April 25, 1972 - July 11, 2005

When a person first decides he/she has figured out the meaning of life – it is then that he/she can be surest they are wrong.

To put a large amount of time & thought into the subject would be entirely too inappropriate. It is only after we die that we find out the meaning of life – because death is life.

For instance . . . Maybe, just maybe, we are dead now, and are awaiting our birth. In the mean-time we are to gather wisdom and knowledge for later use. Then we pass over to the other side.

“What is on the other side?” you ask . . .
