These Hands

I'm Proud of them - these hands of mine;
So many things they have done.
They've planted flowers, and pulled weeds, and worked out in the sun.

They've kneaded bread, and lovingly prepared meals
More times than I can say.
They have washed the clothes and dishes,
And then put them all away.

They have soothed my children's' fevered brows
And delivered kiss covered bandages
To scraped knees and aching heads.
And when at night their eyes grew sleepy
My hands tucked them into bed.

They have felt the bite of winter's cold while bringing in the wood,
And as they planted in the soil, they felt the warmth of the spring
And on one finger 37 years ago
Was put a wedding ring
And though my journey here is over,
You can summon me back in your mind.
The touch of my hands on your heart and life
Will span the depths of time.
