

He married Cartha M. Price daughter of Millard Price. To this union was born, John D. August 9, 1868 died March 1901, Anna Elizabeth December 31, 1869, William Edwin October 17, 1871 died 1936. Catherin born March 24, 1874, Sarah Helen Elms August 25, 1876 died July 27, 1904, Thomas M. born April 17, 1879 died September 24, 1905, James Wiley February 12 died January 15, 1955, Oma born May 15, 1888 died July 16, 1907.

During the Civil War he was in both battles at Bull Run. He was taken prisoner and was put on a prison boat on the Mississippi River headed up stream. He escaped and made his way back to the Confederate Line where he was discharged.

On the farm at Summers he set out orchards and raised grain and tobacco enough for his own use. In the earlier years they had an apple drier. Several of the relatives helped do the work. They also had a cider press.

James Wiley married Virginia Rebecca Gibson. She was born at Summers December 14, 1887. They married at Summers December 14, 1909. To this union was born Harry J. June 20, 1911 died November 1917 of diptheria, William Gibson (Bill) July 26, 1915, Lacy Bean December 17, 1922 died November 23, 1984.

Bill attended school at Summers through high school. He was quite an athlete both in basketball and baseball. He played many games after he finished school.

He and his father made music together. Father played the violin and he the guitar. Later, Bill had blood poison on his left hand and he gave up the guitar.

Bill, his father and friends spent many hours hunting with dogs. He is very much a naturalist and enjoys the great outdoors.

Bill had a tractor accident in 1981 that almost cost his life. It has prevented him from doing a lot of things.

Bill farmed with his father in the orchards and grain field until he married and moved to the Bert Luginbuel farm. He continued with Bert's grain, hog, and cattle raising. At one time the cattle were of hereford stock. Later he continued with a mixed herd.

In 1961, two chicken houses were added to the farm with a capacity of 43,000. He also began to operate the Summers place after Lacy, his brother, moved to Tulsa. That farm is now in pastureland. There were two chickens houses there also which were used by Bill.

In 1939, he joined the County Farm Bureau and later became a State leader and also attended National meetings.

He is a deacon in the Baptist Church at Dutch Mills and has been active in many phases of community and church work. He was on the school board for twenty-three years of which he was very proud.

His father died at home January 15, 1955. His mother came to live with us until her death December 10, 1971.

Bill Venable married Anna Luginbuel August 22, 1937. They had two daughters, Mary Ellen December 3, 1939 and Anne Ruth August 14, 1941. They were born at home as was their mother and grandfather at the same house place. We still live here.

The girls' education began at Glendale, on to Summers and finally to Lincoln Consolidated Schools.

After completing high school they went to Ouachita Baptist College. Mary Ellen graduated from there with honors. She began her teaching career in Wardell, Missouri where she taught business subjects. It was here she met John Kimmer of Batesville, Arkansas who was a high school principal. They made their home in Kennett, Missouri.

They had one daughter, Lori Ann, born July 24, 1968. Mary Ellen got her masters degree from the State College at Jonesboro.

On January 12, 1971 John received a kidney transplant from a friend, Bill Koontz, who now lives in Cooter, Missouri. John died January 23, 1980 of a heart attack.

Mary Ellen and Lori are both accomplished musicians especially on piano. Mary Ellen is assistant organist at Methodist Church in Kennett.

Lori went to grade school and high school at Kennett then to Missouri State school at Cape Girardeau.

May 31, 1986, she was married to David Jones. He had attended the same schools. They are now stationed in the Air Force base near Phoenix, Arizona.

After going to Ouachita Baptist College two years Ruth took three years training at Little Rock Baptist Hospital.

There she met Jim Munnerlyn of North Little Rock. They were married at Liberty Baptist Church March 7, 1964 by Reverend Terrill Gordon.

Jim finished his bachelors and masters degree and is a basketball coach. He is presently at Schreiner College, Kerrville, Texas.

Ruth is a Registered Nurse and has been employed at hospitals in Fayetteville, Arkansas, Independence, Missouri, Independence, Kansas and Brownwood and Kerrville, Texas. She is presently at Schreiner College Kerrville, Texas as school nurse. She enjoys singing and painting.

Their children are Jamie Renee December 19, 1967, Mary Frances June 15, 1969, Julie Ann April 10, 1971 and William Edward (Billy Ed) January 17, 1979.

Jamie is in college at Schreiner. Mary is employed at Conway, Arkansas. Julie is a sophomore is high school and Billy Ed is in the grade school at Kerrville.

Lacy Bean Venable was born December 17, 1922. He attended grade and high school at Summers.

He married Jeanette Leopard of Summers.

Their children were Catherine Kaye April 22, 1947 and David C. July 7, 1948.

They built a house on the home place near Highway 62 and also two chicken houses. Later he left the farm and found work in Tulsa. They divorced.

He married Teena Hill Haskett in 1960. Their children are Bobby, employed in computer work in Dallas and Richard, who is in Oklahoma City Dental School. Teena is employed in Yukon, Oklahoma.

Lacy died November, 1984 in an Oklahoma City hospital where he had entered for tests of heart failure.

J. W. Venable

Jim and Ginny, as they were known to our family, lived about a mile south of Summers, Arkansas, at his father's house. Mr. Venable lived with them until his death in 1923.

Uncle Jim produced the conventional crops on his farm, but also had a large orchard, growing many varieties of apples. He knew how to "bud" and "graft" and could produce many apple trees from the buds and twigs of an especially good tree. When it became necessary to spray the orchards, the community telephone system would receive a call from the County Agent (I think) and would send out a special "ring" to all telephones, then announce the time to spray and with what. In later years I remember that Uncle Jim used to sell a good many apples to truckers who came from other states. He always grew sweet potatoes, and Aunt Ginny cooked them nearly every day.

There was a large fireplace in the Venable house and a sweet potato storage place was made in front of it. This consisted of a walled up bin under the floor of the house, just in front of the hearth, with a "trap-door" in the floor giving access to it. During the winter the fire kept the hearth and potato bin warm. Sweet potatoes kept there all winter.

Uncle Jim had a large gasoline powered sprayer to spray his orchards. It was pulled by a team of mules, and was quite an improvement over the hand powered one in use previously.

Dr. Clare Venema

I, Marleen McKeehan Venema was born at Fayetteville City Hospital, June 4, 1931, to Leon and Lillian McKeehan (See their history, this document). I went to Braden School near our home, and then to University High. I graduated from Cottey Junior College, Nevada, Missouri, then received my B. S. in Zoology from the University of Arkansas in 1953. Following a year at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, I entered Occupational Therapy training at Texas Women's University in Denton, Texas. During my clinical training at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, I met a third year dental student, Clare Venema, who was born in Grand Rapids, February 18, 1931 to Clarence J. and Hermine Venema.

We were married August 31, 1956, in Fayetteville, and moved to Ann Arbor, where I established and directed the Occupational Therapy department at St. Joseph's Hospital. The next June, Clare finished dental school, and our first son, Chris Manning was born, June 13, 1957.

In November, Clare entered the U. S. Public Health Service, and we moved to the Pine Ridge Sioux Indian Reservation in South Dakota. Our second son, Craig Douglas, was born July 11, 1958, in Rapid City; two years later, our first daughter, Karen Lynn, was born March 25, 1960. That summer, we moved to Oakland, California where Clare was attached to the Coast Guard. After his first visit to Fayetteville, Clare had decided to practice there, so when we left Public Health in 1961, we returned.

We found an 'Inn' at 1013 North College to remodel for a dental office; this involved doing the interior decorating with three children, 4, 3, and 1-1/2 underfoot. We opened for patients in October, with me serving as assistant and the children in nursery school. That first week, all three fell and cut their heads, each on a different day.

We joined First Baptist Church, Fayetteville, where Clare became a deacon and served on numerous committees. I joined the choir, where I still sing, and I have remained active in our women's missionary activities, including the International Wives' Group, which I direct.

On December 11, 1963, our second daughter, Kathryn Joan, was born, and soon afterward, we bought a house at 1553 Columbus Blvd. A third daughter, Kimberly Gayle, arrived February 11, 1966. We moved to 1559 Hope Street when she was three.

Clare joined the Evening Lions Club in 1962, becoming president from 1974-1975, and I participated in the Lions' Ladies Group, and was its president 1979-1980. I served on the Board of United Cerebral Palsy several years, and later was on the Board of the Community Concert Association, in whose membership drive I worked for 25 years.

Along with his regular practice, Clare did considerable volunteer dentistry for which he received several awards. Over the years, I filled in as assistant repeatedly, sometimes for weeks or months at a time, even with a baby.

Our oldest son, Chris, received his B. S. in Zoology from the U of A, and is now working on a Data Processing Degree while employed fulltime at the Computer Center there.

Craig moved to Houston after 2 years at the University, and is attending Houston Community College while he's employed fulltime at the "Lighthouse for the Blind and Deaf."

Karen attended Cottey Junior College in Nevada, Missouri, then received her B. S. in Zoology in 1982 at the U of A. There, she met Steven Vance Hunter, son of Jack and Bessie Hunter of Fort Smith, and they were married May 25, 1981. Steven received his BSBA that year, and got his MBA in 1982. Their first child, Sarah Grettelle, was born March 5, 1984 in Springdale. Another child is due January of 1988. They now live in Van Buren where Steven works in his father's vending equipment business.

Kathryn finished Cottey College before coming to the U of A where she met David Alan Turner, son of Charles and Peggy Turner of DeQueen. They were married June 28, 1986. David is studying Landscape Architecture, while Kathryn works as a Dental Assistant and takes night courses at the University.

After finishing Cottey in 1986, Kimberly entered Occupational Therapy training at UCA in Conway, Arkansas. As a violinist, she received an orchestra scholarship, and will finish the 5 year program in 1990.

Clare and I were divorced in October 1986. I stay involved in activities, though rhuematoid arthritis has prevented my returning to my profession.

Robert Vernon

Robert Vernon was the son of Robert Vernon, Sr. Robert Vernon, Sr., married Elizabeth Hambledon in Prince Edward County, Virginia, on 19 January 1792. He was born in Virginia in 1771 and died in Tennessee 2 March 1851. He had six brothers, all of whom fought in the Revolutionary War, it is believed. Two were killed in the war. One brother was the father of a Thomas Vernon who lived in Arkansas. Elizabeth, the wife of Robert, Sr., died some time after 1828.

Willie, Jessie and Nellie Skelton.

Inasmuch as the Skeltons and Skillerns were apparently always close, the following information on the Skillerns is given:

Audley and Emoline had the following children; Josiah Crawford, born December 1842 and died in infancy; Mary, born 16 May 1844; Jane, born 1846, died 23 May 1887, married Luke Kantz in November 1870; Narcissa born January 1849; Sarah born 4 September 1850; Nancy, born 2 July 1853; Elisha, born

23 June 1855; Josephine Helen, born 20 August 1857, died September 1894; James Dean, born 9 May 1861; William Vernon, born possibly in 1864; Florence L., born 14 February 1867, died in infancy; John, born 8 November 1869. Audley Skillern's father was John Skillern who died in 1946. His mother was Elizabeth Anderson Skillern who died in 1941.

Rebekah Vernon Skelton and her father lived with the Skillerns following the death of their mother and wife. During the Civil War, Rebekah also made her home with them while John Thaddeus was in the Army.

The following remarks of Mrs. Bess Carter Chitwood are included because they confirm a picture of John Thaddeus and his wife Mary Rebekah, conveyed to me by many people. Mrs. Chitwood was born in Fayetteville and is a graduate of the University of Arkansas and the University of Oklahoma.

"Among my happiest childhood memories are the hours I spent at Grandmother and Grandfather Skelton's farm near Fayetteville. Really, they were no kin to me, but were the only grandparents I ever knew, as I was an orphan brought up by my sister, the wife of James L. Skelton. Never, however, did the elder Skelton's make any difference between their own grandchildren and me.

"Once when they bought gay, candy-striped material for dresses for Nellie, Willie, and Jessie, Bob Skelton's daughters, they bought enough for me also.

"How I used to love the comfortable cot with a sheepskin on it in the room with the big fireplace! Here Grandfather rested when he came in from the fields. Nearby was the stack of St. Louis papers he read.

"In a drawer of the bureau Grandmother kept ready his and her burial clothes. Every few years these would be used for best and carefully replaced. Grandfather's shirt she made by hand from cloth she bleached herself.

"On one side of the fireplace hung the Almanac; on the other a turkey wing to fan the fire. How good food tasted baked in a spider over coals raked onto the hearth."

James Newton Vickery

James Newton Vickery, born March 15, 1850, Goingsnake District, Indian Territory, son of Charles Vickery (1811-1876) and Malinda Black (1816-1866), both born in Georgia and died in Indian Territory. James Newton married, about 1890, Martha Emma Padgett, born January 22, 1879, Forsyth County, Georgia, daughter of James Robert Padgett (1858-1952) and Lydia Ann Bettis (1861-1898). James Newton lived at Dutch Mills, Washington County, Arkansas, where most of his nine children were born: Mary Ann (1891-1971) married John Lester Russell; Mattie Alice (1892-1962) married Luther Cornelius Higgins; Charlotte Malinda (1895-1958) married Eber Eastman Bias; Charles Lincoln (1897-1973) married Ollie Bell Phillips; William Penn (1899-1980) married Lizzie Cordelia Johnston; Florine (1903-1963) married Rosie Josephine Vansant; Grant Lafayette (1905-1960) married Julia Evaline Phillips; Dovie Pearline (1909-living) married Marion Hershall Cooper. James Newton and Martha Emma were separated and she married David Cole and had Martha Jane Cole (1913-living) married Walter Hamilton Tinney. James Newton died in Sequoyah County, Oklahoma, 1917. Martha Emma died at Fort Smith, Arkansas, May 31, 1930, after being hit by a car in Oklahoma.

William Penn (Bill) Vickery, born July 22, 1899, Goingsnake District, Indian Territory, married May 25, 1919, Lizzie Cordelia Johnston, born April 19, 1902, daughter of Stonewall Jackson Johnston and Mary Mittie Masterson. Three children were born to this union: Naomi Vanita (Nita), born February 24, 1920, married Jimmy Ray Cornelius; Luby Lenora (Lynn), born December 5, 1921, married Jack Clifford Tuggle; Edith Laveta Emogene (Jean) married Samuel McKeel Trotter. Bill and Lizzie lived in Sequoyah County, Oklahoma, moved to Amarillo, Texas, in 1921 where he was a barber. Both were part Cherokee Indian and had black hair and dark eyes. Lizzie was dark-complected but their little girl was fair, blue eyes and blonde hair. Living near them was a woman whose reputation was very tawdry and the neighbors thought the little girl was hers, so Bill made Lizzie dye their little daughter's hair black. Now in those days, dying hair wasn't as common as today, and Lizzie knew nothing about how it was done; but she dyed her little one's hair anyway. At first it looked fine but when the dye began to fade, it turned orange then green, and her grandmother said she looked like a little gosling. Bill moved his family to Tiawah, Oklahoma, where he worked on the Spavinaw water line.

Bill and Lizzie were separated in 1923 and Lizzie took her little girls and lived with her parents until her death on October 15, 1929, at St. Louis, Pottawatomie County, Oklahoma, buried at Akins, Sequoyah County, Oklahoma.

Bill married Sarah Haggard in 1929 and had Loyd Dean, born 1930, James Edward (1932-1973) and Clara Hettie, born 1934. They were divorced and Bill never remarried. He moved to Prairie Grove, Arkansas, about 1967 near his brother "Link" and sister Dovie. Bill died at Springdale, Arkansas, May 1, 1980, and is buried in Scott Cemetery.

Naomi Vanita (Nita) Vickery married August 3, 1936, Jimmy Ray Cornelius, son of Wilburn (1876-1961) and Melvinia Tennessee (1879-1963). Jim and Nita were blessed with four children: Jimmy Ray (1937) married Billie Doris Owens; Larry Gene (1939) married Geraline (Gerry) Kay Hilton; Ronnie Jack (1942) married Sandra (Sandy) Lee Jones; and Rosemary Eileen (1945) married Thomas Dean Pennington. The Corneliuses have thirteen beautiful grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Jimmy's are Cherie Diane married Edgar Schmidt; Candace (Candy) Lee married Dennis Deaton, they have one son, Jeremy Adam; Walter Randall (Randy) married Christine Hall, have Ryan Randall and Ashley Jo; Jamie LuAnn married Darius Hatfield (divorced), have one daughter, Kara Lynn; and Jodi Shannon. Larry's children are Larry Gene, Jr., Kimberly Kay married Lewis Gene Howard, have one son, Joshua Gene, and Christopher Lee. Ronnie has two sons, Dion Scott and Daniel Evan. Rosemary has Stephanee Brooke, Howard Franklin (Buddy) and Brandy Nichole.

Lynn and Jack have two children. Fredrick Duane married Terri Phillips (divorced) and have one son, Kevin Duane; and Norma Jean married Hamilton (Tony) Haggar (divorced).

Jean and Sam Trotter (divorced) have one daughter, Bettie June married Ronald Smith (divorced) and have two sons, Corey Lee and Kevin Patrick.

Jim and Nita live in Wagoner County, Oklahoma. Jim is a retired (1977) carpenter and belongs to Carpenters Local Union #943, Tulsa, Oklahoma. Since retiring, he fishes. Nita belongs to Eastern Star, D. A. R., United Daughters of the Confederacy and Daughters of Union Veterans. She is an avid genealogist. They celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary August 3, 1986, with all family members present.

Sidney Cawood Vinson

Sydney Cawood Vinson, eldest son and one of four children of Horace Greely Vinson and Miranda Louella (Phillips) Vinson, was born September 22, 1880 on a farm near Loudon, Tennessee. The family later moved to Springdale, Arkansas where Sydney attended grade school and graduated from high school. He then worked in Fayetteville, Arkansas as a pharmacist and it was there he met and married Elizabeth Edna Sloan on the 12th of September, 1907. She was the eldest daughter and one of four children of George Sloan and Frances Camelia (Park) Sloan. They had one child, a daughter, Frances Louella Vinson, born June 27, 1908 in Fayetteville, now residing in Tulsa, the wife of Jesse D. Davis, Tulsa and Claremore lawyer.

S. C. Vinson moved his family to Tahlequah in 1908 and then on to Claremore in 1910 where he was a pharmacist in the drug store which he later purchased and was known as the Vinson Drug Store until after World War II when he sold the business to the Gentrys in 1946.

In June, 1928, Mrs. Vinson's nephew, Sam Norvell Sloan, then four years old, came to make his home with them. After finishing school and serving in the U. S. Army in World War II, Sam married Barbara June Green, also of Claremore, and they reside in Claremore where Sam is a dentist.

After the sale of the Vinson Drug Store, the Vinsons opened another business - a ladies apparel shop which they jointly operated until Mr. Vinson's death January 11, 1959. Mrs. Vinson continued to operate the shop until she retired in 1968.

S. C. Vinson, or "Syd", as all his friends and most people called him, was one of the ten founders of the Rogers County Bank and served on its Board of Directors until his death in 1959. He was on the Claremore Board of Education for several terms. He was active in many other civic projects. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Industrial Development Corporation. Syd was an avid fisherman, his favorite "fishin' hole" was Spavinaw Creek in Delaware County, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Vinson, known to her friends as "Bess", joined her husband in the social and civic life. She was active in the Claremore Garden Club—serving as its President several years. She was a member of the Claremore chapter of the P. E. O. and the First Church of Christ Scientist in Boston, Massachusetts, and its branch Society in Claremore. Bess Vinson was interested in collecting antiques and in gardening, sharing her love of flowers with everyone with her floral arrangements. She died October 13, 1974, in Tulsa.

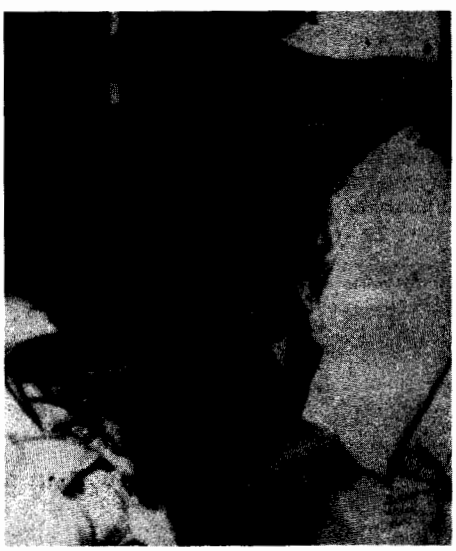
John G. Wadsworth

It was "depression time", the summer of 1935, and a young Kansas man was playing sax and acting with Toby's Comedians, a traveling tent show which at that time was touring Arkansas. $2.00 a week and meals wasn't bad. He'd have enough by fall to buy his books for his senior year at Mound Valley, Kansas High.



John Wadsworth

In the man's pocket was a signet ring from his father's jewelry shop. Before he left home his mother and urged him to take it for security (worth a ticket home if the job didn't work out.) John's father had died 2 years previous to this time.

Strolling down the main street of Springdale one morning before he had to start practicing for the afternoon performance, he stopped in a jewelry store. The man behind the counter knew a homesick boy when he saw one, and getting John's story while looking the ring over he figured he could put an initial on it for 35 cents. In fact he was so nice that when John returned home he told his mom he was going to live in Springdale, Arkansas some day.

God's timing often differs from ours, but he takes seriously our desires, especially if accompanied by prayer. Before becoming a Springdalian by choice, a number of years and events would pass. First, John graduated from high school, spent some time at Pittsburg State Teachers College, taught 3 years, married Alma Richmire of Coffeyville, was a weather man in W. W. II, fathered a daughter, Jan, a son, Rex and finished college at Manhattan, Kansas in 1950 with a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine Degree.

Having maintained an interest in poultry he was ready when this area opened a new job with the Livestock Sanitary Board out of Little Rock. In January 1951, John and Richie Wadsworth and family moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas, where he worked out of old Gray Hall on the campus, as the State's first poultry pathologist. Two years later they moved to Springdale and their daughter, Ann was born.

During Doc Wadsworth's career with the State he diagnosed poultry problems for every farmer to the major poultry businesses in the state. He set up a blood testing laboratory to aid in the elimination of PPLO virus in flocks, and freely shared his knowledge with those who came to his laboratory. He spent 3 years in Gainsville, Florida with the university there in a similar capacity. However, sand in his shoes never satisfied his longing for the beauties of this area and the Wadsworth family returned to Springdale where he finished 13 years with the state.

Moving up for the security of a federal position he was a USDA employee in 3 different areas in Kansas, before he got back to Arkansas where he had retained his Springdale residence.

Few people loved their adopted state or appreciated it's many benefits more than John Wadsworth, and in July 1980, he left it for the only place he knew would be better.

Today, his widow, Richie, lives in their home in Springdale. His daughter, Jan, is a licensed practical nurse in Kansas. His son, Rex, is a carpenter in this area. His daughter, Ann, is a physical therapist in Tennessee. His three grandchildren, Mark, Alana and John have inherited Grandpa Wadsworth's zest for life and love of the natural things God provided for His people.

Thomas Wagnon

Thomas Wagnon probably came to Arkansas Territory around 1806, first into Madrid County, Missouri and then into Lawrence County, Arkansas. He met and married Elizabeth Ruddle around 1807. Their first son, John, was born ca. 1809. Elizabeth's family had land in Madrid County, Missouri then moved to what is now Batesville, Arkansas.

Thomas Wagnon and his brother Burrill first lived in Lawrence County, Arkansas Territory which included the whole northwest corner of the state in 1821. Late in August, 1829, he traded his improvements in the Prairie Grove Valley to Reverend Andrew Buchanan for two sermons, if an equally good location could be found.

The noted hunter took his flint lock gun and left. He returned shortly saying a new site had been located. This is probably when he moved to Illinois Township, Washington County, later called Fayetteville. He died there and his will was probated in 1838.

One story taken from Goodspeed's History of Arkansas says "Thomas Wagnon, an old timer, while out hunting wrapped himself, arms, hands and all, from shoetop to chin, in a green buffalo hide at night. In the morning it was frozen and would not unroll and when found, he was well nigh dead. The same man burned out the first stump in which to pound corn into meal at his place, which was the only evidence of civilization when we first camped here. This was used until the mills were built".

Thomas and Elizabeth Wagnon had seven known children; John, Thomas, Jr., Bazzil, Marshal P., Sarah, Matilda and Mary.

John and Bazzil are known to have fought in the Territorial Militia and later in the Civil War, the family being split North and South.

Marshal Wagnon married a Cherokee lady, Peggy Woodell and lived in what is now Westville, Oklahoma. He was killed during the Civil War.

John Wagnon, first son of Thomas and Elizabeth Ruddle Wagnon, was the great, great, great grandfather of this writer. He was married on May 9, 1836, to Maranda Ruddle in Fayetteville, Arkansas by the Reverend John Cureton. At this time, I have not been able to establish a relationship between Elizabeth Ruddle Wagnon and her daughter-in-law Maranda Ruddle Wagnon. John was commissioned a 1st Lieutenant in the 3rd Co., 2nd Battalion of the Territorial Militia being promoted three years later to Captain.

In 1839, he, his brother Thomas and their brother-in-law John Curry were engaged in a card game on Sunday morning in Fayetteville. Several citizens, including a Willis Wallace attempted to put a stop to the game. A fight ensued, Wagnon escaped town with the money, but Curry and several others were killed by this Wallace. Wallace was a known killer, killing even after this episode. He went to trial but was acquitted and lived his life out in Texas.

Thomas Wagnon, Sr., born ca. 1783 in North Carolina, died January 20, 1838 in Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas. His son, John, was named executor of his will. His wife, Elizabeth, born February 1, 1784, in Kentucky died March 27 1879 and is buried in Cincinnati Cemetery, Washington County.

This family was certainly one of our true pioneers living in the most primitive ways settling our country using both guns and Bibles. My great, great, great grandfather mentioned previously, did some preaching and marrying in Missouri before returning to Arkansas after the Civil War then disappeared into Indian Territory. A family that surely was rough and tough; but without people like these, most of us would not be here today. I appreciate the heritage they have left us.

Park William Waldroup

Members of the Waldroup family have lived in Fayetteville since January, 1966. Park William, Sr. (born October 17, 1937 in Marysville, Tennessee) and the former Janet Ray (born January 18, 1938 in Florala, Alabama) moved here from Gainesville, Florida with their oldest two children, Mary Janet (born November 28, 1962) and Park William, Jr. (born January 19, 1964) both born in Gainesville.

Park, Sr. had recently been awarded his Ph. D. in Animal Science from the University of Florida, and accepted a position at the University of Arkansas. Dr. Waldroup completed his undergraduate work in his home state, at the University of Tennessee. He was an outstanding scholar from early on, and graduated at the top of his class at Tennessee. His wife-to-be also attended the University of Florida, where the couple met, and earned a degree in Science Education.

A second son, Christopher Ian, was born April 16, 1968. There were medical complications with the child, and he died within two months after birth. It was December 29, 1970 when the second daughter, Heather Leigh, was born.

During the 1987 school year, the oldest two children completed college; Park, Jr. the University of Arkansas, with a degree in Personnel Management, and Mary the Art Institute of Atlanta, to begin her career as a professional photographer. Heather will be a junior at Fayetteville High.

Park, Sr. is one of eight children by the late William Thomas Waldroup and the former Mary Jo Robinson, both originally from North Carolina. During World War II, W. T. and his family lived in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, where he worked as an electrician in the atomic fuel plant, where uranium was separated to make the first atomic bombs. After the war, he eventually built his family a house outside of Kingston, Tennessee, where the children stayed until leaving home.

Grandmother, as she is called by nearly everyone, always rose early to fix a breakfast of biscuits and eggs for the family, and always found time to prepare a pie or banana pudding on Friday evenings, which Park, Sr. remembers fondly. Money was usually tight, but W. T., with his love for electrical gadgets, managed to have one of the first television sets in the county.

Meanwhile, the former Janet Ray spent most of her childhood in Crestview, Florida, in the panhandle part of the state. Janet was the only child of the late Hugh A. Ray (born April 12, 1907 in Florala, Alabama) and the former Ola Peaden (born April 26, 1904 in Baker, Florida), Hugh A. Ray worked for the government as a Civil Engineer in the region, including several projects at Eglin A. F. B., and for the Army Corps of Engineers.

Janet Waldroup sometimes told her children about the two great grandfathers on her mother's side. One was a proud slave owner, Bryant Mancill, and veteran of the Civil War, serving in the Confederate Army. The other, Jackson Peadou, had no slaves, and wanted no part in the war. He was forced to rough it for some time in the Florida swamps in the area to avoid the draft. Since the supply of salt was cut off, he took his family down to the Gulf at night to boil down seawater to preserve meat. Sometimes, when activity at a nearby Union Army garrison during the latter part of the war made travel risky, they refined salt from the dirt beneath the smokehouse floor.

Calvin Walker

Calvin Walker (1866-1945) was the fifth of eleven children of Martin Kidder Walker (1822-1889) and Ann VanWinkle (1841-1920), both from pioneer Benton County, Arkansas families. Calvin grew up on the family fruit farm south of Lowell, Arkansas on what is now Highway 471. In 1904, Calvin married Mary Weaver (1880-1962) of Rogers, Arkansas. They had two children who were born in Rogers: Dorotha Joanna (1905) and Martin Lowry (1908). Calvin had interests in a hardware store and the bank in Rogers and an apple evaporator in Springdale. In 1914, he loaded the family possessions on a railroad car for the move to Springdale. Calvin and Lowry drove a buggy, pulled by a horse name "Hurley", to the family farm in Lowell and spent the night. The next morning, they drove on to Springdale and met the train carrying Mary and Dorotha, who had kneaded bread on the train to bake for supper, and moved into the home they had bought at 804 North Mill Street. Calvin and Mary lived in this house until their deaths. Calvin was a partner in the Kimmons and Walker Evaporator, an apple drying operation. The evaporator, located on the southwest corner of East Emma Avenue and Park Street was thought to be the largest of its kind in the country. Two more sons were born in Springdale: Richard Lee (1916) and Jack Harold (1918).

Walker Brothers Spray Material Plant - about 1946. Corner of Park and Meadow, Springdale, Arkansas 72764.

In 1924, Calvin and his brother Thomas Jefferson (1873-1946) formed the company Walker Brothers to engage in the business of buying, selling and making loans on real estate and to manufacture, buy and sell orchard spray materials, equipment and supplies in Springdale. A plant was built on the northwest corner of Park Street and Meadow Avenue for the manufacture of liquid lime-sulfur solution and dormant spray oils. This plant operated until 1956.

While serving on the Springdale School Board, Calvin was chairman of the building committee for the new high school building completed in 1928. When Calvin discovered construction not meeting contract specifications, he literally spent every day thereafter on the job site overseeing the work. The general contractor, who was a friend of Calvin, remarked, "Cal, if you would get away from here I could make some money on this job". Calvin didn't and it soured their friendship long afterward.

In 1932, Walker Brothers began acquiring and operating apple orchards and by 1945 had in excess of 250 acres in production. The company also bought an insurance agency in 1932 which is still in business today as Walker Brothers Insurance, Inc. In 1934, Calvin bought his brother, Jeff out and continued to operate the business until his death in 1945, when the business was sold to his son, Lowry. In 1956, Walker Brothers sold the orchard supply business and all but one orchard and closed the spray manufacturing plant. The remaining orchard was operated through the 1969 harvest season and then sold. Walker Brothers Insurance, Inc. is still in operation under the ownership of Lowry's son Bill. Calvin and Mary are buried in Springdale's Bluff Cemetery.

Dorotha "Dorothy" Joanna (1905-1983) was born in Rogers, Arkansas. She graduated from the Springdale Schools, Cottey College in Missouri and the University of Arkansas. In 1931, she married Kenneth Sharkey, a professor at Purdue University in Indiana. They had two children: Mary Nina (1934) and William Walker (1947). Dorothy is buried in West Lafayette, Indiana.

Martin Lowry (1908-1984) was born in Rogers, Arkansas. He attended Springdale Schools, graduated from Kemper Military School in Missouri and attended the University of Arkansas. He was a successful orchard spray manufacturer, fruit grower, machine shop owner and insurance agent. Lowry earned both his private and commercial pilot licenses in the 1940s and was one of three or four local early aviation enthusiasts responsible for the establishment of the Springdale Airport. He was active in many community and civic organizations and served as chairman of the grounds commitee during the early years of the Rodeo of the Ozarks, President of the Arkansas State Horticultural Society and as a Supervisor for the Washington County Soil and Water Conservation District for thirteen years. Lowry was married to Marguerite Ownbey (1908) of Springdale in 1929. They had one son, William Calvin (1930). Lowry is buried in Bluff Cemetery.

Richard Lee (1916-1968) was born in Springdale. He graduated from Springdale Schools, Kemper Military School in Missouri, the University of Arkansas and Texas A&M College. He served as an officer in the Civilian Conservation Corps and entered the U. S. Army Air Corps as an officer in 1941. He received his wings as a pilot and spent two years in the China-Burma theater as a pilot flying the "Hump". During that time, he was also involved in the early development of the Air Rescue Service. Dick retired as a Colonel in the 1960s and entered private business as a Vice President with Southwest Wheel and Manufacturing Company of Dallas, Texas. In 1942, he married Jean Adair of Dallas, Texas and they had two children: Richard Lee II (1947) and Jane Melinda (1952) who both now live in Delaware. Colonel Walker is buried in the Military Cemetery at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Jack Harold (1918-1987) was born in Springdale and graduated from the Springdale Schools, Kemper Military School in Missouri and the University of Arkansas. He entered the U. S. Army Air Corps in 1941 as an officer and served duty stations in the United States and Canada. Upon discharge after the war, Jack settled in Oklahoma City where he was involved in an advertising agency, real estate development and retired as a Vice President with Globe Life Insurance Company. He was married to Margaret Ann Norton of LaJunta, Colorado in 1943. They had two children: Margaret Ann (1950) and Mack Jackson (1959) who both live in Oklahoma. Jack is buried in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

William Calvin (1930) was born in Fayetteville. He graduated from the Springdale Schools and Oklahoma A&M College in Stillwater, Oklahoma. Bill spent two years in the U. S. Army and then entered the agriculture business as a horticulturist with Walker Brothers. In 1957, he assumed the operation and management of Walker Brothers Insurance, Inc. Bill has been active in civic and industry organizations serving as president of several on both a local and state level. Bill is married to Betty Jean Hooker (1928) of Seligman, Missouri. They have two daughters: Juanita Jean and Jan Elizabeth.

Juanita Jean "Jeanne" (1948) was born in Springfield, Missouri. Jeanne graduated from the Springdale Schools and Missouri University in Columbia. She owns Jean Walker and Associates, an advertising agency, in Miami, Florida.

Jan Elizabeth (1959) was born in Springdale and graduated from the Springdale Schools and Southern Methodist University in Dallas. Jan is a fashion model with the Kim Dawson Agency of Dallas, Texas, having worked in both the United States and Europe.

The Charles Russell Walker Family - 1987

Charles Russell Walker

Charles Russell Walker was the third child of William Arnold "Arnie" Walker and Violet Lennie Ferguson, who were married February 11, 1917. They made their home at Fly Creek, Arkansas. To this union, five children were born: William Lee 1919, an infant born and died 1920, Charles Russell 1921, Paul Jack 1923 and Mary Vinita 1926. Arnie was a farmer, producing apples and tomatoes on the hill above Fly Creek. He was the fifth child of Lee A. Walker born February 15, 1847, and Julina K. Reed born April 16, 1861. They were married January 14, 1877 at Fly Creek, where they made their home and their seven children were born: Buena Vista 1877, Egbert 1880, May 1883, Virgil 1885, William Arnold "Arnie" 1888, Emma 1890, and Zilma "Zee" 1894. Lee was known as "Banjo" Walker in this area. He, his daughter, Emma and her husband Henry Miller, were often heard and folk music gatherings or just playing for their enjoyment.

W. Lee and Russell began school at Fly Creek. In August 1928, their father, Arnie died. This made quite a change in their lives. Violet took her family to live in Viney Grove, Arkansas with Arnie's sister Buena Walker Stevens. Jack and Buena Stevens took the family in and added a room on to their home. As they had no children of their own, the burden was not as great as it would have been for Violet's sister. Dessa and her husband, Virgil Walker (who was also Arnie's brother) as they had seven children of their own.

After one year of school at Viney Grove, Violet took her two eldest sons, Lee - 10 and Russell - 8, and returned to Cane Hill where she rented a house. Three of Dessa and Virgil's girls came to live with her, to help, and to go to school at Cane Hill. The two younger children, Paul and Vinita returned home after about a year. Lee, Russell and Paul entered school in Cane Hill, but Russell then was struck with what the Doctor then called TB of the bone. He was told he would not walk again. However, the next year he returned to school on crutches. In 1977, and again in 1986 Russell had his hip replaced, the Virginia doctors called it a Genetic Bone Disease.

At about age 12, Russell went to work on Mr. J. F. Yates farm for five cents an hour doing general farm chores such as: milking, carrying water to the steam thrasher and pulling weeds. After about a year of farm work, Mr. Yates asked him if he would come to work at his Mercantile in Cane Hill. Mr. Yates was among the first in the area to have a car. Mrs. Yates taught Russell how to drive, and later when he had his license, he drove the delivery truck for the Mercantile up to the Cove Creek area.

Russell's brother, Lee, had gone to California earlier, so upon graduating from Cane Hill School in 1940, Russell and two friends drove Lee's car to California. Shortly, Russell was called to serve in the Army during World War II. He was overseas until 1946. Upon returning to the States, he went to watchmaking school in Kansas City, Missouri.

During one visit home, he visited his Aunt Buena where he met Betty Ruth Neal. She was renting a room from Mrs. Stevens, as many young people did during that time, so she could easily get to school. Her parents lived too far from town for her to walk. They married January 12, 1948 and moved to California. They have four children who were born in California and Arkansas alternately. Charles Larry was born 1948 in Susanville, California, Donald Eugene was born 1951 in Fayetteville, Arkansas, Candes Ann was born 1952 in Willows, California and Barbara Ruth was born 1955 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Russell worked in the timber and watchmaking while in California during their early years of marriage, but they decided raising their children on the farm in Arkansas was a much more desirable atmosphere for this important task. Russell and Betty spent many years being involved with the children's school, church and 4-H work. They received a twenty-five year appreciation plaque from the Bethel Grove 4-H Club. Also, they received twenty-five year pins from the Washington County 4-H Clubs for dedicated work. Larry now lives on a farm in viney Grove, Arkansas and is married to BeAnn Dennis. They have a successful business, Walker Masonry Company. They have three sons: twins, Charles Douglas and James Brian born in 1967 and Eric Wade born in 1974. Donald received his BS degree in Agriculture from the University of Arkansas in 1973. He is the president of the First National Bank at Siloam Springs, Arkansas where he and his wife, Sheroll Smith live. They have one daughter, Jessica Dawn born in 1979. Candes received her BS degree in Home Economics Education from the University of Arkansas in 1975. She is married to Jim Wilson and has two children: David Oliver born 1978 and Laura Ann born 1980.

Barbara is married to Clay Woody and has three children: Jeremy James born 1978, Kara Suzanne born 1985, and Andrew Clayton born 1987.

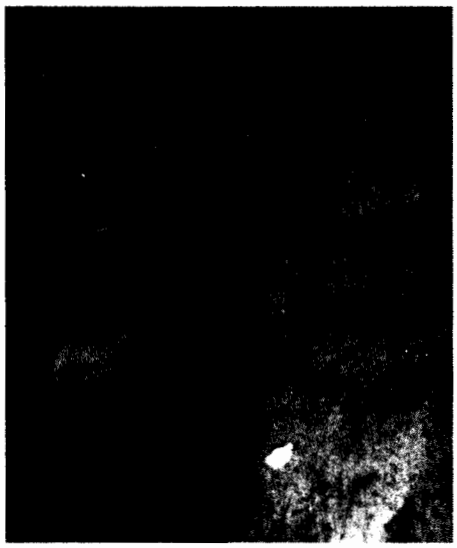
George W. Wallis

George Washington Wallis was born September 5, 1835 in Marshall County, Tennessee. His parents were John I. Wallis born August 17, 1796 in North Carolina and Mary L. Wallis born February 5, 1803 in North Carolina. John died May 16, 1862 and Mary L. Wallis died August 14, 1873 both near Fort Douglas in Johnson County, Arkansas.



George W. Wallis, John Wallis and Patsy A. M. Robertson Wallis

George W. Wallis came to Arkansas with his parents before 1850 from Tennessee. The family first settled in the Fort Douglas, Johnson County area. These are the known brothers and sisters of George W. Wallis: Sarah C. Wallis born June 29, 1821 died November 16, 1857, married a Johnson: John Irby Wallis born 1826 in North Carolina and never married, died in Arkansas; Mary A. Wallis born August 22, 1838 died January 28, 1853 buried in Arkansas; and Elizabeth Wallis born about 1825 married Buckley H. Rowbotham. George W. married Miss Martha "Patsy" Ann Monroe Robinson at Limestone, Newton County, Arkansas on November 11, 1860 on "Patsy's" 22nd birthday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Robinson.

Mr. Wallis was in the Civil War having served for both the North and the South. He stayed out of the war until the conscript law was passed. Then the Home Guards went through the country and forced all men who were 18 years of age and under 45 years of age to join the Confederate Army. Mr. Wallis was put in Company H of Morgan's Regiment. He tried to escape and get to the Union Army twice, but was unsuccessful. A third time he escaped and managed to hide out in the mountains from the first of September 1863 to January 1, 1864, when he joined Company E, 2nd Arkansas Infantry Volunteers at Clarksville, Johnson County, Arkansas. He fought in the Battle of Prairie Grove. He was honorably discharged at Clarksville, August 8, 1865, having become First Sergeant, Company E 2nd Regiment Arkansas Volunteer Infantry.

In July 21, 1891 his post office was Clarksville, Johnson County, Arkansas. In September, 1898 he lived at Rosetta, Johnson County and lived there until in 1907. At that time George W. and Patsy Wallis along with their granddaughter Mae Carter came to Washington County, Arkansas, and settled up near the old Osburn Post Office near the head of Middle Fork of White River.

One story told to me when I was very young by my Grandmother Patsy Wallis goes like this: George W.'s grandfather was given a tract of land by the Spanish government for some service rendered. This land was never claimed and after the Louisania Purchase all land grants not claimed were cancelled. George W. later traced this grant and found the land was up near the Great Lakes.

George W. was a farmer and a Mason. He was a very good scribe and wrote many letters of correspondence to his friends and kinsfolk.

He died March 19, 1909 and Patsy A. Wallis died September 1, 1921. Both are buried in the Nickell Cemetery located about 6 miles south west of Durham, Arkansas.

The children of G. W. and Patsy Wallis were: Mary A. Wallis born August 29, 1861, married Zade D. Norton March 10, 1895 and died April 21, 1934. Tennessee C. Wallis born March 26, 1864 married W. M. Phillips February 4, 1887 died February 18, 1955. George W. Wallis, Jr. born July 13, 1866 died July 30, 1871. Martha E. Wallis born November 22, 1868 died August 3, 1875. Sarah Alice Wallis born December 27, 1870 married William B. Wilson March 10, 1889, died August 1, 1951. Ruth Everil Wallis born December 22, 1872 married Miles Nickell March 1, 1899 died March 11, 1938. Rosa E. Wallis born August 19, 1875 died September 17, 1875. Cora Caladonia Wallis born September 24, 1876 married Johnethan H. Carter September 1, 1895 died April 17, 1904. John Irby Wallis born April 16, 1879 married Maggie Myrtle Lemaster November 7, 1902 died April 3, 1972.

Fredrick Lee Walters

Fredrick Lee Walters was born in Lono, Arkansas, February 24, 1883. In later years, his family migrated to Texas, and on October 22, 1905, he married Willie Bess. They lived near Bowie, Texas, until 1918 when they moved to Springdale. By this time, they had three children: Ethel, Jewell and Thurmond. They purchased what was then known as the Turley place southwest of Springdale. After much hard work and dedication, they began to realize their dream of successful fruit, berry and grape growers. Two more children were born to them: Espen and Mildred.

The going got tough in the 30s. The only heat we had was a "king" heater, and Fred (affectionately known as "Papa" to us) cut the only wood he could find - green apple wood. We all hovered over that stove and our backs literally froze. How Papa fed us all, I'll never know. They raised chickens and hogs, and killed and cured their own pork. (I've never tasted any ham or fried chicken to compare since.) They had a jersey cow that provided us with good milk. Once Papa sold a badly needed cow to procure money so that Ethel could continue her education at the University of Arkansas and become a teacher.

Papa, as well as Mama, was religious and they were members of the First Baptist Church of Springdale. I never even heard Papa say one curse word. The closest he ever came to it was one dark night he got up for a drink of water. We heard him groping around and then . . . WHAM . . .he stumbled over a chair that seemed to have deliberately planted itself in his path and cruelly clobber his big toe. . .all he did was mutter under his breath..."Ouch... You devil!"

He loved to sing and most often sang religious songs with quartets. Mama, when she could get the little ones asleep on a nearby pallet, would often accompany them on the organ. On rainy days, when he couldn't do his work outside, he would get his songbooks and practice reading shaped notes and singing for hours.

In 1933, they lost their farm, and we all felt the pangs of poverty. These were lean years. Papa took any job he could find, and one fall was even forced to temporarily leave us and go to the cotton fields in northeastern Arkansas to pick cotton. He would send home approximately $6.00, which would be a week's wages. Mama tried to spread it as far as it would go and did all in her power to keep the home fires burning while he was gone.

Fred had a brother, Raphael C. (Rafe) Walters, who owned a tailor shop located on Emma Avenue across the street from where the First State Bank is now located. Both of his boys, at different times, worked in their Uncle Rafe's shop. Thurmond got paid ten cents an hour and this he used to help further his education at the University of Arkansas. R. C. (Rafe) Walters later became Tax Assessor of Washington County.

Espen, the other trainee, utilized his knowledge and expertise in tailoring and put in his own shop after he returned from World War II. This shop, known as Walters' Cleaners, is located on North Main Street.

On April 14, 1943, Papa was cutting wood when he had a stroke. Three days later, he died at age 60. A neighbor came to visit him while he was still conscious. He told Papa he had been setting strawberries. Papa said, "Setting strawberries is hard work". With these words, he lapsed into a coma. His last words "hard work" seemed fitting and seemed to sum up his life.

He didn't live to know any of his six grandchildren: James Lee Walters, David Espen Walters, Michael Fredrick Walters, Janet Lynn (Walters) Hale, Vicky Diann Clark Strange and Ralph Edward Hurst.

All five of his children are still living: Ethel married John Lightfoot, who is now deceased. Ethel is living at New Port Richey, Florida. Jewell married Howard William Hurst and they reside at Holiday, Florida. Thurmond married Winifred Hodges and they settled in Raytown, Missouri. Lemuel Espen married Lois Grey and they are Springdale residents, and I (Mildred) married Doyle L. Clark and we are Springdale residents.

Willie (Bess) Walters

Willie Estelle Bess was born in Dallas, Texas, February 8, 1886. On October 22, 1905, she married Fredrick Lee Walters, and lived near Bowie, Texas, until 1918 when they packed what they could bring by train and came to Springdale. At this time, they had three children: Ethel, Jewell and Thurmond.

Rumors of successful fruit and berry farmers had enticed them to make this bold move to Washington County. Their dreams that led them here began to materialize. They were blessed with two more children: Espen and Mildred. When I was four years old, they purchased twenty additional acres and built a new home (where Lindsey Mercantile is now located). Then came a new wagon AND a Model T Ford.

But the Great Depression hit and along with drought, hails, freezes, it became apparent they couldn't overcome such obstacles and, as was the case of many farmers, they lost their farm.

Spirits bent, but not broken, they rented a place in town. Fred took any odd job he could get and Willie went to work at Nelson's Canning Factory peeling tomatoes.

Then, one day, we could afford a RADIO. When all the chores were done, we would gather around the radio and listen to "Lum and Abner". During the day, Willie could fit it into her schedule to shell peas, peel potatoes or iron and listen to "Ma Perkins". Through radio she began to broaden her scope and eventually became very knowledgable in world affairs.

By 1936, we had acquired a small acreage northeast of Springdale, and were living there when Fred passed away. Willie was only 57 and her world had fallen apart. She tried to pick up the pieces of her life. She, almost single-handed, managed to get that years' strawberry crop harvested. She hitched up the team and drove the wagon to town to sell her berries. She dug sweet potatoes, picked black-eyed peas, milked the cow. She could do anything. Her livelihood was at stake and she was undaunted.

In the fall of 1943, we moved back to town. The other place harboured too many memories for Willie.

World War II came and went and her sons and sons-in-law survived.

As her grandchildren were born, her life was enriched and took on a new meaning and purpose. She was a wonderful baby-sitter, and enjoyed cooking delicious meals for her kids and grand-kids.

Willie lived to be 97 years old. She passed away November 3, 1983. She spent her last eight and a half years in a nursing home. She became a favorite there. . .her personality changed from a quiet, reserved lady to a mischievous, outgoing character. We never knew what to expect from her. She would sing verse after verse of old-timey songs such as "Ole Dan Tucker" and "Sally Gooden". She sang one narrative ballad relating to, when a tornado blew Sherman, Texas away. It (seemingly) had one hundred verses and she knew them all - word for word.

Her "Papa", she told us, was a rancher and a fiddler. This, no doubt, is where she acquired her repertoire of songs. She was close to her Papa. . .she said the only time he ever spanked her was when she hid his "baccer" (tobacco).

She loved to tell the aides at the nursing home her jokes and recite poetry. Truthfully, she became quite a "ham".

When they had church services at the nursing home, Willie was always there when able. In my memories, I will always see her there in her wheelchair, wearing her favorite pink sweater, lap robe and fluffy pink houseshoes, singing "Amazing Grace". . .her face radiant, her eyes brightly illuminated. She seemed to be somewhere between earth and Heaven. . .. especially close to Heaven.

William Albert "Will" Ward

In 1881, my father, William Albert "Will" Ward and his parents, Johnie Cole and Nancy (Muncy) Ward came from Jackson County, Kentucky, in a covered wagon.

Will was one year old then. They setled in Madison County, Arkansas on Ferrell's Creek, near Aurora. After one year they went back to Kentucky. When Will was eight, in 1888, they came back to Arkansas by railroad, stopped in Fayetteville and rode the St. Paul branch train to Combs, Arkansas. There they were met by relatives and went back to Ferrell's Creek by wagon. By now Johnie and Nancy had Will, Susan, Carter and Mary (Mary was born in Arkansas).

They homesteaded a farm and donated land for the Ferrell's Creek school.

In 1892, Johnie Cole Ward died of pneumonia. After a few years Nancy Ward married Josh Cox. They had three daughters, Mahalah, Leola and Alta. (The first two died young).

The spring of 1907, Susan and Mary Ward went to Fayetteville in a covered wagon with their uncle Willie Muncy.

On their return home to Madison County, they were crossing the middle fork of the White River (east of Fayetteville where Highway 16 bridge is). A big rain had fallen on upper Middle Fork of the White River, and just as they were fording the stream a wall of water came rushing down the river overturning the wagon, drowning all three people and the team of mules that were pulling the wagon.

Some people came along soon after it happened and pulled Susan's body, still warm, from where it was stuck between one wheel and the wagon. In her pocket was a letter, and from that the family was notified. Willie Muncy's body wasn't found until 10 days later and Mary's body wasn't found for 18 days. Willie is buried at Drakes Creek Cemetery. Susan and Mary were laid to rest at Aurora Cemetery.

In January 23, 1903, Will Ward married Fannie Garrett. They became parents to eight children. Clara (married John Durbin), Lloyd (married Reba Parker), Howard (married Edyth Neal), Milton (married Anna Counts), Dora (married Hershel Harriman), Edith (married Guy Dill), Elizabeth (married Jack Warham), and Lahoma (married George Lahey).

Will worked for the railroad on the St. Paul branch, operated canning factories, groceries and farmed.

In the early 1920s, Jeff and Lizzie Garrett, parents of Fannie Garrett Ward, lived in Springdale where Jeff operated a shoe "cobbler" shop.

In 1920, Nancy, Josh Cox and their youngest daughter, Alta, moved to Fayetteville. They lived in a small brown house behind what in 1988, is now Gold Kist, Inc. Johnie Cole, Nancy and Josh are all buried in the Aurora Cemetery near Huntsville.

Alta Cox married Loy Kinzer. Their children are Doris Ann (married Wayne Smith), and James "Jim" Kinzer (married Irene Cline). Loy died February 6, 1988.

In 1952, Will Ward moved to Fayetteville and operated a small grocery store and gas station on Huntsville Street. Fannie, his wife, died in 1959 at the age of 70.

After retiring, Will lived with a daughter, Edith Dill and her husband Guy Dill on Hatfield St. Will died in 1964, at the age of 84. Will and Fannie are buried in the Drakes Creek Cemetery in Madison County.

Clara (Ward) Durbin and Lloyd Ward are buried in California. Reba, Lloyd's wife lives in Springdale.

Will's only brother, Carter Ward, married Fannie's sister, Temperance Garrett and they moved to Fayetteville in 1920. Helen Taylor, Clifford and Jack Ward are their children, all presently living in Fayetteville. Their other children are Everett and Bill Ward, Chloe Fritts and Maxine Brently. Carter and his family took care of the Fayetteville City Park.

Dora Ward, born June 4, 1913, married Hershel Harriman, born December 28, 1907, son of Marion and Orlena Neal Harriman, on April 4, 1930.

Their children are Chloe, born September 13, 1934, and Jack, born February 12, 1936. Chloe married Floyd Springston, Jr., October 15, 1951. They live in the Mount Olive Community near Elkins. They are the parents of Debbie (married Marshall Tumer), Sandy (married Darrell Shumate), Marilyn (married Bill Coffelt) and Steve.

Sandra and Darrell Shumate have three daughters and live in Stigler, Oklahoma. Marilyn and Bill Coffelt live in Elkins.

Jack Harriman went to California to work and while there he met Rita Montgomery. They are the parents of Belinda (married Tim Curtis), Randall (married Amy McLain), Tommy and Jason. Belinda and Tim have one daughter and one son, live in Bowling Green, Kentucky. Randall and Amy live in Abilene, Texas. Jack is a minister for the Church of Christ in Decatur, Alabama.

Harry Eben Ware

Harry Eben Ware, prominent fruitman of Springdale, was born 22 March 1877 at Hancock, Wisconsin. His father, Walter Macon Ware, a native of Hancock, New Hampshire, was the seventh generation of Wares to live in New England, the first one having settled in Dedham, Massachusetts about 1642. His mother, Louise Elizabeth French, was a descendant of Mayflower passenger Stephen Hopkins.

At the age of eleven years, Harry moved with his parents to Madison Co., Arkansas, where on 17 September 1898 he married Stella Williams. She was the daughter of the only fruit tree nurseryman in Madison County at that time, Garrett Williams, and Belle (Wilson) Williams. Harry farmed, grew apples and peaches, and operated an apple drier. About 1920 the family lived for a short time east of Siloam Springs, then permanently settled at Springdale, where they finished raising their four boys and four girls. In religion, the family was Methodist, and since the Methodist Assembly Grounds on Mt. Sequoyah at nearby Fayetteville was just getting established, Harry Ware donated a number of hard maple trees he had dug up in Madison County woodlands, to beautify the Assembly grounds, as he did for his Springdale home. He also planted a hard maple tree at his parents grave at Springdale's Bluff Cemetery, where he was also buried in October 1949, and Stella in January 1955.

Their children were: Hazel, born 1899 and married Aud Edward Stringfield; Earl Fountain Ware, born 1902, moved to Jacksonville, Florida and married Ethel Higginbotham; Walker Macon "Jack" Ware, born 1904, moved to Florida and married Althea Monroe; Vera Jean, born 1906 and married Roy Walter Guinn; Clara Mable, born 1911, also moved to Florida and married John David Green; Keith Williams Ware, born 1916 and married Irene Whitlock (they had triplet sons born 1951); Lee E. W. Ware, born 1918, married Hettie Francis Cowherd and moved to Arizona; and Wilma Louise, born 1920 and married John Bert Sumner of Bentonville.

Seneca Eugene Ware

Seneca Eugene Ware was born 29 August 1862 at Hancock, Wisconsin, and moved to Washington County, Arkansas around 1892. His parents, Walter Macon Ware and Louise Elizabeth (French) Ware, were natives of New Hampshire and New York. While a farmer in Wisconsin, Walter Ware had planted a "Centennial Forest" of 1,876 pine trees, his living memorial to America's Centennial in 1876. Walter, one of Wisconsin's first practicing conservationists, was said to have moved to northwest Arkansas after eating some of the tasty apples grown here. Walter and Louise Ware are buried in Springdale's Bluff Cemetery.

In 1886, in Wisconsin, Seneca Ware married Eva Adel Irvin, and had two daughters born there. By 1900 they had a fruit farm in the Son's Chapel community of Prairie Township in this county, and two more daughters were born. Their two story home, facing north on Highway 45, just east of the Son's Chapel Cemetery, is still standing, now as a lovely brick home. Seneca, Eva, their little girl Beth that died from a fall on a pitchfork in the barn, their daughter Lelah Williams, and Eva's father William Irvin, are buried at Son's Chapel Cemetery (for which the Wares donated a strip of land on the east side, to the already existing cemetery).

Their four daughters were: (1) Adell Agnes, born 1887, married Norris Jefferson "Dud" Clark of Goshen, and moved to Taft, California. (2) Lelah, born 1890, married Kirby D. Williams and lived at Janesville, Wisconsin. (3) Beth, born 1895 and died 1905. (4) Mable Louise, born 1897, married William Franklin Van Zandt at Hartville, Missouri, then moved to Washington state after 1930.

An article on the Ware family, with pictures, was published in the August 1983 issue of Washington County Historical Society Flashback.

Grace Hulsizer Warford

Grace was the sixth of eight children. Born in Westville, Oklahoma she moved to Round Mountain (Washington County) at the age of three. She is the daughter of John Francis Hulsizer and Mary Nora Elizabeth Oxford.

John Hulsizer was born somewhere in Nebraska, March 22, 1875 and died December 2, 1962. Mary was born at Oxford Bend (Washington County) October 5, 1887 and died June 15, 1932.

Her brothers and sisters were: Floyd, born Round Mountain 1900 and died 1901; Lena May Hamilton, born Round Mountain September 5, 1902; Emmons Ellis Hulsizer, born Round Mountain August 23, 1904; Dicie Opal McGarrah, born Round Mountain September 5, 1907. Cecil William Hulsizer, born Round Mountain April 5, 1910; Grace Warford, born Westville, Oklahoma August 11, 1912; Lloyd Thomas, born Round Mountain May 19, 1915, died August 30, 1982; Leone Maggie, born Round Mountain March 18, 1918. Since Grace was the only person in the family without a middle name, her sister, Leone, started calling her Grace Darling. Grace grew up on a farm at Round Mountain and met her husband, Hozie Warford, at a pie supper at the Round Mountain School. They were married June 11, 1938 and moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas. They lived most of their life in the Fayetteville with the exception of the war years. During that time, they lived in Seattle, Washington where Hozie worked as an under-water welder in the ship yards.

Hozie Warford was the son of Pete and Fannie Brynum Warford of Delaney, Arkansas (Madison County). Hozie James Warford was born July 23, 1912 in Delaney Arkansas and died October 21, 1976 in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Grace and Hozie had three children: Phyllis Louise born Fayetteville, Arkansas April 26, 1939; Phillip Jay, born Fayetteville, Arkansas December 2, 1944; Linda Kay born Springdale, Arkansas January 25, 1953.

Phyllis is presently married to William Allen Stephenson, born in Fairmont, Missouri June 25, 1926. They live in Independence, Missouri and have nine children: Roberta Marie Hanson, born Lawton, Oklahoma July 21, 1957; Marc Randal Hanson, born Independence, Missouri February 25, 1960; Marla Gay Hanson, born Independence, Missouri June 18, 1961; Alan Russell born Independence, Missouri December 14, 1962; Clinton Otis Stephenson, born Kirksville, Missouri June 4, 1959; Michael Lee Stephenson, born Independence, Missouri April 22, 1964; Keith Edward, born Kansas City, Missouri September 6, 1968; James Kelly, born Kansas City, Missouri April 4, 1970.

Phillip Warford is married to Joyce Sue Denney, born Huntsville, Arkansas, December 8, 1942. They live in Fayetteville and have one child, Bradley Jay Warford born Fayetteville, Arkansas November 24, 1971.

Linda is married to Noel Randall Sisemore born Fayetteville, Arkansas July 24, 1950. They live in Elkins, Arkansas and have one child, Julie Ann Sisemore, born Fayetteville, Arkansas January 28, 1986.

Elliott Loyd Warren

A warm sunny day is coming to an end as the summer sun drops toward the horizon. It appears as a red disc through the atmospheric haze hanging over the hills about six miles northeast of Fayetteville, Arkansas. Suddenly, from a grove of trees marking a house site several hundred feet above what is now known as Oakland Road, the sound of a horn breaks the evening stillness. At first, there are a few trills up and down the harmonic scale, perhaps a few bars of the Star Spangled Banner followed by other popular tunes of the period. This "solo concert" continues until night covers the countryside in darkness. Strangers wonder who the serenader might be but not so for nearby neighbors for they know that the soloist is Elliott Loyd Warren "keeping in practice" for up coming band concerts at various reunions and community affairs. Sometimes, in the distance, one hears Elliott's brothers, Ben and John, likewise serenading the close of another workday.

The course of human events that led to this word picture began with the birth of Elliott, September 28, 1890, about six miles east of Huntsville, Arkansas (see J. J. Warren, this volume). When he was about five years old, his family moved to Texas where they lived near DeLeon, Commanche County, for seven years. In March, 1903, the family arrived in the Zion-Oakland community about six miles northeast of Fayetteville. Elliott spent the remainder of his life in this community, passing away November 25, 1977 at the age of 87. Something of the legacy he left is described in the following narration.

As the writers remember, Elliott sometimes referred to his "Texas" connection but he was never able to revisit the Texas homesite. Strangely, there is no recall of his describing, except in a very general way, the long wagon trips to and from Commanche County. He was 12 years old at the time of the return trip to Arkansas so evidently he considered his recollections of the trip too insignigicant to dwell on in an expansive way.

Elliott completed school at Zion, District 11, and in fact attended classes beyond the eighth grade requirements to strengthen his academic skills. During these years he and his brothers developed their musical interests in vocal and instrumental music. This resulted in the "Warren Band" and to their participation in the Zion Band (see Flashback 35(3):43). During his musical career Elliott contributed to various other band units including Barrs' Band, Fayetteville City Band, the Johnson Brothers' Bands and perhaps others. He thoroughly enjoyed band music, playing a baritone horn throughout his career. In the period following World War I to the 1940s, there was rarely a Washington County Fair that he did not play for, or work for, an association of which he was extremely proud. He took pleasure in band marches and was a participant in the 50th Anniversary Celebration of the University of Arkansas as well as in the annual Apple Blossom Festivals at Rogers, Fourth of July Celebrations at Eureka Springs and at other community centers.

At one of these community concerts Elliott was attracted to a comely young lady, Nona Eva Blake, born December 9, 1898, at Draketown, Madison County. The daughter of William T. and Lucinda Ellender (Lula) Blake, Nona was a descendant of Rial Williams, a pioneer settler in Washington County (see Rial Williams and William Tolliver Blake stories this volume). This courtship resulted in their marriage 22 December, 1914, at Goshen by Rev. W. I. Elledge. For their honeymoon they went by buggy to Monte Ne, a flourishing tourist center at that time.

Following marriage, Elliott and Nona moved to a box frame house near Oakland in which they lived until it burned down in the 1922-23 winter. This castastrophe happened as the family was visiting Nona's parents at Goshen, helping them to move to a new house. Other than the clothes on their backs, Elliott, Nona and children lost all their belongings in the burn-out. Quickly relatives and friends rallied to construct a replacement house. Oak trees were cut off the Blake farm near Goshen and logs transported to Sweeney's Mill for sawing into lumber for the new house. William T. Blake and son Orion had just rebuilt the Goshen School house. Salvage lumber from the old structure ws provided for use in the new house. Elliott and Nona were to live the rest of their active lives and to raise their children in this house which still stands in 1988. Over time various improvements made it a comfortable house in contrast to its starkness in its earlier years.

Life was difficult for Elliott and Nona. Their initial farm consisted of 10 acres, which along with rented land, provided a subsistence livelihood. Much of their food was produced on the farm. The sale of strawberries, eggs, cream, melons and hourly labor provided for minimal cash flow needs. Following the burnout, Elliott went to Swink, Colorado in the 1923-24 winter to work in a sugar mill. This was the only time he ever worked outside of Arkansas. In the mid-1920s he purchased a gas-powered circular saw unit — cutting wood on a custom basis for sale to local residents. For years Elliott took pride in growing melons for sale in Fayetteville where he appreciated the loyalty of repeat customers. Aside from home deliveries his favorite site for curbside sales was near the intersection of Center and Church Streets. In early years he hauled melons and other produce to market in a wagon or buggy. During the latter years he used pickup trucks and during the summer his was a familiar figure on the streets of Fayetteville.

Eventually the farmstead encompassed 60 acres on which Elliott grew his crops and pastured livestock. When eligibility for Social Security benefits was extended to farmers, Elliott, even though past 65 years of age, worked hard to establish eligibility. In the meantime, Nona, working as a domestic, also established eligibility for Social Security benefits. These benefits meant much to their welfare during the later years of their lives.

About a year following their marriage, Elliott's and Nona's first child, Lloyd Oliver, arrived on December 27, 1915. He was joined by a brother Chester Ralph, December 10, 1917. Chester had a physical impairment and also developed a stomach disorder which resulted in his untimely death July 13, 1918. His death was a severe emotional shock that Nona remembered throughout her life. A daughter, Helen, was born December 6, 1919, followed by Charles Elza, June 23, 1922. On September 12, 1934, another daughter, Velma Marie was born completing the family. All of their children attended school at Son's Chapel, District 4 (see Son's Chapel history, this volume). Elliott also served as a director of the Son's Chapel School.

Elliott was a charter member of Oakland Missionary Baptist Church to which he and Nona brought their children. In the mid 1930s they joined Braden Missionary Baptist Church as charter members. This church dissolved after a few years and Elliott and Nona returned to Oakland. In 1952 they joined Central Baptist Church of Fayetteville where they remained until their deaths.

The eldest children, Lloyd and Helen, finished grade school in the early years of the Great Depression. Attending high school was a severe challenge because of transportation and tuition costs. Family income was inadequate to cover these costs. Elliott worked on the construction of the Arkansas Western Gas line from Ozark to Fayetteville, also at the Land-use project at Wedington planting trees that now cover the hills. To supplement cash income and to enable her children to attend high school Nona worked for fifty cents a day plus room and board. Nona was a patient, kind compassionate mother who always encouraged her children to be morally straight, to work and study hard and to strive for self-improvement spiritually, morally, intellectually and materially. She often expressed gratitude for the successful marriages of all her children and they, without exception, to paraphrase Proverbs 31:28, "Rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." In our opinion this accolade is appropriate epitaph to a wonderful woman!

To further recound the legacy of the Elliott Loyd Warren family each of the four surviving children give a summary of our respective lives. We do this as a tribute to our parents and to our ancestors before them.

I, Lloyd Oliver Warren, was born December 27, 1915, at the family home previously described. Dr. D. Christian of Springdale was the attending physician (see Dr. Christian story, this volume). My elementary schooling was obtained at Son's Chapel under some very capable and dedicated teachers. Among them I would name Pearl Harp Spyres, Nellie Bollenbacher and Rema Osburn Carson. During the later 1920s and 30s I participated in the developing 4-H programs for rural youths. One year my project was poultry. A pen of White Rock hens was exhibited at the Washington County Fair but because we had eaten the rooster, I could not qualify for a first prize ribbon.

After grade school I worked 6-1/2 years with my parents on the farm and for neighbors for hourly pay when work was available. I worked for 5 cents an hour and during winter helped cut firewood for 25 cents a rick. In September of 1935, with some assistance from an aunt, I enrolled in the University High School. Part of the time I helped carry the Northwest Arkansas Times over a 17 mile route in payment for a ride to and from the campus. I completed high school requirements in three and one-half years. With the assistance of Prof. Charles Cross, the Rotary Club of Fayetteville loaned me enough money to enroll in the College of Education for the spring semester of 1939. My plan was to ohtain a teacher's certificate and teach in some rural school. Because of the severe competition for the available student labor johs, I was unable to find parttime work until mid-April of 1939. Dr. W. J. Baerg, Head of the Department of Entomology, employed me at 20 cents an hour to care for a colony of tarantulas which he was studying at that time. Needless to say I had to undergo an attitudinal adjustment concerning the role and behavior of tarantulas. In time, I learned to enjoy the creatures! Thus, between the generosity of the Rotary Club and of Dr. Baerg, the door was opened for me to continue pursuit of a college degree. I worked for room and board for my grandparents, William T. and Lula Blake who lived at 205 West South Street, Fayetteville.

World War II broke out as I was finishing my junior year of college. I was immediately subject to the draft. Enlisting in the Navy as a photographer in February 1942, I was given a four year tour of places I never dreamed of seeing. After training at San Diego, California and Pensacola, Florida, I was assigned to independent duty with the Aircraft Engine Overhaul Base, Noumea, New Caledonia. In May of 1944, I was temporarily assigned to Headquarters, Third Marine Corps, for the Mariannas Operation. We assembled at a Marine base on Gaudacanal, embarking on ships for the trip to Guam. After Guam and Saipan were retaken I was shipped back to New Caledonia in September, 1944, to find my home unit packing up for transshipment to Guam. I, with some other ratings, were assigned to Headquarters, South Pacific, Noumea, to finish our overseas tour of duty. In February, 1945, I arrived back in the states for R and R and was re-assigned to the Naval Photographic Sciences Laboratory near Washington D. C. I completed my active naval career at this base and was discharged at Bainbridge, Maryland, December, 1945. I returned to the University of Arkansas to complete both the B. S. and M. S. degrees. In June, 1947, I was appointed instructor in the Department of Entomology. Resigning this position in August, 1951, I enrolled at Kansas State College, Manhattan, finishing work for a Ph. D. in Entonmology in January, 1954. On April 1, 1954, I was re-employed as assistant professor in the University of Arkansas. I remained at the University, serving in the professorial ranks and from 1973-1983 as the director of the Arkansas Agricultural Experiment Station, until retirement July, 1986.

During my Sophomore year in college I met the young lady, Ruby Pearl Burks, whom I was to marry February 10, 1942, at Cassville, Missouri. At this time Ruby was a senior in the University High School. She was also a native of Washington County, born January 12, 1920, at Wheeler. She too, had experienced delayed entry into high school and worked for board and room while attending school for half-days. Not wishing a publicized wedding we drove to Cassville, Missouri on a snowy, cold day in a Model A Ford coupe that I had purchased for $125.00, payable at $8.00/monthly, courtesy of McIlroy Bank and Trust Company. We spent our honeymoon at Monett, Missouri.

I was ordered to report for active duty March, 1942, to the San Diego Naval Training Station. Following her graduation in May, Ruby joined me in San Diego. She found employment with the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation helping to build the famous B-24s, a workhorse of the World War II period. Ruby remained in San Diego while I was overseas. After my release from active duty she joined me in May, 1946, at Fayetteville, where we established our home, living in rented quarters until we were able to purchase a new four room house in July, 1947. Our family began to increase when Michele was born January 1, 1950. While we were at Manhattan, Denise arrived on July 27, 1952. The day of her arrival was the hottest day of the year and Manhattan registered the highest official temperature of the day — and the hospital birthing room was not air-conditioned. Following our return to Fayetteville, Lynnette was born July 18, 1954, completing our family. All of our daughters chose to arrive on Sunday which must be some kind of record. Michele had her Masters degree in Interior Design and has taught Interior Design in the Department of Home Economics. She married Roy Lang, September 6, 1969. Roy is a hydro-geologist from Monette, Arkansas. Denise is teacher in the Springdale School system and is working toward a Masters degree in Education. She married George E. Jones, May 31, 1975. George is enrolled in Civil Engineering at the University. They are the parents of our eldest grandson, Mark Warren Jones, born December 28, 1978. Lynnette attended the University of Arkansas and has worked at the libraries at UAF, UALR and at the University of California, Davis. She married Richard Cartwright of Fifty-Six, December 18, 1976. They have two children, Seth, born July 2, 1979 and Amanda, born October 11, 1981. Richard is working toward a Ph. D. in Plant Pathology, University of California, Davis.

As a family, one of the greatest experiences we shared was in 1968. I had a research grant from the National Science Foundation which included joint studies with Yugoslavian scientists. We spent the summer in Yugoslavia. Renting a car in London, we visited 10 countries on our trip to and from Yugoslavia. Aside from the research studies, the educational value and enjoyment of visiting historical centers of Europe was an exhilarating experience for all of us. This then, is a brief description of our share of the legacy of the Elliott Loyd Warren family.

I, Helen Warren Murphy, was born on the home place near Fayetteville, December 6, 1919. My elementary education was obtained at the Son's Chapel School and I attended high school in Hominy, Oklahoma. In 1938, I met a young man, Dale Murphy, a graduate of Magnolia A & M College, and a pre-med student at the University. Dale was from Foreman, Little River County, Arkansas. After a brief courtship we were married and we will celebrate 50 years of marriage in 1988. To our union we have been blessed with three wonderful children. Wayne, our only son, is the eldest, followed by Karen and Margaret. Wayne is Terminal Manager and in sales for Ash Grove Cement Company at Oklahoma City. He and his wife Shirleen have four daughters and one grandchild.

Karen and her husband, Jerry Hudgeons, live at Foreman. Karen is employed by the U. S. Postal Service at New Boston, Texas. They have two sons, Michael, a graduate of the University of Arkansas and now a teacher in the Horatio School system. Charles, the youngest, is a student at Louisiana Tech University at Russton, Louisiana.

Margaret and her husband, Joel Walker live at Fayetteville on a portion of the original Elliott Loyd Warren farm. Margaret is a graduate of the University of Arkansas and is a teacher in the Rogers High School system.

Dale and I have lived most of the last 50 years in the same rural southwest Arkansas community. We are members of the First Baptist Church of Wallace where Dale is a deacon and teacher.

My role has been and still is that of a homemaker. Both of us have been active in community affairs. My hobbies include oil painting, travelling, shopping and visiting my children and grandchildren. Dale's activites as the breadwinner included two years as a high school math and science teacher, he worked as a chemist for a year then obtained a rural carrier, he developed a storehouse of stories relating to the experiences he had as a carrier serving the people of southwest Arkansas. Dale also found time to be a member of the Kiwanis Club which he served as president, was a school board member for 10 years, a member of the Democratic Central Committee, Chairman of the County Library Board, Secretary-Treasurer, Wallace Cemetery Association, member of the Masonic Lodge and the American Legion. During World War II he was a Navigator-Bombardier in the U. S. Army Air Force.

We attribute much of our success in having a wonderful family and life to the values that were given to us through the legacy of my parents, Elliott and Nona Warren.

I, Charles E. Warren, was born June 23, 1922, the fourth child of Elliott Loyd Warren and Nona Eva Warren, on the Warren farm in the Son's Chapel School District northeast of Fayetteville. About six months after my birth, the farm home burned leaving the family in serious straits. Relatives and friends rallied around and in a few months, a new home rose from the ashes. Oak framing timbers came from my grandfather's farm. This house is still standing.

My childhood was spent attending Son's Chapel elementary school during the winter months and helping with farm work during the summer. Length of the school year varied from six to eight months, depending upon funds available to the district in any given year. The 1932-33 school year was discontinued after being in session only three months. Funds were exhausted. This was the low point of the 1930s depression. Many families were beginning to move to greener pastures about this time, leaving farm homes vacant.

I suffered some delay in starting to high school due to lack of money with which to pay a very nominal tuition charge at the local high schools — University High and Fayetteville High. Expenses for books and supplies also had to be met. Through family friends, I finally managed to find part time jobs that lasted through my high school years. Early in my senior year in the fall of 1942, Uncle Sam sent me "Greetings" and I became a member of the United States Army Air Force.

My tour of army service did not involve flying planes, but baking bread and pastries in a large mess hall. That may sound mundane enough — and I thought my lot was terrible at the time, but when negotiations for peace was initiated by the Japanese, I was about as far forward as one could get on land. I had just arrived on Okinawa. The plane taking the first group of Japanese officials to Manila to begin the peace process passed over our heads trailed by a formation of eighteen P-38s. When I arrived back home early the following year, I had traveled over 21,000 miles during the preceding twelve months. The travel had been accomplished in almost all major forms of land, sea and air transport, including trains, ships and airplanes.

After returning to Fayetteville in the spring of 1946, I enrolled in the University of Arkansas and attended classes until June of 1948. Unfortunately, I had selected as a major one of the physical sciences for which I had little background and not nearly enough of a foundation in the required mathematics.

I decided to follow the wheat harvest that summer in an effort to sort things out. The harvesting work brought me near Denver, Colorado where I had been stationed for two years during the war. I decided to visit Denver before starting back to Fayetteville. Except for about nine months spent at Clovis, New Mexico, I have lived in the Denver area since.

Shortly after returning to Denver, I found a job with the Veterans Administration Hospital then located on the old army base of Fort Logan. I had my college credits transferred to the University of Denver with the intent of attending night classes. At times shift work interfered with scheduling classes.

I was recalled to active duty in 1951 for service with the Colorado Air National Guard after the "police action" broke out in Korea. Shortly before leaving the Veterans Administration for active duty, I met the young lady I was to marry — a Mary Lou Trunkey lately of Columbus, Ohio. She had served in the Navy as a member of the WAVES during World War II. Her job was instructing shipboard personnel in the use of a gunsight designed for small anti-aircraft cannons. She had undergraduate degrees in education and institutional food management. The former was from Kent State in Akron and the latter was from Ohio State in Columbus. We were married June 2, 1951, in a small chapel wedding in Central Christian Church in Denver. At the time we met, she was working at Colorado Women's College in east Denver as dining room supervisor.

My second tour of active duty, with the Colorado Air National Guard, took me to Clovis, New Mexico where we dug an old bomber base out of the sand. The 140th Fight/Bomber Wing had seventy-five F-52s. Maintenance personnel had quite a time keeping sand out of critical engine parts. There were a few in-flight engine failures during my tenure on this base.

I was assigned as a clerk in group headquarters, where I helped with general office work, such as preparation of correspondence, orders, posting of regulations, etc. I was later reassigned to an Air Base Training Group where I instructed new assignees in administrative work peculiar to the Air Force.

Released from active duty in the fall of 1952, Mary Lou and I returned to Denver. I went back to my old job on the admissions desk of the Veterans Administration Hospital. During the few months that we were in Clovis, New Mexico, a new VA Hospital had been completed and my old crew had moved in. It was nice to have brand new facilities, but I missed the friendly informality of old Fort Logan. Mary Lou decided to try teaching school again. She applied for work in the Denver School system as a supply teacher for the lower grades.

In 1954, I transferred from the VA to the Air Force Reserve Personnel Center, which was in the process of being organized and established in Denver. Chances for promotion were good in the new organization. In 1958, I was promoted to Forms Manager. Forms Management was primarily a cost reduction, paperwork management function which was established in government agencies as a result of the 1940s Hoover Commission on Paperwork. It was challenging work. A good deal of money could be saved at times by simply reducing the given area of a form. Machine prepared forms used in large quantities were likely candidates for such savings. A half an inch or so could make a lot of difference when millions of copies were to be printed.

In June 1960 I was graduated from the University of Denver with a major in psychology and a minor in sociology.

James Carl Warren came to brighten our days in May of 1959. James graduated from University of Colorado in 1982 with a Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree. He is currently working for a company under contract to the Department of the Interior in the Minerals Management Office.

I accepted the Forms Manager's job for the Air Force Finance Center in Denver, in the fall of 1969. The function was very similar to that of the personnel center, but included additional responsibilities. Approximately 120 Air Force Paying Stations—world-wide—depends upon the Air Force Finance Center for centralized pay procedures and forms. All procedural publications were coordinated through the forms management office. It was fun (sometimes) ensuring that all bases had proper publications on hand before a new system was implemented. Bases in Turkey sometimes had to sound off, but the whole, the system worked well.

I took early retirement in December 31, 1977 after 34 years creditable service. This included almost five years active military service. Even though my career has been spent largely in other states, the roots that provided my heritage are in Washington County, Arkansas.

I, Velma Marie, am the youngest of the five children born to Elliott and Nona (Blake) Warren. I was born on September 12, 1934 on a small farm northeast of Fayetteville.

My very early years are full of memories of watching my parents raise a garden and several crops for some extra income to provide necessities for family.

By the time I was old enough to go to school my two older brothers were having to think about going into the military service for World War II. I entered first grade at Son's Chapel where I learned the 3 R's as well as many other lessons that have remained with me throughout my life. I finished the eighth grade in 1949, the last year that Son's Chapel was open. The next year all students were bussed to Fayetteville.

I graduated from Fayetteville High School in 1953 and went to the University of Arkansas for a couple of years and I attended Parks Hospital School of Nursing for one year.

In 1956 I married Walter Richard Brown, who had moved to Fayetteville from Carthage, Missouri in 1949.

Little did I know when I had watched my brothers and my sister's husband go off to World War II that I would be connected to military service again. Fate has a way of changing life. My husband was a career Army man. We began our life together at Dugway Proving Ground, Dugway, Utah. Our first child Mary Ellen was born November 2, 1957. We had a short tour duty at Fort Huachuca, Arizona and then back to Dugway where our son Larry Keith was born July 17, 1959. In the summer of 1960 we were sent to Fort Richardson, Alaska just outside of Anchorage. We enjoyed our tour there and it was not very eventful except when Fidel Castro strirred up trouble in Cuba.

From Alaska we were sent to Fort Benning, Georgia in the summer of 1963. By 1965 we had welcomed the birth of our third child Alan Richard on January 5, 1965. In a few months Walter was sent to Korea for a tour. In the spring of 1966 Walter returned from Korea and we moved to Fort Sill, Oklahoma. We were so happy to get this close to Arkansas again and to be able to visit often.

Walter was assigned back to Korea in the latter half of 1967. The children and I stayed in Columbus, Georgia. It was during this time we decided to adopt a child. We adopted Kathy Ann through international channels from Korea. She has proved to be a wonderful addition to our family. She was born November 15, 1963.

We spent about a year in Fort Huachuca, Arizona in late 1968 through 1969 then Walter was sent to Vietnam for a year. After Vietnam we spent several months at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and then were sent to Panama for three years. On this tour of duty we learned just how much we really appreciated our own country and were glad when we could return.

We spent our last year of military life at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and then moved to Fayetteville to stay in 1975. We have built our home here and our children have gone to the University. Mary Ellen has a degree in Marketing. She is married to William E. Goff III. They live in Casper, Wyoming where Bill works as a registered nurse. They have two children, Rachel and Lydia Rebecca. Larry has a degree in Electrical Engineering and works for Boeing Aircraft in Wichita, Kansas. Kathy will graduate in December 1988, with a degree in Elementary Education. Alan is working toward a degree in Mechanical Engineering.

Walter works as a Research Assistant in Chemical Engineering. I mostly take care of our home. We are active in our church and community affairs.

Thus we close our story for the Elliott Loyd Family. For a brief period of time, we've touched the culture and the history of Washington County, Arkansas. For better of worse, we've made our "mark." Our lives serve as the link between the past and future and it has been a wonderful experience to serve in this role!

John Jazar Warren

The name Warren is of Norman origin coming from LaVarene, a parish in Seine-Inferieure, France. The surname was brought into England at the time of the Norman conquest. Through the centuries it has remained a very common name in England. Bearers of the name played an important role in the colonization of the New World. The earliest being Richard Warren, a merchant of Kent, England, who arrived in America on the ship Mayflower. From that beginning the name appears with continuing frequency in the historical records of the New World colonies and the states formed from the various colonies.

Just when the lineage of John Jazar Warren, (known as J. J.), arrived, where they landed and their special skills is not known. Records compiled from various sources find his paternal lineage in Virginia in the early 1700s. A Thomas Warren prepared a will dated April 4, 1749, and proved December 4, 1750, Spotsylvania County, Virginia. This Thomas had a son, Thomas, who appeared in Tryon County (later became Rutherford County), North Carolina by 1771, and later in Spartanburg County, South Carolina. Thomas Warren, Jr. is thought to be the father Hugh Warren, born in Virginia about 1725. Hugh was the father of William, born in October 1761, and Hugh, Jr. born January 5, 1764, in Virginia. The family moved to South Carolina while William and Hugh, Jr. were very young. The father and both sons served in the Revolutionary War. The first service of William was as a substitute for his father in 1776, when he was only 15 years of age. William served at various times until 1782, amounting in all to almost two years of active duty. During the years 1774-1779 William married Rhoda?, who was born 1760-1761. They were married in South Carolina while both were quite young. The couple had 13 children, among them a son, Hugh, born in 1783, in South Carolina. (The Warren Family Historian 1 (3):128-130, 1983: Ibid 4 (1); 21-27, 1986)

In 1796, William and his family moved to Greene County, Kentucky. Here Hugh married a Kentuckian, Elizabeth Hilburn, August, 1811. To this union was born 11 children. Among these was a son Hezekiah "Carr" Warren, born May 12, 1812. Hezekiah, on reaching maturity, married Mary Polly Skaggs, a member of a prominent Kentucky family. Hezekiah also became a preacher in the Baptist faith. He died in Texas, 1907, and is buried in the Oliver Springs Cemetery, a few miles northwest of DeLeon, Texas. A daughter, Nancy Jane Warren Morris, is buried nearby in the same cemetery.

Where the original home-site of William was and later, of Hezekiah, is not known. Apparently before, or perhaps soon after their arrival in Greene County, the Warrens became acquainted with Nathaniel Owens who among the more wealthy land owners of the period, owning at one time 8000 acres in northern Green County. Mr. Owens built a palatial home, a Georgian brick mansion, in 1797. The house was about ten miles north of Greensburg and was known as "Lashfield." Mary Owens, daughter of Nathaniel, was heavily wooed and proposed to by Abraham Lincoln who was born about fifteen miles distance from Lashfield but was living in Salem, Illinois during the time of this courtship. Owens died in 1846 and was buried near the home he had built (Green County Review 7 (2):14-17, 1984). Just when Hezekiah Warren moved to Lashfield has not been determined but it was here that Hezekiah and Mary Polly reared their family of three sons and three daughters. In the Warren family tradition, Lashfield became known as the "Old Kentucky Home." The house, though in a sad state of repair, was still in use in 1951. In 1957, the house was demolished and a modern home was built on the property. (This writer retrieved a few bricks and a few pieces of the stairway as mementos from the ruins of the old house in 1959).

John Jazar Warren, youngest son of Hezekiah and Mary Polly, was born at Lashfield, September 7, 1853. He grew to manhood here and on March 30, 1881 married Mary Beth Ball who was born on May 14, 1863, in Taylor County, Kentucky. Mary Beth was the daughter of Nancy Jane (Roberts) Ball, born January 29, 1839 in Buchannan County, Missouri and James Ball who failed to return from the Civil War duty thus she was reared by her grandparents, James and Elizabeth (Perkins) Roberts at Pittman, Kentucky. The young couple settled in a small, unpretentious house located behind the palatial house of Lashfield. Here, the first four children of J. J. and Mary Beth were born. In order, they were: Mary Elizabeth, born January 21, 1882, John Marion, October 21, 1883; Ivery Lee, May 1, 1885; and James Hezzie, December 29, 1886.

John Jazar was imbued with the pioneering spirit of his ancestors and apparently Mary Beth was equally of an adventurous spirit. In 1887, with four young children, they packed their household belongings in wagons and joined others in a wagon train to Texas. They followed a circuitous route from central Kentucky across the southern tip of Indiana, across Illinois, central Missouri, through Kansas and the Oklahoma Territory to Commanche County, Texas. The family lived for a year in the vicinity of DeLeon, Texas. J. J. did not find the location to his satisfaction so in 1888, they moved, again entirely by wagon, to a site about six miles east of Huntsville, Madison County, Arkansas. At the Madison County home, three additional children were born. These were in order, Stephen Young, February 10, 1889; Elliott Loyd, September 28, 1890, and Benjamin Harrison, July 5, 1892.

The hill farm in Madison County did not prove to be satisfactory so J. J. and Mary Beth packed their wagons and returned to the DeLeon, Texas area in 1895. the relatives who had earlier traveled with them from Kentucky to Texas had established homes in the vicinity of DeLeon and other relatives joined them there. J. J. and his family settled about seven miles northwest of DeLeon in a community known as Rucker. Here, Mary Elizabeth met Charles Jackson Mahan whom she married September 5, 1897. Also, the youngest child of J. J. and Mary Beth, Fred F., was born November 13, 1899.

As a farmer in Commanche County, Texas, J. J. became familiar with the production of cotton, peanuts and watermelons, crops that were less well known in his birthplace of central Kentucky. Livestock, including milk cows, were also a part of his farm economy. After this second period in Texas, lasting seven years, J. J. decided once again to pack his personal possessions into wagons and move his family back to northwest Arkansas. Leaving Commanche County at the end of the crop year of 1902, the family, now including a son-in-law and young granddaughter, Emily, journeyed by wagon train to Arkansas, arriving at Ft. Smith in late fall of 1902. The group first camped in the valley near the present site of Creekmore Park. Here, several members of the family suffered severe illnesses probably due to exposure and to poor group health conditions. Following the Christmas season they moved across the Arkansas River to another campsite at Van Buren.

Somewhere along the way, contact was made with a realtor in Fayetteville, Arkansas. In early 1903, Mary Beth and the eldest son, John M. traveled by train to Fayetteville where they were shown a tract of 300 plus acres about six miles northeast of Fayetteville. An agreement was reached to purchase the property and soon after the return of Mary Beth and John to the camp at Van Buren, the family packed up, traveling to Fayetteville over the Old Wire Road route. The land purchase was consummated in March, 1903. The new farm was very well located, being situated across a spring-fed tributary of Clear Creek, thus water was always available for livestock. The original house was a "dog-trot" style log structure located on a slope above a perpetual spring of free-flowing water. Apparently, because of the available water supply and the lay of the land between two tributaries of Clear Creek, the Indians had used this site as a campground. Many arrowheads and pieces of chert, not indigenous to this site, were collected over the years, particularly following cultivation of the soil. There were forested tracts that supplied fuel for home use as well as for sale to citizens of Fayetteville. Many acres of the farm were covered by apple orchards that provided a source of income for many years.

About 1910, the old house was demolished and a new two story 7 room frame house was constructed on the site. The new house was finished as the seven sons of J. J. and Mary Beth were reaching maturity. Soon thereafter, they began to leave, one by one, to establish their own homes except for John M. who lived with the parents until their death, and for Stephen, who was an invalid for much of his life due to an asthmatic condition.

The son of a Baptist minister, J. J. was a loyal church member and was an ordained deacon. Living in the Zion community which had only a Methodist Church, the Warren family united with the Shady Grove Baptist Church located four to five road miles west of the home. The mode of travel to church (and elsewhere) was by wagon, buggy, horseback or on foot. Thus much time, by current standards, was involved in travel. Recognizing the need for a church within their home community, the family, with others, joined in the organization of the Oakland Missionary Baptist Church January, 1910, a church that in the 1930s was to be one of the largest rural churches in northwest Arkansas. J. J. donated land for the use of the new church as a parking area and the family contributed materially to the construction of the church house and to the establishment of the Oakland Cemetery. Ivery Lee became a licensed minister and attended Ouachita Baptist College at Arkadelphia for a time but was never formally ordained as a pastor.

All members of the family were musically inclined and although formal training in music was limited for them, they developed skills in vocal as well as instrumental music (see Flashback 35 (3):43). Besides a community band sometimes referred to as the "Warren Band", at other times, the "Zion Band", several of the brothers played for the "Barr's Band", of Fayetteville and were members of other musical groups that were organized in the area. For many years one or more of the brothers played in bands supplying entertainment at the Washington County Fair. John, on request, would conduct "singing schools" for persons wishing to develop vocal skills in music. He also composed original gospel songs of which at least one was published. Fred, beginning in the 1920s made instrumental music his life career, and was skilled in the use of many instruments including piano. He performed on many radio shows in the Kansas-Iowa-Missouri area.

With such a large number of sons, farming was a bit more than a "subsistence effort" for the family. As mentioned, the farm included several acres of apples. These acres were productive until disease, insects and neglect began to affect yields and quality of crop. Strawberries became an important crop after World War I, followed hy grapes. Perhaps the most distinctive enterprise of the Warren farm was watermelon production. The family and later, some of the sons, were regarded as producing some of the best watermelons in Washington County. The melons were carried by wagon to Fayetteville. Some were home delivered to regular customers but the majority were sold at a "curb-side" location, usually at or near the intersection of Church and Center streets. In later years, the melons were marketed from a car or pickup truck. Elliott, Ben and John maintained melon production until old age restricted their activities.

Besides horticultural crops, milk and egg production was an important source of income. Several cows provided milk which was poured into earthenware crocks that were set in the spring house basin. The cream was skimmed off two times and stored in cans held in the cold spring water. Usually twice each week, J. J. would hitch a horse to his buggy and transport the rich cream and availahle eggs to market in Fayetteville. He was a familiar figure for many years along the road now known as the Old Wire Road. In 1927, he purchased a Model T which replaced the buggy. He never developed any driving skills so John became the chauffeur for the family.

Between the marriage of Mary Elizabeth in Texas in 1897, to the next marriage in the family, 17 years went by. Jim married Dessie Blake in 1914; Elliott married Nona Blake, also in 1914. Nona and Dessie were sisters, daughters of William T. and Lucinda Blake of Goshen, Arkansas. Ben, after a period of military service in World War I, married Margie Betts in 1922. Fred married Callie Holmes about 1923. John and Steve never married while Lee experienced an unhappy marriage of a short duration in the late 1920s.

J. J. was proud of his Kentucky heritage and sometimes, when provoked by controversial issues, would exclaim that "he was a Kentucky blueblood" and that he wouldn't suffer wrong treatment. Even after settling in the Zion community and after so many miles of travel in wagon trains, J. J. threatened to move again but Mary Beth let it be known she was tired of it and she informed him that he was too old to consider further travel. Thus the couple spent their remaining years in their modest but comfortable farm home. John Jazar passed away in 1937 at the age of 84 while Mary Beth lived to December, 1954. Up until the last year of her life she was active, caring for her own housework and making a small garden. At the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary in March, 1931, an accolade, descriptive of their life was given by a neighbor, which provides an appropriate ending to this narrative.

"John Jazar and Mary Beth have seen much hardship, having known this country when country life was far from pleasant, it being without good roads and good schools. . . The community in which John Jazar and Mary Beth now live owes them a debt of gratitude for their neighborly spirit and for the worthy examples they have been to their community and to Washington County."

Charles C. Watson

Charles C. Watson was born in east Tennessee on June 14, 1832. His parents were Thomas Watson and Icy Clementine Jenkins. His known siblings were Jane, J. M., James W., Samuel and Martin, all born in Tennessee. In 1860 the family was living in Madison County, Arkansas. Martin and Samuel later settled in the Summers, Arkansas area and are buried in White Rock Cemetery between Summers and Dutch Mills.

During the War Between the States Charles C. joined the Confederate Army and served from the fall of 1861 until the spring of 1865. After his discharge he made his home in Richland Township, Washington County, Arkansas.

On November 4, 1866 Charles C. married Edda Harman.

Edda was born on January 9, 1836 in Elkhart County, Indiana. She was the daughter of Isaac Harman and Parmelia Taylor and had two known brothers, Isaac and Thomas Jefferson. Between 1840 and 1850 the Harman family moved from northern Indiana to Texas where Thomas J. was born, and then into Arkansas and the Richland area. In 1866 Isaac and Parmelia gave Charles and Edda 80 acres of land from their farm and Charles later added another 80 acres to it. Part of this property is still in the family and will hopefully be passed on to the sixth generation. Charles and Edda lived out their lives on this land in what is now Elkins, Arkansas. Charles died April 20, 1915 and Edda died September 27, 1926. They are buried in Mount Olive Cemetery.

Charles and Edda raised three children and we know of one that died in infancy. Ellen was born November 18, 1867 and married William Caler. Susie was born in 1875 and married Lem Springstun. The sisters lived in the Elkins and Durham vicinity until their deaths and are buried in Mount Olive Cemetery.

John Franklin Watson was born February 5, 1871. He left Elkins and moved to Monett, Missouri where he became an engineer for the Frisco Railroad. On September 12, 1899 he married Sarah Marion who was the daughter of Johnson Marion and Harriet Collar. John and Sarah spent several years in Missouri where their children were born and where John was an active Mason. They later lived in Sapulpa, Oklahoma where Sarah died on June 10, 1924. John died June 18, 1953 in Tulsa, Oklahoma and is buried beside Sarah at Green Hills Cemetery, Sapulpa.

John and Sarah raised four children. Eulala was born October 12, 1900 and married Bob B. Batterson. Bob also worked for the railroad and they lived in both Missouri and Oklahoma. They spent their final years in Tulsa and are buried at Floral Haven Cemetery, Broken Arrow, Oklahoma. Bob and Eulala had two children. Their daughter, Darlene, married David Foust and lives in Houston, Texas. They have two sons, Robert and Stanley. Bob and Eulala's son, Merle, married Helen Thompson and lives in Tulsa. They have three sons, Dwane, Bob, and Danny.

Burton L. Watson was born in 1904 and married Ted Lakey. Burton made the U. S. Army his career and Fort Jackson in Columbia, South Carolina was his home base although he spent a lot of time stationed in Japan. Burton died in Columbia where Ted still resides. There were no children.

Glenn W. Watson was born March 15, 1905 and married Edith McLaughlin. Glenn and Edith spent the first nine years of their married life traveling with a pipe line company before settling in Tulsa where they lived until their deaths. They are buried at Memorial Park Cemetery there. They had one daughter, Glenda, who married LeRoy Tweedy and lives in Tulsa. LeRoy has two children, Galen and Leann, by a previous marriage. LeRoy and Glenda have one son, Michael.

Frances Watson was born in 1912 and married C. E. Hollis. Frances died in 1936 and is buried in Rose Hill Cemetery, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. She left no children.

The descendants of Charles C. and Edda Harman Watson are proud of their ancestor's pioneer spirit and the Arkansas heritage they left us.

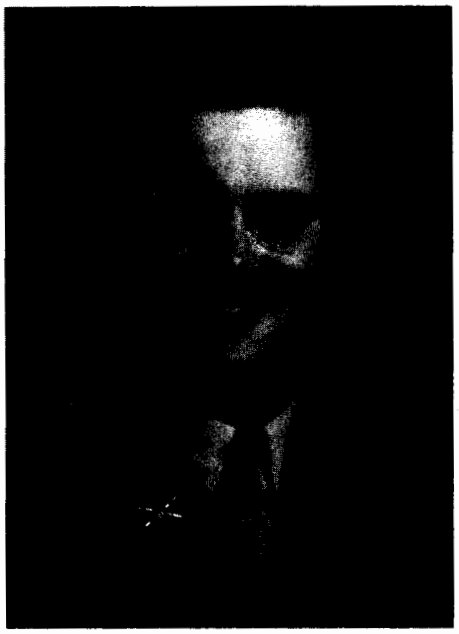
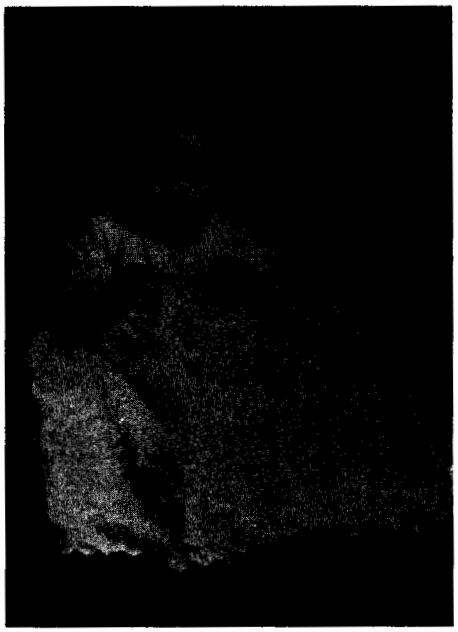
Lina Elizabeth Anna Watson



Clark Winfield Hayes, age 35, Captain United States Army. Killed in Japan, 1947.



Lina Elizabeth Anna Hayes, age 6 months.

I, Lina Elizabeth Anna Hayes Watson was born May 15, 1913, to George Winfield Martha Elizabeth Clark Hayes, and married Edmond Penn Watson on August 23, 1935. Two daughters were born to us: Janet Lina, born May 19, 1942, and Cherry Elizabeth, born January 22, 1948, and died April 10, 1952.

My husband owned and operated the Watson Mortuary until his untimely death on September 27, 1972.

Our daughter, Janet, married Richard Seay Muse on August 25, 1963. Their two children are: Shannon Gaye and Timothy Penn.

My brother, Clark Winfield Hayes, born January 21, 1915, married Clara Belle Lee. They were parents of two daughters: Sandra Lee and Linda Elizabeth. Clark Winfield Hayes was killed in Japan in 1947.

Our deepest respect and reverence cover all of our ancestors who braved a move from their native lands to an unknown country in a gradual but sustained movement to newer homelands ever westward. Our gratitude goes to all the forefathers whose lives are included in this book and, additionally, to those of whom we were unaware.

L. A. Watts

Lee Watts and his family moved to Springdale in 1910. A little before 1889, Lee, his brother Wes, and his mother, Elizabeth Boyles Watts, left Georgia and came to Indian Territory. Elizabeth Watts was one-quarter Cherokee. Her first husband had died in the Civil War and her second husband, David Watts, had also been in the war.

In 1895, Lee married Maretta Johnson, one of six daughters of Robert Harden Johnson and Almanza Jane Chaplain of Prague, Oklahoma. They had come there in 1893, after traveling by wagon from Hamilton County, Illinois with several other families. A story has been handed down by the family that Robert Johnson's grandfather had been kidnapped as a youth in England and brought to North Carolina.

Lee made their home near Prague on a homestead Lee had acquired in one of the Land Runs. To them were born four daughters: Lela, born in 1896; Edith, born in 1898; Elizabeth, born in 1900; and Alpha, born in 1902. Lee sold the land and built some houses in town. In 1910 Lee traded his property in Prague for some land in Springdale, Arkansas, probably dealing with his wife's brother-in-law, Eura Long, who had some family living in Lowell, Arkansas.

The home was located at the intersection of what is now U. S. Highway 71 and Arkansas 68, later to be known as the Eicher corner. The land included some apple orchards and Lee made his living growing and selling apples.

In 1914 Lee brought his mother, Elizabeth Watts, to live with his family until her death at age 90 in 1925. In the meantime his four daughters went to school in Springdale and grew up. Edith married Bill Simons in 1918. Lela married Dewey Williams when he returned home from the Navy. Alpha married Ray Brubaker, a Navy friend of Dewey Williams, and made her home in Akron, Ohio. In 1925, Elizabeth married Martin Tisdale. They first lived in several places in Oklahoma and Texas during the early days of the oil boom and later settled in northwest Louisiana.

Lee sold the orchard and concentrated on transporting fruit and other produce from Springdale to Tulsa, Oklahoma and other nearby markets. On one such trip in 1927 his truck broke down and he caught a ride with a passing motorist. He was riding on the running board and was struck and killed by another car.

His widow, Maretta lived on in Springdale where she was a grandmother and great-grandmother. She was a loyal member of the First Baptist Church until her death in 1956.

Present day descendants are Betty Simons Clack of Pryor, Oklahoma; Carol Simons Stiver of Arvado, Colorado; Louise Williams Adams, of Sun City, Arizona; and Dewey L. Williams, of Sun City, Arizona.

Henry Wax

Henry Wax was born about 1745 perhaps in Germany. He married in Berks County, Pennsylvania, May 11, 1767 to Margaret Geschwind. They lived in Berks County until about 1786. She died in Botetourt County, Virginia, February 10, 1791 after having 14 children. I will give full dates for the children as two of them are buried in Washington County, Arkansas, and others died near there and numerous descendants still live there in Washington County.

Henry Wax served in the Revolutionary War as a Captain in Alsace, Berks County, Pennsylvania. He died November 6, 1796 in Botetourt County, Virginia and is buried in Church of England Cemetery. The author of this article, Louise Payne, 3609 W. Potter Drive, Glendale, Arizona, joined the D. A. R. National #642897 on Henry's service. The children were: (1) Peter, born February 13, 1768 Berks County, Pennsylvania, died April 18, 1804 Botetourt County, Virginia, married August 7, 1790 to Margaret Allis: (2) Catherine, born February 20, 1769, died 1847 in Hawkins County, Tennessee. She first married DaVault Boyer and married second August 14, 1787 to Henry Price; (3) Margaret, born April 16, 1770, died 1839 Greenbriar, W. Virginia. Married October 18, 1788 to Benjamin Hutsinpiller 1768-1854. They are buried at Bunger's Mill; (4) Phillip, born October 20, 1771; (5) Elizabeth, born November 17, 1772, died December 10, 1810. Married March 9, 1791 to George H. Etter, Jr., born August 27, 1765, died March 4, 1842, they are buried at Mooresburg, Hawkins County, Tennessee. (6) Henry, born August 1, 1774, died 1842 at Fincastle, Virginia. He married October 20, 1803 to Catherine Book; (7) Maria, born February 12, 1776. Married April 9, 1795 to Jacob Seagle; (8) Christina, born December 15, 1777. Married April 1798 to James Kemper; (9) John, born November 15, 1779: (10) Magdalena, born September 15, 1781, died 1840 in Gallia County, Ohio, married Abraham Huntsinpiller January 27, 1799, who was born October 8, 1772 in Hampshire County, Virginia, died March 19, 1854; (11) Susannah, born July 14, 1783, died February 14, 1851. Married Daniel Howry November 25, 1801. He was born in 1782, died 1863. I believe he was a minister, and moved to Washington County, Arkansas, perhaps before 1840. They lived on the Middle Fork of the White River, near the White House Church. They are both buried in Roberson Cemetery, Washington County. They moved from Hawkins County, Tennessee; (12) Hannah Wax was born March 26, 1785 in Berks County, Pennsylvania, died February 21, 1836. Married July 20, 1801 to George Karnes, Jr., born January 10, 1780, died August 26, 1835. They moved from Hawkins County, Tennessee about 1831 to Mulberry, Franklin County, Arkansas. Some of their descendants are now (1987) living in Fayetteville. The children were (a) William Knox Karnes, born April 27, 1802 in Rogersville, Tennessee. Married Rebecca McCollough. They moved to Washington County about 1831: (b) Elizabeth, born December 30, 1803, married Joseph Rice and they lived in Johnson County, Nebraska in 1889. (c) Maria, born November 14, 1805, died May 4, 1844 in Mulberry. Married Cornelius Carmack: (d) Nancy, born January 9, 1808, died November 1, 1869, single: (e) Martha B., born March 10, 1810, died 1848. Married Thomas S. Hayes; (f) Henry Wax Karnes, born September 8, 1812, died August 26, 1840 in San Antonio, Texas. He was a scout for Sam Houston: (g) Daniel Howry Karnes, born October 24, 1814, died January 30, 1858 in Mulberry, Arkansas. Married Spetember 19, 1843 to Nancy Davis: (h) Susan Howry Karnes, born November 26, 1816, died November 7, 1907 San Saba County, Texas. Married August 17, 1834 to Daniel S. Corley: (i) James L. E., born November 19, 1819, died April 2, 1866 in Mulberry. Never married: (j) Andrew J., born November 4, 1821, died June 11, 1839: (k) Amanda, born September 8, 1824, died July 24, 1875. Married Joseph Horan. For more on the descendants of this family, see sketch in this book on William Knox Karnes 1802-1872.

(13) Jacob Wax was born July 8, 1787 in Frederick County, Virginia, died July 13, 1865. Married July 15, 1817 in Rockbridge County, Virginia to Susan Elizabeth Galbreath, the daughter of Ellen and William Galbreath. Jacob served in the 1812 Military Service in Capt. Elliott's Co., 8th Regiment, Virginia Malitia. In 1819 he moved to Rogersville, Tennessee with his wife and little son Henry Geschwind Wax, born May 2, 1818. They had seven more children. Jacob and his wife and son Nicholas and his wife Nancy M. Robinson (1847-1883), are buried on the homestead in Brentwood or Hazel Valley, Section 29, Tw 14, R 29, NE 1/4 of NW 1/4. (14) Esther Wax, born December 26, 1790 in Botetourt County, Virginia. She never married, died in 1872 in Greenbier, West Virginia.

James Harvey Webb

James Harvey Webb was born March 26, 1855 in Washington County, Arkansas, the son of Joel H. and Margrete Webb. He died at his home southeast of Springdale, January 14th, 1914. He was married to Louiza O'Neal January 5, 1881. Two boys and two girls were born to this union - Little Charlie, four years of age preceded his father in death. His death was caused by croup. Effie Ora married William Oscar Goree. Lillian Ann married William Daniel High. Joel Franklin married Ethel Sharp. All of them spent their entire lives in Washington County.

A daughter said she couldn't remember a time when their family sat down to eat alone. Aunt Tennie, Uncle Jim, Harry and Beatrice Cawood paid long visits. A bachelor neighbor, Al Reed, was a boarder (meals and laundry) for twenty years.

They raised most of their food. The cellar was loaded with potatoes, apples, kraut, picalilli, apple butter, etc. There were dried apples and peaches. The smokehouse furnished cured hams, bacon and sausage. Hominy was made with corn and ashes. Soap was made from cracklings and lye. Chickens and a cow contributed much of the food.

Harvey Webb was a member of the Friendship Baptist Church. He was a fruit grower and farmer.

Mrs. Webb had a loom and wove rag carpets. Quilting was another of her pastimes. Louiza Webb died in 1922.

Harvey Webb's father, Joel Webb, served in the Mexican War in Captain Preston's Company, Mounted Regiment Arkansas Infantry. They had their own horses and went from Ozark.

Joel Webb was married to Margete Beal. He paid taxes on 280 acres in Washington County in 1861. He was a Mason and Justice of the Peace. Records show that he performed wedding ceremonies for many couples.

During the Civil War, according to a story handed down, Joel Webb's wife rode horseback to take corn to the mill to be ground into meal. They said she tied the little children to the bedpost to keep them away from the fireplace while she was gone.

Joel and Margete Webb had the following children: Mary Frances, Parthena, William, James Harvey, John, Perry Theodore (He played a fiddle and entertained the family and neighbors), Anna Eliza, Elnora and Ewing.

Mrs. Webb's father and mother were Peter and Elizabeth Beal. They came from Tennessee. Their children were Albert, Melvina, Eliza, Anna, John, Harriet, Augusta and Sidney.

Myrtle Weddington

Letter sent to my grandmother in the 60s.

Mrs. Myrtle Weddington married Ray Wilson. Her great-grandfather was the Reverend Doctor Robert Green Weddington. His brother, William Lewis Weddington, and William's wife Hannah Palmer, founded Weddington.

Mrs. Myrtle Wilson's father was Robert Anthen Weddington. He was born on William B. Weddington's home place in Paragould, Arkansas. The first one buried in the cemetery was Mary Weddington.

The Rev. Dr. Robert Green Weddington wrote in his diary in November or December of 1831: "Went to Arkansas and located in Weddington area near Cane Hill. Boarded with Reverend Andrew Buckanan. Taught school and read the scriptures. In spring of 1832, joined the Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in March 1833. Was licensed to preach at Cane Hill May 1833. Married Julia Booker at John Buckanan's house be Reverend William G. Larimore, August 28. Moved back to Tennessee where he lived the rest of his life."

They came from England. James Willis Weddington had a daughter, who died in Arkansas, July 12, 1870. She married a Wilson.

Reverend Buckanan settled Prairie Grove. They told him if he would preach 7 times at a certain place they would give him the land where Prairie Grove is now. The main street is named after him.

Levi Shaffer Welch

Levi Shaffer Welch was born August 30, 1865 in Taylor Township, Union County, Ohio, the son of Ira D. Welch from Vermont and Mary Ann Shaffer Welch of Ohio. He attended college in Lawrence, Kansas. Going then to New Braunfels, Texas, he taught English in a German school, met and married Mattie Leota Wiley (one of his students) on April 1, 1892. She was the daughter of Sam and Paralee Wiley. Their two oldest daughters were born in New Braunfels: Ethel in 1893 and Lorena in 1895.

Between 1895 and 1900, they moved to a 120 acre homestead in western Oklahoma, near Sayre. They made the necessary improvements on the homestead which included building a sod dug-out house and digging a well. Three more children were added to the family: Norma, born in 1897 and John W., born in 1899, then Dora, born in 1907.

Levi, being a surveyor, surveyed the railroad from Blackwell to Enid, Oklahoma. In 1908, being tired of the heat, dust, and hardships of the plains, they traded their homestead for 120 acres in the Ozarks near Spring Valley, Arkansas, sight unseen. They moved to Arkansas in the late summer. Having shipped their belongings and stock by rail, they made the trip in a surrey pulled by two horses (they were on the road fifteen days). They had to ford all the rivers and streams except the Arkansas River at Muskogee where there was a new steel bridge.

The new farm offered many surprises: The house was a two room log house built from trees when the previous owner cleared the land, the soil was flint rocks (not the sand stones they had been used to in Oklahoma), there were apples in the area (before, fruit had been a luxury). Soon they had a prosperous truck farm. Levi designed and built a new white, frame house. There was another addition to the family: William Kermit was born in 1910.

The older girls began to leave the nest and make homes of their own: Lorena married William Wintford Parsley, Ethel married Joe Homesley, Norma married Robert Fitch and later John married Gertrude Johnson. Dora married Delmar Lanier and Kermit married Noma Robinson.

Levi loved gadgets and always had the latest in farm machinery including a two-wheel garden tractor which was one of the first in the country. He had his own electrical generating plant and they enjoyed electric lights a decade before rural electricity was brought to the Spring Valley area. He set up a home cannery using tin cans like they used in commercial canneries. Having a cider mill and press, they made a lot of cider, which would turn into vinegar, which they used in pickling and cooking. Anything he couldn't buy, he would make in his shop which was well equipped.

In spite of the hardships and disappointments of bad weather and crop failure, Levi found time to use his education. He taught school at Jay Bird, Sonora, Black Jack, Spring Valley and Goshen. He surveyed the first state Highway 68 from Springdale to Huntsvile, Arkansas, putting a bridge across White River which before was only crossed by ferry or fording.

Levi served The Springdale News from 1910 until his death September 21, 1941, as correspondent from Spring Valley and wrote under the pen name Celcus. He also wrote featured articles called "Observations by Celcus".

Near 1910, Levi and his future son-in-law, W. W. Parsley, circulated a petition which established the first Rural Mail Delivery out of Spring Valley. He served as carrier for 21 years. At its installation, the route was 18 miles long. At his retirement, it had extended to 42 miles.

In 1930, Levi ran for State Representative from his district on the Independent ticket. He was defeated by a great majority. Being a man before his time, he believed in good schools and felt consolidation was the way to have them. They didn't consolidate for thirty or more years later.

Levi could see the coming Holocaust of World War II. One consolation with his death on September 21, 1941, was that he didn't live to see the horror of that terrible war.

John W. Welch served in World War I, and being too old for service in the armed forces of World War II, did his patriotic service helping build airplanes for Boeing in Wichita, Kansas. John came to an untimely end when he was murdered on his retirement farm near Blue Springs on August 13, 1974.

Mattie passed away June 6, 1965. She and Levi rest in the Joyce Cemetery east of Springdale, Arkansas. Their descendents are scattered across the continent. Something magical draws them back to live or visit Washington County. In the words of Levi and Mattie's grandson, Kermit Welch, of Rolling Hills Estates, California, "It will always be home, here is where my roots are, deep in the flint rocks of Arkansas".

James Henry Weldon

My grandfather, James Henry Weldon, was just 17 when he came from Bond County, Illinois to Arkansas. With him were older brothers and sister, some already married. Soon all were settled in Washington County. On the fifth of October, 1846, a son was born to Harris, the eldest brother, and his wife, Mahala, and named William Green.

Carried by someone on the trip was a small packet of family papers: deeds to lands in Tennessee, receipts for taxes paid in Kentucky, a bill rendered to the estate of their grandfather, John Weldon, a receipt showing their father, Joseph, had paid, etc. The oldest was a note dated 1793 from John to his brother Andrew in Georgia.

John and Andrew were sons of Jacob Weldon who brought his family into the Province of Georgia before 1772. He settled on Keg Creek in Saint Paul's Parish (later Richmond County). In his 1779 will, he named his wife, Cattern or Cattron, and children, Isaac, Nancy, Hannah, Gitte, Joseph, Mary, John and Andrew.

Joseph died soon after his father but Isaac, John, Andrew and their sisters established homes in the area. All three brothers had served during the Revolution. John was listed as a "Georgia soldier of the line." He married Nancy Willingham, farmed the land his father had left him, bought some more. Then he sold his land and left Georgia with Nancy and at least one child, Joseph. It is not known exactly where they went first but they did add another son, Thomas, and some daughters.

In time, they arrived in Knox County, Tennessee. Deeds in the packet show that John both bought and sold land in 1799. In 1808, Joseph married Elizabeth, daughter of James and Sarah Hix Green(e), and little Nancy was born before they left the state. John had become a Baptist farmer-preacher; relatives in Kentucky had sent word that he was much needed there.

He and Joseph moved their families to Henderson County, Kentucky, in 1810. John continued to farm but served as pastor in several early churches. Two church letters express appreciation, one regretting his departure for another church. Early in 1819 he died, and a copy of "A Song for Mr. Weldon" was added to the packet.

Joseph and Elizabeth had five children by then: Nanc, Andre, Sarah, Harri, and Hanna. Malinda, Frances and Thomas Fielder followed. James Henry was born in June, 1829 but lost his mother soon afterward. Joseph, too, died in a few years. The older children took charge, moving the lot to Illinois where their Green grandparents had settled in 1814. James Green had died in 1821 but Sarah was still there as were other relatives. She lived until January 1, 1846.

Once she was gone, the Weldon children began to scatter. The 1850 Arkansas Census lists the group in Washington County but Harris and family are missing. He died in 1848. Mahala married Enoch Clary in 1849 and they moved to Texas.

The rest are clustered in Marrs Hill Township. Thomas had married Malinda Cates and they, with their year old James H., were only two houses from her mother, Susan Cates. Between them was his sister, Malinda Huckaby. Nearby were sisters, Sarah Phipps and Hannah Williams. James Henry lived with the Williams family.

On December 23, 1850, James married Louisa (Eliza) Smith, daughter of Allison and Louisa Cates Smith. Their first child, Lou, was born on November 20, 1852 in Washington County, but James soon decided it was time to try a new place.

Thomas Field was born in Cedar County, Missouri on June 24, 1854; Martha Ellen (Tempie) arrived on March 21, 1856—place unknown. They were all back in Washington County when Ephraim was born April 22, 1858, and Hannahon May 28, 1861.

Eliza died after Hannah's birth and James soon married Martha Allison Smith, her younger sister, for he was much in need of someone to care for his children. The Civil War had started and he wished to join the Union Army as he was much against slavery. In June, 1862, he enrolled as a private in Company B, 1st Arkansas Cavalry. He moved his family up near the Missouri line so he could better come and go. He was mustered into service July 10 at Springfield, Missouri.

Conditions were very bad in northwest Arkansas and the little group nearly starved. Martha bore her first child, Joh, on January 30, 1863, but he died on March 26. Four days later, little Ephraim died also. James was shot in the hip and received a medical discharge in October 1863. He limped the rest of his life.

By spring, James had collected his family and moved into Missouri. Martha had a second son, Benjamin, May 23, 1864 and a first daughter, Gettie, December 1, 1867. Fannie was born in Linn County, Missouri April 8, 1870 — and so it went. The children were loaded in a covered wagon with Martha or young Tom driving. James often rode ahead on his horse, searching for a farm where he could work for himself or others. Sometimes they would stay for several years; often they would soon "move on".

The older children grew up and set out for Texas where they had relatives. James often accompanied them on these trips, visiting his brother Tom and others. His own family was in Montgomery County, Kansas, in 1880 but was in Texas by 1884 where Martha's last child was born in 1888. In 1891, they went to Payne County, Oklahoma. The 1900 Census lists them, still there in spite of James who wanted to go back to Texas. However, he did return for visits which grew longer and longer.

His many grandchildren loved to hear "Grandpappy" tell stories of the pioneer days. He read a great deal and studied the Bible often. Some relatives commented later that he could explain the Bible in terms they could understand. He was a "hard shell" Baptist and believed that his life and death had been preordained. While visiting a daughter, a cyclone was sighted but he refused to take shelter with the others. He sat beside the fireplace reading. The storm wrecked the chimney which fell on him, injuring him so severely that he died the next day, aged 76.

Through all the years, the packet had gone with him as did a little Bible given him years before by his brother Tom. In it he wrote the names of his children, their birthdates and, sometimes, the dates of their deaths. However the tiny print of the Bible had become hard for him to read so he left the long-carried packet and the Bible at home. Martha gave both to her youngest son, Jimmie, who opened the Bible and wrote, "J. H. Weldon. Died March 19, 1905." Years later, his eldest daughter wrote under this, "J. R. Weldon. Died April 9, 1947."

Martha Allison Smith Weldon

My grandmother, Martha Allison Smith Weldon, was born in Washington County, Arkansas. She was the youngest child of Robert Allison Smith and Louise Cates Smith. Her grandparents, Mark and Annie Allison Smith, were born in North Carolina, and married there. They had several children with them when they moved into Tennessee. There, the youngest, Robert Allison, was born in 1808. He was a young adult when he accompanied his parents to Arkansas where they settled on the banks of the Illinois River in Washington County.

Allison soon met and married Louisa Cates, daughter of Isaac and Susannah Cates. Their first child, Hiram Casey, was born in 1831, and Louisa (Eliza) in 1833. Thomas and Isaac followed. In their search for a perfect place to live, they went to Illinois. There William Henry was born in 1839 but they soon returned to Washington County where their last child, Martha Allison, was born on August 30, 1841. Later they established a home east of Siloam Springs in Benton County. Allison was appointed Justice of Peace in 1845, a position he held until his death in 1847. Before 1850, Louisa returned to Washington County, settling near her mother and brother in Marrs Hill Township.

The Cates family had come from Tennessee even earlier. On March 24, 1807, Isaac Cate(s) married Susannah Maynard in Jefferson County. Susan was the daughter of James Maynard. Ephraim was born in 1817 and Louisa in 1813. Some say they were living in Alabama when John was born in 1817. According to family lore, his parents rode into Arkansas on two Palominos. Isaac was on one with Ephraim riding behind. Susan and Eliza behind her and tiny John in her arms. The story omits 2 year old Reuben but no doubt he was there.

Isaac and Susan first lived in Pope County. James and Dialtha Susan were born there and the family appears in the 1830 Census. However, they moved on to Washington County that year. Malinda was born, and their eldest daughter, Louisa, married Allison Smith. Both Isaac (Clear Creek Township) and Allison (Illinois Township) were appointed judges of the election in 1836. In 1848 or 49, Isaac died, leaving land to all his children. In time, Susan bought much of this back as the children scattered.

Letters arrived, telling of crops, local conditions, the latest child. Reuben wrote from Green County, Missouri, announcing their 4th son, named "Thomas as 'H' for Thomas 'H' Benton." William Sullivan in Williamson County, Texas, wrote about the newly arrived Dialtha Olivia and of his teaching at the Blue Hill Academy. John reported that the trip to Texas had taken 5 weeks, that little Hannah had been born, "a fine hearty child", and that "timber and water was entirely too scarce." He returned to Arkansas so quickly that the 1850 Census lists his family both there and in Texas. He did go back later.

Martha was only a child living with her mother when her Aunt Malinda married Thomas Fielder Weldon and Eliza married his younger brother, James Henry. After Lou's birth Eliza and James left Arkansas for a time. In the meantime, Louisa married James Carey, had another son, then divorced Mr. Carey. She later married Henry Abbott but died in 1859, a year after Eliza and James returned with three children and another expected. Ephraim was born in 1858. Later, Martha moved in with them. She no longer had a home and Eliza most certainly needed help. Hannah arrived in May, 1861, but her mother did not long survive her birth.

James and Martha were married and moved up near the Missouri line. He then joined the Union Army. Food became very scarce and conditions bad. James brought food when he could. Occasionally, a bag of corn and other supplies were found in the wood pile, left by Martha's Confederate brothers. Even so, there was bitter suffering. Sturdy little Tom helped as much as he could. Martha was still grateful years later.

Martha's first child was born January 30, 1863. He was named John but died on March 26. Ephraim died 4 days later. Benjamin was born in 1864 but died before he was 3. By that time the war was over and they were on the road. James, wounded in the hip, limped the rest of his life but farmed and traveled for years.

Nine more children arrived: Gettie, Fannie, Denvey, Zeddie, Ellison, Vina, Jimmie, Bettie, Nannie. James must have selected the names because they came from his family. He wrote Gittey in the Bible for a great aunt in Georgia but the family turned it into Gettie. Fannie was for his sister, Francis, Bettie for his mother, Elizabeth, Nannie for his sister, Nancy, Zeddie for a cousin, Zedic, in Kentucky, Jimmie for himself. No one ever explained Denvie but there may have been a Malvina someplace, shortened to Vina.

Martha developed into a hard working, resourceful person who never wanted anything. She knitted and sewed with skill, made quilts and comforters out of worn clothing, braided rugs. She learned which plants could be cooked for food and which were good for dyes. She enjoyed making things pretty as well as useful. If a neighbor was sick or having a baby, she was called. Once, she and the dog, Thumper, were attacked in the woods by a wildcat. Between them, they killed the animal and dragged it back to prove they had done it. Even so, her sunbonnets were starched and her white aprons snowy.

Jimmie moved his mother and younger sisters into Coyle, across the Cimarron River from Payne County, Oklahoma, where they had lived. James died in 1905 at Jack County, Texas, at the home of a daughter whom he was visiting. Nannie left to take nurses training and Bettie went to Oklahoma City to work in a shop. Martha was often alone in her home — and loved it. She would do her chores in her quiet, immaculate house, take off her work aprons and walk down to the post office for her mail. Her children and grandchildren were good about writing. She might stop at the drugstore for a cooling lemonade, then return home. After a rest, she would put on her white afternoon apron and sit down to knit, sew or read.

Bettie came back and in time, they moved to Ponca City in northern Oklahoma. There Bettie started a very successful dressmaking business. Martha read the daily paper quite faithfully although she now used a reading glass as well as her own spectacles. Nannie came and went, a busy nurse, but she developed cancer and died in 1927, not quite 40. Martha began to age more rapidly although she was still interested in the affairs of her grandchildren. The doctor wanted her to use a cane but she said she would trip over it — and sure enough, she did. She became bedridden in time and died September 11, 1931.

All her step children soon were gone. Vina died in 1937, Jimmie in 1947, Fannie in 1955. In time, there were only two left — Bettie and Ellison. They needed constant care so went into a nursing home in Chickasha. Some family members gave a small party for Ellison's 95th birthday. He suggested that he really needed a new suit.

He was very lonely after Bettie died at 87. Up till then, he had felt he was taking care of her. Two years later, he died at 97. Jimmie's youngest daughter, Margaret Jean Benefield, opened the little family Bible and wrote, "Bettie Weldon Died 1971," also, "E. R. Weldon Died, January 11, 1973. Chickasha, Oklahoma." The page was now filled.

John Thomas West

Around 1740, Abraham Renshaw ("Wrencher" in some early spellings) came west from the coastal settlements at Maryland to Rowan County, North Carolina, with his friend Squire Boone (father of Daniel Boone). They settled their families on land which had been originally occupied by Cherokee, which has been first explored by Europeans in 1660, by John Lederer.

Abraham Renshaw's son, Elijah Renshaw, married a woman named Ann Renshaw, and they settled in a part of Rowan County about ten miles south of Dutchman's Creek, an area near where General Cornwallis and the British had marched across the South Yadkin River at Renshaw's Ford. The British took the old Indian trail northward to Guilford Courthouse, where a decisive battle of the Revolutionary War was fought.

Elijah and Ann Renshaw's children included a daughter named Mary, born 1783. She married John Thomas West (born February 28, 1777) on January 11, 1804. (John West's father may have been Jonathan West, who died in 1791 and who had settled in Rowan County around 1746.) John West and his new wife Mary Renshaw West had Elijah, Nancy, Sarah, Nathan, James and Pleasant. With the exception of James Thomas, Mary gave all her sons the middle name Renshaw.

About 1814 or 1815, John and Mary West moved to Jackson County, Alabama. Here the two older sons, Elijah and Jonathan married; here Elijah finally died. But even though Pleasant was born here also, by the time of the 1830 Arkansas Census, the West family was listed on the Washington County records. Pleasant was then nine years old, (born 8/23/1821, died 11/23/1863).

Pleasant married Emily Reeder (b. 11/18/1829, d. 12/22/1908, buried at the Ganderville Cemetery, Summers, Arkansas), on April 13, 1848. (For Emily's family background, see REEDER.) Pleasant and Emily had ten children. They were: (1) Mary Jane (Dial or Dyal) b. 1849. (2) Elvira Amaline (Burket) b. 1851. (3) Elizabeth Hannah b. 12/15/1853, d. 11/15/1854. (4) Eliza Ann b. 12/15/1853, d. 4/15/1861. (5) Thomas Golfa b. 6/2/1854, d. 2/28/1858. (6) Francis b. 1855. (7) Alvin Pleasant b. 11/11/1858. (8) George Allison b. 7/15/1859, married Ida May Carter, d. 6/8/1936 Summers, Arkansas. (9) Lucinda b. 9/26/1861. (10) Noah Ira Addison b. 7/14/1863, married Amanda Rhonda Eleaner Dipboye, d. 3/19/1942 at Vinita, Oklahoma.

Many West families reside in Washington County, directly descending from the family of Pleasant and Emily (Reeder) West. For the particular family being followed in this story, however, only the story of the tenth child Noah is pertinent.

Noah married Amanda Dipboye. Her father, Robert Dipboye, was born in Indiana and he married a woman named Hannah Manlove. (Hannah was born in Carthage, Missouri, in approximately 1830, to a Cherokee woman and a French trapper named Dipboye.) Robert and Hannah Dipboye had eight children, which included Amanda (b. 12/31/1861 in Indiana, d. 1/13/1943 in Westville, Oklahoma.) The others were Joseph, Rose, Rachael (or Rachael), Jenny (Jones), Jonathan, Abraham, Clyde, and Claud. This family moved to Washington County, probably in the 1870s, and settled near Summers.

Noah and Amanda (Dipboye) West had the following children: (1) Minnie Dorcas, b. 6/15/1884, married Jessie Reeves 9/4/1904 Odell, Arkansas, d. 8/1943 Sallisaw, Oklahoma. (2) Cora May b. 8/10/1885, married Walter Briggs 12/6/1903 Odell, Arkansas, d. Stilwell, Oklahoma. (3) Edith Tassy b. 12/26/1886, married Jessie Tapp 1/1/1905, Odell, Arkansas, d. 12/13/1959 Lincoln, Arkansas. (4) Fannie Viola b. 8/24/1888, married Fredrick Carte 11/20/1904 Odell, Arkansas, died Westville, Oklahoma. (5) Eva Hannah b. 1/22/1891, married James Unger 2/24/1912 Odell, Arkansas; re-married William Anderson 1/27/1936, and re-married Hans Anderson 5/19/1941; d. 2/26/1965 Washington State. (6) Nora Eleanor b. 11/28/1892, married Charles William Pitts 3/6/1910 Odell, Arkansas, d. 3/8/1979. (7) Lucy Rosetta b. 2/27/1897, married Oscar Wilhite 1/11/1914, Odell, Arkansas, d. 2/5/1959 California. (8) Polly b. 1894 died in infancy.

Noah and Amanda ran a little grocery-general store, which probably included the post office. The area known as Odell (about ten miles south of Morrow), was generally near the Liberty Hill area, and also Shady Grove Community, where the community building still stands. Church services were held there by Noah, who sometimes led the singing or otherwise helped in the services.

The person writing this history is specifically following the lineage from Noah and Amanda's sixth child Nora Eleanor and her subsequent marriage to Charles William Pitts. The story continues, therefore, in the ROSE-PITTS FAMILY history section.

Thomas West

Thomas West 1777-1860 and Mary (Renshaw) West 1783-1838 came to Washington County in 1830 and settled in a Little Valley southwest of Summers, Arkansas. They are buried at Bethlehem Cemetery near Morrow.

Their son Pleasant Renshaw West 1821-1863 married Emily Reeder 1830-1908. They made their home in the little valley at the foot of West Mountain near the Indian Territory. In 1863, Pleasant was killed by Pin Indians while on his way home from Summers. They are buried at Ganderville Cemetery.

Emily Reeder was the daughter of Noah Reeder 1795-1850 and Dorcas Blair 1802-1887.

Noah was the son of Micajah Reeder 1758-1835 and Judith Roland. The Reeder's lived in the Sylvia (Cincinnati) area. Micajah was a Revolutionary War soldier and was living in Washington County when the sheriff's census was taken in 1829. Micajah and Noah are buried in the Vineyard Cemetery. Pleasant and Emily West were the parents of Noah West 1863-1942. In 1883, Noah married Amanda Dipboye 1861-1943. Amanda was the daughter of Robert Dipboye and Hanna Manlove. They lived at Salem near Dutch Mills.

Noah and Amanda lived on the West farm until he traded his interest in the farm to his brother George. He moved to Shady Grove near Odell where he farmed and operated a store. Later, he moved back to the Summers area. They are buried at Ganderville Cemetery. Their seven daughters: Minnie Dorcas 1884-1975, Edith Tosey 1886-1959, Fanny Viola 1888-1977, Eva Hannah 1891 -, Nora Elenore 1892 -, Lucy Rosetta 1897, Cora May 1885-1975. Fanny West 1888-1977 married Fred Carte 1884-1935. Fred was the son of Joe Carte and Sarah Roberts from Indiana. The Carte's lived in the Antioc Community near Morrow. Their children: Sam 1882-1958, Francis Fredrick (Fred) 1884-1935, Laura Naomi 1888-, Alice Marie 1891 -, Clara Ann 1892-1960, Alfred Lee 1894, William Oscar 1898, Laurance 1904 - (buried at Coweta, Oklahoma).

Fred and Fanny were married at Odell in 1904. Reverend B. A. White was riding down the road when he met the wedding party. He married them in the road where they met.

Fred worked in the Jenny Lynn coal mine. His job required him to sleep in the mine. One night he got up to check something and when he returned to his bed, he found it full of large rocks. He left the mine and never returned.

Fred bought a farm in Honey Hollow south of Morrow. He had orchards and a dryer. They hauled apples to Fort Smith by wagon. Their children: Grover Lee 1905-1976, Edna Pearl 1907, Roy Lenard 1910-1981, Ray Fredrick 1912, Carl Noah 1916-1978, Arnold Paul 1920, Peggy Vaughnette 1927.

Fred and Fanny are buried in the Edmonson Cemetery near Morrow.

Ray Fredrick Carte 1912 and Christine Pridemore 1918 were married in 1937. To this union, five children were born: Donald Eugene 1938, Eva Sue 1940, Sally Raylene 1944, Gary Dale 1946 and Judy Kay 1949.

In 1943, Ray bought the farm (R Bar C Ranch) two miles east of Lincoln and has lived there the past forty-three years. They are members of the First Baptist Church in Lincoln. In the early years, Ray was a trucker and hauled fruit and vegetables. Later, he hauled broilers. He also operated a feed store and contracted broilers. On the ranch, he raised registered polled Hereford cattle.

Donald Carte 1938, married Dorothy Allsup and to this union was born: Sherry Lynn 1957 and Kenneth 1960-1961. Don lives on a farm two miles west of Lincoln.

Eva Sue Carte 1940 married Don McLaughlin. Their children: Penelope Sue 1958, Kimberly Ann 1960, and Ronda Lee 1961. They moved to Claremore, Oklahoma.

Sally Raylene Carte 1944 married James H. Newell and have one son, James Ray 1965. They live on a farm near Farmington.

Gary Dale Carte 1946, married Frances Stewart. They have two children: Timothy Dale 1969 and Zana Deann 1973. They live on a farm southwest of Lincoln.

Judy Kay Carte 1949 married Jim Skaggs and have two daughters: Jimmie Kate 1969 and Kellie Jean 1972 and a son, Casey Ray 1977. They live at Langley, Oklahoma.

We are eight generations farming the soil of Washington County, Arkansas. We are proud of our heritage.

Marcus Edward Wheat, Jr.

Marcus Edward Wheat, Jr. was born in Nashville, Arkansas, September 3, 1926. He is the son of Marcus Edward and the late Gladys Evelyn Gibson Wheat. His paternal grandparents were Patrick Henry and Charity Rosanna Eagle Wheat of Lonoke, Arkansas. Maternal grandparents were the late Doctor and Mrs. William Gibson of Nashville, Arkansas.

Ed Wheat, Jr., married Dorothy Gay Eagle of Lonoke, Arkansas in 1948 in the First Methodist Church of Lonoke.

Ed Wheat, Jr., a Lonoke High School graduate, entered Hendrix College, Conway, Arkansas, at age sixteen. Graduating from Hendrix in pre-med, he served his internship in medicine at the University of Arkansas School of Medicine at Little Rock, graduating in 1951.

Ed Wheat, Jr., served as an ensign in the U. S. Navy in the Southwest Pacific during World War II.

Doctor Wheat and his family moved to Springdale, Arkansas in 1952, and have lived there since.

Doctor and Mrs. Wheat have three grown daughters: Melinda Gay Wheat, born 1951 at Little Rock, Arkansas, Joy Frances Wheat, born 1953 at Springdale and Merry Ann Wheat, born 1955 at Springdale. They are married and have children. Melinda married Samuel Allen Mason of Springdale, where they now reside. Their four children are Jonathan Edward Mason (deceased), Christina Leigh Mason, Carrie Ann Mason and Marcus Allen Mason. Joy married Richard Franklin Shoemaker, Jr. of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Merry Ann married Jimmy Ray "Rusty" Peoples, Jr. of Fort Smith, Arkansas and they have one child, Jimmy "Ray" Peoples, III.

Doctor Wheat has practiced medicine for thirty-five years as a family physician and surgeon. He is a member of the Arkansas Medical Society, the Washington County Medical Society, and the American Medical Association.

Doctor Wheat has been actively involved in numerous civic organizations in Springdale. He received the U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce Distinguished Service Award in 1958.

Doctor and Mrs. Wheat are members of the Fellowship Bible Church, Springdale, where he is an elder and founder of the church.

Doctor Wheat also founded the world's largest free loan library of Bible study cassettes. This ministry loans hundreds of thousands of cassettes to people in every state in the U. S. A. and in more than twenty-five foreign countries. They have extended the ministry of the cassette library from its beginning in a one-room office in Doctor Wheat's clinic, to the basement of the clinic, to an office building next to the clinic, and now to a three-story building next to that building, all on Spring Street in Springdale, Arkansas.

Doctor Wheat is widely known as a Bible teacher and lecturer, and he is a certified Christian Marriage Counselor. He and his wife are in wide demand for Christian marriage seminars and have appeared on national television programs, as well as Christian television shows. In addition, they have co-authored several books. Intended for Pleasure, published in 1977, in English, is also published in Dutch, Spanish, Japanese and a British edition. Love-Life for Every Married Couple, published in English in 1980, is now published in Portugese, Spanish, Chinese, Japanese, German, Swedish, and British and is presently being translated for publication into Czechoslovakian, Hungarian, Polish, Romanian and Russian. Both books appear on lists of best-selling Christian books.

Three audio cassette tape albums by Doctor Wheat are: "Sex Technique and Sex Problems in Marriage", "Love-Life", and "Before the Wedding Night". Each album contains two cassette tapes and are sold the world over.

Doctor and Mrs. Wheat daily receive many letters and phone calls from people whose lives have been changed by applying the practical Biblical principles in the books, cassettes, and seminars. They do more than just write and speak about what they learn, however. Their life together is a constant encouragement to all who know them. As they teach the Love-Life seminars around this country, as their tapes and books reach into homes like yours, more and more people are able to meet a couple who are actively and constantly learning and applying God's principles of marriage. The way they live and the things they say make you wish you could have a lifestyle like that.

Doctor Wheat's books and cassettes may be ordered from 130 North Spring Street, Springdale, Arkansas 72764.

Marcus Edward Wheat, Sr.

Marcus Edward Wheat, Sr. was born July 15, 1901, at Lonoke, Lonoke County, Arkansas. He was the son of the late Patrick Henry and Charity Rosanna Eagle Wheat of Lonoke, Arkansas. Ed Wheat, Sr. was the youngest of nine children; the only adult child still living.

Edward Wheat, Sr. married Gladys Evelyn Gibson on November 11, 1925, at Conway, Arkansas. Gladys Wheat was the daughter of the late Doctor and Mrs. William Gibson, of Nashville, Arkansas. Gladys Wheat died May 7, 1975 at Lonoke, Arkansas and is buried in the Lonoke Cemetery.

Ed Wheat, Sr. and Gladys Wheat had two children: Marcus Edward Wheat, Jr. was born September 3, 1926 at Nashville, Arkansas. He married Dorothy Gay Eagle September 24, 1948, at Lonoke, Arkansas. Their children are Melinda Gay, Joy Frances and Merry Ann. Lavina Ann Wheat was born October 5, 1929 at Nashville, Arkansas. She married James Harlon Bryan on April 18, 1954 at Lonoke, Arkansas. They have two children, Mark and Brenda Bryan.

Ed Wheat, Sr. lived in Lonoke, Arkansas all of his life until about 1979 when he sold the Wheat homeplace. He had lived in this home from 1901-1979. The home was built in 1902 by Ed Wheat's grandfather, Patrick Henry Wheat, Sr. Ed Wheat, Sr. moved to Springdale, Arkansas about 1980 to live with his son and his family. He makes Springdale his home now. Ed Wheat, Sr. is a member of the Fellowship Bible Church in Springdale, Arkansas.

Ed Wheat, Sr. was an educator, teacher and County School Supervisor of the Lonoke County School System, Lonoke, Arkansas. He was an elder in the First Presbyterian Church in Lonoke for many years.

Ed Wheat, Sr. graduated from Lonoke High School, Lonoke, Arkansas. He graduated from Hendrix College, Cum Laude. He received his Masters Degree in Education from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, Arkansas. His name is inscribed on the Senior Walk in the year of 1942.

Ed and the late Gladys Wheat, Senior's grandchildren and great-grandchildren are: Melinda Gay Wheat, Joy Frances Wheat and Merry Ann Wheat. Melinda is married to Samuel Allen Mason and they have four children: Johathan Edward (deceased), Christina Leigh, Carrie Ann and Marcus Allen Mason. They live in Springdale, Arkansas. Joy married Richard Franklin Shoemaker, Jr. and they have no children as of 1987. They live in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Merry Ann married Jimmy Ray "Rusty" Peoples, Jr. and they have one son, Jimmy Ray Peoples, III. They live in Fort Smith, Arkansas.

James Marcus "Mark" Bryan, Sr. married Patricia Rochay Gossage. By Mark's first marriage, there were three children: James Marcus Bryan, Jr., Jessica Bryan, who lived only twenty-two days and Misty Marie Bryan. Patricia Rochay Gossage has two children by other marriages: Calvin Gentry and Mikeal Gossage. Brenda Bryan is not married.

In 1891, Pat H. Wheat and a Mr. Mason bought the Bradford and Company Furniture Store and operated an undertaking establishment in connection with the furniture store.

Among the early pioneer settlers of Lonoke, was Captain Patrick H. Wheat, Sr., grandfather of Ed Wheat, Sr. and great-grandfather of Doctor Ed Wheat, Jr. Pat Wheat, Sr. and his family moved from Mississippi to DeValls Bluff, Arkansas about 1850. By 1852, Mr. Wheat organized and operated a "wagon train", or chain of wagons, hauling freight on the Old Military Road from DeValls Bluff through Brownsville to Huntersville, now North Little Rock. He operated this business until 1861. He then enlisted in the Confederate Army in which he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of Company A, Fagan's First Arkansas Calvary.

After the war, Captain Wheat purchased the John D. Perry Steamboat which traveled between New Orleans, Louisiana and Batesville, Arkansas. The John D. Perry Steamboat accidently caught fire in 1869 and sank with no loss of lives.

Captain Wheat later moved to Lonoke, where he engaged in business.

At one time, Pat H. Wheat, Jr. was President of the Lonoke Rice Mill Company. He also owned a furniture store. He was a very prominent businessman, was secretary of the city school board, and director in the Bank of Central Arkansas, and at that time was serving the city most efficiently on the council.

I added the above for the history of the Wheat Family. Ed Wheat, Sr. is the great-nephew of the late James P. Eagle, Ex-Governor of Arkansas.

Mary L. Whinery

The Whinery family came to Washington County, Arkansas from Tennessee in the late 1830s. The father of the Washington County branch is believed to be William Whinery, born between 1800 and 1810. William began his family in the mid 1820s, and by 1830, he and his wife, Frances had four children. In that year, William was living near a Joshua Whinery in Lincoln County, Tennessee.

In the late 1830s, William and Frances moved their family to Washington County, Arkansas, where William died about 1838 or 1839. A Cane Hill store ledger of that time period referred to Frances as "Widow Whinery", and she appeared as head of the household in the 1840 census of Washington County. Frances apparently died before November 1848, when her daughter, Mary Whinery Hardesty, sold her share of Frances' real estate. Although some of the children's sale deeds indicated that they were selling their 1/7 interest in Frances' property, it actually appears that Frances and William had eight children: 1. Abram J. - born about 1823. He married Lorinda and lived in the Cove Creek area. 2. Mary L. - born about 1824. Mary married Loverance "Love" Evans Hardesty in 1840, and died in Missouri July 8, 1865. Several of their children remained in the Washington County area. 3. Joshua H. - born about 1827. He married (1) Matilda Jane McKamish and (2) Caroline Hodges. 4. Robert C. - born about 1829. Robert was living with the family of John J. and Mary Oliver in Washington County in 1850. He married Sarah Ann Seay, and they lived in Ada Township. 5. William Wallace - born about 1832. William was living with Abram in Washington County in 1850, but he and his wife Louisa Jane later settled in Crawford County, Arkansas. 6. Sarah Jane - born about 1834. Sarah married Jesse R. Shipley, and lived in the Cove Creek area. 7. John - born about 1835. He and his sister Ellen were living with "Love" Evans and Mary Whinery Hardesty in 1850. 8. Ellen Frances - born about 1838.

According to tradition, about 1738, the immigrant ancestor, Patrick Whinery, came to Pennsylvania from Northern Ireland with two sons, Robert and Patrick, Jr. They were weavers by trade. Liking it here, Patrick Whinery left his sons and returned to Ireland to bring his wife and other children to the colonies. He never reached Ireland. Whether his ship sank or he died enroute is uncertain at this time. Robert Whinery remained in the northeast, but Patrick, Jr. migrated to North Carolina and perhaps to other states as he contracted consumption, was in ill health and applied for a peddler's license. Patrick, Jr. is the ancestor of the Washington County branch of the Whinery family.

John Gilbert Barnes and son Edward C. of Cane Hill, Arkansas.

The Whitaker and Barnes families have been in the Dutch Mills and Cane Creek area of Washington County since 1870. Although there is more information about the Whitakers than the Barnes, we know that John Gilbert Barnes and his wife, Sarah Melinda Keebler, were from Jonesboro, Tennessee. He was a "boot and shoemaker", was born in North Carolina, and moved to Tennessee before 1860. She was born in Jonesboro, where her family had settled before 1800.

William Riley Whitaker was born 24 February 1824 near Asheville, Buncombe County, North Carolina, the son of James Jr. and Nancy (Kyle) Whitaker. His grandfather, James Whitaker, Sr., was born in 1779 in Davidson County, North Carolina, and was a lay leader in the Missionary Baptist Church. He was also a member of the North Carolina State Legislature. In 1836 with permission of the Cherokees, the Whitakers moved across the Cherokee line, to Valley River, North Carolina (now Andrews). The Whitaker family helped found missions in western North Carolina and Indian Territory (Oklahoma).

William Riley and Jane Elizabeth Hasseltine (Pace) Whitaker were married 21 February 1846 in Andrews. She was born 19 January 1830 in South Carolina. William and Jane had six children in Andrews. About 1857 they moved to Georgia where they had 5 children. By 1870 they were living in Dutch Mills, Sarah Melinda (Keebler) Barnes and children of Cane Hill. Clockwise from her: Edward, Maude, Bess and Sue.

Maude Ellen (Barnes) Whitaker of Cane Hill, Arkansas and Stilwell, Oklahoma.

Arkansas. Their children were: Sarah Ann "Shan" (1846-1919) married Richard A. Tuell; Mary Caroline "Callie" (1846-1920), did not marry; Charles Lafayette (1850-1850); James W. "Jim" (1852-1924) married Susan Phillips; Harriet Catherine "Babe" (1854-1883) married a Hancock; William Riley, Jr. "Bill" (1856-1909) married Mary Victoria Russell; Benjamin Harrison "Ben" (1858-1914) married and a widower; Nancy Malvina "Nan" (1860-1941) married a Pyeatt; John Posey (1862-1936), did not marry; Thomas Jesse "Jess" (1865-1939) married Fannie Reed; Jane Hasseltine "Dump" (for Dumpling") (1868-1939) married a Wade; Lewis Kimsey "L. K." born 12 September 1871 was the only child born in Arkansas.

William Riley Whitaker was a farmer and ran a flour mill at Dutch Mills. He was a handsome, erect man with a long, snow-white beard. He was stern and religious, and his grandchildren were in great awe of him. He died 13 June 1907 and is buried at Dutch Mills with his wife, Jane, who died 2 March 1897.

Gilbert Riley Whitaker, Jr., Dean, School of Business, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

L. K. Whitaker married 25 December 1898 Maude Ellen Barnes, daughter of John Gilbert and Sarah Melinda (Keebler) Barnes. Maude was born 11 November 1878 at Cane Creek, Arkansas, and died 7 October 1965 in Fort Smith, Arkansas. She is buried in Stilwell, Oklahoma, where she and L. K. moved before 1900, when it was in Going Snake District of Indian Territory. Called "Mama Whitaker" by her grandchildren, Maude was a poet, and her children published her poetry as a memorial to her.

There were five other children in the Barnes family. Dora B. was born in Tennessee ca 1874 and married Tom Gibney. They and their children were killed in a hotel fire in Fort Worth, Texas. Maude and her twin, Laura, were born in 1878. Laura died at the age of eight months. Edward C. was born in 1883. Bess was born in 1887, married a Dyson and lived in Lodi, California. Sue was born in 1889, married a Routh, and lived in Salem, Oregon. Their father died in 1892 at Dutch Mills, and their mother died later while living with either Bess or Sue.

L. K. Whitaker was a miller and a faithful Baptist. He was the youngest and tallest of his brothers, but in old age his back was badly bent, a condition aggravated by years of carrying heavy bags of grain and flour. He died 23 June 1958 in Stilwell. L. K. and Maude's children are: Ruth (1900-1985) married Eugene White; Gilbert Ray (1903-1980) married Melodese Kilpatrick; Elma Elaine (1905-) married J. M. White and lives in Cleveland, Tennessee; Callie Louise (1908-1918); James Orson "Blue" (1911-) married first Marie Vaughn, married second Martha Jane Sprouse, and lives in Springdale, Arkansas; Rowena Elizabeth (1913-) married Howard Landis (1906-1979) and lives in Oklahoma City; Maude Eloise (1914-) married Vernon Helms and lives in Hobbs, New Mexico; Maxine (1915-) married Thomas Pitts and lives in Fort Smith.

Gilbert Riley Whitaker, Sr. was an electrical engineer and a 1925 graduate of the University of Arkansas. He lived in Oklahoma City, where he worked for Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company. For many years he was Division Operating Superintendent, with responsibility for trouble-shooting crews repairing storm damage to electrical lines. He had the deepest respect and trust of his men in this often dangerous work. His son, Gilbert Jr., recalls the violent storms in the night, knowing his father would have to go out. After retirement in 1955 Gilbert Sr. worked as an engineer for the U. S. Government at Carville, Louisiana; Marrakech, Morocco; Madrid, Spain; and Okinawa. Retiring a second time, he settled in Hobbs, New Mexico and died there 21 March 1980. His wife, Melodese, was born in 1910 in Haskell, Texas and grew up in Stilwell, Oklahoma. She is a professional painter, noted for her portraits. She was exhibited in Paris, Madrid, New York, St. Louis, Dallas, Forth Worth, Oklahoma City, and Ann Arbor, Michigan. Melodese lived in Madrid for 15 years, and in 1975 was commissioned by the Spanish Institute to do portraits of provincial Spanish costumes, which were exhibited at the US Cultural Center in Madrid, the Hastings Gallery of the Spanish Institute in New York City, and the Keeler Gallery of the Cherokee National Museum at Tahlequah, Oklahoma.

Gilbert and Melodese had two children, Gilbert Riley Jr. born 8 October 1931 in Oklahoma City married Ruth Pauline Tonn born 2 June 1933 in Houston, Texas; and a daughter Michael born 15 October 1933 married Enn Aint Arike who was born 23 October 1929 and died 18 March 1982. Enn was born at Tartu, Estonia, moving to Germany with his family in 1945. He immigrated to the United States in 1950, and entered Oklahoma State University where he met Michael. He received degrees from OSU and Union Theological Seminary in Chicago. Enn was Executive Director of the South Yonkers (NY) Youth Council. Michael, a graduate of OSU, is a commercial artist and printmaker in New Rochelle, New York. Recipient of many awards for her work, she was especially honored in 1986 when one of her prints was accepted for the 161st Annual Exhibition of the National Academy of Design in New York. Michael and Enn's three sons are Ando, Markus, and Peter.

Gilbert Jr. was educated at Rice University, and the University of Wisconsin. He is a doctor of philosophy in economics, and served three years in the Navy as gunnery officer on a destroyer in the Mediterranean and the Far East. Gil has been affiliated with Northwestern University, Washington University in St. Louis, Texas Christian University, and in 1979 was appointed dean of the School of Business Administration at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. He and Ruth met when they were both students at Rice and were married 18 December 1953 in Houston, Texas, her home. She is the daughter of August Edward "Ed" and Elsie Esther (Jagoe) Tonn. Gil and Ruth have three children. Kathleen "Kate", born 10 May 1956 in Houston, is a registered nurse, and worked several years in neo-natal intensive care in Fort Worth and Ann Arbor; David Edward, born 5 February 1959 in Madison, Wisconsin, is an airman in the U. S. Air Force, and married 1984 Cerilia "Neneng" Nepalar, born in 1959 in the Philippines. David will return to college in 1988 after his Air Force tour. Thomas Gilbert, born 8 January 1962 in Evanston, Illinois is a student in communications at the University of Michigan. Tom has worked in the recording industry, and also played drums for several years in a band, Map of the World. Meaghan, daughter of Kate Whitaker and John Stephen Shelly, was born 13 May 1987. John, an attorney in Detroit, was born there 3 May 1960, and is the son of Thomas and Bonnie (Stoner) Shelly. David and Neneng have a daughter, Angela Rachelle born 6 June 1985 at Clark AFB, Manila.

James Curtis White

James Curtis White was born November 18, 1878, the eldest son of Thomas Jefferson White and Eudora V. Curnutt White. T. J. and his wife had ten children, but four girls and one boy died in infancy. The surviving children, in addition to Curtis, were R. Claude "Cautie" White, John White, Marion White, and Newton White.

The family lived in Boone County, Arkansas, where the children attended a country school. Although Curtis' formal education ended after the 4th grade, four years exposure to McGuffey's readers, Ray's arithmetic, and the blue back speller enabled him to become an avid reader of Plato and the classics in his later years. He was also a Biblical scholar, and a skillful story teller.

On September 19, 1898, in Jasper, Arkansas, Curtis married Minnie May Long, the daughter of Maples P. Long and Margaret Nancy Bohannon Long. Minnie was born November 17, 1882 in Boone County, where her father farmed and owned a mercantile business in the village of Gaither, nine miles southwest of Harrison.

Curtis and Minnie lived near Elmwood, Arkansas, and worked on the Snell farm until 1902. Their first son, James Delbert, was born 1 March 1900, and died 4 September 1901, of diphtheria. They were the parents of three other children: Gilbert Jefferson White, born July 12, 1902 at Elmwood, Arkansas; Olga Agatha White, born March 31, 1905 at Cedar Grove, Arkansas; and Alma May White, born May 14, 1907 at Gaither.

From 1911 until 1917, Curtis White operated a general store in Monte Ne, Arkansas, a well-known resort area. The children went to school there, and in later years, told stories of Coin Harvey and the grandiose pyramid which he started building at Monte Ne, but never finished. Gilbert earned money trapping in the numerous caves in the valley. Olga and Alma told of chasing a bar of ivory soap for a mile down the creek before they could catch it to see what it was. They had never seen soap float before, but were still spanked soundly for going so far from home.

After living a short while in McAlester, Oklahoma, toward the end of World War I, Curtis moved his family to Fayetteville, Arkansas, and went into the grocery business. He drove a huckster truck out into the country 5 days a week, while Minnie kept the store in town. His last store is still standing just south of the junction of South School Street and Highway 62.

Gilbert became a salesman, and married Betty Beck, of Bentonville. They had one son, John Gilbert White, born December 18, 1958. Gilbert died July 31, 1978 in Fayetteville.

Olga was a teacher in the Fayetteville school system for five years before marrying William Rader Rogers on October 9, 1927. (See Rogers, William A.) Their children are: Patricia Nan Rogers, born October 27, 1930; Mary Janis Rogers, born October 21, 1937; and William Weston Rogers, born June 7, 1941. Olga White Rogers died January 8, 1984 in Fayetteville.

Patricia married John Cannon Doan on April 2, 1950, and they moved to Okmulgee, Oklahoma in 1952. Their children are: William Curtis Doan, born April 13, 1952; Sarah Cannon Doan, born September 2, 1955; and Mary Virginia Doan, born August 2, 1960. John is a stock broker affiliated with A. G. Edwards in Tulsa, and Patricia has been head librarian at the Okmulgee Public Library since 1967. Sarah married Christopher Paul Baker on August 19, 1978, and their daughter Leigh Renee Baker was born February 10, 1981. Sarah is a free-lance architectural delineator and lives in Tulsa. Mary Virginia married Hugh Lee Gaston III on September 25, 1982. They are the parents of two sons: Hugh Lee Gaston IV, born October 19, 1983, and John Rader Gaston, born January 16, 1986. They also live in Tulsa.

Mary Janis married Wylie James Parker and their children are: Gregg Weston Parker, born July 17, 1958; Melanie Gwin Parker, born June 28, 1962; and Brooke Heather Parker, born June 19, 1968. Melanie married Charlie Cash in 1982. Wylie works for Merrill Lynch in Fayetteville and Janis works for A. G. Edwards.

Weston married Gloria Rogene "Dodie" Beidleman, and they are the parents of: Leslie Denise Rogers, born April 2, 1967; Tracie Suzanne Rogers, born July 26, 1969; Emily Jeanette Rogers, born August 23, 1970; and William Andrew Rogers, born May 13, 1983. They also live in Fayetteville where Weston, retired from the Navy Reserve, is affiliated with A. G. Edwards.

Alma graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1936, and taught school in the Fayetteville area until her death March 18, 1982. She married Leland Swagerty Terhune in 1936, and they had one son, James Leland Terhune, born April 9, 1948.

James Curtis White died on October 21, 1955, and Minnie Long White died May 11, 1967. They are buried in Fayetteville.

John Samuel White

The photo accompanying this story is the wedding picture of John Eli White and Mary Catherine Nunn. It was taken on July 4, 1894, their wedding day. The wedding photo was made at John Eli's home site in Durham. They had nine children and lived to see 18 of their many grandchildren.

The family has kept and preserved the marriage license from this 1894 wedding. Mary Catherine was called Mollie by all who knew her and endured the same hardships as many wives at the turn of the century who cooked and cleaned and fed such a large family.

John S. White married Mary Ann McLoy. Their oldest daughter, Martha Elizabeth lost a husband during the Civil War, remarried and he, too, was killed during the War between the States. Her third husband was John Baswell. John S. and Mary's son, William J. White, called Chine, married twice and had one child by his first wife and two by his second.

Presley Bryan, called Curn; was the second youngest son of John S. and Mary White and Presley had two wives. His children by Doan Thompson White were Lewis, Lila, and John. He had one son, Roy, by wife Annie Jones,.

Only those in the photograph have been mentioned in this story. The author, Florence White Parker, is the only remaining survivor of the original nine children of John S. and Mary White, and was over 75 when this photograph was submitted to the Washington County History Book Office.

P. B. White

The John S. White and Mary Ann White family, their two children, Elizabeth and Dolly, and Mary Ann's family, the Jacob Meloy's, traveled "west" in the year of 1851 from Sevier County, Tennessee. Their destination was Kansas or Missouri where they had relatives living, but they ran into cold weather and decided to go south for warmer climate. They traveled by wagon and teams, crossing the Arkansas River at Fort Smith by ferry.

These families moved on over the Boston Mountain Range and purchased land at a community on the White River. John and Mary Ann raised a family of nine children. . .Elizabeth Baswell and Dolly Clark, who traveled west with them; Appia Drain, William Jenning "Chine", Sarah Boaz, John E., Laura Counts, Mary and P. B. or Kern. All, with the exception of Mary and Kern, married and settled nearby or in surrounding communities.

Mary and Kern lived at home, and when grandad White (John S.) died, dad (Kern) bought the farm land from all of the other heirs and continued to live with his mother and sister. A sister, Liz Baswell was not too far up the river; Dolly Clark lived only a little farther up, and later Appia came back to the community to live, she had lost a portion of her husband. John E. had an adjoining farm and Chine lived only a short distance north over the hill.

In the late 1800s the Frisco Rail Line came through the White River Valley, and as I understand, grandad White would not agree for a right-of-way through his land and the construction of a depot unless it was named "Durham". The community continued to grow. Of course there was a church, a two-story school had been built, which was also used as an IOOF Meeting Hall; timbers were cut from around the area and brought to the railroad for shipment; later a canning factory was built. Durham became a busy small community.

Dad and brother John E. were both dealers in livestock. I recall as many as five or six train loads of cattle and livestock being shipped at a time from the "Durham" Rail Station. Dad would ride his horse over the mountains trading for livestock, stopping to spend the night with his sisters and brothers and their families who were scattered all through the area. His barns and lots at Durham were always full of cattle, mules and horses.

In 1920 Dad decided to try the "south". He purchased a plantation at Lake Providence, Louisiana. He felt that he could do well in dealing with livestock there. He moved four box car loads of farming tools and livestock down to Lake Providence, but the dream did not materialize, and five years later he returned to his mountains and the White River Valley. Again he dealt in livestock and farmed; adding acres of land as he could. In 1949, at his death, he had accumulated 750 acres, with the original homestead having been in the family for 100 years.

In 1897, Dad and Mary Caldonia Thompson were married. Three children were born of this marriage; Lewis, who worked as a telegrapher and Station Master for the Frisco Rail Lines, died in 1976; John, who farmed at Durham, died in 1982 and myself, Lila, who with my husband, Norman, operated a grocery store at Durham for 15 years, and where he also served as postmaster.

After the death of my mother, "Donn", Dad moved up on the hill with three children to live with "Granny White". He later married Anna Jones, and they had one son, Roy. Roy retired as a Lieutenant colonel from the Army having served in the South Pacific where he and his company were among the returnees to Bataan and Corregidor.

In civilian life, Roy was an Osteopath and practiced in several states, including California, where he was living at the time of his death in 1986.

At Dad's death in 1949, Roy sold his share of the farm at Durham to Lewis, John and me. Eventually, John and I owned what remained of the farm; John owning the rental houses on Highway 16 and I owned the "home on the hill" where we had grown up. Then, we too, sold our heritage. . .John moving into Fayetteville, where he worked in the Washington County Hospital until his retirement, and Norman and I, after having lived at Fayetteville and Cave Springs, moved back to Highway 16 East of Fayetteville to retire. The "house on the hill" was sold by me to Hawk Ratliff, where it still stands, more beautiful than ever.

The only one to carry the P. B. White family name is Roy Matt, who is a doctor in Alaska.

Sarah Frances Wilson White

Sarah Frances Wilson, daughter of William H. and Martha Powell Wilson, was born December 29, 1852, in Tennessee. Her family moved to Arkansas and she married William Jennings White of Durham. To that union three daughters were born. The first one lived only two or three months and family records do not include a name for her. Ada was eight years old and Cora was six years old when their mother, Sarah Frances, died in 1898. Ada and Cora went from their mother's funeral to make their home with their elderly maternal grandparents. Ada died as a young teenager. Cora continued to live in the home of her grandparents. She and Noah C. Robbins, son of William T. and Lavena Harrison Robbins of the Mount Olive Community, near Durham, Arkansas, were married January 30, 1920. It was a very cold day with a big snow on the ground. They traveled by horseback to the church and after waiting for some time for the minister, they started home thinking the snow was too deep for him to travel in. On their way home, they met him and instead of going back to the church, they just sat on their horses in the middle of the road while the minister performed the ceremony. Cora loved horses and would tell about this with a chuckle. There were two sons born to that union. Kermos Ruple, February 15, 1922, and Francis Keith, July 1, 1926. Noah served in the Army during World War I in England. He taught in different public schools in this area. Two or three years after he and Cora married, they moved to a farm between Elkins and Durham where they lived until 1960, when they moved to Baldwin, near Fayetteville. Noah was ordained to the ministry as a preacher by the Richland Regular Primitive Baptist Church in the Mount Olive Community, east of Elkins, in the early 1940s. He served churches in Arkansas and Oklahoma and was instrumental in establishing a church of the same faith and order in California.

While visiting around the dinner table one day a guest said, "Anyone would know that Noah married Cora because she is such a good cook." Noah quickly replied, "No, that did not have a thing to do with it. The reason I married her was that I knew God had called me to preach and I thought she would be a good helper." He was right.

Kermos and Keith served in the Army during World War II. Kermos retired from Fayetteville Postal Service and Keith retired as Executive Vice President from First National Bank of Fayetteville.

Kermos married Helen Gayer, daughter of Charlie and Minnie Gayer of Goshen. To that union was born a daughter, Joyce Faye. Joyce married Donald R. Tuller of Little Rock and they have three children, Martin Douglas, Donna Faye and Virginia Kaye "Gigi". Gigi's little girl, Amber Dawn Scott, is their only grandchild. Donna married Ronald Johnson and they live in Austin, Texas. Martin and Gigi both live in Fayetteville and are students at the University of Arkansas. They are employed at Dillard's Department Store and Wal-Mart Stores respectively.

Helen passed from this life in October, 1979, after an extended illness. Kermos married Polly Ann Baker and they live in Springdale. Polly has one son, Jamie Baker and his wife Michala and one grandson, William Everett, who is named after his grandfather, the late Everett Baker.

Joyce is executive secretary for the office of Ben Israel Family Vision Center and Don has worked at the First National Bank in Fayetteville since his discharge from the Navy in 1962.

Keith married Jacqueline Ledford, daughter of the late Elder and Mrs. Basil Ledford of Fayetteville. Larry Steven and Mary Frances were born to this union. Larry served in the Army during the Vietnam Conflict. He married Jennette Dawson from Ola, Arkansas, while they were students at the University of Arkansas. Three children have been born to this union. Steven Travis "Trey", 8th grade, Sarah Frances, 4th grade and Stephanie Nette. Larry is self employed - Robbins Realty and Jennette is the Home-Ec teacher at Farmington High School. They in the Walnut Grove Community between Farmington and Prairie Grove.

Mary Frances taught and counseled in different schools in this area while studying at the University of Arkansas. She is a certified counselor and after studying at Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Kansas City, she is now employed by Youth for Christ in Kansas City, Missouri.

Noah departed this life May 9, 1980, and Cora went to meet him on Christmas Day, 1985. After Noah was called home, Cora was very lonely and talked often about her mother, Sarah Frances, being called away from her little family. She also praised her grandparents for providing a home for her and Ada, even though they were in their seventies.

William Harvey White

William Harvey White came to Washington County, Arkansas in 1829 along with his mother and brother James Slown White and sister Clarissa Isabel White. All were under the age of 21 and had come from Maury County, Tennessee with their guardian Reverend George E. Webber and his wife Nancy White.

William H. was born in 1815, Maury County, Tennessee, a son of James White and Catherine Hufstutler. James White was prominent in Maury County and was a friend of President James Knox Polk. Apparently William's mother died, or possibly lived with Clarissa, for no further record of her is found; her two sons lived in the home of Reverend Webber until they married.

James White, was born in 1810, married Jemima Carnahan on September 19, 1844. She was a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Pyeatte) Carnahan. James and Jemima had five children: Samuel, married Elizabeth West; Mary Jane, married Marshall Morris; Flora Ann, James Carnahan, married Eddie Littlejohn; Elizabeth C., married William Bush, and Alice, married Theodore Evans.

Clarissa White married Calvin Slover, a Methodist minister, who died in 1842. In 1944 she married Reverend Thomas Hardister Tennant, a Methodist minister and a widower with 9 children. Clarissa bore four children: Addison Clark, married Mary Ellen Gray; Thomas Sanford, married Tabitha West, Henrietta Josephine, married Peter Pyeatt and Alva White Tennant, married Mr. Black.

About 1836, William H. White married Martha Sexton, a daughter of Reverend Jacob Sexton and Dartha Scott. William was active in the community, a member of the Methodist Church and Masonic Lodge, and served as Justice of the Peace for a time. He bought 160 acres in Vineyard Township, near Morrow, and there they raised their 12 children: Mary A. White, born 1838, married George Hern/Harian in 1857. They were living in Vineyard Township in 1870 and had six children: C. J., E. C., G. A., M. F., J. W., and J. S. Hern. William Henry, born 1839, married Martha McCulloch in 1867; he died in 1920. Five children, all born at Cane Hill: Louanna, Wm. Henry, Alexander C., Susan and Margaret Lacy White. Jacob "Jake", born in 1841, married Mary S. "Mollie" Evins; he died in 1919. Two children, Jacob Minter and Fannie Laura White. Robert, born 1843, married Mary Kerlee; he died in 1915 in Idaho. Had two sons, Walter and James. James, born February 9, 1845; was killed February 14, 1965, Civil War. Dorothy Jane, born May 5, 1847, married Arthur Evins in 1867; she died May 18, 1904. Children: Effie, Wm. Montgomery, Hugh Clark, Chester C., Sallie Davis, Arthur A., Jr., Mary J., Eulalia C., James B., and Stirman. Cornelia, born 1849, died young. Martha Ellen, born February 14, 1852, married Cal Morris, she died in 1920 (or 1930?). Two children, Marshall C. and Charles C. Hugh Lawson, born September 10, 1853, married Mary Edmiston; he died March 30, 1917 in Dutch Mill. Children: Olive Antonia, Hugh Luther, Ethel Annie, Mary Clementine, Martha Elnora, and Louisa Leora. Sarah Elizabeth, born May 13, 1856, married John Vinson Edmiston; she died July 4, 1933; had seven children: Martha Eldora, Alice, Fannie Eula, Jacob Conrad, Auda Mary, Carl, Clara May, and Sanford White Edmiston. George Franklin, born May 25, 1859, married Flora Bell Young; he died July 21, 1944 in Fullerton, California. Children: Forest Lee Franklin, Wm. Harvey, and Dorothy Josephine. Charles Lee, born March 3, 1862, Dutch Mills, married Senora Dovie Goddard of Dutch Mills on December 24, 1892; he homesteaded in Oklahoma Territory, buying 160 acres in Lincoln County in 1890. He died October 27, 1948 in Indianapolis, Indiana. Children: Luther William (my father), Mary Ruth, Jennings Bryan, Robert Oscar and Joseph Cullen White.

William Harvey White was killed during the Civil War when he and his cousin, Frank Witherspoon, came home to see about their families. William's sons Robert, Wm. Henry and Jacob fought for the Confederacy and son James was killed while serving as a scout. The family home was burned, their livestock taken and the family left in desperate straits, like many others in the county. Martha (Sexton) White held her family together and they survived those trying times; she died in 1896 and was buried in Bethesda Cemetery.

C. B. Wiggans

Clifford Barnes Wiggans, "Wig" was born in 1900 in Tindall, Grundy County, Missouri, the third son of Joshua Sherman and Lucy Ann Barnes Wigans. Sherman was born in Mercer County, Missouri to David S. and Cynthia Ann Rock Wiggans. Lucy was born in Grundy, Colorado; one of nine children to Thomas and Susan Austin Barnes. Their two older sons were: Cleo Claude, born in 1889 and Roy Glen, in 1891. When Roy was ready to follow Cleo to the University of Missouri in Columbia, the family moved to the college town. Ten year old Cliff completed his schooling there, and had the opportunity to belong to what must have been one of the earliest Boy Scout Troops in the United States. All three boys graduated from the University of Missouri and earned graduate degrees in agriculture.

Cleo and Roy married and moved on to teach, Cleo at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, and Roy at Cornell in Ithaca, New York. Cleo and his wife, Martha Chinn had two sons: Sam and Don. Roy and his wife, Edna Landon, also had two sons: Bob and Glen. After studying at the University of California at Davis, and teaching at Texas A. & M., Cliff came to Fayetteville to teach at the University of Arkansas in 1926. Two years later, he married fellow faculty member, Helen Hudgins. In 1930, their only child, Elizabeth Ann was born. In 1932, the Wiggans bought the house at 415 North Washington.

About 1936, Wig became manager of the Lake Wedington project. The family lived at the lake for several years. About this time, Helen was asked to organize and set up the County Library. After completion of the Wedington project, the family moved back to Washington Avenue and Wig worked for the Soil Conservation Service until World War II.

Ann attended pre-school at Irene Dyer's (now Burt), Kindergarten through Grade 3 at Mrs. Campbell's School; while living at Wedington a one-room school; and started Washington School with 4th grade teachers, Miss Nell Kantz.

In 1943, Wig took a job in Louisiana, Missouri with Stark Brothers Nursery. In 1945, they moved to upstate New York. They lived just a few miles from Lake Cayuga on a large farm, owned by Roy's son, Bob, who was overseas.

In 1946, they returned to Fayetteville and bought a house on Ozark Street. Wig went into business for himself as a landscaper. Helen again worked as a librarian, this time in the City Library on the third floor of City Hall.

Ann graduated from Fayetteville High School in 1948, and from the University of Arkansas in 1952 with a degree in Home Economics. She was an officer in Chi Omega, a Danforth Fellow, Secretary of Mortar Board, and was featured in Who's Who of the 1952 Razorback.

Bob married Dorothy Talbert and they had five children: Pat, George, Barbara, Rick and Beth. Glen married Marita Mayers and also had five children: Roy, Glen III, Ann, Alan, Jane and Susan. Don married Barbara Tarrant and they had four sons: David, Dick, John and Scott. Sam married Ruth Littlefield, they had two sons, Jimmy and Tom.

Helen and Wig enjoyed church, civic and University-related activities, where his great sense of humor and story-telling ability were always welcome. Wig was active until shortly before his death in 1972, when Northwest Arkansas Times editor and longtime friend, Ted Wylie, wrote a tribute, excerpts of which follow: "C. B. Wiggans is responsible for a large amount of beauty in this area. . .Testimony to his ability is on all sides, both in business and residential areas.

As project manager of the Lake Wedington creation, he was responsible for building the lake and immediate surroundings into something that has given thousands of visitors opportunity to relax and enjoy nature. Starting with woods and sub-marginal land, he led in fashioning a recreational region of substance, not only for those living at the time, but for the future as well.

Loving Fayetteville, he took an interest in all public matters. . .it is not given to all of us as it was to C. B. Wiggans to leave behind memorials which mark his life among us."

Franklin Springer Williams

I never knew about Arkansas until I came south with Betty to get married in 1945. Arkansas people won my heart. They were friendly, welcoming strangers, and hard workers, believing in a better future. I've taught at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville since 1959. The enthusiam of Arkansas students is a great motivator to anyone who enjoys teaching as I do.

The Walker-Knerr-Williams House, Fayetteville, Arkansas. The National Register of Historic Places, June, 1975.

I was born in 1912 while my father, John F. Williams was a minister in Cincinnati, Ohio. My paternal grandfather, Peter Williams, was a Civil War "drummer boy" who returned partially disabled, to be a poor dirt farmer near Moundsville, West Virginia. J. F. and his brother, Will, tended the farm on alternate years so both graduated from high school in their early twenties. My father walked all the way to Bethany College (West Virginia) and arrived with only a nickel in his pocket. By tending student rooms (emptying chamber pots) and waiting table, he got room and board. Borrowing for books and tuition left him with a college debt, but he managed to graduate with honors "by studying after rival scholar's light went out".

My mother, Everella Springer, was from Belle Vernon, Pennsylvania (formerly Springersburg). The Springers had been old settlers from pre-Revolutionary War days. They had taken large tracts of land by "tomahawk right", blazing trees to set the boundary lines. Grandfather Everell F. Springer met 16 year old Barbara Ellen Hoffman when he stayed at her father's hotel in Boone, Iowa. After the marriage, Everell and his brother, Theodore, brought the young bride all the way back to Springersburg in an open buckboard wagon. There my brother was born, the fourth of seven children.

I graduated with a B. S. from Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, in 1933. While searching two years for a teaching job in deep depression times, I continued taking classes and enlarged my fields to include English, history, physical sciences, mathematics and finally one year in business administration. In 1944 I completed my MBA at the University of Chicago. In June of 1945 I met Betty (Elizabeth Corbett Bassett) of Fayetteville, Arkansas, who had come to Chicago to begin graduate work at the university. On August 28, we were married in her old family house in Fayetteville.

We have three sons, Jeffrey Springer Knerr Williams, born in Chicago on June 8, 1946, Christopher Bassett Theodore Williams (called Kit) born in Springfield, Ohio on March 30, 1949 and Philip Franklin Corbettt Williams born in Little Rock, on April 5, 1956.

I was awarded my Ph. D. in economics from the University of Arkansas in 1957. I published my book, Survivors, Heroes, in 1979. In 1980 I received the rank of Distinguished Professor of Management.

The family's return to Fayetteville, and then to ownership of the old family home, let us first purchase the house on its five-acre tract, and then gradually repurchase family acreage until the house and its environs totalled forty-nine acres. We had the joy of raising all three sons on the old family place. In June 1975, the house was named to the National Register of Historic Places, and officially designated as the Walker-Knerr-Williams House. Betty and I, and later Jeff and his wife Janet (Penner), and Kit and his wife Emily (Evans) have all been married "under the arch" in the library of the old house. Kit and his family now live in this historic house on the south shoulder of Mt. Sequoyah.

Antioch College had made me aware of the innovative possibilities in the academic world, and through knowing Dr. Muzafer Sherif at the University of Oklahoma, I had begun my own independent study in social psychology. As I read more and more broadly in psychology I sensed the many behavioral aspects to be explored in the business administrative setting. "Behavioral Management" was being used to teach future managers to lead, communicate and motivate for the sole benefit of the organization. Gradually I changed the focus of "behavioral management" to emphasize the means by which people could best survive the system that was designed to use them. This was psychology on a personal survival level in our system. The professional administrator was already being taught to be organizationally productive in a full set of courses. A thorough "survival" course could make him a stronger manager and also more fulfilled family man and community citizen.

So I am thankful to still be living in Arkansas, doing the work I love and living in the place I have chosen. Although I was born in Ohio, for a long time I have been a "born again Arkansawyer".

James Monroe Williams

My grandfather, James Monroe Williams and my grandmother, Millie Jane (Reams) Williams first came to Washington County sometime around 1904. They came from Hot Springs, Garland County with their three children; Albert, Jennie and Jess. One child, Stella had died in Hot Springs in 1898. James Monroe was born in Big Bottom, Independence County, Arkansas in 1866 to William James Williams and Mary Margarett Arnett, both from Giles County, Tennessee. Millie Jane was born in Cass Township, Stone County, Missouri in 1874 to Nathaniel Henry Reams and Amanda Elizabeth Woods, both from Tennessee.

The Reams and Williams families then moved to Fort Smith, Arkansas probably in the 1880s. My grandparents probably met there and then later were married in Hot Springs, Arkansas, March 30, 1892. James Monroe was known by his middle name of Monroe and was listed this way on most records. He was of Welch descent, Millie was Irish and French. I have been told there was also Cherokee Indian lines in both families back a generation or so.

My grandparents settled in Fayetteville sometime shortly after 1906. They lived prior to this in Cato Springs, where my mother was born, also on Greenland Road and Prairie Grove Road. Grandpa worked as a well digger and at Phipps Lumber Yard. They had a total of nine children, seven lived to maturity. They were: Albert Monroe, Jennie Alice, Jessie Thomas, Mary Ethel, Gladys Hazel, Edith (my mother), and Myrtle Agnes. The last three, Gladys, Edith and Myrtle were each born in Washington County. All are deceased with the exception of the youngest, Myrtle, who now lives in Bountiful, Utah with her husband Gene Gregory (also of Fayetteville) and near her two daughters, Patricia Jean (Beckstrom) and Wanda Faye (Barber) and a multitude of grandchildren and great-grandchildren, seven and eighteen respectively.

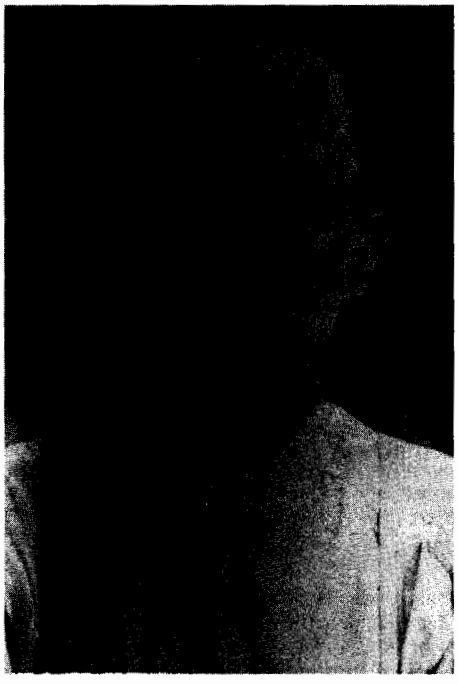
Millie Jane Reams Williams - 1926



James Monroe Williams - 1926

Gladys, Myrtle and Edith and their families had all settled in the Los Angeles areas by late 1942. Millie Jane, our beloved grandma, was also with us. There were the four of us cousins, Harold, Pat, Faye and myself who grew up together. James Monroe had worked as a well digger. Then he began work as a night watchman at Phipps Lumber Yard in Fayetteville. In 1923, he purchased three lots in the Jennings Addition. This street later was named South Church Street. He built our house at 515 and this was where I and my cousin Pat were born in 1932. Grandpa had also built a barn and later a house on one of the other lots and finished building another house on the last lot. He died a short three years after this in 1926, leaving Grandma with two young daughters still at home, Edith and Myrtle. Through the years, many others of the older children lived in the house also. Grandma always had lots of family around her as grandchildren were born. She was a caretaker of many of us. I lived with her along with my mother until I was 6-7 years old at which time my mother married my stepfather.

After Grandpa died, Grandma did laundry and housework for others to earn money for the support of her family. None of the Williams children went to school past sixth grade, most quitting school in order to help earn money for the needs of the family. I have those records of my mother's showing she quit school in sixth grade to "pick berries". The family was always very poor and especially after James Monroe died and during the depression times were very hard. Grandma always had a garden though and chickens were raised in the back yard.

When the family first lived in the house at 515 South Church Street, there wasn't any electricity, plumbing or water into the house. Grandpa dug the well in the back yard and of course, there was the traditional "outhouse". The house still exists and is now occupied by a Mrs. Collins who has been kind in allowing those of us who have visited Fayetteville to tour the house. This was especially memorable for me in 1984 to actually walk where I had spent early years and to see the home my grandfather and grandmother had built and lived in. As I said before, I was born in that house. I've had the chance to show it to one of my young granddaughters and to take her picture where I was once photographed. Being a very sentimental person, this meant a lot to me, and seemed to impress her also. Even cousins I've lost touch with have also visited this house. Seems we each feel a tie to the past through this home that our grandparents once occupied. My grandmother finally had to sell the house in 1937 because of hard times. She, my mother and I moved to rented rooms at 630 Wall Street. My Aunt Jennie who by then lived in Montana visited Fayetteville and convinced grandma, mother, my Aunt Myrtle and her husband that if we returned to Montana with her they could find work. They sold all their household goods and purchased a trailer to make the long trip, using Aunt Jennie's car to tow it. When I hear my Aunt Myrtle and Uncle Gene tell about this trip, it reminds me of "Grapes of Wrath" as they suffered such hardships along the way. I was 5-years-old at the time and remember some parts of it myself. My mother, at one point decided to leave the group and return to the Ozarks with me. She made no announcement of this to the rest of the family (she was quite spirited, as was Aunt Jennie and they had a big argument over one thing or another). Mother took me and hitch-hiked all the way back. I remember much of this even though so young. As a grandmother of six myself, I always think of what heartache this must have been to my grandmother not knowing how we were. A short time later, Grandma, Myrtle and her family also returned to the Ozarks as they found no work in Montana. She and her family lived in Fayetteville until 1941 at which time they moved to Los Angeles. Mother, Grandma and I then lived in Neosho, Missouri near my Aunt Gladys. By 1942, Aunt Gladys and her family and Grandma also had moved to Los Angeles. Mother married my stepfather in 1939 and after living in Neosho, Marshall and Kansas City, Missouri, we too finally moved to Los Angeles in November of 1942. Grandma and the families of Gladys, Edith and Myrtle remained near each other for many years. I recently got to meet some other cousins and while visiting together was struck by the fact that we each bear wonderful memories of a very special grandmother. She is remembered as a sweet, loving, caring soul, deeply devoted to her faith. She always attended the Assembly of God church near the fairgrounds in Fayetteville. Mother and Aunt Myrtle have told me stories of how Grandma always made them go to church with her, even walking barefooted (when mother hid her shoes to keep from going). I spent many, many times in church with her as I grew up, also. It was due to her that I even learned there is a God. I'm sure the other cousins received the same introduction I did. I spent many hours reading to Grandma from the Bible, as she could neither read nor write. Grandma died in Los Angeles July 12, 1950. A list of the Williams children and their children follows: (* deceased) *Albert Williams - Elmer, J. D., Viola (Albert married Mattie Durning); *Jennie (Winkle) Williams - Forest, *Lois, *Lucille, Gennevieve (Jennie married J. Winkle) *Jess Williams - Maxine, *Lawrence, Imogene, David, Susan (Jess married Maudie Gates) *Mary (Stallings) Williams - *Loretta, Alta Mae (Mary married Walter Stallings) *Gladys (Wyatt) (Reynolds) Williams - Harold (Gladys married 1. H. Wyatt, 2. O. E. Reynolds; *Edith (McMahan) Williams- Betty, Robert (Edith married Joe McMahan —my stepfather) Myrtle (Gregory) Williams - Patricia, Wanda Faye (Myrtle married Eugene Gregory). There were two other Williams children, Stella, (died age 3) and Floyd, died in infancy. Of the above grandchildren of James Monroe and Millie Jane, there are numerous 4th and 5th generation Williams descendants, too many to list here, but for example, from the last two Williams daughters, Edith and Myrtle alone, there are over thirty-five 4th and 5th generation children. Betty has six children, six grandchildren, Robert, two children, Patricia, four children, eleven grandchildren, Wanda Faye, three children, seven grandchildren. Altogether, there are probably over one-hundred descendants. As I've re-read, what I've written above, the thought has occurred to me that we were a very simple family, typical of many in the early years of this century, poor, uneducated, simple people from the Ozarks. My grandparents left us nothing of monetary value, but gave us the most important gift of all, family. As times have progressed, and many of the Williams descendants have become more educated, some have gone on to college educations and successful careers. When I look around sometimes at the many conveniences we each now have, things that would have amazed and probably have bewildered my grandparents, I can't help but realise, that even with progress, such as we've seen, still the most valuable thing you can inherit is a sense of family and what it means to be part of a family. May each succeeding generation never forget this.

Mary "Carrigan" Williams

Although the Carrigan family came to America from Ireland, their roots go deep into Arkansas soil. They settled in North Carolina and in Tennessee, where James C. Carrigan was born on January 10, 1831. He was among the first Carrigans to settle in Washington County, in the early 1850s. On August 4, 1854, James C. was married to eighteen year old Minerva Jane Hanna. Minerva was the daughter of Samuel and Frances Hanna, who had come to Washington County from Missouri. The following spring Minerva gave birth to their first child, a son, which they named Samuel Phillemon. It was nine years before their next child came on September 16, 1864. They named him John William, but called him "Bill". Times were hard when little Bill was born. Most of the younger men were away from their families fighting in the Civil War. This left the old men, women, and children to work the farms and try to scratch out a living. Such was the case for James C. and Minerva. In February, 1865, James C. had come home from his Union unit to visit his family, and to build a "Georgia Stock," which Minerva would use to help lay off the rows for spring plowing. It was on this visit home, James C. was shot and killed by a band of "bushwhackers." James C. and his young son Samuel were out in the yard when the men rode up. Minerva saw the men and quickly hid little Bill in a large flour bin, fearing they were bushwhackers. During the time of the war, the old men and women lived in fear of the bushwhackers, who roamed the countryside, stealing everything they wanted and killing anyone who got into their way. After they shot James C., they took his gun and horse and rode away. James C. was laid to rest in the White House Cemetery. His death left Minerva alone with two sons and a farm to run.

Two years later, on November 3, 1867, Minerva married Daniel Ritter. Daniel was the son of John and Nancy Ritter. Daniel built his bride a strong little cabin near Durham, Arkansas. Daniel was a good husband and father. He loved Samuel and little Bill, and adopted them. He raised them as his own, with the children he and Minerva had together. Daniel and Minerva had a good life together and resting side by side in the McCord Cemetery near Durham, Arkansas.

Young Bill Carrigan was only eighteen, when he fell in love with nineteen year old Susan Serina Frost. Susan's family was from Kentucky. Her father, James Henry Frost, died on the journey between Missouri and Arkansas. This left her mother Louisa alone, to finish the journey and then to raise their children. She did just that, and lived near Durham until her death in September, 1896. She is at rest in the Shumate Cemetery, just north of Durham.

January 11, 1883. They made their home a short distance from the home of his parents, Daniel and Minerva Ritter. The marriage of Bill and Susie was very fruitfull, as they had ten children, six girls and four boys. Their first born was my grandmother, Mary Adeline Carrigan. Little Adeline was born Tuesday, March 9, 1884. Who would have dreamed this little girl, born at a time when so many children died in infancy or early childhood, would live over 102 years. The changes she would see and live through were inconceivable. Bill and Susie went on to have the following children: Minnie Emeline, October 3, 1885; Johnny M., April 7, 1887, he died when he was about fifteen months old; Nora Ellen, December 3, 1888; James Henry, April 23, 1891; William Charles, January 20, 1893; Minerva Evaline, February 14, 1895; Lillie Beatrice, January 20, 1898; Silas Andrew, December 11, 1898; and their last child was Bessie Ann, November 4, 1901.

These are the two sons born to James C. and Minerva Jane Hanna Carrigan. On the left is John William, and on the right is Samuel Philemon. After their father, James C. Carrigan was killed by bushwhackers on 19 February 1865, their mother went on to marry Daniel Ritter. Daniel Ritter went on to adopt both boys and raised them along with the children he and Minerva had together. Samuel P. married Susan Josephine Clark. John William married Susan Serina Frost.

Granny was called Adeline as a girl. She has told many stories of growing up in Washington County. She recalled going to a school called " Freeze Out." She even recalled her teacher Mr. Morrison, and how he would wedge a pencil in the corner of the room about face high. When someone misbehaved, they would have to stand in the corner with their nose touching the pencil. She remembered picking persimmons off a tree on the way home from school with the Harris girls. She even recalled getting into a fight with a boy named Ed Greebie, when he tried to get some of the persimmons they had shook off the tree.

In May, 1903, Adeline along with her father and several brothers and sisters, attended a barn dance at the home of John Robert and Sarah Jane Williams. This evening would change Adeline's life. While dancing with the Williams' son Richard Courton, he ask if he could accompany her on the walk home. Adeline accepted his company, and when the dance was over, they started the mile or so walk to the Carrigan farm. On the way, they came to a small stream with a log crossing the water. Richard removed his shoes and rolled up his pants leg and held Adeline's hand as she crossed on the log, and he waded the stream. When they reached the other side, Richard asked Adeline if she would marry him. She said she would if he promised never to boss her. He made her that promise and they were married a couple weeks later on June 3, 1903, at the Carrigan home.

Their happy lives were shattered the following June when their first child, Clifford, died shortly after birth. He was buried at the Mt. Salem Cemetery. Two years later on April 1, 1906, their second child was born. They named their beautiful little daughter Nellie Crystal. While Nellie was quite small, Richard and Adeline packed their belongings in their covered wagon and moved west into Indian Territory. They settled on the Illinois River, near Scraper, in what would soon become the state of Oklahoma. It was there they would have the rest of their children. Ernest Robert was born on October 31, 1908, Ellar on July 5, 1912, Lila Frances on October 18, 1915, and their last child was my father, Lewis Richard Williams, born on June 24, 1920.

Granny passed away on June 22, 1986, and was laid to rest next to her husband, in the Johnson Cemetery, in Delaware County, Oklahoma. Granny was a remarkable lady, and is missed by all that knew her.

Moses Williams

Moses Williams, fifth of seventeen children of Rial and Orpha Garrett Williams, was born 5 October 1823 in Illinois, and moved with his parents to Washington County, Arkansas about 1827, where his father was an original land owner of a large Richland Creek farm. Moses farmed with his father until 26 March 1846, when he married the girl next door, Charlotte Sherrod, daughter of Reverend William Sherrod and Charlotte Miller Sherrod. The Moses Williams farm was about two miles east of Goshen (presently owned by Jess Neill), and they had a family of eight children by the time the Civil War began. Like most other able-bodied men in this area, Moses enlisted in the Confederate Army in 1862. He lost his life in the war, but the location of his grave is unknown to present descendants. His sixteen year old son Garrett took his place in the army.

A story about Charlotte's habit of smoking a little pipe, after the big meals were finished and cleared away, has been passed down through the generations. One day, as she was relaxing in her rocker and on the verge of falling asleep, her pipe went off with a "Bang". She jumped up and shouted "Price, you rascal, come here." Apparently the youngest child was the mischief-maker of the family, and she figured he would be nearby to observe her reaction to his strategically placed pinch of gunpowder.

Their children were: Garrett Williams born 1847 and married Belle Wilson; Nancy born 1848 and married Anderson Byrd; William Rile "Bill" Williams born 1851 and married Eliza Madelyn "Meddie" Wilson; Mary "Mate" born 1854 and married Edmon B. Shipley; Thomas Jefferson Williams born 1856 and married Chitessa Dutton; Matilda Jane born 1858 and died in teens; John Warren Williams born 1859 and married Julia L. Ferguson and moved to Texas; and Sterling Price Williams born 1862 and married Mintie White.

Nathan Boone Williams

Nathan Boone Williams, the Arkansas lawyer who helped establish the Parcel Post System, was born 26 August, 1873 in Madison County. He was the eldest child of Garrett and Belle (Wilson) Williams, the rest being: Frederic Herbert Williams who married Libbie Ware, Stella who married Harry Ehen Ware, Archie Bishop Williams, 1883-1899, Nolan Lafayette Williams (Mayor of Haskell, Oklahoma in 1940s) who married Rubie Robertson, and Elfie who married Norton Hilliard Robertson. Nathan's great grandfathers, Rial Williams and William Sherrod, were some of Washington County's earliest pioneers. The Boone name came from Nathan's maternal great, great grandmother, Sarah (Boone) Wilson, who was a great niece of the famous frontiersman, Daniel Boone.

Nathan Boone Williams, ca. 1896 or 97.

Nathan taught school and then was admitted to the Arkansas Bar in 1894, at the age of twenty-one. On 6 April, 1898 in Madison County, he married school teacher Eliza Martha "Lida" Ware, daughter of Walter Macon and Louise (French) Ware. Nathan and Lida Williams moved to Fayetteville by 1899, and their three children were born there: (1) Philip Tuttle Williams in 1899, who married Anne Eliza Pollard, and he was also a lawyer, at Washington, D. C. and Charlotte, North Carolina (2) Helen Harriet in 1901, and married three times, but had no children, (3) Louise Elizabeth Williams in 1902, who married Elgin E. Groseclose.. He was a PhD, an economist, author of many books, was first financial editor of Fortune Magazine, and listed in Who's Who in America from 1938 until his death in 1951.

After practicing law in Fayetteville for fifteen years, Nathan moved his family to Washington, D. C. in 1911, where he authored a number of books and continued his law practice the rest of his life. He was listed in Who's Who in America from 1936 to 1952. He died 28 December, 1951 and Lida on 10 October, 1969, and both were buried in D. C., where they had spent most of their lives.

Oscar Eugene Williams

Oscar Eugene Williams, a lawyer by profession, was born at Elkins, Arkansas, on June 18, 1881, the son of Benjamin L. and Nancy Jane (Shumate) Williams. He was the husband of Mattie B. Eagle Williams, and to this marriage two children were born — Earl N. Williams and Eugene J. Williams.

He graduated with a BA degree from the University of Arkansas in 1908. He was in his early career a school teacher, teaching in Texas and Arkansas. He was principal of Washington County Schools (Fayetteville), 1908-1909, and was Superintendent of Schools at Lonoke, Arkansas, from 1909-1913.

He was admitted to the Bar of Arkansas in 1913, and entered into the practice of law at Lonoke in the same year. He became Prosecuting Attorney of the 17th Judicial Circuit (Lonoke) in 1930.

He moved to Fayetteville in 1932, where he opened a law office. He was joined in the law office by his son, Earl N., in 1936, and by his son, Eugene J., in 1940, with the firm name being Williams, Williams, and Williams, Attorneys at Law. In 1947, Earl and Eugene left the firm to accept positions in the insurance industry, and O. E. (as he was best known to the bar) continued in the law practice under the firm name.

He was very active in professional, civic, church, and Masonic affairs, and brought a strong dedication and prodigious energy to all that he did in these fields. He was a member of the State Board of Law Examiners (1935-1936), chairman of the Washington County Election Commission (1936-1940), member of the Washington-Madison Baptist Association - moderator, (1945-1947), 32nd degree Mason, past Grand Master, K. T. past Grand High Priest, and Grand Orator, author of numerous Masonic histories and treatises, president of the Washington County Historical Society, author of a History of the Bench and Bar of Washington County, chairman of the Memorials Committee of the Arkansas Bar Association. These are only a few of the contributions made by this gentlemanly lawyer and scholar who was truly a man for all seasons. Also a charter member of the Fayetteville and Lonoke Kiwanis Clubs.

The lawyers and judges of northwest Arkansas regarded O. E. Williams as an outstanding scholar of the law and its application in the courts, and his counsel was frequently sought by judges, attorneys, and public officials. Mr. O. E. took a special interest in assisting the younger attorneys who were just beginning their careers. He shared his expertise freely with them, and his influence continues today through the lawyers and judges who had the privilege of working with him and being taught by him.

He died May 11, 1963, and was buried at Evergreen Cemetery, near the University of Arkansas campus.

Rial Williams

Rial Williams of Richland Creek was the patriarch of a large family he raised there. Born August 28, 1793 in Tennessee, he was the son of Philemon and Lucy (Green) Williams. Rial was a sergeant in the War of 1812. In Gallatin (now Saline) County, Illinois, on April 10, 1817, he married Orpha Garrett. She was born September 11, 1801 at Franklin County, Illinois. Her father Moses Garrett was trusted to keep the territorial records for that area in his home, before Illinois became a state.

Lucinda Williams Phillips, daughter of Rial Williams, Lucinda was born in Illinois, December 10, 1826. Died at Goshen, Arkansas, July 3, 1907. Wife of John Phillips

Rial and Orpha Williams had at least seven children born in Illinois: Sena (female), an infant son, Philemon, Elizabeth, Moses, Nancy and Lucinda. Two died young, before the family migrated in 1826 or 1827 to what would later become Washington County, Arkansas. Rial was a pioneer land owner on Richland Creek, between Goshen and Tuttle. He was one of the first Magirstrates in Washington County, in 1828 or 1829, and just after statehood was one of the first three election judges appointed in Richland Township.

On their little hill overlooking the creek and valley, ten more children were born: Margaret, Phoebe, Rial, Jr., Garrett, Thomas Martin, Orpha, Robert, Green, Warren and Matilda Ann. Three died young and were buried in a family cemetery on a point of land not far from their house. Orpha's parents moved here, as did her brother Robert Garrett, who became a Justice of the Peace. When her seventeenth child was only six months old, the 41 year young mother, Orpha, went to an untimely but well deserved rest, in December 1842. She was buried beside her three babies, and her mother, but there are no inscriptions on the natural rocks marking the graves.

Having a large number of children to look after, along with the many jobs of running a large farm, Rial married a second time in June 1846 to Kitty (Sanders) Phillips, widow of David Phillips, by whom she had ten children. Together, Rial and Kitty had two more boys, Ervin Polk and Burton Sanders, and a daughter that died in infancy. Their older children were marrying by this time. One of Kitty's sons married one of Rial's daughters. A descendant of Rial, Vernon Phillips, still owns the farm, which has been in the same family for well over one hundred years, making it a Washington County century farm. Having had thirty children between them, it was hardly noticeable when Kitty's sister's son, Jordan L. Banks (who was the same age as their youngest son Burt) was also welcomed into the household, to be raised by them.

The Civil War was costly to this Williams family, emotionally as well as monetarily. Six sons were old enough to fight, and three married sons lost their lives, as did a son-in-law. Even some grandsons fought in the war. The families at home did the best they could to grow and hold onto enough food to survive on despite raiding soldiers and bushwhackers. After surviving the heartaches and hardships of the war, Rial Williams died on March 12, 1868, a month after writing his will. After that, some of the children began drifting away from the Williams homestead farm area. Son Philemon's widow and children moved to Frost, Texas, Robert to Cadet, Missouri, Warren to Miles, Texas and Polk to Portalas, New Mexico. But most remained in northwest Arkansas, and countless numbers of fifth throught eighth generations of Rial Williams' descendants still live in the area he selected for a home, one hundred and fifty years ago.

William Enoch Williams

Henry Williams born 1785-1790 approximately, died 1837, married Isabel, born 1785-1790 approximately, died 1822. Enoch Henderson Williams, Sr., born 1806 in Attala County, Mississippi, died 1859, married Nancy English, born 1807, died 1878. Enoch Henderson Williams, Jr., born 1837, died 1864, married Mary Elizabeth (Mollie) Lloyd, born 1843 in Holmes County, Mississippi, died 1877. William Enoch Williams, born June 14, 1861 in Attala County, Mississippi, died in Little Rock, Arkansas and is buried at Baptist Ford Cemetery, Greenland, Arkansas. He married Susan Elizabeth Harmon December 8, 1885 in Washington County, Arkansas. She was born September 30, 1869 in Mississippi and died in Greenland, Arkansas in 1954 and is buried in Baptist Ford Cemetery, Greenland, Arkansas.

William Enoch Williams, familiarly known as Billy Williams, was born in Attala County, Mississippi on June 14, 1861. His father fought and died in the Civil War. Mary or Mollie, as she was known, later remarried. Billy and his step-father were not compatible.

James Lloyd, Mollie's brother, had moved to Van Buren, Arkansas in 1874. He came to visit his sister and her family. James brought Billy back to Arkansas with him. Billy lived with his uncle one year. He then moved to Fayetteville where he attended the University of Arkansas for three years. His money running low, he decided to teach school.

He moved in with the Jesse Harmon family at Wyman. They had moved here from Mississippi, also. Jesse William Harmon and Elizabeth Jane Edwards had moved to Arkansas as "Betsy" was heartbroken when her sister came to Arkansas. So Jesse proceeded to sell their belongings. They bought a wagon and oxen and came and settled at Wyman.

Billy and Susan Harmon fell in love and were married December 8, 1885. To this union thirteen children were born, four of whom are still alive. One, Ruby Williams Brown Wilkie, lives in Fayetteville. A son, Guy Williams lives in Cheyenne, Wyoming. A daughter, Leslie Williams Rutherford lives in Mount Clemons, Michigan and another son, Greer Williams lives at East Jordan, Michigan.

Billy taught school, was Washington County Judge for two terms from 1904 to 1908, had a grocery store, was Justice of the Peace in Greenland, State Representative and always active in his church. At the time of his death, he was superintendent of the state dairy farm at Little Rock.

Susan was a wonderful wife and mother. She also worked in her church. She gave the land that the Church of Christ in Greenland now stands on to establish a non-denominational church. She and others made quilts and sold them to help build the Community Church. Her daughter, Leslie, said that she could remember her mother giving her place in bed to some man as the beds were all full. Then Susan ironed the rest of the night. The man had come to see Judge Williams.

Descendants of Billy and Susan are: (1) Mary Elizabeth Williams born October 28, 1886 in Washington County, Arkansas died January 26, 1959 and is buried in Stilwell, Oklahoma. She married James Cameron Snodgrass in 1906 in Saint Joseph, Missouri. Their children were: (1) Allen Snodgrass who died in infancy. (2) Harold Lee Snodgrass was born in 1909 and died 1957. He married Vernan Styles. They had two children, Jimmy Snodgrass and Arleen Snodgrass. (3) Evelyn Snodgrass born 1911 and died 1969 with burial in Stilwell, Oklahoma. She married Clint Thomas in Ringold, Louisiana. They had two children, one daughter, Gail Thomas and the other, Jean. (4) Margaret Eileen Snodgrass was born in 1916. She married George Waters, her first husband in 1939 and her second husband, Julius Thomas. They were married in Ringold, Louisiana. She now resides in Stilwell, Oklahoma. She and George Waters, her first husband, had one daughter, a. Margaret Ann Waters who married Larry Kilgore. They had three children. Margaret and Julius, her second husband, had two children. They were: Karen Sue Thomas who married Richard Waters and they had three children. Their other child was James Donald Thomas. 5. Wilson Snodgrass was born in 1918 and died in 1978. He married Margaret Anderson. They had one daughter, Brenda Joyce and she had two children. 6. Helen Louise Snodgrass was born on August 4, 1921 in Stilwell, Oklahoma. She married LeRoy Towry in 1942. She resides in Stilwell, Oklahoma. They had three children: a. Nikki Lou Towry who was born July 12, 1944 in Tahlequah, Oklahoma. She married Preston DeShazo in 1968. They had three children: Stephen DeShazo born November 19, 1968 in Dallas, Texas; Douglas DeShazo born April 8, 1970 in Dallas, Texas; and Amy DeShazo born April 19, 1972 in Dallas, Texas. Nikki Towry married Ed Smith, her second husband, in 1987. She resides in Dallas, Texas. b. Donna Jo Towry was born February 25, 1947. She married Paul Adam February 20, 1971. They had three children: Allison Leigh Adam, born August 27, 1973, Andrew Cameron Adam, born July 9, 1977 and Ann Adam, born January 24, 1979. They now reside in Denver, Colorado. c. Nita Faye Towry married James Arnold in September, 1976. They have two children: Jared D. Arnold born September 5, 1978 in Bowling Green, Kentucky and Jessie Arnold born January 19, 1980 in Bowling Green, Kentucky. (7) Eugene Cameron Snodgrass, he was born in 1924 and died in 1978. He had three children: Ted Snodgrass, Dale Snodgrass and Guy Allen Snodgrass. (8) Elsie Marie Snodgrass was born in 1927 and died in 1985. She is buried in Stilwell, Oklahoma.

(II) Jesse Henderson Williams was born August 6, 1888 in Washington County, Arkansas and died November, 1971 with burial in Los Angeles, California. He married Belle Green. She was born June 28, 1895 in Argonia, Kansas and died November 28, 1980 and is buried in Los Angeles, California. They had two children: 1. Betsy Williams, born February 5, 1921 in Eldorado, Kansas. She married her first husband McGaughlin and had two children; (a) Lucinda McGaughlin born January 7, 1951 in Los Angeles, California. She married Fred Frankel and they had one child, Seth Frankel. She resides in Los Angeles, California. (b) Melanie McGaughlin was born April 1, 1955. She married Fred DeAries. They have two children: Nicole DeAries and Andy DeAries. William S. Williams

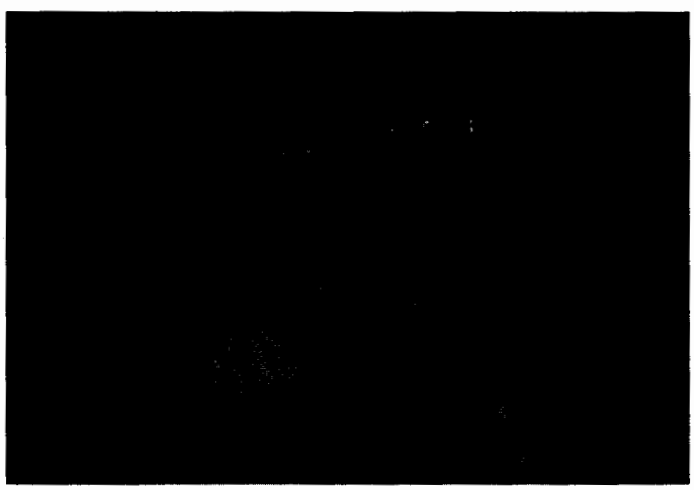
William S. Williams, was born 7 November 1822, Cane Hill, Arkansas to Mark and Mary Williams. The eldest of their 8 children, it is believed, Mark came from Tennessee and Mary from South Carolina, about 1820. By 1850, only 5 of these children were living. Wm. S., Joseph (married Lucinda McCamish) Sarah, John (married Sarah Maxwell) and Mary.

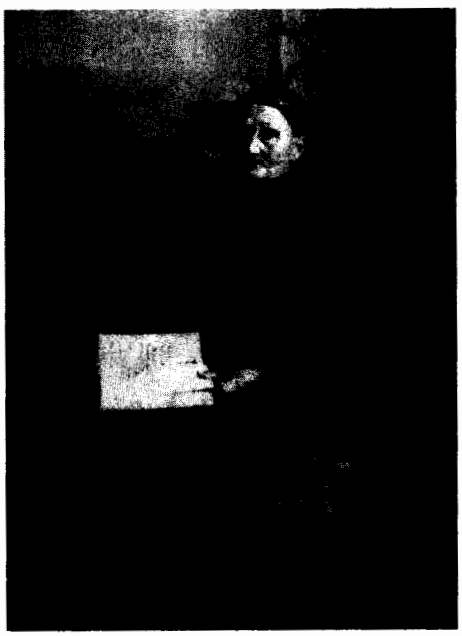


3 daughters of Ada Williams Musgrove: Norma Craig, Mildred Helms and Beulah Berryman.

Mark died 1844, the Administrators of his Estate, were his son, Wm. S. and Wm. Carlisle. When all debts were paid, very little was left for Mary and her children. It soon became apparent, that Mark had trained his children well, in the art of farming. They continued to make a living as well as their neighbors.

In January 1855, Wm. S. married Sarilda (Sarah Jane), daughter of Aaron and Nancy Hughes, from South Carolina. Mary, resided with Wm. and family until her death before 1870, Cane Hill.

Norma Williams family, about 1914, Newalla, Oklahoma. Standing: L-R: Donald Williams, Beulah Williams Hayes, Lester Williams, Gett Williams, Ada Williams Musgrove, Elsie Williams Farrell, and Charles "Crat" Williams. Seated: Norma Iona Williams.

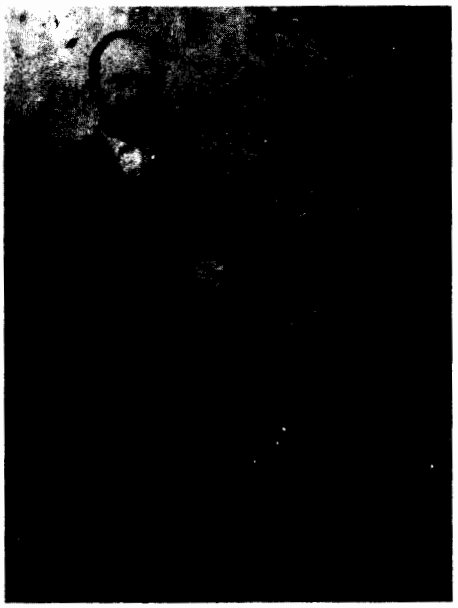


Sarilda Jane (Hughes) Williams, widow of William S. Williams, and Mother of William Welsh Williams.

William S. served in the Civil War. While he was away he wrote Sarilda that if she needed money she could find it in the northwest corner of the Deer Pasture. The letter was intercepted, by 'no good' soldiers. They visited Sarilda, and demanded to known where the money was. She told them, she knew of no hidden money, if they found any it was theirs. After ransacking the house, digging holes all over the pasture, they finally gave up and left. Sometime later, Sarilda was rocking, daughter Mary, when she noticed a picture on the wall. Now that picture had been there for years. Suddenly the details of the drawing became clear. Standing among the trees, was a lovely deer. Sure enough, behind the backing, was the money. She destroyed the picture and hid the money in a safer place, in case the soldiers returned.

William and Sarilda had 6 known children, all born in Cane Hill. 1-Sarah Jane, born December 1855, died 1889. Married James A. White. They had 6 children: May, married James Holliday; Claud, married Frantie Barnes.

John, married Ada Heaverner; Lillie; Joe (female) married



William Welsh and Norma Iona (Williamson) Williams. Taken about, 1886. After their Elopement.

Jim Lewis; Effie, married Clifton Pitchford, and had 3 daughters, Margie, Helen, and Mildred, who married Dexter Sliger, Mildred is the Family Historian, for the White Family.

2-Wm. Welsh, born 1857, died 1899, McLoud, Indian Territory. In 1885, when he was age 32 and now living Sugar Loaf, Indian Territory, he met a shy young lady, and fell in love. Norma Iona, daughter of James J. and Rutha (Newkirk) Williamson, of Missouri. Wm. and Norma wanted to marry, but there were obstacles. Wm. was the breadwinner, for his mother and sisters. Norma was her father's housekeeper, and caring for her motherless brothers and sisters. Alas, love won out. They decided to elope, and take the consequences. They rode William's mule to Pastor Riggins home. Since it was late evening, by the time they arrived, the Pastor had long since retired. Knocking very loud on the door, finally brought the Pastor, his wife, L. V. and hired hand D. Gentry to the door, stuffing nightshirts into breeches and soxless feet into brogans. L. V. adjusting her wrapper and mobcap. Wm. and Norma, cared little, what these folks looked like. All they wanted, was to hear Pastor Riggins say, I now pronounce you, Man and Wife.

These stories were told to, William and Norma's daughter Ada Mae, she in turn told to, these two compilers.

3-Mary F. born 1859; 4-Fanny, born 1861, married Oscar Brown; 5-Minerva, born 1863, married John Haley, descendants live in Poteau, Oklahoma. 6-John, born 1868, died 1873, Cane Hill. Sarilda Jane, lived her last years with the Haleys. Died at Wister, Oklahoma. She is buried at Ellis Chapel Cemetery. There is no marker.

William W. and Norma had 7 children to live, and raise families. All b. Indian Territory. 1-Ada Mae, b. 1888, d. 1980, Holdenville, Oklahoma. Married Ed Musgrove, from Texas. They had 9 children: Pat (1905-1986) Emma (1907-1986) Jim (1909) Norma (1916) (Family Historian) Bill (1918) Paul (1920) Mildred (1922) Beulah (1922) (Family Historian) and Allen (1930). 2-Beulah Serena, b. 1889, d. 1986, married Ulysses Hayes, 3 children: Mae (1906-1980) Charles, (1909-1980) Vivian, 1912, married William McCormick, lives Kansas. 3-Getty James, b.1890-d.1959 m. Rhoda Campbell. 4-Elsie Nora, b. 1894, d. 1983, m. Hollis Farrell, 4 children; James, 1912, Nora, 1918, Jean, 1925, Allene, 1928. 5-Charles "Crat", (1897-1986), married Hattie Derrick, 6 children: Owen (1920-1972) Wm. Lee, (1923-1986) Betty, 1928, Dean, 1931, Margie, 1938, Jimmy, 1940. 6-Donald Selvey, b.1898-d.1977, m. Leva Rickert, 3 children:

Leland, 1920, Ruth, 1923 and Arlene 1927. 7-Lester Hoarce, b. 1902, living Newalla, Oklahoma, Mother Norma Marr. 2nd James Sparks, 1901, divorce same year. Norma chose to give Lester the same name, as her other children. (William). Lester had 3 sons, Odell, 1924, Lester Lee, 1926, Getty, 1931. All live Newalla, Oklahoma.

I, Norma Musgrove Craig, the fourth child of Ed and Ada (William) Musgrove. Married Wade Craig, 1933, we have 2 daughters, Billie Jean and Kathrine. Six grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren.

Beulah Mushgrove Berryman, Ed and Ada's eighth child, married 1941 Leonard Berryman. They have one son Roger, and a daughter Sandra, 7 grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Beulah and I are the Family Genealogists, we have traveled throughout this country, searching for and writing about our ancestors. At the death of our Mother, 1980, she had 168 living descendants.

Sadie Thompson Williford

Sadie Sarah Josephine Thompson was born October 31, 1901, at Durham, Arkansas in the home of her Grandpa Thompson. She was the daughter of Lewis Leon and Ida Pearl Carrigan Thompson. She was named Sadie after her Grandma Sarah Thompson and Josephine after her Grandma Josephine Carrigan. They lived with Grandma Thompson until Sadie was five years old. Then they moved to a farm on Snake Branch located about three miles above Durham, into a big log house with five rooms and a long porch. There was plenty of work for all, and Sadie helped with the chores. Her father raised chickens, hogs, goats, sheep and cows. Lewis and Ida Thompson were considered well off for that time. With the farm, many animals, a large home, and the money they had, Sadie was very lucky compared to most children at that time. Her parents also showered her with lots of love.

Raymond and Sadie Thompson Williford

Sadie attended a two-room school house in Durham. She walked three miles to school. If it snowed during school hours her mother hitched up the horse and buggy, and would come to pick her up. The school was heated with a pot-belly wood stove, and there was a well right outside for water. Sadie took her lunch everyday in a little metal bucket. Weather permitting, everyone ate lunch outside under the trees, if not, they ate inside in the cloakroom. Sadie went through the sixth grade, then had to quit because of sickness with her eyes.

Ganiott and sons William A. and Leonard

Sadie was an only child until the age of ten. At that time her parents knew of a woman named Mattie Ritchie who had four children. Her husband had died and they were very poor. With no way to feed or support her children, she was forced to give them away. Sadie's parents took in the five-month old baby, Ida Ruth. Sadie remembers that she cried for Ruth's brother Doyle, who was four years old. Her father sadly told her they could only take one child. So Sadie had a new sister. Ruth's name was changed from Ritchie to Thompson. She later grew up to marry Raymond Chandler and she now lives in Bristow, Oklahoma.

When Sadie was about ten years old, she started taking piano lessons. Her teacher was Mrs. Berta Hinebaugh, a German lady who lived above Durham. She took lessons for two years. Sadie later played both the piano and organ for churches and musicals in and around Durham and Elkins.

At age seventeen, Sadie started courting Richard Raymond Williford. They courted for five years. Then on Sunday evening, October 5, 1924, Sadie and Raymond were married at Whitehouse. Sadie and Raymond were both twenty-two years old. Her sister Ruth and Mr. Raymond Chandler were present for the wedding. (Raymond Williford was born December 7, 1901.)

Raymond and Sadie Williford's first home was at her parents house on Snake Branch. Raymond hauled hay, timber and livestock for a living.

Later they moved into a two-story house on Springston Ford, where their first child, Imogene Marie was born on June 20, 1925. (Imogene Williford married Elmer Karr of Pettigrew on April 21, 1943.)

Then the Willifords moved back to Sadie's parents farm on Snake Branch to help her father while her mother was ill. It was there that Glennis Rosemary was born October 19, 1926. (Glennis Williford married Virgil Ray Stout of Whitehouse on November 7, 1943.)

From there they moved into a two-room house that Raymond built on Snake Branch. On April 13, 1933 their third daughter Jackqueline Loyce was born. (Jackqueline Williford married Charles John of Fayetteville on September 6, 1952.) Sadie's first three children were all born at home.

In 1938, Raymond bought a battery-powered radio. This was a big event, because they were the only ones in the neighborhood who owned a radio. Neighbors near and far would come to the Willifords house to listen to the "Grand Ole Opry".

Now and then, everyone took turns having "swingin' parties" at their homes. This was a fun time spent listening to music, dancing and visiting with friends. The children would all play games.

The Willifords later moved to a log house on White River in Elkins. On September 20, 1949 Ray Dean was born at City Hospital in Fayetteville. (Ray Dean Williford married Doskie Stacks of Fayetteville on April 8, 1977.)

In 1962, Raymond and Sadie built a house on Highway 16 East in Elkins. Richard Raymond Williford died December 9, 1973. Sadie still lives in that house on East 16. She is eighty-six years old and says she has lived a good life. She has seen many changes in her lifetime. Sadie has four children, nine grandchildren, and fifteen great-grandchildren.

Raymond W. Willis

Raymond W. and Cleo Willis moved to Fayetteville with their two year old daughter, Alice Ann, in the summer of 1941. Raymond was to be the band director for the Fayetteville Schools.

Raymond was born and grew up in Russellville, Arkansas. He received his degree from the University of Arkansas in 1931, and then started his teaching career in Charleston, Arkansas. The fourth year in Charleston, he served as superintendent of schools. In Charleston, Raymond met Cleo Burke, where she was also teaching school. On June 5, 1936, Raymond and Cleo were married. They lived in Roscoe, Santa Anna, and Weatherford, Texas, before moving to Fayetteville in 1941.

In 1941, the band room was in the basement of the high school on School Street. In addition to having the high school band, Raymond taught several science classes. In later years he also taught business law and economics. After school he taught grade school beginning band and second year band.

The band room was soon moved to the basement of Root Gym which was located to the north of the high school. The present high school on Stone Street was completed for school to start the fall of 1952. After moving to the new senior high school, Raymond had the high school band program one half day and the junior high program the other half day. In 1947, the Fayetteville High Alma Mater was written by Raymond and is still being used.

In 1960, Raymond became the assistant principal of Fayetteville High School. After serving in this position for eleven years, he retired July 1, 1971. This completed 30 years with the Fayetteville Public Schools.

Raymond continued to be busy working for Whit Chevrolet for six years and Williams Ford Tractor for two years. He continued to work in the Lions Club serving as Secretary-Treasurer, a position he had held since 1966.

Education had been very important to Raymond. He was proud his family had all attended the University of Arkansas. He had directed the University of Arkansas Band in 1945-46, while they were looking for a new director. In 1949, he received his Masters Degree from the U of A.

After retiring, Raymond enjoyed attending class reunions and visiting with former students. He remembered most of his students and could call them by name.

Raymond W. Willis died May 19, 1985. The following letter to the editor appeared in the Northwest Arkansas Times written by a former student, David Newbern.

"As band director and teacher and later as an administrator in the Fayetteville Schools, R. W. Willis was a friend to literally thousands of students. I learned much more from him than how to play a horn. Unfortunately, it took me a long time to find out just how much he had taught me. Mr. Willis was a model of tolerance combined with good-natured discipline."

"He taught at a time when the band director was given such courses as general science and law and economics to teach along with the demanding schedule of the band. At one time he would be involved in teaching junior high students to march and play while trying to get the high school band ready to march in a parade or at a Friday night football game. He would at the same time be teaching little children privately in an effort to get them interested in band music and thus ready for the big bands when they grew older. I still wonder how he did it all."

"In addition to all of that, he was a stalwart civic club and church member; a man devoted to his family and his friends."

"Thank you, Mr. Willis, for all you did for me and for the community. You will be sorely missed."

During these years in Fayetteville, Cleo was a homemaker interested in her family and active with Raymond in the Central United Methodist Church. Cleo Willis still lives in Fayetteville enjoying family and friends.

Their daughter, Alice Ann, graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1961 and married George B. Simkins of Rogers on June 8, 1961. George and Alice Ann have lived in Fayetteville and raised two sons, Paul and Alan.

She was born June 17, 1859 in Atchinson, Kansas, died September 17, 1923 at Evansville. Both buried at Edmiston Cemetery east of Morrow, Arkansas. Rebecca Wilson was the daughter of Robert Finley and Catherine Presnell Shearer. The children of Gabriel and Rebecca Wilson. Fannie, born 1886, died September 1929, buried in Edmiston. She married Jim Little, born 1888, died 1963. Buried at Westville. Married Florence Rogers, December 31, 1911. Evie F., born October 25, 1888, died March 5, 1963. Bessie Williams, born 1890, buried in Kansas. Married Thorton W. Williams, born February 19, 1889, died April 14, 1950. Nancy Holland, born November 26, 1892, died July 31, 1972. Married Jim Holland, buried at Westville. Mamie Spears, born 1895, buried in California. Married Homer Spears, born September 20, 1893, died February 18, 1964. Alice Tapp May 21, 1898, died February 28, 1958. Buried Edmiston Cemetery. Married Churchill Tapp, born May 21, 1890, died September 30, 1976. Goldie Wright, born 1900, married Frank Wright. A long time ago (dates unknown at this time), a group of people (of German-Dutch descent) the Browns, Brock, Goldman, Williams, Wilson and McFarlands, left Germany and went to Holland, there they took boats and crossed the U. S., later went to Knox County, Indiana then to Crawford County, Indiana.

In 1879, they all decided to go west to Arkansas. They formed a (covered) wagon train. They took all their families and possessions including cows, hogs, horses, chickens. They started in December from Crawford County, Indiana to Crawford County, Arkansas. Some of the children walked all the way. Due to the bad winter weather, and all the hardships, crossing rivers and going up mountains, they got here in March 1880. No one died along the way. After they got here they wrote back and said "this is another paradise." "This is a Garden of Eden", there is plenty of grazing for all our animals. Plenty of everything. Some settled on the Crawford and Washington County line, some in Evansville. They bought land. The Wilsons donated land for a cemetery. It is called "Mountain Top". Most of all the older ones that came on the wagon train are buried there. The Wilsons on the trip were Alexander and Mary and their seven children. Seven generations.

Benjamin Henderson Wilson

Benjamin Henderson "Hence" Wilson was born November 10, 1819 in Tennessee (probably Rutherford Co.), the son of John Wilson and Mary Nash May, who were both natives of North Carolina. Hence, was a grandson of John Wilson and Sarah Boone. She was the daughter of John Boone and granddaughter of Benjamin Boone, who was an uncle of the famous frontiersman Daniel Boone. About 1844 Hence Wilson married Annaliza Caroline "Callie" Tuttle, who was born June 5, 1827 Tennessee, oldest of three girls born to Nathan W. and Annaliza (Riddle) Tuttle of the Mt. Comfort area, west of Fayetteville, in this county. Hence Wilson taught Botany at the Ozark Institute, for which Callie's grandfather, Soloman Tuttle had donated the land. It was there that Hence met James M. Johnson of Madison County, Arkansas, a friendship that lasted the rest of their lives.

Hence and Callie Wilson had four daughters: Margie Aletrice "Leat", born July 1, 1845 and married W. R. "Bill" Phillips; Malvina, born 1847 and married Henry Mullins; Susan Maybelle Nash "Belle", born August 9, 1850 and married Garrett Williams; and Madelyn "Meddie", born September 28, 1851 and married William Rile "Bill" Williams, brother of Garrett. Callie died at age 26.

In 1860, Hence second married Jennie Mullins, and they had five children: Walter Lee Wilson 1862-1879; James Boone Wilson, born June 12, 1869 who married Mary Elizabeth Vaughn and moved to McCook, Nebraska; Robert Bedford "Bed" Wilson, born November 30, 1872 who married Anna Cecelia Logue and moved to Fullerton, California; Idyll, born January 30, 1876 and married Ulyses Sheridan Fraze; and Beulah Omega, born December 16, 1878 who married Thadeus Lincoln "Link" Johnson, son of her father's friend. Hence Wilson's later years were spent in Madison County, where he died January 26, 1889 and he, son Walter and daughters Belle and Beulah are buried there at the Buckeye Cemetery. In 1893, Hence's widow Jennie second married his lifelong friend, widower Col. James M. Johnson, a Union Army Veteran, Doctor at Huntsville, Arkansas, Congressman and Lieutenant Governor of Arkansas, who also served as Trustee of the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville.

David L. Wilson

David Lincoln Wilson, the son of Eleven L. Wilson and Deliah Jane Meadows - Wilson was born in Belmont, Arkansas, March 14, 1871. He was a resident of the Baldwin community. He was a member of the Freewill Baptist Church at Buckner. He was a foreman for the Frisco Railroad. He married Annie Roberts - Wilson February 5, 1893. She died August 13, 1897. They did not have any children. He then married Minerva Jane Strain - Wilson October 31, 1898. They had four children. Mamie Priscilla Wilson - Johnson born May 17, 1903, Roberta Cecily Wilson Elliott, born July 13, 1905, Gladys Jane Wilson Sisemore born 1908. A son, Franklin Wilson was born and died in 1901. He was a member of the Washington County Masonic Lodge No. 1 and received his 50-year pin in 1959. He had several brothers and sisters: John R. Wilson married Ida Wilson - Sax married John Sax, Louella Wilson Meadows married L. C. Meadows, George Wilson married Sarah Roberts Wilson, Maretta Wilson White married Charlie White, Omer D. Wilson married Deliah Johnson - Wilson, Bessie Wilson - Chitwood married Lee Chitwood, Bead Wilson - Johnson married Walter Johnson. David Lincoln, Annie Roberts, Janie Strain and their son Franklin are all buried at Kings Cemetery.

Minerva Jane Strain was born October 23, 1869 at Harris. She was the daughter of Robert M. Strain and Priscilla Mankins. Priscilla Strain was the sixth child of Peter Mankin Jr. and Narcissia Mills - Mankins.

David and Janie Wilson in front of their home in Baldwin, Arkansas.

David L. (Dave) Wilson and Minerva Jane "Janie" Wilson lived on top of Bear Mountain at Baldwin since about 1905. They were well known in the vicinity. Uncle Dave, as many affectionately called him was a large man and well liked. Janie was a tall, slender woman with a dark complexion and high cheek bones. She always wore boots and an apron and very often, a dust cap. She was well-liked and very outspoken. She always had to send you home with something. I was her great-granddaughter, the daughter of Virginia Elliott Fields and granddaughter of Roberta Cecily Wilson Elliott. When I was very small and would go to visit her, she always had to give you something to go home on. On one occasion, I went home with some persimmons but on another visit she didn't have anything sweet so she sent me home with a sweet potato and told me to tell my mother, Virginia to cook it for me when I got home for supper. I still have a small, pink print apron and dust cap she made for me that matched hers.

Janie died November 10, 1955. Her husband Dave died June 15, 1960. They are buried at Kings Cemetery.

Roberta Cecily (Wilson) was a tall, plump woman. She had a wonderful sense of humor and enjoyed life to the limit. She would sit by the hour and talk about family history. She had a love for remembering names and dates of loved ones, neighbors and friends. I can remember going to Strain and Kings Cemetery for Memorial Day and decorating graves of relatives past. We also talked about the family members, their likes, and their dislikes. I can remember planting forget-me-nots on her mother Janie Wilson's grave, year after year because they were her favorite. Roberta (Mom) died November 12, 1974 of cancer. She had spent a considerable time before her death discussing the birth of my child due any day. She had predicted the child would be a girl and she talked about how she would look. She helped to name her.

November 14, 1974, her great-granddaughter was born Sarah Deann Oxford. Sarah never saw her great- grandmother. She was buried before her birth. Hopefully, through her great-grandfather Leslie (Pop) Elliott her grandmother Virginia Elliott Fields, and her mother Linda Fields Oxford, she has learned about her and learned the value of family and history. Today, my children Sarah Oxford, Laura Oxford and Kyle Oxford still take time to go and remember and take forget-me-nots.

Dr. Steven Craig Wilson

I moved to Fayetteville in 1976 with my wife Connie Marie after completing Medical School at the University of Oklahoma. Connie is employed by the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences as a Medical Librarian. She is the daughter of Dr. James

L. Dennis of Little Rock who is a former Chancellor of the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences. Connie is well known for her work in research library work, and is listed in Who's Who Among American Women. I am a Family Practitioner and also fill my time as an Old Testament Scholar, Amateur Astronomer, and Bagpipe instructor. I am a member of the Turner Street Baptist Church in Springdale. This is the remarkable story of my family.

My family story begins far back in time, as my genealogy has been traced to 690 A. D. The line of my family began as the convergence of three royal lines, from the King Ingiald of Vermaland of Norway (who was sacrificed to Oden by his relatives during a famine), King Godfrey of Heidmark, and King Sigurd of Denmark. Their descendants married and became the stock of people who populated Northern Scotland and became the Highlanders, kilts and all. Among my ancestors, for better or worse, are Thorfinn the "Skull Splitter", Halfdan the "Stingy", and, believe it or not, Eyestein the "Fart". These were all Earls of Northern Scotland.

Eventually this line produced George Gunn, the Crowner of Caithness. He was the first chief of the Clan Gunn and he and his sons were involved in many of the great legends and adventures of the Scottish Highlands. His grandson was William Cattach, the third and perhaps greatest of the Clan Chiefs of Clan Gunn. He was also known as the MacSheumais, and it is from him that our family eventually adopted the name Wilson, meaning "Son of William". His grandson was the fourth chief, Alexander, and he had two sons; the elder was William Mor ("big"), and the younger was William Beg ("small"). The elder was the line of subsequent chiefs, and the younger was the line producing my branch of Wilsons. Our line owes its existence to the fact that during a treacherous attack by the Clan Keith, William Cattach's father, James, remained at home. The famous battle at Chapel St. Tears in northern Scotland eliminated most of the Gunn heirs. The Keiths had agreed to send "twelve horse" of men to negotiate, but arrived two men on each horse and ambushed the Gunns, my ancestors.

Our line continued through Donald the "Scholar" eventually to Henry Wilson. In 1715 the Scottish Clans rose against the English to try to restore the throne to the rightful James VII and II, the father of Bonnie Prince Charlie. Henry Wilson was captured in this "rising" or rebellion, if you wish, at a town called Preston, near Liverpool. The fall of Preston was immortalized by Robert Burns poem "Kenmure's On and Awa', Willie". Henry Wilson was banished to the American Colonies in 1715, and arrived in Maryland aboard the "Friendship" in 1716. His son was a caulker and wandered off a pier in "a state of bewilderment" leaving a pregnant wife who later bore a son William Wilson 1746-1835. He lived through the American Revolution but his role in those days is not known.

Eventually the line produced William B. Wilson, my great grandfather, who married his cousin E. V. Wilson, but who was called "Sarah" for unknown reasons. His son Robert Henry Wilson moved to Oklahoma where my father, Clayton Kahle Wilson was born, and moved on to Kansas where I was born in McPherson, Kansas in 1950. Interestingly, my name Steven Craig, means Crowner of the Crags, the ancient title of the clan chief. I feel my Scottish heritage extremely keenly and I love to wear the kilt at every chance, in my family tartan. I love living in Washington County which reminds me very much of my ancestral home in the Highlands of Scotland.

Ernest Wilson

Ernest Wilson was born at Health, Arkansas. His father was a Methodist minister. T. J. Wilson was sent to many different communities, so the family lived in many places. In 1913, the family moved to Everett, Arkansas. There Ernest met Miss Bertha Anderson. They attended singing school and church together, and went to many social events. They sang for gospel meetings. T. J.'s father was sent back to Brannan Mountains and St. Paul Delaney the year of 1914. On May 30, 1914, they were married by Rev. Andy Nickell Wilson, our grandfather. Ernest was also Mr. Andy's oldest grandchild. To this union was born 9 children: Doyle, Edwin, Kirby, Marie, Daly, Reuel, Imogene, Louretta and Ralph.

Ernest and Bertha Wilson's home built in 1935.

The family attended church at Hazel Valley. Back then Mr. Wilson helped many times to care for the sick in their homes. No one ever went to the hospital. He led the church singing for 28 years. Mr. Wilson passed away in 1942. Mrs. Wilson played the piano for 65 years. Mr. Wilson served on Hazel Valley School Board. He also was J. P. of law for one term. He loved the sports of baseball, croquet and marbles. Probably his favorite was fox hunting. He was always playing pranks on his best friends or anyone else if they got in his way. With the help of the Nickell boys and others, they kept everyone awake.

One cold day in February, Mr. Wilson was at Thompson store. The river was rising. Mr. Will Dunaway and Frank Wallin got in the river and their team got stranded against a log and couldn't get the wagon and team across. Mr. Dunaway began to cut his mules loose from the wagon, but by that time the wagon bed floated loose down the river. It went with Mr. Wallin still sitting afloat. Neither could swim. Ernest ran down the creek bank, pulled his clothes off down to his underwear, got Mr. Wallin by his hair and pulled him to safety. Later Mr. Wallin said Mr. Wilson "liked to pulled all my hair out".

THE HOUSE ON THE HILL

For so many years it has stood alone
With the memory that lingers still
After the family has all gone
It remains the lonely house on the hill

Many years of laughter to hear
The children roaming from valley to hill
With dad and mom they had no fear
While they skipped and played at will

When morning came off to school we would go
Along the way there were birds and whipperwill
Sometimes we traveled through the snow
After school we would go home to the house on the hill

The house has memories of yesteryear
Of the family laughter that lingers still Sometimes happiness and sometimes tears
Yet we still love the lonely house on the hill

Yes the house stands alone
House the family loved so dear
On the hills behind we would often roam
With the family gone we often shed a tear

Many years have come and gone
Our family laughter lingers still
For the old house that has stood alone
Our hearts yearn for the house on the hill

The yard looks peaceful and green
Where we children played so long ago
Where joy and laughter forever ring
Sweet is the memory no one knows

The fruit cellar is made of stone
The house is made of native timber
Yes they both stand alone
Where two were born in September

The yard fence has long been gone
The windows have all been taken away
The old house on the hill we call home
I wish we could go back and visit for a day

Edwin Wilson

He traveled after doctors for many sick families. They dug all graves by hand, and Mr. Wilson was always present when help was needed.

The family income was mostly off the farm; apples, peaches, beans, tomatoes, corn and molasses, etc. The family had a cider press to go with the apple drier shed.

Mr. Wilson belonged to the lodge for many years. He also was a stone mason. He built the wall around the Tatum Spring in the White House Community. At times many people hauled drinking water from the spring. All the children attended school at Hazel Valley. Doyle went one year to high school at Winslow and finished at Fayetteville. In 1942, World War II was raging. Doyle joined the Navy and spent much time overseas. When he returned back to the states he got married. He attended the University of Arkansas and got a degree in engineering. He then went to Dartmouth College, returning after 20 years service with college.

Mrs. Wilson being a widow, sent 4 boys to service. Kirby also joined the Navy and he spent time overseas. After returning to the states he and his wife operated a jewelry store for 20 years. Then he operated a fleet of buses for a school in Oregon. He now has returned. Marie married L. Q. Skelton after he spent time in the United States Army. The Skeltons operate a farm and trucking business from Springdale. Daily joined the Navy and spent time overseas. After returning home he moved to Washington State, and is in the construction business as a plumber. Reuel also joined the Navy and spent much time abroad. When he returned home he attended the Stamps School of Music. For many years he has been employed as a machinist in Dallas, Texas. Imogene married Orville Stout. Mr. Stout now drives a school bus after retiring from the Fayetteville Fire Department. Louretta married Joe Garrison. They are retired from farming. Ralph has been employed as a major machinist in Dallas, Texas for 30 years.

The Wilsons had a family quartet and trio. Three of the children were small when Mr. Wilson died. Edwin was the only one who was old enough who didn't go to war. He was married with one child. He helped his mother raise the younger children, as there wasn't much money to be had. They mostly raised what they had to eat. Mrs. Wilson was a good seamstress and made most of the younger children's clothes. Imogene and Louretta have helped Edwin sing at over 150 funerals in the last 45 years. Edwin had led the church singing for 45 years after his father died. He has served on the school board for sixteen years.

For the service, Mrs. Bertha Wilson played the piano at Nickell Church. She made 67 consecutive trips to the Nickell decoration from 1914 to 1981. There was a piano given in her honor and also a plaque was given in her honor. She died in 1982.

Ernest was good as a kangaroo court lawyer. Hardly ever lost a case. Mr. Wilson taught singing school. Bertha had a degree in music. They traveled many places in Washington County to singing conventions. The Wilsons lived their entire married life in Hazel Valley.

Edwin and Hazel and 4 children haven't missed a decoration at the Nickell Cemetery. In fact, Edwin had never missed one. When Hazel (Jarnagan) Wilson was three years old she was lost in the woods for one night and day, causing the parents much grief, as well as the neighbors. The Wilsons have donated over 400,000 yards of gravel to the Washington County Highway Department. In 1987, Edwin, Hazel, Stanley and family are the only Wilsons now living here in the valley. Oh, but the memory of the happy times we had down through the years.

Evie Finley Wilson

Evie Finley Wilson (October 25, 1888 - March 5, 1963), married Dixie Florence Rogers December 31, 1911. She was born on October 25, 1893, died October 5, 1983. He was born near Evansville (Washington County), Arkansas. She was born in Indian Territory, Oklahoma. When they married they lived around Evansville then moved around a lot to find work. He worked on a farm at that time. In the fall of 1915 they moved to Fayetteville, Arkansas. He worked on different jobs. In 1920, he got on the railroad. We lived there until October 1926, then he was transferred to Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. We stayed there until June, 1930, we moved to Fort Smith, Arkansas. By that time the "Depression" was worse. The company got rid of lots of help and although he worked 13 years it just wasn't long enough. We then moved to Westville, Oklahoma. In one-half year he found a place close to Cincinnati, Arkansas so they moved, I stayed in Westville, and finished high school. He farmed, also worked out some. All farm help was paid ten cents an hour, for 10 hours a day and 6 days a week. At that time you could buy work shirts for fifty-nine cents each. Overalls $1.59 each. Crackers at nine cents a box, bread at five cents a loaf.

We bought only things we couldn't raise. We canned and dried corn and green beans, we canned and dried apples and peaches. We let the peas and beans dry on the vine then gathered them, shelled them then heated things a bit, that kept the weevil out. The men folks took wheat and corn to Barton's Mill for flour and corn meal. We had lots of brown leghorn hens. We carried dozens of eggs to the store and got five cents and six cents a dozen. That bought coffee, sugar, and things we didn't raise. We butchered a hog and got our meat and lard that way. We bought material to make our dresses and it was nine - ten cents a yard. We survived. Children; Russell Albert - born February 15, 1913 in Evansville, died September 18, 1916; Hazel Lucille - born September 11, 1915 near Westville, Oklahoma; Emma Marie (Carney) - born January 27, 1918 in Carthage, Missouri; Roy Fred - born April 4, 1921 in Fayetteville, Arkansas; Troy Mervel - born October 29, 1923 in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Roy was a Marine in World War II. Troy was in the Navy in World War II.

After Troy finished University, he went back into the service and made it a career. He now lives in Fayetteville, Arkansas. Marie now lives in Sacramento, California; Roy lives in San Diego, California. I married Ewell Tunnell July 26, 1935. Marie married Myrl Carney, July 1937; Roy married Lyda Beaver March 1940; and Troy married Mada Ryker December 1944.

George Wilson

George Wilson's first wife died. Later he married Louisa McMakin. They had one son, Thomas James Wilson. T. J. was born in Fairfield, Illinois, 3/10/1865.

While in his teens, T. J. made a trip out west to Colorado. When he returned home, he along with his parents, moved to Salem, Missouri. They stayed there for six years. While there they did some mining.

Mr. George Wilson made a trip back to Fairfield to visit his son, Sam, and family. After returning home, George wrote to his son Sam, the following, "We are going to that bluff tomorrow, and put gards over it and if Nash and his tribe is seen in that part of the country they won't be heard of any more."

Soon after, the family moved to Washington County, Arkansas. The year was 1888. They lived in Hazel Valley two years then moved to Brannon Mountain where Mr. George bought a farm.

In 1899, T. J. Wilson and his mother, Louisa, deeded one-half of the ground Brannon Cemetery is located on.

The first family Wilsons became acquainted with was Andy Nickell's family in Hazel Valley. Young T. J. Wilson fell in love with Mr. Andy's oldest daughter, Alice Nickell in the year of 1891, on January 7th they were wed. They had the following children; Authur, Dove, Flah, Reuel, and Beulah (twins), Eulah, Naomi, and Demoy.

George Wilson died in 1909, Louisa died in 1910. They are buried in Brannon Cemetery.

Thomas J. surrendered his life to the ministry for the Methodist Episcopal Church in the early 1900s. One of his first appointments was at Millers Chapel. There he worked at a sawmill, raised some crops and to further his education, he went to school with two of his children, one half-day at a time.

Mr. Wilson was sent to Chester, Alma, West Fork, Mt. Salem, St. Paul, Delaney, Brannon Mountain, Jasper, Combs, Elsworth, Gennie Lind, Norward, and Vesta.

The year 1913, his family moved to Everton, Arkansas. While there his oldest son, Ernest met Mrs. Bertha Anderson. They kept company while they were living at Everton. T. J. and family moved back to their home in Madison County. Ernest made many trips back to Everton. On one journey he had the misfortune to be crossing the Buffalo River. His horse was going downstream trying to find a place to climb out on the other side while Ernest hung on to the horses tail. As the water was cold and he had many miles yet to travel, it was a very unpleasant trip. Finally he got to his destination and was well taken care of. It was a hundred mile ride, one way.

In May 1914, they became man and wife. In 1921, Rev. Wilson and family moved to Illinois leaving two married children in Arkansas. T. J. Wilson was pastor of ten different churches in Illinois. He retired in 1936 at 70 years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are buried in Alton, Illinois.

Mr. Ernest Wilson and his wife had nine children. Mr. Wilson died in 1942; Mrs. Wilson in 1982. They were boosters of gospel singing. He led the singing in his church for 28 years. His son Edwin has led in the same church for 45 years.

They owned land where Starks Nursery set an apple orchard. In the year of 1885, Starks Brothers took a mortgage on the first crop until they were paid. It took three years for them to receive their pay. The last tree died in the year of 1985, making them 100 years old. They were called Yorkimperials. The farm is still in the Wison family.

Location of the farm is in Hazel Valley. The Hazel Valley post office was established in 1875 and was discontinued in 1951. In times past there has been five different school houses with different names. The last one being No. 85 District of Hazel Valley. It was totally disbanded in 1954. At one time there were three grocery stores there but now the closest one is eight miles away. Mail is delivered out of Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The T. J. Wilson family has been very instrumental in all community projects, schools, churches, roads, cemeteries, marriages, funerals and sickness when there was no way to get to a hospital. They helped dig many graves by pick and shovel, in all kinds of weather. Whatever the need, they were there. Wilson's have descendants scattered throughout the United States. Many of them are bankers, lawyers, farmers, machinists, teachers, preachers, singers, etc.

Harry Wilson

Harry Keith Wilson was born June 16, 1939, in Monticello, Arkansas, one of twin sons of Woodrow Kelvin and Pauline Davis Wilson. His great grandfather, Able Pennington Wilson was one of the early settlers of Drew County, Arkansas, migrating from Monticello, Georgia to Monticello, Arkansas in 1849.

Harry was married April 7, 1961 in Monticello to Ruth Ann Dodson, daughter of John William and Annie Ruth Askew Dodson. They are both graduates of Monticello High School, and both were students at Arkansas A & M where Harry obtained his Bachelors Degree in Industrial Education in 1961. They moved to Fayetteville in the fall of 1961 to continue their education at the University of Arkansas. Harry worked part-time at the University poultry farm gathering eggs. Money was pretty tight during that time. They lived in a one room apartment and ate a lot of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and free eggs.

After Harry finished his Master's Degree in Vocational Education in 1962, they made their home in Springdale. His first teaching job was Industrial Arts Instructor at Springdale High School, a position he held for twelve years. To supplement his teaching salary, he worked at odd jobs during the summer months. For two of these summers, he ran the summer school for the Springdale Migrant Ministry Program. Harry was instrumental in forming the Springdale Classroom Teachers Association. He later taught Industrial Cooperative Training at the high school for six years. Harry moved into an Administrative position at Southwest Junior High, where he was Assistant Principal for three years and Principal for four years. He is now Principal of Springdale High School, and working toward his education specialist degree at the University of Arkansas. He is respected by students and fellow teachers alike for his consistency and fair play. He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, American Association of Educational Administrators, and the National Rifle Association. He served as a Scoutmaster for Explorer Troop 107 for four years.

In 1968, after obtaining her degree in home economics from the University of Arkansas, Ruth Ann was employed by the Springdale Public Library, where she presently holds the position of Reference Librarian. She is a member of Mildred Lee Chapter UDC, Marion Chapter DAR, Northwest Arkansas Genealogical Society and has been an adult leader in 4-H and both scouting programs. She is the family genealogist, and takes pride in the fact that some of her ancestors were among the earliest settlers in Washington County. (See Simpson\Bond and Dodson families). The Wilsons are members of the First United Methodist Church, where Ruth Ann is a member of the church library committee. They have two children: Ruth Manon, born November 17, 1963 and John Morgan, born March 22, 1974.

John shows excellent musical ability and plays trumpet, French horn and piano. He holds the rank of First Class in scouting and aspires to become an Eagle Scout. He is a member of the National Junior Honor Society.

Manon holds many honors. She was a State 4-H Project Winner in Home Furnishings; recipient of the Girl Scout Gold Award; member of the National Honor Society, Golden Key Honor Society, Phi Upsilon Omicron, Phi Eta Sigma and Gamma Sigma Delta; was listed in Who's Who in American High Schools, Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities; and was winner of the National VICRTEX Student Residential Design Competition award in 1985. In 1986, she graduated with honors from the University of Arkansas, College of Agriculture and Home Economics, with a degree in housing and interior design. She was the fourth generation of her family to earn a degree from this University. Manon is presently employed hy CEI Engineering Associates in Bentonville.

Hugh L. Wilson

Hugh L. Wilson was born in 1800 in Meigs County, Tennessee. Hugh L. married Nancy Maranda (?) in Meigs County, Tennessee. They moved to McMinn County, Tennessee or at least two of their children were married there.

Hugh L. and Nancy had nine children. Their oldest son, James E. Wilson was born in 1829. James E. Wilson married Nancy Gallant, daughter of James Gallant, on January 6, 1854 in McMinn County.

Hugh L. and Nancy M. and family, including James E. and Nancy, moved to Cassville, Barry County, Missouri in the late 1850s.

Hugh L. and Nancy M. lived there until deaths. They are buried in Barry County, Missouri (place unknown). James E. is also buried there.

James E. was killed in Barry County, Missouri sometime after 1870. After his death, Nancy and family moved to Brush Creek, Washington County, Arkansas where their youngest son James Hughy was born.

James Hughy married Emily Alice Locklin daughter of Benjamin Franklin (B. F.) and Katherine (Kate) Vaughn in Hindsville, Arkansas in 1900.

Their oldest daughter Effie Ann married Harvey H. George on July 11, 1925 in Spring Valley, Arkansas. They had eight children of which I am the youngest.

Arvle Gene George married Sharon Kay Calico on May 30, 1959. We have two children and three grandchildren.

James A. Wilson

James A. Wilson was born 22 February 1805 in South Carolina, where both of his parents were born, but their names are not presently known. He married Nancy Noblitt, born 1809 in South Carolina, and according to later census reports, their children were born in Tennessee, possibly Bedford County. His profession was listed as a shoemaker.

This couple and their son James lie in marked graves in a small cemetery overlooking Wildcat Creek, within sight of Highway 68, near the western edge of Washington County. James, Sr., died 11 December 1883, and his wife on 2 June 1884. Four of their girls were buried at the Backbone Cemetery or Graveyard Point, between Brush Creek and the Osage River, on the now closed road between Thornsberry and Wager communities, near the Benton-Washington County line.

Known children of James and Nancy Wilson, all born in Tennessee, Sarah Jane, born 1825 or 1829 and married Jesse A. Walker; Margaret, born 4 February 1830 and married Alfred C. Walker (brother of Jesse, both sons of William Walker); William F. Wilson, born 1832, whose wife's name was Elizabeth; James M. Wilson, called "Crow" because of his black hair, and "was a spy" in the Civil War, was born 11 October 1834 and married Georgianne Hargis; Martha E. (Elam on abstract) whose nickname was "Tide", was born about 1836 and married Richard Alfred Wilson of Benton County; and Mary Elizabeth, born 2 November 1838, who married John Martin Post who died in the Civil War. He was said to be an uncle of Wiley Post, the aviator who died with Will Rogers.

John Wilson

John Wilson (1768 -3 May 1846), first County Surveyor of Washington County, born in Ireland, came to America at age eight, with his father, a Loyalist, who was killed during the Revolution. On 25 April, 1797 in Hardin County, Kentucky, he married Elizabeth Friend (14 February 1772, Bedford County, Pennsylvania-30 May 1826), daughter of Joseph and Rachel (Rose) Friend. Joseph (1741-28 April 1806) and Rachel (17 June 1751-15 August 1832) were born in Pennsylvania. He died there; she died in Ohio. He fought in the Revolution on the side of the Colonies.

Carr Hester (about 1850, Fayetteville)

Mary (Panter) Hester (about 1850)

John Wilson, on 27 June 1811, officiated at the marriage of a daughter, Mary Ann "Polly" to Robert Fletcher. Their sixth child was born 2 April 1822 near Baldwin.

John Wilson settled in Arkansas Territory, moving from

Elizabeth (Hester) Moore (about 1871)

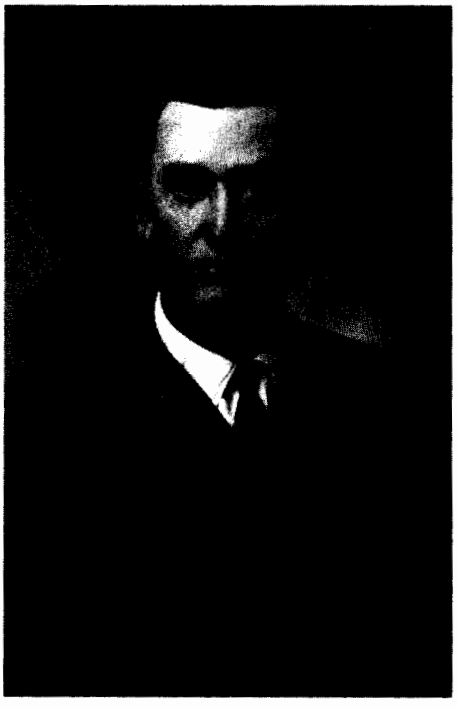
Alfred Wallace Moore (about 1871)



John Q. Moore (California)

Hempstead and Crawford Counties to the Greenland area. In 1821, he signed a petition to the President asking for reconsideration of a treaty with the Choctaw Nation. If enforced, the treaty would force the settlers from homes they had carved out of the frontier. His and Elizabeth's children, all born in Kentucky, were: Joseph (1799-1848, Jane Ratliff); Thomas (1805-1878, Charlotte Fine); John (1807-1880, Catherine McPhail, Miss Cline, and Mary Brickey); Eliza (1810-1866, Thomas Moore); Sarah (about 1811-before 1845), John Pierce Wilson); Mary Anne (about 1812-, Larkin Newton); James; William Friend Wilson (1815-1883, Matilda Ann Barren, widow of William Phelan).

Thomas Moore (1791, Kentucky - 15 September 1853) ran a flatboat down the Green, Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, from Kentucky to New Orleans. The river life, having affected his health, he moved to Arkansas where he married Eliza Wilson 6 March 2 1828. They settled the Baldwin area, building the first cabin on three forks of White River. Their twelve children born there were: James H. (1829-before 1867). He married Mary Caroline Tidwell in Oregon 16 October 1856. Jesse Clemens (3 September 1830 -) married his cousin Rachel Wilson on 17 April 1862 in Oregon. She was a daughter of William Wilson, son of Sarah and John Pierce Wilson. After Rachel's death in 1880, he married Jennie Wilson. Talitha G. (29 April 1832-27 December 1909) married 11 May 1854 to Ransom Hester. Martha (about 1834-1866/7). Albert Anthony (17 March 1838-10 December 1904) married 23 September 1855, Martha Martin. Jasper (1841-after June 1860). Emaline (3 October 1843-2 April 1924), married 31 July 1867, William H. Vaughn, son of the first marriage of Sarah Elizabeth Holt, daughter of John and Hannah (Stevenson) Holt. Fenilon R. (about 1845 -) married Laura A. Faris 25 November 1865. They went to Oregon. Mary Frances (19 February 1846-18 February 1915) married Thomas Roberts on 20 October 1868. Alfred Wallace (18 August 1849 - 5 June 1922) married 15 January 1871 Elizabeth "Bettie" Hester, daughter of Carr and Mary Elizabeth (Panter) Hester. Two sons and a daughter, born to Thomas and Eliza, died unnamed.

Carr Hester (1810, North Carolina, - 1 January 1853, Fayetteville), in Macon County, North Carolina, married Mary Elizabeth "Polly" Panter (1815, North Carolina, 1901 Baldwin) on 6 July 1833. Five children born in North Carolina were: Ransom B. (16 June 1830-28 January 1921) married Talitha Moore, daughter of Thomas and Eliza (Wilson) Moore. Roxanna Lavada(about 1834 - 14 October 1904, Texas) married 22 May 1856, Ira Bradford Shumate. They moved to Texas. Lucinda (about 1836) married Theophilus Williford. Robert James (about 1838-1862) married Mary Jane Fletcher 19 March 1856. David, died young. Thomas, born Tennessee, and Martha, first child born in Washington County, died young. Elizabeth "Bettie" Hester (27 May 1851 - 31 May 1933), married Alfred Wallace Moore, son of Thomas and Eliza (Wilson) Moore.

Alfred Wallace and "Bettie" Moore built their home in Baldwin, where seven children were born: Alla Elizabeth (3 November 1871 - 26 May 1895) married George Monroe Paris 11 June 1890. Her parents raised her two children, Thomas and Jessie. Roxeanah Isabele "Belle" (9 August 1874 - 19 July, 1968, California) married Henry Muse Couch 17 July 1892. Three of their children, Alvin, Amy and Wallace were born in Baldwin. John Q. Moore (19 June 1878 - 4 March 1935, La Habra, California) married 27 September 1903 in Rivera, California, Maud Hannah Phelan, daughter of Abijah Taylor and Hannah Catherine (Rogers) Phelan. Six children were born in California. Oliver Angueish "Dock" Moore (16 December 1880 - 1 January 1934) married 22 April 1905, Amma Elizabeth Purdue. Walker (11 July 1884 -) and Robert L. (19 June 1887) died young. Elbert Cicero (28 October 1889 - 1 April 1901). Alfred and Bettie died in California.

Many descendants of these pioneers still live in the County. Many are buried in the Wilson Cemetery, Combs Cemetery, King Cemetery and Hester Cemetery; the latter being on the old Moore homestead. He was the first person buried there.

John Wesley Wilson

John Wesley Wilson came to Washington County in the 1830s. He was born May 9, 1814, probably in Kentucky. His father was Arkansas Wilson. We believe William Ingram Wilson also in Washington County was his brother. Rebecca White (daughter of Sherrod White and Susan Kendrick) was born April 18, 1818, in Tennessee (or possibly Alabama according to the 1880 Census. They were united in marriage about 1835, and were members of Shilo Baptist Church. The following children were born in Washington County to this couple: Solomon born October 8, 1836; Sherrod born January 11, 1838; Susan born July 31, 1839 (married Dr. Evans Atwood); Hardy born September 19, 1841 (married Clarissa Mustain and Jane Maples); Lucinda born December 27, 1842; Elizabeth born May 8, 1844 (married Ben P. Graham); Martin born August 15, 1845 (married Tempy Graham daughter of Nelson); Benjamin born January 4, 1847 (married Dorothy Graham); Temperance born March 19, 1850 (married Peter Graham); Sanford born May 18, 1853 (married Luvena Whittle); Harriett born June 18, 1855 (married Ike E. Jack); Joseph born August 31, 1856; William Wesley born March 7, 1858 (married Susan Rebecca Wolf).

While working as a blacksmith in his shop, John Wesley was killed during the Civil War by bushwhackers on February 1, 1863. The women of the family buried him. They took a manger from the barn for a casket and buried him in the peach orchard. This was the beginning of Wilson Cemetery (Springdale).

They owned several parcels of land in Townships 13 and 14, Range 33, Washington County, and lots in the City of Fayetteville. After his death his wife, Rebecca, was made administrator of his estate. Her inventory was as follows: One horse ($50.00), one yoke of oxen ($40.00), three cows ($30.00), two yearling calves ($5.00), nine hogs ($18.00), six head of sheep ($12.00), half the value of a set of millstones ($37.50), half of a two-horse thresher ($37.50), blacksmith tools ($25.00), one plow ($5.00), one note ($14.60), one note ($10.70), and books ($25.00). Rebecca died on January 19, 1887, and was buried along side her husband in Wilson Cemetery (Springdale).

Their daughter, Temperance, married Peter Graham (son of James S. Graham and Rebecca Jane Patton - see Graham story) on April 4, 1869. They were married in the front yard of Rev. John Holcomb who performed the ceremony. From this union were born the following children (all in Washington County); Easter Florence born January 29, 1870 (married Benjamin Edward Boyd - see Boyd Story); Hulda Arizona born August 30, 1871 (married John Anderson); Sydney Johnson born March 7, 1873 (married Mary Jane Loving); Harriet Etta born October 23, 1874 (married Charlie Riggins); Samuel Ira Tilden born June 20, 1876 (married Ollie Sisco); Humphrey Hercules born April 15, 1883 (married Nelle Davis); Ras Bennett born January 18, 1878 (married Maude A. Gregg); Maud Milley born November 1, 1879; Jasper Owens born July 18, 1881 (married Sarah Elizabeth Riggins); Roy Berry born October 18, 1885; Daisy Loy born April 18, 1887 (married Seymour Tillman).

While walking the perimeter of Wilson Cemetery, in your mind's eye, you can see John Wesley and Rebecca harvesting peaches from their orchard. The older children are helping while the small ones are playing around their mother's feet.

Mildred Goldie Wilson

My paternal grandfather, Charles Carpenter, was a traveling salesman and in the late 1800s had traded for about 36 acres in the hills above Prairie Grove, Washington County, Arkansas. My father, Pressley Clarence Carpenter, and step-mother, Icie, moved to Springdale in 1967 for a short duration in order to sell this inherited land.

My immediate family came to Arkansas in July 1968, settling in Lincoln in an old partially log house on ten acres. The Wilson family consisted of myself, Mildred Goldie; my husband, Victor Richard; our ten year old son, Danny Lee; eight-year old daughter, Victoria Lynn; and six year old son, Randall Vern.

Prior to moving, we studied maps, read literature and consulted data concerning weather conditions and chose Arkansas out of the whole United States. We felt the rural atmosphere would be ideal for raising a family. We were living on the upper Mojave Desert in California when we decided to move here. My parents were living in the area but, having sold their land, moved back to California shortly after our arrival. We purchased a large beer delivery truck, sold our newer car and loaded everything we could into this truck and an older car and headed for Arkansas. We drove both vehicles with children taking turns riding with each of us.

Five months after settling in Arkansas, my husband (who had an alcohol problem) left us and went to Arizona. We had come here expecting to raise rabbits, cattle, gardens and our children - with the belief that I would not be employed. By September, it became necessary for me to work and I was hired by the University as a Secretary. I had known, prior to relocating, that the pay disparity would be large. My secretarial position in California had paid $10,000 annually but in my new job, I earned only $3,000 with no pay increase for two years.

When my husband left, he said he realized his drinking was at fault for our breakup but he would send money every week as he would be better paid in Arizona.

We never heard from him again except for a $15 birthday check he sent our daughter the following May. He didn't send our sons even a birthday card. The following year, my daughter said, "Mom, if Dad sends me a check again, I'm going to share it with my brothers 'cause that's not fair."

His departure shortly before Christmas left us financially destitute and that holiday season was rather sad. There was a bright event, however. Just before Christmas, we came home and found a sack of apples and a $10 bill on our doorstep. We never did find out where they came from but were grateful because that was the only Christmas we had that year.

Five or six years thereafter, we moved to Fayetteville, selling our property in Lincoln. It became necessary for me to work numerous jobs in order to survive. For about four years, I worked four to eight jobs simultaneously. I worked full-time at the University and part-time at the following: cashier at the drive-in show, security guard, typing at home for students, typing labels, selling Avon and Amway and working Sunday mornings for a church. I kept my brood together and the kids enjoyed my job at the drive-in as they could watch movies and have free popcorn and cokes. Times were rough but we became very close knit as a result of the adversity.

My children were individually talented in totally different ways - the older boy is an excellent skilled mechanic, the middle girl is wonderfully artistic with a particular genius in painting, and the youngest boy is a brillant musician. They are grown - Danny is 28 and owns his garage; Vicky is 27 and manages a private club; and Randy is 25 and has returned to California to "make his mark" in the music world. The two boys have each given me beloved seven-year old grandsons, Jamie Lee and J'Tym Jericho.

I came here 19 years ago desiring that children would inherit land with live green trees and streams of clear fresh water tumbling over those numerous Arkansas rocks; I still feel this is the "land of choice."

Newton Caswell Wilson

The original farm my grandfather, William Wilson, bought before the Civil War in 1856 or 57 was once over two thousand acres, located Northwest of Prairie Grove. Now there are about three hundred twenty acres remaining in the Wilson family. William Wilson and wife, Eliza J. B. and two daughters, Eliza Catherine and Harriet and one son, William are buried in the Wilson Cemetery up on some high ground in a south forty acre field of this farm.

I was born in 1907 in the family home in Prairie Grove built by my father, A. J. Wilson in 1895. This house is still lived in and in excellent condition. During my schooling years, the family lived between the farm and our home in Prairie Grove. In 1929, I married Geraldine Carter who was born in 1907 in Robinson, Arkansas. We lived in Tulsa, Oklahoma and Siloam Springs, Arkansas for several years, before moving to the farm in 1938 with our three little girls, Faye Jeannette, Coretta, and Linda Sue. Since the big house on the farm was occupied by my mother, Nancy Naomi Wilson, my brother Rollans M. and aged Uncle Albert Wilson, we moved into a small cabin.

My brother, R. M. and I farmed about three hundred forty acres of the home place plus four hundred acres we rented. He ran a threshing machine and I ran a combine in harvest season. There was lots of help available in those days at $1.00 per day. In the early 1930s for fifty cents per day. We raised corn, wheat for cash crops and barley and oats mostly to feed the horses and cattle. Back in the 1920s, R. M. being the oldest brother had tried to farm the 340 acres with horses, but with bad seasons and a heavy debt on the farm he could hardly keep up. In 1932, R. M. and I took over the debt at the bank as our father and uncle were too old to manage any longer. We sold the horses to buy a tractor so we could produce more. With the tractor we could thresh grain for all the neighbors and ourselves. About this time, President Roosevelt closed all the banks. The Federal Land Bank threatened us with foreclosure of the farm. Fortunately, we had sufficient local credit so we were able to keep the farm. In 1934, we first had a drouth and then a flood. Our father passed away in September. There was a pretty good drouth in 1935, but in 1936 there was the worst drouth I have ever experienced in my life time. From then on times seemed to be improving.

Wilson Home near Rheas Mill, built 1857. Picture date 1894. Rollans M. Wilson, brother on rocking horse; Earl Cunningham, uncle. Left tree, A. J. Wilson, father; right tree, Nancy N. Wilson, mother. Porch: left, Eliza Wilson, aunt; center, Albert Wilson, uncle. Right, hired hand. Upper porch, Maid.

In 1938, we signed up to get R. E. A. electricity. This was the beginning of better times for a farmer. An electric motor was put on the water pump. We never dreamed how much electricity would mean through the years - What a thrill to be able to snap a switch and good, bright light. In November, my father's brother, Uncle Albert Wilson, passed away.

About this time, the broiler chicken business began. I built a 20' x 20' house which held five hundred chicks and my wife took care of them. Then while my brother and I were farming very hard, my wife made enough to build another broiler house for one thousand chickens. We were able to build on to our house, the most important item, an inside bathroom. Almost before I knew what she was about, Geraldine had another broiler house going up which would hold twenty-five hundred chickens. She now had room for four thousand chickens.

In the meantime, I learned that sheep made good money. My brother, R. M. and I bought seventy-five head of ewes in Oklahoma. We saved ewe lambs and built up a herd of two hundred ewes. We had also been interested in registered shorthorn cattle. In the 1940s, we had kept a grade herd. R. M. especially liked the registered cattle.

In December 1952, our mother passed away. This brought us to a time of settlement of the farm. The Land Bank had been paid since 1922 so now there was only a small debt against the farm. Our brother, James, in Kansas was willed one hundred acres. Jack, our brother in California, had gotten sixty of his one hundred acres years ago so he took his forty acres and sold them to a neighbor. This left R. M. with his one hundred acres and I had mine. We divided our business, I took the sheep and R. M. took the registered cattle. I built a sheep barn and corrals, then another broiler house to hold six thousand chicks.

My oldest daughter, Faye Jeanette, married Charles Kittrell in 1948. They lived near the University of Arkansas campus until he graduated. Their first daughter, Carman Jane was born in 1949. Charles went to work for Phillips Petroleum in Bartlesville, Oklahoma about 1950. Their second daughter, Niki Lee, and Charles III were born there. About 1959, I built a broiler house for fifteen thousand chicks and we shut the small ones down. We are raising about twenty-five thousand head. I had some very good luck in drilling a gas well which furnished the broiler houses as well as my house and R. M.'s house.

My youngest daughter, Linda Sue, married William Bell who became a doctor in dentistry. Kari Wilson Bell, their daughter, was born in 1958 and John William Bell, their son in 1961. In later years, they divorced and Linda Sue married Robert Swab, a business man in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Our middle daughter, Coretta (Toady) married R. T. Edwards, a business man in Fayetteville. Their son, Bart Wilson Edwards was born in 1959. We put in many hours of baby sitting during these years. We also kept one batch of chickens after another going.

In 1965, we bought a neighboring seventy acre farm. We started a small herd of cattle on it, and rented the house for a few years. Each year we sold fescue seed and had good crops. It was paid for by 1975. We sold fifty acres to a buyer which left us with one hundred twenty squared up acres. R. M. sold us twenty acres across the road from my house in about 1980, so I now have a total of one hundred forty acres.

My wife, Geraldine Carter Wilson, developed cancer in 1973 and passed away on June 11, 1983.

In 1985, I married Rachel White Barbour whose husband, Roscoe W. had died also on June 11, 1983, leaving her with three grown daughters, Rachel B. Pavlic, Jeanne R. Drone, and Gayle Kathryn Barbour.

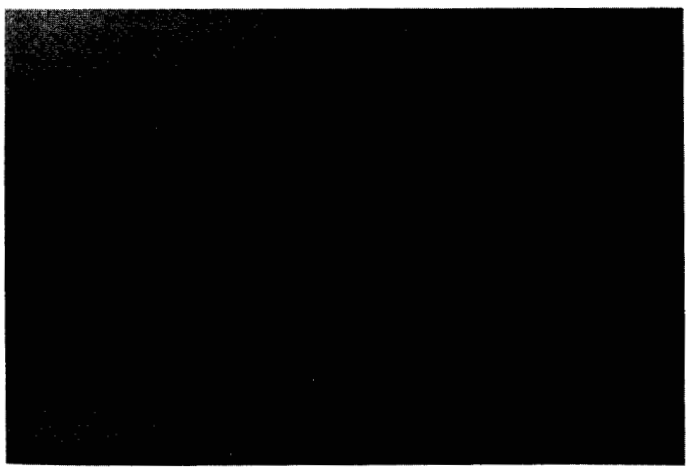
William H. Wilson

According to the old Wilson Bible, the Wilson lineage goes back to the middle 1700s. John Wilson (father) was born 3/13/1803. The trip west originated from Davie County, North Carolina. John's family consisted of wife, Elibeth Martin Wilson, sons James M., Abraham C., John, Jr. and William H. Wilson (born 9/29/1827; died 2/11/1915).



Left to right: Robert Wilson, Willie Wilson, James Wilson, John Alexander Wilson.

They settled four miles southeast of Summitville, Tennessee. At a later date, John left Tennessee for Highland, Mississippi, leaving son, William H. to take care of his land. After a short time there, John and family (except William H., who was still in Tennessee) moved to Madison County, Arkansas in 1855. They settled in Saint Paul.

James writes from Arkansas to William H. in Tennessee to take good care of (William H. children) John and Frances "until you get to Arkansas and give them a belly full of bear meat". Also, their meat supply included turkey and deer. Corn was twenty cents a bushel, wheat seventy-five cents a bushel, pork three and a half cents a pound, flour two cents a pound.

In 1858, John, Sr. was still looking for a place that suited him. They were having sickness among their Negroes. He wanted to get off White River. Times were hard and crops were bad due to drought.

James hauled bacon to Texas to sell. In 1860, they found the land they wanted—475 acres bordering Richland Creek on the south, across the creek from what is now Wesley Cemetery. They found many congenial early settlers from Tennessee. Young John writes to his brother, "There is more pretty girls here than you can shake a stick at". He thought about marriage, but on second thought he would wait until he got a chance.

June, 1861 marked the Civil War and hard times. James and John joined the Army in June of 1861, and Abraham joined the Army in the fall of 1861. John was killed April 30, 1864 at Jenkins Ferry. In May of 1866, Abraham returned to Wesley after being released from prison. In 1869, he died from tuberculosis contracted in prison. In 1868, a railroad was to be built from Van Buren to the Missouri border. In 1870, James married

W. H. Wilson, Martha Powell Wilson.

Glen David Wilson, graduate Air Force Academy shaking hands with President Lyndon Baynes Johnson.

Mary Williams of near Huntsville at age 46. Cal Wilson, son of this couple, lived on an old farm west of Wesley. Cal Wilson had one daughter, Cuba, who married Hugh Williams. William H. and Martha Powel Wilson, with their children, John, Frances, James, Robert, and Willie, moved to the Wesley farm in 1877 where they lived in a log house and took care of the farms. John and Robert lived on adjoining farms near Wesley. Willie moved to Habberton, and James moved to a farm near Durham.

Son, John Alexander Wilson, was born in 1854 and died August 1, 1945. He was married on September 6, 1905 to Nora Lee Kennan, daughter of Alex and Marguerite Parker Kennan. They had two sons, Irvin and John Vernon.

Irvin was born 11/20/1906. He graduated from the U of A in 1932. He married Flossie Butts. They had one daughter, Martha Ann, now married to David Wagoner, attorney. She is a school teacher in Denver. Irvin was an Air Force supply officer in Italy during World War II. He is now a retired colonel living in Aurora, Colorado. He is now married to Marion Pennewell Harold.

Vernon was born 9/11/1911 in Wesley, Arkansas. He married Mildred Ledbetter in 1932 and was divorced in 1958. In 1970, he married Verna Guess of Prairie Grove. Vernon was a businessman in Fayetteville for forty years. He retired in 1985 and now lives east of Springdale.

By his first marriage, Vernon had one son Glen David and one daughter Linda Kay. Glen was born 10/6/37, graduated from the Air Force Academy in 1962, and is also a graduate of the North Eastern University, Massachusetts. He is a single man living in Chelsea, Massachusetts, and is the owner of two engineering firms, Technical Alternatives and Technical Job Solver Companies. Linda Kay was born December, 1941 and graduated from the University of Arkansas. She married in 1962 to Timothy Hinkle of Little Rock and now lives in Hartford, Connecticut. Her husband is an actuary for Aetna Insurance Company. They have a son and a daughter.

Robert, son of William H., lived on the old home place south of Wesley. He married Cora Farris. They had no children. He died in 1946.

James Wilson, son of William H., lived on a farm between Elkins and Durham. He married Matilda Springston. They had two daughters, Beulah and Ora, and one son, Roy, now deceased. Beulah married Andrew Ray. Ora married Eugene Counts Wesley. Ora is now deceased. She had two daughers, Louise and Lois. Roy married Flossie Pool. He died in 1965. He had two daughters, Nina and Thelma. Flossie lives in Elkins. Nina married Guy Perry. He died in Fayetteville in 1985. Thelma married Randolph Snider.

William Lafayette Wilson

William "Will" Lafayette Wilson was born January 7, 1862 in Coffee County, Tennessee while his mother could hear the cannons being fired in a skirmish nearby and his father drove an ammunition wagon for the Confederates. Will was the sixth child of William "Bill" Henry and Martha (Powell) Wilson. He had living three brothers: John A., James C., Robert B. and a sister, S. Francis.

Will's grandparents John and Elisabeth Wilson with three sons, James M., John Jr., and Abram C. had come to Madison County from Tennessee by boat up the Arkansas River in 1856. Bill was to follow after the birth of an expected child, which died in July of that year. In a letter dated August 11, 1856 John advises his son to continue to stay in Tennessee "until Martha gets stronger".

In 1876 Bill's family finally came to Arkansas. Will was fourteen. They came by wagon via Cape Girardeau and Springfield, Missouri. Will walked beside the wagon much of the way. By now time had taken a heavy toll on the Arkansas family. In 1864 John Jr. had been killed at Jenkins Ferry and Abram had died in 1872 from tuberculosis he had contracted while a prisoner of the war. Also earlier in the year of Bill's arrival his mother, Elisabeth had died. James had married Mary "Molly" William and lived four miles west, at Tuttle in Washington County. His father John was seventy-two years old and alone, so the family settled there. In the summer of 1882 John and his son James died, ten days apart. Will was twenty years old.

The family was inclined toward work and proper management of their resources. Even Martha, busy on her loom beside the fireplace, fascinated Will by his mother's ability to draw a pattern, thread her loom accordingly and weave dyed wool from their sheep into a coverlet. As a boy he kept her clay pipe lit with a live ember from the fire while she worked.

In the early 1890s Will went to Oregon on a train. Later, he told his sons about going over the Rocky Mountains, how the engine climbed so slowly some of the passengers stepped out to walk along side. Also, how many of the men used their guns for target practice out the open train windows. In Oregon he worked one year for a dairyman named Kirksey.

Home again, Will took up post office and store keeping at Wesley in Madison County. He was over thirty now and unmarried. At Normal school in Wesley a pretty, blond, young lady attended, riding from Tuttle each day on a spirited filly. She was Elisabeth "Lizzie" Trammel, born December 16, 1873, daughter of Mary E. Trammel and the late George S. "Sing" Trammel. She was a proper lady with perfect poise, self-assured and fun-loving. She mastered her horse with grace and yet she and horse could speed down the road with abandonment. Will noticed and at Christmas he took a candy-cane from his store and tied it to the community tree for Lizzie. They were married in the summer of 1899.

After their wedding in the bride's home Will and Lizzie drove a wagon to Habberton, Washington County where Will and his three brothers owned a farm in a curve of White River. This was one of four they owned jointly. In a log house with a dug well on the west and two pear trees on the east, they sat up housekeeping. They were to live the rest of their lives, fifty-three years on this farm.

Will and Lizzie had six sons: Knox, Leo, Noid, Nard, Ernest and Clive. Nard died in infancy. In 1906 Will had a new white house built on a hill. It was four gabled, four rooms upstairs and four rooms down with a porch at each corner. It seemed always to be full: boarding school-teachers, hired help, new daughters-in-law, Lizzie's mother and later a brother and finally a motherless grandchild.

One of Will's brothers had already settled his share of the land alliance by forfeiting ownership with the others and accepting one of the farms for himself. With Will's sons becoming young men, it was time he too dissolved partnership. The two remaining brothers agreed that Will's resident farm was more valuable than either of the two they occupied. Will, with his older sons drove the increase of his cattle each year up Richland Creek to his brothers' farms at Wesley, until the difference was satisfied.

Will used tobacco early in life, but had quit as a young man, maybe because of his frail constitution. He took no strong drink, coffee nor tea. His morning eye-opener was a boiling cup of hot water. He exercised daily by walking over the five hundred acre farm, doing chores and a trip to nearby Habberton store carrying a basket of eggs. He used home health remedies freely but was quick to see a doctor "if necessary".

Will was always a student and teacher, but never a preacher, except by example. He read everything; even Darwin — and thoughtfully smiled. He read the Bible through three times in later years, once aloud to Lizzie. Lizzie (winner in most community spelling matches) listened, and pieced her quilts. His dear Lizzie left him on October 7, 1951, she was seventy-eight years old. Four months later on February 7, 1952, he too died one month past his ninetieth birthday. They lie buried in Habberton Cemetery with their infant son, Nard, a daughter-in-law and a tiny grandson.

James Minor Winn V

James Minor Winn V arrived in Washington County from Bedford County, Tennessee in 1832. On July 16, 1840 James Minor Winn homesteaded 160 acres where the townsite of West Fork is now located. He married Nancy Bloyed, daughter of Eli and Nancy Graham Bloyed, in 1833. Eli Bloyed was the first settler in West Fork in 1828.

Children of James Minor and Nancy Bloyed Winn: Eli, born 1834; Zadock, February 28, 1836, died February 28, 1913; Matilda (Hale) born November 7, 1838; Marinda (Winn) born April 5, 1840; Rachel (Karnes) born 1842; John; Mary (Hale) born April 28, 1850; twins Edmonia (Dearing) and Joel born June 29, 1855; Margaret (Reed) born June 24, 1858.

On September 4, 1853, Zadock married Mary Ann Caughman. She was born February 20, 1835 and died September 13, 1910. Their home was directly across the street from the present West Fork Middle School. The first school in West Fork was constructed on Zadock Winn's land. This school was built with a shed on the front so the pupils could have lessons in the open air in warm weather. The schools were usually three-month terms so the children could help out with chores. Both Zadock and Mary Ann Winn were born in West Fork and lived their entire lives there.

In September, 1863, Zadok enlisted in Company D, Arkansas Cavalry and served in the Union until he was honorably discharged August 23, 1865. In 1882, he was appointed Deputy U. S. Marshall under Judge Thomas Boles.

They were the parents of ten children: Melvina (Hutcheson) born June 19, 1854; Nancy (Howard) born December 3, 1857; Matilda (Bloyed) born February 10, 1860; William born July 20, 1862, died March 21, 1922; Lucinda (Fitts) born February 27, 1865; Hettie Pauline (Oxendine) born February 15, 1868; Nettie Arena (Oxendine/Gode) born June 29, 1870; Albert Sebron born July 8, 1873; Almeda (Rutherford/Robinson) born October 20, 1877; John Taylor, born November 22, 1878. William Winn married Sarah Roseberry, who died, leaving him with two small children. He then married Adeline Lucinda Rutherford, January 25, 1891. She was born February 26, 1871, died March 1953. Adeline was the daughter of John Wesley and Mary Jane Carney Rutherford. Their families were also among the earliest families of Washington County. William Winn was appointed Deputy U. S. Marshall under Jacob Yoes in 1890. He was part of the Oklahoma Strip Land Run in 1893. He was elected constable of West Fork in 1894. In 1902, he bought the farm on Winn Mountain. He had 1600 apple trees and they peddled apples by the wagon-load, often traveling as far as Fort Smith. They would camp along the way. William also owned a feed store which burned in the fire in 1919. One of his sons, Estel, along with Mr. Kittridge and George Latham, helped to rebuild the building in 1920. It is now the West Fork Administration building.

Children of William and Adeline: Johnny Seborn born October 27, 1891 - died August 10, 1892; Estel Riley born September 12, 1893 - died December 25, 1965 married Florence Maddox; Lillie Ivey born November 17, 1895 married Elmer Maddox; Mary Snow born February 5, 1899 married Adolph Webber; Loy Sidney born October 5, 1901 died August 1, 1905; Maude Marium born March 25, 1904 married Aubrey Hardin; Zadok born September 14, 1906 died July 6, 1986 married June, 1928 Blanche Elnora Carr born March 20, 1907; Ollie Pearl born November 1, 1908 married Paris Alexander; Lena Bessie born November 29, 1912 married Raymond Phillips.

Johnny, Estel, Lillie, Snow and Loy were born in West Fork on Maple Street. Maude, Zadok, Pearl and Lena were born on Winn Mountain. Sometime after William's father, Zadok died in 1913, William and Addie got the house on White Street, when his estate was settled. The farm on Winn Mountain was forfeited in 1933 for non-payment of taxes.

Children of Estel and Florence Winn: Melva Daphyne born June 23, 1914 married Bob Payton /married Troy Jarnagan; Roy Warren born July 7, 1916 married Velma Toelner; LaRama Hazel born June 30, 1918 married LeRoy Burris, two children, Randy and Norma; Mary Wilma born November 30, 1922 married Doyle Stockburger.

Child of Zadok and Blanche Winn: Clarence Jene born October 27, 1936 married February 25, 1955 in Bellflower, California Patricia Kay Woodson born September 1, 1936.

Four generations of the Winn family were born in West Fork and lived there all their lives: Zadok Winn, his son William Winn, his son Estel Winn and his daughter LaRama Winn Burris are still living there.

In November 1986, C. Jene and Patti Winn traveled to West Fork, from Alaska, to see where his father and grandfather had lived. He found ten acres of his grandfather's farm on Winn Mountain for sale and purchased it. They are now building a home on the mountain.

Robert Curtis Wise

Alvin Hash came to Washington County (ca. 1836) settling in Richland Township. His oldest child, Celina, married Ambrose H. Clark who had come from Ohio by oxen team (ca. 1837) to Washington County. Celina and Ambrose settled near Durham on the White River and raised a family of 2 boys and 9 girls. Their ninth child Ida, married John Henry Springston, only child of William Linton and Sophronia Young Springston. John Henry's grandfather, William S. Springston, came to Washington County before 1840 from Kentucky.

Matt and Pearl Springston Wise. (ca. 1940)

William Linton joined the Confederate Army and on Christmas Day 1862, his regiment was passing through Fayetteville on the way to Van Buren. Sophronia, seven months pregnant, rode a mule 16 miles into Fayetteville to see her husband which for them was the last time. William died a few days later and was buried near Fort Smith. He never knew his only son, John Henry Springston, born prematurely as a result of his devoted wife's 32 mile mule ride, December 26, 1862.

Robert C. and Mary Ellen Clark Wise, wedding photo, September 19, 1929

John Henry was postmaster and a merchant at Durham, having an apple dryer and a gristmill in addition to his stores. He shipped dried fruit and apples to several states, some as far away as New York. In Texas, John's son-in-law Matt Wise sold produce John shipped to him.

John William and Grace Pearl were the only children of John Henry and Ida. Grace Pearl was a student at the University of Arkansas (Fayetteville) when she met Matthew Robert Wise, a Texan attending the U of A, also.

Matt went back to Texas and after some time, Pearl went down and they were married in Paris, Texas. Matt and Pearl had 4 boys and 3 girls. The first child was born in Texas, next one in Arkansas, another born in Texas, twins in Arkansas, next one in Texas, then they returned to Arkansas, stayed awhile and back to Texas in a covered wagon. Usually the family traveled by train but the wagon trip was unforgetable.

It was 1917 when Matt decided to return to Texas. He fixed a wagon with overjets (extensions attached to the wagon box making it as wide as a regular bed) on which he placed a bed covering it with canvas stretched over bows. The family loaded up and left, camping the first night at the crossing on the middle fork of the White River, just below where the highway 16 bridge is now (1987).

Pearl was preparing the evening meal over the campfire, when the coffeepot overturned putting the fire out. She was immediately ready to return to Durham. The second night, camp was made near a spring in Farmington (across the road from where the present day post office stands). Several more wagons were camped there.

The third morning, a wagon train formed. Somewhere west of Farmington was " Red Hill". It was so steep the teams had to be doubled to pull the wagon and a tree had to be cut down and tied on the back to "brake" it.

At Tahlequah, the wagon yard charged 25 cents for camping and the women had to sign up to take turns using the wood burning stove to prepare meals for their families. Here we saw our first moving picture show. It was very real.

Going through Muskogee, we turned south on what was called "The King of Trails". It was just 2 ruts for a road. Matt, Pearl and the girls slept on the bed, boys slept under it.

Between Muskogee and the Red River, we were the back wagon. A cloud of dust behind us caused fear among the people as horse thieves and outlaws roamed this territory. The wagons drew close together and the men prepared their weapons. As the dust drew nearer, it was seen that it was only one man carrying a bundle under his arm. Speculation on what the bundle contained was quickly over when it became apparent that it was a child. He asked if anyone had lost a kid. Year-old Basil had fallen out of the wagon and we had not realized it. God was looking out for him that day keeping the toddler from wandering off into the brush. Matt and Pearl were surely grateful to the lone stranger. For days the only people we saw were those from our wagon train, after that incident.

Robert Curtis Wise was born September 27, 1908, in Quinlan, Texas, third child of Matt and Pearl. The log cabin they lived in at the time had a puncheon floor and a clapboard roof. A storm prevented the doctor arriving in time, so the birth was attended by Matt and an aunt.

September 19, 1929, Robert Curtis Wise married Mary Ellen Clark of Wichita Falls, Texas. They have 2 boys and 2 girls.

Dorothy Mae (b. July 30, 1930), Wichita Falls, Texas, married Roy Lee Vaughn (b. July 25, 1927) August 28, 1949. Their children are Martha Jean (b. December 27, 1950) married Jeffery Morris Potter and they have 2 sons, Ryan Curtis and Arron James. The Potters live in Modesto, California.

Richard (b. November 6, 1952), second child of Dorothy and Roy, married Sallie Squires. They are the parents of Matthew Lee, Lee Ann, and James.

Ruth Ann (b. April 15, 1960), third child of Dorothy and Roy, married Roland Patrick. Their children are Kelley Jean and Ellen Marie.

Robert Curtis Wise, Jr. (b. March 30, 1934) married June Regal from Circleville, Ohio, in 1952, divorced in 1955, no children. His second marriage was to Laura Alice Thompson of Fayetteville, Arkansas. Robert, Jr. retired from 22 years of active military service with the United States Army as warrant officer grade three. He served in Korea, twice went to Viet Nam, participated in the Berlin Airlift and spent three years in France. He retired as a helicopter pilot. Alice and "Bob" have three children, Cheryl Lynn (b. October 21, 1957) married Lewis Edward Baker of Louisville, Kentucky, they have one son, James Robert. After they were divorced, Cheryl married Duane Dunn. Mary Evelyn (b. August 16, 1958, Orleans, France) has one child, Desiree. Mary married Calvin Smith and they have a daughter Rachel Elizabeth born July 3, 1988. Robert Curtis Wise, III (b. December 24, 1968, in Kentucky) was adopted by Alice and Bob. They live on Union Star Road, west of West Fork, Arkansas.

Mary Louise, (b. November 14, 1936, Wichita Falls, Texas) married Billy Gene Carroll (b. January 6, 1933, Rocky Comfort, Missouri). They were married in Huntsville, Arkansas, November 29, 1951. Mary Lou and Bill now live in Eugene, Oregon and have five children, Mary Jean, Billy Carlton, Thomas Lee, Terry Lynn and Judy Marie.

Mary Jean (b. June 29, 1952) at Fayetteville, Arkansas, married Jerry Walter Thomas (b. October 22, 1946, at Caldwell, Idaho) on August 27, 1972, in Elko, Nevada. They have two daughters, Tracy Lynn, and Vicky Jo. Mary Jean and Jerry live in Burns, Oregon.

Billy Carlton (b. October 17, 1953, Fayetteville, Arkansas) now lives in Woodburn, Oregon. He is an investigator for the Attorney General of Oregon. Billy married Debby Vandamme in 1984. They have one child, William Charles.

Thomas Lee (b. July 7, 1956, Fayetteville, Arkansas) married Laura Ruth Liimatta (b. February 8, 1957, Ketchikan, Alaska) December 29, 1978, at Burns, Oregon. Thomas Lee is a physical therapist and Laura Ruth is a registered nurse. Their three children are Erin Alicia, Andrew Thomas, and Amy Ann.

Terry Lynn (b. September 16, 1958, Fayetteville, Arkansas) married Georgia Rae Hopper April 18, 1981. They live in Hines, Oregon.

Judy Marie (b. December 16, 1960, Burns, Oregon) married Douglas Patten Warner (b. March 20, 1957, Bangor, Maine) October 30, 1982, at Burns, Oregon. They are now divorced. Judy is an occupational therapist in Portland, Oregon, and is now married to Randy Couch. Judy and Randy have one daughter, Lauren Rachelle Couch (b. August 5, 1988). They live in Pittsburg, California.

Warren Clark (b. June 29, 1943, in South San Francisco) fourth child of Robert Curtis and Mary Ellen, married (and divorced) Stevie Lungren of Springdale, Arkansas. They had one daughter, Tracy Lynn. Address for Stevie and Tracy Lynn are unknown by the author. Warren later married Freda Pearl Grogan of Fayetteville. He adopted her two daughters Joana Marie and Diana Corene. Warren died in a car wreck at Billings, Missouri, August 14, 1980. He was 37 years old. He is buried at Fairview Memorial Cemetery near Fayetteville, Arkansas. Warren was a tool and die maker machinist, by trade.

Joana Marie (b. January 5, 1962, Fayetteville, Arkansas) graduated from Oklahoma State Tech in 1984 with a degree in commercial art. April 25, 1986, she married Jeff Thorpe (b. August 23, 1963, Fayetteville, Arkansas). Jeff is a management associate for Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., in Joplin, Missouri where they live.

Diana Coreen (b. October 7, 1963, Fayetteville, Arkansas) graduated from the University of Arkansas in 1987 with a degree in Math Education. On August 2, 1985, she married Manny Terminella (b. November 4, 1963, in Riverhead, New York). Manny works in production and design for Packaging Specialities, Inc. They live in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

John Jacob Wise III

John Jacob Wise III was born on January 8, 1835 in Jefferson County, Missouri. Like his parents and his grandparents before him, he was full blood Cherokee. And also like him, his father and his grandfather were named John Jacob Wise.

His grandfather, John Jacob Wise I, was married to Lillian Harriet Blalock. Both were from South Carolina, John being born in 1783 and Lillian in 1785. They had five boys: John, James, Preston, Wayne, and Abjah.

John Jacob Wise II, son of the above mentioned John Jacob Wise I and Lillian Harriet Blalock, was born in 1803 in Kentucky. He was married to Nancy Frances Jones, daughter of George Jesse and Lucinda Zella Jones. Nancy was born in 1810 in the state of Illinois. John II and Nancy Frances Wise had nine children. The first four children were born in Jefferson County, Missouri, and the five remaining children were born in Madison County, Arkansas. They were: George, 1829; John Jacob III, 1835; Delilah, 1837; Hannah, 1838; James, 1840; Valentine, 1842; Jacob Green, 1846; Martha, 1848; and Frank, 1850.

John Jacob Wise, second son of John Jacob Wise II and Nancy Frances Jones, was the third and last of three generations of fathers to carry the same given name. After the birth of his sister Hannah in 1838, his family moved to Madison County, Arkansas in the township of Hilburn, where the rest of his brothers and sisters would be born. During the 1850s, the family moved to Johnson County, Arkansas.

It was from Johnson County, Arkansas that John Jacob Wise III joined the Confederate Army and served in the Civil War. He served with Arkansas Division I from 1861-1865, the duration of the War.

After the Civil War, John relocated in Washington County, Arkansas, where he received land through the Cherokee Land Allotment. This land that he owned, two miles outside the small town of Wedington, was perfect for farming and raising a family.

John Jacob Wise III did both. He first married a Matthews. They had a daughter, Frances Elizabeth, born September 25, 1869. Frances' mother died a short time later.

John remarried to Nancy Elizabeth Dees, daughter of Edmond G. Dees and Elizabeth C. Rushing. Nancy was born on November 3, 1851 in Missouri. She was of English descent, her ancestors coming from England. John and Nancy were married on May 13, 1873 in Washington County, Arkansas.

They had eleven children: Martha Caroline, born January 25, 1874; Nancy Jane, born February 16, 1876; John Clement, born February 28, 1878; Mary Lillian, born June 2, 1880; Jacob Green, born February 25, 1883; Ollie Rose Anna, born September 28, 1885; Zelma E., July 10, 1888 (she died the day after she was born); Edmond Wesley, born August 11, 1889; George Warren Washington, born October 26, 1891; Zella Tommasat, born February 6, 1894; and Dona Sarah Ann, born July 19, 1896. All these children were born on the home place near Wedington, Arkansas.

John Jacob Wise III died on March 23, 1909 and is buried in Wedington Cemetery. His wife, Nancy, died December 10, 1938 and is buried in Wedington Cemetery next to him.

George Warren Washington Wise, son of John Jacob Wise III and Nancy Elizabeth (Dees) Wise, married Pearly Mae Ward. Pearly was born July 30, 1904 in Gentry, Arkansas. Her parents were Andrew Jackson Ward and Rose Elizabeth Creamer.

George and Pearly were married September 17, 1920 in Wedington, by A. C. Dees, brother of Nancy Dees Wise. They had four children: George Andrew, born July 4, 1921; Anita Eddledean, born April 28, 1923; Nancy Jane, born February 16, 1926 and Rosa Mae, born June 22, 1929. All these children were born in Wedington and all have fine families today. George Warren Washington Wise died on April 19, 1953 and is buried in Wedington Cemetery. Pearly now resides in Missouri, where she remains active and continues to enjoy her life.

William Wolf

The 1850 Clear Creek, Washington County, census shows William and Marget with only James, John, Amanda, Cynthia and Susan. Amanda, Cynthia and Susan are believed to be granddaughters. William and Marget are both buried in Bluff Cemetery (moved from Shiloh Cemetery). Laura is also buried in Bluff Cemetery. Cynthia Ann is buried in West Fork Cemetery. John A. was on the Big Springs 1860 Benton County census. He was buried in Wilson Cemetery. His children were Granville, Amanda, Cynthia, Susan, William, and Deborah, all born in Arkansas. Rosalee was born to him in October 1861 Arkansas as shown on the 1900 census. It also says that Elizabeth was born in Alabama. In 1900 Debbie A. and Rosalee were partners in a farm and listed their occupation as farmers. Their nieces, Minnie E. Graham b. June 1833 Arkansas and Bertha S. Graham born September 1837 Arkansas were living with them at the time. The 1900 census also shows his son William b. January 1858 Arkansas with wife Martha b. December 1861 Arkansas and their children Oscar b. August 1883 Arkansas, Matthew b. September 1885 Arkansas, Catty b. September 1887 Arkansas, Jessie b. February 1898 Arkansas. I also think the Calvin b. January 1870 Arkansas married 6 years and working for Silas Graham to be William's son. They were all in Washington Township, Benton County. William served in the War of 1812.

Descendants of William Wolf b. 1780 Pennsylvania or Kentucky, d. 1881. Marget b. 1790 Pennsylvania d. 16 July 1860. Their children; Jane b. 1821 Missouri married Isaac Shelby Fitzgerald, John A. b. 1 March 1824 Missouri d. 1 December 1863 married Elizabeth Lynch; Elizabeth b. 28 January 1809 Kentucky d. 1 December 1863 married 1832 William M. Carrie McFadden Wood

On April 1, 1930 my father, George Martin McFadden, mother, Lillian Gertrude, brother, George Ewin, age ten years, and I moved to Springdale from Arkoma, Oklahoma, where we had lived four years. The climate here had been recommended as possibly being a help to Mamma's health. We came from Ft. Smith on the train. Our first home here was on West Emma Avenue, second house west of Highway 71, which at that time was in the process of being paved. The streets were not marked. A friend came from Tulsa to visit. He turned from 71 on Emma, went on downtown. He stopped a man on the street, said, "Mr. can you tell me where to find Emma?" The man shook his head, said, "No, Sir, I don't know her."

Bertha Mae, George Ewin, Robert Ewin and Carrie Mae McFadden, July 1955.

Lillian Gertrude, Carrie Anna, George Martin McFadden, April 14, 1942.

My father was a Barber—Preacher until 1917 when we moved to the farm. He said with the war (World War I) we would better get out where we could grow some of our food. We stayed with the farming until Papa became so disabled from arthritis that he could not continue.

On West Emma we operated a small grocery store in a little building which stood in the corner of our garden. At noon the house would be filled with school children who bought candy. We bought candy from Teeters Candy Kitchen, which was located on Allen Street in the old condemned school building a little west of Holcomb. They made the best huge peanut patties. They made peanut brittle, too, but the kids really liked those fresh patties.

I went to every place in town looking for work. Finally went to work at Middlesworth's Cafe—worked 7 A. M. till 2 P. M. or later, whenever dinner was over and the place cleaned. This was seven days a week. I worked there several months.

January 1, 1932 I began working in the office for Dr. William Brand. He said he needed help, but didn't get much money to pay anyone, but his patients brought to him fruit, vegetables, chickens, stove wood or anything they happened to have to pay on their doctor bills because money was so hard to come by about then. The doctor said if I would work he would divide food with us and that way, we did not need to buy so much. About April 30, 1933 Dr. Brand suffered a severe stroke and died two or three weeks later.

May 24, 1933 I started working for Dr. C. P. Sisco. Later I decided to finish high school. When I was first ready for high school there was no high school near where we lived and school busses were unheard of then. I worked mornings, went to school afternoons and graduated Springdale High School, class of 1937. I continued to work at Dr. Sisco's a number of years.

May 13, 1945 I married Criss F. Wood. (See more about him under Criss Franklin Wood.)

I was one of the first in Arkansas to be authorized as a Licensed Practical Nurse, License Number 44, dated January 14, 1946, issued by the Arkansas State Board of Nurse Examiners.

Dr. C. P. Sisco's son, Dr. Friedman Sisco finished medical school and came to practice with his dad in 1939. He went to the army with the Arkansas National Guard in 1942. In 1945 when the war was over, he came home bringing Dr. John W. Dorman to work here with them. We had to have extra help with three doctors' patients to take care of. Then in February 1947 Dr. Dorman left to open his own office on Spring Street.

Dr. C. P. Sisco suffered a severe stroke and passed away in August 1948.

In October 1948 I resigned, feeling I needed some time at home. Later I worked awhile at Dr. Dorman's Clinic. Dr. Friedman Sisco built a new clinic on corner of Emma and Shiloh, where I also worked for awhile. Then I worked some at Springdale Memorial Hospital, mostly doing private duty.

I was working back at Dr. Friedman's clinic when my husband became so ill I had to stay home to take care of him, January of 1966. He was sick more than nine years. We lost him March 25, 1975.

Criss F. Wood

Criss Franklin Wood was born at Cecil, Franklin County, Arkansas, November 14, 1903, the third of a family of seven children, plus one child who died very young. He lost his father August 7, 1918. His youngest sister was born three weeks later. His oldest sister soon married and left home. Then his older brother joined the Navy, so he assumed the responsibility of helping his mother to raise the younger children.

I first met him in 1922 when we moved to the Cecil community.

He served in the U. S. Army in 1943-1944, receiving an Honorable Discharge.

May 13, 1945 Criss Franklin Wood and Carrie Anna McFadden were married at her home, 302 South Shiloh Street. The bride's father, George M. McFadden performed the ceremony. There were about fifty guests.

Criss worked at Joyce's Drug Store from 1945 to 1966. He was mentioned in the Springdale News, September 22, 1986 when a whole page was devoted to Joyce's Drug Store because they were going out of business.

Photo taken May 13, 1945 on wedding day Carrie Anna McFadden (Wood) and Criss Franklin Wood.

In January 1966 Criss became unable to work. He was sick nine years. Part of this time he was able to go to church on Sunday mornings and to sit in the shade out in the yard for awhile on summer days. He passed away March 25, 1975.

Jonathan Wood

One of the earliest settlers in the neighborhood of Fort Houston was Jonathan Wood. He and his wife Nancy Davidson immigrated from eastern Virginia to 185 acres of land on Big Moccasin in the year 1773.

This is six of the nine (9) children of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Wood. Reading left to right: Wheeler Wood, Bertie Wood, Howard Wood, George Wood, Addie Wood, Jim Wood, Grandmother Alice (Coley) Wood and Grandfather Isaac Wood.

Fort Houston was a place of safety from the Shawnee Indians. They burned his dwelling and all of its contents. He was a soldier in the Revolution. Henry, the second son of Jonathan was my great, great grandfather. He married Sally Lawson August 14, 1794. For 2 years, they lived with his parents. In 1797, he bought a large tract of land in Big Moccasin Valley.

Soon after moving to his new home, Henry saw an Indian skulking among the trees as he drove the cows in to milk. This was the last Indian, according to Henry, ever seen in that neighborhood. Henry was twice elected a member of the legislature of Russell County. He was the Sheriff of Scott County for a number of years.

He remembered very well the closing of the War as he was 10 years old when the treaty was signed. He was twice elected a member of the legislature. He was a magistrate for more than a quarter of a century and only ceased to be when more than 75 years old. He and Sarah (Sally) had seven children, four sons and three daughters.

One son, Jonathan R. Wood Jr., my great great grandfather, born February 16, 1801 married Elizabeth Livingston November 2, 1821. He died February 25, 1885. She passed away April 7, 1883.

Another son, James O. Wood, married Elizabeth Godsey, and from this family came four Revolutionary War veterans.

When news reached the Wood family that Virginia had seceded from the Union, their way of life was threatened. A family conference was held. Theirs was a difficult decision to make, but they felt justified to go with the South.

Their oldest, John joined a Confederate Army on December 12, 1862.

Henry Clinton enlisted May 20, 1861 and was commissioned a Captain July 1, 1861. He became a Major June 28, 1862.

At Gettysburg, he captured a United States flag from a Federal Officer.

James Harvey Wood was a cadet at Virginia Military Institute at Lexington when called to train the volunteers being recruited. After four months, he wrote a letter to President Davis asking to be made a Second Lieutenant. He was made a First Lieutenant April 22, 1862 and assigned to the Regiment where his brother Henry was a Captain.

The fourth son, Martin B. joined in March of 1862. William Morison was the youngest, being only 18 years old when he marched with the Corps to New Market. These veterans were all the grandsons of Henry and Sarah.

After the War, Major Henry Clinton Wood served two terms in the Senate of Virginia and was speaker of that body in 1881 and 1882. His brother, James Harvey was a lawyer and admitted to the bar in 1867.

Henry L. Wood, my great grandfather, was born August 4, 1825 at Hilton in Scott County, Virginia the oldest son of Jonathan and Elizabeth. He made a profession of religion at the age of 16 and was a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

He married Martha A. Hart December 29, 1846. Both are buried in the Beverly Cemetery Hilton, Virginia.

She was the daughter of Elijah Hart and Elizabeth Cattron. Her father, Eijah Hart made the gold rush to California. They had nine children, one of whom was my grandfather, Isaac M. Wood born sometime in 1864 in Hilton, Virginia. He married my grandmother, Alice A. Coley August 28, 1884 at Bloomingdale, Virginia. She was the daughter of George W. (Cooley) Coley and Mary "Polly" Ann Agner.

He passed away February 28, 1921 at age 57. She out-lived him 17 years, passing on May 5, 1938 at age 71.

Sometime in their early marriage, they moved to Madison County, Arkansas for my dad George D. Wood was born in 1900 at Lollar Creek.

They had 9 children, one daughter, Flora died July 30, 1884 at age 7 months. She is buried in Scott County at Hilton, Virginia.

2. Nannie married Rosco Faulkner.
3. Emma married Elis Faulkner, brother to Rosco.
4. Jim Wood married Effie Ledford.
5. Addie married Bruce Jordan.
6. George married Fannie Shumate.
7. Howard married Ester Phelan.
8. Wheeler married Grace Carlisle.
9. Bertie married Oris Barnes.

My father George Wood and Fannie Shumate lived all their married life in Washington County, mostly in Walnut Grove Valley where I spent my childhood.

They had three daughters, Mary Belle married Melvin Easter, Evelyn married Levi Tosh and myself Dorotha. I married Huse

Bilbrey, July 1, 1942. He served two years in World War II, was section leader through the battles and campaigns in Rhineland, Normandy, Central Europe and Northern France, received the Good Conduct Medal, Purple Heart and European African Middle Eastern Theater Ribbon with Four Bronze Battle Stars. He worked for Ozarks Electric Corporation in Fayetteville for twenty-eight years before his death, January 24, 1982. We have one child: a son, Larry Huse who is married to Linda Odom. He is a CPA and finance controller for Fayetteville Public Schools. She was the counselor for the West Fork Schools until sickness has caused her to take a leave of absence. Linda Bilbrey passed away September 25, 1987.

My father passed away January 10, 1966, mother August 21, 1981. My sister, Mary Belle died May 23, 1984. At this time, my son, daughter-in-law and myself, live in West Fork, Arkansas. This has been our hometown since 1948.

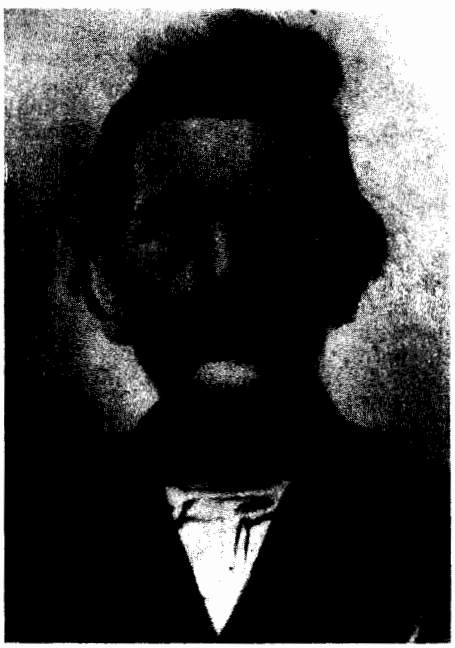
L. D. Woodrome

Lewis Laranzie Dow (L. D.) Woodrome was born December 25,1828 in Washington County, Illinois. He was the son of Jackson Woodrome. He married Julia Ann Woodward May 30, 1854 in Washington County, Arkansas by Calvin Baker, Justice of the Peace (Marriage Book A., p. 363). He died November 15, 1898 in Denton, Texas.



L. D. Woodrome

To this marriage were born the following children: (1) William Barnabus Woodrome, born November 6, 1857 in Washington County, Arkansas. Married 1 - Fannie M. Tennis 2. Nearly Artie Duncan (2) John Newton Woodrome, born April 4, 1859 in Fulton County, Arkansas. He was kicked in the head by a mule and died as a result of that accident January 29, 1870 in Howell County, Missouri. (3) George Alexander Woodrome born October 4, 1865 in Jefferson county, married 1. Alice Wright 2. Rose Lee Inman 3. Josie B. Nelson. (4) Andrew Jackson Woodrome born August 8, 1890 in West Plains, Howell County, Missouri. Married 1. Sarah Elizabeth Serren 2. Eula Mae Knight. (5) Julia Isabelle Woodrome born October 18, 1876 in Howell County, Missouri married Cephus Monroe Pollard. (6) Dora Ann Woodrome born March 6, 1882 in Denton, Texas married Percy Oaks Hobson.

The Woodrome family is found in the Washington County, Arkansas 1850, 1860 and 1880 Census.

Mr. Woodrome's branding iron was in the shape of LD joined together. He could not read or write, but he carried with him a paper that said he was an honest, upstanding citizen and any community should be glad to have them in their group. He was unable to go to the Civil War because of smallpox.

As with most people in those days, home remedies were very important. Two such remedies of Mr. Woodrome's have been handed down through the years: "L. D.'s Receipt for Liniment" 1/2 oz. sasafras oil, 1/2 oz. cedar oil, 1/2 oz. lavingger liquid, 1/2 oz. oil of spike, 1/2 oz. bone and nerve liniment, 1/2 oz. hearts horn, 1/2 oz. camphor gum, 1/2 oz. turpentine and 1/2 oz. alcohol. This is for infection of ears: 6 peach seed kernals (crushed up), Lump of alum size of a pea and a Tablespoon of unsalted butter. Place in a pan and simmer slowly. Strain and drop a drop in ear three or four times a day. For risen in ears.

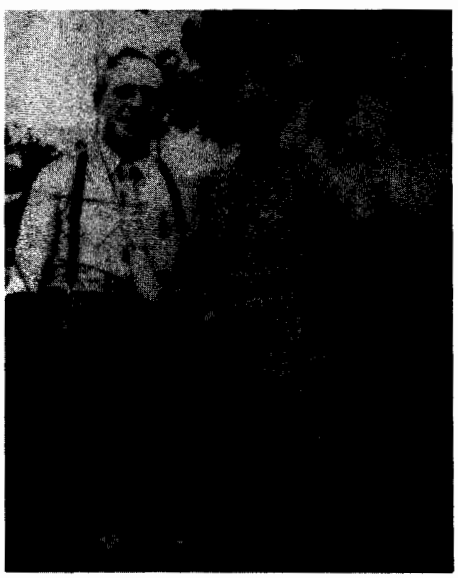
Samuel Ernest Woods

Samuel Ernest Woods was born January 19, 1893 in Pueblo, Colorado. His father, Samuel Francis, was an engineer for the Union Pacific Railroad. His mother, Caroline Nell (Kluckner) was a homemaker and helped run the family grocery and hardware store. She was 21 years younger than her husband. In August 1902, she died of food poisoning and a few years later, my grandfather married Julie Schmidt.

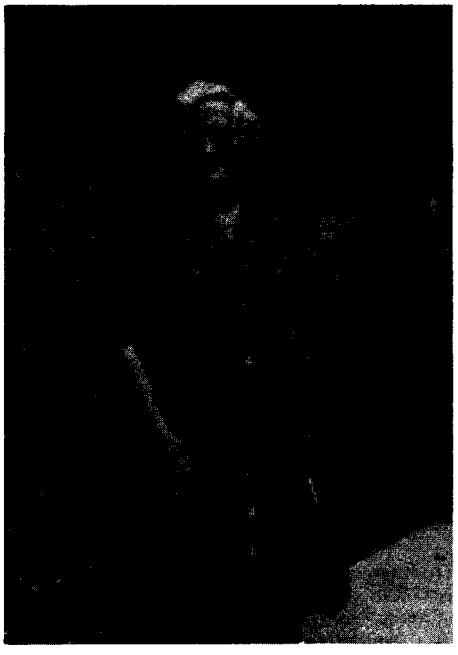


Samuel Ernest Woods and sister, Adeline (Woods) Bonner, 1936.

Daisy Nell (Cramer) was born February 20, 1891 in Lexington, Nebraska. Her father, David Harry was an elevator builder and her mother, Annie Brisbanel (McDowell) was a homemaker and a devout Methodist.

Samuel and Daisy were married December 12, 1913 in Central City, Nebraska. For a while, they lived with my grandmother Cramer. They managed and worked on her wheat and cattle ranch just outside St. Paul, Nebraska. On December 14, 1914, Elizabeth Adeline was born. A short while later, they moved by covered wagon to a homestead west of Burwell in the Nebraska sandhills. They built a two-room sod house with a dirt floor and walls. There was a wooden door and two glass windows which my father had hauled forty-five miles in the wagon. Each week my mother would ride five miles to the little store at Gracie to exchange eggs and cream for supplies. Elizabeth rode in front of her mother. About once a month, they went by wagon to Valley View which was a trading post on the Calamus River for mail and to fish in the wide, shallow river. They salted the fish in a wooden barrel for later use.

Woods Family - 1936 Back row: Elizabeth (Frye), Julianne (Stewart), Ruby (Christie). Front row: Daisy (Sammy Watts Willis), Samuel Ellis Woods, Frances (Spencer) and Carl C. Buddy Woods.



Daisy Cramer Woods (Granny Woods), taken 1977.

In 1917, my mother returned to St. Paul and on July 9, 1917, I was born and was named Julianne after my two grandmothers. My father helped with the wheat harvest and in the fall they returned by wagon to the homestead. In the spring, they sold the homestead and returned to St. Paul to manage the ranch and tend my grandmother who was ill. My father sold insurance and managed explosives for the state of Nebraska Road Department. He had two large underground silos where the explosives were kept cool for safety.

On September 28, 1918, Ruby Caroline was born. My mother became ill with child-bed fever and was bedfast for many months. My first memory of her was with very short blond curls. This was not proper in those days so she wore her long curls up under a bonnet everywhere she went.

On December 23, 1921, my brother Samuel Edwin was born. He lived only six weeks and is buried in St. Paul. Carl Cramer was born on January 11, 1923 and the following spring my grandmother died.

In the summer of 1923, my parents bought a Chevrolet touring car. It was a wonderful addition to the family as few cars were on the roads. My father became ill with dust pneumonia in July 1923 and the doctors advised him to move to a warmer climate. In January 1925, they came by train to Fayetteville and stayed at the Scott Hotel on Dickson Street where they visited farms in the area going by train to St. Paul and Pettigrew. After two weeks, they bought a sixty-seven acre farm southeast of Springdale bordering the Zion Cemetery and school. They returned to St. Paul, Nebraska, held a farm sale and sold all the furniture and livestock which could not be brought to Arkansas in a train car. Half of the car was for our two horses, Roxie and Pinkie, seven milk cows and three coops of Rhode Island red hens, and some farm machinery. The other end was for household goods and furniture. My foster brother, Joseph Bradka, age 17, rode in the train car and tended the livestock and our Airedale dog, Stub.

On March 14, 1925 we arrived in our 1923 Chevrolet. We had traveled three days and two nights and were happy to see the Easter flowers blooming and leaves on the large maple tree in our front yard. When the train car arrived, our new neighbors, Otis Cardwell, George Plumlee and George Anderson drove to Springdale and helped haul all our household goods to our new home. Joe and my father brought home the horses and cattle.

In the years that followed, many hardships were encountered. Farming was difficult and money became scarce. My father was a good carpenter so he started working for the neighbors doing repair work. On April 15, 1927, my father took us to spend the night with Otis and Lula Cardwell. When we returned in the morning, we had a new baby sister. We named her Daisy Nell for my mother, but called her Sammy because we thought she looked like my father. On March 29, 1929 my father again took us to the neighbor's home to spend the night. When we returned home the next morning we had another baby sister. We wondered about this as our neighbor had no children. We named our new baby Francis Lucille.

Zion was a wonderful place to grow up in. There were lots of other children to play with and we had our two horses to ride. On July 11, 1931 Virginia Joy was born and in the fall of that year, we sold the farm and moved to White Rock west of Fayetteville. I was starting the 8th grade and on the first day of school we found Mrs. Lottie Couch to be our teacher. She was a friend from Zion so the move was not so hard. The next fall, I started to Fayetteville High School and since we lived outside the district, I was not allowed to finish my school year. In 1933, we moved to a small house two miles north of Fayetteville on the Old Wire Road. Ruby and I walked to Fayetteville High School and graduated in 1937.

In February, 1933, my sister Virginia died of pneumonia and we buried her at Zion. On December 9, 1934, my brother Samuel Ellis was born. My father worked for the State as supervisor on the cabins at Devil's Den and Lake Wedington. In 1934, my father became ill with blood pressure and kidney problems. He died on November 11, 1936 and was buried beside my baby sister at Zion.

My mother and her younger children moved to Missouri, then back to Braden, then to Van Buren. In February, 1943, my mother and her younger children moved to Durham to a farm purchased by my husband and she lived there until her death in 1978. My husband, Leonard J. Stewart retired from the Army in 1961 and we returned to Durham with our three children, Michael E., John L. and Patricia Ann. Our son Ozzie J. was in the Army.

In 1972, my mother who was 81 and partially blind asked if we would take her to York, Nebraska to put a headstone on her mother's and her brother's graves. We made arrangements with the cemetery and two headstones were made. We took our pickup and trailer and took a three week journey to Nebraska. After placing the headstones at the graves in York, we went to St. Paul to see the old home place, then on up the North Loup River. We stopped at the places where my parents had camped on their trips by covered wagon to their homestead. We learned history of the Indians and early settlers and saw the chalk mines, climbed to the top of Lookout Mountain where the settlers had watched the valley for Indian raids and saw the deserted trading post at Valley View. We saw the Calamus River which is believed to be sacred by the Indians because of the hot water springs in the bottom. We read the historical markers telling of the early settlers and their hardships. We visited Burwell and saw many stores which had changed very little since my parents had traded there.

After returning home, my mother's eyesight continued to fail and in the fall of 1977 she became ill with a lung problem. On March 1, 1978, she died and is buried at Zion with my father and sister.

My brothers and sisters all lived here in northwest Arkansas except Elizabeth who lives in Idaho. I live in Durham, Ruby Christie is in Siloam Springs, Carl C. in Rogers, Daisy Watts Willis in Durham, Francis Spencer in Elkins and Samuel E. is in Rogers.

Barnabus Woodard

Barnabus M. Woodard was born April 1, 1818 in Tennessee, probably Warren County. He was the son of John Wesley and Hannah (probably Raines) Woodard, Sr. He first married Ellen Ann McCurdy about 1836.

Their first child, Julia Ann was born October 24, 1838. She always said she was born on a plantation around Van Buren, Arkansas near Chalk Mountain. (Research has not been able to locate Chalk Mountain). She married Lewis Laranzie Dow (L. D.) Woodrome May 30, 1854 in Washington County, Arkansas, recorded in Marriage Book A, page 363, by Calvin Baker, Justice of the Peace. She liked to tell stories of her girlhood during the Civil War. When the fighting came near their home, they would herd all the stock into a small cave at the end of a ravine. They would pile brush in front of the cave to hide it and prevented the soldiers from taking the stock. They never knew whether the troops approaching were Rebel or Yankee, and her father tried not to take sides with either group.

Other children were (2) Melissa Catherine Woodard, born February 28, 1840 in Marion County, Arkansas. She married a Mr. Laird. (3) Mary Jane Woodard, born January 9, 1842 in Arkansas (4) William Marian Woodard, born November 22, 1844, in Arkansas (5) Hannah Woodard, born ca. 1847 in Arkansas. She married an Ashley. (6) John Woodard, born March 8, 1848, in Arkansas (7) James Melton Woodard, born February 16, 1850 in Montgomery County, Arkansas. (8) Jasper Woodard, born February 16, 1852 in Montgomery County, Arkansas.

After this eighth child, Ellen Ann must have died, because in about 1853/54, Barnabus married Elizabeth Bohannon, a previously married lady who brought 2 children with her to the marriage, Thomas Bohannon, born in 1848 in Arkansas who later married a Miss Harper, and Nancy Bohannon, born in 1852 in Arkansas, who later married John Bethel.

Children of Barnabus and Elizabeth were (1) Selitha Elizabeth Malinda Woodard, born November 6, 1885, in Arkansas. She married a Mr. Harper in Fayetteville, Washington County, Arkansas in 1936 and had a son, Tom (2) James Benoui Harres Woodard born October 8, 1857, in Arkansas. (3) Tiny Carrolton Woodard, born April 1, 1860 in Big Springs, Township, Washington County, Arkansas. (4) George Henry Woodard, born 1862 in Washington County, Arkansas; (5) Joseph Barnabus, born October 9, 1864 in Washington County, Arkansas.

In the 1840 Census, the family was found in Union Township, Marion County, Arkansas, Montgomery County, Arkansas. The 1860 Census showed them living in the Elm Springs Township, Washington County, Arkansas. Barnabus bought and sold Washington County, Arkansas land from February 30, 1858, when he bought 77 acres from James D. McCurdy through May 2, 1865 when he sold 40 acres to L. B. Doss. At that time, the Woodards were living in Lamar County, Texas, but returned to Washington County, Arkansas.

The estate of Barnabus Woodard was probated in Washington County, Arkansas, May 5, 1871 (Will Book E, page 635; Will Book F. pp. 158-159). John Davidson and Benjamin P. Davidson were Administrators of the estate.

John Woody

John Woody and his brother William Banks Woody were early settlers of Washington County, Arkansas. They were residents in 1828 when the first census of the county was taken. John and William were sons of William and Jane Woody. John was born August 29, 1792 in Virginia and William Banks Woody was born about 1799 also in Virginia. Their sisters were Jane Woody, Sarah Woody, Biddy Woody, Elizabeth Woody and Nancy Woody. Their father, William Woody had brought his family to Lincoln County, Tennessee, where he lived the remainder of his life and where he died in 1817. John Woody married Nancy Burer in Lincoln County on June 22, 1812. Their older children were born in Tennessee. John was a Lieutenant in General Andrew Jackson's army at the Battle of New Orleans.

Until 1828, white settlement in certain parts of northwest Arkansas was not permitted. In that year, a "treaty of removal of the Cherokee Indians" was concluded and the Woodys (John and William B. and their families and also their sister, Elizabeth Woody and her husband James Buchanan arrived in Washington County. Many of the family members names appear on the records of the Cane Hill Presbyterian Church as charter members. The roll dated August 30, 1828 lists: James Buchanan, Elizabeth Buchanan, Isaac Buchanan, Naomi Buchanan, John Woody, John Robert and Polly Buchanan. First Sunday School conducted in Washington County was held at the home of James and Elizabeth Woody Buchanan in October of 1828. John Woody and William B. Woody were members of the first grand jury convened in Washington County in 1829. John Woody, Lewis Evans, Larkin Newton and Samuel Vaughn were appointed commissioners to locate a site for the county seat. In 1829, a site was found and a name was needed. Since two of the members of the commission were from Fayetteville, Tennessee before coming to Arkansas the new town was named Fayetteville. In 1829, one of the polling places for the county was in the William B. Woody home and another was in the James Buchanan home. John Woody's brother William B. Woody was postmaster of Cane Hill from 1830 to 1833. He was Washington House of Representatives from Washington County from 1837 to 1838. When Benton County was created, William B. Woody served as acting Sheriff briefly in 1836. He moved to Maysville in Benton County and remained there for many years. John Woody moved to the area south of what is now Harrison, Arkansas. His descendants are to be found there to this day. Elizabeth Woody Buchanan died December 2, 1861 and is buried in the Prairie Grove Cemetery at the Presbyterian Church at Prairie Grove, Arkansas.

Judge Roger V. Logan, Jr. of Harrison, is a descendant of John Woody. More detailed information on this family and its descendants can be found in Boone County Historian"" Volume IV, No. IV page 74 ff.

Noah Marion Woolsey

My father, Noah Marion Woolsey, first crossed Washington County in a covered wagon en route to Lincoln County, Oklahoma in 1907. He was born in Benton County three miles north of Clifty. Rocks and flowers mark the spot of the old homestead.

Four Generations of Woolseys: Vernon, Gaylene, Mariah and Noah Marion Woolsey.

The Woolsey Coat of Arms

The Woolsey Family Tree dates back to the 13th Century in England. In the 15th Century, Cardinal Woolsey was the power behind the throne of Henry VIII for nearly twenty years and was a candidate for the Papacy when Pope Leo died. He also established colleges, some of which still stand. The first Woolsey born in America was John in 1661 at Long Island, New York. Zephanah, John, Jr. son was born in 1734 at Long Island, New York. He died in 1807 in Tennessee. Nehemiah, his son, was born in 1775 in Tennessee and died in 1834 in Carroll County, Missouri. His will is the first will recorded in Carroll County, Missouri.

He had a family of eight children, all of Biblical names: Noah, Nehemiah, Jr., Ruth, Mary, Sarah, Stephen, Phoebe and Abigail.

The Woolseys in the early 1940s: Gaye Woolsey, J. L. Woolsey, Gaylene Woolsey Sarratt, Nellie Pearl, Noah Marion, Vernon, Irene Woolsey Pavig and Ruth Woolsey.

Noah, Sr. was born in Tennessee. He came with his parents to Missouri in 1818. The first landing was at Gladdeus Branch, east of Waverly on the south side of the Missouri River. Canoes were made to cross to the north side, now known as Sugar Tree Bottoms. This is some of the richest land I have ever seen. Crude shelters were thrown up until trees could be felled and log houses built. They bought large quantities of land for 12-1/2 cents per acre. Life was very rugged. They plowed the ground with a forked limb. The early settlers ground their meal by hand. Noah Woolsey had the first plow, cotton seeder and grist mill in Carroll County, Missouri. They came from far and near to get their cotton seeded and their grain ground. Being a very benevolent man, Noah charged only a small fee for the grinding, nothing if it was evident the need was there. They built wood yards up and down the river to sell wood to the boats, which were no doubt steam boats fired by wood. They also had large vegetable gardens, tended by slaves. Produce, great loads of pork, tobacco and honey from the wild woods were shipped to St. Louis.

Noah Woolsey was chosen with others to form the first grand jury of Carroll County, Missouri.

One of Noah's sons was Anderson Woolsey, father of Cecil Chapman who gave me a lot of this early history. Anderson's home was open to all ministers. Before the Woolsey Grove Baptist Church was organized in 1872, his home served as a church. The house was destroyed by fire, but was quickly rebuilt. The lumber was sawed by a rip saw and planed by hand, as were the shingles. It was built entirely of black walnut logs. An abundance of sugar maple trees and a sugar camp where they boiled down the syrup, gave the area the name of Sugar Tree.

The Noah Woolsey discussed so far in this history was the great-grandfather of the Noah first mentioned, who was so well-known and respected around Springdale in the early 30s. Noah M. Woolsey, Jr. and Rebecca A. had seven children: Albert L., Lucy A., Alphonso, Mariah, William J., Mary Jane and Sarah Ellen. Sarah Ellen was born blind and lived with Lucy and Uncle Joe Lane who were well-known and loved near the Calbaugh Community, north of Hindsville. Sammy Lane, their son was a Baptist Minister, well-known to people of the Free Will Baptist Faith.

Noah Woolsey III was married to Nellie Pearl Weese in 1920. They had two sons, both born in Wynona, Oklahoma, J. L. born in 1921 and Vernon born in 1922. Noah attended school along with Ben Stanback at the old California school north of Clifty. The old schoolhouse is still in use as a church. Noah's stepfather, Levey Jack Brown built the Mountain View Schoolhouse which also still stands, straight and erect after approximately one-hundred years of use.

Mr. Pierce Kirk made my grandfather a cap and ball rifle that is still in the family. Mr. Kirk made many guns for the early settlers. One of his last was one he made for me not long before he died.

I also had the pleasure of meeting Pierce's brother, Wiate who was 94 years-old at that time. He sold me his old violin that he used to play at parties near the turn of the century. I still have the old violin that has a Stradivarius label inside the fiddle. The fiddle also had four sets of rattle snake rattlers to give it a better sound. Wiate lived in the old large loghouse that was the old Kirk home. To the best of my knowledge, it still stands, along with the Uncle Joe Lane loghouse.

I will always remember a four-day visit to the Joe Lane home in the 30s. I marveled at how reasonably they lived. The log house served, I know, for at least ninety years.

For breakfast, they had guinea eggs, salt pork, milk, butter, wild honey and corn bread. (It was hard for me to get used to cornbread for breakfast. Sunday morning, we had biscuits as a treat.

My dad, Noah, told about riding horseback seven miles to War Eagle Mills to have corn and wheat ground.

Jack Brown moved Noah Woolsey and his five children by another marriage to central Oklahoma when Noah was 14-years-old. They traveled by horse and wagon. There they lived in a log home, the remainder of Jack and Mariah's lives. After a hitch in World War I and twelve years in the Oklahoma oil fields, Noah decided he could weather the Great Depression better back in the Arkansas Ozarks.

In the Spring of 1940, I met and married my dear wife, Ruth Rose Downum, daughter of M. E. "Man" and Pearl Downum of the Spring Creek area northwest of Springdale. Pop Downum and Uncle Joe Lane were two of my favorite characters. I could write a chapter on each of them if I could write at all. Joe Robinson, Adrian Luna, John Huggins, Lois Baskin and Melvin Stroud, all brothers-in-law, all played a major part in my life.

In 1932, we moved into a five-room house where Wal-Mart now has the Springdale store with Anthony's. The house was on round chunks of logs for a foundation. It is in use, at this time, one mile southwest of its original location.

Springdale had a population of less than 2,000 in 1932. Pleasant Street was Highway 71 when Dad bought the place from Mr. Greenway through the Oscar Hawkins Realty Company. We moved to Springdale in 1932. We could not have made it without wonderful neighbors, such as the families of Ben Smith, Dense Justis, Fred Walters and many, many more. We did a lot of walking, but finally advanced to a horse and wagon. I can tell you all the old hitching places in town, as well as the horse-trading lots, the town spring, mill, etc.

Just recently, I visited the old Farrar home now owned and used by Lawrence Day and his family. I told Lawrence it had been forty-seven years since I was in the home.

Our first residence after our 1940 marriage was 1303 West Emma Avenue, about one-half block from the Farrar home. I woke Mrs. Farrar at 4:00 a. m. to call Dr. Sisco when it was time for our first daughter, Gaylene to arrive.

Our next move was back to what is now Pleasant Street where our second daughter, Irene was born in a blinding snow storm. Old Doc Sisco, after stoking the fire, stated he could ride that King heater to town. I started raising chickens back in 1941 with John Allen and Jeff Brown. It took fourteen weeks to grow a three-pound chicken.

We moved to McLoud, Oklahoma in 1943 to help with the war effort. I worked for the Douglas Aircraft approximately eight months. Our son, Bill Eugene Woolsey, was born at Shawnee, Oklahoma in 1944. We moved back to Springdale after my mother became ill with cancer. We lost her in 1945, the same year President Franklin D. Roosevelt died.

J. L. left home to live with an aunt and uncle in Oklahoma around 1937, later to serve in the U. S. Army during World War II. He returned to Duncan, Oklahoma after the war and still makes his home there with his wife, Gaye. They have one son, Paul Steven. Paul got most of the brains. He has been semi-retired since the age of 40, and lives in Edmund, Oklahoma.

We lost our son, Bill in 1971 in an airplane crash at Birmingham, Alabama. He left a wife, Freida Fern and two sons, Roger and Wayne. They have lived in Springdale since Bill's death.

We now have seven grandchildren. Gaylene and Lee Sarratt have two daughters who live here by choice, Debbie Ransweiler and Lisa Sarratt. Debbie and R. J. have two children, Brittni Paige and Derick Lee.

Irene married Bernard Pavig of Tontitown and they have three lovely daughters, Gwen, Donna and Janay. They live in Houston, Texas. Irene is called Gran by her twin granddaughters, Tiffany and Emily born to Gwen and Robby McGee.

After raising our three children in a two-bedroom home which is now part of Tyson's empire southwest of Springdale, we built a ten-room home on Beaver Lake and developed what is known as War Eagle Cove. We are very proud of War Eagle Cove and our good neighbors.

Samuel Woolsey

Members of this early Washington County family came to this area in the year in 1929, first settling in the community of Woolsey, later living in West Fork and Farmington. One of the earliest settlers was Samuel Woolsey, who was born August 31, 1791 in Greene County, Tennessee. His ancestors can be traced back to New York and then on back to England. Samuel went to Illinois in 1810, fought in the War of 1812, and married Matilda Thompson of Kentucky in 1810 in Randolph County, Illinois. After living in Hempstead County, Arkansas for a short period of time, they settled in Washington County.

Samuel and Matilda Woolsey had thirteen children. These were as follows: William Thompson (1811-1894) who married #1 Elvira H. F. Davison and #2 Charity Robinson; Sarah "Sallie" (1813-1885) who married Josiah Trent; Josiah Patterson (1815-1859) who married Naomi Laura Billingsly; Madison (1817-1841) who married Susan?; Jane Woolsey (1819-1848) who married a Woodruff; Gilbert Clark (1821-1851) who married Tabitha Brown; James (1823-189?) who married Nancy R. Woods; Lourana (1825-1908) who never married; Louisa (1827-1919) who also never married; Henry Brown (1830-?) who married Margaret Neale; Greene Smith (1832-1845); Wesley Fletcher, who was born in 1836; and Martha Elizabeth (1838-1914) who married James Davis. Almost all of these children and many descendants lived in and around Washington County all of their lives.

Samuel and Matilda Woolsey lived on a 200 acre farm one mile north of Farmington. Today, one can visit the old family burial ground there. Inside an iron fence, there is a memorial to the Woolsey family, and buried there are Samuel and Matilda as well as their two unmarried daughters—Lourana and Louisa. Other children buried there are Jane Woolsey Woodruff and Gilbert Clark Woolsey. The original house with a few minor changes is still standing and is the home of Lester Broyles.

William Thompson, son of Samuel and Matilda was born on May 21, 1811 in Randolph County, Illinois, came to Arkansas with his parents in 1829 and married Elvira H. F. Davidson on November 12, 1834. Elvira Davidson Woolsey died about 1851, leaving William Thompson with seven children. These were as follows: Mary (1836-1882) who married Oliver L. Karnes, Lavinia Matilda, who was born about 1838 and who married Isaac N. Fellows, Sarah born 1841, Samuel Lewis Woolsey (1842-1918) who married #1 Elizabeth Perdue and #2 Penelopia J. Carter, Elizabeth Caroline (1846-1910) who married Benjamin Franklin Little, John D. (1849-1916) who married #1 Harriet Beal #2 Mrs. Mary J. Cattlett and #3 Mrs. Miranda Bittick, and finally Martha (1849-1926) who married Jasper Farmer. William Thompson Woolsey then married for the second time to Mrs. Charity Robinson and had one other child—Charity M. (1856-1922) who married Jacob W. Stockberger.

William Thompson Woolsey was a merchant at West Fork for many years and also postmaster there for about twelve years. During the Civil War he was a Union sympathizer but did not serve as a soldier. He was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. William Thompson and his second wife Charity are buried in the old Karnes Family Cemetery near West Fork.

Elizabeth Caroline Woolsey, daughter of William Thompson, married Benjamin Franklin Little on November 13, 1870. Benjamin Franklin Little was the first Republican sheriff of Washington County, serving from 1868 until 1872. There were six children born to Elizabeth Caroline and Benjamin F. Little. Two died in infancy. The other four are: John William (1873-1930) who married Josie Mhoon, Emily (1878-1957) who married William Ryder Sweetser, Lillie Dell "Liss" (1880-1955) who married Dr. Charles E. Swift and Minnie Bell (1883-1937) who married #1 Felix Oliphant and #2 Henry "Buck" Tisdale. There are descendants of Emily Woolsey and William Ryder Sweetser living in Fayetteville today. A daughter, Eliene Sweetser Morrison and her husband Doyle Morrison live on North Willow and a grandson Jerry Sweetser and his wife Sharon live on Bos d'Arc. There are many other descendants of Elizabeth Caroline Woolsey and Benjamin F. Little living in and around Washington County also.

C. L. Work

C. L. Work was born November 19, 1860, Lancaster, Ohio. He married Charlotte Orr, who lived at Columbia City, Indiana. They had five children. Otis, Ruth, Paul, W. J. Bryan and Evelyn. The family moved from Fort Wayne, Indiana in 1900 to Anthony, Kansas, then in 1905 they moved to Eagle City, Blaine County, Oklahoma Territory. This trip was made cross country in a covered wagon.

About 1933 - Travelair 4(XX) (airplane) Old airport (Rodeo grounds there now). Bryan Work on the left, man next to engine -?

While living in Oklahoma we heard a lot about the fine apple and strawberry area in northwest Arkansas. So in 1919, we moved to Springdale and purchased an 80 acre apple orchard, which was located on what is now known as Gutensohn Road. At this time the population of Springdale was 1900. We had two good apple crops and then in 1921 we had a very late freeze which killed all of the apples and from that time on the apple business went down. Then we moved over on Tontitown Road which is now 1117 West Sunset Drive. When we left Oklahoma C. L. Work brought with him a fine Belgian stallion, so he went into the breeding business. He was one of the first to practice what was then called impregnation, which is now called artificial insemination. Charlotte Orr Work died January 19, 1946, then C. L. Work died February 20, 1947. They were both buried in Bluff Cemetery.

In 1921 the city of Springdale was putting in their first water and sewer system. Bert and Tripp were the contractors. Otis, Paul and I (W. J. B. Work) went to work for them.

In 1920 Evelyn Work married Vern Backus. They had three children. Billy Paul, Joe Caroll and Lou Vern. In 1926, Vern Backus and I (W. J. Bryan Work) bought the Springdale Monument Company from A. A. Backus, which was then located just north of where the main building of the First National Bank is now located. In 1927 we moved the Monument Company out on what was then known as the Fayetteville Road, which is now South Thompson Street where the Monument Company is still located.

In 1929 the Great Depression hit. The Model T and Model A Fords were good transportation and the roads were passable, so we decided to expand our operation to places where there was a payroll. We hit the coal mining areas, the oil fields and the lead and zinc mines in Oklahoma. Also the Cherokee, Quapaw and the Osage Indians. Here we found a lot of good business and built a lot of fine monuments. Some of these monuments were for nationally known people.

In 1934 Orville and Wayne (Tony) Work, sons of Otis Work, came to live with us until World War II. Then they both went into the service. Orville was in the Air Force and Wayne was in the 142nd Artillery. When they returned from the service they both went to Texas to work in the oil industry.

We operated the Monument Company for 30 years, then we retired. The monument company is still in the same locaton under the name of Emerson Monument Company, and is now owned by Bob Fuqua.

In 1930 Earl Bird and Clinton Thompson of Fayetteville, had an American Eaglet airplane and Clinton was giving flying lessons. Having always been interested in flying, I (W. J. Bryan Work) went down and learned to fly. After I soloed I bought the airplane and became the first person in Springdale to own one. Then I moved the airplane to a small field in Springdale which is where the Rodeo of the Ozarks Arena is now located. Later, Luther Johnson, Lonnie Phillips, Lowry Walker and I (W. J. Bryan Work) found the property where the present airport is now located. I want to congratulate the young men coming on for the wonderful job they have done in building the fine airport we have today. As of this date (1987) all of the original Work family are dead except me. I just celebrated my 90th birthday November 3, 1987. Still feeling fine and playing golf when the weather is fit.

Jefferson Davis Worley

Jefferson Davis Worley was born 8 September 1862, Greenwood Sebastian County, Arkansas to John H. Worley and Mary C. In the early 1880s the family moved to Strickler, Washington County, Arkansas where Jeff Worley met Margaret Elizabeth (Maggie) Hardesty, daughter of Loverance Evans Hardesty and Mary L. Whinery. They were married in Washington County on 15 November, 1883.

The family lived in the Strickler and Cove Creek area of Washington County, and later moved to Hackett, Sebastian County, Arkansas. About 1897, the family moved to the Lees Creek Community of Indian Territory, now Adair County, Oklahoma. In 1911 the family bought a farm in the Horn Community of Adair County living there until Jefferson Davis Worley died 4 September 1932 at age 70. Mr. Worley was a farmer, a Democrat, and a respected member of the community. Maggie Worley continued living in the home until her death 22 June 1936. John H. Worley

John H. Worley was born 1823 in Tennessee. He was in Crawford County, Arkansas by 1850. Names of his parents are unknown, but it is stated that the family came from Ellijay, Gilmer County, Georgia. John married Mary C. in Arkansas, possibly in Crawford County, about 1854. The family lived in Crawford County, and in the Greenwood District of Sebastian County, Arkansas for many years. They also may have lived in Texas during the middle 1870s.

In 1883, the family was living on a farm in Strickler, Washington County, Arkansas where John H. Worley was postmaster. There is a farm in the Strickler community still known as "The Old Worley Place". It is not known when John and Mary died or where they are buried.

Known children are: Sarah - born 1856; Lilly or Lyda - born 1858; Jefferson Davis - born September 8, 1862; and Robert C. - born 1863; all born in Arkansas. Also a grandson, Cornelius Worley - born 1875/76 in Texas, who lived with the family.

Brad Wright

Elisha Bradford Wright is the eldest child of W. F. "Boy" Wright and Agnes (Jobe) Wright. He was born on the original homestead at Mountainburg, Arkansas in Crawford County. He was born July 29, 1931.

The old original Wright homestead is north of Mountainburg where Lake Ft. Smith is now located. Anyone who travels Highway 71 will admire this beautiful lake. It certainly creates a second glance when I tell people I was born in the middle of Lake Ft. Smith.

Brad Wright was united in marriage to Nell JaNeice (Minor) Wright June 9, 1952 at Van Buren, Crawford County, Arkansas. To this union was born four children, Jennifer Ann Hinton, Fayetteville, Arkansas; Tracy Brad Wright, Golden, Colorado; Jo-Robin Wright, Aurora, Colorado and Joy JaNeece Wright of Boulder, Colorado.

The Wright family are all descendants of Isham Wright who was an Indian wagon train scout originally from Kentucky and later Alabama. Isham Wright rode up Frog Bayou and settled in the 1830s. The Wright family and another prominent family were neighbors in Alabama and both homesteaded in the headwaters of Frog Bayou. Isham Wright later married "Old Jack Shepherd's daughter, Mary Polly.

Bradford Wright reared and educated his family in Springdale, Arkansas. He first lived in Washington County while he attended the University of Arkansas from 1949-1953. He later moved back to Fayetteville in 1957 where he was an Associate County Extension Agent. The family moved to Springdale in 1959 and lived until 1982. Mr. Wright was one of the original Tyson field servicemen in the late 50s and early 60s.

Later Mr. Wright was Poultry Production Manager for Farm Service Co-op in Fayetteville now called SFA. Other business interests included Wright Milling Co. in Lowell, Arkansas and Common Sense Realty in Springdale.

Nell JaNeice (Minor) Wright is a descendant of another pioneer family in Northwest Arkansas. She is the daughter of Blanche (Shibley) Minor, now 93. Mrs. Minor is the granddaughter of Henry Shibley who lived in Fayetteville in the late 1850s and was one of the founders of the "Academy", which later became the University of Arkansas.

There are many other interesting events handed down by family historians, but none more interesting than the death of my Great Grandfather, Lt. Bradford Wright of the Confederate Army. The story is that during the time near the end of the Civil War the town of Fayetteville was occupied by the Yankees. Lt. Wright took up an observation post with his squad on Mt. Sequoyah east of Fayetteville. They used this post to determine the movement of troops and supplies. As the story goes, a member of the scouting party climbed a tree on the side of the hill and accidentally dropped his musket and it discharged. The entire Yankee garrison surrounded the squad and they were all killed.

The Wright family was notified to come and claim "Grandpa Brad's" body, which was 40 miles north of the homestead. By the time word got "south of the mountain" the body had been buried east of Fayetteville at the Tuttle community with one of his Army buddies, A. J. Smith. Mr. Smith's grave is marked but Grandpa Wright's is not marked other than with a stone. The Smith marker reads A. J. Smith, CSA, died October 28, 1864.

Another interesting event was the death of my grandparents, Frank and Mary Wright, who died when I was 7 months old. Both my grandfather and grandmother died natural deaths within hours of one another on the same night. My grandmother was always a devout Christian had always prayed that she would not have to live alone without her devoted husband. Grandpa had been sick for a few days and grew worse one night and died without knowing his wife was even sick. They both died before daylight.

Ronald Wayne Yates

Ronald Wayne Yates is the nephew of Toney Wilson Yates, Sr. Note: See related story. (Toney Wilson Yates, Sr.)

Ron is the son of William Henry born August 16, 1939 and Margaret Anne (Drummond) born February 18, 1940. They were married on September 18, 1958. They had five children: Robert Wilson born October 24, 1959, Ronald Wayne born March 2, 1961, William (Billy) Henry Jr. born July 22, 1962, Cynthia (Cindy) Ann born July 21, 1965, and Christina (Christy) Marie born November 13, 1970.

Ronald (Ron) graduated from Huntsville High School in 1979. On New Year's Eve, 1980, he met Jennifer Marcella Kilpatrick on a blind date. After dating two months, she decided he was not "Mr. Right" and started dating others, a month later they went out together again, and ended up engaged by June, and married December 6, 1980.

Jennifer Marcella, born April 27, 1962 the daughter of Marion Lee and Eula Lee (McGarrah) Kilpatrick, Jr. She graduated from Springdale High School in 1980.

Ron and Jennifer bought their first home in 1983 on Route 4, Springdale. Our first child was born Michael Wayne on September 17, 1984 at Springdale Memorial Hospital. We were blessed again June 17, 1987 with Daniel Even, who was delivered at our home with help of two birth attendants, Nancy Dignan and Candy Kirchhoefer, and of course Ron.

Ron hangs sheetrock and being trained by Jim Kilpatrick, has worked on many of the homes and buildings in Washington County.

Jan is a homemaker, mother, and member of Sunshine E. H. C.

Ron and Jan are members of the Johnson Baptist Church where Ron is a deacon. We are enjoying raising our family in Washington County, and hope to raise our boys in a Christian home.

Toney Wilson Yates, Sr.

For many generations, the Yates men lived on farms. Our records show that on May 25, 1807, William Yates was born in Bedford, Virginia. To our knowledge, his parents were farmers and carpenters. His first marriage was to Nancy J. Holland on September 20, 1826, in Bedford, Virginia. Apparently, William moved his family to Hardin County, Kentucky, between the time of his marriage to Nancy and before March 31, 1830, when John B. Yates was born in Hardin County, Kentucky. John was one of the last nine children born to William. William died on February 6, 1886 in Hardin County, Kentucky. John wed Mary Margaret Berry on November 1, 1849 in Hardin County, Kentucky. They had at least six children before his death on January 13, 1886, in Hardin County, Kentucky. One of the children being William Marion Yates, born on August 30, 1850, also in Hardin County, Kentucky. William Marion took for his bride Matilda Ann Catherine Martin on November 10, 1868. William and Matilda made at least five additions to their family. Their names being John Marion, William Christopher Thomas, Anna Belle, Columbus Henry Tone, and Maggie Jane Yates. About 1890, William Marion moved his family to Davis County, Iowa, living first in Prairie Township, possibly in the town of Pulaski. The first record to establish date is a poll tax receipt dated October 22, 1891. William Marion died 1916 in Nebraska. The month and day is unknown. He was buried in South Cemetery in Bloomfield, Iowa, and Grandad (Henry Tone) told Archie Rupe, Toney Wilson Yates, Sr.'s cousin, that he, Henry Tone, moved to Iowa when he was eleven years old. Henry Tone Yates was born February 27, 1879, in Hardin County, Kentucky. As he grew to be a young man, Henry Tone took a liking to the daughter of Miles Wesley Wilson and Mary Ann Garmon. Her name was Allie May Wilson. She was born on June 23, 1883. They were wed on April 28, 1901.

Glen Eugene Yates, Hazel Marie Yates, Carl Wilson Yates

Grandpa Tone and Grandma Allie May had five children, being Aunt Naomi LaRue, Aunt Velma Irene, Daddy Carl Wilson, Uncle Glen Eugene and Aunt Hazel Marie Yates.

Aunt Naomi later married Clarence A. Rupe. They are the parents of Archie Rupe. My thanks to Archie for the much needed information to research this story on the Yates family.

Grandpa Tone and Grandma worked field crops and milked their own dairy cows, and sold milk and butter, they also had chickens and sold eggs. Grandma Allie May died on March 11, 1953. Grandpa Tone lived on until September 6, 1963.

One of his children, Carl Wilson Yates, born in Davis County, Iowa on May 17, 1913, was married to Gatha Gladys Dively on February 23, 1932. Gatha was born on July 29, 1911 to Clinton William and Leora Florence Dively in Davis County, Iowa. Dad and Mom had eleven children. They were Carl Eugene, June Deloris, Joan Doris, Virginia Gladys, William Henry, Betty Josephine, Martha Ann, Toney Wilson, James Lee, Miles Albert and John Obert Yates. Eight of their children were born in Iowa, two in Missouri, and one in Kansas. Daddy moved his family to Salus, Newton County, Arkansas, the first time in about 1954 that Toney remembers, then back to Kansas. But liking Arkansas so much, he moved his family back to Arkansas in 1958 to stay. Carl, like his father a dairy farmer on his 120 acre farm near Clifty, in Madison County, Arkansas. As a young man, he worked in the foundries during the war for Columbia Steel Company and made a $1.25 an hour, as a bridge crane operator in 1943 and 1944 in Oregon.

Daddy, being a Christian father, often read the Bible at the kitchen table with all the children gathered around. Not always being able to attend church because of the distance from the farm to the church, having such a large family to transport, and having a smaller or no vehicle at all, Daddy had services around the kitchen table. Daddy often played softball in the evenings and on Sunday afternoon with the kids. All of us will remember Daddy for the special man that he was.

Carl Wilson Yates died on September 16, 1975, Springdale, Arkansas. He was a member of the Calvary Free Will Baptist Church in Springdale, Arkansas. At his death, he had forty-one living grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. He is buried in the Clifty Cemetery in Madison County, Arkansas.

His wife, Gatha, is seventy-six years old and living in Huntsville, Madison County, Arkansas. The great-grandchildren number has grown to thirty-six and counting. Mom likes to quilt and make crafts in recents years. While her children were young, she made their clothing from flour sacks and made over hand-me-downs to look like new clothing. One of the things her sons remember was the fancy western shirts she made from her own special pattern designed by Mom herself. Toney, to this date has one of her more recent designs that he wears for special occassions. Mom also remade socks for the younger ones from the older ones' socks.

This picture is believed to belong to Great Uncle John Yates, because on the back of the original it is written "To Johnnie". The original is in the home of Joan Yates (Fort) and was given to her by her mom, Gatha Yates in 1976. Standing is Aunt Naomi Yates (Rupe) and seated is Aunt Velma Yates (Dooley).

She remembers most the gardening and canning of the vegetables and meats. Mom made sour-dough bread three or four times a week. There were hard times and good times, but the best times were when she took her children on walks to the woods and taught them many things about nature—different trees, wild flowers, birds, herbs, rocks, and wild animals. She, like Daddy, played softball with the kids. Mom now attends Huntsville Assembly of God Church in Huntsville, Arkansas. She enjoys working for the Lord, likes holidays, and especially her 75th surprise bithday party with all ten of her living children present.

Toney and his brothers and sisters had a lot of fun being in a large family. They all had someone to talk to and play games with. Some of the games they played were hide-n-seek, steal stick, dare-base, kick-the-can, softball, and stick ball. Toney remembers how all the boys would square-off and have wrestling matches in the yard. But like a coin, having two sides, their time for just themselves was few and far between.

Toney went to Kansas in 1964 to work, and stayed with his brother, William "Bill". Toney met Rosemary Kay Thompson in December 1964, who was born August 1, 1946, in Parkville, Platte County, Missouri. She is the daughter of Ward Frances Thompson and Mary Virginia Rice. Toney was a cook and I, Kay, was a waitress at Holiday Inn in Kansas City, Kansas. Shortly before Christmas, Toney was going on a break and had gotten a dish of ice cream, but had forgotten his spoon. I was getting off work and laid my books down to go get my coat. When I got back to my books they were gone. Toney had a twinkle in his eyes and said if I would get him a spoon for his ice cream, he would give back my books. I smiled at him and said, "sure, but all you had to do was ask. You didn't have to take my books." When I returned he took both the spoon and my hand and would not let it go, with the twinkle still in his eyes. He asked for a date and I accepted. Four months later, after winning my heart, he asked for my hand in marriage. My answer was yes, and on June 4, 1965, we were married in Huntsville, Arkansas for we had eloped. Our first son was born May 8, 1966 in Kansas City, Kansas at Kansas University Medical Center. We named him after his Dad, Toney Wilson Yates, Jr. Toney, Jr. was the handsomest baby in the nursery, or so we thought. Toney is now 21 and is presently working at Tyson Foods of Springdale, Arkansas. He graduated from Springdale High School in 1985-86.

On September 17, 1968, we were blessed with our second son, Carl Gene Yates. He was born at St. Mary's Memorial Hospital in Rogers, Arkansas. Carl enjoys art and crafts of all kinds. Carl chose to go into the working field at 18 years of age and is presently working at Sutherland Lumber in Springdale, Arkansas.

Just 16 short months later, the Lord blessed us with our third son, Bobby Joe Yates, on January 11, 1970 at Madison County Hospital, in Huntsville, Arkansas. Bobby, like his brothers, has been active in 4-H and FFA. They all three have held club offices every year since the Land-O-Goshen 4-H was reorganized in March 1980 by their parents, Toney and Kay Yates. Bobby is mechanically inclined and won the State 4-H Auto competition and went on to represent the State of Arkansas at the National competition in Richmond, Virginia. Bobby will graduate in June of 1988, from Fayetteville High School.

Toney and I have enjoyed raising our children in Arkansas, the last 16 years being in Washington County. We have enjoyed attending and working in the 4-H Food Booth at the County Fair. Our sons have showed a lot of hogs, poultry, and crafts over the years in 4-H and FFA. We are very proud of them.

Toney, Sr. is now working for Coca-Cola in Fayetteville, Arkansas as a mechanic for the past 9 years, and I (Kay) have been driving a school bus for the last 12 years for Springdale Schools. We are both 4-H leaders and enjoy working in the community. We have 20 acres near Goshen, Arkansas.

Tragedy hits all families; ours was no exception. In October, 1974, Toney, Sr.'s youngest brother, John Obert, was home on leave from USMC, when there was a very serious accident, leaving him in a coma for 20 months before his death on June 20, 1976. Johnny's death following so soon after Daddy's death, brought many tears, heartaches, and separation of family members. The heartaches we all share in our own way from the loss of these very special people are too numerous to mention. As time passes, this family has returned to some of the closeness they once shared. Time heals wounds. . .

As for the Toney Yates family, we have a closeness with our sons, that we hope will last forever. That does not mean we see everything the same way, but we try to remember we too were young once also.

Toney and I would like to say to all our family, friends, and future generations, that it is very important to keep the history of your family alive by writing it down and passing it on your family heritage. Always remember, "Money is fine, pictures are better, but a legacy in written words could last forever". God bless you.

I have enjoyed working on the Washington County History Book project, and would not have had the time if it had not been for the family helping around the house and giving me time on this story. Thank you for all your help guys. I love you all. Love Mom and Wife.

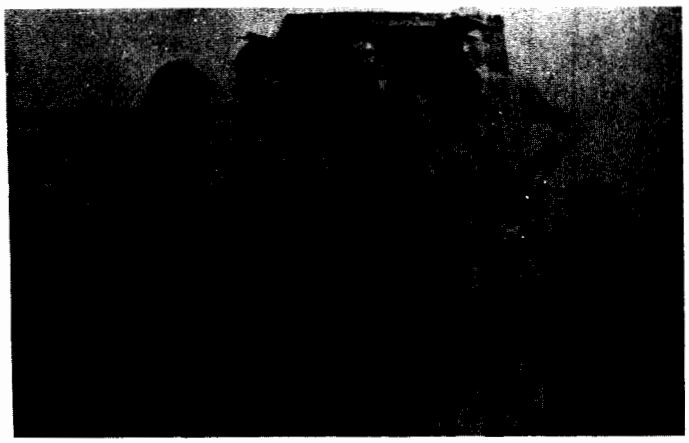
Will Yeager

William Joseph Yeager was born April 6, 1881 in Wister, Oklahoma. He married Lela Aseline Hickerson in Holdenville, Oklahoma on July 27, 1913.



Truck in background is one Lester learned to drive. This was taken the day before they left for Arkansas. Loretha, Leota, Lester, Mildred and Dick Will's parents, William David and Margaret Cannon Yeager lived in Tennessee until after the Civil War started. When carpetbaggers seized their plantation, they moved to Alabama, Arkansas then to Oklahoma in Indian Territory, where Will was born. In the early 1920s, when boll weevils ruined their cotton crops, they moved Shamrock, Texas. It took three weeks for seven families to move in covered wagons.

After Will and Lela married, they lived in Calvin, Oklahoma. Lester, Leota, Buell, Loretha and Mildred were born in Calvin. In the mid 1920s they moved from Oklahoma to Texas on a train. The day they moved to Texas, a blizzard moved in that lasted for three weeks. They couldn't get to the store for provisions, so the nineteen people lived in a three room house and ate jack rabbits, until they could get to the store for food.

Will, Lela and the five children moved to Arkansas the first time right after the "Dust Bowl of the 1930s". Will bought an old Model "T" truck, although he couldn't drive. Lester, being the oldest, learned to drive the same day and the family left for Arkansas the next day.

They moved back and forth from Arkansas to Texas several times until they settled in Springdale in 1936. After moving to Springdale - they didn't think they ever wanted to move again.

James was born in Quail, Texas and Maybell was born in Clifty, Arkansas to complete their family. On one of their numerous trips from Texas, Will's parents moved with them and settled in Farmington, Arkansas.

Lela sold quilt tops along the way to pay for gas. The family fondly recalls, when Lester stopped for gas, Will got out of the truck and started walking (as though this would get him there quicker). Lester would then stop and pick him up several hundred yards down the road.

Mildred recalls that it was Leota's job to keep them quiet on these trips. Leota wrote the "Burma Shave" messages down. Since it took two or three days to travel from Texas, she would have a whole page by the time they got to Arkansas. As some of you recall, Burma Shave signs were posted alongside the road. There would usually be four to six signs in a group. The company claimed their signs actually decreased accidents, since few drivers failed to slow down enough to read the little message, even when they turned out to be about safety like: Keep well to the right of the coming car; Get your close shaves from the half pound jar. . . Burma Shave.

Will had a son Roy by a previous marriage. Roy and Mozell's children are R. C., Dewey, Albert, Norma, Venita, Kenneth, Willie and Diane.

Lester moved to Hollister, California where he married Mary Smith. They have two children, Jerry and Judy. Lester later married Loraine Burgess and moved back to Springdale in 1962. Loraine was a nurse at Springdale Memorial Hospital until her death in 1981.

Leota married Pate Dixon. They had three children, Betty, Rita Kay, and Paul. Pate was killed while driving a truck in 1947. Leota married John Dillard who is the father of Wilma and James. Buell (Dick) married Elaine Harrison. They had two children, Charlotte and Michelle. Charlotte was taken in an automobile accident in 1968. Dick was in the Seabee's during World War II. He drove for Jones Truck Lines until his retirement in 1983.

Loretha married Johnny Graham. Their children are Wayne, Gerry, Franklin and Billy. Johnny worked for Tyson Foods until his death in 1972.

Mildred married Omer Ingram. Their son is Gene. Mildred worked for many years for Steele Canning. Omer was a self-employed house painter. They now own Ingram Gun Shop in Springdale.

James married Glenna Sims. They have two children, Vicki and Joe. James was a concrete finisher until his retirement.

Maybell married Charles Martin. Their children are Sheila, Doug and Chris. Maybell works for the Springdale School system and Charles works for Springdale Memorial Hospital.

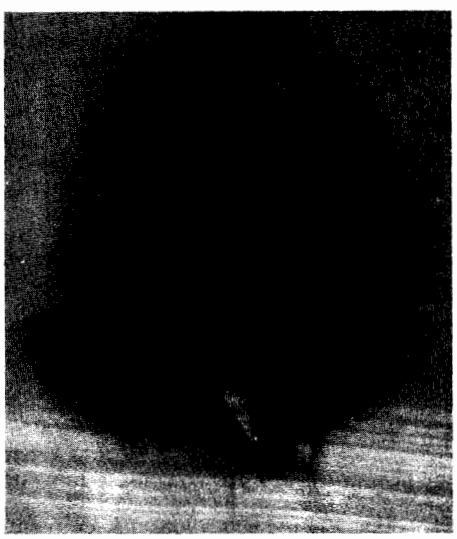
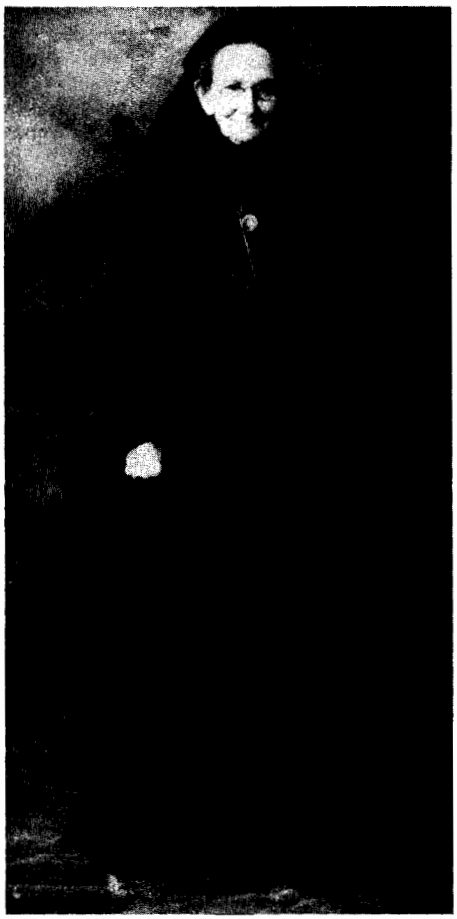
Colonel Jacob Yoes

Jacob E. Yoes was born September 8, 1839 in West Fork, Arkansas to the Reverend W. Conrad and Kissiah Bloyed Yoes. Jake was raised on a farm near the West Fork of the White River in Washington County and only received a fifth grade education. When 17 years old (1856) he left home with $2.00, his clothes, and his father's advice, "Pay all your debts, be truthful, be honest".



Colonel Jacob Yoes



Mary Ann Reed Yoes (Colonel's wife).

His first job was to work "three dry months" for three bits per day. He worked in the Granby Lead Mines of Missouri and worked in Kansas before returning to Washington County.

On December 26, 1858 Jacob married Mary Ann Reed, daughter of William Daly Reed of Fayetteville. They farmed on Signal Mountain, 3 miles southwest of Winslow until June 1862 when he enlisted in Company D, First Arkansas Cavalry, United States Army, serving 3 years 3 months and 20 days. He was on detached duty the greater part of the time. The only battle he participated in was at Prairie Grove. On May 24, 1863 he was fired on by a posse of Confederates, one shot hitting his right hip, one in his left hip and a third breaking a bone in his left limb. Jake was on the run from bushwhackers most of the time. Another story says bushwhackers shot the heel of his boot off as he jumped a fence. He hid in the brush and escaped.

Jacob was captured and taken to Van Buren, Crawford County, a distance of some 50 miles. He was held there until exchanged in Litte Rock on August 1863. He served as a sergeant in Company D until the close of the war. In 1864 he refused a first lieutenants commission. He was discharged at Fayetteville in August of 1865. It is recorded that he killed 50 bushwhackers but never bragged about it.

Jake Yoes was elected sheriff of Washington County during his absence in the war and assumed the duties of the office upon his return. In 1867 he was reappointed and served another year. In 1868 he represented the county in the State Legislature and in 1870 took the government census. The same year he opened a country store 25 miles south of Fayetteville. He owned a large store at West Fork. (A large 2-story brick which is still standing. The bricks were made from the red clay dug out for the basement.) He also owned a flour-mill, hotel and controlling interest in a canning factory. Another enterprise was the selling of 250 deer to a man in St. Louis. The deer were confined in a high fenced field in the West Fork area until sold. Jacob's inheritance from his father was $33.00.

About the time Jacob was appointed Federal Marshal under Judge Issac C. Parker, he traded his West Fork holdings for a place down on the Arkansas River at Moore's Rock. He was appointed United States Marshal for the Western District of Arkansas and Eastern District of Oklahoma on May 18, 1889 and was stationed at Fort Smith. There were some 200 deputy marshals under his command including two of his sons, George Allen and John Wesley (Jack). He performed his duties so efficiently and was so well liked people conferred upon him the honorary title of "colonel".

Marshal Yoes and U. S. Jailer Pape learned of plans of the Dalton gang to attempt the robbery of a bank at Coffeyville, Kansas and set a trap. When the outlaws entered the bank, four of them were shot to death. Emmett Dalton was shot from his horse and captured, was tried and convicted and served a prison sentence.

Colonel Jacob Yoes became known as the merchant prince along the Frisco Railroad. In 1887 at Chester, Crawford County, he built a large store and hotel which is still standing. He also had stores at Mountainburg, Woolsey, Walker Switch, and Graphic. He owned many acres of land. The land at Moore's Rock was traded for land less likely to flood. On this land he built a large cotton gin, (some of which still stands) with seed houses, cotton houses, warehouses, a blacksmith shop, sawmill, grist mill and a large store building all for the use of the public. He also built a large eight-room dwelling. After his death this community was named Yoestown in his honor.

The children of Jacob and Mary Ann were: Lydia J. (January 31, 1861-October 23, 1898); William Conrad (September 25, 1859-October 10, 1924); Francis Abigail (November 20, 1862-April 16, 1952); James Joel (January 24, 1865-February 28, 1946); Kisey Matilda (November 5, 1866-January 9, 1869); George Allen (July 27, 1868-August 29, 1947); John Wesley (July 24, 1870-April 5, 1940); Gilliam Clark (died on July 5, 1941); Thomas Dedrick (died on May 22, 1906 at age 30); Laura Bell (no dates); and Mary Daisy (August 20, 1880- November 1, 1881).

Jacob was a Mason, a member of the I. O. O. F. and the G. A. R. It was stated that his wife, Mary, was a member of the Christian Church. Their son, John helped compile the material for the book Hell on the Border telling about Judge Parker's court cases. Jacob did not want his name connected with the book. The book was published and the Colonel's picture was in the front. In the later editions his picture is removed. Jacob died February 6, 1906 and is buried in the National Cemetery at Fort Smith.

Conrad Yoes

In 1829 the Reverend Conrad Yoes was recorded as "Coonrod" Yoes in Washington County sheriff's census. He may have arrived as early as 1826.

Conrad's family immigrated from Amsterdam to Philadelphia aboard the Belinda Townshed in October 1737. His father's name may have been Tedrick Yoes. The Yoes name is from the border of Holland and Germany and may have been spelled Yows, Yoe, Joh etc.

Tedrick settled in Virginia with his wife Mary where Conrad was born in 1798. Conrad may have had brothers named Thomas Dedrick, Jacob (b. 1790), and James.

As a young man Conrad came west and lived in Missouri and the area that became part of the Indian Territory before moving to Washington County Arkansas. Conrad was a Methodist preacher. He acquired the nickname "Coonrod" one day when he was riding his circuit. He came to a creek, the West Fork of the White River, that he could not cross so he found where someone had felled a tree across the stream and "cooned" it.

Another story is about services at an area church. There was no piano so the song leader would inquire, "What's the tune Rev. Coon?" to which he would reply, "Common meter brother Peter." He served the church for 40 years and was performing marriages in the 1880s.

Conrad was married to Kissiah Bloyed (Kizey) born December 24, 1813. She was the daughter of Eli Bloyed of West Fork. They had six children; Mary Ann (Polly) (July 29, 1830-February 1899); Rosannah (b. 1832); Cynthia (1834-1869); Margarette (Jane) (August 8, 1837-October 16, 1914); Jacob E. (September 8, 1839-February 6, 1906); James Russel (b. February 4, 1845).

Conrad married Wilsie House (Wilcy Hance) in March of 1847 (or 1849) in Washington County by William Putman. They had two daughters, Kisiah (November 5, 1847-1931 aka Kisey); and Matilda (b. 1849 and aka Tillie).

The Reverend was formerly a Whig but became a Republican.He spent his last days in Mountainburg with his son John and died on October 26, 1891. It is not known where he or his first wife are buried. Wilcy is buried in the Jap Basham graveyard north of Mountainburg, up the creek from the main highway.

Conrad's son Jacob E. became an influential merchant and public servant in Washington, Crawford, and Sebastian Counties. He married Mary Ann Reed, the daughter of a prominent Fayetteville family. They had eleven children, six sons and five daughters.

One of Jacob's and Mary's sons, George Allen, was born in West Fork on July 27, 1868. At the age 16 George married Margaret E. Greene who was 18 years old. (b. August 22, 1866 in Jonesville, Virginia) Her family had moved to Arkansas after the war in a covered wagon. They were on the first train from Little Rock to Northwest Arkansas. After Margaret's marriage her family moved on to Texas.

George worked in his father's stores and served as one of his father's deputy marshals when Jacob was serving as Federal Marshal under Judge Issac C. Parker in Fort Smith. Margaret sometimes cooked for the prisoners. She told a story about taking a meal to Belle Starr. Belle threw the food in her face. Needless to say she never cooked for her again.

When the Oklahoma Territory opened George moved to Muskogee to manage a hotel. Indians burned the hotel down so he returned to Arkansas to work for Oliver Finney Co. of Memphis, Tennessee, selling Silver Moon Coffee and Candy around Winslow (1914-1920). In 1920 George and Margaret moved back to Fort Smith where he again served as a Federal Deputy Marshal during the Coolidge and Hoover administrations. In the fall of 1933 he purchased a house and store in Greenland where he died August 29, 1947.

George was a Republican and a delegate to the national convention when Coolidge was nominated. George and Margaret raised three children of their own: Jacob Morrison (July 25, 1885-November 11, 1950); Austin (September 27, 1889-April 14, 1957); Kate (April 4, 1891-April 4, 1976). They also raised a grandson, Rex Hal Murdock (b. May 12, 1914).

Kate married Arthur F. Murdock on August 2, 1913. They had a son Rex. This marriage ended before Rex was born. Kate was advised to move to a drier climate after giving birth, so left Rex with her parents until she was able to care for him. They were living in Winslow. It being a scornful society towards divorced women, George convinced Kate to allow he and Margaret to keep and raise Rex. Margaret often signed his name as Rex Yoes.

Margaret was severely injured, including a broken hip, in an automobile accident in the early 1930s. She walked with a crutch the rest of her long and active life. Several years after George's death Margaret moved back to Fort Smith where Rex and his family were living. She lived to see Parker's Courtroom reopened as a historical site. She died October 21, 1957. She is buried next to George at Baptist Ford Cemetary, Greenland. Their son Austin is also buried there.

Kate stayed in Texas, remarried twice and had three other children. Arthur remarried and lived in California where he died. (August 9, 1891-February 24, 1968) He is buried at Forest Lawn in Los Angeles. He had no other children.

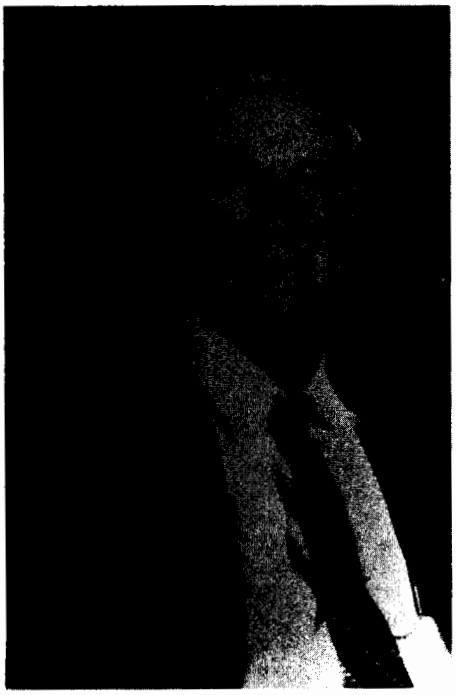
E. T. Young

Doctor E. T. Young was born ca. 1868. In 1906, when licensed by the Arkansas State Medical Board, he was a resident of Lees Creek, Crawford County, Arkansas. He stated he had attended the University of Arkansas School of Medicine for twelve months, but was not a graduate. He also said he had been licensed to practice medicine by the Newton County Medical Board (Arkansas). His license was recorded in Crawford County, January 9, 1906. (This information came from pages 646 and 647 in Physicians and Medicine published by Sebastian County Medical Society, 1977.)



E. T. Young, 1945.

From my memory, Doctor E. T. Young lived and had his medical office at the following locations on these dates: Evansville, Arkansas 1924-1926, Dutch Mills, Arkansas 1926-1932, Cedarville, Arkansas 1932-1943, and two miles north of Van Buren, Arkansas and 1/4 mile west of Highway 59 from 1943-1950.

September 29, 1904, he married Lizzie Irene Barker in Crawford County, Arkansas. Their children were Kennie Young Neff (deceased), Maudie Young Neff, Lucille Young Glenn, Hazel Young Francis and Haskell Young.

He also fathered three living children from his first marriage, all in late 1880s and 90s, now living in Illinois, New Mexico and Florida.

In 1950, Dr. Young and his wife, Mary, moved to a small town near Victorville, California, where they lived until he died from injuries received in a car wreck. He is buried in Hall Cemetery, 10 miles north of Van Buren, Arkansas.

To the best of my knowledge, Doctor E. T. Young was the first person in our family to live in Washington County.

I, Haskell Henry Young, now live in Tulsa, Oklahoma. I am a retired aircraft mechanic. From July 3, 1940 until November 5, 1945, I served in the United States Army Air Corps.

F. F. Young

James Young was born August 15, 1750, in Down County, Ireland, and he died in Newberry County, South Carolina in 1802. He married Mary Thompson on August 15, 1770. She was born February 1, 1753 in Down County, Ireland. They came to America in 1773 or 1774. He helped build the Presbyterian Church at Newberry, South Carolina, in 1802, and was the second person buried in the Prosperity, South Carolina Cemetery. His wife, Mary, died in 1812.

James and Mary had 12 children. The sixth child was a Dr. James Young who was born May 3, 1785 in South Carolina and died in Hamilton County, Illinois in 1848.

Dr. James Young married Isobel Wells who was born in 1792 and died in 1883. She was the daughter of a missionary named Wells. Her father was a white man, and her mother was part Cherokee Indian by the name of Badger. Dr. James Young brought his wife, Isobel, and their nine children to Illinois in approximately 1829. They had three more sons after moving to Illinois.

Dr. James Young practiced medicine in and around Broughton, Hamilton County, Illinois until his death in 1848 of lung trouble brought on by the exposure and overwork of his profession. In Illinois he founded a settlement called "Young's Station" which consisted of his office, a store, and a church. The church was later moved to a site two miles away, and it is now called "Salem" Church.

Being a doctor and having a large family, the Youngs were quite prominent in the early history of southern Illinois. Isobel, in her old age, lived with her son Thompson, and his family until her death in 1883. Both James and Isobel were buried in Douglas Cemetery near Eldorado and Broughton, Illinois.

James and Isobel had 12 children. Thompson M. Young was the 11th child of Dr. James and Isobel Young. He was born August 4, 1833, in Hamilton County, Illinois, and he died February 4, 1906, in the Oak Grove Community, Washington County, Arkansas.

Thompson Young's occupation was that of a farmer after having been a captain in the Civil War. He moved from Illinois to Kansas in 1884 and to Washington County, Arkansas in 1902.

Thompson Young first married Ann C. Davis on January 21, 1856. She died August 15, 1858. They had no children.

Thompson Young married the second time to Sarah N. Haley on November 15, 1860. Sarah N. Haley was the daughter of Rose and Meeks Haley, and she died in 1886. She was buried in Lebanon Cemetery in Kansas. They had eight surviving children.

Francis Fair "Frank" Young was the fourth child of Thompson and Sarah Haley Young. He was born December 7, 1875, in Eldorado, Illinois. He died July 29, 1961, in the Oak Grove Community of Washington County, Arkansas and is buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery, Elm Springs, Arkansas. On June 29, 1902, Frank Young married Allie Frances Phillips who was born November 11, 1879, in the Oak Grove Community, Washington County, Arkansas. She was the daughter of Wilson and Nancy Caroline Terry Phillips. Allie died December 15, 1967 at Springdale, Arkansas. She is buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery, Elm Springs, Arkansas. Frank Young lived in Eldorado, Illinois, and Pretty Prairie, Kansas, before coming to the Oak Grove Community in 1901. His occupation was farming with the production of fruits being the central product.

Frank and Allie Phillips Young had four children, being Hazel Lucille, born July 1, 1903; Bernice Irene born October 31, 1905; James Ross, born December 14, 1907; and Floy Frances, born August 16, 1914.

Hazel Young, the first child of Frank and Allie Young, was born July 1, 1903 in the Oak Grove Community in Washington County, Arkansas. Upon finishing her education, she taught school in the Peaceful Valley and Harmon schools. As was the custom at the time, she boarded in the home of a local family, Grace Pearson, while teaching in the Harmon School.

On December 21, 1923 at the Elm Springs Methodist Church parsonage, Hazel Young married Harold Lee Crisler who was born September 16, 1897 in Lebanon, Indiana. Harold Crisler died December 3, 1969, and he is buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery, Elm Springs, Arkansas. He was a farmer.

Harold and Hazel Crisler lived in the Oak Grove Community for 12 years and then moved to Elm Springs where they lived for 30 years before moving back to the Young home place which Thompson Young, her grandfather, had purchased when he came to the Oak Grove Community, Washington County, Arkansas in 1901.

Harold and Hazel Young Crisler had five children they being Leonard Lee, born July 21, 1925 and died July 21, 1925; Carroll Leon, born September 18, 1926; Wayne Curtis, born October 29, 1929, and died June 1, 1980; Betty June, born March 1, 1932; and Doris Faye, born July 23, 1935.

Carroll Leon Crisler, the second child of Harold and Hazel Young Crisler, was born September 18, 1926 near Springdale, Arkansas in Washington County. On June 11, 1949 he married Barbara Jean Sawvel who was born February 16, 1929. Carroll and Barbara Crisler had two children they being Ross Wayne Crisler, born November 23, 1955 and Susan Michelle Crisler, born December 17, 1957.

Ross Wayne Crisler, the first child of Carroll and Barbara Crisler, married Laurie Welechawski on March 8, 1979. Susan Michelle Crisler married Bob Overton on October 22, 1977, and they had two children. Their children were Aaron Overton, born August 24, 1980 and Lauren Michelle Overton, born March 21, 1982.

Carroll later married Teresa "Tammy" Irwin on February 14, 1982. Teresa "Tammy" had three sons: Michael, Kenneth and Douglas Irwin.

Wayne Curtis Crisler, the third child of Harold and Hazel Young Crisler, was born October 29, 1929 near Springdale, Arkansas in Washington County. He married Margie Ruth Lawless Chism on December 31, 1955. Margie was born January 20, 1934. Wayne and Margie had two children. Wayne died June 1, 1980 and is buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery, Elm Springs, Arkansas.

Deborah Louise Chism Crisler born September 23, 1952 was the stepdaughter of Wayne. She legally changed her name to Crisler in 1968. She married Phil Fisher and had one daughter, Brandi Michelle Fisher, born August 9, 1978. Later, Deborah married Rueban Holman and had a son, Jacob Thomas Holman, born December 16, 1986.

David Wayne Crisler was the first child of Wayne and Margie Crisler. He was born February 24, 1957 at Springdale, Arkansas. On March 13, 1982 he married Kim Phillips, who was born on October 3, 1964. David and Kim had one child, Wayne Neal Crisler, born February 11, 1986.

Betty June Crisler was the fourth child of Harold and Hazel Young Crisler and was born March 1, 1932 near Springdale, Arkansas in Washington County. On April 10, 1951, she married Bobby Orville Burgess who was born August 5, 1931. Bobby and June Crisler Burgess had two children. Bobby died on January 23, 1977 in Modesto, California.

Teresa Len Burgess born September 8, 1954 was the first child of Bob and June Burgess. On October 14, 1972 she married Bruce Main, and they had one child, Stephen Main, born February 7, 1978 in Van Nuys, California.

Bruce Alan Burgess, born October 29, 1959 in Springdale, Arkansas was the second child of Bob and June Burgess. On May 29, 1983 he married Kay Woodard. She had a daughter, Tracy, who was born December 5, 1977. Bruce adopted Tracy in 1983.

Doris Fay Crisler, the fifth child of Harold and Hazel Young Crisler, was born July 23, 1935 near Springdale, Arkansas in Washington County. On August 6, 1954 she married Tommy Max Turentine who was born on November 29, 1934 in Childress, Texas. Tommy and Doris had two children.

Sherri Lea Turentine born May 30, 1956 in Springdale, Arkansas was the first child of Tommy and Doris Turentine. On October 20, 1979, Sherri married Frank Lee Atkins who was born September 9, 1951. They had one child, Jennifer Michelle Atkins, born December 8, 1980 in Springdale, Arkansas.

Tommy Max Turentine, Jr., born December 20, 1958 in Springdale, Arkansas was the second child of Tommy and Doris Turentine.

Bernice Irene Young, the second child of Frank and Allie Phillips Young, was born October 31, 1905 in the Oak Grove Community, Washington County.

After she completed her education, she taught school in the Oak Grove School for three years and Harmon school for two years. During the time she was teaching in the Harmon school, she boarded in the homes of Grace Pearson and John Davis.

On August 19, 1938 in Salt Lake City, Utah, Bernice married Harvey Jones, who was born August 19, 1900 in the Friendship Community in Washington County, Arkansas. In 1918 Harvey founded Jones Truck Lines in Springdale. In the years between 1918 and 1980, when Jones Truck Lines was sold, it grew to be the largest independently owned truck line in the United States.

Harvey and Bernice made their home in Springdale, and their contributions to the area are innumberable.

James Ross Young, the third child of Frank and Allie Phillips Young, was born December 14, 1907 in the Oak Grove Community, Washington County, Arkansas. He was a farmer. On October 20, 1934 he married Ina Nan Watson who was born October 19, 1911. Ross and Ina Watson Young had two children they being Joyce, born March 21, 1936 and Nancy Sue, born October 24, 1938.

On March 11, 1969 Ross died and is buried in the Elm Springs Cemetery, Elm Springs, Arkansas.

Joyce Ann Young, the first child of Ross and Ina Young, was born March 21, 1936 in the Oak Grove Community in Washington County, Arkansas. On March 13, 1959, Joyce married James Harold Thrash, born April 10, 1936 in Chunky, Mississippi. Joyce and Jim had three children.

Stephen James Thrash, the first child of James and Joyce Young Thrash, was born December 9, 1959 in Springdale, Arkansas. On July 31, 1982, he married Donna Hill, born November 7, 1962 in Mount Clemons, Michigan.

Gregory Harold Thrash, the second child of James and Joyce Young Thrash, was born September 26, 1962 in Springdale, Arkansas.

Timothy Young Thrash, the third child of James and Joyce Young Thrash, was born January 8, 1965 in Fort Worth, Texas.

Nancy Sue Young, the second child of Ross and Ina Young, was born October 24, 1938 in the Oak Grove Community in Washington County, Arkansas. On February 5, 1960, she married Lloyd Alan Curtis, born October 5, 1938 in Siloam Springs, Arkansas. Nancy and Alan had two children.

Jeffery Ross Curtis, the first child of Alan and Nancy Young Curtis, was born December 14, 1962 in Springdale, Arkansas.

Mark Alan Curtis, the second child of Alan and Nancy Young Curtis, born August 11, 1967 in Fayetteville, Arkansas.

Floy Frances Young, the fourth child of Frank and Allie Phillips Young, was born August 16, 1914 in the Oak Grove Community, Washington County, Arkansas. She married Wayne P. Gover who was born April 1911 in Springdale, Arkansas. Floy and Wayne had one child, James Woody Gover, born March 28, 1932. Wayne Gover died October 7, 1934 and is buried in Bluff Cemetery, Springdale, Arkansas. At that time Floy returned to school in Fayetteville. Upon finishing her education, she worked for Jones Truck Lines until she married Aubrey Johnson on October 9, 1938. James Woody Gover Johnson was adopted by Aubrey Johnson on January 1, 1950.

On February 13, 1980, Floy died and is buried in the Noel Cemetery, Noel, Missouri. On November 11, 1982, Aubrey died and is buried in the Noel Cemetery, Noel, Missouri.

William Young

The White River enters Washington County from the east, cutting a path through the Boston Mountains as it journeys westward. This beautiful, rugged countryside was probably cursed and deemed "God's Country" in the same breath by the hardy pioneers who first settled here. The river lent its name to a community of pioneering spirits - and White River Township was born. Two of these early settlers were William Young and Nancy Shields. Both were native Tennesseeans, William being born there in approximately 1833, and Nancy in approximately 1838. They were married in Washington County on September 2, 1858, making their home in White River Township. With this union began the Young family of Washington County, of which I am a proud descendant.

William and Nancy had six children - Samuel M., Richard Lafayette, Robert E., William T., George W. and Sarah E. Little family history exists concerning William and Nancy. We assume they were a farm family typical of those in the area during the 1800s. Two of their sons, Samuel and George, grew up and eventually made their way to Texas. My aunt, Pauline Young Gentry, remembers her "Uncle Sam" coming back to Washington County to visit when she was a girl, appearing at that time to be "quite prosperous." Photographs that she has seen of Sam and George show them to have been "very distinguished and affluent looking men."

But let us return to another child of William and Nancy - their second son, Richard Lafayette. Richard grew to manhood in the White River community, and on January 13, 1887, at the age of 22, he took a bride. She was 16 years old, Nancy Alice Maloy, the daughter of Thomas and Lucretia Thompson Maloy. The Maloys also lived in the White River area of Washington County. Tom Maloy met an untimely death sometime between 1870 and 1880 in McKinney, Texas. His widow, Lucretia, would remarry in 1889, to Henry "Stump" Ritter. Her grandchildren called her "Gammy", and in Lucretia's later years, she was known to all her relatives as simply, Gammy Ritter.

Richard and Alice Young were blessed with their first child, a son, on October 6, 1887. He was named Elbert Houston Young, and he was my grandfather. Soon after Elbert's birth, this new family of three would leave Arkansas, seeking prosperity in Texas. They settled near McKinney, Texas and three more children would be born to Richard and Alice here: Iva Emaline, James Thomas and Nellie B.

Sometime between 1894 and 1897, tragedy struck the Young family. Richard died, leaving young Alice with four children to raise in an unfamiliar place. She decided to move back to the hills of northwest Arkansas that she called home. Richard was buried in Roland, Texas. Before leaving the Lone Star State, Alice gave a shotgun to a man she knew there. In return for the gun, this man promised to erect a headstone in memory of her beloved husband, Richard Lafayette Young.

So the Youngs returned to Arkansas, settling near Alice's mother, Gammy Ritter in the vicinity of Wesley (Madison County). Alice remarried in 1897, to W. T. Jones. They had one son, George Dewey "Pete". Alice, or "Granny" Jones as she was known by all her descendants, lived the remainder of her days in Washington County. She died May 5, 1955 at the age of 85.

Elbert, or "Eb" Young, grew to manhood in the hills of Washington County near Elkins. A good horse was a must in those days, and Eb once remarked to his son Bruce, "I have ridden over every inch of these hills on horseback." In fact, young Eb used this means of transporation in a most important pursuit, as he rode over the hills toward Durham to court Miss Mary Ellen Robbins, the daughter of James "Tobe" and Jemima Robbins. On June 23, 1907, Elbert Houston Young and Mary Ellen Robbins took a horseback ride together to see a neighboring preacher, who married them while they sat on their horses. He pronounced them "man and wife" and they rode back home to begin their life together, a union that would span almost fifty years.

Eb was a farmer by trade, and the family moved several times within the Durham-Elkins-Baldwin area, settling each time where the farming was most promising. Eb was an active member of the community in Baldwin, serving on the school board there. He was also instrumental in the formation of the present day Baldwin Church of Christ, and held the position of elder to the congregation for many years. Together, Eb and Mary had seven children: Hazel Caldonia, Pauline Mae, Norman Allen, Robert Lewis, Loyd Wilson, Bruce Hubert and Douglas Samuel. Bruce Hubert Young, born August 12, 1921, is my father.

Bruce spent the majority of his childhood in the Baldwin Community. He has fond memories of growing up there - memories of such boyhood pursuits as hotly contested marble games ("I was one of the best marble shooters around"), evening get-togethers with neighboring families ("Several of us would get together and play Pitch"), and Hal Shofner's annual Halloween party. ("Hal would bring in corn shocks and pumpkins and decorate his whole yard. We bobbed for apples and played games. Hal really knew how to give a party.) Upon Bruce's completion of his early schooling in Baldwin, he attended University High School in Fayetteville, graduating in 1941. Soon after, Bruce volunteered to join the U. S. Army, seeing duty in Europe. Four of the five sons of Eb and Mary Ellen Young served their country in World War II, as many sons as Uncle Sam would allow to go from one family.

Bruce returned home from the war in 1945. He worked for a time at Rickett's Drug on the Fayetteville Square. When the Veterans Administration Hospital offered him a job in 1947, he accepted, and would continue working there until his retirement in 1977 - 30 years of dedicated service.

Soon after Bruce's return from the service, he began dating an attractive young lady from the Combs Chapel community just west of Baldwin. Her name was Ruth Jean Combs, the daughter of Charles Cantrell and Elizabeth Dean Thompson Combs. The Combs were natives of Kentucky, and descendants of Nathan Combs, a prominent citizen of early Washington County. Ruth Jean moved with her family from her birthplace of Mount Sterling, Kentucky, to Fayetteville in 1929.

After a long engagement, Bruce Hubert Young and Ruth Jean Combs were married on February 28, 1947. They would become the proud parents of three children: Lucinda Alice, Susan Charlene and Roger Bruce. While Ruth's first and foremost occupation was that of wife and mother, she also helped support the family by working as a secretary for the Washington County Health Nurse, then at Kearney's Company, Baldwin Piano Company and, lastly, as a cook for the Fayetteville Public School System. Ruth Combs Young, my mother, died September 20, 1975. Honest, hard working and full of love devotion for her family, she was truly the finest woman I have ever known.

And so, we return to the present. Today in Washington County, my father Bruce, my brother Roger, and I all reside in Fayetteville. (Sadly, my sister Lucinda, or "Cindy", died at the age of seven in 1959). I am proud to be a native of Washington County, proud of my heritage, proud to be a Young. To my father, Bruce, a Young by birth, and to my mother, Ruth, a Young by virtue of her love for my father, I lovingly dedicate this family history.

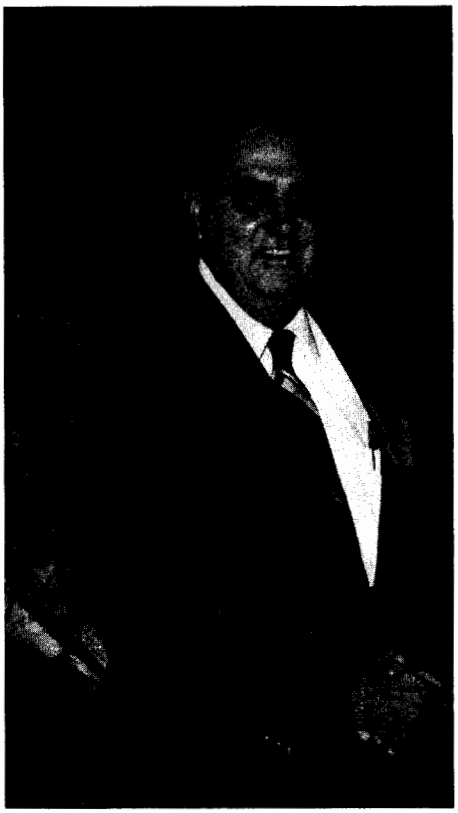
Lee Zachary

Lee Zachary was born in El Dorado, Arkansas on February 22, 1922, the son of Lea Zachary, who was from New Orleans, Louisiana. He graduated from Holy Redeemer School in eighth grade and from El Dorado High School in 12th grade.



Lee Zachary

He entered the Air Force in January 1943. He received his commission as a Second Lieutenant Flying Officer at Morefield Mission, Texas on December 5, 1943. He served overseas in the China-Burma Indian Theatre as a P-51 Pilot, as a Flying Tiger in the 529th Fighter Squadron, the 315th Air Wing of the 14 Air Force under General Clarence Shinall.

During his tour of duty he was stationed in Karachi, India; Chengtu, China; and Sian and Shanghai, China. He completed 40 combat missions as a Fighter Pilot and received the Air Medal as well as the Distinguished Flying Cross. He received his Honorable Discharge from the Air Force in 1946 as a Captain. He then returned to work in El Dorado with his uncles, Happy and Ike Alpuente, who owned the El Dorado Printing and Stationery Company and the Southern Folder and Index Company. He headed the Greater El Dorado Commission, a local industrial development group from 1955 to 1967.

Madelene Zachary was born in Coldwater, Michigan in 1925. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. Milo D. Jones. She graduated from the University of Michigan with her Bachelor's Degree in Music and later attended Northwest State University in Monroe, Louisiana, where she received her Master's in Music.

The Zacharys moved to Springdale in December of 1967 with their children, Pamela Jean (1950) and Richard Lee (1957) when Lee became Chamber of Commerce Manager and Executive Vice President. They attend St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Springdale where Madelene was former Choir Director. She also served as Assistant Music Professor at the University of Arkansas from 1967 to 1980. She started the Class Music Department as well as being an instructor of Music History and Music Theory.

Their first home in Springdale was at 1113 Cheyenne Trail from 1967-1977. They then moved to 201 Lakeview Drive and then again to 1715 Ridgeview Drive in 1986 where they are currently residing.

Lee Zachary is a member of the Kiwanis Club, a Past President of the Arkansas Jaycees, Past National President of Theta Kappa Omega Fraternity, Honorary Director of the Arts Center of the Ozarks and Treasurer of the Association of Arkansas Film Commissions. During his 18 years on the Arkansas Parks and Tourism Commission, he held the offices of Vice Chairman and Chairman. He is a member of the Springdale Industrial Committee and is Director of the Miss Rodeo America Committee and is in charge of the overall program.

Madelene Zachary is a member of SAI Sorority, and a judge of the National Association of Piano Guilds. She is a past Director of Lifestyles, Inc., and a former Director of the Inspiration Fine Arts Colony of Eureka Springs. She is currently Office Manager and Bookkeeper of the Miss Rodeo America Committee.

Their oldest daughter, Pam is married to Frank Stewart and lives in Broken Arrow, Oklahoma where she is employed as Director of Children's Education Department and Assistant Choir Director of the Christ United Methodist Church in Tulsa. She has two children: Danny Thompson, 18 who attends the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, and Chris Thompson, 14, who attends Junior High School in Tulsa.

Richard is living in Phoenix, Arizona, working for Bobby McGee's Restaurant Corporation as Entertainment Director. He is a graduate of the University of Arkansas.

Robert G. Winn

Introduction

Robert George Winn, fourth and youngest child of George Albright Winn and Mary Stockburger Winn, was born in Schaberg (then Porter), Crawford County, Arkansas, March 17, 1903. His older siblings - Omer Addison, Martha Ann, and Lyda - were all born in Washington County, near West Fork. In 1905 the family moved from Porter to Winslow. George was the bank's only cashier during that institution's 24-year operation. Although the depression of the 1930s forced liquidation, it is believed to be the only bank in Arkansas that paid its depositors one hundred cents on the dollar. That hectic financial period was a factor which contributed to the death of George A. Winn in 1932.

All the Winn children attended the Winslow public school. Before finishing high school, Robert passed a required teacher's examination and taught three terms in county schools. He graduated from the University High School (Peabody) at the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville in 1923.

In 1928 Winn graduated from Asbury college, a Methodist college in Kentucky, with the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Oratory degrees. The next year he taught in Lydia Paterson Institute in El Paso, Texas, and the following year at Ferrum Institute, a mission school for mountain youth in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia.

In 1930 he was granted a teaching fellowship at the University of Florida and received a Master's degree in 1931. After teaching English for three years at the College of the Ozarks in Clarksville, Arkansas, he was granted another teaching fellowship, this time at the University of Southern California, where he continued work toward his Ph. D. He also taught in California public schools and did personnel work for the State of California.

When World War II began, he volunteered and was assigned to the reclassifying of Army Air Corps personnel. Very soon he was given an honorable "For the Convenience of the Government" discharge to pursue the same work for the War Manpower Commission. After the war he was a Veterans's Representative and Employment Counselor for the State of California.

In 1970 Winn returned to Arkansas and very soon began to write for the Washington County Observer. His "Recollections" and "This 'N' That" provided much history that needed to be recorded. His informative and often amusing articles appeared in other newspapers, including the Northwest Arkansas Times, and in the Washington County Historical Society's quarterly Flashback.

Winn's first three books, published by the Hutcheson Press, are no longer available. They were Steel Rails and Cross-Cut Ties, Old Rails and Branch Lines, and Winslow: Resort in the Hills. His last four books, published by the Washington County Historical Society, include Two Starrs-Belle, Bandit Queen, and Pearl, Riverfront Madam; Winslow, Top of the Ozarks; The Cow That Went to Church and Other Folklore; Civil War in the Ozarks, Personal Glimpses; and Railroads of Northwest Arkansas, which was the author's contribution to the state's sesquicentennial celebration in 1986.

In 1987 Bob Besom, Director of the Shiloh Museum, nominated Winn for an award from the American Association for State and Local History. The association, headquartered in Nashville, Tennessee, includes all 50 states plus Canada. Winn was honored with a Certificate of Commendation, an individual achievement award for his outstanding contributions to regional history.

On May 6, 1983, Winn's home town of Winslow presented him with a bronze plaque stating "Robert G. Winn: The community of Winslow expresses appreciation for your dedication in preserving our History." During the ceremonies in which the plaque was presented by State Representative Bill Ramsey of Prairie Grove the honoree received two standing ovations.

On May 23, 1933, Robert G. Winn married Bernice Withers of Brightwater, Benton County, in the Methodist Church, Gravette, Arkansas. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend Russell Harding, pastor of the Gravette church and a close friend of the groom. Bernice is now deceased. The couple had one daughter, Betty Ann Winn (Naranjo). There are three grandsons and four great grandchildren. All live in southern California.

Robert G. Winn lives in Fayetteville, where he continues to write, lecture, and maintain voluminous correspondence with people from all corners of the United States who make inquiries regarding local history of Northwest Arkansas.

This section of the History of Washington County contains a sampling of Winn's articles. However, the Washington County Observer maintains a complete file of its issues for research use. In addition, Winn's articles may be found in files of the Washington County Historical Society, the Fayetteville Public Library, and the Shiloh Museum.

Barefoot Time

Blessings on thee, little man
Barefoot boy, with cheeks of tan
Outward sunshine, inward joy
Blessings on thee, barefoot boy
Ah that thou couldst know thy joy
Ere it passes, barefoot boy

John Greenleaf Whittier

When the first balmy days of April warm the blood and we sniff the fragrance of early flowers and tread upon the young grass, we are carried back to the springtime of our youth when confining shoes were shed along with those restricting "long johns" that all children had to wear throughout the cold winter months. Weeks before parental consent was granted, pleas began for permission to shed those cumbersome shoes and go barefooted. Consent was first given to remove the shoes, but not the stockings; when this wedge was made in the objection to summer freedom, the battle was won. Quickly shoes were shed and young boys, and girls, rushed forth, knowing full well that the stockings also would be shed as soon as we were out of sight of maternal watchfulness. After a few days of this deceptive pretense, permission was granted and both shoes and stockings were cast aside to be forgotten until the chill of next November made their protective warmth welcome.

How sensitive could those toughened soles become after only a few short months of confinement. The soft, tender grass was cooling and soothing to feet confined all winter - but gravel and rough places caused winces of discomfort at first. In an amazingly short time, however, the soles were tough as leather and we could race over the roughest ground without a flinch of pain. Not all was smooth walking or running, however. Soon toes were stubbed and rare was the sight of a boy who did not have at least one toe on each foot tied with a cotton bandage. Band-aids and adhesives were unknown. When a toenail was loosened or the toe otherwise injured enough for blood to flow, Mother washed off the grimy accumulation of the morning, tore a strip of clean white cotton cloth from an old sheet, wrapped the injured toe, and ripped the end of the rag to make a tie that hopefully would keep the bandage in place the rest of the day.

Bandaged toes became a badge of achievement of some sort; just what this accomplishment was supposed to signify we do not remember these many years later, but boys who sported many bandaged toes were regarded with a sort of envious awe. One lad, we recall, apparently regarded his bandaged toe as some sort of romantic symbol. His overture to the pigtailed lassie of his choice was to ask if she would like to see his sore toe. The budding beauty failed to appreciate the romantic intention of this approach; she haughtily refused to view the afflicted member, much to the disappointment of the aspiring Romeo.

Tough as the soles of feet became there were occasions of real catastrophe and often severe and serious suffering. A stonebruise was not to be taken lightly. Those bruises on the bottom of the foot caused by impact against a stone or other rough object could cause real suffering, at times severe enough to require lancing. There were times when a rusty nail or thorn could penetrate the foot and lead to serious consequences. We recall, still with sickening horror, the sight of one boy south of West Fork who was running through the woods where those long thorned locust trees abound. One of the long thorns penetrated deep into his heel. We can still mentally see the poor chap lying on the front porch of his home whimpering in an attempt to keep from crying - as much because of the anticipated pain that was to come as at that caused by the thorn. Beside him sat his father, slowly and carefully honing his sharp pointed pocket knife with which to cut out the thorn. We left the scene before this agonizing operation was performed. The thorn had to be removed and no hospitals nor doctors were available.

All the hazards and disadvantages were far outweighed by the sheer delight of freedom of bare feet kicking up the dust of the road, wiggling toes in soft mud, or scampering over the smooth, green grass. What delights in wading in the shallow stream - and some not so shallow - in pursuit of the crafty crawdads and minnows for fish bait - or finding a damp sandbank beside the stream and simply treading up and down in the soft ooze, going deeper with each tread until the feet and legs were immersed up to the knees - with spatters of mud all over the rest of the body and clothes; frequently the momentary pleasures thus derived were costly when Mother beheld the spectacle.

There was one hazard that unfortunately no longer exists. We say unfortunately because of the regret that the once towering chinquapin trees no longer grace our forests and in autumn drop their delicious nuts to fill the pockets of boys who used them as offerings to attract the damsel of their choice - or as a form of barter to exchange all sorts of trinkets at school. However, the hazard that accompanied the gathering of these nuts was that of stepping on the burrs that encased the nuts and fell to the ground along with the delicacies. Bare feet must move cautiously beneath these denizens of the forest; for every tempting chinquapin there was a cluster of burrs - needles sharp as any cactus spine, and so thick and tiny that it seemed hundreds of them could penetrate an inch of careless foot that stepped on a burr.

Children who attended the first school built in Winslow endured a definite hazard from chinquapin burrs. A large tree grew at the northwest corner of the building. In autumn when the nuts fell, each recess children rushed to the tree to look for any nuts that might have fallen during the past hour when school was in session. In their eagerness to beat their classmates to the prize many a youth became careless of his step, which resulted in a yelp of pain, and withdrawal from the race, while he laboriously removed the tiny spines. In the game of "Annie-over" or "ante-over" many were the feet that limped the last yards of the race from one side of the building to the other.

Regardless of how enjoyable the day of childhood freedom might be, romping over the fields, through the woods, and wading in the cool brook, each night brought the ordeal of washing the feet before bedtime. Who doesn't remember that nightly admonition: "Time to wash your feet and get ready for bed"? Youngsters might pretend to forget and sneak into bed without first going through this unpleasant procedure - but mother never forgot - and woe unto the boy who managed to get into bed without first observing the ritual.

Feet must be washed, often in water that would have felt cooling and delightful when waded in as it flowed over the pebbles in the spring branch, now seemed icy and chilling and frequently evoked howls of pretended anguish. None of the protests brought any sympathy from what seemed the cold heart of the mother who calmy insisted that the foot washing continue.

Now the fad of going barefoot seems to have passed from the lives of children eager to be free from winter confines to mature young people many who seem to delight in the freedom of barefootedness. How many staid and dignified older people who pretend to scorn these young people really, deep down, envy them the freedom of that soothing contact with mother earth from which all have sprung.

History of Woolsey

We are indebted to Mr. Hugh Pitkin of Brownsville, Texas, for most of the information in this article, and to Mr. Elbert Robinson of West Fork for the loan of the accompanying pictures. Both are Woolsey descendants.

Some three miles south of West Fork along Highway 71 a large oak tree stands as a lone sentinel over a small graveyard between the highway and the creek. No sign indicates that this is the Woolsey Cemetery. A dirt road leads at a lower level almost parallel to the highway a short distance back to the north, and makes a sharp left turn to the old steel bridge across the West Fork of White River; west along a shady lane and across the Frisco railroad tracks stands a forlorn shell of a stone store building. Nothing here indicates to the stranger that this is the site of what was at the turn of the century, the thriving community of Woolsey. The present structure was not the first store to be known as Woolsey. In 1860 the Woolsey family owned a store at the place where this road forks on the west side of the valley. The right fork known as the Woolsey Road takes the traveler back to West Fork. The left fork leads south and is known as Winn Road, following the creek by that name.

The first Woolsey family, for whom the community was named, arrived in southern Washington County, Arkansas, from Indiana in the year 1820 - one year after Arkansas Territory was established. They settled near what is now Farmington. The present Farmington Cemetery was originally called the Woolsey Cemetery, leading to the speculation that the first Woolseys were buried there. Just when they moved from Farmington to the town that later was to bear their name is not known. The first records show that in 1860 they owned all the land across the entire valley at Woolsey from the hill on the west to the river on the east, and for some distance up and down the river bottom. At that time they lived in a double log house, typical of the time - with a large room on either side of the "dog-trot", or wide open hall between the two rooms. In this building the family lived and operated the first general store in the community. Until the time that the railroad came through, the place was known simply as Woolsey's Store.

The owner of the store also had the Stage Stand. This was where tickets for the stage were sold. It was a stage stop, but not a place where accommodations were offered. The overnight stage stop was a few miles farther north at the home of first John, and later Daniel Karnes. At the Karnes place food was served, overnight accommodations offered and stage horses changed; tired horses remaining to rest until the next stage going the opposite direction; fresh horses replaced them for the next lap of the journey. At the Woolsey store travelers boarding the stage bought tickets. Travel was leisurely and when the stop was made at the Stand, all passengers who desired liquid refreshment found an ample supply of home distilled whiskey. It was not unusual for the stage to stop so long that travelers imbibed enough to become "tipsy" and occasional excitement resulted in the form of fisticuffs or gun play.

Beside the road from the Woolsey store at the base of the hill on the west side of the valley to the river on the east was a race track. Here local enthusiasts raced their horses, placed bets against each other and partook freely of the whiskey offered for sale at the store.

In 1880 when the railroad was completed along this stretch of the Frisco line, and a flag station was established, the name Woolsey was appropriately given to the stop. The post office was not established here until the 1890s. Jacob Pickens who was appointed postmaster by the U. S. Government was informed that the name Woolsey could not be given to the post office because an office by that name was already located elsewhere in the state. Mr. Pickens was in a quandary as to what to call the new post office. He solved his dilemma simply by stating that the next man who walked through the door would have the honor of having the post office called by his name. E. P. Pitkins was the first man to enter; thus the name Pitkin was given to the post office while the railway station remained Woolsey. Sometime in the 1920s the postmaster at that time, a Mr. Thomas, received notice that the other Woolsey post office in the state had been discontinued and that Pitkin could now become officially Woolsey. A petition was necessary with sufficient names of the patrons to make the change. Hugh Pitkin who supplied most of the information for this article was the first to sign for the change. After the mail route from Winslow came down Winn Creek, crossed the White River at Woolsey post office was discontinued. With people moving away from the nearby farms, business at the store declined until it was no longer profitable to operate and a few years later, it, too, was closed.

With nobody in residence to watch the building, vandals have broken all the windows, including the thick plate glass in front, stripped most of the knotty pine paneling from the interior and wrought destruction on the place in general. It stands a sad reminder of the thriving place that once was Woolsey.

In 1900 Woolsey thrived with two stores and a blacksmith shop. The second store was in operation only a short time. It stood on land leased from Henry Karnes across the road from the present building. It was owned by A. N. Cole and operated by his brother-in-law Oscar Land and his wife Nellie who lived in the back of the store. At the time the two stores were in business Woolsey was the center of much shipping of fruit and berries. Wild huckleberries were abundant and were either sold locally or shipped to distant markets. At one time a canning factory was in operation at Woolsey - to the north of the store and beside the railroad tracks. One season the factory canned an entire freight car of huckleberries. Timber was by far the biggest money product sold. In 1900 as many as seventy wagons at a time would be backed up waiting to unload. At one period the buyer shipped out forty cars of fence posts in one month.

The depot at Woolsey was not built when the railroad first went through. It was not until the 1900s that the volume of freight and express and passenger needs justified erecting the station. It never contained a telegraph office and the station itself did not remain many years. Its only agent was Lee Pitkin. It was open only during daylight hours; passenger trains must be flagged. While the station was there a signal light indicated to the engineer that a passenger wished to board the train. Before and after the station was in operation, people wanting to board the train would stand near the track and wave the engineer to stop. It appears inconceivable now that at one time a fill on the east side of the railroad just opposite the dilapidated stone building was wide enough to accommodate the depot and a wide platform for loading and unloading; but such was the case. Apparently after the station was torn down the bank was graded to its present contour.

The stone building now falling into decay was not the original one on this site. The previous one, constructed of wood, was destroyed by fire in the 1930s or 40s. Mr. Bill Males was owner at the time of the fire which occurred at night. Almost nothing was salvaged. Mr. Males did not reopen the store. The present structure was erected by Mr. Mac Morton of Fayetteville who owned the canning factory at Woolsey at the time.

When William McKinley was re-elected for his second term as U. S. President in 1900, his victory was celebrated by the Republican blacksmith and storekeeper at Woolsey, Julius Fitts and Jack (Clyde) Karnes respectively. The blacksmith and storekeeper and other Republicans celebrated by turning one blacksmith anvil upside down and filling the square hollow on the bottom with gunpowder, then placing another anvil upright on top. From a safe distance a light was put on the end of a cane fishing pole and the powder ignited. It exploded with a bang equal to the roar of a cannon, and throwing the anvil into the air. Although Mr. Karnes was a staunch Republican, his wife Amanda, the daughter of J. M. Langston, was just as staunch a Democrat. She stoutly refused to come out of the building or to take any part in the celebration.

Today the only place where the name Woolsey appears to indicate the community is on the concrete block community building a short distance south on Winn Road. This house is of fairly recent construction. The devastating tornado that roared off the mountain from Blackburn on the night of May 5, 1960 destroyed the previous clapboard building that had served as the one room Woolsey school before consolidation.

Woolsey, like so many other small communities across the land, has all but disappeared. Its past existence is only a fading memory in the minds of the few people remaining who can recall the time when such centers of activity dotted the countryside.

Winslow's Last Horse Thieves

Horse thief! The very term sent shivers of dread, derision, and quick retribution against those caught for committing the crime. In the last century when pioneers had to look to their own consciences and the help of their neighbors for law enforcement, the horse thief met with fast and severe punishment. The evidence of catching him riding or leading the horse was enough to convict him. No further trial was considered necessary. With his hands tied behind him, the noose around his neck, he was seated upon the mount that he had stolen, the rope tied around a limb of a tree, the horse led from under him and he was left hanging - and that put an end to the activities of that particular thief.

This severe, quickly meted punishment stopped the activity of that particular criminal, but not the general practice of thievery. Settlers in the Arkansas counties along the border of Indian Territory were especially vulnerable. Before 1907 when Oklahoma was admitted to the Union, laws administered by United States Marshals in what was then Indian Territory, were somewhat lax, especially about the matter of tracking down horse thieves who had crossed the border from Arkansas. Many of the thieves and the marshals themselves were Indians who cooperated with each other more than with officials of the neighboring state. The ruggedness of the terrain and sparcity of settlements also contributed to the facility with which horses could be ridden across the border. In the southern part of Washington County especially roads were few and settlement sparse. West and south from Winslow the roads led into deep canyons and often became little more than trails leading through the forest to the Indian Territory line no more than twenty miles away. Horse thieves frequently used this route of escape. Once across the border into the rugged mountains of the territory they were safe and found no difficulty disposing of their animals at a good price.

Even after Oklahoma became a state and the law was administered through the courts instead of by vigilantes the thieving continued for a short time.

According to reports obtainable the last horse thieves who attempted to reach Oklahoma via the Winslow route were in 1911. On an autumn evening of that year, Mr. Jim Parker, a prosperous farmer living on the road between Winslow and Sunset to the east, was approaching home from gathering his corn in the nearby fields when he overtook two young men walking toward his house. As was the custom he asked them to ride. According to their account, they were brothers who had been working in the cotton fields to the south and were trying to return to their home in Missouri. They claimed that they had become lost and did not know exactly where they were - thus accounting for the fact that they were not traveling the most direct route toward their destination. According to hill custom the two men were invited to partake of food and to spend the night at the Parker house. They obligingly assisted with the evening chores, during which time they turned the conversation, seemingly innocent at the time, to questions as to roads leading to Oklahoma, density of population, presence of law officers along the way, etc. Mr. Parker recalled all this later, but at the time it appeared only idle talk.

As was customary all retired early - and arose early. Mr. Parker was up before daylight and went to the barn to do his chores. The first indication that all was not as it should be was when he saw that the barnlot gate was open. His valuable mules were not in the lot. He first wondered how the gate could have been left unfastened, thinking that one of his visitors had carelessly left it open, thus permitting the mules to leave. He figured that the animals would not wander far and that he could find them after daylight. He went on about his work and returned to the house where he found his wife preparing breakfast. The door to the visitors' room was still closed. After receiving no answer to his repeated knocks to call the men to breakfast, he opened the door and to his dismay saw that they had not occupied the bed. The room had an outside door which made it easy for the men to slip out quietly without disturbing their hosts.

The fact that they had not slept in the bed indicated that they had a good start ahead of any pursuers - probably eight hours. It was now light enough to see the tracks in the dust and discover which way the thieves had started. Common judgement told the farmer that most likely the course would be toward the Oklahoma border. The tracks verified this theory. They were headed toward Winslow which point they would pass before daylight without likelihood of being seen. From there the trail would lead south and west down Blackburn Creek to Lee's Creek and directly across the Oklahoma line.

Doubtless the thieves would have made their escape without difficulty had they not overlooked one fact. The Winslow Telephone Company had been organized in 1908, only three years before this incident. Lines had been strung for miles in all directions out of Winslow. Mr. Parker had one of the new telephones. Lines had also been strung to the west and along Blackburn Creek which at that time was thickly inhabited as any valley in the area. A farmer far down the creek, near the junction of Blackburn and Lee's Creeks also had a phone. At seven o'clock when the telephone office was opened. Mr. Parker was on the line. Through the central office in Winslow news of the theft was phoned to all outlying farms and communities, advising people to be on the lookout for two young men - both riding one mule and leading a second.

This last fact was a point which was helpful in recognizing the thieves. Unknown to the young men, one of Mr. Parker's mules could not be ridden. He was a good worker when hitched to the wagon or a plow, but he would not tolerate a rider on his back. That the young men had attempted to mount the animal was apparent from the disturbed dust in the barnlot. One of the men obviously had been thrown when he attempted to mount the mule. Realizing that they could not escape riding both mules, they had both mounted one and led the second animal. This impeded their progress to some extent.

The farmer near the junction of Blackburn and Lee's Creek was the last one connected to the Winslow lines. Had the thieves padded this farm without detection they would have been safe. As soon as this farmer heard the news over the phone he quickly examined the dust in the road that passed his house. The absence of tracks indicated to him that the thieves had not come by. Information that this road was being used was broadcast. The head start they had would prevent their being overtaken; the only chance was to head them off. When the farmer saw that the men had not yet passed his place, he removed his shotgun from its rack, took up a station near the road and waited. He did not have to wait long. Very soon the two men appeared, both riding the one mule and leading the second. When confronted by the muzzle of a doublebarreled shotgun in the hands of a very determined looking farmer, they surrendered without any resistance. While the farmer's equally determined looking wife held the gun on them, the farmer securely bound the thieves, hand and foot; then phoned the authorities in Winslow that the men had been captured and were being held for the authorities.

News spread quickly. All along the route curious people watched and waited for the return of the two culprits. Whether they expected to see men who look extremely different from their neighbors is difficult to say. Late in the afternoon the watchers were rewarded by seeing the authorities come by with the captives, bound with their hands behind them, and their feet securely tied beneath the belly of the one mule which they still rode. They dismounted and were held on the porch of the J. F. Black Hardware Store while Mr. Parker identified the mules as being his, and the two men as being those who had been at his house the evening before. Discussion followed as to whether to take them to jail in Fayetteville that night or hold them in the local calaboose until the morning train. It was decided to hold them over until morning. During all this time one of the young men assumed a very devil-may-care air, head held high, and whistling defiantly. The other was more contrite and stood with head bowed in shame. They were locked in the tiny calaboose, a wooden block structure no more than six feet square, without any sanitary facilities, no bunks, nor water; the only ventilation was from two small barred windows high above the men's head. The men had not eaten since the good meal they had enjoyed at Mrs. Parker's table the night before; nor were they fed anything before they were locked in the calaboose. The season was late autumn and the night was chilly. Sitting in that narrow place of confinement, or lying on the dirt floor, no cover to keep them warm, they had time to reflect upon their crime and the possible punishment before them. When they were removed from this dreary place in the morning, the defiant one had lost his bravado; both stood very humble and contrite, shivering in the morning air while they waited - still without food - to be taken to the jail in Fayetteville where they would be arraigned on the charge of horse stealing.

Ozark Weather

Recent viewers of TV commercials have beheld the smiling face of a motherly looking woman who calls herself "Mother Nature". When the idea for "Ozark Weather" began to take shape some term of family relationship was sought. Mother? Sister? Cousin? None of these seemed appropriate. Who would want to admit kinship with such a capricious witch as the weather. That was it. She is a witch, capable of powers far beyond the reach of mortal man to imagine. In her benign moods of springtime when she garlands the world in fragrant flowers no terms are too endearing for her; when she behaves as she has during this December no invectives are too strong to hurl against her. She is, indeed a witch capable of appearing as a sweet and innocent virgin one day and then suddenly changing into a hideous hag.

How could she appear more beautiful than she has in recent days bedecked in the beauty of sparkling ice on every twig and shrub; when the sun shone upon this breathtaking scene one wanted only to gaze upon it - but, ah just step outside the warm room and try to touch that fragile beauty. One foot on the slippery glaze underfoot and the ice imps yank your feet right out from under you and down you sprawl; something likely would be broken and it would not be the ice. At that point the words of adoration change to invectives while the weather imps laugh in derision. In such sieges as this the witch seems to take special delight in weighing down power lines to the breaking point, tearing limbs from trees and dropping them across the roads to impede the progress of any traveller who has not already been shoved into a ditch by the road devils who push his car about on the ice. Indiscriminately she pops the lines, leaving whole areas without electricity, caring not whether it be the home of the humble or the mighty, or a hospital where the loss of power causes untold suffering.

Not content to cover the trees with bright and shining jewels, she next spreads a glistening white blanket of snow over the ice to further complicate the problem of transportation. The deceitful witch next confuses everybody by removing all the gray clouds and painting the sky a perfect blue and setting a golden sun above. The snow soon will melt - speculate the people, but the weather slyly keeps the temperature well below the freezing mark so that the bright sun is only a delusion and the blanket of white snow and the glittering ice continues to cover the mountains. Such a caprice would not be so surprising nor disconcerting if she pulled the trick in the midst of winter, but nobody remembers her ever before having done such a thing so early as December and for such an extended time.

Such a trick is not new; only the time of year is a little early. Let us recall a few of her pranks. The first is the winter of 1907. She was not content to let the snow fall quietly to earth and lie evenly upon the ground. Assisted by the little wind demons from the north, the snow was blown and piled into strange drifts. On one side of the house the ground might be almost bare while on the other side around the corner, it might be piled high above the window tops. Drifts covered the fences; the road from the top of West Mountain at Winslow all the way to the end of what was then called Hysell Lane to the first curve on the Devil's Den Road was completely blocked; not even horses or wagons could get through. Every house was isolated. More than a month went by before the weather relented and let the snow melt.

On January 18, 1930, she not only covered the mountains under a sheath of snow but added more suffering by plunging the temperature to a record 20 degrees below zero. Although the sun shone that day it did not stay out long. On the 20th, the snow began falling again early in the morning and continued all day, adding several more inches to what was already on the ground. The cold and snow continued throughout the month and on January 24th was an indirect contributor to the cause of the fire that destroyed the Summit Hotel at Winslow. (The fire started when an overheated stove exploded). While the cold was an indirect cause of the blaze, the several inches of snow on the roofs of nearby cottages prevented their burning.

Snow in January can be tolerated without too much complaint, but the weather went on a rampage late in the spring of 1933 and presented the Ozarks with a snow that is still a topic of conservation. A diary of that year records: Friday, April 14. "Rain, snow, sleet! Such a combination - and continued all day." Saturday, April 15: "The world was white - everything covered with snow. A cherry tree in the back yard was in full bloom and bent to the ground. Maple trees almost in full leaf were broken with the weight of the snow. Eleven inches covered the ground the day before Easter! The weather bureau reported the heaviest snow on record - not excepting the time of year. Electric light and telephone communications were disrupted by the breaking of wires. Rain and snow continued steadily all day. The temperature did not drop below freezing and the fruit crop was not damaged, except by the breaking limbs."

Sunday, April 16: "Although the rain, sleet, and snow continued practically all night Saturday, Easter morning cleared and by late afternoon almost all the snow had melted."

Monday, April 17: "— a typical spring day after the record breaking intrusion of winter."

Weather was not through with her whimsical behavior that spring. People around Winslow had smugly and naively maintained that because of the extremely rugged terrain tornadoes would be "broken up" before they could do any damage. As if to disprove this contention the weather produced evidence that she could do whatever her mood dictated. On the night of May 12, 1933, in the midst of three days of downpour, she swooped down with a tornado on the spot where the Church of Christ is now located. The barn standing there was completely demolished, the surrounding picket fence was flattened, and other nearby small buildings destroyed. No damage was done to any of the surrounding area. A year later a sheet of tin from the roof of the barn was found in a treetop several miles out on a mountain off the Sunset Road. As further proof of her powers the weather sent one of her imps into the nearby residence - did no damage but picked up the matches from a box on a shelf in a bedroom and scattered them through the living room and around a corner into the room beyond.

Nobody can foretell what form her pranks will take as indicated by the tornadoes that rip over the mountains every year. Two of the worst in recent times have been the one that did so much damage at Blackburn on the night of May 5, 1960, and another that roared through the Springdale area on the night of June 11, 1970.

No rain fell during the day of May 5, 1960, but heavy clouds shrouded the sky. Late in the afternoon a Siloam Springs woman remarked that the clouds looked "like a tornado or a bad storm." Little did she realize the accuracy of her prediction, and that the night would bring the most devastating tornado ever experienced at Wilberton, Oklahoma; Blackburn, Arkansas, and along the White River between West Fork and Woolsey. It crossed the river at the bluffs on the east side of the highway. It twisted the tops from the trees along the river and on the top of the bluff. From there it did a hit and miss dance toward Elkins. The greatest damage was done in Oklahoma and around Blackburn.

This tornado was accompanied by torrential rain. Fayetteville received more than five inches in a single downpour. The headwaters of the West Fork were higher than they had ever been known to rise. The Illinois that drains almost all the western part of Washington County rose until it filled the entire valley from hill to hill where the two bridges cross Highway 16 between Fayetteville and Siloam Springs. The approaches to the old bridge near Savoy were under water. This tornado was accompanied by heavy thunder and a constant display of lightning. The force of the wind created a roaring that was heard over the entire county.

The devastating Springdale tornado on the night of June 11, 1970, followed much the same pattern. A diary of that date recorded:

June 11, 1970: "The wind blew a gale all day. Only a few sprinkles of rain fell before bedtime. During the night the wind blew, thunder shook the house; lightning illuminated the clouds all night."

Friday, June 12: "The first news reported a devastating tornado that had struck Springdale at 10:20 last night. All phone connections to that city were severed; National Guardsmen were on duty in the stricken area and helping search for the dead and injured. Reports varied but apparently only one person had been killed outright and forty or more injured. Property damage was estimated to be in the millions. Worst hit was the Elmdale Shopping Center and apartment complex. Damage was reported at Lincoln, Rhea's Mill where the Methodist Church was demolished, Wheeler, Savoy, Harmon and east Springdale in the Hickory Creek vicinity."

The list of whimsical performances of this unpredictable witch, the weather, is endless - lightning - hail - floods - and when she behaves in this manner words are inadequate to express man's helpless anger at her behavior. Yet, in the balmy springtime when she permits the warm sun to shine; the new grass is green and tender; the entire region is covered with that misty green veil of budding trees; the mountains are dotted with the pattern of white dogwood and the magenta of the redbud, and the air is fragrant with the blossoms of wild roses and honeysuckle all her varieties are forgiven and the love affair between the weather and the human race starts all over again.

The YMCA At Winslow

The early part of the year 1912 saw most of the world at peace; the guns of World War I had not yet echoed across Europe, bringing an end to the general tranquility that had marked the period after the unification of Germany in 1871. The few minor conflicts throughout the world were of short duration and relatively insignificant. The scars left by the conflict of the War Between the States were pretty much healed and the United State appeared to be developing and prospering at a hitherto undreamed rate. This atmosphere of general well-being was felt throughout the Ozark region. Timber was still plentiful; fruit was a source of income for farmers.

The village of Winslow at the top of the Ozarks was experiencing a prosperity and far flung reputation that seemed to foretell great prominence. Its reputation as a summer resort was well established. Numerous summer hotels and boarding houses had flourished for years. When in the early part of the century a local promoter,

T. B. Harris, was able to organize the Winslow Park Club and establish the largest single component of summer hotels that the town had, or ever was to have, the town's future as a resort appeared assured.

The Winslow Park Club boasted not only the main lodge with room accommodation for more than a hundred guests; it had an annex that would house additional overflow. This was in addition to the 39 individually owned cottages stretching along the crest of the mountain toward the golf course on the plateau to the east. Six passenger trains a day made regular stops. During the summer months a commuter train was added between Fort Smith and Fayetteville, bringing workers from the south to spend the nights and weekends with their families in the resort town. Numerous freight trains carried lumber and farm produce to market and brought in locally needed finished products.

In 1890 a new bank was organized. In the same year, the Winslow Telephone Company stretched its lines in four directions from the central office to Blackburn and beyond — to Sunset, Brentwood, Mountainburg, and Winfrey Valley with connections across the country via Fayetteville and Fort Smith. A new drug store building was erected and a livery stable provided horses and carriages to take visitors to the surrounding communities not served by the railroad. Eight practicing physicians were in residence, including one dentist; four of the medical men were retired but still offered helpful service upon demand. Six general mercantile establishments carried almost any item needed in food, clothing, or household goods. The grocery stores sent order takers into the residential sections each afternoon soliciting orders to be delivered the following morning. There were two hardwares as well as an ice house, and a bakery, a meat market, and at one time a slaughter house.

Winslow enjoyed a reputation, whether accurate or not, of being the wealthiest town per capita, in the state of Arkansas.

It is not surprising then that Mr. Harris, such an energetic promoter, was able to bring to Winslow the national convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, in hopes of persuading that influential organization to select Winslow as the location for its permanent summer camp. The convention was held in late spring before the great influx of summer visitors.

Mountain Lodge and the Summit Hotel at that time had ample room to accommodate the delegates who attended the convention from all the Y. M. C. A. chapters in the United States and some foreign countries including Africa and Japan. The hotels gave delegates their room and breakfast and evening meals and the generous townspeople opened their homes and fed the young men at noontime. Meetings for the convention were for the most part held in the local Methodist Church, the largest auditorium in town at that time. All local residents were invited to attend. Sectional gatherings were held in other smaller places. The convention lasted one week during which time the religious non-sectarian influence which was brought by the dedicated young men in attendance was felt by the entire community.

At that time the Y. M. C. A. was in actual practice as well as in name, a Christian organization, yielding great influence throughout the world. First organized in the United States in Boston in December 1851, its influence had spread to almost every city, town, and village and was an outstanding organization for good wherever its influence was felt. The establishment of a summer camp in the town would be a great addition to the spiritual development of the community. At the time of the Winslow convention the organization was widening its influence and seeking to reach out in many directions. It was in search of a permanent location for a summer camp where facilities could be developed and expanded for the benefit of all the surrounding states as well as the local community. The people of Winslow realized the high honor they had received when their village was chosen as a place to be considered for this camp.

On the last evening of the convention a vesper service was held in the open air on the hilltop over the railroad tunnel. The speaker for the occasion was Robert E. Spears, national secretary for the organization. The forces of Nature seemed to cooperate in making the hour one of great inspiration for all in attendance. The soft southern breeze filled the balmy air with the fragrance of spring flowers. The acoustics of the particular location were ideal to echo the hundreds of voices raised in spiritual melody. As the words of the familiar hymn were sung: Day is dying in the west; Heaven is touching earth with rest; Wait and worship while the night sets her evening lamps alight. Through all the sky the sinking sun set the western sky alight with the myriad colors of an Ozark sunset. As the brilliance faded and the shadows lengthened across the valley, the light of the evening passenger train appeared in the south near Schaberg seven miles away. Long before the distant sound of the engines laboring to bring the train up the mountain could be heard, the light was visible on and off as the train wound its way along the curving track up the mountain. It appeared to those assembled as a beckoning spiritual light drawing ever nearer as the young people listened to the message so eloquently delivered by the speaker. The end of the address coincided with the arrival of the train at the southern mouth of the tunnel. When the train entered the half-mile length of darkness the earth beneath the feet of those assembled trembled as the train passed beneath them and that trembling seemed as the force of Power from above and the effect was comparable to what the early Christians might have felt when the earth trembled beneath them. As the train burst in a cloud of smoke and steam from its dark underground passage and the engine sounded the loud whistle to warn of its approach to the station, the pent up emotions of those on the hilltop were released and they awakened to the majesty of the scene about them. The quiet that followed the train's passing was like unto the peaceful descent of the Holy Spirit. The words of the song that echoed across the mountain seemed especially apropos: Wile the deepening shadows fall, Heart of love enfold us all, Through the glory and the grace of the stars that veil thy face our hearts ascend. Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts Heaven and earth are full of Thee! Heaven and earth are praising thee, O Lord most high!

For weeks after the auspicious convention that had been such an inspiration to all those in attendance and to the entire population of the small village on the mountaintop, news was awaited as to whether their town had been selected as the site for the permanent location of the summer camp. At last the suspense was replaced by disappointment when word was received that Winslow had lost its bid for the camp. Estes Park, Colorado, had been chosen instead. The exact reason for the choice was never made public, but the general consensus was that the developer had set too high a price on the land available for the development.

Dr. W. W. Mahan

Our deepest appreciation to Mrs. Mildred Mahan Jacobs of Richmond, Indiana, for much of the detailed information in this article; and to Mrs. Lyda Winn Pace of Winslow, Arkansas, for her identification of the persons pictured at the birthday party.

People today have Medicare and Welfare to help them in their time of illness and need. From 1905 to 1918, people within a radius of twelve miles of Winslow had Doctor Mahan. He never failed to respond to a call for help whenever or wherever needed. He literally gave his life in service to his fellow man. Never did he question beforehand - nor afterward - whether the person in need had the money to pay. So far as we know, he never sent a bill to any patient for medicine, a house call or an office visit. Most people paid the fees - enough for the doctor to provide for his wife and five children - but if the widow could have collected the outstanding bills due at the time of the doctor's death she would have had enough money to provide a comfortable living for a number of years. Unfortunately most of those debts were never paid, and the oldest two children aged fifteen and seventeen were compelled to go to work to help provide food for the younger children.

The Mahan family, originally from Prairie Grove, moved to Winslow in 1905. Mrs. Mahan was the former Etta Langston of West Fork. Both were active in church and civic affairs. Mrs. Mahan was a sister to Mrs. Clyde Karnes for whom the Clyde Chapter of the Eastern Star was named. Dr. Mahan belonged to the Masonic Lodge, and both were charter members of Clyde Chapter O. E. S. They contributed much to the social life of the community as well. Nobody was excluded from their circle. This inclusion is demonstrated by the birthday party held for the oldest daughter, Mildred, on her seventh birthday on March 7th, 1908, to which all the children in Winslow were invited. Not every child enjoyed the delights of a birthday celebration, and this one was a special occasion. We quote from a recent letter from Mildred in which she wrote, "Do you know my dad went to Fayetteville and brought home a big basket of bananas for that party. In those days that was a big treat." Indeed it was; and very likely the doctor realized that bananas were much better for that many small children than would have been so much candy or some "messy" concoction. Ice cream and cake, now traditional birthday fare, was unobtainable at that time - at least the ice cream.

Our first recollection of Dr. Mahan was when we sat in the "Beginners' Class" in Sunday School, on the long benches in the church with our legs dangling too short for our feet to reach the floor. To our childish minds the man sitting before us seemed the embodiment of the lowly Jesus about whom he talked - so soft and gentle was his voice and so kind the expression on the saintly face and the light shining from the deep blue eyes. This same light surrounded him and filled the room when he visited the sick. So soothing was the hand upon the brow and so gentle the touch as he examined the suffering person, and so kind and confident the voice that we feel certain that as much healing power went out from the doctor himself as from the medicines prescribed. Psychologists will agree that confidence in the physician does much to effect the cure of the sick - and the very presence of Dr. Mahan inspired that confidence.

The sign in the window on the second floor of the bank building in Winslow read, "Dr. W. W. Mahan", but people with minor ailments seldom found the doctor there. Usually he was in his buggy or on horseback making a house call to some too sick to make the trip to the office. In those days most people who were able to make the trip to the doctor's office considered themselves too well to be in need of a physician; so much of the practice of the doctor was in the homes of those too ill to rise from their beds. Within the immediate area the doctor was often seen walking to and from the homes of his patients. When the distance was too great for walking, and the road passable, the doctor's buggy was seen on its way. When the distance was even greater, and frequently the road too rough for making the trip in the buggy, the doctor traveled in the saddle. Sometimes a call came from some remote home along the railroad where not even going on horseback was practical. The engineers on the hill engines that helped the trains over the mountain between Chester and Winslow were cooperative and the doctor rode the hill engine to the home of the patient. The engineer of the next train up the mountain would have been alerted and stop long enough to take him back to town.

The sight of the doctor on his rounds meant that some one was sick. Word traveled fast and if the patient was seriously ill neighbors soon arrived to "sit up" and help in any way possible. The nearest hospitals were miles away and most of the folk to whom the doctor ministered were not financially able to go to a hospital even if they could have reached one. Friends willingly helped in the nursing after the doctor had prescribed and rendered his professional service. Sometimes this neighborliness combined with the professional service was not enough to overcome the illness that had laid low the unfortunate victim of disease.

Such was the case with the doctor himself when for the second time he was stricken with pneumonia. He had been called to the bedside of a patient at Chester, twelve miles to the south. The trip was made on horseback. On the return trip home up the mountain road late on that March night, he was exposed to a merciless freezing rain and icy wind. He was chilled to the bone when at last he reached home and was able to unsaddle his horse and get into bed. He had a high fever and his professional knowledge told him that he had a severe case of pneumonia. He ministered to himself as best he could. The next day other professional help was called. No miracle drugs existed then and medicines available were ineffective against the ravages of the disease that had gotten such a head start on that cold, wet ride from Chester.

The entire town soon became aware of the seriousness of his condition. This was not just another citizen who was at death's door, but the very life of the community. Most children and adults alike had felt the healing touch of this good man. Now he himself had fallen victim to an illness and they were helpless to bring to him the cure that he had wrought for them. A depressed pall fell upon the entire community. Almost the only words spoken as people met each other on the streets and in their places of business was, "What is the latest report on Dr. Mahan?"

On the morning of March 4th, 1918, the word brought to the school that Dr. Mahan had died fell like a black shroud over pupils and teachers alike. With deepest affection every child remembered this good man and even the youngest felt the sense of loss. At recess and noon, instead of the boisterous games and shouts of glee, children moved slowly and gathered in small groups to speak in hushed tones of the tragedy that had struck the community. The absence of the three Mahan children who were old enough to attend school added to the gloom.

The casket containing the doctor's body was moved by friends from the home where he had died to the nearby Methodist church where he had worshipped with his neighbors for the past thirteen years. Here he lay in state until the funeral when the entire church and surrounding yard were crowded with grief-stricken mourners. School was closed to permit children to attend. Men's tears fell with no attempt at concealment, and women wept with uncontrolled bereavement. The entire community shared in a mutual loss and the sorrow, too deep to put into words had to be expressed through tears. Often in times of great emotional stress tears are the only outlet.

After the funeral strong hands carried the casket down the hill to the railway station to await the train that would bear the remains to Prairie Grove. There a graveside service was held and the doctor was laid to rest in the family plot. Those friends who had accompanied the bereaved family on this last sad journey returned home. People then began the sad adjustment of living without the professional services and friendly helpfulness of the man whose life had been cut short after only forty-seven years. He was one of the most respected, admired, and loved of any citizen who went before or followed after in the community. His faithful widow never remarried. She followed her husband in death in May, 1942, in Richmond, Indiana, where she had moved with her children a few years after the doctor's passing.

Wind, Fire, and Hail Wreck 1880s Havoc

I want to express my deepest appreciation to Miss Mary Alexander of Fayetteville, for the use of her treasured souvenir booklet, published April 20, 1895, in Fayetteville, titled "Souvenir History of Baum & Bros, Fayetteville, Arkansas 1865-1895". It contains not only a history of the Baum & Bros. "Leading General Merchants of Fayetteville, Arkansas" but valuable eyewitness accounts of the cyclone, hail and fire in Fayetteville during that time, providing us with accurate dates of these disasters.

By the spring of 1880 the growing town of Fayetteville appeared to be on its way to becoming a thriving metropolis, with the business district entered around the square.

On the evening of Sunday, April 18 that year, nobody imagined that before midnight the prosperous town around the square as well as almost every building between the old Fair Grounds - located just north of present Highway 62 West and Razorback Road, and East Mountain - Mount Sequoyah - would lie in piles of rubble from one of the most devastating tornadoes ever to strike Washington County.

About eight o'clock the lightning and heavy thunder approaching from the southwest became a deafening roar; before citizens had time to seek shelter, the tornado struck. The first home to be destroyed was that of John Kelton, near Rochier's Pond - just south and west of the railroad trestle over Highway 62, and near the street that leads up the hill to Sunrise Manor.

From here the twister swept in a northeasterly direction, taking the homes of W. M. Barnes, the Dotts, Jobe, Albright, Paddock, Crouch, and the I. O. O. F. lodge hall, before striking the Tremont Hotel on the southwest corner of the square. It tore the upper story off this three story brick building, crushing the northeast corner and killing the proprietor's wife, Mrs. H. L. (Victoria) Glass.

At the same instant it tore off the front of the Thomas Boles store on the south side, turning it upside down and inside out, leaving it leaning against the front of the building - skipped over to Baum & Bros. store on the east side where it made a complete wreck of all save the south wall.

The Baum building was a solid two story brick with a frontage of more than 60 feet. Their stock of merchandise, clothing, household furnishings, etc. was scattered over a wide area.

William Campbell in his book, ""Fayetteville 1828-1928 states, "Baum's was a complete wreck save the south wall. The shelving against this wall was stocked with chinaware. None it was disturbed nor broken. Part of the roof of this building was found in Goshen (twelve miles away) while part of the timbers were driven through the front of the Mountain House which front was the next instant yanked from the building.

"Near Baum' stood a frame building. The only damage done to it was a couple of weatherboards yanked off the bottom part. From the square the winds dipped into what was known as 'Tin Cup' hollow where, according to the Fayetteville Democrat of May 1, 1889, it 'leveled every shanty and cabin.' A Negro baby was blown clear across the hollow, apparently without injury.

"Little damage was done to the north side of the square. The Tremont House was keeping a pig in an old hogshead barrel behind the hotel. The wind picked this up and set down in the courtyard without injury to the pig. In all, 65 houses were destroyed. Miraculously only one life was lost - that was Mrs. Glass. The National Weather Service recorded that 25 persons were injured. The only severe injury was to Mrs. Addison Bishop whose arm had to be amputated. The tornado next struck Goshen and almost completely destroyed that hamlet.

"Under the energetic leadership of Mayor VanHoose, Fayetteville immediately organized relief committees to aid the injured and those whose possessions and home had been destroyed. Neighboring towns responded to the immediate need by sending generous contributions in cash and produce. Prairie Grove sent flour and money; Boonsboro (Cane Hill) sent 925 pounds of flour and 218 pounds of bacon and money. Col. Lake of Viney Grove sent two loads of corn and 200 pounds of bacon. Mrs. Helen Severs of Cincinnati sent a lot of clothing" From the Fayetteville Democrat of May 1, 1880.

The people of the town were hardly recovered from the shock of the destructive tornado when the second catastrophe struck. Quoting again from the Democrat of May 1; "Last week if seemed that our beautiful city was doomed to destruction. Almost on the heels of the cyclone came the fire fiend, seemingly intent upon completing the ruin and destruction. About 3 o'clock Friday morning of last week our citizens were awakened from their deep slumbers by the dreaded cry of fire and ringing bells in a few moments men, women, and children could be seen hurrying toward the square with despair depicted on their countenances.

"From the location of the fire and piles of rubble, lumber, boxes, and other flamable matter scattered over the area and around the square by the tornado, many believed that it was beyond the power of man to save the city. But brave and determined men were there to make the effort. The fire originated in the post office building, the most beautiful structure in town. This building was destroyed as well as Bob Stone's Book Store on the north. All that could be done was to attempt to save the north side of the square which had escaped destruction in the tornado.

Fighters were hindered by the fact that the wind was blowing from the south. The Stone, Albright & Company brick on the corner was the first line of defense. Captain George Albright, foreman of the volunteer fire fighters, formed a bucket brigade from the two cisterns at the courthouse and from the men were able to keep the fire from spreading to neighboring structures."

Nature truly did appear to bear a special grudge against Fayetteville in the years 1880-81. According to the souvenir booklet issued by Baum & Bros. "all will remember the hail storm of April 11, 1881, when hail stones as big as cannon balls bombarded the city, battering roofs and demolishing windows."

Campbell's History of Fayetteville state, "On April 11, 1881, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a greenish-black cloud whirled up from the northwest with an indescribable roar and most of the aspects of a tornado. But it proved to be an unparalleled circumstance. Moses Baum says that pieces of his new tin roof were completely cut out by the impact. 487 panes of glass was broken out of the north side of the University building." (Old Main.)

The County Poor Farm

Society's care for its indigent elderly has come a long way from the English work house — or the first settlement by the American colonies. Far back into history the more affluent made some provision for the less fortunate; at times the rich made the lot of the poor even worse by interfering — ostracizing or isolating them — or in some societies even leaving the elderly or handicapped to die on the mountains or be devoured by wild beasts. Some Nomad tribes that took their herds to the mountains for summer grazing, then returned to the lowlands for winter months, simply left the elderly beside the trail or on the riverbank when they became too weak to keep up; other groups provided a certain amount of food and bade them farewell and left them to die.

Harsh as these treatments sound, our present day so-called civilized society seems at times to have gone to the other extreme by keeping bodies alive artificially after all natural signs of life have ceased. Throughout history no members of the animal world have been so cruel and unkind to one another as the human species. Lower animals may kill and destroy members of the group, but all for reasonable causes. Humans are the only ones to exhibit sadistic traits. Conditions in our prisons today attest to this fact. A few centuries ago the poor and helpless were locked in cells and left to fester and die with only a minimum of care. Work houses for the poor in England about which we read, bring shudders of horror to sensitive souls today.

Less than 100 years ago, right in our own county, treatment of the elderly, mentally retarded, maimed and senile populace was enough to make our blood run cold. Apparently, some provision was made for segregation if not kindly treating those less fortunate soon after the first government was established in our own county.

No subject we have undertaken since our first article appeared in the Observer 10 years ago, has been more fascinating, but taken more research and been more revealing than tracing the history of the poor in Washington County. We started first to write a brief sketch about the county home as it was in the long brick building that still stands and is occupied by the government offices of the EOA near the railroad and just south of Township Road. The more we probed, the more involved the project became. No other article had consumed so much time; no other story required so many interviews and resulted in so many conflicting as well as corroborating accounts on any subject.

We cannot attempt to mention in one paragraph all the persons interviewed, but will mention names as we progress with certain specific facets of the interviews. We trust these people will accept this mention as an expression of thanks and appreciation for their help. Without this cooperation and information furnished by the many people interviewed, there would be no story of the history of the poor farm in this county. So please accept this statement as personal thanks to each one who so willingly gave of your time and provided the information herein.

With so many points of view and recollections of so long ago by such a large number of people, conflicting opinions and statements are bound to appear — memory being what it is. Each will remember certain incidents and the same situation viewed from different viewpoints result in conflicting opinions. Couple that with the fact that by the time this writer tries to combine all these viewpoints and coordinate them into a crystallized whole, something entirely different may emerge. We hope that we will be able to combine the interviews into some kind of syntax to create a harmonious whole and continuous story.

The first recorded account we found of any kind of care for the poor in Washington County is in a yellowed newspaper clipping (no date) of an article published in a Fayetteville paper, and written by the late Tom Feathers. The time had to be some years ago because Mr. Feathers, who had been deceased for a number of years, mentions others now deceased as still living in Fayetteville at the time the article was published.

We quote here the Tom Feathers' article: Lovely County Heritage by Tom Feathers - POOR FARM PURCHASED. "During the years that the Greenhaw farm, Oak Hill, located just west of and across Highway 45 from Son's Chapel, was owned by Washington County (1852-1896) the persons going there were sent 'over the hill to the County home,' or they were sent to that section of the same farm which housed the feeble-minded. At the time there was no institution in Little Rock for such persons.

"In January, 1852, Judge John Newman, who served as Washington County Judge from 1844 until 1860, appointed a committee to select and purchase for the County a poor farm. The men in whom the Judge put his trust to make this selection and purchase were: Col. James P. Neal, a stepson of Rev. Andrew Buchanan, and who was admitted to the Bar in 1844, served in the Mexican War with a company of mounted volunteers from Washington County, practiced law for several years and returned to this county in 1868; and A. W. Brownlee, an associate justice from 1851 to 1856 and again from 1857 to 1860; and William M. Bowers, who served as county treasurer from 1844 to 1852 and then represented the county in the State Legislature from November 1852 to January 1853.

"The committee presented the results of its activities to the County Court at the April term of the same year, 1852. They reported that they had purchased the farm of Elias Muncey in Township 17 Range 29 West, containing 80 acres, as of February 13 for the sum of $350.00. This action of the committee was approved by the Court. At the same season the Court ordered the erection of two additional log buildings on the property, to be located near a large spring. With the increase in population of the County through the years, other additions to the property became necessary. At one time there were as many as 16 one-room log cabins in the area west of the spring, which was used for a water supply.

"The building which Mr. and Mrs. Muncey had occupied for their home was designated by the Court to be used as a home for the County's poorhouse commissioner or caretaker. One of the first log buildings to be erected was used to accommodate paupers "of good and sound mind." As the state had no hospital for the nervous diseases the second building erected on the Washington County farm was for the purpose of housing the 'weak and feeble minded.' Both these structures were one-story, and had small windows that were considered very high from the floor; they were also equipped with fireplaces at either end.

"The 'weak and feeble minded' (at least some of them) were better controlled by the use of a 'ball and chain, which was attached to the ankle.' Later the 'ball' part was removed and the chains attached to the wall; by this method the patient could be kept inside during colder weather or outside during the summer. The change from the 'ball and chain' was appreciated also by the caretaker whose duty it had been to move the heavy iron 'balls' from place to place.

"Washington County's first 'poor house' was put into immediate operation. The same County Court of April 1852, appointed John R. Glassbrook, whose farm had been purchased by the County, to be the first Poorhouse Commissioner. Many persons served as administrator at the County Home prior to 1886 when John A. Beckett received the appointment.

"It was during Mr. Beckett's tenure at the 'home' that the Rev. William Sherman, now a retired Methodist minister living in Fayetteville, was filling his appointments at churches of the Goshen circuit. These included the Son's Chapel Church. Mr. Sherman relates that on several occasions after he had conducted services at the church he would spend the afternoon at the 'home' visiting with the residents or having a service for them. These services were held in the living room of the caretaker's house.

"All that remains on the Farm which was placed there by the County is near the southeast corner, in what is now a heavily grassed pasture. Here the County buried its paupers. The sandstone markers for these final resting places have, during the years, become tilted in all directions; and they have neither names nor dates. Some of them may have withstood the elements for more than a century."

This is all we have learned about that first poor farm in Washington County. Our next information is that the farm was located west of Fayetteville on a 64-acre tract almost directly across the road from Mount Comfort church and community building. According to Mr. Feathers' article, the move was made from the Son's Chapel location to the farm near Mount Comfort in 1890. In midsummer 1917 residents of the farm were moved into what was then considered modern and convenient up-to-date facility in the long red brick building on Gregg Avenue, built specifically to house the county's poor.

The County Poor Farm

From 1852 when the county first authorized the payment of a caretaker and purchased land near Son's Chapel beside what is now Highway 45 east of Fayetteville until 1896, the indigents of Washington County were housed at that location in a number of log buildings segregated only by the degree and nature of their condition. Those who were considered insane and/or feeble minded were confined in locked rooms with most violent kept in chains.

A news brief in a Fayetteville paper dated March 27, 1880, stated, "Nineteen unfortunate persons, are now fed and clothed by the county at an expense of about $140 a month. Fifteen of the number are inmates of the poor house."

In 1896 under Judge Frank Hill, the home was moved from the Son's Chapel location to one west of town across the road from the Mount Comfort school and what was them a Cumberland Presbyterian Church, into a large two storied structure built over a stone basement that was partitioned into rooms where inmates were also housed. The building stood on sloping hillside so that the back of the basement opened at ground level. Another small cottage consisting of two rooms with a lean-to was added later as the number of residents increased and more space became necessary. In this improved facility heat was provided by big stoves rather than fireplaces at each end of the one story log cabins at the previous location.

Having all the inmates under one roof made caring for them much easier. All could come to the central dining room or have meals carried to them without braving the elements — either the heat of summer or freezing winter. Primitive as accommodations in this new place may appear today, they were a great improvement over the previous estate. The rooms in this house were spacious, some as large as 24 x 24 feet in which a number of beds could be arranged to accommodate patients in a sort of dormitory fashions.

The new location like the previous one was near a large freeflowing spring from which all water was carried. The spring also supplied drinking water for the school across the road. What a task it was to carry in buckets from the spring a considerable distance down the hillside, all the water for drinking, cooking, household chores — washing dishes, scrubbing floors, laundry and bathing. Even if people bathed only once a week — as was the custom in many families at that period, a great amount of water was required. The caretaker at a later date said that getting the inmates to bathe was one of the most difficult tasks she had to perform. Older people from remote rural areas had never been accustomed to frequent bathing and many rebelled at such a foolish waste of time and effort. Many patients needed bathing more often — this meant added work to the caretaker because many of these were bedfast patients incapable of controlling their body functions; bedding must be changed often and laundered on the premises. Laundry probably was done when weather permitted, beside the spring when wash kettles heated over outside fires provided the hot water for boiling clothes after they were rubbed on the old fashioned washboard in tubs of lye soap water. Then the laundry must be carried back up the hill to the house. This was the usual procedure for farm families of the period.

In 1896 when this second poor farm was established, no hospital facilities were available in the county. Patients who became terminally ill lingered at the home where they died — cared for as best possible by the overworked persons in charge. The deceased were buried in paupers' graves on a hill across the ravine from the home itself. No markers were placed at these graves and long ago the location of these burial sites have been lost and forgotten.

About half of the 68 acres of the farm were tillable and the caretaker with the help of able-bodied men in residence raised practically all the food consumed by caretakers and inmates, including dairy products, meat — hogs and beeves butchered on the premises. The women helped with canning and preserving food raised. Many welcomed the opportunity to continue the work they had done all their lives. Most were from farms where they had spent long years of hard work.

To what extent and how often religious services were provided is uncertain. As always, church and secular organizations came to help as they could. Services were conducted in a large room in the home.

Indoor plumbing facilities were practically unknown at this turn of the century — even in private homes in town. At the county home, restroom facilities were in an outhouse down the hill. Bathing in a wash tub beside the kitchen stove or within the rooms of occupants was not regarded as inconvenient; it was common practice in private homes throughout the county.

After space in the large house became so crowded that the small cottage was erected close by, some of the male inmates were housed here. After this property was sold and the home moved to the last location on Gregg Avenue, the property was privately occupied for some years; finally the small cottage was moved across the road to a location above the Mount Comfort community building and is still in use in 1982; the large house was razed in 1978.

Whether the caretaker was paid a salary at this time or not is a subject of disagreement; some sources tell us that he was — others say not. The consensus seems to be that he was not paid a specified sum. He and his family received a place to live and a stipend to feed each inmate; out of this amount he was allowed to keep any monies left after expenses were paid. This meant that some caretakers provided better food and services than others. The appointment by the County Judge, who had jurisdiction over the poor farm, must have been regarded as a political plum of sorts. It was definitely a political appointment — and caretakers changed with almost every change of the administration electing the County Judge.

By the time George Appleby became County Judge in 1916 the population of Washington County had grown to such an extent that the need for more spacious accommodations for the poor was urgent. In 1917 land was purchased along Gregg Avenue — still in the county at that time — west of the Frisco railroad and south of what is now Township Road and a new modern, long, brick structure was erected. It was patterned after the county farm near Harrison for the indigents of Boone County. During the summer and fall of that year, the move was completed to take all inmates from the Mount Comfort location to the new home on Gregg Avenue.

In July of that year, the Mount Comfort property was purchased by a young married couple, Gus and Edna Davis Henbest, who had exchanged their marriage vows in March that same year. They moved into the large 15-room home on Mount Comfort Road in October. Edna recently told me that they had two rooms of the house big enough to have accommodated probably 18 or more inmates when the home was moved. It was a typical farm house for a large family at that time. The Henbests bought the 68 acre farm and 15 room house from County Judge George Appleby. Here their daughter, Theda, was born. The couple sold the home and 68 acre farm in 1920. Shown in the accompanying picture is Mrs. Henbest holding daughter Theda standing on the front porch of the old home. The photo is courtesy of Mrs. Henbest.

Next week "The County home in the brick facility on Gregg Avenue."

The County Home

By the time George Appleby became County Judge in 1916, the need for larger and more modern facilities for the county indigents became urgent. In 1917 money was appropriated for the purchase of land beside the Frisco railroad north of Fayetteville on what had been part of the early Gregg plantation. Modeled from a plan already in use at Harrison in Boone County, the new building would be far superior to the three story farm house type then in use on Mount Comfort Road west of town.

This new place was to be built specifically for use as the County Home. It was a long red brick building with single rooms extending to each end from a center entrance. Each accommodation housed one or two inmates — a great improvement over the Mount Comfort residence where as many as four to six occupants lived in each room. A wide veranda extended full length on each side — front to back. On this open porch the inmates spent much of their time sitting and rocking.

There was no such thing as air-conditioning; so the cool breezes that wafted along the porch were welcome relief from the inside heat. In winter, the rooms were warmed by steam radiators in each room. The furnace was located in the basement. Even in winter when the weather was not extremely cold, the old folk enjoyed sitting in the open air. The house faced east and during the morning the sun warmed their aged bones. Afternoons they moved to the back porch where they could watch the setting sun across the field to the west. Along the east porch rambler roses scented the air. The back porch was shaded by honeysuckle vines growing to the rafters.

Another greatly needed improvement was indoor plumbing. Two bath rooms served all inmates — one for each sex. The total number of residents varied from time to time — usually 15 to 20. The four upstairs rooms for the caretaker and family had a private bath.

The stairs descended directly into the large dining room. All food was prepared in one large kitchen. The inmates all ate in the central dining room. The caretaker and family ate in the kitchen, but all had the same menu. Those unable to go to the dining room were fed in their rooms. This was an added chore for some member of the caretaker's family.

There was no money to send the seriously ill to the City Hospital which was opened before the move from Mount Comfort. Inmates who became terminally ill remained at the Home.

Three well-known Fayetteville physicians were mentioned by almost every person interviewed. Dr. Ellis especially was mentioned kindly by all to whom we talked. He referred to the inmates as "my old people" and would go whenever called. He, as well as Doctors Gregg and Wood, all early physicians of Fayetteville, volunteered their services and received very little if any compensation. The County had no extra money to buy medicines.

All people admitted to the Home were destitute. The decision as to who would be admitted was in the hands of the County Judge. Very few were refused, because going to the poor farm was a last resort. Most had no families, or if they did, their families were too poor to care for them. In some cases, relatives were embarrassed to admit that they had relatives at the poor farm — a few abandoned their elders. Such instances were rare, however.

The deceased were buried in paupers' graves without markers. Because of limited finances, the County Judge had little choice in the manner of disposing of these indigents. Cash enough to feed and house the inmates pressed the budget of the none too wealthy County treasury.

One judge was severely criticized because of reports that inmates were placed in plain wooden boxes assembled on the grounds and the deceased buried without even outer garments or a lid on the box.

When George Caudle became judge during WWII, this practice was abandoned. Arrangements were made with the three mortuaries in town to alternate in burial of paupers. A small fee was paid — $35.00 at first. The mortuaries were called in rotation — unless relatives of the deceased had a choice of morticians; a simple religious service was conducted.

At no time did we hear it said that the inmates were mistreated in spite of the fact that caring for them was a most difficult and tiring task. Some were senile and many none too bright when they entered the Home. They were well fed, kept warm, treated kindly, and their basic needs provided, which was more than some could have had in their own homes.

The arrangement of the house was inconvenient. The only entrance to each room was a door opening onto the outside porch. To get from the rooms or bath or dining room all had to walk along the outside porch regardless of the weather. With only one bathroom for each sex, sanitary conditions were primitive by today's standards.

Every new arrival was required to bathe before entering his or her room. Clothes brought along were carefully inspected, washed and cleaned before they could be taken into the rooms. The problem of bedbugs carried in by new inmates was ever present. Many articles of clothing were so old and worn that they were beyond repair and were destroyed.

Some new inmates had never seen an indoor bathroom and did not know how to use the facility. The caretaker found one man trying to take a bath in the toilet bowl. He had never seen a bathroom and not knowing how to turn a faucet or run water into the tub, he was using the only water he saw.

Almost every week, services were provided by some religious group. Arranging for these groups was an added responsibility for the caretaker. The tables and chairs in the dining room must be moved and arranged for the occasions, then put back to serve meals afterward. A piano in the dining room had been donated by some individual or group and most visiting groups had a pianist to help with the music. The inmates enjoyed the singing and most took part.

Inmates were not required to help with the work on the farm or domestic household chores. Some women offered to help with the housework. They had been accustomed to hard work all their lives and felt useful, as indeed they were. But helping with the cooking was forbidden. This task performed by the County. Most food was raised on the farm. A cow provided milk — meat was butchered and cured — and fruit and vegetables preserved during the summer for use in the winter.

The County Home continued operation until the Federal Government began its program of welfare and set minimum standards for all facilities serving the indigent. When this came about, the red brick on Gregg Avenue failed to meet these standards and the Home was phased out. Government aid ceased to be a stigma and people willingly took advantage of the improved facilities and modern care. In spite of the home atmosphere that existed between inmates and caretakers at the Home, present facilities offer better services and more adequate care than could be provided under local county finance and management.

Nobody interviewed could be certain of the exact date that the Gregg Avenue facility was closed. Mrs. Mahan was in charge when the last patient had to be moved. She took the last dozen inmates to the private home she had rented elsewhere in Fayetteville and elsewhere in town and kept them until they either died or became bedfast and had to be placed in hospitals or registered nursing homes which had become common by that time.

After the Home closed its doors for the last time, the building stood empty for some years. The County used the grounds to park machinery and the inside was used for storage.

At a meeting on April 10, 1980, the Quorum Court voted to lease the old County Home on a four-year basis to the EOA under and agreement that the agency put $38,000 worth of repairs into the structure during that period. The EOA administrator also said that agency would like to be given first option to buy the building if the county should decide to sell it.

Since that time, the EOA has done extensive remodeling inside the old structure. Upon entering the building now, it is difficult to reconstruct in the mind's eye the original floor plan that was used for so many years to accommodate Washington County's indigent population.

Home Remedies Work

Far be it for this ol'hillbilly of upteen winters to try to upstage professional or even native herb doctors who have other treatments for the problems mentioned below - but if a simple remedy works perfectly and at little cost what more can a victim ask?

A recent article by a professional expert proposes removing ticks by a method expounded by many others. The article stated that "ticks should be removed with thumb and index finger by gentle extraction as close as possible to the point of attachment." I have no quarrel with that accepted method, but why disturb the embedded rascal and risk contaminating yourself with germs of Rocky Mountain Spotted fever or tuleramia (originally called Rabbit fever when it was first discovered in the Ozarks - so called because the first human victims got the disease by skinning contaminated rabbits or squirrels).

A much simpler and more effective remedy is readily available. I keep a small bottle of spirits of ammonia handy at all times - in the house and glove compartment in the car - and carry a bottle in my pocket when walking where ticks or stinging insects might be encountered. Turn that opened bottle of ammonia over the happy tick or insect sting or bite and in a short time Mr. Tick will loosen his hold and can easily be removed proboscus and all with a gentle pull with a soft tissue without touching him with your bare hands.

The same relief can be obtained after being stung by a wasp. It will not work on a bee sting when the stinger is still embedded in the flesh. In that case you must remove the stinger sac which still contains the venom. Use the same method of turning the open bottle upside down over the stung place - whether wasp, hornet, yellowjacket. Of course this treatment is wise only on smooth surfaces where the bottle can be held flat without pouring ammonia all over yourself.

Definitely do not use ammonia around the eyes. If the bottle cannot be held firmly so the fluid will not leak out, wet a bit of cotton and hold over the injury. Don't breathe the ammonia or you'll take off faster than the fleeing insect.

My first knowledge of the efficacy of ammonia was many years ago when my father was stung by a scorpion in the middle of the night. He was stung on the ball of the thumb. He turned that bottle of ammonia upside down on that painful and dangerous sting and held it there for several minutes. It never caused him the least pain or swelling. I have never forgotten his experience and the lesson I learned from it.

I'd not guarantee this treatment for anybody who is so allergic to stings that treatment in a hospital is necessary. I have not had that experience, but for a hardy hillbilly like myself it works.

An ancient Chinese treatment for burns has never failed me. I read about it many years ago and always use it for burns, even one that is severe enough to raise a blister. I have often wondered why hospitals don't use it for patients with really severe burns over much of their bodies. Probably the doctors have better treatments.

My remedy: Take as many tea bags as necessary to cover the burned area. The wet tea draws out the poison or whatever - I am not a diagnostic expert. I only know that when I burn my hand or whatever, I grab as many teas bags as necessary, wet them, place them securely over the burned area and leave them for perhaps an hour - maybe more, depending on the severity of the burn - and presto - the burn does not get sore nor blister, or if already blistered, the blister dries up without pain and heals quickly.

There is no charge for the above information. I don't want to be arrested for practicing medicine without a license. Since there is no charge, there cannot be any money back guarantee. I only say it works for me. Whether it will work on humans I do not know.

Memory Of Spirits Past Haunt Still House Holler

A short distance beyond Cato Springs along Highway 265 south of the Fayetteville Bypass, an unmarked road turns off to the left. This is the west end of a section known as "The Campbell Loop." A densely overgrown ravine off this road is a place known as "Still House Holler" because many years ago a man we will call Uncle John operated a lucrative business of producing moonshine here.

At the outset, let us warn any curious adventure seekers - please do not try to find this hollow nor invade it. The owner of this private property does not appreciate strangers prowling around, breaking down fences, trampling underbrush, leaving gates open and allowing cattle to escape. The ravine is home for enough ticks and chiggers to cover your body. About the only sound heard down in the holler is the bur-r-r-r of enough rattlesnakes to play a symphony - if you care for rattlesnakes symphonies. If the rattlesnakes don't get you, the owner may blast you with buckshot; the ghosts of past inebriates will pursue, along with enough warlocks and witches to make those that chased Robert Burns' Tim O'Shanter appear tame by comparison. So - don't go poking around where you have no business trying to locate Still House Holler.

Still House Holler is there, though, with a free flowing spring that provides fresh, cold water to cool the coils through which steam condensed and dripped into the barrels that held some of the most powerful corn whiskey, peach brandy, and apple jack ever produced to brighten the lives of hard working pioneer men and boys in these mountains.

The native stone vats are there too, held together by good concrete where the mash was fermented. These vats measure probably six to eight cubic feet each - and there are three of them. The tops of the vats are gone and the bottoms filled with enough accumulated humus to grow oak trees some six inches in diameter.

Uncle John operated largely on the barter system - a bushel of peaches bought a quart of brandy. A bushel of apples could buy a quart of apple jack. A bushel of corn might be exchanged for a whole gallon of good stout whiskey.

A Look Back - There was a time when any young lad, big enough to turn loose of Ais mother's apron strings - and boys then turned loose about as soon as they were able to walk alone, who saw smoke from Still House Holler curling skyward on a bright, nippy fall morning would know that Uncle John was about to run off a batch of moonshine. And he'd begin dancing and humming through his morning chores, and when he saw his pa he'd tell him he'd seen the smoke, and pa too would start grinning ear to ear because he also would be set to enjoy the libation about to come from the still in the holler.

Come Saturday all the men and boys would put on clean bib overalls and stiff homespun shirts and head for West Fork or Greenland, or maybe as far south as Woolsey's Store where the road forked, one branch going on up West Fork Creek and the other toward the southwest up Winn Creek and over the ridge to Blackburn.

Woolsey's Store was a favorite. On Saturday and Sunday afternoon everybody for miles around brought nags that could run at all, and raced them across the valley between the store and the creek on the far side.

Betting was illegal, but after a few swigs of Uncle John's corn whiskey or his potent apple jack or peach brandy, folks forgot what was legal and what was not. Some of the money that changed hands had been designated to buy calico goods to make dresses by the women folk for the mothers and gals to wear to Sunday go-to-meetin'. So often some of the men came home from the races with no goods and empty pockets. A few might come with pockets bulging. And many of the men and boys wouldn't know whether their pockets were full or empty. They themselves were too full of Uncle John's good product from Still House Holler.

The women folk didn't see eye to eye with the men folk about all this drinking and gambling, but they put up with it for quite a spell - until one eventful Saturday.

On that day a gang of ruffians from down toward Bug Tussle and over in Ben Doodle Holler, away down on Blackburn Creek, came a-riding over to Woolsey's Store to take part in the horse racing. They had stopped along the way at some stills down on Blackburn Creek and they were loaded for trouble by the time they got out of their saddles.

Evidently they found it, for by sundown, when they all headed home almost every son of a pioneer of them had lost some blood or had a black eye, or maybe a knife slash across a cheek, or a piece of shirt ripped off by a bullet.

There'd been, that day, a heap of yellin' and cussin' and shootin' pistols into the air and at each other. Fortunately, by the time the fun had reached the shooting stage most of the contestants were too unsteady on their feet and in their aim to do much damage. Most of the damage to the Woolsey regulars and the upstarts from Bug Tussle way had been in scaring the daylights out of each other.

Neither side would admit defeat and each rode off toward home declaring that they'd be back next Saturday with more recruits and, this time, with sufficient supply of whiskey and ammunition to settle what the other had started.

This was when the women folk decided that things had gone far enough. They got together with a petition signed by every wood-choppin' female from Chicken Bristle to Possum Trot. Them as couldn't write their names, made a mark to let Uncle John know just where they stood on the matter.

The petition might not have been worded exactly as a lawyer would have drawn it up, but the meaning was perfectly clear. If Uncle John hoped to continue to enjoy good health, he'd do much better to continue his activities over in Indian Territory or someplace besides his present location. To ensure Uncle John took the petition seriously, every female in the neighborhood went along when the paper was presented to the operator of the still. The leader of this hopping mad crowd of females was Uncle John's own niece, the daughter of his oldest sister. This niece's husband and her two teenage boys were regular partakers of Uncle John's hospitality, and she was declaring open warfare against her uncle if she had to take on the battle singlehanded. But Uncle John could see she had plenty of help.

The women had found him that frosty October morning just starting to run off an extra fine batch of corn likker. The first drops were beginning to trickle into the barrel when the women arrived. The frosty nip in the air was warm compared to Uncle John's initial reception, interrupted as he was in this special brewing. But it thawed considerable when the women went into action.

Every blessed one of them carried some instrument of destruction - a hammer, axe, rake, shovel, or stick-club - and when they saw how lightly Uncle John was first disposed to treat their petition, went to work on his operation. They attacked the still itself, smashing the coils carrying the vapor that was condensing into that precious fluid. When Uncle John attempted to interfer with what he saw as rash behavior, especially toward a man's rightly owned property, some of the women turned on him, yelling and screaming and flailing him with their sticks. The unfortunate man quickly realized that trying to defend himself and his valued still was an untenable situation.

Folk say they had never seen a man climb such a steep hill out of such a deep holler at such a speed in all their born days, and some insisted that he didn't stop until he'd crossed the border into Indian Territory. Calmer heads allowed he did stop long enough to load his family and a few possessions into the wagon before crossing into the Territory.

As time passed and younger generations came along, no mention was made to them as to why Uncle John moved to Oklahoma when all the other relatives remained peaceful-like in Washington County.

Like I said, the vats are still there hidden away in the undergrowth of Still House Holler with nobody to guard the place - but woods critters, and rattlesnakes. And enough relatives of Uncle John to whip a whole regiment of curious outsiders.

They don't want anyone poking around disturbing the peace and quiet of a place considered almost sacred to the kinfolk of the man who long ago provided so much pleasure for those early settlers who resided along the section of road known as the Campbell Loop.

Early Days of Winslow - East Side

The appearance of the west side of Winslow remained much the same from the time the first buildings were erected until the devastating fire of the 1950s destroyed everything except the row that remains along the south side of the street today. By contrast, the east side had undergone many changes in addition to the two destructive fires that destroyed houses that were later rebuilt to the present alignment. Other changes were brought about by the razing of buildings that either were replaced by new ones or their sites used for other purposes. Probably one of the first structures to be erected was the depot, since the town centered around the railroad and all activities were geared to the services it afforded. All the east side of town is built on filled ground. The depth can be estimated by looking at the ravine to the north of the present parking area. The space occupied by the depot looks so small today that it seems impossible that the depot stood south of the big maple tree beside the present railroad crossing. South of the depot was a long shed where passengers waited for trains during the summer months; and south of the shed the road wound behind the depot and crossed the tracks at a point near the weed grown steps that lead from the track level to the roadway along the hillside above. There was barely enough space for one team between the depot and the rock wall to the east. Directly north of the depot and the maple tree about where the present road crosses the tracks was a fenced rose garden with a fountain in the center. Water for the fountain flowed by gravity from a spring near the mouth of the tunnel. This same spring supplied water for the agent and his family who lived upstairs above the depot.

North of the garden about where the present crossing leads to the Baptist Church stood a general store first occupied by J. R. Stockburger and later by A. N. Cole. Later this building was razed and the business moved to the location now occupied by Jarnagan's. North of the aforementioned store at one time stood yet another building which housed the post office and an ice cream parlor. This building stood on high supports and extended across the ravine. To the east of the ice cream parlor was a smaller building that also extended over the edge of the ravine. It was known as the R. G. Williams building and was occupied by many different tenants. Usually the business was some sort of eating or refreshment establishment; at times a regular restaurant - again as a confectionery - and at one time it was a beer parlor. Just north of the R. G. Williams building was still another small store built of native stone. In it were at different times a cobbler's shop, variety store, a millinery, and a barber shop. These buildings are all gone today. In the early '30's a canning factory stood north of these; it extended over the ravine from the present street to the railroad right of way. The deep well that supplied water for the factory remains and is still used at times to supply water hauled to motels and residences along the highway.

The alignment of buildings against the bluff on the east side has been changed many times. One of the first houses along the bluff was a small wooden structure housing the office and drug store of Dr. Albert Dunlap in the late 1880s. South of that building was one at various times occupied by a restaurant. "Aunt Lid" Rivercomb had a restaurant in this building in the early part of this century. Between her place and the drug store were three smaller houses occupied by a millinery, a barber shop and a real estate office. When the store building occupied by A. N. Cole north of the depot was razed, Mr. Cole built a store on the present site of Jarnagan's. Twice this store was burned to the ground before the present structure was erected. In 1908 Dr. Dunlap's frame drug store building was replaced by a concrete block two story structure. On the first floor was the drug store; on the second the newspaper, "The Winslow American" was printed, and Winslow's first lending library was established, and enough additional space for living quarters for Dr. Dunlap's daughter Maud and her husband G. N. Duncan. "Miss Maud" was the first licensed woman pharmacist in the state of Arkansas, and Winslow's first librarian. Her husband edited the newspaper and managed the drug store - other than the pharmaceutical part of the business. After the death of her husband in 1918, Miss Maud took over the management of the establishment as well as the editorship of the newspaper and operation of the library. In later years Dick Page bought the drug store and operated it so long as it existed. Blindness forced him to give up the business; there has been no drug store in Winslow since that time.

All the buildings north of the present Jarnagan Store were erected by H. M. Wright and were known as the Wright Buildings. Only one of these remains at present; evidence of the others is apparent by the stone wall against the hillside. The northernmost building was a livery stable; the part of the building south of it stored feed for the horses. A roadway ran between this building and the one still standing; this led to the second floor which housed the rigs for hire at the livery stable. At the time of the livery stable operation, traveling salesmen - drummers - arrived by train, made their headquarters at the Mountain Hotel just up the hill behind the livery stable and hired rigs from Mr. Wright to take them to outlying businesses such as Blackburn, Sunset, Hazel Valley, Winfrey, etc. The horses and rigs were available to local citizens also, and during the summer months business thrived by renting the horses to the many summer visitors. At that time Winslow was one of the most thriving summer resorts in the Ozarks.

The Mountain Hotel previously mentioned was built by a Mr. and Mrs. Sample. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Sample operated the business alone until her marriage to Mr. H. M. Wright. Mr. Wright did not help operate the hotel, but built a successful business with the livery stable and mercantile establishment. Later, Mrs. Wright operated a restaurant in the building that still stands. The grocery store of her husband was in the north end of this same building. The management of the Mountain Hotel was taken over by the daughter of Mrs. Wright - Miss Rose Sample.

In the early spring of 1923 the three story Mountain Hotel was destroyed by fire. The entire structure was of wood, and since no firefighting equipment was available, once the fire started it could not be controlled. It had been built primarily as a summer hotel with only a few of the rooms ceiled and heated for winter occupancy. Long hallways extended from front to back; these open hallways, plus the fact that nothing was fireproofed contributed to the rapid spread of the flames. Fortunately no other structures were destroyed by the fire. For a number of years Miss Rose was not in residence at Winslow; later after the death of both her mother and Mr. Wright she returned and remodeled the livery stable into a restaurant and rented rooms in what had been the carriage house. She continued the operation of her hotel - patronized largely by local people - until her death in the 1950s. After that the deteriorating building was never occupied. It was finally acquired by J. D. Jarnagan and demolished.

At one time the Winslow Telephone Company occupied the second floor of what was a barber shop below; this was south of the present structures. The stone wall of this building can still be seen against the steep bank. When the fire that destroyed the telephone office occurred the entire section of town was burned from the Wright buildings on south. At the time of this fire the wind was from the north and blew the flames away from the Wright structures. The telephone office was moved back up on the hill to the small house where it had been located originally. Here it remained until the present dial system was inaugurated. The only buildings rebuilt after this second fire were the store building presently occupied by Jarnagans, and the present post office, library, and city hall.

NEVER BATHE WITH A SKUNK - A Bit of Practical Advice

My brother Omer was the hunter of the family. Every winter he had trap lines in the hollows and along the bluffs where wild animals were likely to den. One time he caught a skunk in a steel trap in the hollow near our house. It was caught by the toes on one front paw only, making the pelt of that lowly animal much more valuable. Skins that were unmarred or broken by bullet holes were worth more.

Maybe it was just the challenge of disposing of the skunk with some risk but not much danger that prompted us to make the execution some kind of a lark. It must have been early on a Sunday morning, because our father was along and he could not have been free any other day of the week. We phoned our cousin Berneice who always wanted to be included in any such venture. Outfitting ourselves for the expedition was a great part of the amusing sport. Everybody donned old disposal clothes - just in case the venture was a failure and we were on the receiving end of the skunk's defense mechanism. I recall that the day was cold and overcast, necessitating warm apparel. I wore a pair of old boots - several sizes too large - I was always clumsy in my oversize brogans and prone to stumble at best. My overalls were gallused over a number of suits of ragged underwear and a disposable shirt over all that. To top off my rig I wore a long overcoat that practically dragged the ground - and a nondescript hat pulled down over my ears.

Omer led the procession, followed by Papa, Martha, Lyda, and Berneice in that order, with me bringing up the rear guard.

I do not remember the specific details of getting the skunk out of the den where it hunched in the trap. It was facing us, however, and since it was caught by the forepaw it could be urged to come forward, keeping the aiming end pointed away from its conquerors. The game was to lead the creature gently from its den on the side of the hill to a pool in the small creek nearby. Why this method of execution was chosen, I do not know. Somewhere in the back of my mind it seems that we'd been told that a skunk under water could not spray effectively; so the object was quickly to submerge its entire body, especially the rear part. I can still see the bewildered, pained look on the face of that helpless skunk as Omer pulled ever so cautiously on the long wire attached to the trap. We had all been cautioned that if the little beastie by some means should be able to turn its rear toward us and raise its tail we were to scatter as fast and as far as we could scamper over the rough, frozen hillside. This did not happen, and when we reached the water's edge, Omer quickly dunked the trap with the skunk attached deep into the water and held it there with a long stick. We all stood around looking as solemn as though we expected some priest to miraculously appear and begin reciting a requiem mass. Presently a thick, oily, green skum arose to the top of the quiet pool. It soon spread from bank to bank, covering the entire surface. The water was not flowing from the pool so the skum became thicker and more oily looking as the hapless skunk sprayed its protective fluid into the water in a futile effort to protect itself.

Why I was not content to remain on the bank with the rest of the clan, I don't have any idea. The creek had a sandy beach from which the skunk had been launched and all the others were gathered along this side of the stream. Perhaps I thought a clearer view could be possible from the opposite side where the bank rose straight up to a height of some three feet. That side was more wooded and rougher than the side where we first gathered. I managed in spite of my cumbersome heavy garb to scramble up the bank and arrive at a point directly opposite and above the pool that was by now one solid sheet of thick, oily green skum, when my feet encased in those oversized boots became tangled in some underbrush and loose rocks. I lost my footing and after stumbling about, grabbing at saplings and twigs, I plunged headfirst down into that nauseating pool with the expiring skunk. I made a perfect bellybuster landing - face down - splashing skunk water all over those standing on the bank.

Fortunately the water was not deep - but also fortunately it was deep enough to prevent my striking my head on some sharp rock and knocking myself out. I lost no time in scrambling to my feet, boots filled with stinking water, clothes soggy with pockets bulging and straining out the water - leaving the residue of skunk oil within my garments. I came out of the near-freezing pool, sputtering and splitting out mouthfuls of green oil and wiping the thick skum from my eyes. Had there been time to speculate, I am sure I would have argued with myself which fate was worse - to drown with my head under water and the tail of the now dead skunk in my mouth or rise to the surface and be swallowed up by that nauseous green, slimy oil.

There was not enough time to speculate or try to arrive at any kind of decision; already my head was coming to the surface. The flop hat that had covered and protected my thick head of hair had floated downstream and now I was crowned not with glossy red locks, but by slimy green strands with beads of oil dripping into my eyes and down into my mouth.

After recovering from the shock and surprise of my splash, the spectators determined that I was not permanently injured, the humor of my predicament struck them and they doubled over with laughter. I could see absolutely nothing humorous in the entire calamity. Up to this point all I could see was green and smell that indescribably horrid odor and taste of skunk oil. Now with the laughter of my fellow conspirators ringing in my slimefilled ears, I began to see red. Probably it was well enough to have something to dissipate that green oil, and the red light from my bleary eyes was what I needed. Ignoring their peals of laughter and to me inappropriate jokes about the taste of the drink, etc. I sloshed my way down the hollow toward home and clean, dry clothing.

Our mother who had not joined in the expedition, saw her disheveled offspring approaching, opened the door to admit my freezing body, but when she got a whiff of that skunk and saw my green skum covered garments she slammed the door in my face and relegated me to the outhouse. She did hurl dry clothing in my direction and set a pan of hot water on the step - at the same time warning me to keep my distance. I recall that from my frigid refuge I watched the rest of the motly group trooping down the hill, still convulsed with laughter.

Some time passed before I was completely accepted back into the family circle about the open fire where the heat from the burning logs would reactivate the skunk oil still soaked into my red hair; a powerful and now familiar odor would slowly waft about the room, and one by one the family would get up and holding their respective noses seek sanctuary around the kitchen stove where I was forbidden to join them - leaving me to suffer my agonies alone by the open fireplace. They did not dare banish me to the kitchen for fear of saturating all the foodstuff and all get a taste of skunk oil at the next meal.

Maud Duncan: A true Winslow treasure

A neglected grave in the overgrown St. Stephens Cemetery on a hillside in the south part of Winslow marks the last resting place of one of the most widely acclaimed citizens of the little town.

The inscription on the small headstone reads simply, "Maud Duncan, b. October 22, 1883 d. January 21, 1958.

Much has been written and more spoken about the personal achievements and contributions of this exceptional person. Almost nothing has been revealed about the heartaches, tragedies and heavy burdens carried by this petite lady throughout her life.

Orphaned - Left an orphan at an early age, she was raised by her father's brother and his wife, Dr. Albert and Virginia C. Dunlap. They also raised a boy, known as J. P., cousin to Maud. Few people knew that the two children were not brother and sister. The education of the young lady was completed before the family moved from Fort Smith to Winslow in 1887. The first record of Maud's activities was that she taught in the one-room log schoolhouse known as Mount Pleasant, south of Winslow.

On February 26, 1894, the 20-year-old Maud was married to H. G. Pearce, telegraph operator for the Frisco Railroad in Winslow. To the couple were born two daughters: Helen, born February 22, 1895, and died September 22, 1903; and Virginia, the second, who lived less than two years.

No records have yet been found as to her dates. She is known to have been born after Helen and lived a short time. Not long after the death of Virginia, the husband disappeared. He returned for the funeral of Helen. Otherwise, he never was seen in the town again.

Apparently, the couple divorced because soon after the death of both children, Maud reverted to the use of her maiden name Dunlap.

In 1905, she became engaged to a young doctor, T. E. Gray, who had established a practice in Winslow. A friend and neighbor, Mrs. J. W. Winn hand-sewed the wedding gown, and preparations were made for a joyous ceremony. Nobody ever knew why that engagement was broken. The wedding never took place.

The June 1908 issue of The Winslow Mirror, a short-lived monthly newspaper reported, "On the morning of June third, (1908) at St. Stephens Episcopal Church, Miss Maud Dunlap became the bride of Mr. Gilbert Nelson Duncan." Mr. Duncan was an energetic newspaperman who soon purchased the haltering publication and changed the name to The Winslow American. The first weekly issue came off the press on Friday, September 4, 1908, and continued without interruption until the frail widow of G. N. Duncan put out the last copy in the 1950s.

From her foster father, Dr. Albert Dunlap, Maud learned pharmacy and became one of the first woman pharmacists in Arkansas.

Later in the year of their marriage, the Duncans built a two-story stone house on the east side of Winslow.

The first floor housed the pharmacy and gift shop. On the second floor the newspaper was published. On this upper floor the couple established the first lending library in the town. This period of married happiness was of a short duration - a little more than 10 years. Both husband and wife exerted tireless efforts and much time in the war effort during World War I.

The husband was not alive to realize the fruits of victory. He died after a brief illness early on the day that the Armistice was signed, November 11, 1918. The day that was filled with rejoicing for most Americans was a day clouded with grief for the staunch young pharmacist, who that day was left a widow. She never remarried.

Alone, she attempted to operate the drug store and to publish the paper. Too much an idealist and too generous a philanthropist, she was not a practical businesswoman in regard to money matters.

The dwindling business in the drugstore prompted her to sell that enterprise to a young pharmacist, Dick Page, who revitalized the venture. The newspaper work was also becoming more of a strain on the aging woman.

From a fair-sized weekly of four pages it became little more than a news bulletin printed on a single 11 x 8-1/2 size sheet.

The family fortunes dwindled after the demise of the foster parents. Dr. Dunlap died in 1910 - his wife, Virginia died in 1936. Dr. Dunlap had drawn a small Confederate pension from the State of Arkansas for his services as a doctor in the Civil War.

His widow continued to draw a lesser amount until her death. After that time, Maud existed on a pittance. No form of assistance had been established by the government, and there were many days when the cupboard was completely bare. People were sympathetic, but sympathy cannot appease the pangs of hunger. Never weighing more than 100 pounds at the most, this frail lady was reduced to no more than 70 pounds.

Yet, she continued to print the little paper. After the stone building housing the drugstore and printing office was destroyed by fire in 1935, a smaller press was purchased and set up in a flimsy frame building that was like an icehouse in the winter.

It contained one large room which was not even ceilinged. Here the cold-numbed fingers set the hand type and published the paper. She had barely enough strength in her frail body to operate the press; yet the paper came out - at irregular intervals in the last years.

Too poor to buy wood to heat her house and too frail to wield an ax, she often was seen with a small hatchet trying to cut enough brush to build a fire. More than once she was found unconscious by the roadside where she had fallen from complete exhaustion.

After the demise of Mrs. Duncan, that last one-room building was moved to the top of the mountain south of Winslow beside present Highway 71. An attempt was made to establish a Maud Duncan museum. The contents soon were vandalized, and disappeared. The printing press was purchased by Harvey Jones; it now is in the Harber Museum near Grove, Oklahoma. The building, operated for a time as the Winslow American Cafe, now houses the community-operated "Meals on Wheels."

The real estate holdings of the family were heavily mortgaged, and finally most were lost to creditors.

In spite of all adversities the proud head never bowed. Offers of assistance were politely refused. What could friends do? Like many other proud Americans she preferred hunger and privation rather than accept charity.

Upon the occasions when she was invited to dine in the homes of neighbors, her hunger betrayed her and she ate as if famished. Care must have been exercised in extending these invitations. As friend and neighbor, they were graciously accepted; but had they hinted of charity, they would have been just as graciously declined.

Always soft-spoken, the voice was filled with kindness; every syllable revealed a lady of refinement.

The expression was never of ill will nor resentment nor self pity. The wistful smile betrayed an inner sadness. The deep gray eyes glowed with personal power. They never sparkled in lighthearted merriment, though one could imagine their twinkling with amusement or delight in lighter moments of youth. The hair was always the same, fashioned in an individual coiffure; the dress the same pattern - a long shirt - even after the fashion of shorter skirts became the vogue - a simple band around the waist - the same dress of the same plain, washable material.

A woman of her intellect and bearing was impervious to the whims of fashion in dress. People were impressed with the face and character written there and not with the material attire.

Always active in civic matters, she showed special interest in the affairs of the town when the Nineteenth Amendment became the law of the land in 1920, giving women the right to vote. In 1925, she ran for mayor with a full slate of women candidates for City Council. Somewhat with tongue in cheek, the men supported her candidacy and Winslow became the first town in the nation to have an all-woman government. It became known as the "Petticoat Government," and attracted nationwide publicity. After two terms of credible service, the ladies quietly abdicated and did not run for office again.

In 1956, the frail body racked by poor health and encroaching age and burdened with the responsibilities of insurmountable debts, began to fail.

Fantasies of the past became more dominant than realities of the present. Neighbors arranged for her to be admitted to a retirement home in Fayetteville where she received the warmth and needed care during her last years.

When acquaintances called to visit, they were always greeted with the same warm smile and soft, pleasant voice and gracious show of welcome. She would make gestures of recognition, but visitors noticed that she seldom called them by name.

Perhaps the visiting faces blended into one composite recollection of the town and its people who were her whole life and to whom she had given such full measure of love and devotion.

When the time came on January 21, 1958, she was honored in the tiny Episcopal church that she helped establish 70 years before and to which she contributed so much.

Then she was laid to rest in the wooded cemetery on the hillside beside the bodies of her husband and the two small children she had borne.

With the passing of this indomitable little woman, the most illustrious chapter in the history of Winslow was closed.
