Respect is EARNED, not given

To The Mother of a Young Son

Hold your breath but not his hand when he climbs to the top of the tree.

You can't go too the journey's his,
There's a lot of the world to see.

He found a haven in your arms,
But now he's on his own.

The track is there and he must run,
And he must run alone.

The cord was cut when you gave him birth;
They placed him near your heart.

Yours to guide, yours to love,
And yours to watch depart.
