Dedication

Thank you to my cousin Gary Blythe for all you have done throughout your lifetime to preserve and protect our precious family heirlooms. Without your dedication and respect for family history this account could not have been written and our past would have been lost.

You are the hero of this story.

To The Reader

This report is formatted as a timeline of Captain John Little's life. At the end of the report is an appendix for each chapter which gives the documentation I used as well as other historical information pertinent to that phase of John Little's life.

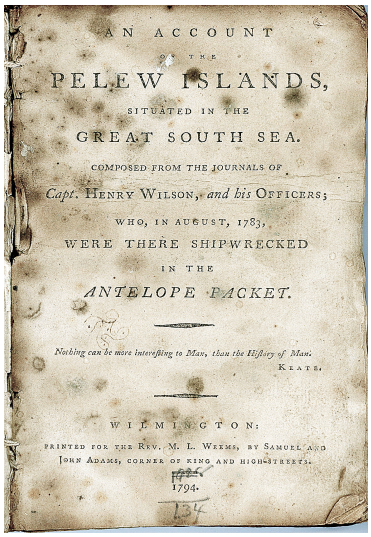

My suggestion is to review the corresponding appendix before moving to the next chapter.

There are three additional appendixes: one with Family Group sheets and Pedigree charts, one examining the relationships between the Little, Huitt, Dodd, Gentry and Keel families and one for DNA connections to John Little's lineage.

1 Introduction and Overview

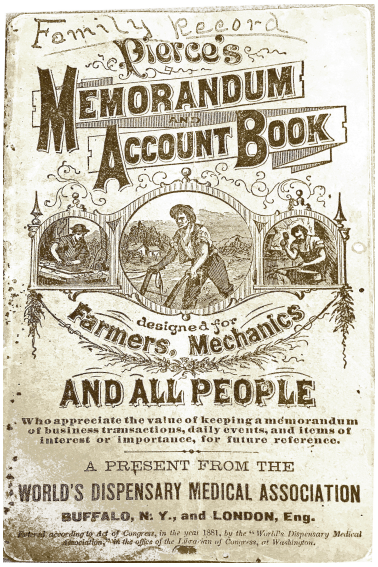

We are fortunate to have three very precious family artifacts that allow us to carry Captain John Little's story forward:

The 1794-published book "An Account of the Pelew Islands" owned by Captain John Little with his and others' handwritten entries, an 1882 Memorandum book handwritten with family history by his descendant, William Bright Turman and an 1829-published Bible owned by William Little, John Little's son.

Gary Blythe, a direct descendant of Captain John Little, has preserved these three documents and many other Little family heirlooms. Combined with research, documentation and a bit of speculation, they give us a good picture of John Little's life.

The 1794 book contains the handwritten names of several South Carolina and Georgia contemporaries of John Little. Some of the faded handwritten entries required significant computer image refinement to become visible. The people identified appear in petitions, records and census documents for the areas. Some have been noted in the appendix for this chapter.

While the 1882 Memorandum book was written more than 100 years after Captain John's birth, and William Bright Turman was born after his grandfather's death, three points make it a timely resource:

First, Captain John lived until the early 1840's and his second wife Sarah lived past that time. That puts the book about 40 years post-death which is a reasonable time for memories to be accurate.

Second, William Bright Turman's mother, Eliza Little Turman was the daughter of Captain John Little. Eliza was still living when this account was written and had lived with her father until her marriage and his death. It is not inconceivable that she dictated or at least participated in the writing of the Memorandum book drawing on both her father's and her own memories.

Third, the Littles and the Turmans exchanged many letters in the 1840's and 1850's which reference family events and confirm several facts written in the Memorandum book.

The 1829 Bible contains birth, marriage and death information for John Little's descendants as written by his son William.

The Memorandum Book names Captain John's father as George Little from London, England but the family identified with and settled around Scots-Irish immigrants so it is likely they were of Scots-Irish descent. The original Little Clan was a Border Clan living mainly in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, adjoining the English County of Cumberland. The Little Clan is listed in a 1587 register of Clans at the Scottish Parliament. They were known as reivers (raiders) and were troublemakers for the King of England who, in the 1600's, transported about 200,000 people from the various Border Clans to Northern Ireland hoping to stop their raids into England.

Dumfriesshire, Scotland

The movement of Scots to Ireland fostered the term Scots-Irish, also known as Ulster-Irish. So far, we don't know whether our Littles moved from Scotland to Ireland or came straight from Scotland to the British Colonies in America. Between 1717 and 1776 about a quarter of a million Scots-Irish arrived in the American colonies. Most settled first in Pennsylvania then, as their numbers grew, in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. From there they pushed into the frontiers of the Carolinas.

The Scots-Irish brought with them the clan traits learned from centuries of conflict with England and with other clans. They were known for their loyalty, especially within their family and clan, their distrust of governmental authority and restrictions, and their willingness to fight. During the American Revolution they were generally ardent supporters of American Independence and in Pennsylvania, Virginia and the Carolinas Scots-Irish support for the revolution was practically unanimous.

Clan Little Shield

Perhaps the most useful of the Scots-Irish traits was their individualism and self-sustainability. Their individualism drove them to settle far away from established society. Combined with their ability to self-sustain and survive without help, they had exactly the skills needed to be at the forefront of America's expansion.

I recommend two excellent books about the nature of the Scots-Irish:

"Born Fighting: How the Scots-Irish Shaped America" by Jim Webb and "Albion's Seed: Four British Folkways in America, Vol. 1" by David Hackett Fischer.

2 Early Life and Family

Captain John Little's early life is understandably difficult to document. Official records are scarce in the 1700's and the records that do exist rarely give names of anyone other than the head of the household.

We know very little about Captain John's mother, not even her first name, but she is described in the Memorandum Book as "a Welsh woman of the family of Hale". The family's oral history is that she was one of the earliest schoolteachers in Virginia.

As mentioned before, Captain John's father, George Little, was likely of Scots-Irish descent.

To date (2019) I have found no confirmed documentation of our George Little in the United States, however there are some strong possibilities:

- A 1750 Virginia Muster Roll listing a George Little among men in the Virginia Colony.
- A George Little providing provisions to the South Carolina Militia during the Revolutionary War and requesting payment for them.
- A headstone request made by the DAR for a Captain George Little of the South Carolina Regiment Revolutionary War who died and was buried in 1815 in the Anthony Thompson Cemetery in Calhoun, Kentucky.
- A South Carolina Patriots Roster listing several Littles including sons of our George Little.

Colonial Immigrants to America

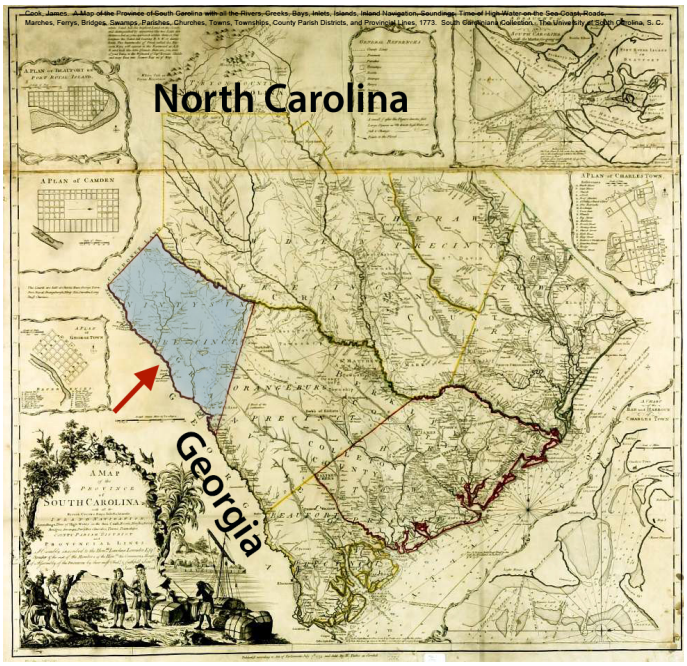

George and his wife had the following children: sons Jonas (~1755-1821), Joseph (dates unknown), Samuel (dates unknown), George (dates unknown), John (~1750-59-1843) and William (dates unknown) and daughters Charity (dates unknown), Betsy (probably Elizabeth) (dates unknown), and Judy (dates unknown).

Jonas Little settled in Union County, in the Ninety-Sixth District of South Carolina, married Rebecca Roundtree there in 1780 and served in the Revolutionary War in Col. Thomas Brandon's Regiment. Note: other officers in that regiment were surnamed Wofford. This will foretell a connection between the Littles and the Woffords in Georgia.

Jonas and Rebecca had at least 5 children: Ruth Little Springer, Jonas, Benjamin, Thomas and Amos Bingham. Jonas appears in many records for South Carolina and his military service is well documented. He died in Union County, South Carolina in 1821.

Joseph Little appears in the Union County, South Carolina census lists through 1800. Those census records indicate a birth date between 1756-1774. Until more documentation is found we do not know if he was an older or younger brother to our John Little.

1773 South Carolina Ninety-Sixth District

Samuel Little, per our 1882 Memorandum Book, was a cripple and a millwright. There is a land purchase in Camden, South Carolina for a Samuel Little in 1792. It is presumed that this is our Samuel Little. There is a record of Samuel living with his brothers William and John in Franklin County, Georgia around 1800.

George Little There are various records associated with the name George Little but we have not confirmed they are for our George Little.

William Little There is a record of William living with his brother John and Samuel in Franklin County, Georgia in about 1800. No further documentation has been found.

Charity Little married John Springer as mentioned in the Memorandum Book and in the note below. No further documentation has been found.

Betsy (probably Elizabeth) Little married a Vest per the Memorandum Book No further documentation has been found.

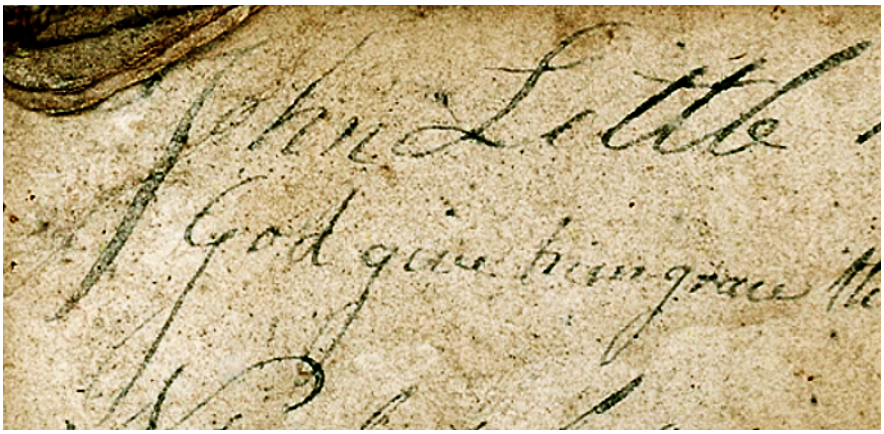

Judy (possibly Judith) Little is mentioned in the Memorandum Book but no further documentation of her has been found to date. The book states she married a Canterbery.

[note: The 1882 Memorandum Book lists a Charity Little and a Betsy Little as both John Little's sisters and his daughters. It is probable that John Little named his daughters after his sisters.The Memorandum Book clearly states the husbands' names of each Charity and each Betsy.

As of this writing, we have confirmed DNA-test matches to descendants of John's siblings Jonas, Joseph and George. As well as confirmed DNA-test matches to descendants of eleven of John's 14 known children. In total we have several hundred DNA-test matches to Little descendants.

John Little's Life

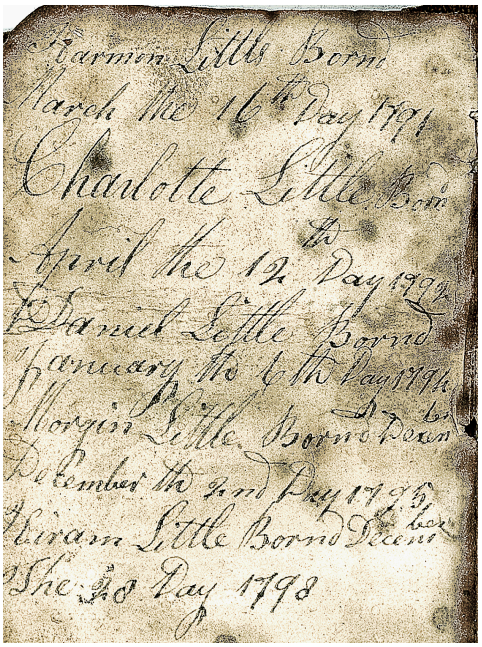

And that brings us to our John Little. I will attempt to place his life in a chronology recognizing there will be gaps in time where documentation has not been found or is tentative. The timeline of his life paints a clear picture of an adventurer and risk-taker, a passionate, vocal and involved citizen, and a man who kept lifelong connections with others who shared similar traits…carrying forward his Scots-Irish heritage.

3 A Young Family in South Carolina

John was born between 1750-1759 and our Memorandum Book indicates his birth was in Virginia. That is certainly possible but since his older brother Jonas claims a birthplace of South Carolina, more research is needed. Did George Little move his family from Virginia to South Carolina before or after the birth of John?

Children's birthdates from the Pelew Islands book

There are several Little families in the 1790 census of Union County, South Carolina. And more than one John Little. More research is needed to identify our John Little in that census.

The 1794 book "An Account of the Pelew Islands" mentioned at the beginning of this biography has a list of birthdates starting in 1791. Initially it was thought these were John Little's children but further research now leans to them possibly being his grandchildren. They may be the children of John Morgan Little who MAY be our John's first child. The list of birthdates was clearly important enough to be written into the book.

Being a young man in the midst of the Revolutionary War, and seeing his father and at least one brother, Jonas, involved in that War, it is not surprising that the next mention of John is in the Charleston Gazette of January 1795 in a list of the South Carolina Militia. John is listed as a Captain in the "Thiteenth (sic), or lower Regiment of Spartanburgh (sic) County" under Lt. Col. Thomas Brandon. The same officer under whom his brother Jonas served.

1795 Listing in Charleston Gazette

Based on the birthdates of their children and land records in Union County, South Carolina, we can project that John, his first wife Winnie Lewis and 5 of their children: the above possible son John Morgan, Charity, Betsy, Rebecca, and Sally—lived in the Union County area of South Carolina until about 1795.

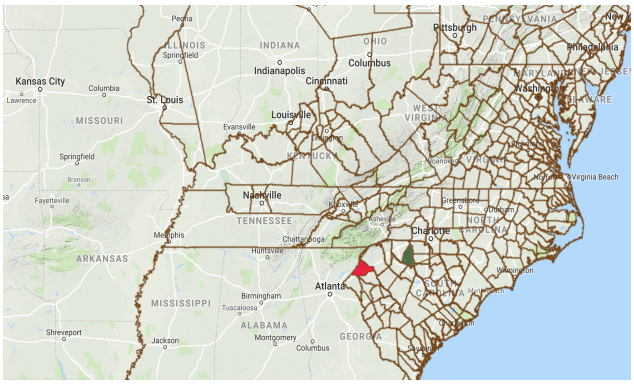

4 The Move To Georgia

In about 1795 John, Winnie and their young family moved from South Carolina to Franklin County, Georgia. This date is plausible because John's son, John "Jack" Little, was born in 1795 and in later records he states he was born in Georgia.

Georgia's pre-Revolutionary War population was small to begin with and after the War, with casualties and with British sympathizers leaving the colonies, the population had severely decreased. In order to populate the new State, Georgia offered free land to new settlers. Unfortunately Georgia's free land offer created future problems. The land was not surveyed properly and when the surveys were later completed, many settlers, including John Little's family, were found to be outside the United States boundary on Cherokee lands. Eventually the settlers would receive orders to leave the land. But, of course, that was not known when John and Winnie made their way south to join the Nathan Smith Settlement in Franklin County.

1797 United States Counties: Union County, SC in green, Franklin County, GA in red

The road to Georgia was likely over the established Indian trail systems. The Lower Cherokee Trader's Path and the Upper Road both went through Union and neighboring Spartanburg Counties toward Tugaloo, Georgia, near current Toccoa. Tugaloo was the closest settled area to the Nathan Smith and Wofford Settlements. The distance was about 100 miles and we can presume John Little and his wife and young children walked a good part of the way. A wagon and horses likely carried the essentials for starting their new life: tools, food, tents, and household basics.

Early Migration Routes between the Carolinas and Georgia

Col. William Wofford, head of the adjoining Wofford Settlement, provided the government with an "as of 1st February 1798" household count of all the border settlements. The exact date of his report is unknown but we know it was written after 1798 because settlers who had moved away were included and marked with the letter R or the word "removed" to indicate they had left the settlement already. It seems likely the report was written in about 1800. Wofford also separately listed the households which had arrived after the 1798 date.

The 1798 list of settlers was significant because a government survey of the land had finally been completed and some of the settlements were deemed "outside the boundary" and therefore encroaching on Cherokee Nation land.

The 1798 list named four original settlements containing 46 households: The Wofford Settlement with 22 households, the Nathan Smith Settlement with 13 households, the Captain John Little Settlement with 5 households and the Dunagan Settlement with 6 households.

After 1798, owing to new settlers moving in, old settlers moving out and the inevitable new households created by marriage between settlers' children, there were a total of 76 households: The Wofford Settlement with 28 households , the Nathan Smith Settlement with 30 households , the Captain John Little Settlement with 10 households, and the Dunagan Settlement with 8 households.

The land dispute between the government, the settlers and the Cherokee continued for several years. There were many petitions to the Governors of Georgia regarding the settlement boundaries and protection needed from the Cherokee. Our John Little was active and involved in the petitions, both as a signer and as the main point of contact on at least one. As we can see from his 1794 Pelew Islands book, John was literate. That may have been one reason he was at the forefront of communications. The Huitts and the Dodds, both of whom married into the Little family and lived in the Little settlement, also signed the petitions.

5 The Captain John Little Settlement

In about 1798/1799, a group of the Nathan Smith Settlement split off to form the Captain John Little Settlement. Brothers Solomon, James, William and John Huitt had been in Franklin County several years before John Little's arrival and they were all presumably a part of the Nathan Smith Settlement. Additionally, James Little, presumably John Little's brother, was also in Georgia prior to John Little. Solomon and James Huitt and James Little signed petitions to the Governor of Georgia in 1793. While Solomon and James Huitt joined the new Little group, their brother John Huitt remained with the Nathan Smith Settlement. Because Solomon and James Huitt married John Little's daughters Charity and Elizabeth, it is likely the small John Little Settlement was made up entirely of family members. John and Winnie's three youngest children, John "Jack", Delilah and James were all born in Georgia.

There is a deed conveyance (Indenture) recorded in Georgia to John Little of Franklin County, from George Sibbald of Augusta, written on October 8, 1799, Sibbald owned huge tracts of land in Georgia. The document states John Little has paid for 102 acres of Franklin County land in full and now owns the land. The Indenture was recorded April 16, 1802. The land was first surveyed and owned by William Call in 1788. It seems likely this is our John Little. It indicates he was in Franklin County in October 1799 and at that time planned to stay. This land purchase may very well be the beginning of the Captain John Little Settlement.

After the Captain John Little Settlement was established, it included the households of John and Winnie Lewis Little, who by 1800 had at least 9 children; Solomon and Charity Little Huitt who had at least 2 children by 1800; James and Betsy Little Huitt whose sons Lemuel and Elijah were born in 1797 and 1800 in Georgia respectively; William Dodd and his brother Jesse Dodd (whose assumed son Michael would later marry Sally Little, one of John Little's daughters). Jesse and William Dodd served in Col. Brandon's South Carolina Regiment along with John Little, all being listed in the regiment on the 1790 U.S. Census for Union County, SC.

Additional householders in the John Little Settlement after 1798 were Garrot Watts, Jesse Scarborough, Lewis Phebies(sic), Peter Bauguss, Lewis Williams, Martin Williams, Stephen Williams and Gideon Canteburry. To date, I have not traced these households.

While there were now 15 households in the Little Settlement, the actual number of people was significantly more. There were likely upwards of 60 people living in this small settlement on the edge of the Georgia/Cherokee border clearing the land, carving out homesteads, raising their children, establishing communities and living in a sometimes uneasy relationship with the Cherokee.

6 Outside the Line

By 1797 the frontier settlements had been homesteading for several years. Franklin County had been established by the State of Georgia in 1784 based on the boundaries described in the Treaties of Augusta and the Treaty of New York which were made between the Cherokee and Creek nations and the Federal Government. William Wofford purchased land in 1787 from an original 1786 land grant of unsurveyed land. His purchase opened up the area to the new Little, Smith and Dunagan settlements.

In 1797 the Federal Government sent Benjamin Hawkins to do an official survey of the Franklin County boundary. Hawkins finalized the survey in February 1798 and the "Hawkins Line" determined that several families' lands were within the Cherokee Nation, not within Georgia. Those families would lose their investment if forced to relinquish the land back to the Cherokee.

Location of Wofford Settlement inside the disputed area

The Hawkins Line itself was flawed in that it did not reference the originally described boundaries of the Treaties. The error was brought to light after the survey was complete, nevertheless the Hawkins Line remained the official boundary determination.

Thus began years of negotiation with the Cherokee culminating in the Federal Government's 1804 purchase of a swath of land 4 miles by 23 miles to accommodate the existing settlements. The treaty was signed 24 October 1804. Despite the treaty, there were still disputes over the land and who was allowed to settle there. Due to political and administrative delays, it took fully twenty years before the United States Senate would ratify the Treaty. There are many articles written about the Wofford and other associated Settlements including an excellent one by Carl Flowers, Jr.

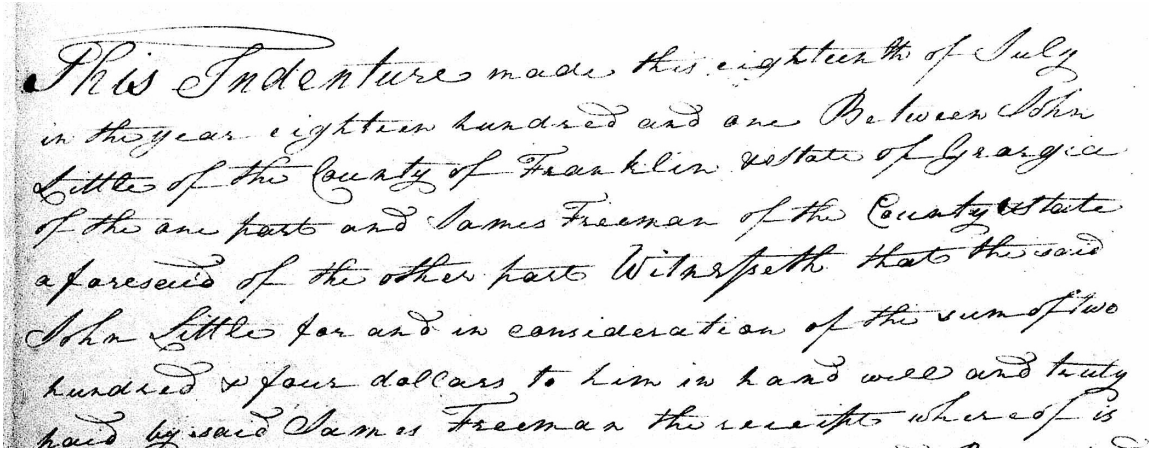

In Carl Flower's article he notes that Georgia Commissioners negotiated a delay for the settlers to remain on the land through Christmas Day 1802 while the permanent negotiations continued. When that date came and went and no settlers had been forcibly removed from the land, the Commissioners again requested that the Cherokee allow them to remain on the land. The Cherokee agreed to allow the settlers to remain until April 10, 1803. At that time another attempt was made by the government to buy or lease the small tract of land over the line. It was again refused by the Cherokee. Finally on 24 October, 1804 an agreement was reached for a purchase price of $5,000 and an annual fee of $1,000.

For the settlers caught up in this more than seven year process there was great uncertainty. From 1795 to 1798 John Little set down roots with confidence. In 1799, assuming the previously mentioned land purchase is in fact for our John Little, his confidence in the settlement had continued after the Hawkins Line was set.

In the Pelew Islands book, John frequently writes the year 1799. And in one entry specifically states September 18, 1799. Since Solomon Huitt's name also appears in this book, we can assume that John Little and his family were living in the Franklin County settlement toward the end of 1799. His 1799 deed would corroborate that. But the uncertainty of the status of his land must have caused concern because it appears that John left Franklin County in 1801.

On July 18, 1801, John Little of Franklin County sold the land he had purchased in 1799. The new owner was James Freeman. It indicates he had left, or was about to leave, the Georgia settlement. The deed of sale was recorded on April 25, 1803. John had purchased the land for $102.00. He sold it for $204.00. With such an increase in value over two years, we can infer he had cultivated the land and improved it with structures during his time there.

7 Return to South Carolina

In about 1801 John Little signed a petition to the State of South Carolina asking for more representation in the frontier area of South Carolina. His signature on this petition is a good match to his signature in the Pelew Islands book.

Additionally, in the Pelew Islands book there is a signature dated 10 August, 1801 by Peyton Simmons. Peyton Simmons was a resident of South Carolina until his death in 1860, so we can assume John Little was in South Carolina by August of 1801.

Whether he was there temporarily or whether he had actually moved from Georgia back to South Carolina at that point remains unknown, but given the sale of his Georgia land in July 1801 it seems probable that he made the move back to South Carolina. At least one of his brothers, Jonas, still lived there.

Two excerpts from a ~1801 Greenville, SC petition showing John Little's signature

Of interest is that Jesse and William Dodd, who were listed in the Little Settlement in Georgia both appear on the 1800 U.S. Census in Union County, South Carolina. Also known is that Jesse Dodd sold his own Georgia property in 1802.

Other signatures in the Pelew Islands book are from Spartanburg and Union Counties, South Carolina, and were presumably made after John Little's return to the State.

From those documents it appears that some of the Little Settlement households had left or "removed" from the Franklin County area between 1800-1801 and had returned to their home counties of South Carolina.

It also appears that John's first wife Winnie Lewis died sometime between March 1800 when her last child was born and 1804 when John moved back to Georgia.

8 The Move West

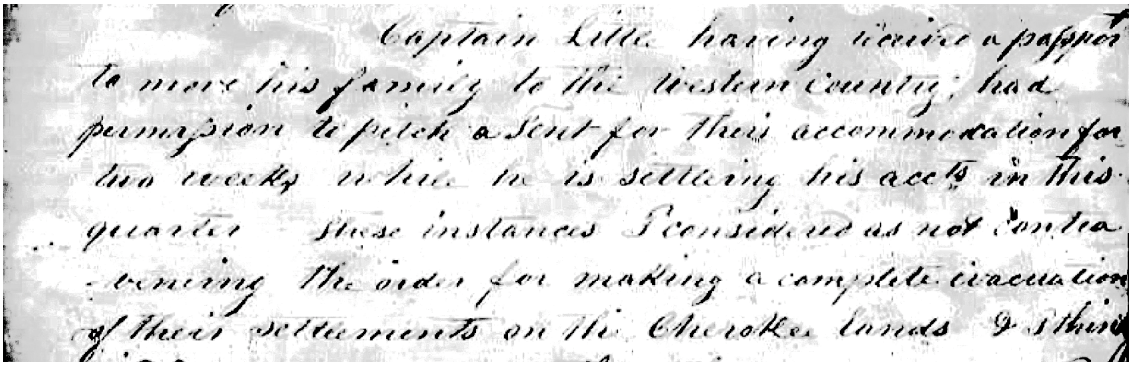

By June of 1802 John Little had returned to Franklin County from South Carolina. His signature appears, along with the Huitts, on a petition to the Governor of Georgia asking that the strip of disputed land on the Franklin County border be purchased from the Cherokee. The petition states there are "not less than 700 souls" living in the disputed area.

John had sold his land in 1801 so it is unclear where he was living upon his return. It is possible that James and Solomon Huitt were living there at the time. I have found no deed indicating John purchased land in 1802, however we know he had established accounts in Franklin County because they are mentioned in a September 1804 report.

On September 3rd, 1804, Major Thomas Bell reported to Brigadier General Buckner Harris on the state of the settlements "within the Indian boundary". Harris was then serving in the Georgia General Assembly representing the adjacent Jackson County. The Franklin County settlers living outside the boundary had been ordered to leave their land and Bell was reporting on their compliance. The Cherokee land purchase was still in negotiation and would not be finalized for almost two more months.

Bell's report indicated the settlers were in compliance with two notable exceptions that Bell thought were reasonable: Isham Smith's wife was too ill to be moved, and Captain Little was given permission to pitch a tent for two weeks while he settled his accounts before moving his family to "the western country". Bell indicated John Little had already received a passport for travel through the Cherokee Nation. The western country at that time would have been Tennessee, Kentucky and the new land of the Louisiana Purchase.

Bell had also sent his report to Colonel Return J. Meigs who was based in Tennessee. Meigs was both the U.S. Indian agent to the Cherokee Nation and the military agent for the United States War Department at that time.

Captain Little having received a passport to move his family to the Western Country, had permission to pitch a Tent for their accommodation for two weeks while he is settling his accts in this quarter these instances I consider as not contravening the order for making a complete evacuation of their settlements on the Cherokee lands & this

Excerpt of September 1804 status report on the Franklin County Settlements

Bell's report places John Little and family in Franklin County in late August/early September 1804 and indicates to us that the Littles left for “the western country” in mid-September with written permission to pass through the Cherokee lands. There are few surviving Cherokee passports from that time and, unfortunately, John Little’s has not been found. In the appendix I have included an example of a passport.

John’s land had been sold three years before Bell's report. It is my assumption from this report that John Little was living in a temporary tent because, as indicated in the report, there was some unfinished business in Franklin County. It is also possible that he was reuniting with the Huitts and his daughters there before proceeding west together. Additionally John had by now met his second wife,Sarah Bolton, who lived in Franklin County with her mother, Mary Keyes Bolton Box and stepfather Michael Box. Sarah lists James' birthdate along with her own children birthdates so I believe Winnie Lewis died soon after his birth, likely in 1800/1801. And Sarah raised James as her own.

It seems likely to me that the Little family traveled with the Huitts and possibly Michael Dodd son of one of the Little Settlement Dodds. I base this on a few connections:

1) Solomon and Charity Little Huitt had married by this time and had at least two children born by 1804.
2) James and Elizabeth Little Huitt had married by this time and had at least 3 children born by 1804.
3) John Little had at least 9 children born before 1804.
4) Michael Dodd, son of one of the Dodds of the Little Settlement, also appears at the end of this westward journey. So it is very possible he traveled with them. Michael would have been about 24 at the time. He eventually married John Little’s daughter Sarah “Sally” Little.

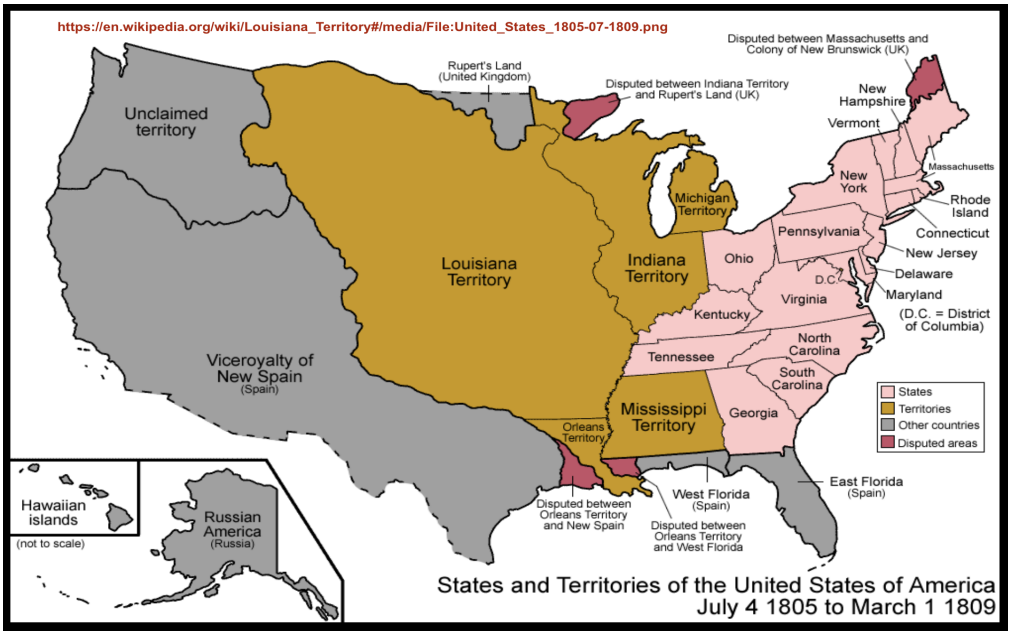

It would make sense then for the long-time friends and now in-laws to make this long journey together to support each other.

The journey before them was over 600 miles long , first through the Cherokee Nation then across Tennessee and Kentucky. They would have used the old Indian trail system into Tennessee, probably on the Unicoi Trail for the first part of the journey. At about 10 miles per day, without rest stops, it would have taken two months to reach their destination.

We know John was in Franklin County in September of 1804 from Bell's report. His name appears on a petition in the Louisiana-Missouri Territory in June of 1805. So the family's journey west occurred between those dates. They may have stopped to overwinter partway through the journey.

9 The Louisiana-Missouri Territory

By 1805, the families of John Little, Solomon Huitt, and James Huitt as well as Michael Dodd had reached the new Louisiana Territory. The Huitts' brother John Wilkinson Huitt, who had also been in Franklin County, had migrated to the Indiana Territory by 1804 and settled just northeast of St. Louis in what was to become southern Illinois. The United States had just completed the Louisiana Purchase adding approximately 827,000 square miles of land west of the Mississippi River in addition to hundreds of thousands of acres to the east and north. The 1803 land acquisition more than doubling the size of the United States.

Map of United States Territories as of 1809

John, Solomon, James and Michael settled in Bellevue (now Belleview), Missouri just west of the Mississippi River across from current day Illinois and Kentucky. All of them signed petitions to President Thomas Jefferson in 1805 and 1806 regarding their support of the Territorial Governor James Wilkinson. Wilkinson would turn out to be a poor choice as he was later charged with treason during the War of 1812.

A New Marriage and Children in Missouri

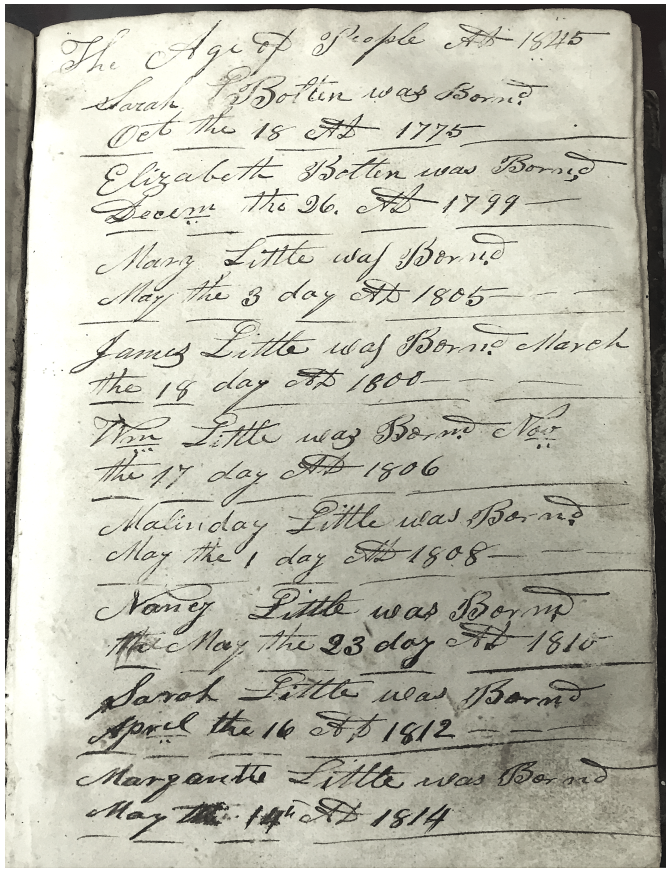

John's first wife Winnie Lewis had died. Their last child, James, was born in about 1800 in Georgia. It is likely John married his second wife Sarah Bolton before leaving Georgia. It would have been unusual for her to travel with him unmarried and John had very young children who needed care. It is certain that by 1805 John had remarried to Sarah Bolton.

We don't know exactly when they married but they had their first child Mary "Polly" Little on May 3rd, 1805. Mary's birth is listed in her brother William's 1829 bible. Given the year, she would have been born in Missouri. John Little's first signed petition from Bellevue was in June of 1805. the Memorandum Book indicates she married an Isaac Hughes, however there has been no other documentation found for her. Mary's daughter Malinda Ann Hughes was born in Missouri in 1827 per Sarah Bolton's book. We have DNA-matched to several of her descendants.

John's son William clearly states on all records that he was born in Missouri in November 1806 and John Little signed petitions in Missouri in 1806.

John and Sarah appear to have stayed in Missouri through at least 1817 when their youngest child Eliza was born. Eliza is clear about her birth in Missouri in subsequent records but we have not determined the exact location. It is possible they stayed longer: there are two land purchases, 1823 and 1824, for a John Little in Cape Girardeau. It is also possible these are for his son John "Jack" Little who would have been in his late 20's at that time.

Birthdates from 1829 William Little Bible

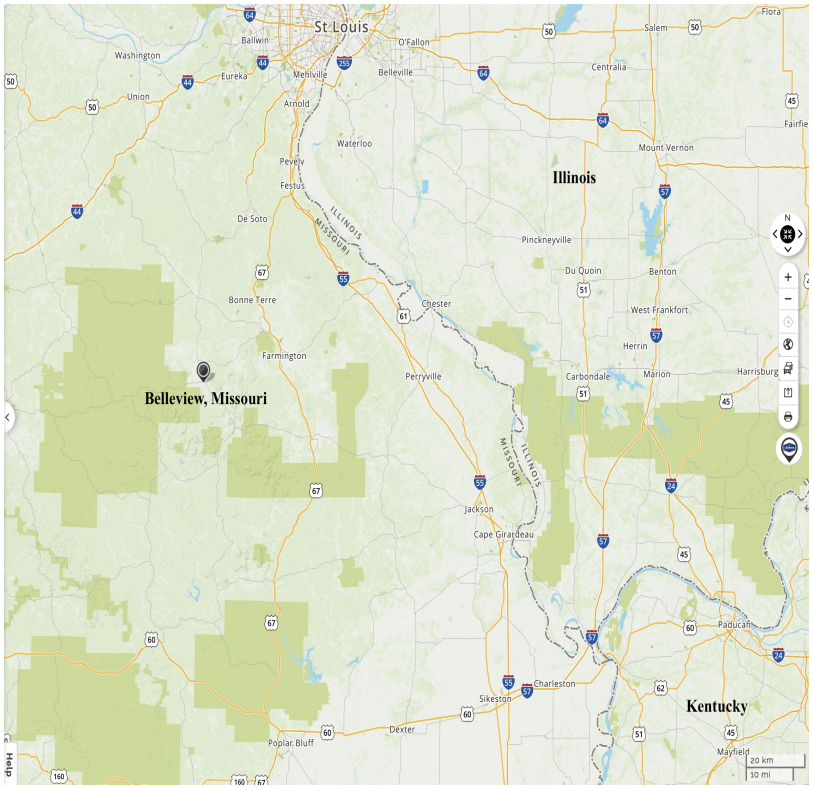

The Missouri years after 1806 are not well documented. There were no U.S. Censuses taken in the Louisiana-Missouri Territory for 1810 or 1820.The Territorial Census records for 1814, 1816, and most of 1818 were lost or destroyed.

One major event was, however, very well reported: the New Madrid earthquake of 1811-1812. To this day it remains one of the most powerful earthquakes to hit the United States. On December 6, 1811 the initial quake struck with an estimated magnitude of 72.-8.2 followed by a magnitude 7.4 aftershock later that day. The epicenter of the first quake was in present day NE Arkansas, luckily a sparsely populated area. A few weeks later on January 12, 1812 a magnitude 7.0-8.0 quake hit the Missouri bootheel causing severe landslides and earth upheavals. Two weeks later on February 7, 1812, another quake of magnitude 7.4-8.6 was epicentered at New Madrid, Missouri Territory. The town was destroyed. As far away as St. Louis many houses were severely damaged. Eyewitness accounts talk of the terror people felt and the sense that nowhere was safe. It is certain that John Little's family and the Huitts and the Dodds would have experienced these quakes. The Keels, a family from Franklin County, Georgia that later married into the Littles, had been living in Kentucky when the earthquake struck. They, along with many other families, left Kentucky after the quake. The Keels moved to Lawrence County, Missouri/Arkansas territory to join other family members and start over.

In 1814 James Huitt, Betsy Little's husband and Solomon Huitt's brother, died in Bellevue, Missouri at the age of about 40. Betsy was left with at least seven children ranging from newborn to 17 years old. By 1830, and almost certainly before that, she had remarried Thomas Brock in Bellevue and they spent the rest of their lives together until Betsy's death in 1861. They are buried at the Huitt-Brock Family Cemetery in Washington County, Missouri. James and Betsy had many descendants. Some are still in the Washington County, Missouri area.

We also know that Michael Dodd and Sally (Sarah) Little had twelve children born in Missouri before moving to Arkansas. Sally died between 1833 when her last child was born and 1839 when Michael remarried to Sally Price, born 1793 in North Carolina. They lived in Saline County, Arkansas.

10 The War of 1812

The War of 1812 was fought between the U.S. and the United Kingdom between 1812-1815. There were several factors that led to war but one of the main was the belief that the British were providing arms to the Indian tribes along the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers. Newly armed, the tribes became a greater threat to the settlers on the frontier and animosity grew toward the British for their actions. The Indians were fighting to retain their hunting grounds that were being overrun by the rush of new homesteaders often in disregard of treaties. The tension erupted into war.

The Creek War was being fought at the same time (1813-1814). It began as a civil war between factions of the Creek tribe. Some wanted to return to traditional life and railed against white encroachment on Creek lands. Others wanted to continue working and negotiating with the U.S. government.

The U.S. became involved with their civil war in the Mississippi territory (now Alabama) when American soldiers stopped a group of the rebel Creeks and took their weapons and possessions. The Creeks retaliated with a surprise attack and the Americans were suddenly included in the civil war.

John Little's presumed grandsons were of military age when the war began.

Harmon, the oldest, enlisted in the 4th regiment (Steele's)-West Tennessee Militia in January 1814 at the age of 22. He served in Captain Randall's Company for about 5 months mainly in Mississippi Territory (now Alabama) as a guard and builder of supply boats.

In December 1814, Harmon applied for and received two Bounty claims in White County, Tennessee for his service. He would settle there and raise his family until his death in 1852. His widow Mary applied for a widow's pension after his death. His descendants have strong roots in Tennessee.

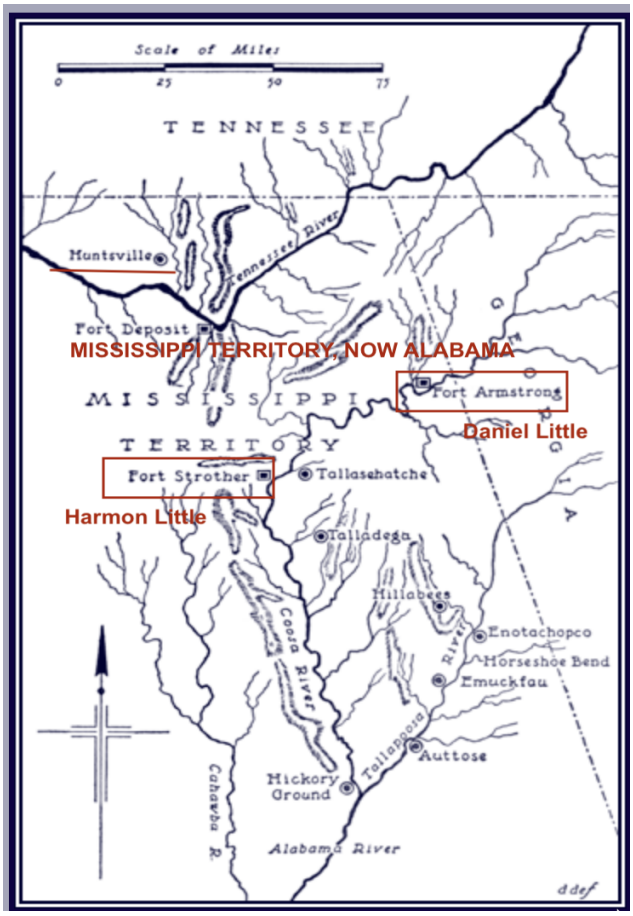

John's second grandson, Daniel, also enlisted in 1814 but in the East Tennessee Militia. He served under Major Thomas C. Clark and Captain Allen Bacon. Clark's battalion was ordered to Fort Armstrong, Mississippi Territory (now in Alabama). Daniel and Harmon served in close proximity to each other.

Daniel also applied for Bounty land after the war.

All of John Little's other children were too young to serve and were likely living with him in Missouri.

Several significant things happened during the war: in August 1814, the British burned the the White House, the Capitol building and several other government buildings. It is the only time in our history that the capital has been occupied by the enemy; in September 1814, Francis Scott Key wrote the National Anthem after the bombardment of Baltimore Harbor; in January 1815, the Battle of New Orleans occurred and was a crushing defeat for the British. One can only imagine the settlers on the frontier anxiously awaiting the news and watching their sons go to war.

11 South to Arkansas

After about 1812, the area around Belleview, Missouri had become more settled. With increased population in the Territory, new counties were being formed to create more local governments. Belleview became part of the newly created Washington County.

During this period, perhaps after the death of his brother James in 1814, Solomon Huitt moved about 140 miles south to New Madrid County, Missouri Territory. In 1815, New Madrid County would split into Lawrence County, Missouri Territory. That same year, Solomon purchased land and the right to run a ferry crossing at Spring River, two miles north of the mouth of the Eleven Point River. The ferry crossing was close to the current day town of Imboden, Arkansas.

Spring River ferry crossing 2 miles north of the Eleven Point River

Solomon is on record as one of the founding settlers of Lawrence County, Missouri Territory. The first term of the Circuit Court of the new county was held at Solomon Huitt's Spring River home.

The shifting boundaries as the country grew westward sometimes make it difficult to determine the exact geographic locations where people lived. It's not unheard of that people suddenly were in a different county or even a different state without moving an inch from their homestead.

As previously mentioned, all records for John's youngest daughter Eliza state she was born in Missouri in 1817, however we don't know where in Missouri. With changing boundaries, her birthplace of Missouri is not as clearcut as it sounds. The Territory of Missouri, formed in 1812, included a part of northern Arkansas until 1819 when the Territory of Arkansas was split off. Solomon Huitt's land was now in Lawrence County, Arkansas Territory instead of Missouri Territory. It may be that the Littles were living in the Missouri Territory at Eliza's birth but in fact were in the area that became Arkansas. This seems quite probable given the Little and Huitt tendencies to migrate in tandem plus some 1821/1822 legal entanglements for Solomon and John in Lawrence County, Arkansas Territory.

In 1822 both Solomon Huitt and John Little appear on the Lawrence County, Arkansas

Territory, Court Docket for the May Term. Solomon's name on the docket is connected to a suit by the United States against him. A detailed report is likely at NEARA (Northeast Arkansas Regional Archives) but since there are several suits on the same Docket with the United States as plaintiff, it appears the suit may be for unpaid taxes. Solomon Huitt sold his Spring River land in 1819. It is possible there were unpaid taxes on the land and it is unclear whether Solomon was still living in Lawrence County in 1822.

John Little's court record, on the other hand, is for a specific suit against him by William Wayland. The issue started in 1821 when John accused Wayland of stealing a chestnut sorrel mare and caused Wayland to be arrested and held in jail until trial. Wayland was found not guilty. Wayland then sued John Little for maliciously bringing him to "public shame" and imprisoning him in order to "impoverish and ruin" him. Wayland sued for $10,000 in damages, an amount in 2019 dollars of well over $200,000. John Little was served a subpoena in Columbia Township, an area just 2-3 miles from Solomon Huitt's Spring Ferry home, lending credence to the Littles and the Huitts staying geographically close and putting a date on the family's location after leaving Bellevue.

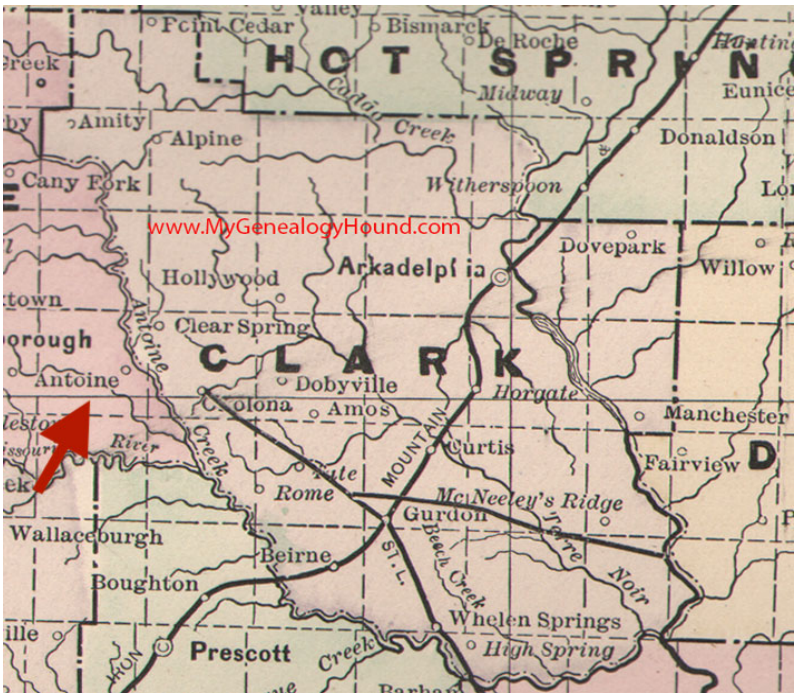

The William Wayland vs. John Little suit went on for more than a year with various witnesses testifying on both sides. One witness for John was Hardy Keel, a half-brother of Louisa Keel who later married John's son William. The available court records are in the Appendix. The final judgement has not been found, however John Little was required to pay court costs for William Wayland. The last lawsuit record obtained for this biography is dated September 1823: a Sheriff's note to the court stating he is unable to locate John Little in Lawrence County for the purpose of serving a final bill on the lawsuit.

This date may signal John Little's move from Lawrence County. We know the Huitts, Littles and Dodds moved farther south into Arkansas. Solomon and Charity Little Huitt moved to Hempstead County, then Clark County, then Crawford County, then Washington County then on to Texas.

By 1828 John Little's family had also moved farther south into Antoine Township, Clark County, Arkansas Territory and lived there at about the same time the Huitts were there. Documents also show that some of John Little's adult children from both his first and second marriages were in Clark County at the same time.

On the 1828 Tax List for Antoine Township, Clark County, Arkansas are the following Little relatives:

John Little
James Little, John's son from his first marriage, who married Nancy Gentry.
John Gentry, Nancy's brother, who in 1860 married Delilah Little Taylor, John's daughter from his first marriage.
Samuel Gentry, Nancy's brother, who married Malinda Little, John's daughter from his second marriage.

Antoine, Clark County, Arkansas

On the 1830 Tax List for Antoine are:
John Little
James Little
Samuel Gentry
John Gentry

On the 1832 Tax List for Antoine are:
John Little
James Little
Samuel Gentry
John Gentry

The Gentry family had been in South Carolina and Georgia at the same time John Little was there, so the families knew each other and had apparently kept in touch prior to meeting up again in Arkansas. The three marriages between the Littles and the Gentrys suggest a close connection prior to Arkansas and there are Gentry signatures on the South Carolina petitions alongside John Little's. It is conceivable that the Gentrys and the Huitts were the driving force for the Little family moving to Clark County.

On the 1830 Census, John Little, James Little and the other Gentry/Little couples listed above were all living in Antoine, Clark County.

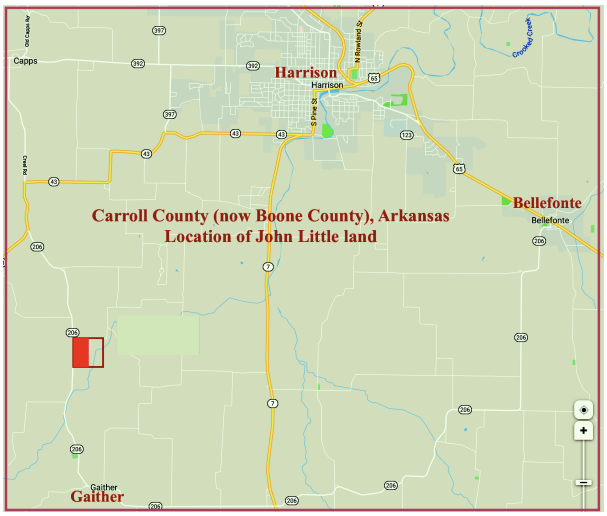

However, some of the family stayed closer to the border of Arkansas and Missouri. On the 1830 US Census for Wayne County, Missouri there are several recognizable families listed on the same page: John Little, Bright Turman the future father-in-law of John's daughter Eliza, John Thaddeus Taylor the husband of Delilah Little who was John's daughter from his first marriage, Michael Dodd, Jesse Dodd who was Michael's son, and a Mathew Harper who likely was the father of Louisa Harper who married John Little's grandson Hardy. Wayne County was split into smaller counties in 1833, one of which was Ripley County, Missouri where several generations of Littles had settled. Given the shifting borders, and the fact that they are all on the same page of the census, it is ossible they were all living in the area that became Ripley County.

John Little's son William had married Louisa Keel and they were living in Lawrence County, Arkansas just south of the Missouri border in 1829. Soon after they too moved to Ripley County.

Soon after, in the late 1830's, Michael Dodd, who had married John Little's daughter Sarah, is living one county over in Saline, Arkansas.

By 1836/7 the Littles were again on the move. While some of his married children stayed in Clark County, John Little, his wife Sarah and daughter Eliza moved north to Carroll County, Arkansas and settled at Crooked Creek. John is on the 1837 tax record there.

John and Sarah Bolton Little- Land in Carroll County, Arkansas

John's land in Carroll County was jointly owned by him and a Robert Trotter. The 160 acres of land was near the former Crooked Creek Township, just north of the current township of Gaither, in Boone County. On present day maps, it is bounded by Watts Road, Hall Road and Highway 206W, along the Dowell Branch of the West Fork of Crooked Creek. John's portion of the property was the west 80 acres as evidenced by his sale of the land a few years later

James Little, John's youngest son by first wife Winnie Lewis, and his wife Nancy Gentry Little settled in Illinois Township, Washington County, Arkansas. He is recorded as one of the first settlers of the township which was organized in 1836. The township, on the extreme western edge of the newly admitted State of Arkansas, adjoined Indian Territory to the west. James is listed on the 1837 tax list. His wife Nancy Gentry Little died there in about 1840 and James remarried Elizabeth Franklin. James is listed on several deeds in Washington County between 1839-1843 and on the 1840 U.S. Census. He lived in Washington County until his death in 1845.

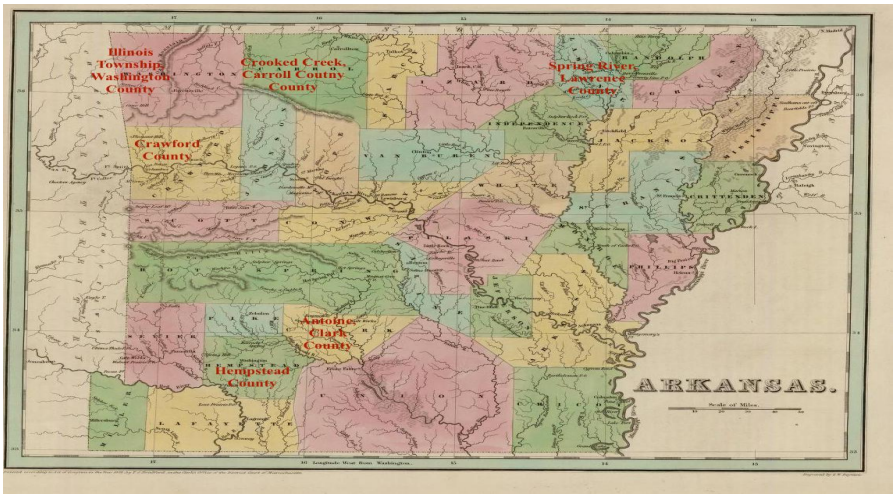

The 1840 U.S. Census shows James in Illinois Township, Washington County, Arkansas and his father John in Crooked Creek, Carroll County, Arkansas. Crooked Creek township no longer exists but was just south of present day Harrison, Arkansas.

In about 1835, John Little's daughter Delilah, from his first marriage to Winnie Lewis, and her husband John Thaddeus Taylor, moved from Ripley County, Missouri to Washington County, Arkansas. They bought several parcels of land there in 1841. The fact that they were living in Ripley County, Missouri is significant because John's son William, from his second marriage to Sarah Bolton, was living in Ripley County with his wife Louisa Keel Little and was raising five of their seven children by the time Delilah and John Taylor moved south.

John Little's relocation to Carroll County in 1837 creates some interesting connections. Carroll County was actually part of New Madrid County, Missouri Territory in 1813 and part of Lawrence County, Missouri Territory in 1815. Those years and locations correspond with Solomon and Charity Little Huitt's migrations. It is possible that John Little was not moving to a new place but rather returning to a previous one.

Not such a coincidence is the fact that John Benton Huitt, Solomon and Charity's son, purchased land in Washington County in 1839 and 1843. And Solomon and Charity are listed on the 1838 Tax List in Washington County.

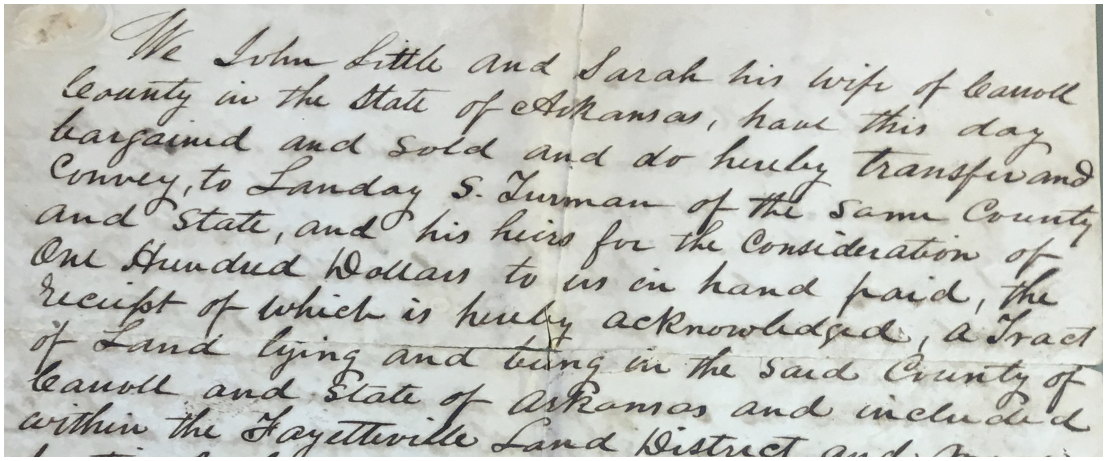

So between about 1837-1843, the Huitts and the Littles had reunited in Washington County, Arkansas. And John Little and his wife Sarah had settled in Carroll County, just northeast of Washington County.

1838 Map of Arkansas Counties

John's life was nearing its end when his youngest child, daughter Eliza, met her future husband, Landy Shoemaker Turman. Landy's father Bright Turman (and mother Mary Polly Shoemaker Turman) appear on the 1836, 1837 and 1838 Tax Lists for Carroll County. The Turmans had come from Kentucky, then to Wayne County, Missouri and finally to Carroll County. Eliza and Landy were engaged on April 15, 1838 and married in early 1840.

On March 24th, 1840, John and Sarah Little deeded their Carroll County land to Eliza and Landy.

We John Little and Sarah his wife of Carroll County in the State of Arkansas, have this day bargained and sold and do hereby transfer and Convey, to Landay S. Turman of the same County and State, and his heirs for the Consideration of One Hundred Dollars to us in hand paid, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, a Tract of Land lying and being in the said County of Carroll and State of Arkansas and included within the Fayetteville Land District

Excerpt from 1840 Deed from Little to Turman

In the 1840 U.S. Census, Landy (L.S.) Turman is listed as head of household in Carroll County. Living with him, based on age ranges, are his wife Eliza, John Little and Sarah Bolton Little.

John Little's death occurred after March 24th, 1840 when the deed was given to Landy and Eliza, and before March 16, 1844. The pre-March 1844 date is known because of a letter written to Sarah Bolton Little, Landy Turman and Eliza Little Turman by Eliza's brother, John Little's son, William Little. William was living in Ripley County, Missouri and in his letter he notes he had recently received notice of his father's death. It seems likely that he would have been notified shortly after his father's death so I believe we can narrow John's date of death to late 1843/early 1844.

John Little would have been in his late 80s or early 90s when he died. He would have traveled over 1400 miles in his life through unsettled country during a time when wagon travel would only average 15-25 miles per day. He served in the military and was active politically in the formation of South Carolina, Georgia and Missouri. He had at least 16 children through two marriages. Those 16 children have produced thousands of descendants.

We may never know what drove John Little, the Huitts, the Gentrys and the Dodds to strike out for new land so many times in their lives. Did they seek the adventure of the frontier? Did they prefer to maintain their distance from established society? Or was it as simple as looking for better land to settle? What we do know is John Little had a life of adventure, always seeking something new, willing to withstand the hardships of settling new land over and over again in order to find something better. He maintained close ties to family and friends throughout his life. I hope this report has done him justice and I hope the future brings even more documentation to light.

Introduction

An Account of the Pelew Islands Situated in the Great South Sea

Composed from the Journals of Capt. Henry Wilson, and his Officers who, in August 1783,
Were There Shipwrecked
in the AnteloprePacket

by George Keates

This book, owned by Captain John Little, was originally published in England in 1788. It became wildly popular there and went through several printings. The version owned by John Little is a slightly condensed version made specifically for America. It was obviously a prized possession. He had many friends sign the book and wrote prose on empty pages.

Our book was printed in 1794 by Samuel and John Adams (no relation to U.S. Presidents) at their Wilmington, Delaware print shop. Their father James Adams started the business after apprenticing with Benjamin Franklin's printing business in Philadelphia. James Adams is considered to be the first printer in Delaware.

The book was printed for the Reverend Mason Locke Weems, a well known historian/storyteller and author in his own right. Weems, of Scottish descent, was born in Dumfries, Virginia in 1759 then educated in London and Scotland. In 1790 he became a book agent for a Philadelphia company and traveled throughout the South selling books and preaching. We do not know how he came to meet John Little but Weems died in South Carolina so their paths probably crossed there in the mid-1790s.

If you have the time and would like to read the account of the shipwreck, the book is still being published and is also available to read online at Google Books:
https://books.google.com/books/about/An_account_of_the_Pelew_Islands.html?id=x29CAAAAcAAJ

It's not easy to read the handwriting both due to style and faded quality. But with the advantage of computer image enhancement, much of the faded handwriting in the book is readable. With the help of many sets of eyes, an online photo restoration group, and historical research we have deciphered most of the handwritten pages.

Laftly, he will view the good Abba Thulle, wearied out by that expectation, which fo many returning moons, fince his reckoning ceafed, have by this time taught him he had nourifhed in vain. But the reader will bring him back to his remembrance, as armed with that unfhaken fortitude that was equal to the trials of varying life. He will not in him, as in lefs manly fpirits, fee the paffions rufhing into oppofite extremes--hope turned to defpair----affection converted to hatred.----No,----after fome allowance for their natural fermentation, he will fuppofe them all fubfiding into the calm of refignation!

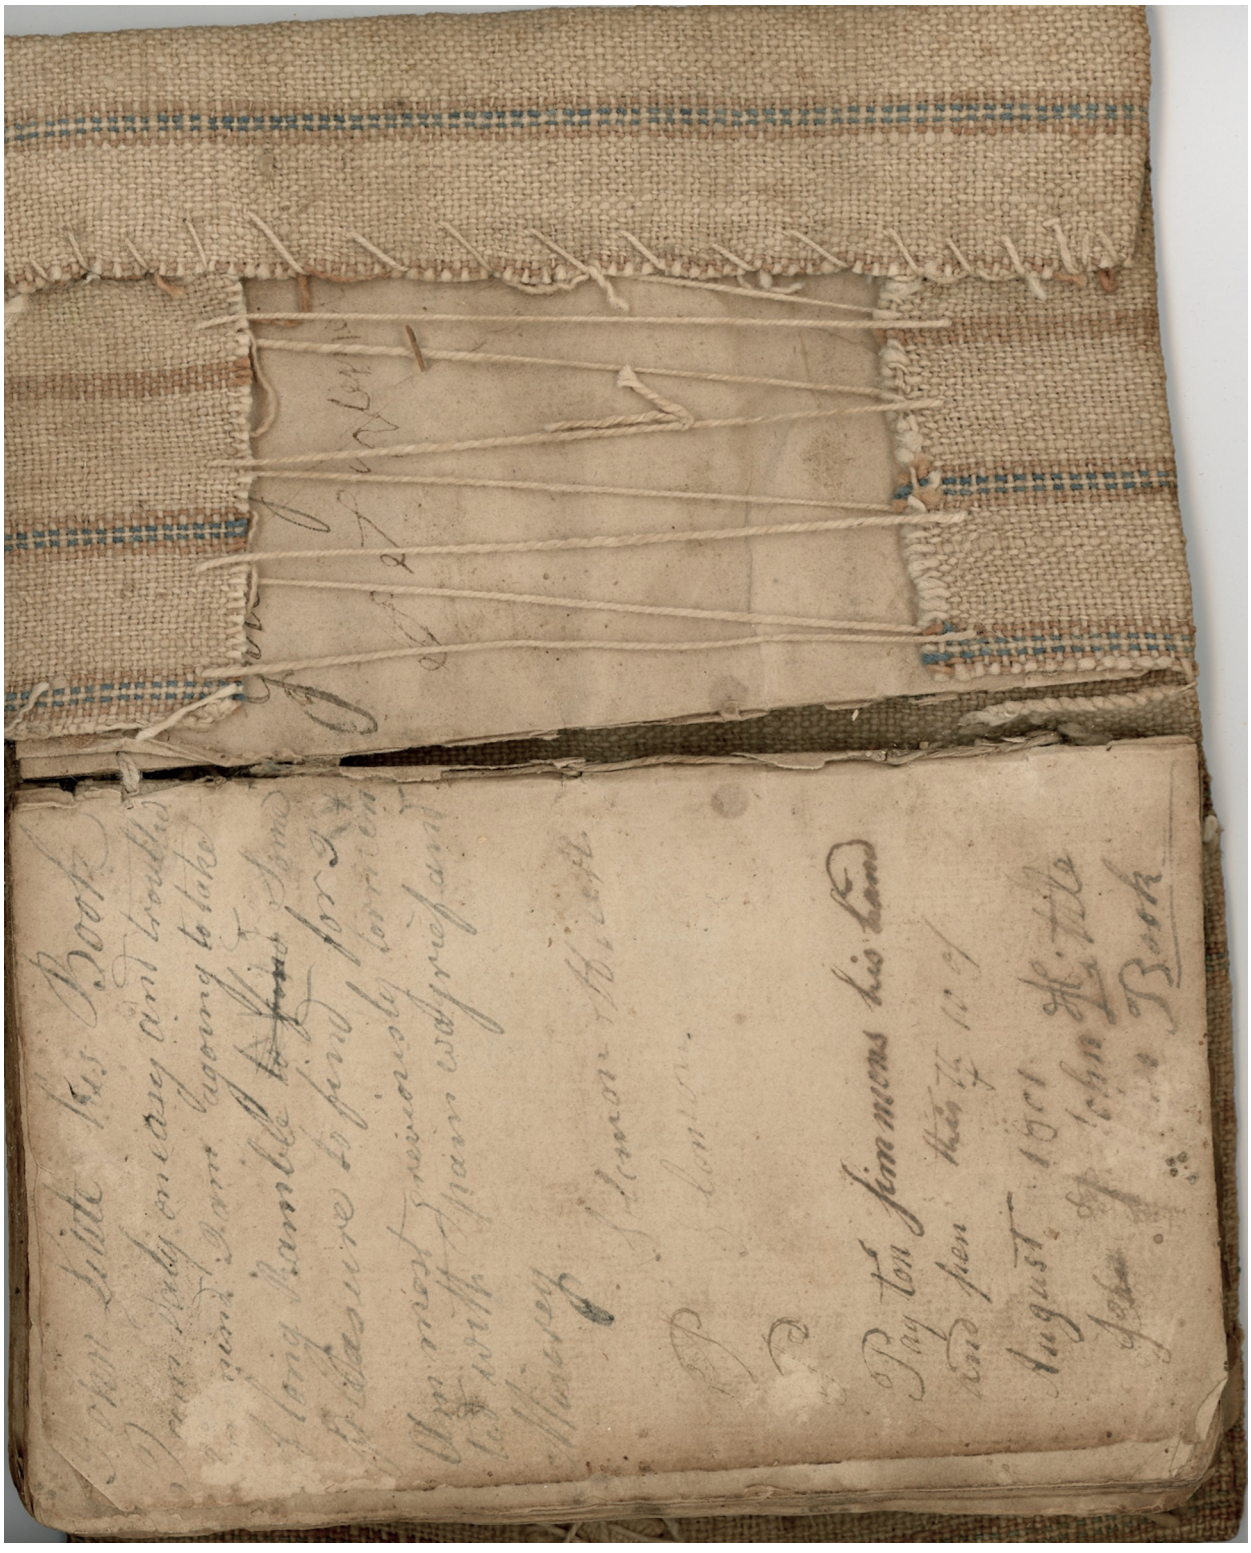

Should this not be abfolutely the cafe of our friendly King----as the human mind is far more pained by uncertainty, than a knowledge of the worft----every reader will lament, he fhould to this moment remain ignorant, that his long-looked-for Son can return no more.

At Rome, in ancient days, the life of one citizen faved, gave a claim to the civic wreath. At Pelew, fo many of our countrymen refcued from diftrefs, and by Abba Thulle's protection and benevolence, not only faved from inevitable deftruction, but enabled to return in fafety to their families and friends, hath fure a ftronger claim to a wreath from Britifh gratitude.

In my settlement there were 22 settlers living the day the line was finished; the day that the orders for removal &c. There was but 28; which makes but 6 of an increase Circumstances in the interim —

All those marked thus * in the second column are the old settlers. All those marked — † are small families increased by inter marriages with the old settlers Children and consequently have but small families, which are five in number.

Charles Wills went early last winter to seek a place in the western country — a few days ago he returned & will soon go off. Robert Little and William Hartgrave has made but one crop, and had been preparing to remove to Cumberland 6 weeks before orders — One of the William Taylor's lives in side the line — tends a little ground out — Much more might be said on the concern.

1798 Petition to Governor of Georgia asking for more representation and protection.
Signed by Franklin County settlers with reply requested to Captain John Little.

13th September 1798
His Excellence James Jackson, Gov. of Georgia.

We are induced from the peculiarity of our situations as Frontier citizens of Jackson & Franklin Counties to address your Excellency and implore your interposition in our favor. - We beg leave to represent that we hold titles derived from Grants issued by the State of Georgia for Lands which have proven to lie beyond the temporary boundary line, lately extended under the Superintendence of Colo. Hawkins, Agent of Indian affairs for the United States; that these lands, which we have honestly paid for, which we have been at great Labour and expence to improve and on which (exposed to savage depredations for Several years) we have hazarded the lives of ourselves and our families, we are now forbidden to occupy.- Thus after exhausting all our resources in the purchase & improvement of Lands, we are now told that we must abandon these homes, destitute (as we are) of the means of providing others for our families.

The lands we hold were granted between the years 1783 & 1788 which we need not remark to your excellency was anterior to the Treaty concluded to New York.- We think it proper also to observe that evident inaccuracies have been commited in running of the line from the Currawhee Mountain to the source of the Appalachee, by which that line has been thrown much further in upon the inhabitants than it would have gone if it had been carried direct from one of these points to the other.

We pray that your excellency will have the goodness to signify to us by letter addressed to Capt. John Little to the care of Daniel Beall Esq. At Franklin Court House, or in any other way that your Excellency may deem proper and expedient, your opinion.

If your excellency has the power of affording us relief we count with great confidence on receiving it. If your Excellency has not that power, we beg that you will represent our situation to the next Ligislature and implore for us that redress which your excellency may think our cases entitled to.

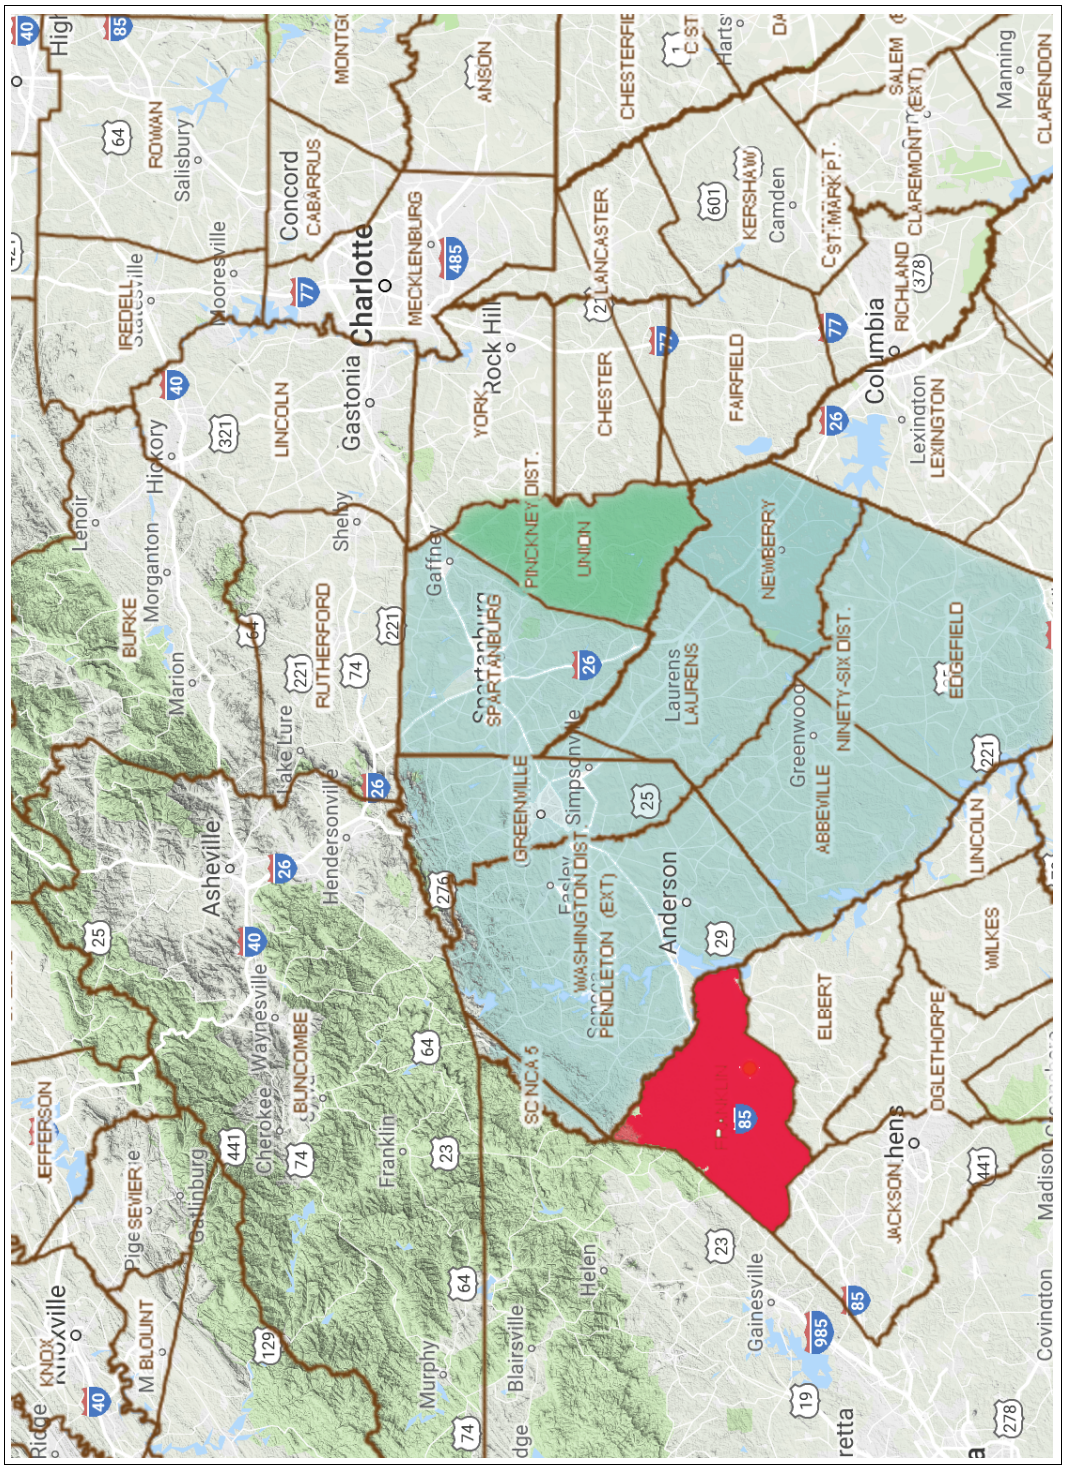

We have the honor to be with profound respect,

Your Excellencies Most Obedt Servts, (Signed)

The Wofford Settlement on the Georgia Frontier

By Carl Flowers, Jr.*

LIKE sparks from the smith's anvil, William Wofford and his neighbors crossed the western Indian boundary of Georgia around 1787. Irregularities in awarding early land grants placed Wofford in an unfortunate situation. Inadvertantly he purchased lands encroaching on Cherokee territory near present-day Toccoa, Georgia. More than thirty years would pass, reaping humiliation and irritation to all concerned, until the difficulty with the Wofford Settlement was resolved in 1824.

Georgia's western lands appealed strongly to the speculative interest, creating a strong pressure on the state to expand its boundaries. Bowing to the speculators, Georgia negotiated a number of treaties with the Cherokee and Creek Indians. From a portion of the newly acquired Indian lands the Georgia House of Assembly created Franklin County in 1784,[1] whose western boundary would be consistent with the boundaries described in the treaties of Augusta with the Creeks[2] and Cherokees[3], and later corroborated by the Treaty of New York.[4]

Surveying and marking the boundaries of newly acquired lands were never attempted,[5] hence, boundaries of land grants could not be substantiated. When land grants were laid out the survey could start at an oak tree, proceed to a gum tree, and thence in a straight line to a pine tree and so on. Wofford's first purchase of acreage came from such a land grant issued to Joseph Martin Russell in 1786 by the state of Georgia.

Prior to Wofford's first land purchase several months were spent surveying lands that were of interest to him.[6] Once the desired lands were found little thought was given to the possibility of improprieties in awarding land grants. From the following deed recorded in Franklin County, Georgia, on 26 December 1816 it is evident that a land grant from the state was all that was necessary in proving the legality of original ownership:

> Nathaniel Wofford to William B. Wofford and Charles Wofford for consideration of $1000, 350 acres af land lying on the middle fork of Broad River, it being a corner of a tract of land originally granted to Joseph Martin Russell containing 400 acres and sold by him to William Wofford senior. . . thence a westerly direction across the plantation till it strikes Nancy's town a water course of said river. . .a direct line so as to include the plantation whereon George Hooper formerly lived thence with the dividing ridge till it strikes the waggon road leading from Nathaniel Wofford's still house to Smith's settlement then with said road till it strikes a tract of land of 200 acres granted to William Jinnings and conveyed by him to Rowland H. Burks and from said Burkes to Nathaniel Wofford.[7]

To remove the irregularities and misunderstandings of surveys, the Hawkins Line was run in 1797 to alienate Indian hunting grounds from Georgia.[8] Upon completion of the line in February, 1798 William Wofford and twenty-one of his neighbors[9] who were found living on Indian lands stood to lose a sizable investment if they were forcibly removed. Wofford came from the upper Catawba in the Turkey Creek Cove area of North Carolina. Here he had a tract of land consisting of nine hundred acres with improvements which he sold after the Revolutionary War to purchase his lands in Franklin County, Georgia.[10]

Wofford's disparagement over the possibility of losing his land was personified by an obnoxious contempt toward the Cherokee Nation, and his encroachment was looked upon by the Indians "with great resentment of his conduct."[11] Through a labyrinth of interpretations on earlier treaties with the Indians some people believed that the obscure intent of a boundary had been overlooked. If the line were rerun the Wofford Settlement would surely be found inside the line. Despite the accusations against the Hawkins Line, Benjamin Hawkins, the head commissioner for running the line, stated that "there was no diversity of opinion"[12] between himself and the other commissioners who accompanied him in running the line. It was "closed in perfect harmony"[13] of its intent and in complete compliance with the treaties of Augusta, and the Treaty of New York that was negotiated by the Federal Government in 1790.

In sympathy to Wofford's plight Benjamin Hawkins wrote a letter of introduction to the Secretary of War so that Wofford could "represent his situation and that of his unfortunate neighbours in person."[14] Hawkins believed that Wofford would be incapable of making any representation that would not be true, and would fulfill the expectations of his neighbors by a faithful detail of everything that was important.[15] Generally, this attitude was adhered to by both state and Federal officials. The intruders were excused due to their ignorance of the treaties and boundaries that existed at the time of their settlement. Those who settled on Indian lands "previous to the running of the line must be presumed to have had no intention of violating the Laws of their Country."[16] Colonel William Wofford and his neighbors "should not be removed unless it should become absolutely necessary."[17]

In reality a number of intruders crossed the Hawkins Line after it was run and were found living among the Wofford settlers. Ultimately they were forcibly removed from their homes shortly before the October 1804 treaty for the Wofford tract.[18] The fear of old settlers being moved from their land was juxtaposed by the Georgia Commissioners' preference to believe in the credibility of irregularities by unscrupulous settlers such as William Vickory, who appeared before state authorities giving an oath of deposition saying, "that for sometime before the running of the Boundary Line run by Col. Hawkins and the Chiefs of the Creek Indians, that he this Despondent was Peacibly possest by actual Settlement of a tract of Land containing Seven Hundred and fifty acres which said Land was included in the Indian Boundary."[19] In negotiating for the Wofford tract neither Return J. Meigs of the Federal commissioners nor any other of the commissioners had any knowledge of Vickory's settlement even though the depositions were dated before the treaty ceding the Wofford Settlement.[20] visited the settlement to determine its limits. At this time Wofford and his neighbors pointed out the extent of their holdings, and declared that a cantle "twelve miles in length and three miles in width would cover that Settlement properly."[21] None of the settlers were more than three miles from the Hawkins Line.

So concerned were the Georgia Commissioners with the innocence and guilt of the intruders they forgot about their own delinquency by asking the Cherokees to permit all the intruders to remain on the land until Christmas. When Christmas day arrived in 1802 the Federal troops failed to appear,[22] and so the second attempt to remove the intruders was even less successful than the first. In the absence of the troops, Georgia commissioner Carnes expressed the sentiments of the settlers by saying that he "prayed some measure might be taken to prevent the necessity of their removing; That if they were removed, they with their women and Children would have no place to put their Heads into to Keep them from the cold rain, frost and snow; and that they should be compelled to live by Begging from House to House, or perish in the woods."[23] Some of the less disciplined men among the intruders "seeing their women and children suffering, might destroy"[24] the Indians property. Since the land was a "small piece, and not of sufficient consequence. . . All we have to request at this time is, that those poor people may be allowed to remain where they are without any interruption for one year longer; and then if nothing is decided on by our Father the President and the Chiefs of this Nation, we will have them all removed within the marked line. . .or perhaps you may be inclined to sell it."[25]

In response to the commissioners' request, the Cherokees said that there was not a sufficient number of chiefs present to discuss alteration of the boundaries since most of the influential chiefs were out hunting for food. Mentioning the alteration of boundaries outside of a council meeting would mean forfeiture of that person's life. In forty nights there would be a general meeting of all the chiefs, and at that time they would discuss the commissioners' request. In the meantime the people over the line could remain on the land.[26]

Before the time had elapsed for the general meeting of the chiefs, the Georgia commissioners met with a council of Cherokee chiefs at Eustinalee and made an agreement allowing the intruders to remain on the land until 10 April 1803.[27] Then in March, just one month before the 10 April deadline, Return J. Meigs was directed by the Secretary of War to converse with the principal chiefs of the Cherokee Nation and endeavor to purchase the lands on which the Wofford Settlement was located. If procurement of the settlement was impossible, Meigs was to "obtain a Lease in favor of Colonel Woffard and a few others who had made Settlement"[28] before the Hawkins Line was run. The Cherokees refused to sell or lease saying that they were "glad the boundaries were fixed and wished that they might not be altered."[29]

The constant spread of immigration on the Georgia frontier caused the Secretary of War to direct Meigs, along with Daniel Smith, to renew the application for the Wofford tract. The federal commissioners were authorized to offer up to five thousand dollars for the settlement and an annuity of one thousand dollars.[30] This time the Cherokees were willing to cede the Wofford lands in the hope that the cession would remove the aggravations and discomfort heaped upon the Cherokee Nation.

In the actual negotiations with the Cherokees, the commissioners endeavored to have the boundaries of the settlement extended. The Cherokees would not consent to an extension to the southwest, but did consent to have the lines extended to the northeast toward Currahee Mountain.[31] In the treaty Meigs and Smith were able to obtain a land cession twenty-three miles and sixty-four chains in length by four miles in width[32] rather than the twelve miles by three miles that Wofford declared as being sufficient. The boundaries of the Wofford Cession formed a rectangle between the Cherokee lands and Georgia, commencing northeasterly of the most northeastern plantation in the settlement.[33] On 24 October 1804 the treaty was officially signed at Tellico, Tennessee.

In running the boundaries of the settlement ill feelings developed over General Benjamin Harris' interpretation of the words, "shall include, in this session, all the plantations in Wofford's settlement,"[34] to mean that all intruders would be made a part of the settlement. When the survey team discovered that a number of settlers southwesterly of the boundary had been excluded from the settlement, Harris wished that the boundaries be extended to include these people. James Vann, a Cherokee chief who was acting in behalf of the Cherokees refused to consent to the extension. Harris believed that Vann was more interested in raising his stature with the Cherokees than in seeing that "impartial justice was done to end the frontier disruption caused by the intruders."[35] Because of the difference in opinion General Harris withdrew from the running of the line.[36] Captain James Blair along with James Vann, and Katchee, another Cherokee chief, proceeded to finish the survey without Harris. The only exception in running the survey to the full intent of the treaty was when the lines were extended to the northeast to include a poor man's plantation that was more than a mile beyond the limits first intended. Vann and Katchee generously consented to the extension.[37]

After negotiations for the Wofford Settlement had been concluded twenty years would pass before the treaty was ratified by the Senate of the United States. Delay in ratification can perhaps be found bound in the number of people that believed too great a price had been paid for the settlement. Meigs concurred that the price might have been slightly higher than was usual for Indian lands due to the settlement being a continual source of complaint from the Indians.[38]

Aside from cost, ratification of the treaty was more than likely impeded by a host of new intrusions that circumscribed the settlement. The intruders settled on the boundary of the Wofford Settlement immediately after the treaty was signed, and justified their claims on the pretext that irregularities had taken place in running the boundaries since Benjamin Harris withdrew from the commission, and the northeastern boundary was extended contrary to the terms of the treaty.

The claims of the intruders were so conflicting that the military would be unable to deal with them effectively.[39] To cope with a situation that was out of hand, Meigs suggested that a commissioner from Georgia be appointed by the War Department to meet him on the frontier with one or two Cherokee chiefs and an interpreter. In one or two days the rights of all parties could be placed in such a clear light that all doubts about intrusions would be removed. Once this was done the governor of Georgia, by his requisition, would be able to remove all those found to be actual intruders. If his requisition should not be properly respected by the intruders the military could then act.[40]

Out of concern for the Georgia citizenry encroached on Indian lands, on 19 March 1812 Georgia sent two gentlemen as commissioners to hold a friendly conversation seeking additional lands westward to the Chattahoochee River. The commissioners presented the chiefs with a treaty, and told them that on examining it they would see "that the settlers, or great part of that tract cannot with justice be called Intruders; they made there settlements on the upper waters of the Oconee under good right so to do; and sanctioned by that treaty called the treaty of Augusta."[41] If the Cherokees would "consider the cause of the present difficulties, it will plainly appear to be best to let the United States have that narrow piece of land"[42] since there was an error in running the Hawkins Line. The Cherokees replied that any treaty for land would be unpopular for the simple reason that it would encourage additional intrusions and reminded the Georgia commissioners that just five months earlier in December, 1811, they had ceded an additional ten miles and twelve chains to the Wofford Settlement at their own expense.[43] By adding the extra land to the Wofford Settlement it was hoped that every reasonable objection to ratification of the treaty for the settlement would be removed, and at the same time have the cession cover every plantation of every settler that had an iota of a claim because of occupancy on the land before the running of the Hawkins Line.

Until these points were clarified ratification of the treaty was held in abeyance. While waiting for this clarification, the treaty was mislaid in a bundle of old and miscellaneous papers[44] and forgotten owing to the changes in administration through the years. Not until 1824 did the government focus its attention on the treaty, and then, only at the insistence of the Cherokees because of an impending trip to Washington by a delegation of chiefs. The delegation addressed a letter to the President of the United States asking why the treaty "was not ratified; but the United States kept possession of the land, thereby depriving the nation from receiving the equivalent for which it was sold."[45] It was their desire to have consideration given to the treaty. In response to the Cherokee communique the Secretary of War replied that "no information can be found in relation to the treaty to which you have called the attention of the President."[46] Two treaties, however, had been negotiated at Tellico, Tennessee. One was negotiated on 25 October and another on 27 October 1805, by Return J. Meigs and Daniel Smith. Both treaties were ratified during the succeeding session of Congress, and the stipulations of both treaties were faithfully fulfilled by the government. Since no such treaty as the one negotiated in 1804, "nor any information respecting it can be found, it is not in the power of the President to comply,"[47] with the request of the chiefs.

When the Cherokees arrived in Washington they called attention to the letter they had sent to the President alleging that a treaty had been concluded in 1804. John C. Calhoun, Secretary of War, stated that no such treaty could be found, nor was there evidence that the treaty had ever been confirmed. This being communicated to the Cherokee delegation, they presented a duplicate of the treaty together with other papers stating that Colonel John McKee, currently a representative in Congress from the state of Alabama, was a witness to the treaty.[48] Upon receiving the Cherokees' copy of the treaty, Calhoun submitted letters to Thomas Jefferson, President in 1804, John McKee, and to Charles Cutts, the secretary of the Senate, seeking information relative to the treaty's authenticity.[49]

Charles Cutts reported that there was no indication in the executive journals of a treaty dated October 1804 having been submitted to the Senate for ratification.[50] John McKee reported that he had a perfect recollection of the treaty's negotiation and could confidently identify the handwriting in the treaty as genuine. He did not have any knowledge as to why the treaty had not been ratified.[51] Thomas Jefferson who kept a journal of every communication that he wrote or received said that he never submitted the treaty to the Senate since he had not received it. Jefferson was able to affirm the treaty's authenticity from memory because "no case of intruders ever occurred which excited more anxiety of commiseration with us than that of Wofford's settlement, which it covered."[52] His only explanation for the neglect of the treaty was that it was lost in transit or else mislaid.

After proof that the treaty was genuine, on 19 January 1824 President James Monroe recommended that the Senate ratify it and this was done on the following 17 May.

EARLY ACCESS DOCUMENT

From Thomas Jefferson to John C. Calhoun, 25 April 1824

Sir Monticello Apr. 25. 24.

I duly recieved your letter of the 19 inst with the documents it covered relative to the treaty of Oct. 24. 1804. with the Cherokees for the purchase of lands. recurring to memory alone I can affirm that the treaty inclosed to me and now returned is genuine. it is well rememb^{d} because no case of intruders ever occurred which excited more anxiety and communication with us than that of Wafford's settlement which it covered. on the complaint of the Cherokees we endeavored to purchase the lands from them but on their refusal we assured them the intruders should be removed and orders were accdly given. but the officers to whom they were given interceded with the Indians to let the settlers remain until they had gathered their crops and this indulgence was I believe repeated until at length they agreed to sell the lands. recurring to my papers I find the following passage in a letter to Gen^{l} Dearborne of Apr. 8. 1804. written from this place where I was on a short visit at the time. 'I think, before I left Washington we had decided to take immediate measures for endeavoring to purchase of the Cherokees all their lands in Tennisee, or such, the most interesting to that state, as they would be willing to sell, and to name Meigs and Daniel Smith Commissioners.' to this Gen^{l} Dearborne answered by the letter of Apr. 14. which I now inclose you. informing me that Smith and Meigs had accdly been authorised to hold the treaty this is the last trace of the transaction which I find in my papers. I have for 40. years back kept a list of every letter or communication I wrote or recieved, a diligent examn of this list assures me that I never recieved this treaty. I have preserved press or poligraph copies of every message I ever sent to either house of Congress. a like examn of these proves I never laid this treaty before the Senete. yet that the treaty was entered into is proved by the duplicate copy produced by the Indians, equally authentic with our own, by it's actual execution by the delivery of the lands on their part and of the price in goods / on ours and by the testimony of mr M^{c}kee and others. how has it happened that this has been done without ratificn by the Senate? I do not know. two conjectures occur. either the treaty may have been lost by the way, or if rec^{d} by the War office it may have been mislaid there accidentally, and escaped subsequent recollection in this case it may still be in some unsuspected bundle where nobody will ever think of looking for it. the exn of the treaty having taken place immediately and on the spot where it was signed, nothing occurred here afterwards to recall our attention to it afterwards, and in the mass of other business engrossing the mind, we have overlooked this, and a failure of duty has been incurred by a lapse of memory. I take to myself my share in this omission, and can only say in excuse 'homo sum.' the treaty had all my approbation. it is some consolation that the blot may yet be covered, if all parties are agreed. the Indians will doubtless consent that their duplicate shall be laid before the Senate which being equally an original with that which should have been laid before their predecessors, can recieve their ratification nunc pro tunc, this will sanction all that has been done, on the principle that the confirmation of a proceeding supplies preceding defects. in this way may be repaired a slip of the executive functionaries unwittingly committed and full justice be done to the other party.

with my regrets that an involuntary failure of recollection in myself, among the other officers of the govmt participating in it should have produced the present embarrasment, be pleased to accept the assurance of my high respect & consideration.

To James Wilkinson, Benjamin Hawkins, and Andrew Pickens, Esquires.

GENTLEMEN:

Your negotiations at fort Wilkinson, in Georgia, with the Creek nation of Indians, will be directed to the subjects, and agreeably to the instructions following, viz:

1st. You will endeavor to obtain from the Creeks a cession to the United States of the district of territory in Georgia, known by the name of Tallassee county; this will be your primary object; and as it is considered of great importance, you are authorized to engage that the United States will pay them, for their consent to such a cession, a sum not exceeding twelve thousand dollars, and an annuity, in addition to that at present paid them, in cash, or such goods suitable for their use, as they may designate, to the amount of, not exceeding two thousand dollars.

It is left to your discretion to increase or decrease the immediate payment, or the annuity, in proportion to these sums, as will be most agreeable to the Indians.

2d. You will ascertain whether the consent of the Creeks can be obtained, to cede to the United States the tract of land, lying between the Oakmulgee and Oconee rivers, and commonly called the Oakmulgee fork; and if attainable, on what terms. You will make report of the result of your inquiries on this subject, but decline entering into any engagement, until you shall receive further instructions.

3d. By the treaty of August 7th, 1790, a mode was agreed upon between the Creeks and the United States, by which the head or source of the main south branch of the Oconee river should be ascertained, and a decision has been had accordingly, whether correctly or incorrectly, is a matter of doubt. But certain persons, among whom is a Colonel Wofford, had previously settled near the Currahee mountain, on lands which, they state, they have great reason to believe, would have fallen within the United States' line, if it had been run to the true head, or source of the main south branch of the Oconee aforesaid. By the decision, their settlements are at the mercy of the Indians, and it is desirable that you should use your endeavors to prevail upon the Indians so far to change the present line as to include the settlements of Colonel Wofford, and those in his immediate vicinity, within the United States, for such reasonable sum as you may think proper.

It may be worthy of observation, that the deputation from the Cherokee nation, lately at the seat of Government, stated that the Cherokees had claims to the last mentioned lands. In cases of controversies between the Indians, respecting the divisional lines of their countries, it must always be difficult for us to ascertain the validity of their respective claims, and unadvisable for us to interfere, except in cases like the present.

You will be pleased, if by you considered of sufficient consequence, to investigate the subject, by making such inquiries, among the Cherokees as well as the Creeks, as will lead to a true knowledge of their respective rights to the lands in question.

The Creeks being a powerful and proud nation, and great jealousies having at different times arisen between them and the frontier inhabitants, all prudent means in your power should be exerted to reconcile them, and to remove every obstacle to their mutual friendship; and every assurance of the protection and friendship of the President, which you were authorized to make to the other Indian nations, should be tendered to the Creeks also. The information which you may obtain relative to the conduct and views of Bowles, may enable you to fortify the minds of the Creeks against his mischievous prospects, if he should continue at large in their vicinity.

A quantity of goods for the Indians, and articles for your own use, will be forwarded to Mr. Joseph Clay, at Savannah, from whence they may be easily conveyed to fort Wilkinson; in the event of your success, additional quantities of goods will be transmitted immediately, to fulfil your engagements.

[L. s.] Given under my hand, and the seal of the War Office, at Washington, the 17th day of July, A. D. 1801.

Sir

The opening the road through the Cherokee Country to Georgia has become highly necessary and you will please to take the earliest opportunity of holding a conference with the principal Chiefs of the Cherokees at some convenient place in the nation for the purpose of obtaining their consent, you are authorised to make them some presents not exceeding five hundred dollars for their consent, the road should be contemplated as commencing at South West point or between that and about Tellico factory, and then running in the most direct practicable line to the boundary between the Cherokees and Georgia (say in the direction of the seat for the College at Athens in Georgia on the head waters of the Oconee – if permission can be obtained for this and stations for four public houses at proper distances from each other on the road it would be very desirable, and additional presents may be made for that purpose; but at all events we must have a road – and when you meet the Chiefs on the subject of the road, you will sound them fully on the subject of selling or leasing for a term of years the strip of land bordering on the line of Georgia, near Currahee Mountain where Col. Wofford and other families are settled, if old Col Wofford and a few families who first settled there, before the boundary line was run, can be permitted to remain for a reasonable consideration paid annually it would save much trouble; but if the Cherokees can be prevailed on to part with the strip of land for a reasonable price it would be most desirable to purchase it, but if it should be found impracticable to obtain a cession of the land, then a lease for seven years for a moderate annual payment should be attempted — for your extraordinaries while engaged in the proposed conference, you will be allowed in addition to your pay as Agent, at the rate of four dollars pr. day — The presents may be paid out of the goods at the Tellico factory, you may purchase some provisions of the Indians to distribute to the Chiefs while attending the conference; and if you find them disposed to comply with your proposals, you will be more liberal in your supplies of provision and presents; but unless they appear to be disposed to act with some degree of liberality on the subjects of the conference, you will not be at much expense — The Chickasaws & Choctaws made no objection to our opening a road through their Country for a trifling consideration, and we expect that the Cherokees will be as friendly as their neighbours — all nations in the world are willing that their neighbours in time of peace should pass quietly through their respective Countries — and we shall not consider the Cherokees as good neighbours unless they will allow their best friends who are taking every means in their power to make them happy, to make a road at their own expence to pass through their Country from one settlement to another ——

To the Agent for the Cherok[illegible]ation

We the Select men appointed by our fellow Citizens to keep peace and order, in the neighbourhood called Wofford's Settlement, commonly termed the Indian lands, being well informed that there is a Man from the State of Georgia settled on or near the Chattahoochee river and is there raising corn; and that many within the line declares of making settlements immediately after their corn is laid by. These attempts are not made by the lower Class of People, but by some influential characters therefore if there is not a check put to such violations, it is the opinion of some men of estimation, that before Christmas day next, there will be many families settled out on that river &c. some say an hundred, some say five hundred.

The settlement that is already made being without the limits of our particular care, and the numbers that will undoubtedly settle out, will exceed our strength, we conclude it our duty to inform the Agent: for as many unfavourable and false reports has been made concerning our Intrusions, these daring transgressions may be imputed to the people of this settlement.

Sir

Enclosed is a letter I receive a few days ago from Abraham Bird — He requests me to communicat it to you — Lieut. Bishop of this garrison has lately returned to this place from New Madrid — He confirms the account of the murder & Robbery of the Boat mentioned —

Genl Daniel Smith of this State & myself are invited to call the Cherokee principal Chiefs to a conference the object of which is to obtain Cessions of the lands lying between East & west Tennessee — & the exact line on which Col. Wafford's settlement is, near the Cumberland Mountain —

we have endeavored to sound some of them on the propositions that are to be made them — & we find that the Encroachment by Wafford & adherents is mentioned by them with great resentment of his conduct —

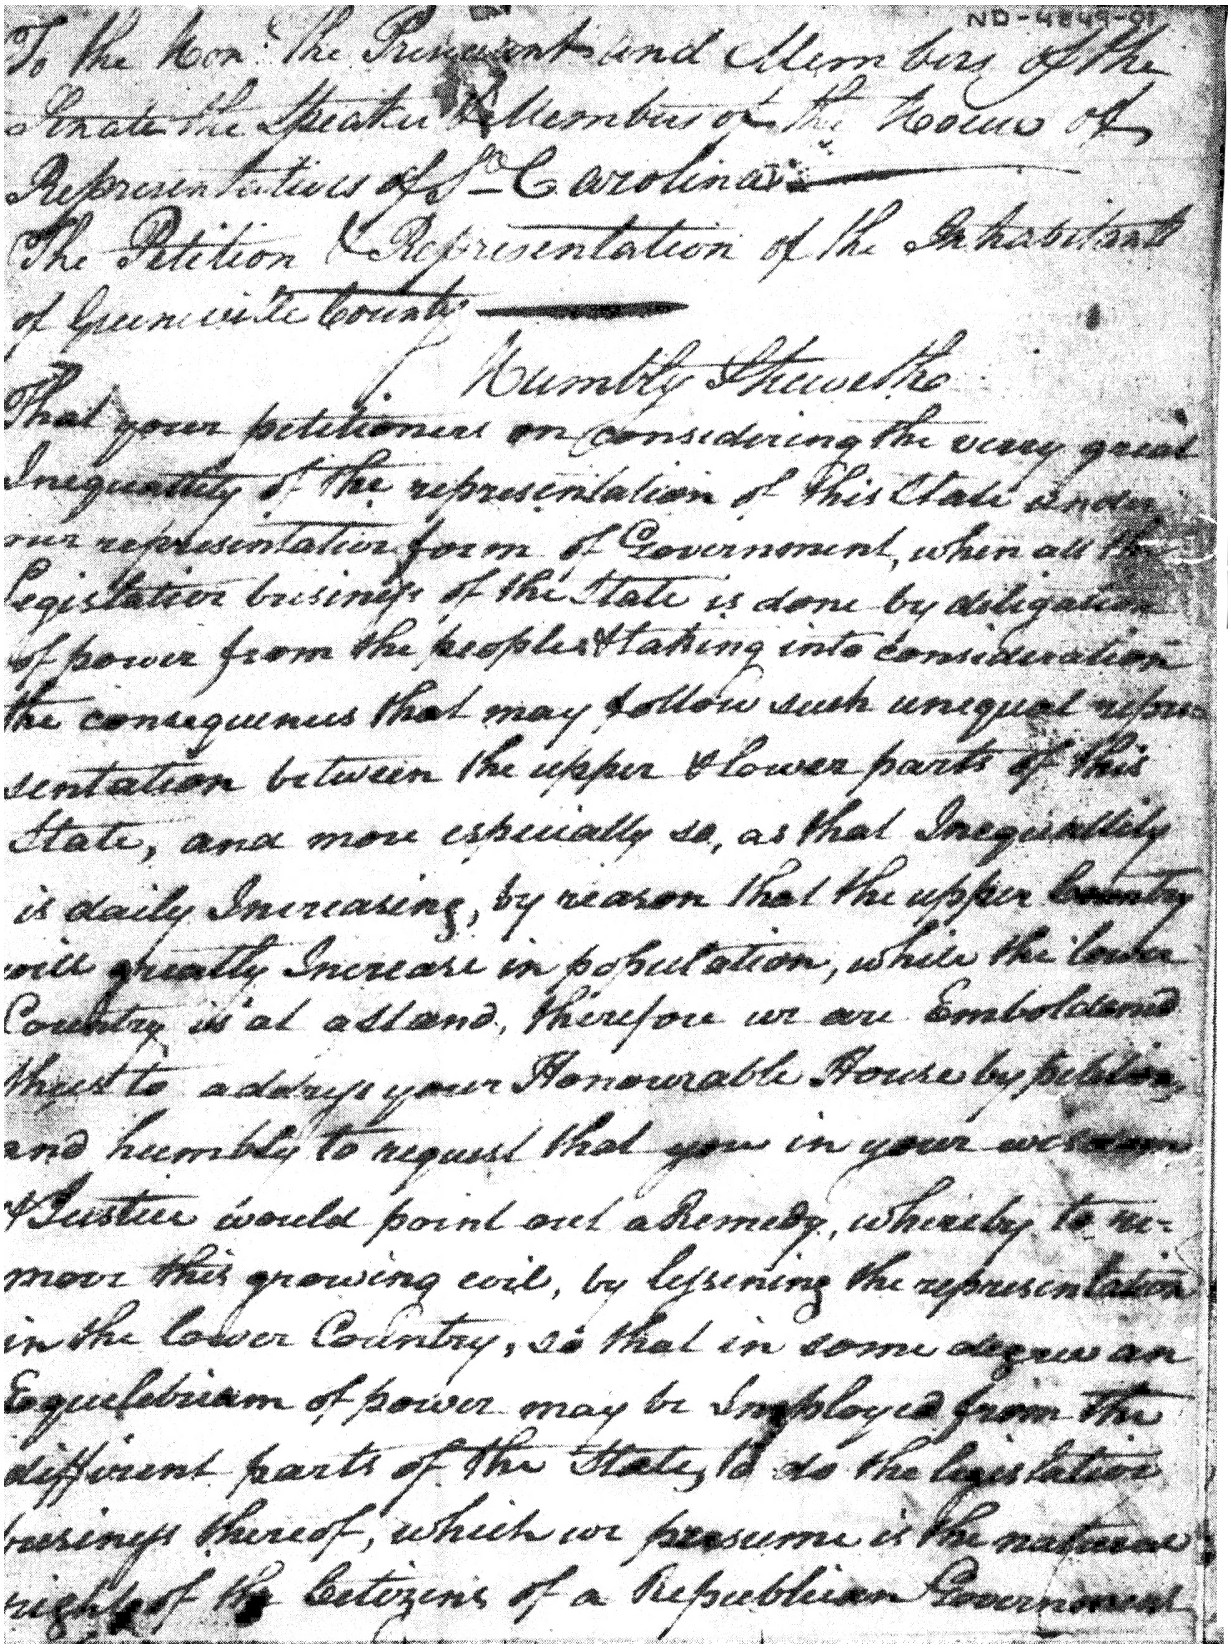

It is surprising that by his art he should be able from time to time to evade the removal of his people —

If they would go off it might appear in their favor, if they do not it will be brought forward as a strong objection against the request of the Government — Every Negociation is embarrassed by the conduct of some lawless people on the frontiers — I am Sir very respectfully your Obt. That your petitioners on considering the very great Inequality of the representation of this State under our representation form of Government, when all the legislation business of the State is done by delegation of power from the people & taking into consideration the consequences that may follow such unequal representation between the upper & lower parts of this State, and more especially so, as that Inequality is daily Increasing, by reason that the upper Country will greatly Increase in population, while the lower Country is at a stand, Therefore we are Emboldened thereto to address your Honourable House by petition, and humbly to request that you in your wisdom & Justice would point out a Remedy, whereby to remove this growing evil, by lessening the representation in the lower Country, so that in some degree an Equilebriam of power may be employed from the different parts of the State, to do the legislative business thereof, which we presume is the natural right of the Citizens of a Republican Government

To Brigadier General Buckner Harris.

Sir

In pursuance of the orders I received from you on the 1st Instant to examine & report the State of the Settlements within the Indian Boundary between the Cherokee mountains & the Appalachee. I proceeded to the settlements nearest to the Camp of my rout from Jefferson — I found that the people had complied with the orders rec'd from you agreed to in my orders except in the following instances viz Mr Isham Smith informed me that his wife was in a state of health so critical that she could not be moved without endangering her life — Mr Smith had demolished all his buildings except one where Mrs Smith was sick & he appeared perfectly willing to comply with the Order aforesaid —

Captain Little having received a passport to move his family to the Western Country, had permission to pitch a tent for their accommodation for two weeks while he is selling his effects in this quarter These instances I consider as not contravening the order for making a complete evacuation of their settlements on the Cherokee lands & think it my duty to report that the settlers whom I have seen have manifested a disposition to comply with the orders applying to their particular situation & to the Laws of our Country. & it is the wish of those present that an Officer may soon be sent to receive the State of the settlements that he may witness on the spot that a punctual compliance shall have been had with your Orders. This you will please to receive as my

Unicoi Trail

The Unicoi Trail (in red on the map) was a pre-colonial Indian trading path connecting the western parts of North and South Carolina with eastern Tennessee. At first it was open to trade only—no settlers. But after about 1795 settlers began using it. It was open to wagons about 1813, and became a toll road (turnpike) about 1819.

Historical Background

The Unicoi Trail, Unicoi Turnpike, or Trading Path, emerged from the Saluda Gap where North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia now meet. The trail headed west on the south side of the far west part of North Carolina over to the Tennessee border where it passed through the Unicoi Gap. The trail then curved north toward the Overhill Cherokee villiages and ended at either Tellico, or Vonore, or Knoxville. The Unicoi Trail was the most heavily used trade route into east Tennessee, but settlers were forbidden to use it prior to the decline of Cherokee military power in the 1790s.[1]

The first British colonists known to have used the Unicoi Trail in 1690 brought trade goods from Charleston to the Overhill Cherokee villages. Furs and pelts exchanged hands for guns and rum.By 1700 French colonists from the Gulf Coast followed the Great Indian Warpath to trade in the same villages. In 1736 an Englishman named Priber used the Unicoi Trail to reach Tellico where he and a Cherokee named Motoy set up a utopian-communist society. However, after five years the British arrested Priber and accused him of being a French spy.

The British-French rivalry heated up during the French and Indian War from 1754 to 1763. The British used pack animals on the Unicoi Trail to bring tools and supplies to build Fort Loudon. The British garrison also brought 12 hundred-pound cannons over the steep trail. After the British surrendered the Fort, they moved their cannons back to South Carolina over the Unicoi Trail.

During the Revolutionary War most Cherokee Indians allied with the British against the American patriot cause. John Sevier led about 140 patriots across the Unicoi Gap to attack and burn three Indian villages. But, when they were faced by 1000 warriors the patriots quickly retreated back down the Unicoi Trail.

After the Unicoi Trail was opened to wagons about 1795, it became a popular choice for pioneers from the Yadkin River settlements, and Waxhaws to move across the mountains from North Carolina to east Tennessee. In 1815 a company was formed to turn the trail into a road fit for freight wagons. By 1819 the toll road was renamed a turnpike and opened to the public. This opened up trade between Augusta, Georgia and Knoxville, Tennessee. Tennessee farmers used the road to market their goods in the South until after the American Civil War.

There is no known list of settlers who travelled the Unicoi Trail. However, some of the early residents of Tennessee may have used the trail to reach their destination, as well as several other routes like the Great Valley Road, Wilderness Road, Kentucky Road, Avery's Trace, Catawba Trail, or Georgia Road.

United States Migration Patterns 1784 to 1839 (National Institute)

Beyond the Eastern Shores, 1784-1839

The new nation faced many challenges. Its citizens were restless, eager to improve their economic opportunities, and for many this meant moving. There were choices to be made. Land was available due to eastern state cessions of western territory as well as acquisition of vast new territorial areas through the Louisiana Purchase. Some of this land was transferred from the government to veterans as bounty land. These new regions were attractive to adventurous families and individuals.

By 1820 the balance of North-South states began to worry Congressional leaders; for a time Western and southern expansion provided an outlet. By the 1830s, overland wagon trains were carrying families into Texas, Arkansas, and new territories.

Post-Revolution Migrations

After the Revolutionary War, over 25 percent of the eastern population left older settled regions. Established families could no longer make a living on their eroded lands. Merchants and businessmen had lost their import-export business with England. They were eager to find better living conditions. This began a generations long trek westward as families sought greener pastures and new homes on the ever-expanding American Frontier.

From Massachusetts, many went into eastern New York where old claims were now in the hands of speculators. They joined New Yorkers and families from Rhode Island and Connecticut in occupying the New York Military Lands in the fertile Genesee Valley and lands along Lake Erie. Others went into western Pennsylvania when those lands were opened by speculators. Still others moved north into the Vermont territory or on into English Canada.

Between 1785 and 1800, there were migrations south into the wilderness of western Georgia and the Mississippi Valley. People from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia went southward along the east side of the Appalachian Mountains over the Great Valley Road. Some turned west through the Holston and French Broad Valleys into Tennessee. Many went through the Cumberland Gap into the rich lands of Kentucky, while others kept going to the south and ended up in North and South Carolina. From the Carolinas, the road was open to Georgia, to Middle Tennessee, and to all points West.

The first really large flow of settlers across the Appalachians came in the twenty years right after the Revolution. New settlements weren't evenly spread; areas were most attractive if they had better transportation and fertile land. During this period, the majority of those migrating were native-born, seeking economic opportunity either in eastern cities or in the farms and towns of the West. Characteristic of all population movements, people were both "pushed and pulled." They migrated only if they found their home conditions in the East less desirable than their prospects in the West.

People moving to the farming frontier went as directly West as possible. The importance of this fact cannot be understated as one ponders American migration patterns. Time after time the culture of a particular section of the East was reproduced. The bulk of the Virginia and Carolina migration went to Kentucky and Tennessee; Pennsylvanians migrated to Ohio; and New Englanders migrated to central New York and the region of the Great Lakes.

During the war years, most of the migrants into the trans-mountain region had come from the South, either through the Cumberland Gap or sometimes up the Potomac and overland to the area around Pittsburgh. This population overflowed into the region just north of the Ohio River in what was to become southern Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. Next came the occupation of Missouri and Iowa. Migrants from the Middle Atlantic states went west by way of Pittsburgh and mixed in the Ohio Valley with the southern group. New Englanders usually went into the same areas by way of Pittsburgh although some went through southern New York State. In 1788, for example, it was a group of New Englanders who crossed New York and northern Pennsylvania, then floated down the Ohio River to the mouth of the Muskingum River. There they founded the town of Marietta near the earlier-established Fort Harmar.

By 1795 the choice frontier lands had already been appropriated by the early pioneers —eastern Tennessee's valleys, the Nashville Basin, Kentucky's limestone areas, and the lowlands of the Ohio River. What remained was the hilly areas of the Appalachian Plateau. Yet even these less than ideal land conditions appealed to discontented persons in all three regions of early America (New England, the Middle States, and the South). New England was overcrowded, and the cost of land escalated. In the Middle States and South, they faced some of the same problems, and still more. Many who left New York and Pennsylvania were those who had previously moved to the western fringe of civilization, and now simply kept moving. Thousands in Virginia, Maryland, and

North Carolina abandoned their soil-exhausted farms. When plantation agriculture expanded into the Piedmont and Great Valley, some of the small farmers went West to escape the developing class system or to avoid contact with slavery. Improved roads connecting East and West contributed greatly to the mass exodus of the post-Revolutionary years.

After the War of 1812

Increased migration to the West followed the War of 1812 and came to a peak in the years 1818-1819 but ending with the panic of 1819. Over 1 million acres of land were sold in 1814, more than in any one previous year. In 1818 and 1819 yearly sales reached 3.5 million acres, but then the figures decreased. During this period, the greatest flow of settlers followed the central route through either Pittsburgh or Wheeling and then down the Ohio River.

Veterans of the War of 1812 led the first real beginnings of settlement in the Detroit area. It was another decade before large-scale immigration occurred in the large Minnesota area. Both Minnesota and Wisconsin attracted persons from New England and New York and an ever-increasing flow of Scandinavians, first to Wisconsin and then to Minnesota and Dakota.

Traders were present in the Far West for many years prior to pioneer settlement by farmers who came into the area primarily from the tier of states which bordered the Mississippi River. Like preceding generations, they were restless, always looking for better lands and opportunity. They brought with them the determination, courage, and willingness to work which had already caused them to play a leading role in American expansion.

The Old Southwest

The southern portion of the Louisiana Purchase, opened as the Territory of Orleans in 1804, filled first due to the nucleus of French settlement around New Orleans which held promise for economic opportunity. Within two years, 10,000 immigrants arrived, followed by 4,000 more between 1807 and 1809, many of whom in this latter group were French refugees from the West Indies.

Louisiana maintained a heavy French population, but in addition, it attracted southerners as would Texas. Louisiana's population in 1820 was 150,000. The dominant western city of the 1820s and 1830s was New Orleans. It controlled business of two/thirds of the nation, that part drained by the Mississippi and its tributaries. By 1840 Louisiana had a population of approximately 100,000.

West of the Mississippi the great population center north of Louisiana was the region set aside in 1812 as the Territory of Missouri. Settlers came from both north and south of the Ohio River between 1820 and 1840 and were joined by foreign immigrants, particularly from Germany. Of course the older towns retained large numbers of French Catholics. Missouri and much of the trans-Mississippi West was dominated by the city of St. Louis, even though its population in 1840 was just over 16,000.

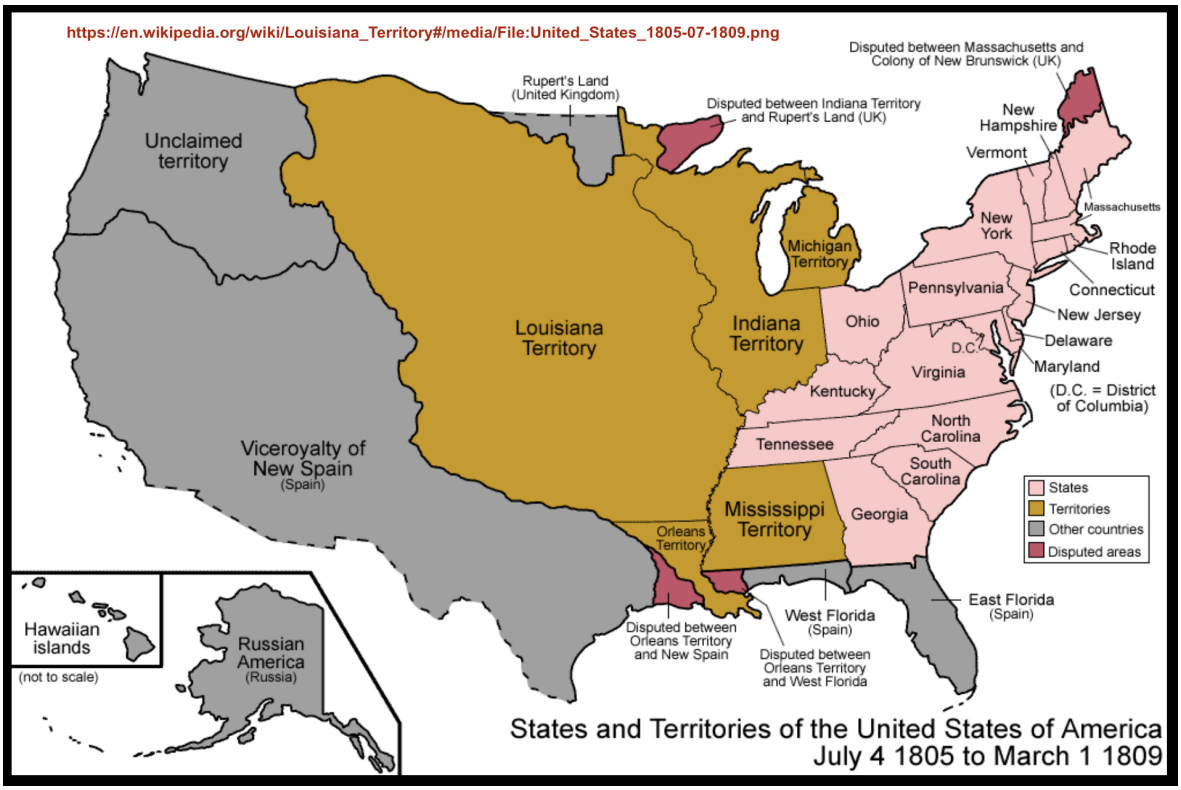

Between Missouri and Louisiana was the territory of Arkansas, sparsely populated at first. A military road between Memphis and Little Rock increased development. As states to the East filled, population overflowed into Arkansas.

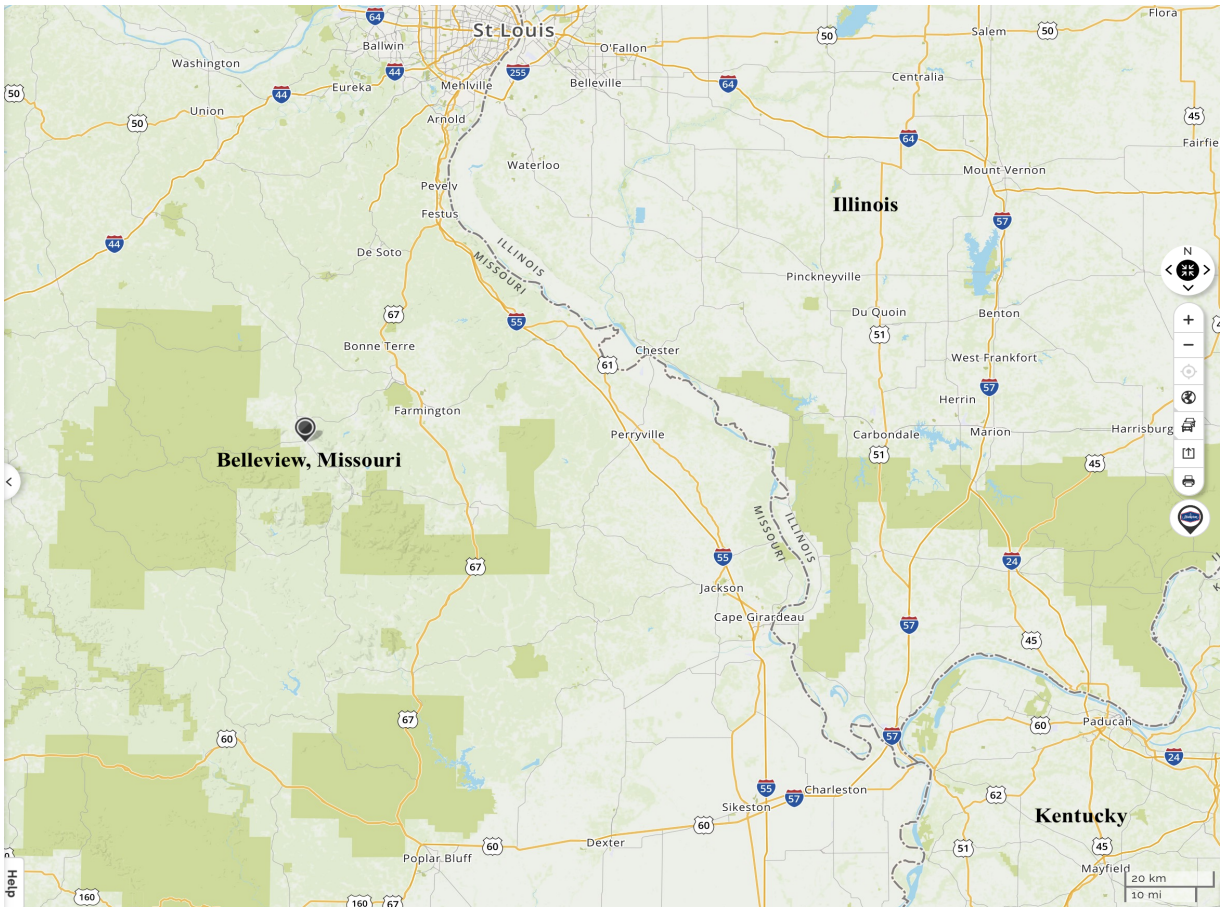

By 1820 thousands of southerners from Virginia, Georgia, and the Carolinas had settled in what would become Alabama and Mississippi. Mississippi was settled almost exclusively in the southern part. Vicksburg at the mouth of the Yazoo River, and Natchez on the Mississippi River, were centers of population. In Alabama, a sprinkling of farms covered most of the western half, with the greatest concentration in the region of the great bend of the Alabama River. With movement into western Georgia, that state almost doubled in population between 1820 to 1840, but the newer ones, Alabama and Mississippi, increased fivefold. Meanwhile, the Territory of Florida made slow growth, almost entirely in the northern parts of the territory.

By the close of the 1830s, with the paralyzing economic collapse of 1837, farmers of Missouri, Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Louisiana were ready to seek new homes in the Far West. The Old Southwest area faced an especially difficult economic period. Because of half-finished projects such as railroads and other internal improvements, people were left with staggering debts and heavy taxes. They moved on eagerly, they would face entirely different circumstances and challenges in the desert areas to their west.

Territorial Censuses (1752-1819) and Tax Lists (1814-1821)

The first known census for inhabitants of what would later become Missouri was taken by France in 1752 for Ste. Genevieve. Only eight heads of households are listed; the total census includes 23 individuals.

France transferred the Louisiana Territory to Spain in 1763. Spain conducted several censuses, the first in 1770. By 1791, Missouri's population had grown to 326 households and 2,556 individuals. In all, Spanish censuses were taken in 1770, 1779, 1791, 1794, 1795, 1796, and 1797. The Archives has transcriptions of the 1752, 1791 and 1797 censuses.

Spain controlled the Territory until October 1800 when it was sold back to France. A census was taken in December of that year. The United States bought the entire Louisiana Territory from France in 1803, the same year as the final French census. The first census for an American Missouri Territory occurred in October 1814. The Territorial General Assembly required a census to be taken every two years after that: 1816, 1818, 1820, etc. The 1814, 1816, and 1820 censuses have not survived. A portion of the 1818 census – Ste. Genevieve only – does exist. These territorial censuses list names of heads of households only.

Territorial tax lists are good substitutes when census records are form not available. Several are available from the Archives (see the list below). Tax lists include the name of the head of the household as well as the value of their property. Additional territorial tax lists may be available in local courthouses or on Archives' microfilm.

JAMES WILKINSON TO THE SECRETARY OF WAR

[NA:WD, SWDF:ALS]

MISSISSIPPI near KASKIAS June 27th 05

DEAR SIR Having met here Mr. P. Shoteau [32] & finding also a casual conveyance to St. Vincennes—I deem it expedient to drop you a hasty scral—

Kingsbury [33] has reached St Louis with his detachment, & Col Hunt [34] I understand (over land) passed St. Vincennes the 9th Inst. where He will find orders to press Him on to New Orleans—we have therefore a prospect of bringing Col[o] Butler to trial.[35]—

I have experienced a thousand difficulties, in steming the impetuous current of this River, from sickness & other causes, but I wave the detail at present.—

I understand from Mr. Shoteau that the Indian Chiefs sent down the Missouri by Cap[t] Lewis [36] have returned Home, and that 150 Chiefs & warriors of the Sacs wait my Arrival at St Louis, He descended purposely to meet me & brought with Him three grand Chiefs—on the subject of the treatment to be observed towards Indian visitants, you have not said one word to me, nor have you given me directions relatively to those, who incline to visit the seat of Government—in either case expences are unavoidable, but I possess neither funds nor means nor the command of either, yet it is our policy to consiliate & attach the aborigines which cannot be effected by a sudden departure from those Courtesies which they have been in the Habit of receiving from our Predecessors, & which I apprehend they have been promised by our Agents—In the circumstance which I am immediately to meet, I anticipate some embarrassments which I shall endeavour to master—But I pray of you to prescribe a rules for my Conduct, in every case where any expence may be admited—M[r] Shoteau tells me He had "Carte blanche, to draw on you for expences, but his Authority is burnt with his House—pardon this hasty scral—I shall be in St. Louis the 2[nd] proximo—and am with perfect & Esteem Sir yr ob st

JAMES WILKINSON TO THE PRESIDENT

[LC:Jefferson Papers:ALS]

Mississippi River, near S[t] GENEVIEVE. June 27th 05.—

SIR In a case which excites the sharpest self-reproach & exposes me to severe reprehension, I venture to address myself directly to you, with the hope that you may spare me the publick humiliation, which I have merited by an inexcusable (tho innocent) omission of Duty.

The precise injunctions of the Law, relatively to the Oath of office I am to take, as Governor of the Territory of Louisiana, had escaped my observation until the last Evening, and the discovery has perplext, mortified & confounded me beyond expression; whatever may be your Judgment on the occasion, it can not exceed my own self-condemnation, and unhappily for me, I have nothing to offer in extenuation of my fault, but the frank confession of it.

To remedy my delinquency & to prevent publick Injury & inconvenience, as far as may be possible, I propose this Day to take the oath of Office, before John Edgar Esq[r], of Kaskaskias, Judge of the Court of Common pleas, for the County of [blank] in the Territory of Indiana, (Evidence of which will accompany this letter) and

MEMORIAL TO THE PRESIDENT BY CITIZENS OF THE TERRITORY

[NA:SD, La. Terr. Papers, II:ADS]

[No date, 1806]

To the President of the United States.—

The subscribers Citizens of the Territory of Louisiana, respectfully represent; That they have learned with regret, a Petition is now in circulation, in this Territory, for the appointment of a person, to succed General Wilkinson, in the Office of Governor, whom we believe will not give satisfaction to the people in general.—Without intending to dictate to The President, we beg leave to observe, that we have the fullest confidence, in the talents, and integrity of both Col° Return J Meigs Junior, and Col° Samuel Hammond, either of whom, should they meet your approbation, will we believe, by their mildness, and Republicanism, restore harmony to the Territory, and administer its Government, with ability, and satisfaction.—

[French text]

Au President des Etats Unis de l'Amerique;

Les Soussignés, Citoyens du Territoire de La Louisianne Respectueusement representent, Qu'ils ont appris, avec regret, qu'une Petition est presentement en mouvement parmi le peuple de ce Territoire pour la nomination d'une personne a succeder le General Wilkinson dans l'Office de Gouverneur de ce Territoire; Laquelle personne, nous croyons veritablement, ne donnera pas une Satisfaction generale aux Citoyens de la Louisianne.

C'est pourquoi que, sans pretendre a dicter au President des Etats Unis, Nous demandons la liberté d'exprimer notre confiance dans la Vertue la bonne conduite et les talents de Col¹ Return J. Meigs Jun'r— ainsi que de Col° Samuel Hammond;—l'un au l'autre de ces Messieurs, approuvé de vous, Seroit dans le cas, comme nous le croyons, par leurs moderation et bonne conduite, de retablir cette Union et accord parmi les Citoyens de ce Territoire qui existoient autre fois, et d'agir aux affaires publiques habilement et a la Satisfaction de tout le monde.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR TO GOVERNOR WILKINSON

[NA:OIA,SW, Lets. Sent, Bk. B]

WAR DEPMT. Ap. 9. 1806.

JAMES WILKINSON

SIR, The Missouri and Mississippi Indian Chiefs, will leave this place tomorrow for Pittsburg, from whence they will descend the River & proceed on to S[t] Louis.—Several have died; but what is more especially to be regretted is the death of the very respectable & amiable Ricara Chief, which happened on the 7[th] instant.—

It has been considered expedient, to have the interpreter, Gravline, and one of the Panas, who speak the Ricara language, sent, in a light boat, with a sober, discreet Sergeant & four faithful sober soldiers, up to the Ricara Nation, as soon as you can make the necessary arrangements. We shall forward the Big Medal, clothes, trinkets &c. &c. of the old Chief to his favorite son, together with something like a commission to him of a Chief. And it is thought advisable to send presents to his wives and children, to the amount of, from two to three hundred Dollars, which you will please to have selected from the Factory Goods. M[r] Tillier will be written to on the subject.[a] It will likewise be proper to furnish Gravline with 100[lbs] of Powder and a corresponding quantity of Lead, to be distributed to the Chiefs of the Ricaras and Mandanes &c.—

The escort, which ascends the River, will return in the Autumn, if it arrives at the place of its destination in Season; if not, it must Winter with the Ricaras and return in the Spring. There should be no unnecessary delay in their departure; and they should be as little encumbered with baggage as the nature of the voyage will permit. If Gravline should wish to carry a few hundred dollars worth of Goods, he may be allowed the privilege—I shall agree with him what his compensation is to be.

If a present of four or five hundred Dollars, in such articles as can be procured at the Factory, will serve to wipe away the tears, in any considerable degree, from the eyes of the unfortunate Osages, whose connections have been killed, or held in captivity by the faithless Puttawattamies, you will please to have the same delivered into the hands of the Principal Osage Chiefs, to be by them distributed among the unfortunate families. But the Osages should be informed that their depredations on the Caddos, on the waters of Red River, are known by the President; and unless they take effectual measures for preventing any further hostilities on our particular friends, the Caddos, they will forfeit the good opinion and friendship of their father the President.—

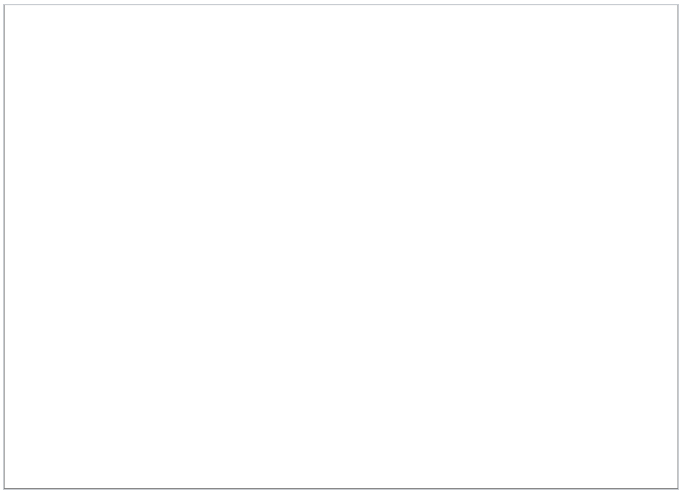

I have taken every means in my power, to impress the minds of the Osages, who are here, with the necessity of their being at peace with our Red friends, and especially with the Caddos.—I have likewise made strong Talks to the Puttawattamies, and other Mississippi Chiefs, as well as the Upper Missouri Chiefs, on the Subject of general peace and friendship among those Nations, whom we consider as our friends.—

We shall settle with and pay the several interpreters, with an

1811–12 New Madrid earthquakes

The Great Earthquake at New Madrid, a 19th-century woodcut from Devens' Our First Century (1877)

The 1811–12 New Madrid earthquakes were an intense intraplate earthquake series beginning with an initial earthquake of moment magnitude 7.2–8.2 on December 16, 1811, followed by a moment magnitude 7.4 aftershock on the same day. They remain the most powerful earthquakes to hit the contiguous United States east of the Rocky Mountains in recorded history. They, as well as the seismic zone of their occurrence, were named for the Mississippi River town of New Madrid, then part of the Louisiana Territory, now within the US state of Missouri.

There are estimates that these stable continental region earthquakes were felt strongly over roughly 130,000 square kilometers (50,000 sq mi), and moderately across nearly 3 million square kilometers (1 million square miles). The 1906 San Francisco earthquake, by comparison, was felt moderately over roughly 16,000 km (6,200 sq mi).

The New Madrid earthquakes were interpreted variously by American Indian tribes, but one consensus was universally accepted: the powerful earthquake had to have meant something. For many tribes in Tecumseh's pan-Indian alliance, it meant that Tecumseh and his brother the Prophet must be supported.

The three earthquakes and their major aftershocks

- December 16, 1811, 0815 UTC (2:15 a.m.); (M 7.2–8.2) epicenter in northeast Arkansas. It caused only slight damage to man-made structures, mainly because of the sparse population in the epicentral area. The future location of Memphis, Tennessee, experienced level IX shaking on the Mercalli intensity scale. A seismic seiche propagated upriver, and Little Prairie (a village that was on the site of the former Fort San Fernando, near the site of present-day Caruthersville, Missouri) was heavily damaged by soil liquefaction.
- December 16, 1811 (aftershock), 1415 UTC (8:15 a.m.); (M 7.4) epicenter in northeast Arkansas. This shock followed the first earthquake by six hours and was similar in intensity.
- January 23, 1812, 1500 UTC (9:00 a.m.); (M 7.0–8.0) epicenter in the Missouri Bootheel. The meizoseismal area was characterized by general ground warping, ejections, fissuring, severe landslides, and caving of stream banks. Johnson and Schweig attributed this earthquake to a rupture on the New Madrid North Fault. This may have placed strain on the Reelfoot Fault.
- February 7, 1812, 0945 UTC (3:45 a.m.); (M 7.4–8.6) epicenter near New Madrid, Missouri. New Madrid was destroyed. In St. Louis, Missouri, many houses were severely damaged, and their chimneys were toppled. This shock was definitively attributed to the Reelfoot Fault by Johnston and Schweig. Uplift along a segment of this reverse fault created temporary waterfalls on the Mississippi at Kentucky Bend, created waves that propagated upstream, and caused the formation of Reelfoot Lake by obstructing streams in what is now Lake County, Tennessee.

Susan Hough, a seismologist of the United States Geological Survey (USGS), has estimated the earthquakes' magnitudes as around magnitude 7.

There were many more aftershocks, including one magnitude 7 aftershock to the December 16, 1811 earthquake which occurred at 0600 UTC (12:00 a.m.) on December 17, 1811, and one magnitude 7 aftershock to the February 7, 1812 earthquake which occurred on the same day at 0440 UTC (10:40 p.m.).

Eyewitness accounts

John Bradbury, a Fellow of the Linnean Society, was on the Mississippi on the night of December 15, 1811, and describes the tremors in great detail in his Travels in the Interior of America in the Years 1809, 1810 and 1811, published in 1817.

> After supper, we went to sleep as usual: about ten o'clock, and in the night I was awakened by the most tremendous noise, accompanied > by an agitation of the boat so violent, that it appeared in danger of upsetting ... I could distinctly see the river as if agitated by a storm; and although the noise was inconceivably loud and terrific, I could distinctly hear the crash of falling trees, and the screaming of the wild fowl on the river, but found that the boat was still safe at her moorings.

> By the time we could get to our fire, which was on a large flag in the stern of the boat, the shock had ceased; but immediately the perpendicular banks, both above and below us, began to fall into the river in such vast masses, as nearly to sink our boat by the swell they occasioned ... At day-light we had counted twenty-seven shocks.

Eliza Bryan in New Madrid, Territory of Missouri, wrote the following eyewitness account in March 1812.

> On the 16th of December, 1811, about two o'clock, a.m., we were visited by a violent shock of an earthquake, accompanied by a very awful noise resembling loud but distant thunder, but more hoarse and vibrating, which was followed in a few minutes by the complete saturation of the atmosphere, with sulphurious vapor, causing total darkness. The screams of the affrighted inhabitants running to and fro, not knowing where to go, or what to do—the cries of the fowls and beasts of every species—the cracking of trees falling, and the roaring of the Mississippi— the current of which was retrograde for a few minutes, owing as is supposed, to an irruption in its bed— formed a scene truly horrible.

John Reynolds (February 26, 1788 – May 8, 1865) who was the 4th governor of Illinois, among other political posts, mentions the earthquake in his biography My Own Times: Embracing Also the History of My Life (1855):

On the night of 16th November [sic], 1811, an earthquake occurred, that produced great consternation amongst the people. The centre of the violence was in New Madrid, Missouri, but the whole valley of the Mississippi was violently agitated. Our family all were sleeping in a log cabin, and my father leaped out of bed crying aloud "the Indians are on the house" ... We laughed at the mistake of my father, but soon found out it was worse than the Indians. Not one in the family knew at the time that it was an earthquake. The next morning another shock made us acquainted with it, so we decided it was an earthquake. The cattle came running home bellowing with fear, and all animals were terribly alarmed on the occasion. Our house cracked and quivered, so we were fearful it would fall to the ground. In the American Bottom many chimneys were thrown down, and the church bell in Cahokia sounded by the agitation of the building. It is said the shock of an earthquake was felt in Kaskaskia in 1804, but I did not perceive it. The shocks continued for years in Illinois, and some have experienced it this year, 1855.

The Shaker diarist Samuel Swan McClelland described the effects of the earthquake on the Shaker settlement at West Union (Busro), Indiana, where the earthquakes contributed to the temporary abandonment of the westernmost Shaker community.

MAJOR THOMAS C. CLARK

- DESIGNATION: Battalion of East Tennessee Militia
- DATES: January 1814 - July 1814
- MEN MOSTLY FROM: Roane, Bledsoe, and Rhea Counties.
- CAPTAINS: Allen S. Bacon, James Berry, John Hankins, (Lt.) John Hixson(Hixon), and Thomas Walker

BRIEF HISTORY:
This unit, a detachment from the 8th Brigade of Tennessee Militia, was ordered to Fort Armstrong in January 1814. A letter from Major Clark to Andrew Jackson written from that post in late January, stated that Clark's battalion was made up of approximately 300 men. Clark related that he left one of his captains' companies of fifty men at Camp Ross (near present-day Chattanooga) to take care of the public stores found there. Although little is known of this unit, the battalion was more than likely used to facilitate the transfer of supplies from east Tennessee to the armies fighting in the Creek campaigns.

The Carroll County Shuffle

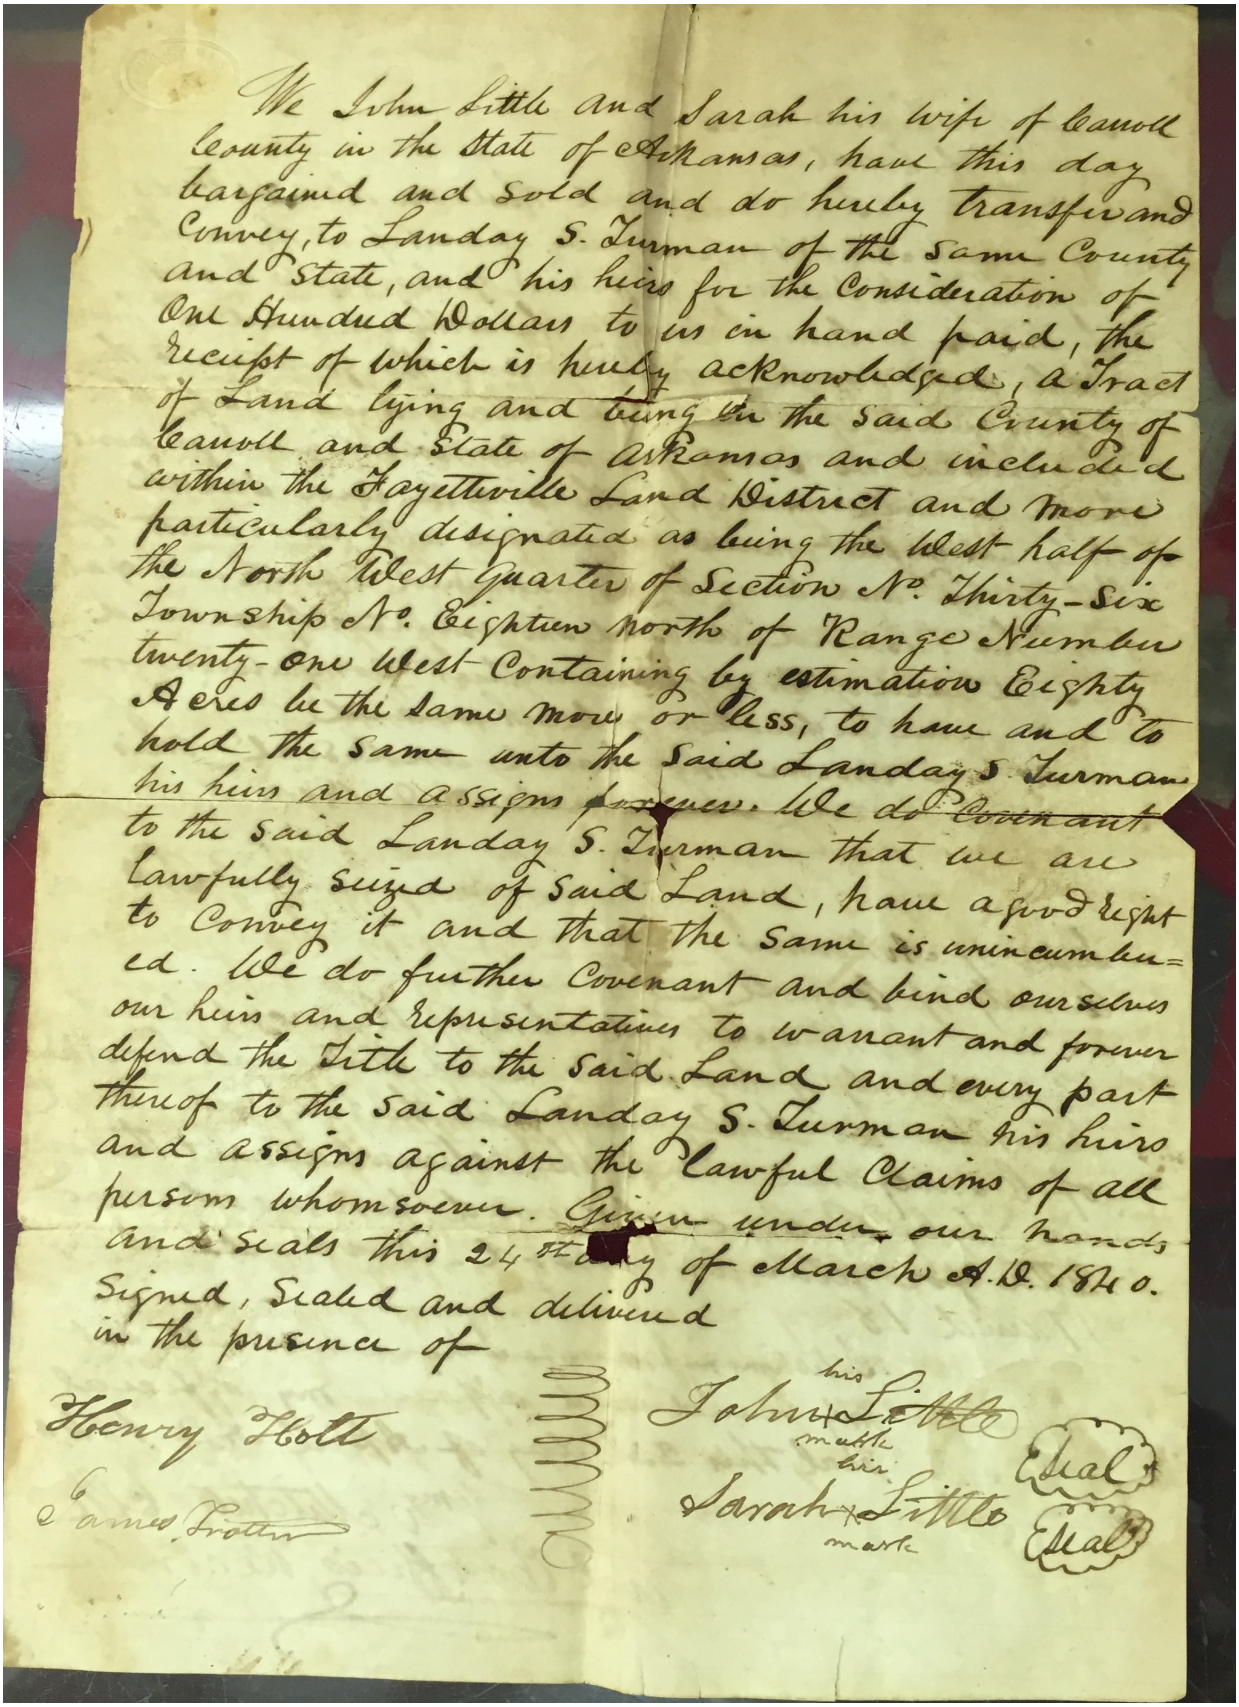

https://carrollcountyar.com/history-carroll-county-shuffle.php

The county boundaries in the "Arkansaw" Territory changed many times prior to achieving Arkansas Statehood in 1836, and several times thereafter. Carroll County would both lose and gain land mass at times, due to its constantly shifting boundaries. Carroll County lost sections of land to Madison and Searcy counties in the late 1830's, and Newton County would be carved from it in 1842. In 1867, Boone County would take enough land away from Carroll County to leave it below the required minimum square miles for a county. To remedy the situation, Carroll County gained a portion of Madison County.

If you were to look at historical Arkansas maps, the current area of Carroll County would have fallen into the following transitioning county limits:

Year	County of Origin	Territory or State
1813	New Madrid County	Missouri Territory
1815	Lawrence County	Missouri Territory
1817	Lawrence County	Missouri Territory / partial Cherokee Reservation
1820	Crawford County	Arkansas Territory / partial Cherokee Reservation
1827	Lovely County 	Arkansas Territory / partial Cherokee Reservation
1828	Izard County	Arkansas Territory
1833	Carroll County	Arkansas Territory
1836	Carroll County	Arkansas State
1867	Carroll County	part of Madison County, Arkansas State

 Historians seem to disagree on the exact location of the short-lived Lovely County. Some believe that it encompassed a portion of present-day Carroll County, while others limit its Eastern border to portions of modern day Benton, Crawford, and Washington Counties. Please refer to Historic Lovely County, Arkansas for more info.

We John Little and Sarah his wife of Carroll County in the State of Arkansas, have this day bargained and sold and do hereby transfer and Convey, to Landay S. Turman of the same County and State, and his heirs for the Consideration of One Hundred Dollars to us in hand paid, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, a Tract of Land lying and being in the said County of Carroll and State of Arkansas and included within the Fayetteville Land District and more particularly designated as being the West half of the North West Quarter of Section No. Thirty-Six Township No. Eighteen North of Range Number twenty-one West Containing by estimation Eighty Acres be the same more or less, to have and to hold the same unto the said Landay S. Dear Mother I received a letter from Landy Turman containing the Death of my father which was verry meloncoley news and it deeply affected me as the death of a father naturally would, but I will say to my Mother by (illegible) way of consolation that he has lived an honorable life and has attained to many years, fought through many a hard battle and many of the trying (illegible -cenes?) of life and had faced death in all of its Horors and at last his hoary hares come down to the grave in peace.

So I would say to my Mother prepare to meet him on the Banks of Deliverence beyond the grave for we must all shortly go to that Bourne from whence no traviler returns. So I bid the subject farewell with a hope that he will be with his god while we are left to mourn. I request but one article of my Father's estate and that is his Cumpases. I would be glad if my Mother could convey them to me and if She can not send them, lay them by for me until I can get them for a memoral of my Father. I want nothing else of my father's estate as my Brother Landy Turman wrights to me that he only (illegible) $25-or-$30- of (illegible) his own Executor. I think it Strange that tho his out go would (illegible) much over his income as to reduce his property so lo in so short time, and I think it stranger that My Brother Landy should wright to me as though he thought that I would care anything about the little property was left at my father's—

Appendix 12

Associated Families

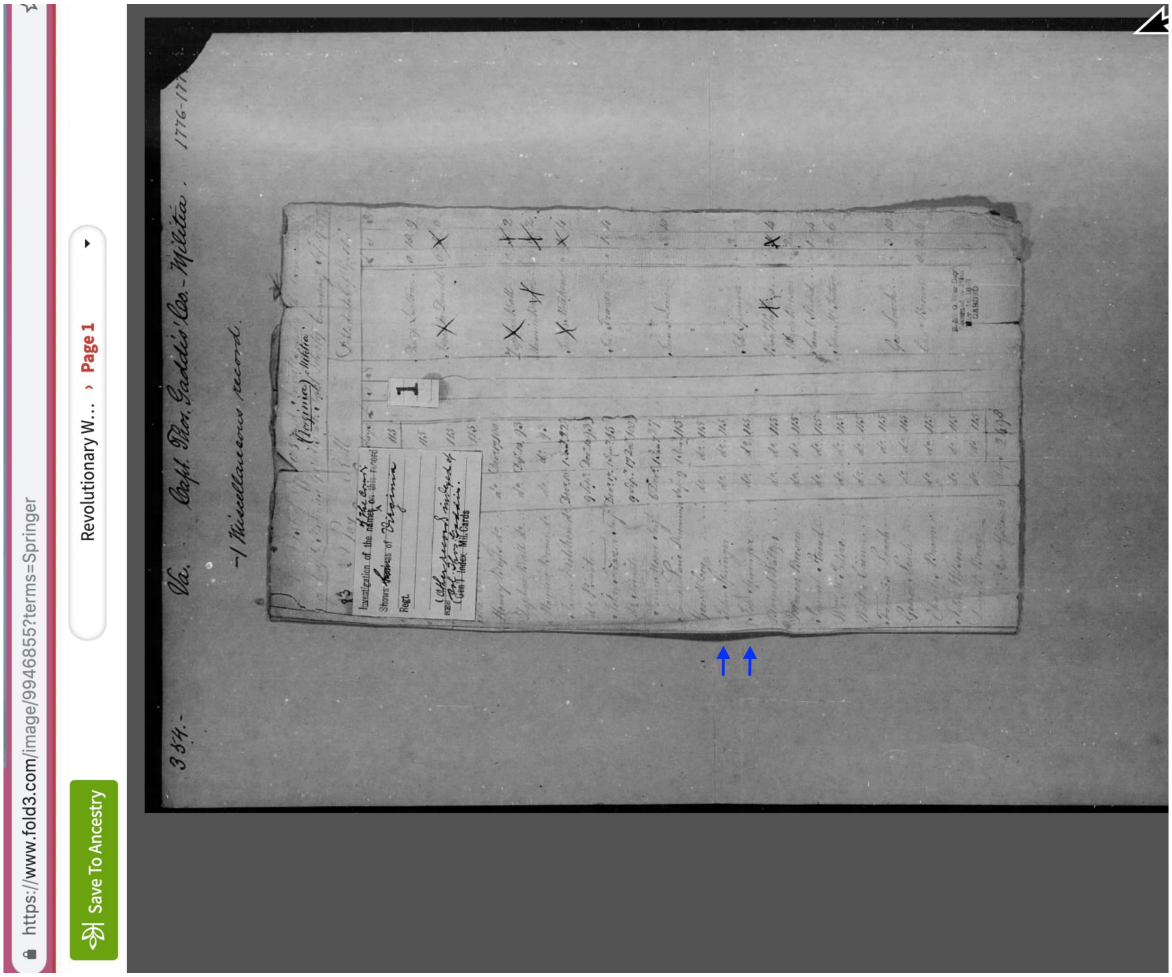

Huitts, Dodds, Gentrys and Keels and their connections to John Little

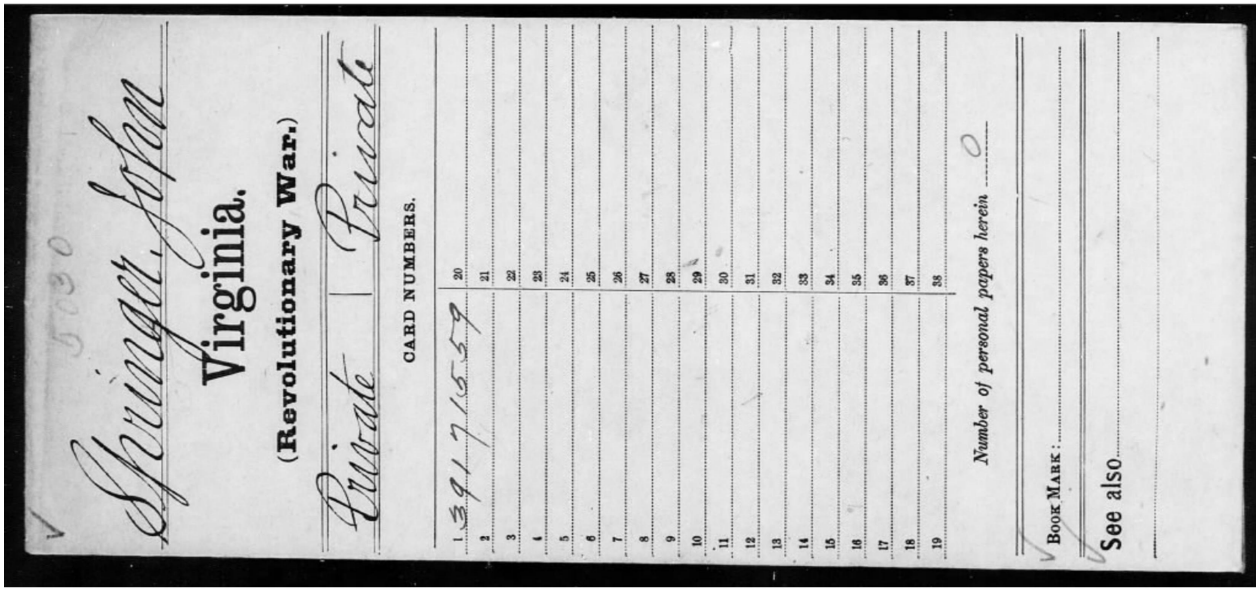

This biography truly came together only after I started researching the surnames that appeared in the Captain John Little Pelew Islands book, and the 1882 Memorandum book. Researching the surname Little can be an exercise in frustration since “little” is a descriptive word in addition to a surname. However when I started researching Huitt/Hewitt, Dodd and Gentry, I was often able to find John Little in close proximity.

In particular, Solomon Huitt's research has been my north star. His name is distinctive and he traveled the same routes as John Little in the same time period. His name is prominent in the Pelew book and the 1882 Memorandum book so we know he was of importance to John Little.

In the course of this research and through DNA testing, I have DNA-matched with descendants of the Huitts ,Gentrys and Keels confirming the closeness of the families through marriage. In fact, as I write this two more DNA connections have come through which could be the first confirmation of marriage with the Dodd family via the marriage of Sarah “Sally” Little and Michael Dodd.

This appendix contains some of the documentation on the above families that I came across in my research. It is a random grouping of information, nevertheless, I wanted to include them in this report as an aid to further research.

In later years, after Mr. Huitt's death, Elizabeth married Thomas Brock. Brock Creek is named after Mr. Brock.

All the children except Jessie were born on Shoal Creek in Crawford County, Mo. In about 1906 or 1907 they moved to Bellevue Valley where they bought a farm from Frank Bennett in the Sloan Community about two miles North of Caledonia. This is where Jessie was born. The Huitt's were musically talented. They owned a "parlor" organ and loved to play and sing. Many community parties were held in their home. The family was active in community and church affairs. In 1928 they sold their farm and moved to Irondale where they remained the rest of their life. When Lelia married, she and her husband lived with her father.

Huitt, William Gladstone

(From James to Joshua)

William Gladstone Huitt was born February 11, 1899 at Huzzah, Mo., a son of Ellis Grant and Josephine Estella Hanson Huitt.

He is a great great grandson of James Hewitt (later changed to Huitt) who came to Bellevue Valley in 1804. This story begins with James and Elizabeth, his wife. Little is known of them before they came to Missouri. They were from North Carolina. James and Elizabeth settled on a farm near Belgrade in 1804. They had four children and one slave. The farm was acquired from Antoine Dejarlais, who had acquired it from Louis Aubuchon. It was originally a Spanish land grant to Aubuchon. An exerpt from the land grant record regarding James' acquisition of the farm states "William Reed, being duly sworn, says that in the spring of 1805, claimant came to his house that he had settled the said tract of land, built a home, raised a crop of corn on the same that year and has actually inhabited and cultivated it to this day; that he then had a wife, four children and a slave."

The ownership of his farm seemed to never have really been settled. As late as May, 1833 the record states that "Hewitt resided on said land until the year 1814, when he died and his family has continued to reside on land ever since. Hewitt left a wife and several children."

Four more children were born in Missouri. Altogether there were eight, seven boys and one girl, namely: Lemuel, born in 1798; William, 1804; James Jr., 1806; Green, 1809; Wilkinson, 1812; Mary (Polly) 1814. Then there is Elijah and John but no birth dates are available for them.

James and Elizabeth had a large farm, almost 600 acres. They prospered and by the year 1814 they had six slaves and evidently were rather well off. Because of this and minor children, the courts were very much in evidence when James died in 1814. There was no will and Elizabeth had to account to the courts for each penny spent. Allowances were made every two years for boarding her children and the slave children.

There had to be a sale of James' belongings, and Elizabeth had to buy back her own furniture and farm animals. There was an estimated value of $700. on the slaves but they were left on the farm. Eventually they were divided among family members in 1828 when the number had grown to fourteen.

In 1816 a group of people around Caledonia and from North Carolina organized the first Presbyterian church west of the Mississippi, and Elizabeth Hewitt is listed as a charter member.

In 1822 Elizabeth married Thomas Brock, an Englishman. He bought the farm in 1828 and each heir received $380. and Elizabeth $830. There were two children still living at home, Mary (Polly) and Wilkinson.

Thomas Brock was a very enterprising man. He was a very successful farmer and also was elected coroner in 1838. There is a record of him performing an autopsy and charging the county $7.00.

When he died in 1862 everything was left to Elizabeth and at her death it was to go to her children and a grandson. She died between 1860 and 1870. We can find no record of Mary (Polly) other than she married William Eidson in 1830 and had a son, James, who lived with his grandparents until his marriage to Martha.

Five of the seven sons of James remained in Washington and Crawford Counties. John and Elijah evidently left the state at an early age.

William, born in 1804, married Elizabeth and they had five or more children. One son, William C., was married to Mary Love and served in the Civil War. He was also married to Mary Cole who died. Then he married Margaret Blount who petitioned for a widow's pension after his death in 1901.

James Jr., born in 1806, was married to Letty. They lived in Crawford County.

Green, born in 1809, was first married to Polly Sullivant and later to Barbara Sullivant.

Wilkinson, born in 1812, was the youngest son. He was married to Sarah Robeson July 2, 1833. He had one son, Wilkinson, Jr.

Lemuel, the eldest son was born in 1798 in Georgia. He married Sarah about 1818, and they had four daughters: Eliza, Elizabeth, Elvira and Mary. There were four sons: Richard who was born in Georgia in 1819; James T., born in 1825 in Missouri; William C., born in 1836 in Missouri; George W., born in 1827 in Missouri.

Lemuel bought lot #52 in Caledonia in 1820 for $25.00. At the time he was married and had two children. He was a justice of the peace in 1828 and there is a record that he married two couples. He died between 1850 and 1860 probably in Crawford County.

Lemuel's youngest son, George W. Huitt, married Sarah Skaggs. She was born May 5, 1831. They had three daughters; Missouri, born 1851; Elizabeth, born1855; and Henrietta, born 1858. There were three sons; William H. born 1852; Ellis Grant, born 1864; and Ewing Webb, born 1866.

Missouri married a Mr. Mason. They had two daughters; Eugie and Martie. In 1880 the children were living with their grandfather, George W. Huitt.

Elizabeth married Isaac Hanson at her father's home January 24, 1875 in Crawford County. They had eleven children. He died in 1907 and she in 1928. Both are buried in Skaggs Cemetery at Huzzah.

Henrietta was married to Billy Todd, a Baptist minister.

William H. (Billy) married Amanda Brickey December 22, 1874. They had three daughters, Hettie, Ida and Fannie and four sons, William C. (Corby), George, James O. and Ellis.

Hettie married Willie Coleman; Ida married Sam Coleman, and Fannie married Girdy Nipper. Corby married Oma Nipper; George married Ollie Whitehead. Ellis Grant Huitt was born in Steeleville, Missouri, August 14, 1863. He spent his whole life in Crawford and Washington counties except for about two years in Colorado. The family went there for his health.

On March 27, 1885 he married Josephine Estella Hanson, daughter of Abraham and Margaret Hanson from Wigan, England. She was born January 4, 1865 in Missouri. After their marriage they lived on a farm at Huzzah. It was a hard life in an area that was sparsely settled. Grant and his sons cut wood and delivered it for $1.50 a cord. Looking for a better life they moved to Caledonia about 1907. After two years they bought a farm west of Caledonia and lived there for about nineteen years.

Hull, Allen Brock

This Hull family originated in England, a division of Great Britain, north of London. There is a "City of Hull" in Yorkshire, England on the Hull River from which it is believed the Hull name derived. The Anglo-Saxon word "hullen" later changed to "howl", describing the sound of the river rushing to the sea, over the years became Hull.

Hulls migrated to North Carolina and the family of Allen Brock Hull moved on to Tennessee where he was born 8-17-1811, in Overton County. He died in Fentress County, Tennessee 6-6-1902 at age 91. He married Syreanna (Serena) Maynard born ? died 1-1-1897 in Fentress County, Tennessee and they are both buried in the Nash Cemetery at Armithwaite. Allen B. Hull was a Baptist Preacher.

They were the parents of 14 children. SOLOMON HUITT
Subscriber 2 (1806 Petition)

Solomon Huitt was born in North Carolina in 1770 and lived in Franklin County, Georgia and Washington County, Missouri prior to Arkansas. In 1805 he settled about three miles west of Caledonia, Missouri in the Bellevue Valley and purchased a small cabin from James Brown and the west half of a tract of land confirmed to Joseph Bear where the cabin was situated. From the Bellevue Valley, Solomon Huitt moved to Lawrence County, Missouri (Arkansas) and held preemption rights to land and improvements on the north side of Spring River about two miles above the mouth of Eleven Points River. He also held the privilege of the ferry landing across Spring River opposite from where he lived.

The early Lawrence County, Arkansas court records reveal Solomon Huitt's activity as one of the original county commissioners. He was appointed in 1815 with Joseph Hardin, Richard Searcy, Adam Ritchey and William Hix. They approved the survey and plans for the town of Davidsonville, selected by them as the county seat, and administered the erection of a courthouse and jail. Living in Lawrence County then (1815-1816) and later in Clark and Hempstead County, Arkansas including those portions that would become Pike County were: Samuel Bittick, Betsey (Elizabeth) Blair, George Butler, Charles Gallihar, William Hughes, William Janes, Robert Messer, Moses Moore, Jacob Reeder and Richard Wood.

Solomon Huitt left Lawrence County after 1819 and located in Hempstead County, Arkansas and afterward resided in Clark County. About 1829 he moved to Crawford County and in 1831 his name is listed in the Independence County, Arkansas tax book. In 1836 he was living in Washington County, Arkansas.

In 1843 Solomon Huitt and his son John Huitt moved from Washington County, Arkansas to Dallas then Robertson County, Texas and settled at Carrollton. Roland Huitt another son likewise came to Texas and entered Peter's Colony, Dallas County, Texas in 1846. John Huitt served as the first sheriff of Dallas County and after his death in 1848 Roland Huitt succeeded him.

There is a notice of death of Mrs. Nancy Huitt in the Arkansas Gazette, May 3, 1835. She died April 16, 1835 in her 34th year in Washington County, Arkansas survived by a husband and 3 small children. Her death is also reported in the Little Rock Times, May 16, 1835. She is related to the above Huitt family by marriage but the name of her husband was not given.
