

A new commandment I give to you, that you love one another; as I have loved you, that you also love one another.
- John 13:34

My Garden with Walls

My heart a garden is, a garden walled;
And in the wide white spaces near the gates Grow tall and showy flowers, sun-loving flowers,

Where they are seen of every passer-by;
Who straightway faring on doth bear the tale
How bright my garden is and filled with sun.

But there are shaded walks far from the gates,
So far the passer-by can never see,
Where violets grow for thoughts of those afar,
And rue for memories of vanished days,
And sweet forget-me-nots to bid me think

With tenderness,—lest I grow utter cold
And hard as women grow who never weep.
And when come times I fear that love is dead
And sorrow rules as King the world's white ways,

I go with friends I love among these beds.
Where friend and flower do speak alike to me,
Sometimes with silences, sometimes with words.

'Tis then I thank my God for those high walls
That shut the friends within, the world without,
That passers-by may only see the sun.
That friends I love may share the quiet shade.

- William Brooks.
