Paul Daniels

May 26, 1932 - October 22, 2010

THE FARMING FATHER

His hands were soiled with dirt and grime,
His nails were cracked and torn,
His face was scarred by wind and sun,
His clothes were patched and worn.

His ragged hat, the worse for wear,
Was hung beside the door
To wear when working in the fields
Or out to do the chores.

The tools he used were long worn out,
Repaired beyond their use,
The motor old, the augers were dull,
And all the bolts were loose.

But he toiled on, his sights ahead,
Determined to succeed
In caring for his family,
Each one to clothe and feed.

He also set a pattern true
And walked it straight each day,
Concerned that those who followed him
Would never lose their way.
