1. RICHARD¹ MORRIS . He married SARAH POLE.

Richard Morris and Sarah Pole had the following child:

2.
 - i. LEWIS² MORRIS was born on October 15, 1671 in Morrisania, Bronx, Bronx County, New York. He died on May 25, 1746 in Bronx, Bronx, New York, USA. He married Isabella Graham on November 03, 1691.

Generation 2

2. LEWIS² MORRIS (Richard¹) was born on October 15, 1671 in Morrisania, Bronx, Bronx County, New York. He died on May 25, 1746 in Bronx, Bronx, New York, USA. He married Isabella Graham on November 03, 1691.

Notes for Lewis Morris:

Born on the estate of his parents, Richard Morris (originally from Monmouthshire, Wales) and Sarah (Pole) Morris in 1671, this Lewis Morris was the first in a lengthy string of men with the same name to inherit the prominent estate of Morrisania in the southwest section of today's Bronx. Richard and Sarah moved their estate from Barbados to the Bronx after buying the estate from Samuel Edsall in 1670 when it was still known as Broncksland. As the name suggests, Broncksland was the original settlement of Jonas Bronck and his wife, for whom the borough is named. In the fall of 1672, both Richard and Sarah died, leaving only the infant Lewis, barely a year old, as the lord of the manor.

Although the manor was left in the trust of five prominent Westchester citizens until Lewis could rightfully inherit the estate, Matthias Nicoll, secretary of the colony, sent word to Colonel Lewis Morris, the infant's uncle in Barbados. Col. Lewis immediately made plans to move to Morrisania to care for his young nephew and his nephew's estate, which had been somewhat embezzled. Col. Lewis made great pains to secure his nephew's lost property, including a few slaves that had been captured and resold. He was even successful in petitioning for an additional land grant with the help of family friend, Walter Webley. When the childless Col. Lewis and his wife, Mary, died, the now fully-grown Lewis inherited the estate in 1691.

Lewis Morris showed a passion for politics from an early age, and first appears on the political scene in 1692, serving in the East New Jersey Provincial Council during the administration of Governor Andrew Hamilton.[1] After the late 1690s the government of East and West Jersey became increasingly dysfunctional. This ultimately resulted in the surrender by the Proprietors of East Jersey and those of West Jersey of the right of government to Queen Anne. Anne's government united the two colonies as the Province of New Jersey, a royal colony, establishing a new system of government.

On July 29, 1703, in the instructions to Governor Viscount Cornbury Morris was appointed to the New Jersey Provincial Council, and would serve, with several suspensions, through the administrations of seven governors. During much of this time Morris was President of Council.

Morris and Cornbury soon found themselves at opposition, and Cornbury responded by suspending Morris from the upper house. The first time, in September 1704, Morris apologized to the governor and was reinstated, but in December 1704 Cornbury suspended him.[2]

Morris was elected to a seat in the New Jersey General Assembly in 1707, representing an at-large constituency within the Eastern Division of New Jersey.[1] After the recall of Cornbury by the Crown, Lewis Morris was reinstated to the Council in the June 27, 1708, instructions to Baron Lovelace; Lovelace died eleven months later, and Morris was again suspended, this time by Lt. Gov. Richard Ingoldesby.

Morris was again reinstated to the Council in the instructions to Governor Robert Hunter, with whom he had a good relationship.

Sir William Cosby, who served as governor of New York and New Jersey (as did all governors beginning with Viscount Cornbury), showed little interest in New Jersey politics, started a feud with Morris because of a decision of the New York Supreme Court. Morris was Chief Justice, and wrote a dissenting minority opinion which Cosby found deeply offensive. Cosby recommended Morris' removal from the New Jersey Council on February 5, 1735.[2]

In 1738, New Jersey petitioned the crown for a distinct administration from New York, and Lewis Morris served as Governor of New Jersey until his death in 1746.

New York

On March 16, 1715, Morris was appointed Chief Justice of New York. When William Cosby was appointed Governor of New York and New Jersey in 1732, his opponents were called "Morrisites" as Lewis Morris was a prominent critic. In 1733 Morris presided over the case of Cosby v. Van Dam. Although the case was decided in favor of Gov. Cosby, Morris wrote the minority opinion, which infuriated Cosby.[3] Cosby demanded the written opinion from Morris. Morris complied with the Governor, but also had the opinion printed for public distribution, along with an explanatory letter stating,

If judges are to be intimidated so as not to dare to give any opinion, but what is pleasing to the Governor, and agreeable to his private views, the people of this province who are very much concerned both with respect to their lives and fortunes in the freedom and independency of those who are to judge them, may possibly not think themselves so secure in either of them as the laws of his Majesty intended they should be.[4]

This even further angered Cosby, who removed Morris from the court. His dismissal led directly to the John Peter Zenger trial affirming freedom of speech in the United States.[5]

Personal life

On November 3, 1691, Morris was married to Isabella Graham (1673-1752), the eldest daughter of James Graham, who served as Speaker of the New York General Assembly and Recorder of New York City.[6] Together, they were the parents of:[7]

Mary Morris (1695-c. 1746), who married Capt. Vincent Pearse, commander of HMS Phoenix.[8]

Lewis Morris Jr. (1698-1762), who married Katrintje "Catherine" Staats (1697-1731). After her death, he married Sarah Gouverneur (1714-1786).

Robert Hunter Morris (1700-1764), who served as New Jersey Chief Justice.[11]

Daniel Morris(1702-1784)

Gov. Lewis Morris died on May 21, 1746, in Kingsbury (near Trenton).[14] His remains are in the Morris family crypt at St. Ann's Church in the Bronx.[15]

Legacy and descendants

Through his children, he was the grandfather of many prominent Americans, including Lewis Morris (1726-1798), a signer of the Declaration of Independence; Gen. Staats Long Morris (1728-1800); New York Chief Justice Richard Morris; New Jersey Chief Justice Robert Morris (1745-1815); and U.S. Senator and Founding Father Gouverneur Morris (1752-1816).[16]

Lewis Morris Jr. and Katrintje Catherine Staats had the following child:

- i. LEWIS⁴ MORRIS was born in 1726. He died in 1798.

Notes for Lewis Morris:

a signer of the Declaration of Independence

Lewis Morris (April 8, 1726 - January 22, 1798) was an American Founding Father, landowner, and developer from Morrisania, New York, presently part of Bronx County. He signed the U.S. Declaration of Independence as a delegate to the Continental Congress from New York.[1]

Early life and family

Morris was born on April 8, 1726, at his family's estate, Morrisania, presently part of Bronx County, in what was then the Province of New York. He was the third Lewis Morris in the Morris family. He was the son of Lewis Morris (1698-1762) and Katrintje "Catherine" Staats (1697-1731). After his mother died, his father married Sarah Gouverneur (1714-1786).[2] He graduated from Yale College in 1746,[1] and upon his father's death in 1762, he inherited the bulk of the estate.

Morris' father had seven children, including his siblings, Staats Long Morris (1728-1800) and Richard Morris (1730-1810), and his half-siblings, Mary Lawrence, Gouverneur Morris (1752-1816), Isabella, and Catherine. His uncle was Robert Hunter Morris (1700-1764), the governor of Pennsylvania. His cousin by marriage was William Paterson (1745-1806), the governor of New Jersey and father-in-law of Stephen Van Rensselaer, the lieutenant governor of New York, who was the brother of Philip Schuyler Van Rensselaer, mayor of Albany, New York. Anthony Walton White (1750-1803), a Continental Army general, was his cousin through Morris' aunt, Elizabeth Morris (1712-c. 1784).

Family history

His great-grandfather, Richard Morris (died 1672), immigrated to New York through Barbados after being part of Oliver Cromwell's army in the English Civil War of 1648. He purchased the first tract of land in the Bronx that became the basis for the Morrisania manor. Richard and his young wife died, leaving behind an infant son, Lewis Morris (1671-1746). Richard's brother, Colonel Lewis Morris, also of Barbados, came to Morrisania to help manage the estate owned by his infant nephew. Col. Morris and his wife were childless.

When he came of age, Lewis Morris expanded and patented the estate. He married Isabella and went on to serve as the 8th colonial governor of New Jersey.[3] Morris was a popular governor who championed land owning rights for the colonists. Morristown, New Jersey, was named for him.[4][5]

Career

In 1769, he was elected to the New York General Assembly. In 1774, as the Revolution drew near, he resigned from the Admiralty Court.[1]

American Revolution

When active revolution began, he was a member of the New York Provincial Congress, the revolutionary government, from 1775 until 1777. That body, in turn, sent Morris to the Continental Congress for those same years. While in Congress, he was an active supporter of independence and signed the Declaration of Independence in 1776. When warned by his brother Staats Morris, who was a general in the British army, of the consequences that would follow his signing of the rebellious document, Morris stated, "Damn the consequences. Give me the pen." [6]

In 1777, Lewis returned to New York, became a county judge of Westchester County, and was appointed a member of the New York State Senate representing the Southern District, which consisted of Kings, New York, Queens, Richmond, Suffolk and Westchester counties. He served in the 1st New York State Legislature, which began on September 9, 1777, until the end of the 4th Legislature, on July 1, 1781.[1]

His eldest three sons served during the Revolutionary War and had distinguished military careers.

Post-Revolution

Beginning on July 1, 1783, he returned to the New York State Senate and served in the 7th Legislature through to the end of the 13th Legislature, ending on June 30, 1790.[1] In 1788, when the New York convention met to ratify the U.S. Constitution, he was one of the delegates. Morris was a Federalist presidential elector in the 1796 election and cast his votes for John Adams and Thomas Pinckney.

In 1784, Morris was elected an honorary member of the New York Society of the Cincinnati. On May 1 of the same year, he was appointed to the first Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York and served until his death,[1] when he was replaced by Simeon De Witt.[7]

Personal life

Old Morrisania

On September 24, 1749, Lewis married Mary Walton (1727-1794), a member of a well-known merchant family. Maria was the daughter of Jacob Walton and Maria (née Beekman) Walton.[8] They had ten children:[9]

Catherine Morris (1751-1835), who married Thomas Lawrence (1744-1823).[9]

Mary Morris (1752-1776).[9]

Col. Lewis V. Morris (1754-1824), who married Ann B. Elliott (1762-1848), sister-in-law of Congressman Daniel Huger.[10]

Gen. Jacob Morris (1755-1844), who married Mary Cox (1758-1827) (Morris, New York is named after him).[11]

Sarah Morris (born 1757), who died young.[9]

Lt. William Walton Morris (1760-1832), aide-de-camp to General Anthony Wayne who married Sarah Carpender.[8]

Helena Magdalena Morris (1762-1840), who married John Rutherford (1760-1840), a Senator from New Jersey[9]

James Morris (1764-1827), who married Helen Van Cortlandt (1768-1812), daughter of Augustus Van Cortlandt and granddaughter of Frederick Van Cortlandt.[9]

Capt. Staats Morris (1765-1826), who married Everarda van Braam Houckgeest (1765-1816), the daughter of Andreas van Braam Houckgeest and Baroness Catharina C.G. van Reeds van Oudtshoorn.[12]

Capt. Richard Valentine Morris (1768-1815), who married Anne Walton (1773-1858)[9]

After the war, Morris had to rebuild the family estate, which had been looted and burned by the British when they occupied New York. In 1790, he offered the land, now part of the South Bronx neighborhood of Morrisania, as the site of the U.S. capital. He died on the estate and is buried in the family vault beneath St. Ann's Church in the Bronx.[13]

Descendants

Through his eldest son, Lewis V. Morris, he was grandfather to Lewis Morris (1785-1863) and Sabina Elliott Morris (1789-1857). Lewis Morris (b. 1785) was the father of Charles Manigault Morris (1820-1895), a Confederate officer. Sabina married her first cousin, Robert Walter Rutherford (1788-1852), the son of John Rutherford and Helena Morris, and was the mother of Lewis Morris Rutherford (1816-1892), a pioneering astrophotographer who took the first telescopic photographs of the moon and sun, as well as many stars and planets.

Through his son, Staats Morris, his great-grandson was Daniel François van Braam Morris (b. 1840), a Dutchman and governor of Celebes in the Dutch East Indies. A great-granddaughter of his grandfather, Lewis Morris, named Mary Antill was married to Gerritt G. Lansing, himself a brother of Congressman John Lansing. John Lansing's daughter, Sarah, was married to Edward Livingston, a great-grandson of Philip Livingston.

In popular culture

Lewis Morris is portrayed by Ronald Kross in the 1969 Broadway musical 1776 and by Howard Caine in the 1972 film. Although Morris was chairman of the New York delegation to the Second Continental Congress, he abstained ("courteously") on every vote, claiming that the New York Provincial Congress never gave Morris explicit instructions on anything. However, when George Washington noted in a dispatch that Morris's estates were destroyed by the British, but his family was taken to safety in Connecticut, Morris abandons his lack of instructions and moves to sign the Declaration.
